Hi Jessie,

Thanks much for your email -- appreciate it! A slight update to the evening plans, it's now taking place on Oct 20th evening (not sure if that frees you up in anyway, but let me know). Regardless, hope to have you as a guest speaker soon!

Hi, Jessica:

Shruti with BerlinRosen--not sure if we've met before, but great to meet you over email. I'm a member of New York Women in Communications, and we are hosting an event where we would love to have you be a guest speaker! I'm sending along the formal invitation below--please let me know if you're available, and regardless, hope to bump into you soon!

Thanks for your time!

Shruti

Dear Jessica:

I am pleased to invite you to be a guest speaker on our upcoming panel, "Cocktails & Conversations: Technology's Influence on Politics," hosted by New York Women in Communications on Wednesday, October 21st, from 6:00 – 8:00 pm in New York City. Our panel will examine how technology has revolutionized the American political process – everything from voter turnout, to crisis management, to moving the needle on public opinion. As someone with a very impressive career in digital media and politics, we'd be thrilled to have you speak about your experiences to our members.

New York Women in Communications (NYWICI) is a nonprofit organization that empowers women in all communications disciplines at all stages of their careers to reach their full potential by promoting their professional growth and inspiring them to achieve and share their successes in the rapidly changing world of communications.

Our panels give our members - spanning all ages and communications backgrounds – the rare opportunity to hear directly from top industry leaders on a number of relevant topics.. For our "Cocktails & Conversations: Technology's Influence on Politics," panel, we would like to hear from political influencers like you on how the new digital landscape is driving conversations, pushing boundaries, and what you think the future holds when it comes to technology and politics..

Please let me know if you are available to join our panel by October 7, 2015.

I'm including some additional information about NYWICI below for your background, and I'm happy to answer any questions you may have.

Thanks very much for your consideration,
Shruti

About NYWICI:

New York Women in Communications, Inc. is the premier organization for communications professionals in the New York metropolitan area. We are a not-for-profit association 501(c)(6) founded in 1929, and we operate in a city that leads the industry and shapes the way people communicate around the world.

The membership represents all facets of the communications industry, including print, broadcast and online journalism, public relations, marketing, corporate communications, advertising, digital media and book publishing. Membership is made up of students, professionals at entry levels, mid-career stages and top management, as well as growing numbers of entrepreneurs. For more information, visit: <http://www.nywici.org/about>.

I want you guys to consider the email below simply as a matter of scheduling -- don't want anything else discussed on this thread. Other issues can be handled off-line. As a scheduling matter, does anyone disagree with my conclusion that this should be the week of Oct 19? And again, not for dialogue here but as a scheduling matter, I think the cable blitz makes sense, but we can discuss off-line if any concerns. Thanks

Brainstorming whether to schedule the rollout after the debate (this Wed/Thurs) or next week (when she is down to prep for the Benghazi hearing). Do you have any preference? If it's ok with you, we'd like to book you solid on cable for a day or two (at least!), so it would be good to do it when your sched is a bit more flexible.

I assume we should take down the Bloomberg event -- re-schedule it. And I'll skip the gym in the AM. We can move Caplan as needed - - ideally should do tmrw, perhaps at gracie. We should keep the homeless veterans mtg if we can. We'll follow Bratton's lead as to whether the event at the Academy will still be on

The plan is still to do this on Tuesday. Christina Reynolds has been in touch with Jonathan Rosen.

We are going to roll you out w a national group of mayors and then work w Jonathan to book a bunch of media. I think it's going to be a big boost next week...and hopefully we have some wind at our back coming out of the Iowa JJ dinner!

Hello sir,

Based on my conversation with her, it's a lengthy poll, about 20 minutes, almost exclusively on the mayor. She spoke to the pollster on her cell phone, not a land line. She's an independent.

She was asked:

- Did she vote for mayor?
  - Member of union?
  - Agree with carriage policy?
  - Support charter schools?
  - Think Farina doing a good job?
  - Does MdBd have a good relationship with the police? Doing a good job on race relations?
  - Is he doing a good job on housing?
  - Does she support pre-k?
  - Is he doing a good job with the homeless problem? Does she see more homeless people than five years ago?
  - Does she feel safe during the day? At night? Does she feel safer than she did five years ago? Does she feel like there is more crime than five years ago?
  - She was asked does she support Uber? Would it add to congestion? Does she ever take Uber?
  - Does the mayor care about New York city residents?
  - Does the governor care about New York city residents?
  - Support minimum wage increase for fast food restaurants? Does she think that would increase prices?
- What does she think about elimination tips?
- Is Speaker MMV doing a good job? Also asked about James, Stringer and Jeffries?
  - Should the city keep Taxi TV?

She was not asked about MTA or health care, and they didn't ask about mayor's relationship with the governor.

I have her contact information and she said she's happy to answer more questions if needed.

Thanks,

Erin

Hi Andrea,

I hope that all is well with you. I just wanted to send you a quick note to mention (and I know we've discussed before) that we would love for Mayor de Blasio to endorse a 2016 candidate with ABC news when the time comes. We could talk about GMA vs. This Week and the digital rollout etc. Please keep the idea on your radar – and feel free to reach out any time!

Thank you,

Anja

Ladies and Gentlemen :

Does City Hall have a comment to make about the protest scheduled tonight outside the site of Mayor de Blasio's campaign fundraiser ?

If someone is available from the administration to make a comment, I would like to request an interview. My deadline is 4 p.m. for interviews. Alternatively, the Press Office is invited to issue a statement.

Thank you kindly.

Best regards,

Can flesh out more if needed – this is just a quick and dirty version:

Hillary Clinton – Progressive Accomplishments as U.S. Senator:

In 2001, Hillary Clinton was sworn in as the first female senator from the State of New York. During her eight years in the U.S. Senate, Clinton accumulated an impressive set of progressive accomplishments, including but not limited to:

- Women and Kids – Senator Clinton worked across the aisle to improve health care for low-income children and working families through the State Children’s Health Insurance Program (SCHIP), which she helped create as First Lady in 1997. She also co-wrote legislation to force pharmaceutical companies to conduct safety tests for certain children’s products and co-sponsored the Prevention First Act to increase access to family planning services for women. She was a co-sponsor equal pay legislation for women, culminating in the passage of the Lilly Ledbetter Fair Pay Act in 2009.
- A Fighter for New York in the Aftermath of the 9/11 Attacks – Senator Clinton fought for increased funding to rebuild Ground Zero, including over $20 billion for WTC rebuilding efforts. She fought to ensure that our 9/11 first responders and recovery workers received the health care and support they needed.
- Tax Fairness – Senator Clinton opposed and voted against the Bush tax cuts for millionaires and billionaires. She was a strong advocate for middle class tax cuts and tax cuts for working families.
- A Fighter for our Military and Veterans – As the first New Yorker to serve on the Senate Armed Service Committee, Senator Clinton introduced the Heroes at Home Act to help military family members take care of their loved ones with traumatic brain injuries. She also worked across the aisle to expand health care for National Guard members and members of the U.S. Army Reserves, as well as improve mental health care for our veterans. She fought to increase educational and financial opportunities for veterans from the Wars in Afghanistan and Iraq.

- Immigration – Senator Clinton fought to pass the DREAM Act and pass comprehensive immigration reform. She introduced the Legal Immigrant Children’s Health Improvement Act to help extend Medicaid and SCHIP benefits to legal immigrant children and pregnant women.
- LGBT – Senator Clinton voted against President Bush’s discriminatory efforts to pass a Federal Marriage Amendment, which would have enshrined discrimination in our Constitution.

- Which comes closer to your view? In today's economy, everyone has a fair chance to get ahead in the long run, or in today's economy, it's mainly just a few people at the top who have a chance to get ahead? 35% (anyone can get ahead), 61% (just a few people at the top have a chance to get ahead)
  - Do you feel that the distribution of money and wealth in this country is fair, or do you feel that the money and wealth in this country should be more evenly distributed among more people? 27% (fair), 66% (should be more even)
  - Do you think the gap between the rich and the poor in the United States is getting larger, getting smaller or has stayed the same? 67% (getting larger), 5% (getting smaller), 25% (staying the same)
  - Do you think the gap between rich and poor in this country is a problem that needs to be addressed now, a problem but one that does not need to be addressed now or not a problem? 65% (Now), 16% (not addressed now), 17% (not a problem)
  - Should the government do more to reduce the gap between the rich and the poor in this country or is this something the government should not be doing? 57% (reduce gap), 39% (should not)

Hillary Clinton – Accomplishments as U.S. Secretary of State

- Helped restore America's standing and leadership in the world through a renewed focus on diplomacy and partnership with our allies. Visited 112 countries and logged nearly 1 million miles of travel across the globe.
  - Helped bring Iran to the table through crippling sanctions, leading to historic negotiations and nuclear agreement.
  - Supported the raid and capture of Osama Bin Laden and helped adjust and shape U.S.-Pakistan relations in the aftermath
  - Forefront of dealing with climate change in 2009 – got Chinese to sign up for their first-ever international agreement to combat climate change
  - Articulated a new economic statecraft for the United States, helping U.S. companies secure business abroad, boosting exports for American manufacturers, etc.

Good solid performance by our Mayor this morning! Here are my reflections...

1. This show always begins with a topic other than the headliner. Have to be prepared for that.
2. I understand why it didn't happen but when they got to Hillary, would have been stronger if Bill's most important message came first. "I endorse Hillary!"
3. We've got great crime statistics, but there is a gap in our message regarding police/community relations. Joe is a bully in tone and demeanor, but Bill should have had the high ground here.

Attached is a draft editorial Dan is proposing to submit. It would be great if you would be willing to provide a quote.

cnycn.org

In the aftermath of Hurricane Sandy, it's ~~clear has become apparent~~ that flood risk and federal flood insurance, which are complex by their very nature, are topics with far-reaching consequences across the city's coastal communities. ~~Unfortunately, the Daily News got it wrong in its editorial and are advocating for outcomes that~~ That's why the City is taking a proactive approach to reducing both climate and affordability risks for homeowners -- because failure to act ~~would~~ could cause a financial storm that could rival or even exceed Sandy's impacts.

Over the last three years, New York City and its scientific and community partners have been leading the way in addressing the risks of flooding and sea level rise. It is clear that ~~our~~ these risks are only growing, ~~which highlights~~ highlighting the urgency behind ~~our~~ the comprehensive $20 billion resiliency program we're aggressively implementing around the five boroughs.

What is also clear is that the federally-run National Flood Insurance Program is in need of vital reforms to better promote mitigation of flood risk ~~and also to~~ and ensure affordability for the long run.

That's why the City is actively working with FEMA to ensure that (1) FEMA depicts current risk correctly – informed by the best available science; (2) the City rebuilds conservatively extra cautiously, taking into account future risk, including potential sea level rise; and (3) we continue to advocate for NFIP flood insurance affordability so ~~they~~ the federal government doesn't pull the rug out from under homeowners who saved money, bought homes, and assumed flood insurance premiums would remain reasonable.

Unfortunately, the City found errors in FEMA's map-making process, meaning that they don't accurately reflect what they are intended to show – the current flood risk of a 100-year flood. Their models ~~simply didn't reflect the scientific realities on the ground, were not properly calibrated and too few tidal cycles were applied in their statistical analysis. This~~ translating into an overstatement of potential flood elevations across the city, and the region, by as much as 2.5 feet.

The financial implications of overstating these risks is enormous – raising premiums to as much as $10,000 a year for impacted homeowners and potentially pricing many middle income families, and entire communities, out of their homes.

The good news is that the City was proactive: submitting an appeal of FEMA's maps, while still ~~and had already~~ adopting ~~ed~~ these over-conservative maps projections into its building code, ensuring that all rebuilding work after Sandy would be built to safer standards and protecting homeowners' pocketbooks in case the appeal does is not accepted. ~~But the financial implications of overstating this risk is enormous and could price many middle income families out of their homes.~~

The City's goal continues to be to ensure that FEMA's flood maps accurately reflect the current flood risk, based on sound scientific and technical analysis, so that ~~appropriate~~ building codes and other measures meant to address future flood risk can be appropriately implemented. To ensure that we invest wisely in the areas of the City at greatest risk and reach the City's resiliency goals, the City must have a scientifically accurate assessment of flood risk. This assessment starts with accurate FEMA flood maps. That's why we are appealing the flood maps.

As we continue to advance our comprehensive $20 billion resiliency program to adapt our city ~~against to~~ the ~~future impacts~~impacts of climate change, we must ensure that our coastal communities are not wiped out from a financial storm. That's why we'll continue to fight for a reformed National Flood Insurance Program that protects New Yorkers from both climate and affordability risks ~~better allows for flood mitigation and promotes affordability of flood insurance.~~ to ensure communities that are stronger, more resilient, and able to with

In the aftermath of Hurricane Sandy, it's clear ~~has become apparent~~ that flood risk and federal flood insurance, which are complex by their very nature, are topics with far-reaching consequences across the city's coastal communities. ~~Unfortunately, the Daily News got it wrong in its editorial and are advocating for outcomes that~~ That's why the City is taking a proactive approach to reducing both climate and affordability risks for homeowners -- because failure to act ~~would~~ could cause a financial storm that could rival or even exceed Sandy's impacts.

Over the last three years, New York City and its scientific and community partners, including Stevens Institute of Technology, have been leading the way in describing and addressing the risks of flooding and sea level rise. It is clear that ~~our these~~ risks are only growing, ~~which highlight~~ highlighting the urgency behind ~~our the~~ comprehensive $20 billion resiliency program we're the City is aggressively implementing around the five boroughs.

What is also clear is that the federally-run National Flood Insurance Program is in need of vital reforms to better promote mitigation of flood risk ~~and also to~~ and ensure affordability for the long run. FEMA's current program is a one-size-fits-all approach that disproportionately hurts New York City. Waterfront communities around the country are lined with vacation homes – this is not the case in our city, where our waterfront neighborhoods, including Canarsie and the Far Rockaways, are home to working- and middle-class families.-

That's why the City, and non-profit and academic partners are actively working with FEMA to ensure that (1) FEMA depicts current risk correctly – informed by the best available science; (2) the City rebuilds ~~conservatively~~ extra cautiously, taking into account future risk, including potential sea level rise; and (3) we continue to advocate for NFIP flood insurance affordability so ~~they the federal government~~ doesn't pull the rug out from under homeowners who saved money, bought homes, and assumed flood insurance premiums would remain reasonable.

Unfortunately, the City, ~~found errors~~ with support from an engineering firm and scientific partners at Stevens Institute of Technology, found errors in FEMA's map-making process, meaning that they don't accurately reflect what they are intended to show – the current flood risk of a 100-year flood. Their models simply didn't reflect the scientific realities on the ground, were not properly calibrated and too few tidal cycles were applied in their statistical analysis. ~~This~~ translatinged into an overstatement of potential flood elevations across the city, and the region, by as much as 2.5 feet.

The financial implications of overstating these risks is enormous – raising premiums to as much as $10,000 a year for impacted homeowners and potentially pricing many middle income families, and entire communities, out of their homes. Furthermore, property owners beyond the highest risk area should be able to buy affordable flood ~~affordable~~ insurance because of their less risky location.

The good news is that the City ~~was~~ has been proactive: submitting an appeal of FEMA's maps, while still ~~e~~ and had already adoptinged these over-conservative maps projections into its building code, ensuring that all rebuilding work after Sandy would be built to safer standards and protecting homeowners' pocketbooks in case the FEMA appeal ~~does~~ is not accepted. We're The City is also working with partners, including the Center for NYC Neighborhoods and Stevens

Institute, to educate homeowners about their flood risk and anticipated costs, including the creation of the online tool FloodHelpNY.org and flood maps that show the impact of sea level rise. ~~But the financial implications of overstating this risk is enormous and could price many middle income families out of their homes.~~

The City's goal continues to be to ensure that FEMA's flood maps accurately reflect the current flood risk, based on sound scientific and technical analysis, so that ~~appropriate~~ building codes and other measures meant to address future flood risk can be appropriately implemented. To ensure that we invest wisely in the areas of the City at greatest risk and reach the City's resiliency goals, the City must have a scientifically accurate assessment of flood risk. This assessment starts with accurate FEMA flood maps. ~~That's why we are appealing the flood maps – that's why we are appealing them.~~

As we continue to advance our comprehensive $20 billion resiliency program to adapt our city ~~against to~~ the ~~future impacts~~impacts of climate change, we must ensure that our coastal communities are not wiped out from a financial storm driven by inaccurate maps. That's why we'll continue to ~~fight~~fight for the incorporation of the best available science and advocate for a reformed National Flood Insurance Program that protects New Yorkers from both climate and affordability risks ~~better allows for flood mitigation and promotes affordability of flood insurance.~~ to ensure communities that are stronger, more resilient, and able to with, to create strong, resilient communities.

Thanks for your time today – lovely to see you and catch up!

I'm attaching the three documents I gave to you in our meeting today. As you said, I think most of the points are there – they just need to be prioritized and refined. I'm grateful for any and all of your assistance.

Would be great to get our broods together in the 'hood – let me talk to Graeme and come back to you with some dates.

Many thanks again and very best,

BUILDING HEALTHY COMMUNITIES

MAYOR'S OFFICE

BUILDING HEALTHY COMMUNITIES

Background

Building Healthy Communities aims to improve community health outcomes by increasing opportunities for physical activity; expanding access to fresh and affordable food and promoting public safety in twelve of the City's neediest neighborhoods. The parks and open spaces in these densely populated and higher-poverty neighborhoods have historically been neglected from public investment in their maintenance and upkeep. Many of these same communities continue to report high rates of crime and equally high rates of public health challenges like obesity and diabetes.

Over the next three years, Building Healthy Communities will address those inequities. Leveraging the $285 million capital investment of the Community Parks Initiative, Building Healthy Communities will build school and community gardens, install adult exercise equipment, establish farmers markets and create pedestrian plazas.

PROGRAM GOALS

Physical Activity

With private support, Building Healthy Communities will transform the urban landscape, creating opportunities for recreation and exercise.

- Supply and co-locate adult exercise equipment in or near playgrounds and parks, allowing children and parents, grandparents and caretakers to exercise simultaneously.
- Provide free exercise and yoga classes.
- With Wayfinding, create marked pathways from parks to schools, and schools to libraries, encouraging walking, running and biking.
- Establish pedestrian plazas in neighborhoods that most lack safe, open spaces.

Nutrition and Community Greening

Some of our poorest neighborhoods are among the most food insecure, with limited opportunities to buy and eat fresh food. With private support, Building Healthy Communities will ensure every neighborhood has the opportunity to grow or buy fresh and affordable food and that every child has opportunity to learn about healthy eating.

- Ensure each of the twelve neighborhoods has a farmers' market.
- Establish 5 new one-acre urban farms on NYCHA properties.
- Build new school gardens within the CPI neighborhoods to education kids about nutrition, gardening and science.
- Ensure community gardens have the infrastructure they need to be safe and secure, including clean soil, fresh water, fencing, lighting, sidewalks, and lumber.

Public Safety

Safe and vibrant neighborhoods are the cornerstone of a healthy community. Families need to feel their streets and sidewalks are safe, and neighborhood parks are safe enough for their children to play in. Building Healthy Communities will:

- Implement Crime Prevention through Environmental Design with NYPD to ensure that any physical improvements to the parks and open space are achieved with public safety in mind.
- Install exterior lights, layered access (doors and intercoms) and cameras at the highest crime NYCHA developments via the Mayor’s Action Plan for Neighborhood Safety
- Extend community center hours at NYCHA housing developments, provide lights to targeted outdoor basketball courts, and offer recreation activities for kids who live in NYCHA developments.

Community Engagement

Community engagement and consultation are absolutely critical for the success of Building Healthy Communities. The capital investments and program delivery of the Building Healthy Communities initiative will be driven by community-expressed needs and desires, and community engagement for this initiative will build off existing community consultation processes currently underway by Partnerships for Parks, and by the Mayor’s Office of Criminal Justice, as part of the Mayor’s Action Plan for Neighborhood Safety.

Outcomes

Over the next three years, with significant support from City agencies, Building Healthy Communities will measure at least 20 different indicators ranging from exercise levels to well-lit public spaces, from cohesion among social groups to healthy eating options. Maximizing and enhancing existing City data collection efforts, Building Healthy Communities seeks to provide the evidence supporting the collective impact approach.

Neighborhoods

Bed-Stuy (Brooklyn)

Mariner’s Harbor (Staten Island)

Brownsville (Brooklyn)

Flushing (Queens)

Canarsie (Brooklyn)

Corona (Queens)

East Harlem (Manhattan)

Mott Haven (Bronx)

Central Harlem North-Polo Grounds (Manhattan)

Morrisania (Bronx)

Stapleton (Staten Island)

Hunts Point (Bronx)

Talking points for Building Healthy Communities:

- Health is everything. Without good health, individuals can't thrive and communities cannot prosper.
- Our healthcare system is being transformed from one of treating people when they become sick to one of proactive care designed to prevent disease and maintain good health.
- Building Healthy Communities is a neighborhood-based effort designed to address the major health conditions in our communities—heart disease, diabetes, high blood pressure, and obesity that are the leading causes of chronic disease and poor health.
- Our goal is simple: create communities that nurture health by increasing access to physical activity and healthy food and promoting public safety in the underserved neighborhoods in NYC.
- We recognize that an individual's and a community's health is dependent on much more than access to medical care.
- Our health is also impacted by the environment in which we live and work and whether our neighborhoods have safe, clean, outdoor spaces where we can go to exercise, relax, play, and learn.
- Neighborhoods with the most neglected parks and open space, unsafe public space, and the lowest access to healthy food bear the heaviest burden of chronic disease and poor health.
- The Building Healthy Communities initiative will address these inequities one neighborhood at a time launching the first year in an initial 12 neighborhoods targeted by Parks under their Community Parks Initiative.
- These neighborhoods have the highest rates of diabetes, obesity, hypertension, and a range of other controllable chronic diseases, as well as the smallest investments in funding for access to physical activity and healthy food and promoting public safety
- Three Pillars:
  1. Increasing opportunities for physical activity. Sample interventions:
    - Installing adult exercise equipment.

- Establishing paths that encourage walking, running, and biking
  - Creating pedestrian plazas.
  - Providing free exercise classes.
2. Increasing access to nutritious and affordable food. Sample interventions:
- Establishing farmers markets.
  - Building community gardens.
  - Building urban, food-producing farms.
  - Increasing school gardens.
3. Promoting public safety. Sample interventions:
- Installing lighting and cameras at areas of highest crime.
  - Extending the hours of community centers.
  - Undertaking a variety of strategies to redesign public space to reduce crime.
- The plan for BHC was developed over the last year through a multi-agency, joint planning effort designed to maximize individual agency resources and align them in a comprehensive effort to revitalize our neighborhoods most in need.
  - In the process, we identified opportunities for private partnership and investment to expand and enhance the BHC model and have worked during the last six months to develop a series of public-private agreements that will leverage and compliment the investments of City government.
  - We recognize that the public health problems we face today are complex, requiring broad partnership and collective action across sectors.
  - Individuals, communities, businesses, and government all have important roles to play so that the places where we live, learn, work, and play support good health.
  - BHC is designed with this fact in mind.
  - In response, BHC will deploy and coordinate an impressive array of neighborhood-based initiatives and capital investment to achieve our goal of creating communities that nurture good physical and mental health.
  - Private sector business, nonprofits, and philanthropic donors have long played an important role in shaping NYC's built and social environment.

- BHC will push new boundaries and allow government and the private sector to collaborate through joint planning and coordination of resources to strategically target our neediest neighborhoods and solve some of our most pressing community challenges.
- Participating agencies and offices:
  - NYC Department of Health and Mental Hygiene
  - NYC Department of Parks and Recreation
  - Mayor's Office of Criminal Justice
  - NYC Department of Transportation
  - NYC Housing Authority
  - Mayor's Office of Food Policy
  - NYC Police Department
  - NYC Department of Environmental Protection
  - GrowNYC
  - Mayor's Community Affairs Unit
  - Mayor's Office of Operations

Messaging

- Many higher-poverty neighborhoods have historically been neglected from public investment in safe open spaces and access to healthy food. Many of these same communities continue to report high rates of crime and equally high rates of obesity, diabetes and chronic disease. But the impact of this issue is not limited to individual low-income families – it weighs down our whole City.
- The de Blasio administration knows that we must move toward a “culture of health” that is proactive, transform our health care system and “the culture of health” from one focused on reactive sick care to a proactive system designed to prevent disease and maintain good health. This starts by enabling all communities to nurture healthy citizens with access to healthy food, opportunities for physical activity and safe, vibrant public spaces.
- To accomplish that, Mayor de Blasio is launching the Building Healthy Communities initiative, a multi-million dollar public-private partnership committed to taking an innovative, holistic approach to improving health outcomes in 12 densely populated and historically underserved neighborhoods: East Harlem, Brownsville, Mott Haven, Canarsie, Flushing, Hunt’s Point, Mariner’s Harbor, Central Harlem, Bedford-Stuyvesant, Morrisania, Corona and Stapleton.
- Building Healthy Communities is focused on three main goals: increasing access to physical activity and healthy food, and improving public safety. Progress on each of these issues will lead to opportunities for overall healthier living. For example:
  - Parks, pedestrian plazas, community gardens and recreation centers are essential community resources, where people can come together to play, learn, grow food, exercise and relax. And families are more likely to utilize those resources when they feel they are safe enough to enjoy.
  - Increasing access to and consumption of fresh, healthy food through the availability of farmers’ markets, community gardens and school gardens can turn food deserts into food oases.
- Building Healthy Communities will achieve its goals related to healthy eating, physical activity and public safety by making new upgrades to existing public spaces and developing new and exciting programming that can impact the health and wellbeing of all of the targeted neighborhoods. This includes:
  - Establishing food markets; strengthening community gardens and nutrition education opportunities; building urban food-producing farms; and expanding school gardens.
  - Installing adult exercise equipment; providing free exercise classes; establishing “Wayfinding paths” and pedestrian plazas to encourage walking, running and biking; and providing kids with additional outdoor space for play and recreation.

- Designing and improving open spaces with public safety in mind; installing lighting and cameras at areas of highest crime; and extending community center hours.
- The Building Healthy Communities initiative is led by the Mayor’s Office of Strategic Partnerships and the Fund for Public Health in New York, which will coordinate private sector partners and 11 city agencies – the Department of Parks & Recreation, the New York City Police Department, the New York City Housing Authority, GrowNYC, the Department of Transportation, the Department of Health & Mental Hygiene, the Mayor’s Community Affairs Unit, the Mayor’s Office of Criminal Justice, the Mayor’s Office of Food Policy, the Department of Environmental Protection and the Mayor’s Office of Operations.
- While Building Healthy Communities will include many new additions~~investments~~, it will also unite~~ing~~ and leverage~~ing~~ existing investments by various agencies related to the initiative’s goals. For example:
  - The Department of Parks & Recreation will leverage its Community Parks Initiative, which is making $285 million in capital improvements to 55 of the city’s neediest public parks.
  - The Department of Transportation will leverage its Plaza Program, aimed at creating outdoor pedestrian plazas that can be used for exercising, relaxing or holding farmers markets and other community events.
  - The New York City Police Department will leverage its Crime Prevention Through Environmental Design Program, which is ensuring that all physical improvements to public parks and open spaces are designed with public safety in mind.
- Building Healthy Communities’ cross-agency cooperation will enable our City to both maximize these individual agency resources and programs, while aligning them in a comprehensive effort to revitalize our neighborhoods most in need.
- We recognize that the public health problems we face today are complex, requiring broad partnership and collective action across sectors – individuals, communities, businesses, and government all have important roles to play so that the places where we live, learn, work, and play support good health.
- Building Healthy Communities will provide yet another opportunity for the public and private sectors to team up – combining the scale of government with the flexibility of funding and speed of business and philanthropic players – and address one of the City’s most pressing challenges. Private investments can and will range from providing funds or donating in-kind items to offering services such as cooking and nutrition classes and underwriting specific programs.

Comment [KN1]: To what end are we leveraging this? We say that we’ll use plazas for exercise, farmers markets, etc and CPTED to ensure parks are redesigned with public safety in mind, but not how we will use capital improvements in parks for additional BHC ends

- Building Healthy Communities has already received $5.1 million in commitments from generous private partners: Unilever, the Laurie M. Tisch Illumination Fund and the New York State Health Foundation.
- Unilever’s $4.1 million partnership represents the largest commitment from an individual corporate entity in New York City history. Their partnership with Building Healthy Communities is focused on increasing access to nutritional and affordable, healthy food initially through a “Farm to Table” model over the next three years, and will include $1.5 million over three years to establish a new Urban Farm site at NYCHA’s Senator Robert F. Wagner Houses in East Harlem; pilot an inter-generational cooking class program at the Johnson Houses Community and Children’s Center in East Harlem; support continued operation of an existing Urban Farm at Red Hook, where workers at future Urban Farms will be trained; and support two annual NYCHA gardening events.
  - Wagner Urban Farm: Unilever will support the creation of the Wagner Urban Farm and the development of community programming at the farm, including volunteer-based cultivation, food distribution and cooking demos and composting. The Wagner Urban Farm will increase access to locally-produced fresh produce (4 tons per year per site) and employ approximately 60 young people.
  - Intergenerational Cooking Classes: Unilever will work with an existing community-based program to train 20 community chefs to lead cooking classes at the Johnson Community Center for approximately 50 NYCHA residents per month. The chefs will also lead demonstrations, aiming to empower NYCHA residents to build stronger, more connected communities through food.
  - Additional Programming: Unilever will work with the Building Healthy Communities initiative to secure the remaining $2.6 million from other private partners over the next three years to support the construction of four additional Urban Farms at sites in Canarsie, Brownsville, South Bronx and Staten Island.
- XXX details on Laurie M. Tisch Illumination Fund’s donation
- XXX details on the New York State Health Foundation’s donation

Comment [LD2]: This is true as far as 2011. We have also confirmed that Bloomberg LP never made a donation at this level. How can we check that this is true farther back than 2011?

Comment [HL3]: I need to check the details of this one

Q&A

Origins of Building Healthy Communities

1. When did the Building Healthy Communities begin taking shape? How did it begin?

This was started as one of three inter-agency strategic initiatives led by the Mayor's Office of Strategic Partnerships, which was created by Mayor de Blasio in January 2014. Each initiative was housed and developed by a City-affiliated nonprofit. In the case of Building Healthy Communities, it has been nurtured and developed by the Fund for Public Health.

2. How were the 12 neighborhoods selected?

All 12 of these neighborhoods were targeted by the Department of Parks & Recreation in their Community Parks Initiatives as areas that are densely populated, have been historically lacking in public investment, ~~disinvested~~ and lack open space. In addition, each of these neighborhoods experiences either high rates of violent crime, high rates of diabetes, self-reported low levels of exercise, self-reported fair or poor health status or high rates of psychological distress. ~~high rates of violent crime, high rates of diabetes, obesity and hypertension.~~

3. How much funding is the City looking to raise from private partners?

We are looking to engage all interested private partners in some aspect of the initiative. We see the potential in Building Healthy Communities as limitless, and able to foster relationships with many members from our generous business and philanthropic communities.

4. When will Building Healthy Communities be brought to each of the 12 neighborhoods?

We plan to begin implementing some portion of Building Healthy Communities in each of the 12 neighborhoods over the next two years with a goal of eventually reaching all 55 CPI communities by when?

5. How much public and private money will be spent to achieve the goals of Building Healthy Communities in each of its three buckets?

Building Healthy Communities will leverage the existing $285 million in capital improvements to neighborhood parks through the Community Parks Initiative. Other City agencies are already allocating tens of millions of dollars on Building Healthy Communities related-programs. At this time, we have secured $5.1 million in private sector commitments and are actively engaging other private sector partners.

6. How will New Yorkers be able to find out about Building Healthy Communities' events and programs in their neighborhoods?

New Yorkers can learn more about the Building Healthy Communities initiative at nyc.gov/healthycommunities. This website also includes a calendar of initiative-related events and other resources. In addition, Building Healthy Communities will be organizing city agencies to hold community outreach efforts to educate New Yorkers on healthy living and connect them to Building Healthy Communities' programming.

7. Is Building Healthy Communities working with community-based organizations that are already focused on achieving healthy outcomes for local residents?

Building Healthy Communities will work with agency partners and other community-based organizations in each of the neighborhoods to support and expand its reach.

Unilever's Investment

1. How did Unilever become involved in Building Healthy Communities?

Unilever's ongoing effort to promote healthy outcomes and sustainability was identified as an excellent complement to the goals of Building Healthy Communities. Recognizing the potential for a mutual partnership, we connected to Unilever through the Partnership for New York City.

2. What will happen if Unilever is unable to find private partners to support the development of the other four Urban Farms? Will the City have to commit additional public funding?

In that event, Unilever has committed to provide the remaining amount of funding necessary to implement the remainder of the Urban Farms plan. ~~That said~~ However, Building Healthy Communities has already generated tremendous interest from New York City's business and philanthropic communities. Furthermore, over the past two years, the de Blasio administration has not only demonstrated its ability to engage private partners, but also unleashed the eagerness of the private sector to collaborate on joint initiatives, such as Computer Science for All initiative, the Center for Youth Employment, Connections to Care program and many others.

3. Is it hypocritical for Unilever – whose brands make products like mayonnaise and margarine – to be encouraging New Yorkers to eat healthy?

Unilever is working hard to make their products healthier and more sustainable. They have been one of the leading global businesses to reduce sodium in their food and to make all of their production and supply chains more sustainable – from their farming practices to waste reduction.

4. Will Unilever be encouraging New Yorkers to use their products in their cooking classes?

The Department of Health & Mental Hygiene promotes a whole food approach – to consume fresh fruit and vegetables as much and as often as possible. Unilever supports and endorses this approach. Unilever will be encouraging good nutrition and healthy eating. They will be developing Health Department-approved recipes which, while they will likely use Unilever products, will be held to the highest nutritional standards.

5. When will the Wagner Urban Farm be opened?

Ground will be broken at the Wagner Urban Farm this spring. We hope to have the farm operational by fall 2016.

Facts & Figures

- About 50 percent of New York City adults and 60 percent of children do not engage in recommended levels of physical activity. More than 22 percent of City adults are not physically active at all.
- Nearly 20 percent of the poorest New Yorkers and 13 percent of all adults in the City reported eating no fruits or vegetables the previous day.
- More than 5,000 New Yorkers die of obesity-related health problems each year.
- Lack of physical activity and unhealthy eating are major contributors to obesity and chronic diseases. More than 50 percent of City adults and 40 percent of children in grades K-8 are either overweight or obese.
- Chronic diseases due to obesity continue to sap city resources. For example, medical expenses related to obesity account for two-thirds of the City's $1.6 billion annual health budget.

My two cents.

1. Colmes doesn't get us much of anything.
2. The Sirius town hall (with Rabin Havt, who Geri mentions below) could be cool.

Phil,

Here's an idea:

I've been invited to interview a newsmaker at the Harvard Club on Tuesday, November 17, at the Radio Ink conference. Radio Ink is a leading industry publication that is read by top media people. Would the mayor consider joining me there for an interview in front of industry professionals? We could also use the interview on my radio show, so there would be much bang for the buck. Good press will come out of it.

Here is what Radio Ink is putting out:

Radio Ink cordially invites you to participate in a live, onstage interview with Fox News Radio's highly respected Alan Colmes at Forecast, the radio industry's premier financial summit. Forecast 2016 that will be presented at the elegant Harvard Club in New York City on November 17, 2015. We would be happy to try to arrange a time convenient to your schedule.

In what has become an industry tradition, Forecast 2016 will be the 13th in a series of compelling economic forecast conferences presented by Radio Ink, the leading broadcast trade publication.

The executives who typically attend Forecast control radio's top groups, commanding over 70% of the revenue generated each year on thousands of stations across the country. Their decision making power impacts all areas of radio, from what goes over the air to what goes to the bottom line. These leading radio executives would truly appreciate your insight and perspective on the future of business, media and the country.

Hi Phil,

I caught the tail end of the mayor on Morning Joe before Christie came on and made ridiculous comments that went unchallenged. I'd like to re-extend an invitation for the mayor to appear on my radio show. There are only a few of us on the left who do national shows and we offer a platform that includes about 75 radio stations, Sirius/XM, our app, and online streaming. The power and effectiveness of talk radio is understood and harnessed by conservatives, but I've been trying for years to get more liberals to understand its value.

Can we please arrange an interview?

Best Wishes,
Alan

Phil and I recommend you do an off topic gaggle Friday. We will organize it around a public event in the works now. We recommend some flexibility with our media policy this week so we can tamp down any “Mayor isn’t transparent” criticism, generated not only by Marcia but Josh and others.

Let me know.

Hey Dan!

Hope you and your fam and Berlin Rosen are all doing great.

Been meaning to reach out. I've taken Avi's health and human services portfolio at IGA. Would be good to touch base on Coalition for the Homeless stuff when you can. I know Camille has been in touch about press release tomorrow regarding 20K homeless New Yorkers being moved into City subsidized permanent housing since the beginning of our first fiscal year – July 1, 2014. Would be great if Mary would give a statement. Let me know if you'd like to discuss.

I am also happy to connect with Mary if you think that would be helpful.

Thanks so much. We are trying to pin down quotes by mid morning.

Thanks, Camille.

Focus of release is that we have exceeded 20K placements of individuals out of shelter and into City subsidized affordable housing – LINC, SEPS/FEPS, NYCHA etc since the beginning of the Mayor’s first fiscal year – July 1, 2014.

Happy to discuss with you or Mary in more detail. Thanks for considering.

Need to add quotes –

MAYOR DE BLASIO ANNOUNCES OVER 52,000 INDIVIDUALS HAVE EXITED SHELTER INTO PERMANENT HOUSING SINCE JULY 1, 2014

Over 19,000 individuals exiting shelter used administration's newly created rental assistance programs and exit pathways

Over 90,000 individuals have accessed homelessness prevention services

NEW YORK—The de Blasio administration today announced that 52,277 individuals have exited shelter into permanent housing since July 1, 2014. This includes 13,639 individuals who have exited shelter into permanent housing since July 1, 2015.

Since July 1, 2014, approximately, 91,906 individuals have enrolled in HomeBase, a proven homelessness prevention program to help families and individuals stay in their homes. The administration has supported 15,902 households – approximately 50,000 individuals –through our tenant protection programs and anti-eviction legal services.

Increasing homelessness is an unfortunate product of today's economic realities - increasing income inequality, rents rising, and wages remaining flat. Oftentimes, New Yorkers fall on hard times, can't make rent, and end up entering shelter. Furthermore, in 2011, the State withdrew funding and the City was forced to cut Advantage, a rental assistance program that was a critical shelter exit strategy, leading to a significant increase of homeless New Yorkers in shelter.

The administration has invested over $1 billion more over the next four years to tackle homelessness. This includes expanding homelessness prevention resources to help those on the brink of homelessness or eviction stay in their homes, rental assistance programs and new exit pathways to help families and individuals exit shelter. The Department of Homeless Services aggressively works with families and individuals to strategically distribute rental assistance vouchers to those ready to exit shelter. Investing in prevention and rental assistance is better for the families and individuals and cheaper for taxpayers.

Approximately 19,263 individuals exited shelter using newly created Rental Assistance Programs and Exit Pathways:

- LINC – 7,904 individuals
- NYCHA – 7,465 individuals
- CityFEPS – 1,980 individuals
- HPD Section 8 – 1,201 individuals
- NYCHA Section 8 – 713 individuals

Homelessness has increased by approximately 115 percent over the past two decades.

NYC Shelter Census:

- Jan 1, 1994 (Giuliani): 23,526
- Jan 1, 2002 (Bloomberg): 33,194
- Jan 1, 2014 (de Blasio): 50,689

There are currently 57,390 individuals in shelter. Of those, 40,319 are families with children. 91% of these households are led by women. 29% of these heads of households of families with children in shelter are employed. 45% of these heads of households of families with children are employed or were employed within the past year.

- Today, far too many New Yorkers live in communities that lack access to healthy food, opportunities for physical activity and proximity to safe, vibrant public spaces.
  - o Roughly 50 percent of New York City adults and 50 percent of children do not engage in recommended levels of physical activity.
  - o Nearly 20 percent of the poorest New Yorkers and 13 percent of all adults in the city reported eating no fruits or vegetables the previous day.
  - o Lack of physical activity and unhealthy eating are major contributors to obesity and chronic diseases; more than 50 percent of city adults and 40 percent of children in grades K-8 are either overweight or obese.
- Due to a sustained lack of investment in creating safe, healthy neighborhoods in underserved pockets of the five boroughs, residents living in these communities are disproportionately afflicted with major health problems. These ailments include heart disease, diabetes, high blood pressure and obesity, all of which are leading causes of chronic disease and poor health.
- To rectify this, Mayor de Blasio is launching the Building Healthy Communities initiative, a multi-million dollar public-private partnership that will transform some of New York's poorest communities by improving access to physical activity and healthy food while investing in public safety. This program builds on the success of the Community Parks Initiative, an investment in underfunded neighborhood parks to revitalize them into dynamic public places.

- This pioneering program is targeting 12 densely-populated and historically underserved neighborhoods: East Harlem, Brownsville, Mott Haven, Canarsie, Flushing, Hunts Point, Mariners Harbor, Central Harlem, Bedford-Stuyvesant, Morrisania, Corona and Stapleton. These neighborhoods all experience high rates of violent crime, as well as high rates of diabetes, obesity and hypertension.

- Building Healthy Communities will take a multi-faceted approach to improve the quality of life in these neighborhoods:

- o Increasing opportunities for physical activity. Building Healthy Communities will install adult exercise equipment, provide free exercise classes, establish ‘wayfinding paths’ and pedestrian plazas to encourage walking, running and biking and provide children with additional outdoor space for play and recreation.

- o Increasing access to nutritious and affordable food. Building Healthy Communities will establish food markets, strengthen community gardens, build urban food-producing farms, begin intergenerational cooking classes and expand school gardens.

- o Increasing investments in public safety. Building Healthy Communities will design and improve open spaces with public safety in mind, install lighting and cameras in areas that experienced the highest levels of crime and extend community center hours.

- Building Healthy Communities will be led by the Mayor’s Office of Strategic Partnerships and the Fund for Public Health in New York, which will coordinate private sector partners and 11 city agencies: NYC Department of Health and Mental Hygiene, NYC Department of Parks and Recreation, Mayor’s Office of Criminal Justice, NYC Department of Transportation, NYC Housing Authority, Mayor’s Office of Food Policy, NYC Police Department, NYC Department of Environmental Protection, GrowNYC, Mayor’s Community Affairs Unit and Mayor’s Office of Operations. This cross-agency cooperation acknowledges that the public health problems we face today are complex, requiring broad partnerships and collective action across sectors.

- Building Healthy Communities has already received $5.1 million in commitments from generous private partners: Unilever, the Laurie M. Tisch Illumination Fund and the New York State Health Foundation.

Hi Jonathan,

Thanks for your time today – lovely to see you and catch up!

I'm attaching the three documents I gave to you in our meeting today. As you said, I think most of the points are there – they just need to be prioritized and refined. I'm grateful for any and all of your assistance.

Would be great to get our broods together in the 'hood – let me talk to Graeme and come back to you with some dates.

Many thanks again and very best,

The Equalizer: Bill de Blasio vs. Inequality

THE ATLANTIC - Molly Ball

<http://www.theatlantic.com/magazine/archive/2015/12/the-equalizer/413158/>

This past may, Bill de Blasio, the first-term mayor of New York City, traveled south from his home turf to Washington, D.C. He had come to solve America's problems. "What I'm trying to do with the progressive agenda goes far beyond the boundaries of the Democratic Party," he told me, in the large suite of offices that New York City maintains in downtown D.C. "It's about changing our national debate and, ultimately, changing policies." In less than an hour, de Blasio would present what he was grandly calling "The Progressive Agenda to Combat Inequality" during a sweaty press conference on the Capitol lawn, thereby seeking his place as one of the principal combatants in the current battle for the soul of his party.

"I think the Democratic Party needs to get back to its roots," he told me, his words rapid and full of impatient certitude. "We are a party that's supposed to be about progressive economic policies and economic populism. And we're supposed to speak for the needs of working people of every background, of every region. And I don't think, as a whole, the party has done a good enough job."

De Blasio is an ungainly 6 foot 5, with the hooded eyes and dour countenance of Sam the Eagle, the Muppets' harrumphing, censorious patriot. He can sometimes be oblivious to the way his actions come across, and as we spoke, he rubbed moisturizer into the backs of his long, hairy hands. He periodically pulled a flip phone—which he keeps for personal use to supplement the BlackBerry holstered at his hip—out of his suit pocket to check his text messages.

In de Blasio's view, the Democrats got slaughtered in the 2014 midterm elections not because voters rejected liberal ideas but because voters wanted more of them—and too few Democratic candidates delivered. It is time, he said, to jettison the timid centrism—tough on crime! pro-business! down with Big Government!—that Democrats have relied on since the Bill Clinton years. "What happened in the 2014 election is a lot of candidates—I would certainly say this about a lot of Democrats—did not want to say out loud the crisis that we're facing, and I think that's a huge mistake," he said.

The crisis he was referring to, income inequality, has risen to become one of the central preoccupations of American politics as the 2016 presidential election comes closer. In a Pew survey last year, inequality was Americans' top choice for "greatest threat to the world." Even Republicans are talking about it. None other than Mitt Romney has said, "The rich have gotten richer, income inequality has gotten worse, and there are more people in poverty than ever before."

In the Democratic presidential primary, Senator Bernie Sanders's insistent focus on inequality, which he calls "the great moral issue of our time," has posed an unexpectedly stiff challenge to Hillary Clinton. But Clinton's allies in the party's more centrist wing fear that adopting a crusading, progressive tilt would be an electoral dead end. This intraparty debate could determine the orientation of American politics for years to come, and de Blasio wants to be in the middle of the fray.

He is uniquely positioned to make his claim on the party's future. Senator Elizabeth Warren of Massachusetts has won the left's heart with her tirades against big banks. And Sanders, from Vermont, has become something of a folk hero—and seen his unlikely campaign catch fire—for his ruffled rabble-rousing. But as members of the Senate minority, they can do little but spout rhetoric. De Blasio has something they don't have: power. He commands a city bureaucracy hundreds of thousands strong; he has more constituents than most senators and governors do; he presides over a city council that is both ideologically sympathetic and structurally weak. In the nearly two years since he took office, he has embarked on an aggressive program to make the city less unequal—a program whose significance he believes most New Yorkers have yet to grasp.

De Blasio wants what he's doing in New York to serve as an example for the rest of the country. And he wants Hillary Clinton—whose successful U.S. Senate campaign he managed in 2000—to embrace that example. To formulate the agenda he was presenting at the Capitol in May, he had summoned an all-star cast of liberals, such as Toni Morrison and Van Jones, to Gracie Mansion. He has given speeches across the country, in places like Nebraska and Iowa, about what he calls "the crisis of our time." He planned to host a forum on income inequality in Iowa in early December, and invited the top candidates from both parties to participate—but had to cancel it when none agreed to attend.* For months, he pointedly refused to endorse Clinton, saying he needed to be satisfied that she had positioned herself correctly on his pet issue. “I think it’s time, in the coming weeks and months,” he told me in May, “for her to offer a specific vision for addressing income inequality.”

The long-delayed endorsement—part sincere expression, part attention-grabbing stunt—struck many commentators as a boneheaded move that speaks to an unearned and unbecoming grandiosity. As one source well placed in Clintonland put it to me: “Give me a fucking break.” When de Blasio marched on Washington in May, 13-point plan in hand, the New York media seemed mostly to be asking, Who do you think you are? Noting that de Blasio’s approval rating stood at just 44 percent among his own constituents, Bob Hardt, the political director of NY1, a local cable network, observed in a column, “Before heading off to the fields of Iowa again, perhaps it’s time to look homeward.”

Even some allies fret that de Blasio is getting too big for his britches. “When you’re mayor, you have the latitude to do those things, but only after you tend to business at home,” David Axelrod, the Democratic strategist and former Obama adviser, who has known de Blasio for more than a decade, told me. “He has to be very careful, I think, not to play so hard at the national game that he is perceived as neglecting his responsibilities.”

De Blasio brushes off such concerns. “I think we have a broken situation in Washington, D.C.,” he told me. “That is not a news flash. We know this. We know the issue of income inequality is not being addressed. We know the middle class is in great danger. We’ve got to have a breakthrough here. And I have the honor of being mayor of the biggest city in the country. It’s my obligation to act on these issues for my own constituents.”

Whether de Blasio is able to change the course of the country will depend on a couple of questions: Is his project in New York working? And do people like it? The mayor is finding, over the course of nearly two years in office, that the answers to those questions are not as closely linked as they might seem.

In september, New York’s Transport Workers Union took out a newspaper ad featuring de Blasio’s face superimposed on a graffiti-covered subway car. “Mayor de Blasio risks taking us back to the bad old days of the 1970s and 1980s,” it said. Chris Christie, the governor of New Jersey and a Republican presidential candidate, has decried the “diminution in the quality of life” in the city, blaming it on de Blasio’s “liberal policies.” In one poll last spring, just 8 percent of New Yorkers rated the mayor’s job performance as “excellent”; one voter, Rochelle Weinberg, a Democrat from Queens, told The Wall Street Journal: “I can’t stand him. Everything he does makes me angry.”

The New York Post, the city’s conservative tabloid, has seized on anecdotal reports of disorder, from the prevalence of panhandlers to the appearance of topless performers in Times Square, to depict de Blasio’s New York as an urban hellscape. A cover last year blared, “Squeegee men back: BAD OLD DAYS,” teasing an investigative report that had turned up all of two examples of the marauding Windexers famously targeted by former Mayor Rudy Giuliani in the ’90s. Squeegee men, the article said, had returned and were “terrorizing” the city.

This tableau of decline is not what de Blasio sees when he surveys his domain. What he sees is progress. His signature achievement to date has been the introduction of free prekindergarten education for every child in the city, a feat he accomplished in his first year. He created a war room across the street from City Hall that met seven days a week to steer the breakneck implementation. And when the new pre-K classrooms opened in September 2014, even some of the mayor’s critics conceded that it was a huge accomplishment. Now in its second year, the program serves more than 65,000 city children—more pre-K students than there are students of all ages in the entire Boston school district—including half of New York’s homeless children.

Under de Blasio, the city has also mandated that employers offer paid sick leave, raised the minimum wage for certain workers, and created a new ID card that helps undocumented immigrants get access to banks and other services. The card has proved hugely popular—more than half a million have been issued. Some rents have been frozen, for the first time in half a century—providing relief to more than 1 million New Yorkers—and more than 20,000 units of affordable housing have been created or preserved. Together with Police Commissioner William Bratton, the community-policing pioneer who held the job under Giuliani in the 1990s, de Blasio has dialed back the NYPD’s stop-and-frisk policy and stopped arresting people caught with small amounts of marijuana.

De Blasio, in other words, is making the city less unequal, little by little, just as he promised to do. “The sheer amount of dollars de Blasio’s policies has shifted into the hands of working class New Yorkers is truly staggering,” the Daily News columnist Juan Gonzalez wrote in September. “No wonder the 1%—those who had it so good for so long—want him out.”

These aren't just nice new programs, allies argue—they're proof that liberals can be effective, contra the stereotype of mushy-headed do-gooders whose well-intentioned efforts fall prey to dithering, bureaucracy, and overspending. “New York City, the supposedly ungovernable city, added an entire grade to the largest school system in America without a hitch,” Peter Ragone, a longtime adviser to de Blasio, told me. “That only happens through really strong management. There's no way around that.” The economy is strong, the city's budget is running a surplus, test scores are up, and overall crime is down. Over the summer, when many other cities saw an increase in murders, New York had the fewest in 25 years.

But this sunny picture has not exactly been the popular perception. A series of trivial flubs have chipped away at de Blasio's public image. He was widely mocked for eating pizza with a knife and fork, and at his first Groundhog Day ceremony, he dropped the groundhog, which later died. (At his second Groundhog Day, to prevent mishaps, Staten Island Chuck was presented in a plexiglass enclosure.) Throughout his first year, he was chronically late, even by New York standards. His attempt to limit the growth of Uber—perhaps on behalf of the taxi union, a political ally—was shelved after the company targeted de Blasio with protests and attack ads. And during a violent standoff on Staten Island in August, during which a firefighter was shot, de Blasio was discovered working out, mid-morning, at a gym in Brooklyn. Even among those constituents who do not see de Blasio as a radical bent on redistributing their wealth to minorities, a view persists of his administration as an embarrassing comedy of errors, and the mayor as its fool—tall, doofy, and deluded. Who cares how much good you're doing if New Yorkers have decided you're a putz?

In October, de Blasio appeared on CNN with his own version of Donald Trump's signature hat. It read make america fair again. Although de Blasio embraces the term progressive, with its suggestion of forward motion, his liberalism has a fundamentally nostalgic cast. He believes he is reaching back to an older tradition—a vanished time when broadly shared prosperity gave people good jobs and good wages. He invokes the Democratic heritage of Franklin Delano Roosevelt and Fiorello La Guardia, two men his Italian mother and her two sisters so admired that it often felt like they were invisibly present at family gatherings in the 1970s and '80s. “They talked about them all the time,” de Blasio told me. Never mind that the postwar years were far from fair for women, or blacks, or gays; de Blasio, like Trump, is tapping into a widespread sentiment that America's best days may have passed.

Bill de Blasio was born Warren Wilhelm Jr. (as a young adult, he adopted a combination of his childhood nickname and his mother's maiden name) in 1961 to a pair of 44-year-old liberal intellectuals. His family was haunted by McCarthyism: In 1950, both of his parents, Maria and Warren Wilhelm, had to defend themselves against charges of communist sympathies before a government-loyalty board. (Maria worked as a researcher at Time magazine, where her outspoken liberalism raised the hackles of one of the writers, the noted anti-communist Whittaker Chambers.) Though they were cleared, the investigation stymied Warren's career as a Commerce Department economist and set off a gradual, alcohol-fueled decline. He left the family when de Blasio was in elementary school. A decade later, he shot and killed himself in the parking lot of a Connecticut motel.

De Blasio's friends say this heritage has given him a profound leftist identity. "His mother was denounced by Whittaker Chambers. His father basically had his career ruined by McCarthyites," one told me. "On a deep, deep level, he knows that there really is a right wing, and it's not nice."

Thus, while many in his generation thrilled to the vision of Ronald Reagan, de Blasio had a very different reaction. Reagan's election, he told me, was "a shock like you would not believe," one that he sees as the root of virtually every pernicious economic trend—"deregulation and trickle-down economics and globalization." When I noted that a lot of people had found Reagan compelling, de Blasio shot back, "Well, I don't know many of those people."

De Blasio's young adulthood reads as a near-parody of a 1980s lefty's life. After earning a master's degree in international affairs from Columbia University, he went to Nicaragua to help the Sandinistas; he marched in protests against the Three Mile Island nuclear-power plant. He worked on David Dinkins's 1989 mayoral campaign, then took a job at City Hall, where, in 1991, he met Chirlane McCray, an African American poet, activist, and speech writer. In 1979, McCray had written an essay for Essence titled "I Am a Lesbian." De Blasio wooed her nonetheless, and in 1994, they were married in Brooklyn's Prospect Park.

De Blasio continued to pursue a career in government, working under Andrew Cuomo in Bill Clinton's Department of Housing and Urban Development. In 1996, he directed the New York State campaign for Clinton's reelection. When Hillary Clinton, then still the first lady, decided to run for Senate in 2000, she tapped de Blasio to manage her campaign.

Harold Ickes, the former Clinton adviser, who has known de Blasio since his Dinkins days, told me that de Blasio initially hesitated to take the job managing the Senate campaign, because he was intimidated by the complexities of the Clintons' world. "I said to him, 'You can bring the good news and I'll bring the bad news,'" Ickes said. "We did that a lot of times—he'd call me and say, 'Would you mind calling Hillary and talking about X, Y, or Z issue?'" De Blasio's management style was laid-back and indecisive, and toward the end of the campaign he was removed from the chain of command, according to The New York Times. Ickes told me that wasn't the case. The perception, he said, was based on a misunderstanding of de Blasio's role: His job was to guide Clinton through the ins and outs of New York politics, not to serve as an overall strategist.

It was clear to Ickes even then that de Blasio intended to seek office himself someday. "He always talked about it, but in New York, it's like getting your ticket to the fish counter at Zabar's on a Friday night—you have to stand in a long line," Ickes told me. After Hillary Clinton's election, de Blasio ran for a Brooklyn city-council seat. "And the rest is history, as they say."

To de Blasio's allies, the twin strands of his biography—staunch liberal who's sure of his principles, and political operative who understands electoral sausage making—constitute just the combination needed to bring about New York's progressive transformation. "He's basically an idealist who makes deals to get things done," Howard Dean, the former governor of Vermont and a friend of de Blasio's, told me. "He's not starry-eyed. But he's also not a guy who's only interested in his own power."

One persistent criticism, however, is that de Blasio's certitude leaves little room for alternate approaches. At one point, I asked him how he would adjust his worldview if his policies turned out to be ineffective—if, as his critics warn, crime and deficits and the squeegee men returned. He said his approaches had already been tested. "We've picked up on some policies that have already been successful elsewhere," he said.

When it came to questions like the value of prekindergarten, he said, “I think the jury came back a long time ago.”

Despite New York’s reputation as a liberal bastion, before de Blasio’s election the city had not had a Democratic mayor since Dinkins left office, in 1993. The odds-on candidate to replace Michael Bloomberg in 2013 was the city-council speaker, Christine Quinn, who had cozied up to business interests and helped Bloomberg win a third term by getting rid of the city’s two-term limit. (She had defeated de Blasio for the speaker position in 2005.) Bloomberg was still popular with majorities of city voters and of Democrats; Quinn positioned herself as the candidate who would stay the course in good times.

But de Blasio correctly sensed that a liberal wind was blowing. He was at the vanguard of a progressive takeover of city politics that began in 2009, when he won the primary for the citywide office of public advocate in a surprise upset. De Blasio was endorsed by the Working Families Party, a labor-backed, left-wing coalition that also helped seven liberal challengers win city-council primaries and special elections that year. Once in office, they joined with other liberals on the council to form an 11-member progressive caucus. They were a minority on the 51-seat council, but they quickly proved capable of driving the agenda—and irritating Bloomberg—by, for example, pushing for paid sick leave and against stop-and-frisk. Quinn opposed the progressives on both issues, beginning her alienation from the Democratic base.

De Blasio promised, in his campaign, to fund his pre-K proposal through a new tax on incomes above $500,000—a way to help the poor by taking from the rich. But once he assumed office, after coasting in the general election with 73 percent of the vote, the Democratic governor, Andrew Cuomo, countered by announcing that the state would fund the pre-K expansion without raising taxes. De Blasio insisted that the tax hike was necessary to ensure future funding, and he lobbied lawmakers to pass it. At the same time, he announced that some public charter schools would no longer get free space in public-school buildings—a policy change that charter-school advocates took as a declaration of war.

Eva Moskowitz, the CEO of the Success Academy public-charter chain and a target of de Blasio’s, told me that she believes de Blasio has been blinded to alternate approaches by his ideology and by his loyalty to the teachers union. “His views of the solution don’t look that different from those being proposed 30 years ago,” Moskowitz said. “I’ve watched up close for many, many years, and those solutions do not work.”

Not long after de Blasio was sworn in, as he was trying to gin up support for his pre-K tax, charter-school advocates held a massive rally in Albany—headlined by Cuomo—and aired television ads blasting the mayor as anti-student. The blowback helped doom de Blasio’s tax proposal. So while he publicly claims victory for getting pre-K funded and running, sources close to him say he privately acknowledges that he lost the battle. “He got his clock cleaned by Cuomo in Albany the first year,” says one de Blasio ally. “He knows he misplayed it.”

De Blasio was determined to get better results from the second legislative session of his term. He stumped across the state to get more Democrats elected to the legislature in 2014. And he strenuously avoided criticizing Cuomo. That wasn’t easy, as the governor continually found large and small ways to needle the mayor, from refusing to consider de Blasio’s plan to redevelop a rail yard in Queens to announcing a restrictive Ebola quarantine in the fall of 2014 without consulting him. Last winter, Cuomo, who oversees the city’s transit system, blindsided de Blasio by announcing that the subways would close ahead of a snowstorm—de Blasio found out about the closure when it was reported by the media. A cartoon in the Daily News depicted de Blasio as a housefly and Cuomo as a sadistic teenager ripping off one of his wings.

De Blasio ignored the provocations. He even helped Cuomo at a crucial moment. Up for reelection in 2014, Cuomo faced a primary challenge from Zephyr Teachout, a law professor recruited by the Working Families Party. The party saw Cuomo as exactly the sort of Wall Street Democrat it was trying to drive out: Despite being the son of one of de Blasio’s progressive idols (the mayor’s “tale of two cities” campaign slogan was also the refrain of Mario Cuomo’s landmark Democratic National Convention speech in 1984), Andrew Cuomo built his career on a socially liberal but fiscally conservative platform, cutting taxes on the wealthy as he pushed gay marriage through the legislature. The Working Families Party’s mission is to make this kind of moderation unacceptable. “We want to do to Democrats what the Tea Party did to Republicans,” the party’s national director, Dan Cantor, told me.

Though the WFP had persuaded Teachout to run against Cuomo, de Blasio urged the party to support the incumbent, seeing an opportunity to build leverage with a governor who was almost certain to win reelection. De Blasio brokered a deal in which the governor made a series of promises to the progressives: He said he would fight to help Democrats retake the state Senate, to increase the minimum wage, and to enact campaign-finance reform. Cuomo recorded a videotaped address to the WFP's convention, where members were hotly divided over which candidate to back. When some complained that in the video Cuomo had avoided making his promises explicit, de Blasio arranged to get Cuomo on speakerphone to make the commitments the delegates were waiting to hear.

It was a close call, but Cuomo won the group's endorsement, which would seem to have put him in de Blasio's debt. Yet the governor proceeded to renege on the deal. He not only didn't lift a finger for Democratic Senate candidates, he started a new party, the Women's Equality Party, aimed at undermining the similarly acronymed WFP and draining its ballot share. Cuomo won reelection with 54 percent of the vote, a slimmer margin than expected. De Blasio and the Working Families Party, in the words of New York magazine, "got played."

De Blasio's efforts to get more Democrats elected to the legislature also backfired. Almost all the candidates he'd campaigned for lost; some were attacked for their association with the liberal mayor. The Republicans elected in their stead were annoyed with de Blasio as a result of his efforts against them. When the legislature convened this year, Cuomo completed the humiliation by antagonizing de Blasio more brazenly than ever. Cuomo and the split legislature conspired to deny virtually all of de Blasio's requests, refusing the changes to housing policy he sought and passing an insulting one-year extension of mayoral school control, rather than the permanent extension he had asked for. In newspaper articles, an anonymous "top Cuomo administration official" trashed de Blasio's strategy, telling the Daily News, "He puts himself in these situations." The press quickly sniffed out this official's identity: Cuomo himself.

De Blasio had finally had enough. In an interview with NY1, the cable network, he abandoned the pretense of comity and accused Cuomo of shortchanging the city out of pure spite: "In my many efforts to find some common ground, suspiciously, it seemed that every good idea got rejected or manipulated." Many on the left cheered at the venting of their long-held frustrations. But beyond catharsis, it wasn't clear what de Blasio hoped to achieve with his broadside. In recent polling, Cuomo's approval rating in New York City came in higher than de Blasio's.

The greatest test of de Blasio's progressive ideals has been the city's convulsions over police brutality. Last December, after a grand jury declined to indict the white police officer who'd choked Eric Garner to death, the mayor seemed to side with the protesters and against the police. De Blasio said he worries about the danger his own son, who is biracial, faces at the hands of police. "We've had to literally train him, as families have all over this city for decades, in how to take special care in any encounter he has with the police officers who are there to protect him," he said.

Two weeks later, two officers were shot and killed as they sat in their patrol car. "There is blood on many hands tonight," the head of the police union, Pat Lynch, said of the killings. "That blood on the hands starts on the steps of City Hall, in the office of the mayor." At the slain officers' funerals, hundreds of police officers turned their backs on de Blasio.

Had this happened in the 1990s, when fear of crime was at its height, such a moment could well have been a breaking point—the moment when the mayor lost the city, when the silent majority's fear of disorder turned into a visceral rejection, when New Yorkers joined the officers in turning their backs on the mayor. But in 2015, that didn't quite happen. Instead, about 70 percent of New Yorkers told pollsters they disapproved of the union's actions and Lynch's comments.

The incident made clear that times have changed since Bill Clinton and the Democratic Leadership Council saved the party from itself in the '90s—a time when the party's image as soft on crime was its biggest obstacle to mainstream success. Public sentiment has changed in other ways, too, since Clinton urged the party to move to the middle. Americans are far more liberal than they used to be on social issues like gay marriage. This year, 24 percent of Americans said they consider themselves liberal, a record high in Gallup's two decades of polling the question (though still well behind the 38 percent who call themselves conservative and the 34 percent who call themselves moderate).

"The Wall Street Democrats do not seem to understand that the debate has changed," Michael Podhorzer, the political director of the AFL-CIO and one of the left's top strategists, told me. "There is a sense of entitlement, and a failure to comprehend that the threat is more than rhetorical. But the reality is, a Wall Street Democrat can't win today." Podhorzer advises Democrats against campaigning explicitly on “inequality,” a word, he says, that resonates only with elites. But a platform of worker-friendly issues, such as raising the minimum wage and implementing paid family leave, can galvanize a wide spectrum of voters.

Moderate Democrats, meanwhile, tend to break out in hives when they hear de Blasio argue that they would win more elections if they just tacked to the left. They hear in his words a latter-day echo of the Jesse Jackson–style interest-group liberalism Bill Clinton rejected. “There are a lot of Democrats and Republicans who aspire to be wealthy themselves,” Jack Markell, the centrist governor of Delaware, told me. “If we say to people, ‘The rich are the problem,’ I don’t think that’s a particularly good strategy.” Elaine Kamarck, a political scientist and Democratic operative who in 1989 co-wrote a manifesto that established the stance of the centrist Democratic Leadership Council, told me bluntly that if Democratic candidates move sharply to the left, “they will lose.”

Hillary Clinton, in her current incarnation, has largely seemed to take the centrists’ side of the argument. In Ohio in September, she told a group of women, “You know, I get accused of being kind of moderate and center. I plead guilty.” But there are signs she feels compelled to heed the party’s vocal left wing. After scrupulously avoiding taking a position on the fracas over trade that split the Democrats in the spring, Clinton came out against the Trans-Pacific Partnership in October. (Warren, Sanders, and de Blasio had all strongly opposed giving Obama authority to expedite negotiations for the free-trade agreement, a major Obama priority for which Clinton had advocated as secretary of state.) She has also come out against the Keystone XL pipeline, which environmentalists loathe, and proposed a set of new regulations to rein in Wall Street.

In late October, de Blasio finally ended the suspense and endorsed Clinton, calling her “the candidate who I believe can fundamentally address income inequality effectively.”* The Clinton campaign buried the news in a press release announcing the support of 85 mayors across the country.

If de Blasio’s influence on the national discussion remains a work in progress, that hasn’t stopped him from trying to steer the global one as well. In September, he welcomed Pope Francis to New York, hailing him as “the leading moral force on this Earth” and positioning himself as an ally in the global struggle against poverty. He has made official visits to Paris and Israel. He has spoken on more than one occasion with Alexis Tsipras, the on-again, off-again prime minister of Greece, whose crusade against austerity he applauds. De Blasio told me that he recently had a “powerful conversation” with the then-mayor of Rome, who shared his frustration at being far out in front of his national government.

The New York press has consistently depicted these activities as presumptuous—a pattern that clearly irks de Blasio. Why shouldn’t the mayor of America’s largest and most cosmopolitan city be not only a national leader but an international one, too? “My job is to produce for my people in this city, the 8.4 million people that I represent,” de Blasio told me. “But I am also cognizant of the fact that we do have an impact on the national discussion. Even a little bit on the international discussion.”

Nonetheless, there are signs that de Blasio is starting to pay more attention to his image at home. On a rainy Friday in October, he was scheduled to visit Washington once again, this time to give the keynote address to a liberal group called American Family Voices. But Hurricane Joaquin was headed for the East Coast, and at the last minute de Blasio canceled his appearance. Frequently called out in the New York media for his forays onto the national stage, the mayor seemed eager to avoid the spectacle of being caught speechifying out of town while his constituents struggled to cope with a storm.

Once criticized for his refusal to engage with trivial political controversies, de Blasio lately stands accused, in a New York Times article, of having become too reactive. When Staten Islanders complained that he hadn’t spent much time in the borough, for example, de Blasio quickly scheduled a trip there. After long insisting that the city didn’t need any more police, he agreed to add 1,300 new officers. He’s even started showing up for events on time. As de Blasio continues to learn, having a strong sense of direction is only one part of being a transcendent leader. The other is convincing people to follow you.

Here's what we've got for you, a former tenant of the Times Square (TS) who has since moved on to housing stability through her experience living in the building and with working day in and day out with our residents at the site (so multi-faceted perspective on how supportive housing benefits an extremely vulnerable group of homeless individuals). The person's name is [REDACTED].

Some background:

In her own words from several years ago:

[REDACTED] My caseworker sent me to the Times Square – it was during the rent-up period back in 1994. I walked into that building, and saw how beautiful it was. I looked at that stairwell and said, "I can't believe I could live here...."

[REDACTED] I was called in to sign the lease – I can still remember that date! – and was given the keys. I'd seen the room before, during the interviews, but there's a difference between seeing it and actually getting keys and knowing it's your own apartment.

[REDACTED] It was wonderful – being able to give back.

[REDACTED] – right in the middle of everything. I work with people who are usually having difficulty with their rent. My relationship with most tenants is good because [REDACTED] I understand the circumstances people get in. We're not always up – we all go through difficult periods. That's life.

I work very closely with people having difficulty and their caseworkers to keep them housed. The one I remember most is one of the original tenants of the Times Square, who had never paid rent after Breaking Ground became the landlord. There were setbacks with him, but I was able to work with him to pay off all of it – he owed almost $12,000! He's up to date now....

I've been living at the Times Square for about 10 years (note, since moved out to more independent living). At first, I wasn't able to let the tenants know that when I was off, I was off. It was "I am at work from nine to five; you can see me at any time then. Please don't approach me on the street to ask me questions." But after explaining it a few times, they got it. When I walk through the lobby on weekends and at night, they all say "Hi!" and are really friendly, but they know I'm not at work.

I love being here.... I'm perfectly happy.

About Breaking Ground

- Breaking Ground is New York City's largest supportive housing provider
- President and CEO is Brenda Rosen
- Breaking Ground has built more than 3,200 units of supportive housing and has 1,000 more in the development pipeline
- All buildings feature on-site supportive services
- Breaking Ground has provided housing and critical on-site support for the chronically homeless, low-income working adults, those living with mental illness and addiction, those living with HIV/AIDS, veterans, seniors, artists and youth aging out of foster care
- 99% of Breaking Ground residents remain stably housed despite struggling with significant challenges
- Breaking Ground operates, under contract with DHS, street to home outreach services in all of Brooklyn, Queens, and nearly one-third of Manhattan
- This is Breaking Ground's 25th anniversary year – they have helped 12,000 people escape homelessness since 1990
- A 2013 NYC study found that the cost of care for a homeless disabled person was $51,020 in Medicaid, psychiatric care, shelter and corrections. That same study found that once in supportive housing, the savings paid for the cost of housing and saved an additional $10,100. Based on that figure, over 25 years, Breaking Ground's supportive housing units have saved over $625 million in tax payer dollars.

About The Times Square

- The Times Square is the largest permanent supportive housing residence in the nation
- It is home to 650 residents including those who are formerly homeless, those living with mental illness, HIV/AIDS, and low-income working adults
- On-site social services – case management, mental health counselors, medical clinic – are provided by Breaking Ground's partner the Center for Urban Community Services
- Breaking Ground has on-site staff to plan activities – outings, summer barbeques, Thanksgiving dinner – that enhances socialization, decreases isolation, and builds community within the building
- The building features a garden roof deck, computer lab, library, art studio (art work by residents is displayed in the mezzanine of the lobby), rehearsal space, laundry facilities, 24-hour security
- History: Breaking Ground opened the building in 1991. The Times Square was a grand hotel that had fallen into disrepair. Breaking Ground transformed the building into supportive housing and restored the historic lobby. The building is listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

Sure that's great. And i do have a quick question-- MBDB taking Qs or no?
Bloomberg? Last go around the answer was no i believe. I'm happy to check w/comms team too if that's easier.

Date: Thursday, December 03, 2015 11:14:26 AM

Dear Jonathan

I am so pleased to announce an important new public-private partnership called Building Healthy Communities. This unique initiative seeks to improve community health outcomes in 12 of our highest-need neighborhoods by increasing opportunities for physical activity, improving access to fresh and affordable food and promoting safe and vibrant public spaces.

Building Healthy Communities is an example of an important strategic alliance between the public and private sectors that allows for private funds to unlock and maximize public dollars. We are grateful to our founding partners Unilever whose commitment is the largest corporate commitment to the City to date, the Laurie M. Tisch Illumination Fund and the New York State Health Foundation and also to our 11 City agencies who have worked together to bring this initiative to life.

Below please read more about Building Healthy Communities in today's Wall Street Journal.

Please feel free to reach out to me directly to learn more about Building Healthy Communities and to get involved in our efforts to ensure that the places where we live, learn, work and play support good health.

Best regards
Gabrielle

Farms being built at public housing sites to grow produce for communities with limited access to healthy food
By Zolan Kanno-Youngs
Dec. 2, 2015

When Sade Bennett started working in April at a small farm on the grounds of a New York City Housing Authority complex in Brooklyn, she had a GED, a 5-year-old son, and a desire to better her health and her community.

She has learned how to grow produce, cook it in the healthiest manner, and along the way she obtained a certificate qualifying her to work in some sustainability-related jobs. She even surprised her family at Thanksgiving this year when she arrived with fresh vegetables.

"The lessons that we've learned, we take it home to our kids and they have healthier mind-sets," said Ms. Bennett, 25 years old, who lives in the Crown Heights neighborhood of Brooklyn.

The 1-acre plot where Ms. Bennett worked, known as the NYCHA farm at Red Hook, will serve as a prototype for Mayor Bill de Blasio's new Building Healthy Communities initiative. The multimillion-dollar public-private partnership aims to improve the health of New Yorkers in 12 communities that have limited access to healthy food and are sometimes referred to as food deserts.

The initiative plans to build more urban farms, expand school gardens and establish community-center culinary programs and farmers markets.

"Our neighborhoods must be able to offer access to healthy food, opportunities for physical activity and safe, vibrant public spaces," Mr. de Blasio said.

Unilever, a multinational consumer goods company, has already committed $4.1 million to the initiative. The Laurie M. Tisch Illumination Fund and the New York State Health Foundation have each pledged $500,000. The initiative will also use funding from the city Department of Parks & Recreation's Community Parks Initiative, as well as other agencies.

Urban farms will be constructed on NYCHA sites in East Harlem and Brooklyn's Canarsie section as well as the South Bronx and Staten Island within the next three years. One urban farm is already being designed at the Howard Houses in Brownsville, in Brooklyn. The other neighborhoods should receive money to maintain pedestrian plazas, establish farmers markets and install outdoor exercise areas, according to a spokeswoman for the mayor.

The communities were chosen based on their levels of obesity and diabetes, as well as population density and crime.

"We know engaged communities are usually safer communities so that's where we hope we're going with this," said Gabrielle Fialkoff, the director of the city Office of Strategic Partnerships, which will anchor the initiative.

The urban farms will adopt the same model as the Red Hook farm and its workers will be trained by members of its workforce. The urban farm workforce is largely supplied by Green City Force, an AmeriCorps program that enlists 18- to 24-year-olds from low-income backgrounds into environmental service.

The so-called corps members must be unemployed or in a dead-end job and have a GED or high-school diploma. They are paid $1,000 a month to either work on the NYCHA farming beds or raise the public-housing residents' awareness on energy efficiency.

The produce from the urban farms comes free of charge to the public-housing residents—they only need to volunteer at the farm or bring a bag of kitchen compost from their own home. If they bring compost, they will receive a bag of the same weight filled with collard greens, celery, cucumbers, cabbage or other vegetables and herbs.

The urban farmers then hold culinary classes in a community center to teach residents how to cook the produce.

"The experience of the Red Hook farm was one that we wanted to take elsewhere and bring to our other communities," Ms. Fialkoff said. "I think so much is happening in that one place."
Ashley White, 25, an alumna of Green City Force and an intern at the city Department of Environmental Protection, said she was motivated to provide healthy food to neighborhoods considered food deserts.

"I go to Manhattan and there's Whole Foods, there's Trader Joe's, there's Union Square, the farmers market," Ms. White said. "We don't have any of that."

The corps members also have used the experience to benefit their own health. Ms. Bennett said that she has been cutting sweets from her diet. And with her first stipend check, she bought a bicycle.

Caroline and I definitely have a few thoughts, hopefully will not delay too much. Is this the only material they would be handing out? We would suggest simplifying the text considerably and probably doing a slight graphic redesign. We could work on that first thing next week, but would only do so if you were open to that!

Some of this additional detail could possibly be kept in an FAQ on a second page if that's important. I think if the main goal is just to get them to participate, we need to focus on leave out some of the other info.

Have a good weekend.

We have two handouts for the canvassing team from Northfield to distribute to homeowners.

1. I am attaching a copy of the factsheet with information on flood risk and elevation certificates. Matt, Caroline and Lucy – we have included the CNYCN homeowner helpline as a key resource – can you review and let me know if you have any feedback?

2. Z-cards for Staten Island – these are borough specific and citywide preliminary-FIRMs with our key messages (Understand your Risk, Buy Flood Insurance) and resources.

We are looking to get these materials to Northfield by early next week so they can be ready to go as soon as possible.

NYC HOME-STAT

To better and more quickly respond to the street homelessness problem, the City will create HOME-STAT – Homeless Outreach & Mobile Engagement Street Action Teams. The initiative will partner existing homeless response and prevention programs with a series of new initiatives designed to better identify, engage, [delete this word – monitor] and transition homeless New Yorkers to appropriate services and, ultimately, permanent housing.

HOME-STAT will be the most comprehensive street homelessness outreach effort ever deployed in a major American city. HOME-STAT is funded from within existing resources at DHS, so no new dollars are necessary. HOME-STAT adds three new elements to the City's homeless prevention and response policy:

Proactive Canvassing

- The Mayor's Office of Operations is launching an effort that will, for the first time ever, conduct a proactive daily canvass of every block from Canal Street to 145th Street, focusing on hot spots and improving the City's ability to quickly identify issues and deploy resources to the people and places they are needed most. In addition to the daily canvass, HOME-STAT survey teams will conduct a daily identification of hot spots of persistent homeless presence throughout the five boroughs. This new mobile proactive canvass will involve 60 field and analytic staff responsible for gathering and reporting real-time information used to deploy resources and track initiative outcomes.
- The Mayor's Office of Operations will create a suite of HOME-STAT dashboards including a daily public dashboard that maps service requests and data from HOME-STAT survey and outreach teams, and the police department. A monthly dashboard will report on aggregate outcomes, conditions and performance beginning in early 2016.
- In addition to the daily information generated by the canvassing operation, the City will conduct comprehensive quarterly nighttime counts to provide a more complete and real-time understanding of homelessness in New York City.

Immediate Response

- HOME-STAT will increase contracted Street Outreach Team staff and build a rapid-response capacity to respond to 311 calls and information received from HOME-STAT field staff in all five boroughs and throughout the subway system. HOME-STAT outreach teams will set an average response time of one hour when the program is fully operational in March 2016. With HOME-STAT, New York City’s homeless outreach staff will grow from 175 to over 300.
- The New York City Police Department will redeploy 40 officers to its 70-officer Homeless Outreach Unit to respond to calls regarding encampments, large hot spots, and those experiencing emotional disturbance or exhibiting erratic behavior. The NYPD will set a non-emergency average response time of one hour. Emergencies will continue to be handled via 911.

Citywide Case-by-Case Integration and Management

- HOME-STAT will create a citywide case management system that ~~pairs~~ provides case managers for the street outreach services ~~who can~~ to ensure City service integration, continuous monitoring and outreach, and rapid response to individual problems. All HOME-STAT agencies – including DHS, NYPD, and other human services agencies – will play an operational and case management staffing role in this effort. The NYC SAFE Hub, a central command for tracking mentally ill individuals with a history of erratic or violent behavior, will partner in this effort. The Mayor’s Office of Operations will ensure multi-agency integration and accountability.

Topline Facts

- HOME-STAT will be the most comprehensive street homelessness outreach effort ever deployed in a major American city.
- This effort pairs existing homeless prevention, outreach and public safety efforts with new initiatives focused on expanded canvassing, rapid response, and individualized case management.
- 60 new field and analytic staff and 137 new outreach staff will be involved in HOME-STAT.

MAYOR'S OFFICE OF STRATEGIC PARTNERSHIPS CITY HALL
NEW YORK, NY 10007

Dear Jonathan –

I hope this note finds you and your loved ones enjoying the holiday season. With 2015 coming to a close, I wanted to take a moment to look back on some of the partnerships the de Blasio administration has formed this year with the private sector and the impact that these initiatives are already having on the lives of our 8.5 million fellow New Yorkers.

Below are a few of the highlights; whether it is increasing workforce opportunities for New York's young people, reforming our mental health system, or re-opening Gracie Mansion, (please let me know if you would like to arrange a tour in the New Year) we are extremely proud to have worked with so many committed individuals, corporations, and foundations to create access and opportunity for so many New Yorkers.

Thank you for your partnership and commitment to our great City, working together it will remain the safest city in America and the commerce and cultural capital of the world.

I look forward to working with you in the New Year.

Happy Holidays,
Gabrielle

Mayor's Office of Strategic Partnerships 2015 Year in Review

Created the Center for Youth Employment

This unprecedented interagency public-private partnership coordinates the City's youth workforce programs and serves as an entry point for private sector employers:

- $5.4 million year-one private sector investment from over 60 partners
- Doubled quality private sector paid internships in the Ladders for Leaders program from 475 to 1,035
- Increased summer jobs for the city’s vulnerable youth from 1,000 to 2,078
- Funded training for 1,000 guidance counselors, teachers and other educators in college and career readiness.

Announced Computer Science for All

$81 million public-private partnership to deliver computer science education to all 1.1 million NYC public school students:

- Increasing share of public school students receiving computer science education from 5% to 100% over ten years
- Meeting the private sector’s need for 233,000 new tech employees with a diverse and local talent pipeline

Won Social Innovation Fund Grant for “Connections to Care”

A five-year, $30 million partnership with the White House’s Corporation for National and Community Service:

- Grant increases access to mental health services by training staff in mental health techniques at partnering community-based organizations
- Program targets hard-to-reach populations and those who are in need but may not seek out services

Released ThriveNYC

Mental Health Roadmap, developed by the Mayor’s Fund, guided the City toward a more effective and holistic mental health system. ThriveNYC has 54 initiatives to increase mental health services, including:

- Training 250,000 New Yorkers on mental health First Aid
- Recruiting 400 clinicians to serve in NYC Mental Health Corps
- Citywide public awareness campaign

Launched Building Healthy Communities

Targeting 12 historically underserved neighborhoods to improve access to healthy food, increase physical activity, and promote public safety:

- Creating green spaces, urban farms, gardens, engaged and safe communities, and programming to address chronically high rates of disease in our most high-need neighborhoods
- $5.3 million committed from private funders, including Unilever (largest corporate commitment in City history), the Laurie M. Tisch Illumination Fund, and the New York State Health Foundation

Partnered with Warby Parker to Expand Vision Screenings in Community Schools

Helping students overcome barriers to learning:

- Serving over 65,000 students, K-12 in 130 Community Schools with full vision screenings

Homegrown tech company Warby Parker providing 20,000 free pairs of glasses to students

Announced “Talk to Your Baby”

Public-private partnership with Scholastic, Inc., Sesame Workshop and Clinton Foundation urging parents to talk, read, and sing to their babies during critical 0-3 age range:

- Provided baby book bundles that included a book edited by First Lady Chirlane McCray and an evidence based tool-kit for parents to 200,000 low-income families
- Funded media campaign to reach new parents via TaxiTV, subway ads, and text messaging

Opened Gracie Mansion

Reopened the People’s House to New Yorkers across the five boroughs:

- “Windows on the City,” a new installation featuring 49 new works of art reflecting diversity of New York during the Federal period
- Resumed weekly public tours
- Developing new programming in the home and across the five boroughs to connect New Yorkers to Gracie Mansion and of our shared history.

this is from the desk top web page - i got these screen shots.

when I use the "DATE CREATED" search -- and put in it Nov 1 thru Nov 11, and click search it shows ZERO REQUESTS however when I use "OPEN AND RECENTLY CLOSED" to search the reports do come up and the map is colored could this be a glitch -- give me a call when you have a chance [REDACTED] --

Bill de Blasio predicts 2016 will be big year for American progressives

NEWSDAY - Emily Ngo

<http://www.newsday.com/news/new-york/bill-de-blasio-predicts-2016-will-be-big-year-for-american-progressives-1.11274698>

Mayor Bill de Blasio predicted Tuesday that the 2016 election cycle would serve as a “real sea change moment,” placing left-leaning leaders in Washington whose policies would benefit the city.

“The American people are going to make decisions that will have a profoundly important impact on New York City,” the Democratic mayor said at an unrelated Times Square news conference.

He said federal lawmakers will debate funding for mass transit, affordable housing, education and other policies that he called “real domestic issues that have gone untreated.”

De Blasio faced criticism earlier this year for several trips around the country to promote his progressive agenda and for his delayed endorsement of Hillary Clinton for president. He was forced to scrap a presidential forum he had planned in Iowa this month when no candidates committed to attending.

He said that decisions on the national stage affect policy at the local level.

“We had good news a few weeks back when the highway bill finally passed,” de Blasio said, calling it an “example of a national issue that profoundly affected New York City” and a “ray of light” from an often-gridlocked U.S. Congress.

De Blasio, as part of a national bipartisan coalition of mayors, had successfully lobbied for the federal transportation bill that provides $500 million over five years for city roads, bridges, transit and ferries and roll backed a proposed $80 million annual cut for subways and buses in the city.

The mayor recommended Tuesday that reporters read an Atlantic magazine article titled “Why America is Moving Left.”

The piece describing a changing electorate led by progressive millennials and minority voters “speaks volumes about what next year is about,” de Blasio said.

“Far too much money has been squandered and far too many homeless children's lives have been damaged by the deeply flawed cluster site program. The Mayor's four-point plan to abolish the cluster site program is good news for homeless New Yorkers, good news for affordable housing, and good news for taxpayers. Once again, the City is focusing on proven solutions to homelessness and doing the hard work of reforming a broken system.”

MAYOR DE BLASIO ANNOUNCES THREE YEAR PLAN TO PERMANENTLY END USING CLUSTERS AS HOMELESS SHELTERS
Will Replace with New Shelter Model Combining Affordable Housing and Community Space; Return Clusters to Affordable Housing Market

Mayor Bill de Blasio today announced a three-year plan to phase out and permanently end New York City's 20-year program of placing homeless families into "cluster" shelter units - apartments many of which should be permanent affordable housing.

As many of the units as possible will be converted back to affordable housing and other units will be replaced as the Department of Homeless Services puts into place a new model to address homelessness that includes permanent affordable housing, flexible shelter space and community space in the same building.

"The cluster homeless shelter system is broken and represents the worst combination of expensive housing, bad conditions and poor access to services that homeless families need. Importantly, cluster shelters take badly needed affordable apartments off the market. Now we have a solid, practical program for ending the use of clusters, returning apartments to the market and providing new shelters that are attractive for both residents and the communities in which they are located," Mayor de Blasio said.

“Cluster” homeless shelters involve placing families in regular rental apartments in buildings with other rent paying tenants. This policy was begun more than 20 years ago. The City pays both rent and an additional amount for services.

The plan to phase out the use of clusters will begin during the 90-day review of homeless services that the Mayor ordered on December 15. All 3,265 cluster shelter units will either be converted to permanent housing or replaced by December 31, 2018. It will be funded with existing resources and includes the following:

- Initiating enforcement actions against owners of buildings with chronic building code infractions in which DHS "cluster" shelter units are located, including notification that HRA will withhold rent pursuant to New York State Social Services Law Section 143-b where landlords fail to correct unsafe conditions. Under this law, landlords are barred from evicting tenants for nonpayment of rent.

“If building code violations and fines are not a strong enough incentive for a landlord to fix his property, we believe that withholding the rent will be a powerful tool that they won’t ignore. This also will benefit other renters in the building,” said Human Resources Commissioner Steven Banks.

- Engaging responsible owners of buildings with DHS "cluster" shelter units in a new initiative to upgrade their buildings and return the "cluster apartments" to permanent housing in which the families residing there can remain as tenants. This will both reduce the number of homeless families and permanently return those apartments to the affordable market.

"We want to work with responsible owners to convert cluster shelter units in their buildings back to permanent housing or phase out their use by replacing them with a new approach to homelessness," Banks added.

- Revising DHS's open-ended RFP for new shelters to instead seek proposals for new housing models that combine permanent affordable housing with transitional housing and community space. Under this model, shelter residents will receive services including rapid rehousing.

- Deploying HRA staffing as a “rapid rehousing team” to promote shelter move outs from family shelters to permanent housing to help decrease reliance on “cluster” units. The required headcount for this initiative is included in the January Plan. Experience has shown that households with rental assistance vouchers are more successful finding housing if they have support in their search.

Today’s announcement delivers on a promise the Mayor made to end the use of clusters (when, where, campaign?).

In March, the City Department of Investigation reported the results of its investigation, requested by the Mayor, into homeless shelters, including clusters. DOI found the cluster sites to be the worst maintained, the most poorly monitored, and provide the least adequate social services to families. The report recommended reducing the use of clusters.

The cluster program currently includes 3,265 units in 279 buildings spread around the City housing about 11,000 people. The City pays about $x,000 per unit, a total of $xx million a year. The cost includes both rent and social services, but because the units are dispersed in many buildings, actual access to those services has been found to be problematic.

The program was started by Mayor Giuliani in (year to come).

The City will evaluate buildings with cluster units operated by landlords currently on Public Advocate Letitia James list of worst landlord watch list for housing code enforcement actions, including under the law permitting withholding of rent by HRA. That evaluation will begin this week.

The new model for shelters is based on a concept called Gateway Housing, which is similar to the HPD HomeStretch program, in that it will include permanent affordable housing, shelter units and community space in the same building. The estimated cost of this combination of housing and services will be about a third less than traditional shelter, which costs at least $37,000 a year for a family. The new model also includes services that have been proven to work and are tailored to the needs of individuals and families, rather than a one-size-fits all model. It will focus on the one-third of those in homeless shelters who repeatedly return to shelter in order to break that cycle.

MAYOR DE BLASIO APPOINTS HERMINIA PALACIO AS DEPUTY MAYOR FOR HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES

Nationally-recognized expert in strategic long-term planning and crisis response to begin January 25

City also announces shifting roles for senior administration leadership half way through Administration

NEW YORK—Mayor Bill de Blasio announced today the appointment of New York City native Herminia Palacio as Deputy Mayor for Health and Human Services.

Palacio is a crisis management expert who as Executive Director of the Harris County Public Health and Environmental Services coordinated health services for 27,000 people from the New Orleans area to Houston during Hurricane Katrina in 2005. Her work during Hurricane Katrina earned Palacio the Excellence in Health Administration Award by the American Public Health Association in 2007. Palacio also previously served as a Senior Policy Advisor for the San Francisco Department of Public Health, where she served on the front lines combatting HIV/AIDS.

With 25 years of experience in a range of health and social services professions, Palacio will be tasked with addressing homelessness across the five boroughs, developing a citywide network for mental health support, coordinating across the City's public health care system, improving access to social services for all New Yorkers, and ensuring agencies that oversee the City's most vulnerable populations, such as children and victims of domestic violence, are run compassionately and effectively.

As Executive Director of the Harris County Public Health and Environmental Services, Palacio is well-prepared to take on NYC's most pressing challenges, having played a major role in the Astrodome/Reliant Park mega-shelter operation for over 27,000 evacuees from Hurricane Katrina to Harris County, Texas. Running all of the public health operations for the shelter, Palacio established a public health department for a "city" that went from a population of 0 to 27,000 in two days, identified and contained health outbreaks before they started, and aptly managed thousands of physicians and nurses to effectively triage 150 patients an hour.

"Herminia is a born and bred New Yorker, and a tried and true leader. When she led the health department in Harris County, she took in and cared for thousands of evacuees from Hurricane Katrina with extraordinary capability and compassion. When she stood on the front lines of an HIV/AIDS crisis in San Francisco, her innovative approach to public health programming was lauded across the country and archived in a national museum of science. And when her hometown of New York City called on her to bring New Yorkers off the streets and into permanent housing, secure a bright future for our kids in foster care, and help us weave together fragmented mental health care providers into a comprehensive network, Herminia was ready to answer the call," said Mayor Bill de Blasio. "I am proud to welcome her to this Administration and greatly anticipate the powerful work we will do with her at the helm of Health and Human Services."

"New York City has my heart. It is my home. The opportunity to serve the people of New York City as a Deputy Mayor is a tremendous honor, particularly with this Administration, which has built on a foundation of equity and social justice that speaks the values that have motivated my work my entire life. It is a responsibility and privilege I cherish, and I want to thank Mayor de Blasio for this incredible opportunity," said Herminia Palacio.

Palacio's experience and deft leadership in Harris County – which includes the city of Houston, Texas – and San Francisco, California is nationally-recognized and demonstrates her capability in both strategic long-term planning and crisis response. Throughout a storied career, Palacio has demonstrated strong dedication to public health issues and a clear ability to respond with innovative solutions that influence national policy.

Palacio enters her new role with extensive public health experience across a broad range of sectors, including academic, government, clinical and non-profit. She most recently served as Director of Advancing Change Leadership at the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, where she was responsible for developing and implementing new health leadership programs. Prior to joining RWJF, she served as Executive Director of Harris County Public Health and Environmental Services, the local health department for more than four million people in Harris County, Texas.

As Deputy Mayor, Palacio will oversee the Department of Health and Mental Hygiene, NYC

Health + Hospitals, Human Resources Administration, Department of Homeless Services, Agency for Children's Services, Office of the Chief Medical Examiner, Office to Combat Domestic Violence and Office of Food Policy. She will also work closely with First Deputy Mayor Shorris and Commissioner Steve Banks in the on-going review of the City's homeless programs.

Palacio, 54, formally begins on January 25. She will earn $227,737.

In other changes in the Administration, Deputy Mayor Alicia Glen, in addition to her current responsibilities, will take on oversight of the Department of Parks and Recreation as well as the Housing Recovery Office.

In addition to his existing roles, Deputy Mayor Buery will oversee the Department of Youth and Community Development, Department of Probation, Department of Aging, the Mayor's Offices for Immigrant Affairs, Veterans Affairs, and People with Disabilities, as well as serving as the City's liaison to the City University of New York (CUNY).

First Deputy Mayor Shorris will continue to oversee all other agencies as well as the general operations of the government, including coordinating the work of the Department of Education and the Police Department.

Senior Advisor Bill Goldstein will be retiring from full-time City service. He will remain as an unpaid advisor to the First Deputy Mayor on construction matters and continue to serve on the MTA Capital Program Review Board on behalf of the City.

Dan Zarrilli will lead climate issues for the City, including the Office of Recovery and Resiliency, and the Office of Sustainability.

"I worked closely with Herminia during her time in the San Francisco Department of Public Health. She is a substantive, policy-focused, and innovative leader, who deftly managed San Francisco's AIDS crisis – serving as a compassionate voice for our city. Herminia is capable, engaging, and an excellent choice for Deputy Mayor," said Gavin Newsom, Lieutenant Governor Gavin Newsom.

Risa Lavizzo-Mourey, President and CEO of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation said, "We commend New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio for naming Herminia Palacio MD, MPH, an outstanding and nationally recognized public health leader, as NYC's Deputy Mayor for Health and Human Services. Currently Director of our Advancing Change Leadership team, Herminia did a terrific job overseeing our health leadership programs, an important part of RWJF's effort to build a culture of health for everyone in America. NYC has long been a national and world leader in public health, and under Herminia's stewardship we are confident that it will continue to excel. We look forward to working with her in this important position."

"She is a brilliant leader who has succeeded in government service, patient care, university teaching and research, and philanthropy," said Dr. Mitchell Katz, Director of the Los Angeles County Health Agency. "She will be a great Deputy Mayor for New York City."

Texas State Senator Sylvia R. Garcia said, "Dr. Palacio's keen intellect, steady hand and inclusive nature got us through some difficult times in the Houston region. Whether a health care scare, an environmental concern, a hurricane emergency, or a contentious town hall meeting, she responded responsibly and efficiently, getting the job done. She knows and understands the needs of dynamic urban centers like Houston and New York – its diversity, its challenges and its opportunities. New York is lucky to get Dr. Palacio.”

About Herminia Palacio

In addition to her work at the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, in Harris County and San Francisco, Palacio has also held a number of academic appointments, including adjunct professor in Management, Policy, and Community Health at the University of Texas School of Public Health at Houston from 2006 to 2014. She also taught at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston and the University of California at San Francisco School of Medicine. Palacio received her medical degree from Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York and holds a Masters of Public Health, with a specialty in epidemiology, from the University of California at Berkeley School of Public Health, and a BA in biology from Barnard College at Columbia University. She has authored numerous articles in peer-reviewed scientific journals.

She served on the Board of Directors of the National Association of County and City Health Officials (NACCHO), the Texas Association of Local Health Officials (TALHO), the Harris County Healthcare Alliance (HCHA), and served as Chair of the Texas Public Health Coalition. She recently served on the Board of Scientific Counselors for the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) Office of Public Health Preparedness and Response and currently serves on the CDC Advisory Committee to the Director. In 2011 she was appointed by President Obama as a member of the Advisory Group on Prevention, Health Promotion, and Integrative and Public Health.

From Mary, if you want to update online:

Any plan to reduce homelessness in our city must begin with fixing the broken shelter system. Decades of underinvestment and neglect by the City and State have left a system rife with problems – by now well-documented – and so it's no surprise that so many homeless individuals and families dread entering shelters in the first place. We are heartened to see that the de Blasio administration is committing new resources and making fundamental changes to the system. The Coalition, which fought hard for the legal right to decent shelter for all homeless New Yorkers, will continue to aggressively monitor conditions in the shelters for single adults – and now in the family shelters as well – to protect the rights and dignity of our homeless neighbors as we fight for the proven housing-based solutions to homelessness.

MAYOR de BLASIO ANNOUNCES PROGRAM TO IMPROVE SHELTER CONDITIONS

Mayor Bill de Blasio announced today a substantially increased program to ensure the City's ability to identify and fix problems in the City's homeless shelters. The new program began on New Year's Day and has continued with Department of Housing Preservation and Development inspections of DHS shelters and repairs are already underway.

"For decades, our shelters have not been safe enough or clean enough and that's just not acceptable. We have already taken steps to improve conditions, but as a result we have learned that more is needed. So we have developed a systematic and thorough program to ensure that problems are promptly identified and fixed and that there is monitoring to make sure the repairs are done correctly and on time. I don't want anyone refusing to come into a homeless shelter because of bad conditions," Mayor de Blasio said.

The comprehensive repair plan is part of and will begin during the 90-day review of homeless services that the Mayor ordered on December 15, 2015. The new plan will substantially increase the City's ability to monitor and correct unacceptable conditions in shelters, remedy years of disinvestment in the not-for-profit shelters, and help move forward with the recently announced initiative to address unacceptable conditions in buildings in which DHS has rented permanent housing apartments as "cluster" shelter units for families.

This effort builds on the track record of the multi-agency Shelter Repair Squad which has cleared 12,000 existing violations since May, 83% of identified violations at the inspected shelters have been closed out and work has begun on all long-term repairs at DHS facilities.

The city is taking immediate action to increase the effectiveness of the shelter repair initiative. The first step is to make sure all problems are reported. This will be accomplished by:

Deploying City shelter condition monitors who are inspecting every shelter and then continue to monitor compliance through unannounced visits through the remainder of the fiscal year. This effort will be coordinated by the Department of Housing Preservation and Development, with assistance from the Mayor's Office of Operations.

Implementing a new family shelter resident complaint hotline to enable homeless families to report conditions of disrepair. Two million dollars in new funding will be added to the HRA budget in the January Plan to expand the staffing for HRA's Infoline to handle these complaints. There will be a response by an inspector within 24 hours to determine the seriousness of the problem and whether immediate repairs are necessary.

The second step is to have the ability in place to fix problems promptly after they are identified. This will be accomplished by:

Implementing a rapid response repair program, including extermination, by using Department of Housing Preservation and Development (HPD) vendors to remedy conditions of disrepair that are not corrected by the property owner or non-profit provider within the time period set in state or local law to remedy the particular condition. New funding will be added to the HPD budget in the January Plan to support this expanded repair initiative.

Addressing the need for increased maintenance and capital investment in not-for-profit shelters to correct conditions that have built up in these shelters over many years. Next week, Commissioner Banks will meet with the leadership of Homeless Services United, which represents the not-for-profit shelter providers, to address maintenance and capital funding needs during the FY2016 funding cycle. The City will work with our shelter providers to develop a capital assessment and maintenance plan so that fundamental repairs and improvements can be made that will reduce the ongoing need for repairs.

"Too often now we fix problems only to see them reoccur and new ones develop because there hasn't been capital investment to fix the underlying problems. So while we make immediate repairs, we will also develop a plan to upgrade shelter buildings to reduce these problems in the future. Fixing buildings will be much less expensive in the long run than constantly repairing them,” said Human Resources Administration Commissioner Steven Banks.

The third step is to monitor to ensure that repairs are completed by Designating the Coalition for the Homeless to monitor conditions in family shelters jointly with the City as it does currently in adult shelters.

As noted above, the City’s own shelter condition monitors will not only identify problems, but also conduct unannounced inspections to see whether they were repaired. .

The current Shelter Repair Squad was created in May by Mayor de Blasio and is the first such effort to take on systematically repairing violations and other problems in City homeless shelters. It includes staff from the Departments of Homeless Services, Housing Preservation and Development, Health and Mental Health, Buildings and the Fire Department.

Two recent reports found serious problems in the City’s shelters. Last March, at the request of the Mayor, the Department of Investigation conducted a thorough review of conditions and found many serious violations. A more recent audit by the City Comptroller found different problems.

Subject: Drop In Centers Announcement Tomorrow
Date: Sunday, January 10, 2016 7:26:36 PM

Hi Mary and Giselle!

Hope you are having a great weekend. We are announcing some more good news tomorrow. We are committing to open three new drop in centers in Bk, Qns, and Mn. And we will take over funding for Bx drop in center from HUD – taking City funded total from four to eight. These are exactly the kind of places and services needed for street homeless populations in NYC to help bring people off the streets and into stable settings.

Would you be interested in offering statement for press release? We are collecting by 1030am.

Please let me know if you have any questions and thanks!

Key Points:

- The City is announcing a new $8.5M annual commitment to double the number of Drop-In Centers it currently operates. Drop in centers are part of the path from the streets to safe havens to supportive housing; a way for our HomeState outreach workers to connect people who are not ready to be connected to beds yet.
- Drop-In Centers provide an alternative to traditional shelter for street homeless individuals. They offer temporary respite where individuals can shower, eat a meal, see a doctor and rest inside. Case management and housing placement services are also available for clients who wish to receive them. The Centers seek to place people in beds reserved for street homeless individuals and then move them to shelter or supportive housing.
- The de Blasio administration expanded all of drop in center hours of operation to 24/7 in 2014. (As you probably recall – there used to be 11 drop in centers and funding cuts sliced number in less than half).
- The City will open three new Drop-In Centers in Brooklyn, Queens, and Manhattan. The City will also take over funding the current Drop-In Center in the Bronx, run by BronxWorks, when a start-up federal HUD grant ends this spring. We have not identified specific sites for drop in centers as of yet – but we are planning to open new sites in the next three to six months.

VERY DRAFT RELEASE:

MAYOR DE BLASIO DOUBLING CITY-FUNDED DROP-IN CENTERS TO BRING STREET HOMELESS OFF STREETS

Mayor Bill de Blasio announced today that the City will double the number of City-funded Drop-In Centers designed to help bring street homeless people off the streets and provide them with services that can help move them off the streets permanently.

Drop-In Centers are an essential part of a continuum of care for street homeless that starts with HOMESTAT outreach workers finding them and gaining their trust; bringing them to a Drop-In Center for food, showers and medical care; taking them to a Safe Haven to spend the night; and moving them into supportive housing where they can receive help to pull their lives back together.

“Every street homeless person is an individual tragedy, a life gone off course. But sadly they often reject traditional shelters. We are now assembling all the specialized services needed to find each of these people and offer them the assistance that will work for each of them. Drop-In Centers are an essential part of the path off the streets, where homeless people can rest, eat, receive medical care and be offered placement into housing,” Mayor de Blasio said.

Mayor de Blasio has now substantially strengthened every step needed to move homeless people off the street, including creating HOME-STAT, the nation's most comprehensive street homelessness outreach effort, committing to add 500 new Safe Haven beds, and committing to financing 15,000 new supportive housing units.

Today's announcement is another in a series of reforms resulting from the 90-day review of City homeless services ordered by Mayor de Blasio on December 15, including: 1) launching the Shelter Repair Squad 2.0, substantially increasing the City's ability to monitor and correct unacceptable shelter conditions, 2) ending use of cluster apartments for shelter over the next three years, 3) reiterating the requirement to keep shelters open during the day for residents, and 4) adding 300 beds for homeless youth.

Drop-In Centers provide an alternative to traditional shelter for street homeless individuals. They offer temporary respite where individuals can shower, eat a meal, see a doctor and rest inside.

Case management and housing placement services are also available for clients who wish to receive them. The Centers also offer a limited number of overnight beds, but mostly seek to place people in Safe Haven, respite and stabilization beds and then move them to shelter or supportive housing.

The City is announcing a new $8.5M annual commitment to double the number of Drop-In Centers it currently operates. The City will open three new Drop-In Centers. The City will also take over funding the current Drop-In Center in the Bronx, run by BronxWorks, when a start-up federal HUD grant ends this spring.

Those four will be added to the four current City funded Drop-Ins: two in Manhattan, one in Staten Island and one in Brooklyn. In the past two fiscal years (FY14 and FY15), these Drop-In Centers served an average of 454 clients during the day, saw a daily average of 128 clients overnight and made 1,238 housing placements.

“To ensure maximum coordination and to make it as easy as possible for homeless New Yorkers to go to the Drop-In Centers, the City's existing Outreach Team providers will run these Centers,” said Human Resources Administration Commissioner Steven Banks.

New Centers will open in Manhattan, Brooklyn and Queens. These Drop-In Centers will be expected to each serve approximately 75 clients at any given time.

Drop-In Centers will continue to focus on working collaboratively with the City's outreach teams on the placement of chronically street homeless individuals into housing, and provide housing placement services to the non-chronically street homeless individuals. This work includes working with clients to obtain identification, entitlements and housing. Drop-In Centers will also set up the front door of their programs to rapidly connect individuals to more appropriate systems of care, such as the emergency shelter system, residential drug treatment programs, family re-unification, Travel Assistance and other resources.

Hi Jonathan,

Please find the deck and remarks as prepared for DM Glen's RPA talk yesterday. Adding my colleague, Vikram, so he can see the good review, and also answer any follow-up questions related to the RPA presentation yesterday.

Vikram, Jonathan is one of the Mayor's lead political strategists (and he and his partner Val Berlin kicked my greenhorn butt in a 2005 state assembly race) and is working on the State of the City with our comms team. Glad to be on the same side, here!

Cheers,
Mary

***SLIDE*** [Cover]

Lynn, thank you for the kind introduction, and thank you all for your commitment to a vibrant, affordable, and sustainable New York. In particular, I want to thank RPA for your recent support of our initiatives on Mandatory Inclusionary Housing and Zoning for Quality and Affordability. I think it's pretty clear that we're in a housing crisis, and it's great to be able to count on allies like you who are so dedicated to this city's and region's future.

***SLIDE*****

Let's take a moment to consider the larger context of the Mayor's Housing New York plan to create and preserve 200,000 units of affordable housing. Housing is the top expense for most New Yorkers. Whether you're a waiter, a healthcare attendant, or a firefighter, housing is fundamental to your life – housing affects your health, your physical and economic security, your education, your job trajectory – and ultimately your sense of possibility and optimism for the future. A healthy supply of housing – and housing that is affordable – promotes the diversity within and between our neighborhoods that has long been what makes New York City great and unique – and that diversity fuels our long-term economic growth and competitiveness. We want to remain a city that longtime New Yorkers can stay in – from the cop who has spent his or her life in a neighborhood and anchors the community, to an artist like Alicia Keys who was born and raised here and went on to sing one of our city's modern anthems. To do that, there is no more important work than securing housing that is affordable.

***SLIDE*****

We're pursuing this with a multi-pronged strategy

- Reform of State 421-a tax exemption program will require affordable housing in every rental building receiving benefits
  - More affordable housing
  - Broader range of incomes
  - No benefits for luxury condos
- Mandatory Inclusionary Housing
- Zoning for Quality and Affordability will promote senior and affordable housing, aid efficient use of housing subsidies and promote better buildings
- Strategic use of subsidy programs, key development projects, and publicly owned assets allow the City to reach a wide range of incomes

With Housing New York we have already made great progress to date with a multi-pronged strategy. We doubled the budget for housing with an $8.2 billion commitment that will leverage $32 billion or more in private and other public investment, and we also added human capital so we could actually implement and execute the Plan. We are serving a wider range of New Yorkers than ever before, from households at the lowest incomes to middle class families whose housing needs are also not being met by private market development, as well as our most vulnerable populations, including the homeless, seniors, and individuals with disabilities. As we work to create and preserve affordable housing, we're also partnering with law enforcement agencies like never before to proactively prevent tenant harassment and go after landlords who practice harassment.

Mandatory Inclusionary Housing (or MIH) and Zoning for Quality and Affordability (or ZQA) are two tools that will help us achieve our Plan's objective and reshape the future for generations to come. MIH guarantees permanently affordable housing when zoning changes encourage more housing. ZQA updates regulations so our housing money will go further to create more affordable housing, particularly affordable senior housing, and better designed buildings.

***SLIDE*****

And our latest numbers show that we've made tremendous progress. Just this week, the mayor announced we've financed over 40,000 affordable apartments since taking office—putting us on track, on or quite frankly ahead of schedule, and on budget to deliver 200,000 units over the next 10 years. A little bit of historical perspective: the last time NYC saw as much affordable housing delivered as in 2015 was back in 1989—the peak of Ed Koch's housing plan, when he was rebuilding huge swaths of Harlem and the South Bronx. And the City has never, since HPD was founded in 1978, financed as much new affordable construction as we did last year.

We did it by jumpstarting new projects, by strategically going after preservation deals like StuyTown and Riverton that previously had gone overlooked by the public sector, and by revising our term sheet programs to demand more affordable housing for our tax dollars.

It's easy to get lost in the numbers, but we are moving mountains here. And all that effort translates into affordable housing for more than 100,000 people—a small city's worth, in just two years. The mayor said this was our top priority. We delivered.

***SLIDE*****

We're complementing our housing efforts with a $1B+ Neighborhood Development Fund

WHAT	$1B+ over the next 10 years dedicated to building and improving infrastructure and facilities in neighborhoods in which the City plans to encourage affordable housing development and permit greater density through zoning
WHY	To ensure that the City can make and keep promises for new public investments that complement new affordable housing and population growth
HOW	Projects originate and are prioritized in the neighborhood planning process: from agencies' analyses of opportunities to improve livability as the neighborhood grows, to ideas generated in community workshops

Let's also keep in mind that this isn't just about adding residential density. We're making sure we align our capital budget with our land use strategy. A few of you probably remember that's how the City used to operate during the heyday of city building. We're getting back to that tradition. No more building significant amounts of new housing without the infrastructure to support it. We're spending over $1 billion of our city capital – what we're calling the Neighborhood Development Fund – for schools, parks, health care facilities, street improvements, and other public amenities across approximately 15 neighborhoods that we are targeting for increased residential density.

And along those lines, we're not focusing on building and preserving housing in a vacuum – it's one crucial piece of a broader, holistic vision to grow New York City's economy while promoting sustainability and improving our quality of life. Housing and economic development are inextricably linked – and not just because it's my job title!

***SLIDE*****

We live in a tremendously exciting time, where innovation and technology (in all of their applications) are radically transforming NYC's physical and economic landscape and are driving our efforts to grow a model Dynamic, Equitable, and Sustainable Urban economy.

Some of that future growth will be organic and depend on national and global capital markets and political trends. But how we use our economic development tools, where we choose to intervene, WILL consciously shape that future.

So our economic development strategy is focused on investments in:

1. High growth sectors such as the tech and creative industries, the life sciences, and advanced manufacturing to diversify and grow NYC's economic engine.
2. Strengthening neighborhoods – the thing that makes NYC the place to start and grow a business.
3. Infrastructure, building a dynamic, multi-modal transportation system – one that matches the 5-borough economy of the 21st century – and building the next generation technologies that will connect people virtually in NYC and across the globe.
4. People – including Universal Pre-K, Computer Science for All, CUNY, and workforce development initiatives like the Tech Talent Pipeline that focus on building the skills that businesses need today and tomorrow.

***SLIDE*****

Here's an overview of some of the major investments we've been making. But with the time we have today, let's go into detail on some of our progress in infrastructure.

***SLIDE*****

Our goal is to create a multi-modal transportation system to map to our 21st century City

- Citywide infrastructure is at capacity and aging
- State investment accounts for only ~10% of NYCDOT capital funding
- Federal transportation funding flat since 2009
- U.S. infrastructure investment at 20 year low of 1.7% of GDP
  - China invests 9% of GDP
  - Europe invests 5% of GDP
- NYC is investing in a Multi-Modal Transportation System
  - 6 million subway riders
  - 2 million bus riders
  - 6,000 miles of roadway
  - 1,000 miles of bike lanes
  - 5-borough ferry system
  - 12,000 miles of sidewalk
  - 315,000 street lights
  - 1 million street signs

We need to focus on getting people between their jobs and their homes, and also connecting them to the world! Investing in our roads, bridges, transit, and broadband systems is not only crucial for connecting communities where we're building housing, but also for the continued economic growth of our city and our region.

The City now has the highest subway and bus ridership in over 45 years. There are 6 million people riding our trains daily, more than double the rate in 1980. But the City's transportation infrastructure – estimated at well over a trillion dollars in assets between our transit system, roads, bridges and ferries – needs ongoing investment and expansion.

We've committed $18 billion of our budget over the next four years just to keep a portion of our infrastructure in a state of good repair. Our total needs, unfortunately, exceed over $47 billion – and that doesn't even begin to include new investment in mass transit. So, we're focusing on our own tools, our own capital, to make a difference.

Here are a few highlights from our transportation efforts.

***SLIDE*****

Example: Citywide Ferry System

Goal: To leverage our waterways, a defining feature of New York City, and provide transportation to areas of significant job and population growth.

- System: 20 landings
  - 5 new routes, 1 existing route
  - $2.75 fares pegged to MTA
  - 4.1 million rides per year
  - Much-needed transit for communities with limited transit options (e.g., Red Hook)
  - Accessible to people with mobility challenges
- Estimated Cost
  - $55M Capital funds
  - ~$20-25M Expense funds per year initially
- Transit-Oriented Development
  - Unlocking 13,000 housing units
  - 550,000 people live within half a mile of ferry landings
  - Reduced commute time
    - Soundview (Bronx) to Manhattan reduced by 20-30 minutes each way
    - Astoria to Lower Manhattan reduced by 10 minutes each way

We've announced the launch of a city-wide ferry system to open in Spring 2017 that will connect all the boroughs, supported by a $55 million capital investment by the City. This is the first time since 1892 that NYC will have a comprehensive ferry system! Not only will the initial phases transport over 4 million passengers per year, we will also unlock development potential along all five routes and make a dent in our transit deserts. The new New York has multiple job hubs, and this will help you get to work whether that's in a Manhattan CBD or along the Brooklyn/Queens waterfront – if you're going from Astoria to Lower Manhattan, the ferry will save you 10 minutes each way relative to the subway!

***SLIDE*****

Example: Select Bus Service

Goal: to provide improved bus service on busy routes citywide, particularly areas not well served by subway

- NYC's version of BRT
- Implemented 9 SBS routes since 2008, benefiting over 200,000 passengers daily; 5 upcoming routes announced and in planning stages
- Total cost of existing routes is over $100M (including both capital and expense)
- Projects have typically increased ridership by ~10% in the first year of operation
- Travel times improved 15-23% over prior bus service
- Customer satisfaction rates of 95%+
- Served as national design leader in how to implement transit improvements quickly and at low cost

We're also expanding Select Bus Service, with 9 routes already implemented and 5 more announced. We're reducing travel time compared to previous non-SBS routes by almost 20%. Customer satisfaction rates are 95%, so we're clearly doing something right!

Projects like 125th Street in Harlem are in the ground, and projects like Woodhaven Boulevard—which is going to set a new national BRT standard—are in their final planning phase.

***SLIDE*****

Example: Increasing Bike Usage

- NYC named #1 Cycling City by Bicycle Magazine in 2014
- North America's largest & growing bike share network with almost 21 million trips since launch
- Citibike expansion to outer borough neighborhoods in 2015
- Met Mayoral target of 50 miles of enhancements to cycling network
- Numerous protected lane projects – 12 miles in 2015, more than any previous year
- 1,000th mile of network completed in September 2015
- Additional infrastructure: bike racks and corrals

We're bringing our bikeshare system, Citibike to the outer boroughs.

I'm proud to say that we're the #1 city in the country for bikeshare and we just painted and reconfigured streets for our 1,000th mile of bike lanes in the City!

This demonstrates our commitment to multi-modal transportation, reducing the time people spend in transit and instead give them previous hours of the day to spend on their work, their families, and live their lives. What a radical concept!

***SLIDE*****

We're also using our land use powers to unlock value and make smart, real-time improvements to our infrastructure and the public realm.

A real-time example: At One Vanderbilt, we secured $220 million to improve the transportation experience at Grand Central, including better connections, a public plaza, and new subway entrances. That framework of linking density to a set of specific improvements will be central to our larger East Midtown rezoning.

And while we're on our major transportation hubs, let's touch on Penn Station. For those of you who know me, it will come as no surprise that I have been thinking and obsessing about the future of Penn Station since my first day on the job. Almost 800,000 people pass through it every day compared to an original capacity of 180,000. I think we can all agree that the state of affairs there is entirely unacceptable—not to mention a massive safety hazard.

The vision that the Governor laid out last week is entirely consistent with what we have been advocating them to pursue for the last year and a half. But we must have results. We cannot afford to wait any longer. And we MUST begin the Gateway project. And let's be honest, none of these projects cannot move forward unless the City is a full partner and active participant.

And the City made a record $2.5 billion contribution to the MTA to make sure we're investing in urban mass transit, aligned with our OneNYC vision for a strong and just city. The MTA Capital Plan will help maintain and improve the quality of the transit system, expand communications-based train control along several lines, initiate work on the Metro North Penn Station Access project, and initiate work on the Second Avenue Subway Phase 2. It also includes additional projects that support our economic development and affordable housing strategy, including station access and connections that are critical for our neighborhoods.

It's a historic investment by the City in the region's transportation network and transit system. It builds on a long history of the City supporting the MTA's capital needs since the early 1980s, and it marks a new level of coordination between the MTA and the City on critical funding priorities.

***SLIDE*****

Ultimately, we recognize that this isn't just about the city – we're increasingly connected to the broader New York region. The Department of City Planning now has a regional unit to consider our interdependent needs. The Mayor recently gathered with elected officials from across the region to make a push for federal transportation investment. And looking at affordable housing and economic development through a regional lens is critical: between 2000 and 2010, the number of reverse commuters increased by 12.5 percent, compared to 9.5 percent arriving at our City's regional transportation hubs.

***SLIDE*** [End]

That's a summary of some of our major initiatives, but I want to reiterate a few places where we could continue to use your help:

- First, your continued and vocal support for MIH, ZQA, and the East NY rezoning – these are critical for us to get through the housing crisis and build an affordable New York. Thank you for all your support so far.
- And we need to be watchdogs on the MTA plan – they now have unprecedented resources, but we need to keep an eye on how those resources are spent.

So in sum, what is our goal? We want a more diverse economy because it will be a more sustainable and equitable economy. We want more New Yorkers in higher quality jobs, making more money so they can raise a family and have the quality of life everyone in this country should have. We want transportation and infrastructure that maps to, and supports, where the city is growing, not where it has been. If we do this right, and add up all of the strategic interventions and investments we are making in growth sectors and in, and among, neighborhoods, we will build a more equitable, sustainable and globally competitive

City for the long run. And after all, what is a New Yorker, or for that matter, New York City, if not competitive? Thank you for your help in this effort, and I'm happy to answer any questions!

RPA Board Meeting

January 2016

Housing New York set an ambitious goal for affordable housing

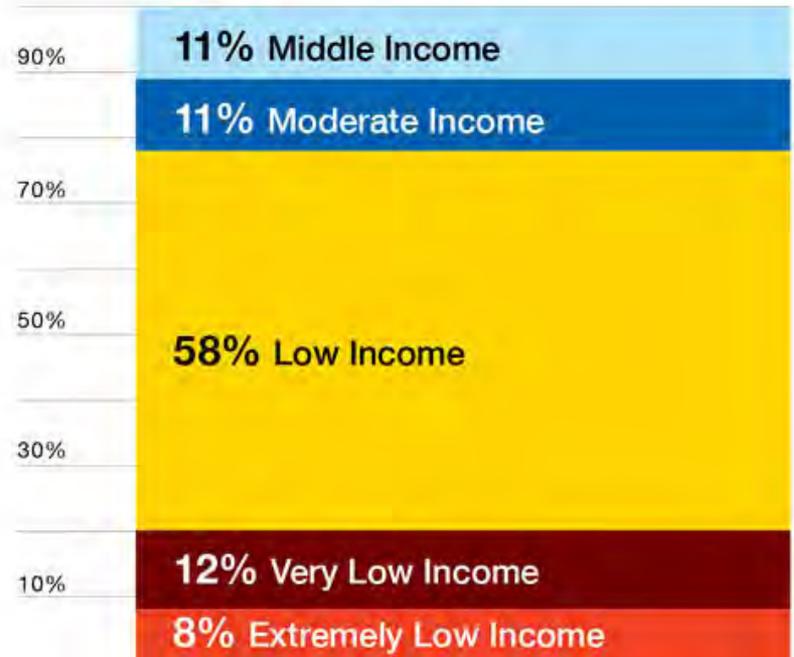

200,000 affordable housing units over the next 10 years

New Construction vs Preservation

Households Served

Share of Housing Units Created or Preserved by Income Band

We're pursuing this with a multi-pronged strategy

---

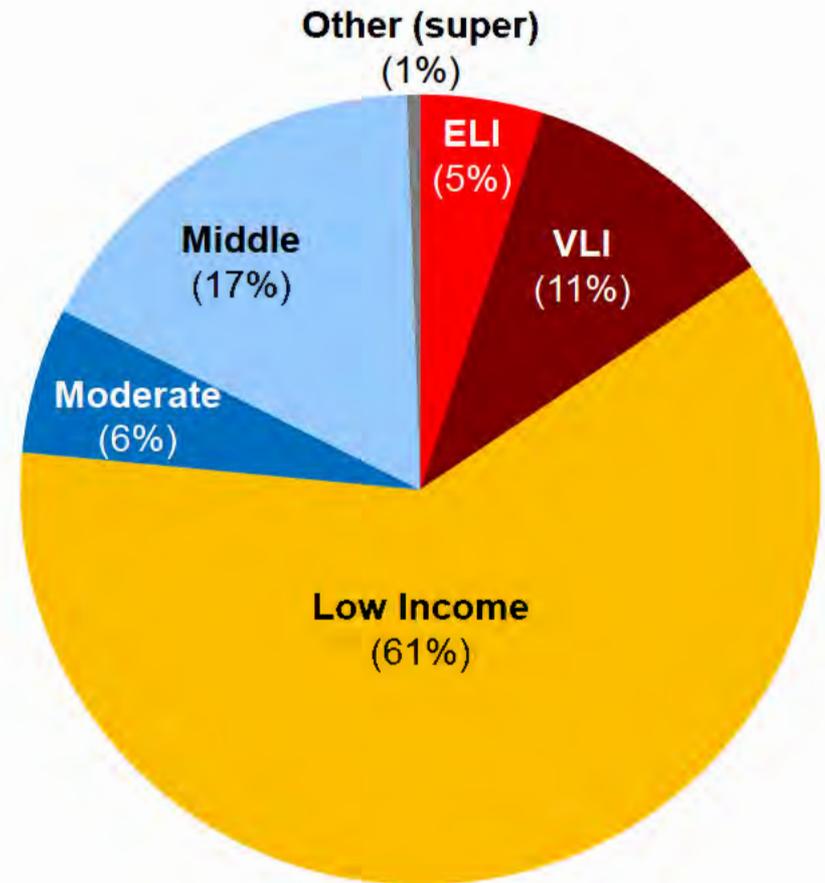

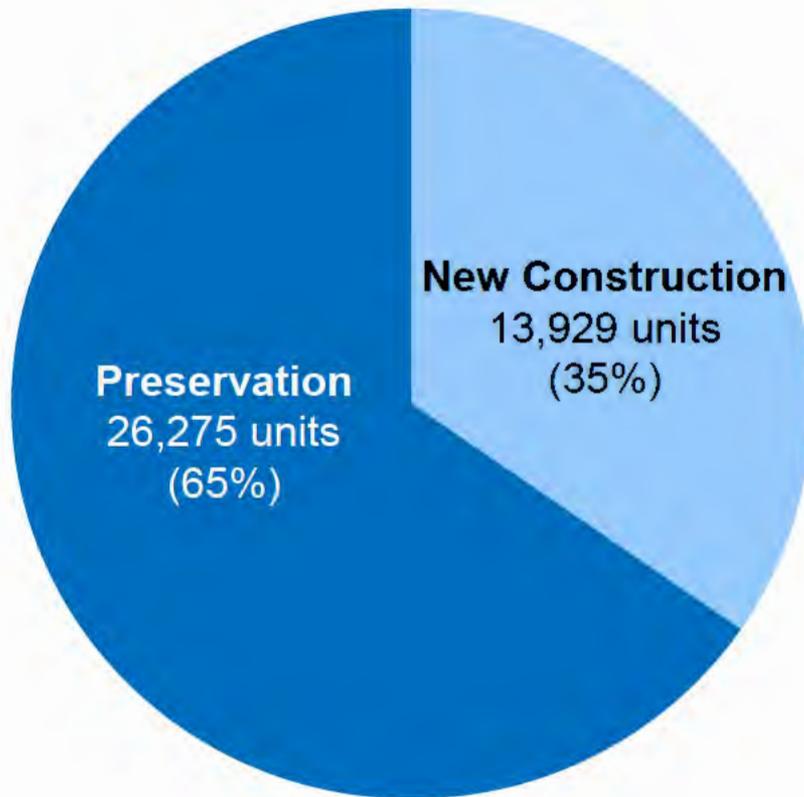

- Reform of State 421-a tax exemption program will require affordable housing in every rental building receiving benefits
  - More affordable housing
  - Broader range of incomes
  - No benefits for luxury condos
- Mandatory Inclusionary Housing
- Zoning for Quality and Affordability will promote senior and affordable housing, aid efficient use of housing subsidies and promote better buildings
- Strategic use of subsidy programs and key development projects allow the City to reach a wide range of incomes

And we recently announced incredible progress to date

- 40,204 units have been financed since the start of the Housing Plan

WHAT

$1B+ over the next 10 years dedicated to building and improving infrastructure and facilities in neighborhoods in which the City plans to encourage affordable housing development and permit greater density through zoning

WHY

To ensure that the City can make and keep promises for new public investments that complement new affordable housing and population growth

HOW

Projects originate and are prioritized in the neighborhood planning process: from agencies' analyses of opportunities to improve livability as the neighborhood grows, to ideas generated in community workshops

But our strategy goes well beyond housing

Create quality jobs and support a diverse, dynamic, and growing economy through strategic investments in:

High-Growth Sectors

- Tech & Creative
- Life Sciences
- Advanced Manufacturing
- Education and R&D

Neighborhoods

- 200,000 new/preserved affordable housing units over 10 years
- Schools
- Local Retail
- Open Space
- Healthcare

Infrastructure

- Multi-modal transportation system
- Expanded core transit capacity (by 20%)

People / Human Capital

- Pre-K
- Computer Science for All
- CUNY
- Tech Talent Pipeline

...To diversify and grow NYC's economic engine

...To promote robust employment growth across all sectors in all five boroughs

We're making investments citywide in housing and economic development

Life Sciences Building
 $160 million
 122 jobs (new)

Brooklyn Navy Yard
 $75 million
 3,000 jobs (new)

BAT / Bush

Infrastructure

Our goal is to create a 21st century multi-modal transportation system to map to our 21st century economy

- Citywide infrastructure is at capacity and aging
- State investment accounts for only ~10% of NYCDOT capital funding
- Federal transportation funding flat since 2009
- U.S. infrastructure investment at 20 year low of 1.7% of GDP
  - China invests 9% of GDP
  - Europe invests 5% of GDP
- NYC is investing in a Multi-Modal Transportation System
  - 6 million subway riders
  - 2 million bus riders
  - 6,000 miles of roadway
  - 1,000 miles of bike lanes
  - 5-borough ferry system
  - 12,000 miles of sidewalk
  - 315,000 street lights
  - 1 million street signs

Example: Citywide Ferry System

Goal: To leverage our waterways, a defining feature of New York City, and provide transportation to areas of significant job and population growth.

- System: 20 landings
  - 5 new routes, 1 existing route
  - $2.75 fares pegged to MTA
  - 4.1 million rides per year
  - Much-needed transit for communities with limited transit options (e.g., Red Hook)
  - Accessible to people with mobility challenges
- Estimated Cost
  - $55M Capital funds
  - ~$20-25M Expense funds per year initially
- Transit-Oriented Development
  - Unlocking 13,000 housing units
  - 550,000 people live within half a mile of ferry landings
  - Commuters to Manhattan CBDs and emerging job centers along the Brooklyn/Queens waterfront
  - Reduced commute time – for example, Soundview stop in the Bronx would reduce transit time by 20-30 minutes each way

Example: Select Bus Service

Goal: to provide improved bus service on busy routes citywide, particularly areas not well served by subway

- NYC's version of BRT
- Implemented 9 SBS routes since 2008, benefitting over 200,000 passengers daily; 5 upcoming routes announced and in planning stages
- Total cost of existing routes is over $100M (including both capital and expense)
- Projects have typically increased ridership by ~10% in the first year of operation
- Travel times improved 15-23% over prior bus service
- Customer satisfaction rates of 95%+

Hi Jonathan,

Please find the deck and remarks as prepared for DM Glen's RPA talk yesterday. Adding my colleague, Vikram, so he can see the good review, and also answer any follow-up questions related to the RPA presentation yesterday.

Vikram, Jonathan is one of the Mayor's lead political strategists (and he and his partner Val Berlin kicked my greenhorn butt in a 2005 state assembly race) and is working on the State of the City with our comms team. Glad to be on the same side, here!

Cheers,
Mary

Ted Cruz gets a birther lawsuit challenge

By Tal Kopan, CNN

Updated 12:29 PM ET, Fri January 15, 2016

Washington (CNN) - Ted Cruz is now facing a federal lawsuit challenging his eligibility to run for president, based on the theory espoused by Donald Trump that he may not be a natural-born citizen.

The lawsuit, filed in Texas on Thursday by Newton Boris Schwartz Sr., raises legal uncertainty about whether Cruz qualifies for the constitutional requirement that a President be a "a natural-born citizen" because he was born in Canada.

Cruz was conferred American citizenship at birth because his mother is an American citizen, and legal experts have largely agreed that would qualify him as natural-born citizenship. Cruz was born in Calgary, Alberta, Canada, and also had Canadian citizenship until he renounced it in 2014.

Schwartz cites legal theorists including Harvard law professor Laurence Tribe who say while Cruz is generally accepted to be a natural-born citizen, no court has definitively ruled on the question.

The move follows weeks of attacks by the GOP front-runner on Cruz's status, which came to a head during Thursday's GOP debate. Trump told Cruz he was a liability as a candidate if he runs for president, because his eligibility will be tied up in lawsuits for years.

Trump also spread many of the birther theories that hung over President Barack Obama when he ran for office, fueled by conspiracy theorists who did not believe that Obama was born in the U.S., as he was. Obama's mother was also a U.S. citizen at his birth, and no credible legal challenge to his eligibility ever progressed in the courts.

Legal experts believe the same will be true of the Cruz challenge.

Asked if Schwartz had standing to file the lawsuit, American University law professor and CNN contributor Stephen Vladeck said "not even a little."

Standing is the legal principle that requires an individual to have suffered some harm to bring a lawsuit.

"Standing's only going to work if some state denies Cruz access to the ballot," Vladeck said, at which point Cruz himself could sue to have it resolved.

Cruz has maintained he is a natural-born citizen.

"Back in September, my friend Donald said he had his lawyers look at this in every which way," Cruz said in Thursday night's debate. "There was nothing to this birther issue."

"Since September, the Constitution hasn't changed," Cruz added. "But the poll numbers have."

I don't think we should pull any punches with Cruz on birtherism. He's legit. Obama's legit. Romney & McCain were legit. Let's remember this is a serious job & not a game.

On Sanders/HRC – I think the focus is rebuilding the middle class – which Sander & HRC are both speaking to... As Phil says, I'm not a pundit – I'm just stuck by how the Dem side is focused on tackling inequality while the GOP is a freak show

Hey Paula!

Attached is the draft advisory. Would love to have this go very soon. Pretty basic. When will the mayor's public schedule go live?

I will be onsite to manage and wrangle press for the event. As you know galas are tough, so not sure what kind of turn out we will get. But if the Mayor prefers not to interact with anyone regardless, we can accommodate that. Just let us know his preferences and feel free to connect me with anyone on your comms team.

Thanks for everything and look forward to hearing from you soon.

Hi Paula,

It was a pleasure speaking with you yesterday, and thanks so much again for your assistance with coordinating the Mayor's attendance to the Maimonides Gala. We're thrilled he will be attending.

I wanted to follow up regarding your questions on press. We, with support and partnership from BerlinRosen, will be managing press for the event, and we're planning on circulating a media advisory (which we will forward to you shortly).

If you could let us know what the Mayor's preferences are in terms of interacting with press or not, that would be great. I've cc'd my colleague Cathy Rought at BerlinRosen, who will be happy to address any concerns with you.

Thanks so much again, and please feel free to contact me with any questions,
Sylvie

MAYOR BILL DEBLASIO AND FIRST LADY CHIRLANE MCCRAY TO HONOR FORMER CEO PAM BRIER AT MAIMONIDES ANNUAL GALA

Mayor and First Lady join Members of Congress, business and healthcare industry leaders to recognize Brier's four decades of healthcare leadership in New York City

NEW YORK CITY – Mayor de Blasio, First Lady McCray, congressional leaders, prominent members of the business community, leaders from across the healthcare industry, and local elected officials will honor recently retired Maimonides Medical Center President and CEO Pam Brier at the Waldorf Astoria on Wednesday evening at 6 PM. Pam's career in public service and hospital administration has spanned four decades, five mayors and dozens of hard-won victories amassed from addressing significant public health challenges in New York City.

Pam launched her career in hospital leadership at the NYC Health and Hospitals Corporation in the 1980s, eventually becoming President of Jacobi Medical Center in the Bronx and President of Bellevue Medical Center in Manhattan. In 1995, she took her talent for improving care delivery to Maimonides Medical Center in Brooklyn, the borough's largest hospital and biggest employer. She moved quickly to put the organization on firm financial footing as Maimonides grew from a $500 million community hospital to the billion-dollar hub for advanced care that it is today. A full biography is available upon request.

Hi Sylvie,

This is not the same run of show we discussed yesterday on the phone. As discussed and finalized yesterday, we had all agreed that upon arrival at 7:30, the following would take place:

- Mayor and FLONYC arrive
- FLONYC and the Mayor are introduced by Eugene
- The Mayor delivers remarks and introduces FLONYC
- FLONYC delivers remarks
- FLONYC and The Mayor physically present Pamela with the award
- Ken Gibbs introduces Congresswoman Velazquez
- Congresswoman Velazquez briefly delivers remarks and presents Congressional Record to Pamela
- FLONYC and Mayor stay on stage while Pamela delivers remarks

- FLONYC and Mayor depart

Please advise.

Hey Paula!

Attached is the draft advisory. Would love to have this go very soon. Pretty basic. When will the mayor's public schedule go live?

I will be onsite to manage and wrangle press for the event. As you know galas are tough, so not sure what kind of turn out we will get. But if the Mayor prefers not to interact with anyone regardless, we can accommodate that. Just let us know his preferences and feel free to connect me with anyone on your comms team.

Thanks for everything and look forward to hearing from you soon.

Hi Paula,

It was a pleasure speaking with you yesterday, and thanks so much again for your assistance with coordinating the Mayor's attendance to the Maimonides Gala. We're thrilled he will be attending.

I wanted to follow up regarding your questions on press. We, with support and partnership from BerlinRosen, will be managing press for the event, and we're planning on circulating a media advisory (which we will forward to you shortly).

If you could let us know what the Mayor's preferences are in terms of interacting with press or not, that would be great. I've cc'd my colleague Cathy Rought at BerlinRosen, who will be happy to address any concerns with you.

Thanks so much again, and please feel free to contact me with any questions,

Sylvie

Chirlane McCray is First Lady of New York City. A writer and advocate all her life, this past year, she played a central role in the Administration's successful efforts to establish universal pre-kindergarten and after school programs for all middle school students.

As First Lady, she is a fierce advocate for high quality and accessible mental health services. She knows for far too long, New Yorkers experiencing mental health challenges have been left without the support and services they deserve. This year, she has committed herself to the creation of a mental health roadmap, which will set a citywide agenda to address the gaps and disparities in mental healthcare. In addition to mental health, she has lent her voice and position to furthering the administration's efforts to expand early childhood development and support the survivors of domestic violence.

In addition, Ms. McCray is proud to serve as Chair of the Mayor's Fund to Advance New York City. The goal of the Fund is make sure all New Yorkers have access to the programs and resources they need to achieve their full potential. The Fund's work is focused on health, education, community empowerment and social justice. As Chair, Ms. McCray brings leaders in the private and public sectors together to support Mayor Bill de Blasio's progressive agenda.

Ms. McCray graduated from Wellesley College and completed the prestigious Radcliffe Publishing Course. After graduation, Ms. McCray moved to New York City in 1977, armed with one job lead, a place to stay, and about $35 dollars when she landed a job at Redbook. She got her start in public services as staff to the NYC Commission for Human Rights. Her work with the Commission transitioned to a position writing speeches for Mayor David Dinkins. It was while working for Mayor Dinkins that she met Bill de Blasio, whom she married in 1994. Mayor de Blasio and Ms. McCray have two wonderful children, Chiara and Dante. You can learn more about her work at FLO.NYC, where she shares her stories, poems, photos and videos. She invites New Yorkers to help her make the greatest city in the world even greater.

Agreed. Was there a misunderstanding yesterday when everyone seemed to agree on the ROS that Andrew sent around?

As we've said, we're concerned about having three separate sections of program. Can we put together the last two legs to follow ROS as Andrew outlines?

Thanks so much for your thoughts. Though there will be light music playing before the Mayor and First Lady arrive, we do not anticipate much, if any, dancing at this time. This time is primarily reserved for dinner, and the guests will be seated throughout the program.

Hi Andrew,

We are thrilled that the Mayor and First Lady will be attending and, after our call with you yesterday noting the anticipated earlier arrival time, we tweaked the run of show to accommodate the Mayor and First Lady's schedules and sequence the program with a short break in between so it is not too many speakers back-to-back for the audience while they are having dinner.

Assuming a 7:30 PM arrival for them both, we would re-open the program once they arrive and are ready to introduce them and have them on stage with Pam. We think it's optimal to then take a short break before Dr. Safyer comes on to introduce Congresswoman Velaquez because that would be about 6-7 speakers back to back. We are happy to discuss this further with you and your team if you have any concerns or further questions.

Thanks,
Sylvie

Hey Paula!

Attached is the draft advisory. Would love to have this go very soon. Pretty basic. When will the mayor's public schedule go live?

I will be onsite to manage and wrangle press for the event. As you know galas are tough, so not sure what kind of turn out we will get. But if the Mayor prefers not to interact with anyone regardless, we can accommodate that. Just let us know his preferences and feel free to connect me with anyone on your comms team.

Thanks for everything and look forward to hearing from you soon.

Off the record, there were 250+ people that RSVPd over the past 24 hours. Some of the shifting was around allowing enough time to move 1000+ between rooms. But it sounds like we are getting in a good place. Will be in touch soon – call still going on.

Importance: High

We are on a call right now discussing it – we are trying to rework it in a way that streamlines the event, gives the Mayor and First Lady a chance to speak to the 1000+ people that will be in attendance, and also addresses all of the event/speaker needs. Obviously your team is a priority and we will make sure they both have the attention of the masses to honor Pam!

I haven't been involved with the actual program until today, and we are reworking it in real time. My understanding is that both the Mayor and the First Lady are arriving at 730, is that still correct? And the Mayor will be departing at 8pm? Will the First Lady be staying later? We will have a draft around shortly, and we can either jump on a call with you after this one or first thing to talk through if easier than email. Let us know.

I am ok with advisory.

I agree with Andrew that this ROS is strange. Getting people back to their seats in between the dancing will be impossible. The Mayor and First Lady will be speaking to empty tables. We need to tighten up so that doesn't happen.

Hi Andrew,

We are thrilled that the Mayor and First Lady will be attending and, after our call with you yesterday noting the anticipated earlier arrival time, we tweaked the run of show to accommodate the Mayor and First Lady's schedules and sequence the program with a short break in between so it is not too many speakers back-to-back for the audience while they are having dinner.

Assuming a 7:30 PM arrival for them both, we would re-open the program once they arrive and are ready to introduce them and have them on stage with Pam. We think it's optimal to then take a short break before Dr. Safyer comes on to introduce Congresswoman Velaquez because that would be about 6-7 speakers back to back. We are happy to discuss this further with you and your team if you have any concerns or further questions.

Thanks,
Sylvie

Hi Sylvie,

This is not the same run of show we discussed yesterday on the phone. As discussed and finalized yesterday, we had all agreed that upon arrival at 7:30, the following would take place:

- Mayor and FLONYC arrive
- FLONYC and the Mayor are introduced by Eugene
- The Mayor delivers remarks and introduces FLONYC
- FLONYC delivers remarks
- FLONYC and The Mayor physically present Pamela with the award
- Ken Gibbs introduces Congresswoman Velazquez
- Congresswoman Velazquez briefly delivers remarks and presents Congressional Record to Pamela
- FLONYC and Mayor stay on stage while Pamela delivers remarks
- FLONYC and Mayor depart

Please advise.

We are on a call right now discussing it – we are trying to rework it in a way that streamlines the event, gives the Mayor and First Lady a chance to speak to the 1000+ people that will be in attendance, and also addresses all of the event/speaker needs. Obviously your team is a priority and we will make sure they both have the attention of the masses to honor Pam!

I haven't been involved with the actual program until today, and we are reworking it in real time. My understanding is that both the Mayor and the First Lady are arriving at 730, is that still correct? And the Mayor will be departing at 8pm? Will the First Lady be staying later? We will have a draft around shortly, and we can either jump on a call with you after this one or first thing to talk through if easier than email. Let us know.

I am ok with advisory.

I agree with Andrew that this ROS is strange. Getting people back to their seats in between the dancing will be impossible. The Mayor and First Lady will be speaking to empty tables. We need to tighten up so that doesn't happen.

Hi Andrew,

We are thrilled that the Mayor and First Lady will be attending and, after our call with you yesterday noting the anticipated earlier arrival time, we tweaked the run of show to accommodate the Mayor and First Lady's schedules and sequence the program with a short break in between so it is not too many speakers back-to-back for the audience while they are having dinner.

Assuming a 7:30 PM arrival for them both, we would re-open the program once they arrive and are ready to introduce them and have them on stage with Pam. We think it's optimal to then take a short break before Dr. Safyer comes on to introduce Congresswoman Velaquez because that would be about 6-7 speakers back to back. We are happy to discuss this further with you and your team if you have any concerns or further questions.

Thanks,
Sylvie

Hi Sylvie,

This is not the same run of show we discussed yesterday on the phone. As discussed and finalized yesterday, we had all agreed that upon arrival at 7:30, the following would take place:

- Mayor and FLONYC arrive
- FLONYC and the Mayor are introduced by Eugene
- The Mayor delivers remarks and introduces FLONYC
- FLONYC delivers remarks
- FLONYC and The Mayor physically present Pamela with the award
- Ken Gibbs introduces Congresswoman Velazquez
- Congresswoman Velazquez briefly delivers remarks and presents Congressional Record to Pamela
- FLONYC and Mayor stay on stage while Pamela delivers remarks
- FLONYC and Mayor depart

Please advise.

Hey Paula!

Attached is the draft advisory. Would love to have this go very soon. Pretty basic. When will the mayor's public schedule go live?

I will be onsite to manage and wrangle press for the event. As you know galas are tough, so not sure what kind of turn out we will get. But if the Mayor prefers not to interact with anyone regardless, we can accommodate that. Just let us know his preferences and feel free to connect me with anyone on your comms team.

Thanks for everything and look forward to hearing from you soon.

Hi Paula,

It was a pleasure speaking with you yesterday, and thanks so much again for your assistance with coordinating the Mayor's attendance to the Maimonides Gala. We're thrilled he will be attending.

I wanted to follow up regarding your questions on press. We, with support and partnership from BerlinRosen, will be managing press for the event, and we're planning on circulating a media advisory (which we will forward to you shortly).

If you could let us know what the Mayor's preferences are in terms of interacting with press or not, that would be great. I've cc'd my colleague Cathy Rought at BerlinRosen, who will be happy to address any concerns with you.

Thanks so much again, and please feel free to contact me with any questions,

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

PAMELA BRIER, FORMER PRESIDENT AND CEO OF MAIMONIDES MEDICAL CENTER, TO BECOME SENIOR ADVISOR TO THE PRESIDENT OF HUNTER COLLEGE

New York, January 26, 2016 – Hunter College President Jennifer J. Raab today announced the appointment of Pamela Brier as a Senior Advisor to the President with a focus on healthcare issues and community and public policy.

Brier, who has been President of three major New York City hospitals, will use her vast health care knowledge to develop and grow Hunter’s many existing programs in this area. She will also work with former NYC Deputy Mayor Lilliam Barrios-Paoli, whose appointment to Hunter College was recently announced.

“Hunter College is very privileged to welcome Pam Brier who will help us develop our programs to train future health care workers in a variety of different areas including nursing, nutrition, and health policy,” said President Raab. “I can think of no one more capable to help Hunter grow in these areas that will truly benefit us all.”

In addition, Brier will guide a new Mental Health Services Corps, part of First Lady Chirlane McCray’s ThriveNYC, to be implemented by Hunter College. ThriveNYC is a mental health framework to ensure New Yorkers get needed mental health treatment and a holistic focus on all facets of their mental well being. The Mental Health Services Corps will recruit, train, and place much-needed mental health professionals who will advance this effort.

Brier most recently served as President and CEO of Maimonides Medical Center in Brooklyn, the borough’s largest hospital and biggest employer where she began in 1995. The hospital grew from a $500 million community hospital to the billion-dollar hub that it is today. Brier, who has a Master’s degree in Public Health from UCLA and a Bachelor of Arts degree with honors from the University of California at Berkley, first honed her capacity for consensus-building and policy development at the New York City Health and Hospitals Corporation in the 1980s. There she became the agency’s Chief Financial Officer and Executive Vice President before moving to become the President of Jacobi Medical Center in the Bronx, and later the President of Bellevue Medical Center in Manhattan.

She currently serves on the New York City Board of Health, appointed by Mayor Michael Bloomberg, and the Fund for Public Health. She previously served on the New York City Board of Corrections and the Workforce Development Board in the Bloomberg administration. She was appointed by Governor Mario Cuomo to serve on the New York State Hospital Review and Planning Council. Additionally, Brier served as the Chair of the Board for Housing Works and is on the Board of GNYHA Ventures. Crain's New York Business named her to Crain's Hall of Fame in 2015 and has frequently cited her as one of the 50 Most Powerful Women in New York.

"Hunter is really the city's college," said Brier. "I am looking forward to working with President Raab and everyone at Hunter on a variety of projects, including one that means so much to Mayor de Blasio and to First Lady Chirlane McCray, who are committed to addressing New Yorkers' mental health needs. "

Ms. Brier is also the recipient of honorary doctorate degrees from St. Francis College and Long Island University.

About Hunter College:

Hunter College, located in the heart of Manhattan, is the largest college in the City University of New York (CUNY) system. Founded in 1870, it is also one of the oldest public colleges in the country and famous for the diversity of its student body, which is as diverse as New York City itself.

Most Hunter students are the first in their families to attend college and many go on to top professional and graduate programs, winning Fulbright scholarships, Mellon fellowships, National Institutes of Health grants, and other competitive honors. More than 23,000 students currently attend Hunter, pursuing undergraduate and graduate degrees in more than 170 areas of study.

The 1,700 full- and part-time members of Hunter's faculty are unparalleled. They receive prestigious national grants, contribute to the world's leading academic journals, and play major roles in cutting-edge research. They are fighting cancer, formulating public policy, expanding our culture, enhancing technology, and more.

I am ok with advisory.

I agree with Andrew that this ROS is strange. Getting people back to their seats in between the dancing will be impossible. The Mayor and First Lady will be speaking to empty tables. We need to tighten up so that doesn't happen.

Hi Andrew,

We are thrilled that the Mayor and First Lady will be attending and, after our call with you yesterday noting the anticipated earlier arrival time, we tweaked the run of show to accommodate the Mayor and First Lady's schedules and sequence the program with a short break in between so it is not too many speakers back-to-back for the audience while they are having dinner.

Assuming a 7:30 PM arrival for them both, we would re-open the program once they arrive and are ready to introduce them and have them on stage with Pam. We think it's optimal to then take a short break before Dr. Safyer comes on to introduce Congresswoman Velaquez because that would be about 6-7 speakers back to back. We are happy to discuss this further with you and your team if you have any concerns or further questions.

Thanks,
Sylvie

Hi Sylvie,

This is not the same run of show we discussed yesterday on the phone. As discussed and finalized yesterday, we had all agreed that upon arrival at 7:30, the following would take place:

- Mayor and FLONYC arrive
- FLONYC and the Mayor are introduced by Eugene
- The Mayor delivers remarks and introduces FLONYC
- FLONYC delivers remarks
- FLONYC and The Mayor physically present Pamela with the award
- Ken Gibbs introduces Congresswoman Velazquez
- Congresswoman Velazquez briefly delivers remarks and presents Congressional Record to Pamela
- FLONYC and Mayor stay on stage while Pamela delivers remarks
- FLONYC and Mayor depart

Please advise.

Hey Paula!

Attached is the draft advisory. Would love to have this go very soon.
Pretty basic. When will the mayor's public schedule go live?

I will be onsite to manage and wrangle press for the event. As you know galas are tough, so not sure what kind of turn out we will get. But if the Mayor prefers not to interact with anyone regardless, we can accommodate that. Just let us know his preferences and feel free to connect me with anyone on your comms team.

Thanks for everything and look forward to hearing from you soon.

Hi Paula,

It was a pleasure speaking with you yesterday, and thanks so much again for your assistance with coordinating the Mayor's attendance to the Maimonides Gala. We're thrilled he will be attending.

I wanted to follow up regarding your questions on press. We, with support and partnership from BerlinRosen, will be managing press for the event, and we're planning on circulating a media advisory (which we will forward to you shortly).

If you could let us know what the Mayor's preferences are in terms of interacting with press or not, that would be great. I've cc'd my colleague Cathy Rought at BerlinRosen, who will be happy to address any concerns with you.

Thanks so much again, and please feel free to contact me with any questions,

Subject: Herminia Palacio, Deputy Mayor for Health and Human Services.
Date: Wednesday, January 27, 2016 12:08:03 PM

She will arrive approx. 730 (separately from Mayor) and stay through the dinner (no dietary restrictions). She would love to know with whom she is seated.

I cribbed from her announcement release a bit of a bio if that is helpful.

BIO

As Deputy Mayor, Palacio will oversee the Department of Health and Mental Hygiene, NYC Health + Hospitals, Human Resources Administration, Department of Homeless Services, Agency for Children's Services, Office of the Chief Medical Examiner, Office to Combat Domestic Violence and Office of Food Policy. She will also work closely with First Deputy Mayor Shorris and Commissioner Steve Banks in the on-going review of the City's homeless programs.

Palacio is a crisis management expert who as Executive Director of the Harris County Public Health and Environmental Services coordinated health services for 27,000 people from the New Orleans area to Houston during Hurricane Katrina in 2005. Her work during Hurricane Katrina earned Palacio the Excellence in Health Administration Award by the American Public Health Association in 2007. Palacio also previously served as a Senior Policy Advisor for the San Francisco Department of Public Health, where she served on the front lines combatting HIV/AIDS.

With 25 years of experience in a range of health and social services professions, Palacio will be tasked with addressing homelessness across the five boroughs, developing a citywide network for mental health support, coordinating across the City's public health care system, improving access to social services for all New Yorkers, and ensuring Agencies that oversee the City's most vulnerable populations, such as children and victims of domestic violence, are run compassionately and effectively.

As former Executive Director of Harris County Public Health and Environmental Services, Palacio is well-prepared to take on NYC's most pressing challenges, having played a major role in the Astrodome/Reliant Park mega-shelter operation for over 27,000 evacuees from Hurricane Katrina to Harris County, Texas. Running all of the public health operations for the shelter, Palacio established a public health department for a "city" that went from a population of 0 to 27,000 in two days, identified and contained health outbreaks before they started, and aptly managed thousands of physicians and nurses to effectively triage 150 patients an hour.

In addition to her work at the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, in Harris County and San Francisco, Palacio has also held a number of academic appointments, including adjunct professor in Management, Policy, and Community Health at the University of Texas School of Public Health at Houston from 2006 to 2014. She also taught at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston and the University of California at San Francisco School of Medicine. Palacio received her medical degree from Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York and holds a Masters of Public Health, with a specialty in epidemiology, from the University of California at Berkeley School of Public Health, and a BA in biology from Barnard College at Columbia University. She has authored numerous articles in peer-reviewed scientific journals.

She served on the Board of Directors of the National Association of County and City Health Officials (NACCHO), the Texas Association of Local Health Officials (TALHO), the Harris County Healthcare Alliance (HCHA), and served as Chair of the Texas Public Health Coalition. She recently served on the Board of Scientific Counselors for the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) Office of Public Health Preparedness and Response and currently serves on the CDC Advisory Committee to the Director. In 2011 she was appointed by President Obama as a member of the Advisory Group on Prevention, Health Promotion, and Integrative and Public Health.

Importance: High

We are on a call right now discussing it – we are trying to rework it in a way that streamlines the event, gives the Mayor and First Lady a chance to speak to the 1000+ people that will be in attendance, and also addresses all of the event/speaker needs. Obviously your team is a priority and we will make sure they both have the attention of the masses to honor Pam!

I haven't been involved with the actual program until today, and we are reworking it in real time. My understanding is that both the Mayor and the First Lady are arriving at 730, is that still correct? And the Mayor will be departing at 8pm? Will the First Lady be staying later? We will have a draft around shortly, and we can either jump on a call with you after this one or first thing to talk through if easier than email. Let us know.

I agree with Andrew that this ROS is strange. Getting people back to their seats in between the dancing will be impossible. The Mayor and First Lady will be speaking to empty tables. We need to tighten up so that doesn't happen.

Hi Andrew,

We are thrilled that the Mayor and First Lady will be attending and, after our call with you yesterday noting the anticipated earlier arrival time, we tweaked the run of show to accommodate the Mayor and First Lady's schedules and sequence the program with a short break in between so it is not too many speakers back-to-back for the audience while they are having dinner.

Assuming a 7:30 PM arrival for them both, we would re-open the program once they arrive and are ready to introduce them and have them on stage with Pam. We think it's optimal to then take a short break before Dr. Safyer comes on to introduce Congresswoman Velaquez because that would be about 6-7 speakers back to back. We are happy to discuss this further with you and your team if you have any concerns or further questions.

Thanks,
Sylvie

Hi Sylvie,

This is not the same run of show we discussed yesterday on the phone. As discussed and finalized yesterday, we had all agreed that upon arrival at 7:30, the following would take place:

- Mayor and FLONYC arrive
- FLONYC and the Mayor are introduced by

Eugene

- The Mayor delivers remarks and introduces FLONYC
- FLONYC delivers remarks
- FLONYC and The Mayor physically present Pamela with the award
- Ken Gibbs introduces Congresswoman Velazquez
- Congresswoman Velazquez briefly delivers remarks and presents Congressional Record to Pamela
- FLONYC and Mayor stay on stage while Pamela delivers remarks
- FLONYC and Mayor depart

Please advise.

Hey Paula!

Attached is the draft advisory. Would love to have this go very soon. Pretty basic. When will the mayor's public schedule go live?

I will be onsite to manage and wrangle press for the event. As you know galas are tough, so not sure what kind of turnout we will get. But if the Mayor prefers not to interact with anyone regardless, we can accommodate that. Just let us know his preferences and feel free to connect me with anyone on your comms team.

Thanks for everything and look forward to hearing from you soon.

Hi Paula,

It was a pleasure speaking with you yesterday, and thanks so much again for your assistance with coordinating the Mayor's attendance to the Maimonides Gala. We're thrilled he will be attending.

I wanted to follow up regarding your questions on press. We, with support and partnership from BerlinRosen, will be managing press for the event, and we're planning on circulating a media advisory (which we will forward to you shortly).

If you could let us know what the Mayor's preferences are in terms of interacting with press or not, that would be great. I've cc'd my colleague Cathy Rought at BerlinRosen, who will be happy to address any concerns with you.

Thanks so much again, and please feel free to contact me with any questions,

Hi folks:

Off the Record/For planning purposes only: The Mayor will be volunteering for his long-time friend by rallying with volunteers at canvass kick offs, knocking on doors and phone banking on Saturday, Sunday and Monday. He is not scheduled to appear alongside Secretary Clinton at this time.

We plan to facilitate an on-topic gaggle tomorrow and Sunday. We will also do our best to accommodate interview requests and provide you with the opportunity to observe the mayor engaging with caucus goers. More on those opportunities to come.

See below for details on tomorrow's gaggle, in Des Moines.

Approximately 3:15 PM
Gaggle following Canvass Kick Off
4129 Forest Avenue
Des Moines, IA

Please call or email w any questions. [REDACTED]

Many thanks,

Hi Matt,

Here is the Congresswoman's quote! Please let me know if you need anything else.

"I am delighted that Mayor de Blasio is embracing the concept of light rail to connect Brooklyn and Queens along the East River. His enthusiastic support is going to take an idea from concept to reality, and it will be a great boon for the growing waterfront communities in Brooklyn and Queens," said Congresswoman Carolyn B. Maloney (NY-12). "Recognizing that these areas are becoming increasingly desirable for residents and high tech entrepreneurs, I have supported the idea since it was first proposed, and I am thrilled that Mayor de Blasio has made this project a priority. The new streetcar will greatly increase the accessibility of areas that aren't served by the subway and bring a new alternative to underserved areas."

Jeremy/Matt,

Mayor is doing a press conference tomorrow to amplify the BQX announcement. Below are details.

We've already invited all of the elected officials but would love your help in communicating the event to the additional stakeholders. We are happy to accommodate anyone who would like to attend but unlikely anyone will be speaking.

Event: BQX Amplification Event
Date: Friday, February 5, 2016
Time: 10:30 AM
Location: Red Hook East/Joseph Miccio Community Center, 110 W 9th St, Brooklyn

Can you help us spread the word?

Thanks!
Michael

5 Notable Quotes From Mayor Bill de Blasio’s State of the City Speech

NY TIMES – J. David Goodman and Susanne Craig

<http://www.nytimes.com/2016/02/06/nyregion/5-notable-quotes-from-mayor-bill-de-blasios-state-of-the-city-speech.html>

Here are five notable quotes from Mayor Bill de Blasio’s State of the City address on Thursday, with explanations of their significance.

“Today we take the next great step in connecting New Yorkers to the heart of our new economy for New York.”

The speech was filled with proposals large and small, with little in common other than that the city could undertake them largely on its own, without input or assistance from Albany.

The city, for example, would pay the $2.5 billion cost of a proposed streetcar system that would join Brooklyn and Queens along the East River waterfront. The city, rather than the Metropolitan Transportation Authority, which is state-run, would also operate the line. Likewise, a proposed development that would make Governors Island a year-round hub for attracting new businesses would focus on the 150 acres that are under city control.

“Different as our lives are, we are bound together by an invisible thread. We are united by the profound and powerful fact that we are all New Yorkers.”

If there was a dominant theme, it was that the city draws its strength from its polyglot nature, the diversity of its enclaves and neighborhoods.

It was not the sort of overarching message that supports a single policy proposal, but rather a thread the mayor wove through a litany of initiatives, from doing more to clean up graffiti to making rooftop repairs in public housing complexes to using countdown clocks to track the progress of buses through the streets.

“For the first time, as a city, we are fighting to shatter that stigma and deal with the public health crisis of mental health.”

The mayor mentioned mental health or mental illness roughly a dozen times. The issue is expected to be a major priority for him this year, and his wife, Chirlane McCray, will continue to be a driving force in the related initiatives.

Mr. de Blasio said the program his wife is to lead would include establishing a hotline for people in crisis, and offering mental health first-aid training for New Yorkers so they are able to identify and respond to signs of mental illness and substance abuse. The mayor blew a kiss to Ms. McCray when he introduced her.

“Everything we’re doing to make this a fairer city, a city of opportunity, rests on the work we do to keep people safe.”

The address included several minutes of praise for the work of uniformed members of the city’s police, fire and correction departments, on and off the job. Members of the audience rose in applause as the mayor introduced Police Officer Kenneth Healey, who survived being struck in the head by a hatchet-wielding attacker in 2014.

The praise seemed meant to underscore how far Mr. de Blasio has gone to try to repair his relations with the Police Department, which became badly strained after two officers were shot and killed in the line of duty in December 2014.

Even as the mayor spoke, two officers were shot in the South Bronx; both were expected to survive. After the speech was over, Mr. de Blasio was told of the shooting, left the stage and went immediately to the hospital where they had been taken. Once there, he addressed reporters while standing alongside Patrick J. Lynch, the Patrolmen’s Benevolent Association president who had been a vocal antagonist of the mayor’s last year.

“We call these speeches the State of the City. To me, that really means the State of Our People. Because it’s the 8.5 million of us, living in neighborhoods across the five boroughs, that make this the greatest city in the world.”

Throughout the speech, the mayor played municipal booster. Two times he called New York the “greatest city in the world”; he did not use the phrase at all in his two previous State of the City addresses.

The sentiment appeared to be in keeping with the absence of sweeping new initiatives and highlighted a message — one that is likely to be repeated frequently in the second half of Mr. de Blasio’s term as the 2017 election approaches — that life in New York has improved on his watch.

Sir/Ma'am:

The First Lady's profile will go live on the web at 5 a.m. tomorrow and be the cover of this week's magazine. Attached is the current cover for your reference.

Based on the cover, conversations with Rachel (the reporter) and the fact-checking session we can expect the profile to address:

- The First Lady's early career in New York and the early days of your relationship;
- The difficulties of transitioning into the role as First Lady, including the release of the Esquire piece and early media challenges;
- The unique partnership between the two of you and the First Lady's ground-breaking role;
- The First Lady's commitment to reform mental health care in New York City; and
- The challenges of being in a position of power as a woman and especially as a woman of color.

I will send around an analysis and highlights by 6:30 a.m. We'll also be ready to activate validators and push back if needed.

Additionally, I've attached the cover, as well as a print ad that will appear in the Thursday print paper to preview the weekend magazine, for your review and reference. The cover puts the First Lady front and center, making it clear from the get go the piece is about her. The Times needs permission from both of you to use the photo. For background, Henry says their asking is a courtesy and we should agree.

One last note – Ma'am, today's Huffington Post Live appearance made the homepage, which gets hundreds of thousands visitors every day.

Ma'am

This is an amazing day of coverage – op-ed in Usa Today, NYT magazine profile, Huffington Post/progressive hit, Latino media. I hear you both very clearly about desire to quickly leverage NYT Magazine, and that we don't have the longest amount of time to do that. But I also want us to identify a “productive controversy” that is authentic to the First Lady's voice and sustainable as part of movement building. Erin is coming in with discussions she, Jackie and I have been having about natural and created opportunities. Looking forward to your feedback from the meeting.

Thanks,

First Lady Chirlane McCray in the News:

Chirlane McCray and the Limits of First-Ladyship

NY TIMES - Rachel Kaadzi Ghansah

The first time I had lunch with Chirlane McCray at Gracie Mansion, I was distracted by the wallpaper. This was just about a year after her husband, Bill de Blasio, was sworn in as mayor of New York. In a breathlessly short period, McCray had gone from being a poet, wife and mother, with a job writing ad copy for a neighborhood hospital, to being first lady of New York City with a day-to-day schedule that could consist of everything from reading books to kindergartners in a classroom in East New York to exchanging pleasantries with Catherine, the Duchess of Cambridge. Standing near the head of a long, polished dining table, as a young white woman in a chef's uniform recited the lunch menu, McCray repeated our choices to me and her chief of staff. But my attention kept drifting to the walls, where a Zuber wallpaper from the 1830s depicted a maiden, her complexion a flushed peaches and cream, trapped in an almost-embrace with a pale and severe-looking soldier in a red-and-blue military uniform. Before they moved into Gracie, McCray and de Blasio lived in a vinyl-sided townhouse in Park Slope, Brooklyn, and worked out at the local Y.M.C.A. Shortly after de Blasio became mayor, McCray said she would be a “voice for the forgotten voices,” because, she said, “black women do not have as many positive images in the media as we should.” How did it feel for that woman to regularly dine within this patrician fantasy?

BHARARA's victory lap -- McCRAY on NYT Mag cover -- BLOOMBERG on 2016

POLITICO NY - Staff

DEEP DIVE – “Chirlane McCray and the Limits of First-Ladyship: What two years in Gracie Mansion have meant for a woman who aspired to be the “voice for the forgotten voices,” by Rachel Kaadzi Ghansah on the cover of this Sunday’s upcoming Times Magazine:

“[A]lthough the woman by [de Blasio’s] side with the long dreadlocks, tiny nose ring and activist past had obviously not made de Blasio black, she had given black New Yorkers a sense of representation, a sense that unlike Rudolph Giuliani or Bloomberg, her husband did not lack empathy toward their concerns. ... [F]or McCray, her gift and her burden for the next four years would be navigating the very real expectations and over-identifications being placed upon her. Together, McCray and de Blasio have been acting as interlocutors, as people whose identity politics have placed them in the middle ground in a city that has increasingly become divided along the interconnected lines: race, real estate, the haves and the have-nots; a city where many people, but some more than others, were depending on them not to let them down.” <http://nyti.ms/20StQFf> ... De Blasio and McCray: We can save the lives of opioid addicts right now

USA TODAY - Bill de Blasio and Chirlane McCray

Prescription painkiller misuse and heroin addiction have become national public health crises. Addiction and deaths tied to opioids cut across economic and ethnic lines. Opioid misuse kills Americans of all ages — in small towns and rural communities from Alaska to the Deep South, and from the suburbs of Phoenix and inner-city of Baltimore to the shores of Staten Island. Nearly 30,000 people died from opioid overdoses in 2014. Heroin overdoses have tripled in the last five years. In our city, a fatal heroin overdose happens every day of the year. They outnumber murders. Lives, once filled with promise, are cut short. Families, once tightly bound, are left shattered. As we rush our nation’s public health and crime-fighting policies to catch up with reality, there is something we can do right now to save lives.

New York City First Lady Chirlane McCray stops by HuffPost Live to discuss her initiative to improve the city's mental healthcare system.

Childhood Mental Illness If Left Untreated Can Cause Psychiatric Troubles Later In Life: Study

LATINO HEALTH - Staff

Mental problems are now hitting the children as well. New reports suggest that when this condition is left untreated, it might result in psychiatric troubles later in life. Dr. Pooky Knightsmith, an emotional health adviser and director of the Charlie Waller Memorial Trust, a charity educating young people to stay mentally well, revealed that their organization receives an increasing number of primary schools asking for help. "Sadly we are getting more requests about how to support anxiety, self-harm, depression and eating disorders in upper primary," she told The Huffington Post UK. She stressed that they are doing more preventive work in the primary setting, where positive grounds can be laid.*The first lady is pictured in this report. ## [Top Pharmacies to Offer Anti-Overdose Drug without Prescription throughout NYC

THE FORUM - Michael V. Cusenza

“Miracle.” “Second Chance.” Naloxone’s street sobriquets denote the medication’s undeniable power as an opioid antagonist designed to reverse an overdose of heroin or some types of prescription painkillers. This efficacy, coupled with the City’s struggle to gain ground on its opioid epidemic, has led to unique partnerships with two of the top pharmacies in the five boroughs. Duane Reade and Walgreen Co. this week began dispensing naloxone—or naran—without a prescription in the 300 Duane Reade and Walgreens stores citywide, and approximately 450 pharmacies statewide. City Health Commissioner Mary Bassett, M.D., applauded the effort.

... “By making naloxone widely and easily available, recovery from a narcotic overdose is now possible,” said First Lady Chirlane McCray. “We want those who are fighting the disease of addiction to have every medicine at their disposal so they can get well. Loved ones of those suffering from addiction should never again have to worry about not being able to find a medication that could stop their world from falling apart.”

Bill --

We're doing an fundraising event this spring in Nyc for Hillary and our Italian American Dems for congress. Senator Leahy ( his mother is Italian), rosa DeLauro, and Leon Panetta have already signed on as cohosts (who may or may not be able to make the date when it's confirmed.) obviously we'd like your name on the invite and your presence if possible. Whom on your staff should we talk to? Have had trouble breaking through.

Also, planning iadlc and 21st Dems events at Dem convention in philly and love to include you in both. (You attended in Charlotte.) Will coordinate with your staff on those too.

Thanks!

In a speech today at Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture in New York, Hillary Clinton will discuss how we break down the barriers that hold back African American families.

She will discuss how dealing with racial injustice must go beyond reforming our criminal justice system and how we need to confront the systemic racism that deprives too many of the opportunity to live up to their God-given potential.

This is why Clinton has discussed justice reforms since the start of her campaign that will be felt on our streets, at our schools, and in communities that are too often ignored.

Clinton will call for a comprehensive commitment to equity and opportunity for African Americans from new investments in job creation to ending redlining to ensuring equal pay for women of color to ending the school-to-prison pipeline.

Clinton believes that our leaders must do whatever it takes to tear down all the barriers and replace them with ladders of economic opportunity for all Americans.

This is very upsetting news. How could they mislead the public like this? This is similar to, but WAY WORSE, than the well-reviewed Korean restaurant Oiji (named after a spicy Korean pickle, a Chung family fave), which does not serve the pickle itself (but which is otherwise excellent-excellent-excellent).

“We welcome the uniform standards of professionalism NYPD training can bring to frontline security officers in NYC shelters. Violence – both physical attacks as well as serious threats of bodily harm – is undoubtedly the major deterrent preventing our most marginalized neighbors from accessing lifesaving shelter. Moreover, we see time-and-again families seeking shelter who are reluctant to share details of a dangerous history at intake interviews, often for fear of retribution from an abusive partner or parent. Restoring in-reach programs throughout the shelter system will help identify many more New Yorkers, who otherwise would suffer in silence. Homelessness may be synonymous with despair – but protecting homeless women and children from brutality and providing them the emotional support to heal are the two keys essential to shifting their lives towards hope and prosperity.”

Hey Mary and Giselle -

Hope it was a good meeting with Herminia and Hatch today. I was sorry to not be able to join. I know Herminia mentioned this to you today.

See below for more details on our new security measures. NYPD is taking on new role for training and providing technical assistance to DHS security and we are significantly expanding domestic violence services in shelters.

If you want to send statement, we are gathering by 9am for release. Sorry for tight timing. Please let me know if you have any questions.

All the best,

Lincoln

Top Line Updates:

• Significant new programs to improve security in DHS facilities.

○ NYPD to provide training to all DHS security personnel and review DHS security protocols to upgrade security.

○ Most common type of violence in shelter is domestic violence. DHS is placing DV social service workers onsite at family with children shelters and retraining existing staff to prevent DV and support survivors.

• We have created more accurate data points to capture violence in shelters that we will publicly report to better hold ourselves accountable to reducing violence in shelters.

DE BLASIO ADMINISTRATION ANNOUNCES NEW MEASURES TO IMPROVE SAFETY IN HOMELESS SHELTERS

NYPD to re-train DHS security staff, send management team to DHS to immediately develop action plan to upgrade security at all shelter facilities

New domestic violence program launched to combat domestic violence in shelters

NEW YORK—The de Blasio administration, as part of comprehensive review of homeless services, announced today a program to improve safety in homeless shelters: New York City Police Department will immediately begin re-training all Department of Homeless Services security staff and send an NYPD management team at DHS to immediately develop an action plan to upgrade security at all shelter facilities; restoring a domestic violence program for family shelters; and a new more extensive reporting system for incidents that occur in shelters. The reforms respond to new data on violence in shelters developed as part of the 90-day review of homeless services ordered by Mayor de Blasio.

“I’ve been clear that we are going to own the problems of homelessness and be transparent about how serious they are and what we are doing to deal with them,” said Mayor de Blasio. “For the first time, we are reporting thoroughly on the problem. We have substantially increased security, and we are bringing in the NYPD to ensure it’s managed effectively. And we are offering enhanced domestic violence services to families. We want homeless shelters to be safe and clean, but at the same time we must and we will continue to move families out and prevent them from coming to shelter in the first place.”

"For many years, the agency mainly focused on incidents involving death or life threatening injury and individual staff exercised discretion to report as a priority individual incidents not rising to this level on a case by case basis. The 90-day review showed that this resulted in lost opportunities to target services because cases not involving death or life threatening injuries were inconsistently categorized based on individual determinations. The review also showed that incidents that occurred off-site were also reported as critical incidents even though the incident did not occur at the shelter. We are reforming the process to broaden the criteria for critical incidents and will focus attention on the incidents that actually occurred in the shelters so that we can have a more complete picture of client service needs. For example, our review showed that more needs to be done to address domestic violence for families that have been placed in shelter together so the Mayor has authorized a new in reach program for family shelters that we will be including in the Executive Budget. During the course of the review, the Mayor has already authorized additional security for mental health shelters and commercial hotels and now the NYPD will ensure that security is handled as it should be," said Human Resources Administration Commissioner Steven Banks.

There are three parts to the Mayor’s reform program for improving safety in shelters:

1) Starting immediately, the New York City Police Department will begin re-training all Department of Homeless Services security staff and will be placing an NYPD management team at DHS to immediately develop an action plan to upgrade security at all shelter facilities

- o Total spending for security at DHS is approximately $140 million annually – an increase of 35% over the previous administration.
- o All non-cluster shelters have some level of security provided by either DHS peace officers or by private security guards.
- o DHS provides security through a combination of DHS Peace Officers, FJC Contracted Security Guards and by directly funding shelter providers to provide security at their sites.
- o As part of the review, the Mayor has already increased security at mental health shelters and at commercial hotels.

2) The City will re-establish a domestic violence program in DHS shelters that was ended in 2010.

- o A new analysis found that violence within families is the most common form of violent incident in family shelters. In Families with Children shelters, domestic violence was 60% of the violent incidents, while it was 80% in Adult Family shelters.

- o HRA's NoVA (No Violence Again) Outstationed Domestic Violence Services will be expanded to DHS Tier II family shelters to provide families with access to domestic violence services. Trained staff from HRA will go to a number of Tier II shelters to provide these services.
- o Existing social services staff in Tier II shelters will participate in enhanced training that will provide them with the tools to identify and refer families and individuals to the NoVA team, a NYC Family Justice Center or other community-based domestic violence providers.
- o Families not identified with intimate partner violence but experiencing unhealthy relationships and conflict will be offered referral to supportive services.
- o The Mayor's Office to Combat Domestic Violence (MOCDV) will coordinate with DHS to implement system-wide intimate partner violence (IPV) training for DHS employees and contracted staff.
- o A senior DHS official will be in charge of coordinating the delivery of domestic violence and other related services.

3) The Administration has instituted new more comprehensive and accurate reporting of critical incidents in shelters, including for the first time separately reporting violent incidents.

- o For many years, DHS reported "critical incidents", which included some but not all violent incidents. In addition, data was not systematically collected to identify problems.
- o A systematic review found "Critical Incident" definitions were unclear and inconsistently reported across agency divisions.
  - § Overly-broad type categories limit the agency's ability to identify trends and quantify specific types of incidents.
  - § Existing type categories include both violent and non-violent incidents within the same category, limiting the ability to quantify the volume of violent incidents.
- o New reporting categories have been created and applied to all 2015 incidents reported to DHS. The new procedure found:
  - § Under the old definitions, there were 620 critical incidents. The new analysis defined 1,687 incidents as critical of which 826 were categorized as violent.
  - § To ensure that problems are identified, violence is now defined much more broadly than, for example, the FBI crime reports. For the shelter critical incidents, violence includes broad definitions of domestic violence, assault and both child abuse and neglect, even if there was no violence against the child.

o The Administration is implementing thorough reforms to ensure that all critical incidents and especially violent incidents are appropriately categorized and that there is appropriate follow-up.

 Hi Jovana and Cristian,

If perchance either of you (both of you in an ideal world? -- leave it to you to coordinate!) can help to make more of a sales pitch up front in this proposal about why this is THE BEST WAY that Wells Fargo could deploy a grant of $250k to a city across the country to do something new and innovative, it's this?

Funny enough, this is due at 5pm today (Friday). Sarah Kate is coordinating this.

Jovana, I think if you can break out your flood insurance pitch content (perhaps you could even just share that with Sarah Kate and Cristian if you're swamped) that's what this is missing. I think it needs more about the people at risk if we DON'T do this.

Also, the fact that Wells is the only major bank still heavily in the mortgage origination and servicing game, and with plans to continue as such (so I learned from this conference yesterday), there may be a way to compliment them on that and subtly say that it's very much in their interest to figure this out so they do not see a wave of defaults...?

Sorry for not flagging this earlier; I think this is very close to done, could just use your expertise to make it sing.

Many thanks,
Matt

MAYOR DE BLASIO WARNS HOMEOWNERS TO AVOID STEEP FLOOD INSURANCE RATE HIKES

FEMA's flood insurance rates will increase dramatically if policies lapse. Efforts to ensure affordability will save New York City coastal households millions of dollars per year.

New York City – Mayor de Blasio today urges New York City homeowners to avoid steep flood insurance rate hikes by renewing their policies before they expire and thanks FEMA for holding certain policies to only a 5% annual increase instead of a possible 18% annual increase. Effective April 1, 2016, policy holders could see increases in their flood insurance rates and those rate hikes would be dramatically higher if those policies were allowed to expire. Thanks to effective advocacy by New York City and others, New York households will save millions of dollars per year as a result.

“Thanks to a successful effort to demonstrate the affordability challenges of the National Flood Insurance Program, the federal government has agreed to cap increases on certain policies at a 5% annual increase rather than letting them rise by 18%. That increase would have been an added financial burden on New Yorkers, who are still recovering from Hurricane Sandy,” said Mayor de Blasio. “Our effort saves thousands of households in coastal areas across the city millions of dollars in premium hikes annually. This is just another way we’re fighting to keep our city affordable for working and middle-class homeowners.”

The City is still concerned about the rising increases on businesses and will continue to advocate that FEMA provide credits for mitigation options that are more feasible in dense, urban floodplains as a way to reduce risk and cost simultaneously.

In order to avoid the jump to much higher, "full risk" rates, homeowners should immediately do the following:

- Check your policy renewal date.
- Call your insurance broker and ensure you renew your policy before it lapses.
- Learn more about flood insurance at nyfloodhelp.org.

The City will continue to advocate for effective reforms to the National Flood Insurance Program, and will continue its successful partnership with the Center for New York City Neighborhoods (CNYCN) to educate New Yorkers on flood risk and insurance and work with policyholders to understand the benefits of maintaining continuous coverage.

“New York City continues to fight to ensure that flood insurance remains available and affordable,” said Daniel Zarrilli, the Mayor’s Senior Director for Climate Policy and Programs, “Thanks to FEMA for hearing our concerns and holding certain policy premiums to only a 5% annual increase instead of what could have been an 18% annual increase, saving New Yorkers millions of dollars every year. Even so, we remain concerned about other elements of the National Flood Insurance Program and will continue to advocate for reforms that promote mitigation and affordability measures that adequately account for the unique characteristics of dense, urban floodplains.”

All property owners should understand their flood risk. New York City resident who have a federally backed mortgage or received federal disaster assistance – including through Build it Back – and live in a high risk area, are required to purchase flood insurance. Homeowners may be able to purchase flood insurance through the same company that provides their homeowners insurance. However, homeowners insurance does not cover damage from floods and federal disaster assistance is not guaranteed in the event of a flood.

Property owners, who are not in a flood zone, could still be at risk and should strongly consider purchasing flood insurance which is much more affordable outside the high risk areas.

MAYOR DE BLASIO WARNS HOMEOWNERS TO AVOID STEEP FLOOD INSURANCE RATE HIKES

FEMA's flood insurance rates will increase dramatically if policies lapse. Efforts to ensure affordability will save New York City coastal households millions of dollars per year.

New York City – Mayor de Blasio today urges New York City homeowners to avoid steep flood insurance rate hikes by renewing their policies before they expire and thanks FEMA for holding certain policies to only a 5% annual increase instead of a possible 18% annual increase. Effective April 1, 2016, policy holders could see increases in their flood insurance rates and those rate hikes would be dramatically higher if those policies were allowed to expire. Thanks to effective advocacy by New York City and others, New York households will save millions of dollars per year as a result.

“Thanks to a successful effort to demonstrate the affordability challenges of the National Flood Insurance Program, the federal government has agreed to cap increases on certain policies at a 5% annual increase rather than letting them rise by 18%. That increase would have been an added financial burden on New Yorkers, who are still recovering from Hurricane Sandy,” said Mayor de Blasio. “Our effort saves thousands of households in coastal areas across the city millions of dollars in premium hikes annually. This is just another way we’re fighting to keep our city affordable for working and middle-class homeowners.”

The City is still concerned about the rising increases on businesses and will continue to advocate that FEMA provide credits for mitigation options that are more feasible in dense, urban floodplains as a way to reduce risk and cost simultaneously.

I will sit down with Alex Burns from the NYT for an off the record coffee. I developed a relationship there and I want to keep it.

The rest of the NYC reporters I don't care about and won't but they will be reaching out soon and I need to direct them to someone. When I say I'm moving on they'll ask why and to where. That would be Nahimas (Politico), WSJ likely will ask soon after and Goen from the Post. This will be specially on the filings. The DC reporters never really covered outside of the forum then we went dark.

Yes missed the TPAC part and I wouldn't plan on telling folks this fed affairs piece unless they asked.

Should I fill in that part for a draft? And what is going to happen to

Hi Michael,

Just noticed one missing space, fixed here. When is this going out? We're not on your press list.

"Rising flood insurance rates have become a financial burden on the thousands of middle- and working-class families living in the city's waterfront communities, and especially those still recovering from Hurricane Sandy," said Christie Peale, Executive Director of the Center for NYC Neighborhoods. "We thank the City and FEMA for working to cap certain policy rates at 5% this year, a much needed relief that will save New York homeowners millions of dollars across the five boroughs. We encourage homeowners to visit FloodHelpNY.org and contact the Center for free, high-quality assistance if they have questions about their flood risk and rising insurance costs."

Many thanks,

MAYOR DE BLASIO WARNS HOMEOWNERS TO AVOID STEEP FLOOD INSURANCE RATE HIKES

FEMA's flood insurance rates will increase dramatically if policies lapse. Efforts to ensure affordability will save New York City coastal households millions of dollars per year.

New York City – Mayor de Blasio today urges New York City homeowners to avoid steep flood insurance rate hikes by renewing their policies before they expire and thanks FEMA for holding certain policies to only a 5% annual increase instead of a possible 18% annual increase. Effective April 1, 2016, policy holders could see increases in their flood insurance rates and those rate hikes would be dramatically higher if those policies were allowed to expire. Thanks to effective advocacy by New York City and others, New York households will save millions of dollars per year as a result.

“Thanks to a successful effort to demonstrate the affordability challenges of the National Flood Insurance Program, the federal government has agreed to cap increases on certain policies at a 5% annual increase rather than letting them rise by 18%. That increase would have been an added financial burden on New Yorkers, who are still recovering from Hurricane Sandy,” said Mayor de Blasio. “Our effort saves thousands of households in coastal areas across the city millions of dollars in premium hikes annually. This is just another way we’re fighting to keep our city affordable for working and middle-class homeowners.”

The City is still concerned about the rising increases on businesses and will continue to advocate that FEMA provide credits for mitigation options that are more feasible in dense, urban floodplains as a way to reduce risk and cost simultaneously.

In order to avoid the jump to much higher, "full risk" rates, homeowners should immediately do the following:

- Check your policy renewal date.
- Call your insurance broker and ensure you renew your policy before it lapses.
- Learn more about flood insurance at nyfloodhelp.org.

The City will continue to advocate for effective reforms to the National Flood Insurance Program, and will continue its successful partnership with the Center for New York City Neighborhoods (CNYCN) to educate New Yorkers on flood risk and insurance and work with policyholders to understand the benefits of maintaining continuous coverage.

“New York City continues to fight to ensure that flood insurance remains available and affordable,” said Daniel Zarrilli, the Mayor’s Senior Director for Climate Policy and Programs, “Thanks to FEMA for hearing our concerns and holding certain policy premiums to only a 5% annual increase instead of what could have been an 18% annual increase, saving New Yorkers millions of dollars every year. Even so, we remain concerned about other elements of the National Flood Insurance Program and will continue to advocate for reforms that promote mitigation and affordability measures that adequately account for the unique characteristics of dense, urban floodplains.”

All property owners should understand their flood risk. New York City resident who have a federally backed mortgage or received federal disaster assistance – including through Build it Back – and live in a high risk area, are required to purchase flood insurance. Homeowners may be able to purchase flood insurance through the same company that provides their homeowners insurance. However, homeowners insurance does not cover damage from floods and federal disaster assistance is not guaranteed in the event of a flood.

Property owners, who are not in a flood zone, could still be at risk and should strongly consider purchasing flood insurance which is much more affordable outside the high risk areas.

“TK Quote from CNYC,” said Christie Peale, Executive Director, Center for New York City Neighborhoods.

New Yorkers can understand their property's flood risk by visiting FoodHelpNY.org.

Hi All –

Thanks again for a very productive discussion! In follow up to our call, please find attached the Safety and Justice Challenge NYC website blurb for your review. As I mentioned, this will be posted to the Safety and Justice Challenge website and will replace what's currently there (<http://www.safetyandjusticechallenge.org/challenge-site/new-york-city/>). Once it is approved by both you all and the Foundation, we will send a final copy back to you that you can use at your discretion as well.

One quick note on the blurb: We did already begin to update some of the language we had included about the stability score based on our conversation today but I imagine this will need further refinement based on your internal discussions.

As a recap to our call, please find below a full schedule for the materials review:

- Safety and Justice Challenge Website Blurb
  - o NYC to review and approve by noon on Thursday, April 7
  - o M+R to share with the Foundation
  - o Foundation to review and approve by Friday, April 8 (or Monday, April 11 as a backup)
  - o M+R to share final blurb with NYC once we have the final
  - o Website blurb to go live on safetyandjusticechallenge.org on April 13
- Template Press Release
  - o NYC to tailor and approve by noon on Thursday, April 7
  - o M+R to share with the Foundation
  - o Foundation to review and approve by Friday, April 8 (or Monday, April 11 as a backup)
  - o M+R to share final release with NYC as soon as we have the final
- Media Fact Sheet
  - o NYC to tailor and approve by noon on Thursday, April 7
  - o M+R to share with the Foundation
  - o Foundation to review and approve by Friday, April 8 (or Monday, April 11 as a backup)
  - o M+R to share final fact sheet with NYC as soon as we have the final
- Tough Q&A
  - o NYC to update and share internally for reference (M+R does not need to see again)
- Messaging package
  - o Jennifer to re-connect with M+R on Friday about best next steps for updating messaging package, based on final budget

- Social media templates
  - o M+R to share by Friday, April 8
  - o If applicable based on Twitter functionality, NYC to tailor for your use on April 13th and throughout the first week post-announcement to help further the news
- Stakeholder outreach templates
  - o M+R to share by Friday, April 8
  - o NYC to tailor for your use on April 13th and/or post-announcement day to help further the news

Please let me know if you have any questions on the above or if there's anything else we can be helpful with in follow up. Thanks!

Proposed Website Blurb for New York City – DRAFT
April 5, 2016

New York City has seen a steep decline in serious crime since the early 1990s, accompanied by a dramatic drop in local jail incarceration, with populations declining 55 percent from 21,688 in 1991 to under 10,000 in 2014. City leaders continue to find ways to further decrease crime and jail populations like increasing pretrial supervised release through a risk-based system. The city has also taken steps to improve services in jail, like mental health resources and more effective reentry planning to curb recidivism. To continue building on past reform efforts, New York was awarded $2 million from the Safety and Justice Challenge to invest in innovative and commonsense strategies to further reduce the average daily jail population over the next two years.

To reduce the jail population safely, the city will institutionalize systemic changes that will accelerate case processing times, reduce unnecessary detention, and further calibrate the local justice system's response to risk and need. The city, for example, will begin work on a first-of-its kind "stability score" assessment that will look at the short and long-term impacts of detention on a given defendant to provide an individualized projection of how detention will impact that person's housing, job stability, and ability to meet familial or other commitments. To help address racial disparity, the Mayor's office of Criminal Justice, which is leading the reform effort, will also work with members of the judiciary, local law enforcement, prosecutors and the defense bar to conduct implicit bias training and build a feedback loop through which these agencies will receive updated information about disparities at each decision point within the system.

Jake Pearson at the AP would like to speak with someone Thursday about NYC's work through the initiative. He's written several pieces about the SJC, so he's well versed in the work overall.

Laurie at the Foundation is giving him an overview of the announcement at 11am on Thursday, so ideally some time in the afternoon.

Can you let me know if that's possible and who will be doing the interview? Once that's set, I'll plan to connect him to you two over email so you're in touch on any final logistics. Please let me know any questions or concerns.

Thanks so much,

Sam

Hi Sam,

Just tried to give you a call but couldn't reach you. Nonetheless, to tie up loose ends –

The director of our office, Elizabeth Glazer, would be holding both of these interviews. She very much still wants to speak to Jake even if he's mostly squared away on his story. The only thing is that this week is looking like a tight squeeze for her to do either of these interviews. Monday, however, is much better. Would it be possible to follow up with Jake and Ryan and ask if they can make Monday work instead? Apologies for the inconvenience and delay in response.

Also just want to confirm the content of the pre-interviews (with the national and local outlets you've pre-pitched). Have they NYC-specific re: our plan, or about the SJC initiative generally and mentioning NYC among other selected jurisdictions?

Looking forward to your reply when you can.

Best,
Crystal

Hi Crystal, we'd like to circle back with these reporters this morning if possible. Just to note the timelines, AP had asked for today and HuffPo had asked for today or Friday. Do you think we'll be able to make that timeline? At least for AP, the reporter might end up being set for reporting if it's not possible to set something up, but wanted to circle back with him on whether an interview today is something we can offer. And HuffPo still interested in setting something up.

NYC FOOD ASSISTANCE COLLABORATIVE

- CONFIDENTIAL: INTERNAL FAQs -

This confidential document provides draft talking points for sensitive questions that might be fielded by individuals participating in the NYC Food Assistance Collaborative.

1. What will the new FeedNYC.org system tell us that we don't already know? How will the Collaborative's work be different from what is already happening?

FeedNYC.org is an excellent tool for information sharing among members of the Collaborative, and the foundation for future data sharing. All of FeedNYC.org's current functionality will be replicated in the course of making system enhancements. For organizations that choose to participate, an enhanced FeedNYC.org will provide optional reporting on food supply, allocations, and agency data that is more comprehensive, timely, and consistent than anything available to date. In addition, the new system will minimize the effort required to share data, by creating automatic integrations with members' internal systems wherever possible.

2. Is Food Bank involved in the Collaborative?

The Collaborative would not have made it to this point without the participation of Food Bank, which was integrally involved for over a year in the planning stages of the work. Food Bank made a decision not to participate in the implementation phase, though we have left the door open for them to return to the Collaborative and hope they will reconsider.

3. How many people will be served?

The efforts of the Collaborative will impact all 1.4 million New Yorkers that access emergency food programs each year, by providing better information, improved coordination, and increased customer service. In addition, the Collaborative will invest over $4 million to build the capacity of programs in 22 deeply underserved neighborhoods, and distribute an additional 10-12 million pounds of food to these areas annually. By 2018, these neighborhoods will receive as much as five times the amount of safe, nutritious food they currently receive.

4. What are the Collaborative's immediate goals or projects?

The Collaborative is currently working to enhance FeedNYC.org, develop mobile technology to better serve clients, make initial investments in food programs in four priority neighborhoods, and coordinate a shared site visit form that all participating organizations can use to assess EFP capacity. The initial priority neighborhoods include Jackson Heights / Elmhurst (Queens), Grand Concourse (Bronx), East New York (Brooklyn) and Mid- and South-Island (Staten Island).

5. What will this work look like on the ground?

We anticipate several outcomes of the Collaborative's work on the ground. Emergency food programs will have access to more information on FeedNYC.org about their operations, in an easy-to-use interface. Clients and programs will have access to new mobile technology for registration and check-in. In some neighborhoods, existing programs will see sizeable investments in their infrastructure, in the form of new refrigeration equipment, shelving, storage, and mobile delivery equipment, and new programs will be established at large community-based organizations.

6. How did this group come together?

The Collaborative's work builds on the long-standing efforts of the Policy Committee for NYC Hunger Resources. Funding to convene the Collaborative is provided by the Helmsley Charitable Trust, in partnership with the NYC Mayor's Office of Food Policy.

7. When will the new data system be up and running?

Technical vendors are building the data system now. We anticipate a fall 2016 launch.

8. What are the funding sources and amounts that will support the Collaborative's work?

Funding for Collaborative investments is being passed through participating organizations. Information about these grants can be found on the Helmsley Charitable Trust website.

Hi Rob and Crystal,

Jake Pearson at the AP would like to speak with someone Thursday about NYC's work through the initiative. He's written several pieces about the SJC, so he's well versed in the work overall.

Laurie at the Foundation is giving him an overview of the announcement at 11am on Thursday, so ideally some time in the afternoon.

Can you let me know if that's possible and who will be doing the interview? Once that's set, I'll plan to connect him to you two over email so you're in touch on any final logistics. Please let me know any questions or concerns.

Thanks so much,

Sam

Hi Crystal and Rob,

Reaching out with a time sensitive request if you're able to send a quick response -- Joseph Goldstein at the New York Times is very interested in speaking with someone in New York about the efforts. Probably background initially. Is this something we can mobilize quickly?

Happy to hop on the phone to chat if easier. 646-200-5292.

Thanks,

Hi Crystal, we'd like to circle back with these reporters this morning if possible. Just to note the timelines, AP had asked for today and HuffPo had asked for today or Friday. Do you think we'll be able to make that timeline? At least for AP, the reporter might end up being set for reporting if it's not possible to set something up, but wanted to circle back with him on whether an interview today is something we can offer. And HuffPo still interested in setting something up.

MAYOR DE BLASIO: COMPREHENSIVE HOMELESS SERVICES PLAN INCREASES FOCUS ON PREVENTION & REHOUSING

Result of 90-Day Review Includes Streamlined Management Structure That Generates $38 Million in Administrative Savings

Mayor Bill de Blasio announced today a comprehensive plan to ensure homeless services are delivered as efficiently and effectively as possible with a focus on both preventing vulnerable New Yorkers from becoming homeless and rehousing individuals and families in shelter into permanent housing. The plan is the result of the 90-day review of homeless services ordered by the Mayor and incorporates and builds on the many reforms that were announced during the review period. The first part of the plan, full implementation of the Home-STAT outreach program for street homeless, was announced last week. The plan also includes measures to improve conditions and safety in shelters.

To ensure all resources are focused on prevention and rehousing:

- The City will implement an integrated management structure with both the Human Resources Administration (HRA) and the Department of Homeless Services (DHS) reporting to a single Commissioner of Social Services (DSS), current DSS/HRA Commissioner Steven Banks.
- Prevention and rehousing operations at DHS will be consolidated with groups that perform the same function at HRA.
  - DHS's Homebase prevention unit will join HRA's Homelessness Prevention Administration.
  - A unified HRA management structure based on the veterans move out initiative will focus on finding permanent housing for shelter residents.
- DHS will focus on managing and improving shelter operations, including developing new types of shelters.
- The two agencies will share administrative support services resulting in substantial savings.
- To advance accountability for preventing and alleviating homelessness across multiple City agencies, the City will create an Interagency Homelessness Accountability Council reporting to the Deputy Mayor for Health and Human Services Herminia Palacio.

“Since the beginning of the administration, the City has committed to an aggressive focus on preventing homelessness and helping New Yorkers move from shelter into permanent housing. But when it became clear that the seriousness of the problem required fresh thinking and a new approach, I asked for a thorough review,” Mayor de Blasio said. “We now have a comprehensive plan, including significant policy changes and both programmatic and structural reforms that will improve our ability to keep vulnerable New Yorkers in their homes or help them find new permanent homes. I urge the State, the providers, the advocates and homeless New Yorkers to join us in a new partnership to bring the homeless situation that has built up over the years under control.”

There are four key elements to the new plan—prevention, rehousing, street homelessness outreach and improving shelter conditions—and a total of 46 individual systemic reforms. As a result of the proposed reforms, there will be administrative and programmatic savings estimated at $38 million by eliminating duplicative administrative operations and streamlining management, which will offset new program costs of $66 million that will be presented in the Executive Budget.

PREVENTION

Preventing homelessness before it occurs is critical to reducing the number of families and individuals living in shelter, and is a cost-effective and common sense solution to our City’s homelessness problem that has gotten worse over the last 20 years. These reforms refocus the system to place greater emphasis on the role of prevention services, expanding the tools and resources available to those in need and pro-actively identifying and serving those who are most at-risk of becoming homeless.

Structural Reform: Consolidate the DHS Homebase Program with HRA’s homelessness prevention program.

Programmatic Reforms:

- Expand the scope of Homebase as the first point of entry for those at risk of homelessness so that people are served in their home borough rather than at one city-wide intake center.
- Realign roles of HRA staff at Homebase to prevent evictions and provide assistance.
- Use data analytics to proactively target prevention services for the most at-risk.
- Target rental assistance for at-risk clients with mental health needs cycling between Rikers and homelessness.
- Target services for youth in DYCD shelters before they transition to DHS shelters.
- Target outreach to doubled up families with school-aged children.
- Call on the State to participate in 2 task forces with the City to:
  - Implement alternatives to avert discharges from state prisons to shelter.
  - Implement community-based programs to replace mental health shelters.

REHOUSING

Finding safe and affordable housing is essential to addressing homelessness. Coordinating rehousing resources in the City under one management structure, making the rental assistance program easier to navigate, enhancing aftercare services, and enforcing housing discrimination laws will improve shelter move outs and housing stability.

Structural Reform: Establish a unified HRA management structure based on the veterans move out initiative to promote move outs to reduce the shelter census.

Programmatic Reforms:

- Streamline shelter relocation programs by consolidating and streamlining the LINC, SEPS and City FEPS rental assistance programs.
- Increase enforcement of the source of income discrimination law.
- Streamline the housing placement process to connect homeless clients to HPD-financed units that are available and appropriate for their needs.
- Continue to utilize NYCHA apartments within the annual needs-based allocation for clients on the waiting list who are in DHS and HRA domestic violence shelters.
- Enroll qualified shelter residents on SSI/SSD to increase income and promote rehousing.
- Implement more effective aftercare services.
- Incorporate Continuum of Care strategic planning into homeless strategy development and establish a leadership reporting structure:
- Call on the State to permit use of Medicaid funds for apartment search and shelter relocation services for homeless clients with disabilities and to approve FEPS plan modifications.

STREET HOMELESSNESS

The City's street homelessness reforms work together to better identify, engage, and transition homeless New Yorkers from the streets to appropriate services and permanent housing. The full launch of HOME-STAT builds on our street homelessness prevention and response initiatives, and enhanced funding for additional safe haven beds, drop in centers, and supportive housing units ensures that those living on the streets have opportunities to come inside and connect to the services and supports they need.

Programmatic Reforms:

- Fully launch HOME-STAT to address street homelessness: The HOME-STAT initiative partners existing homeless response and prevention programs with a series of new innovations designed to better identify, engage, and transition homeless New Yorkers from the streets to appropriate services and permanent housing.
- Enhance tools for outreach teams to bring people in from the streets: The City will increase safe haven beds, increase the number of drop in centers, and develop 15,000 units of supportive housing to provide essential tools to address street homelessness.

Last week, the City launched the HOME-STAT daily dashboard, an on-line reporting system that maps requests for homeless outreach assistance from the public and HOME-STAT canvassers, and other related data. A monthly dashboard that reports on aggregate outcomes, conditions and performance will be launched later this month. Together, these dashboards will offer an unprecedented consistent, transparent and broad set of data to track the City's efforts in reducing street homelessness and improving lives for our fellow New Yorkers.

IMPROVE SHELTER SERVICES

The City is committed to providing decent living conditions and high-quality social services to every family and individual living in shelter. These reforms address immediate concerns around shelter security and building conditions and include long-term strategies for sustaining these reforms into the future. These reforms also address pressing social service needs, targeting services to specific high-risk populations and giving clients opportunities to enhance their income-building capacity by developing a career pathway while in shelter.

Structural Reform: Focus DHS operations on overseeing the not-for-profit shelters and related services, and implement new accountability systems.

Programmatic Reforms:

- Improve shelter security:
  - Deployment of an NYPD management team to develop an action plan to upgrade security at all shelters
  - NYPD is retraining all DHS Peace Officers.
  - Enhanced domestic violence and family conflict services.
  - Improve reporting and tracking of critical incidents.
- Improve shelter conditions and operations by:
  - Expanding Shelter Repair Squad 2.0 Operations:
    - Establishing a unit of City staff to identify and address conditions and continue reporting on and repairing violations.
    - The Shelter Report Card will be produced regularly to hold the City and providers publicly accountable.
    - The City will ensure that all providers have clear information about the standards and regulations against which they are measured.
  - Continuing semi-annual multi-agency inspections and calling on OTDA and the Comptrollers to participate.
  - Assessing the potential conversion of existing shelters to permanent housing and replacing clusters and hotels with models like Gateway and Homestretch.
  - Expanding the capital repair program.
  - Rationalizing shelter provider rates.
  - Addressing ADA compliance in shelters.
- Promote career pathways for shelter residents by:
  - Implementing adult literacy and High School equivalency programming at shelters.
  - Implementing a training/employment program for residents to learn trades by providing system-wide shelter maintenance services in private shelters.

“The homelessness situation requires immediate action. That’s why we have been announcing reforms throughout the 90-day review period and why we picked a structure—shared management—that produces maximum coordination with the least amount of bureaucratic issues to put in place quickly,” said First Deputy Mayor Anthony Shorris. “Given his 30 years of leadership on homeless issues in New York City and two years of effectively reforming HRA, Commissioner Steven Banks was the obvious choice to implement this new structure.”

“While this reform plan focuses on two City agencies, HRA and DHS, success in dealing with homelessness requires cooperation and coordination throughout City government. The Interagency Homelessness Accountability Council will ensure that all City resources are brought to bear as effectively as possible,” said Deputy Mayor for Health and Human Services Herminia Palacio.

“Our goal is to provide seamless services to clients designed to best help them with their specific problems, whether it’s to prevent homelessness or move from shelter permanently into the community. Since many people are served by both HRA and DHS, the best way to do that is to have the two agencies work closely together and have all the prevention services in one agency,” said DSS/HRA Commissioner Steven Banks.

“This reform plan demonstrates the City’s commitment to efficiency and accountability through its focus on shared services and citywide oversight. It also emphasizes the City’s efforts to be transparent and publicly accountable through the continued public posting of the Shelter Repair Scorecard and the newly launched HOME-STAT dashboard that will allow the public to follow daily street homeless outreach activity,” said Mindy Tarlow, Director of the Mayor’s Office of Operations.

During the course of the 90-day review the City has already announced and begun implementing the following:

- Launched HOME-STAT to address street homelessness.
- Doubled the number of drop-in centers.
- Created the shelter repair scorecard.
- Implemented an enhanced shelter repair program.
- Increased security at all hotels that house homeless families and individuals.
- Provided 24/7 security coverage at mental health shelters.
- Begun enhancements of domestic violence services at shelters.
- Initiated a New York City Police Department (NYPD) shelter security review and retraining of Department of Homeless Services (DHS) peace officers.
- Committed to ending the cluster and commercial hotel programs.
- Implemented a plan to create 15,000 new units of supportive housing over the next 15 years.

In mid-December 2015, Mayor de Blasio ordered a comprehensive operational review of New York City’s homeless operations. Leadership and staff from City Hall, the Human Resources Administration (HRA), the Department of Homeless Services (DHS) and the Mayor’s Office of Operations began a review of the 20-year-old system of providing homeless services to assess the strengths and challenges of the current system and identify how to deliver client services more effectively and improve client outcomes. The review was guided by three key principles: providing quality services to vulnerable residents, efficient use of City resources, and achieving cost effectiveness by avoiding duplication.

The 90-day review included interviews with a variety of stakeholders in order to obtain feedback on service gaps for homeless New Yorkers and how New York City can best address homelessness. HRA Commissioner Steven Banks, Operations Director Mindy Tarlow, and City Hall Health and Human Services staff interviewed more than 400 people. They met with homeless people in shelters, on the streets and in focus groups; advocates, shelter and homeless services providers, other non-profit organizations, national experts and researchers, former DHS Commissioners, and elected officials; and staff union leadership and managers and staff at DHS, HRA and other City agencies. They also surveyed best practices in other jurisdictions, and received feedback from the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). In all, 24 different government agencies and 60 non-profit providers participated in the review process.

REVIEW OF HOMELESS SERVICE AGENCIES AND PROGRAMS

April, 2016

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY:

In mid-December 2015, Mayor de Blasio ordered a comprehensive operational review of New York City's homeless programs to ensure services are delivered as efficiently and effectively as possible in order to prevent, reduce and manage homelessness.

Leadership and staff from City Hall, the Human Resources Administration (HRA), the Department of Homeless Services (DHS) and the Mayor's Office of Operations immediately began a review of the 20-year-old system of providing homeless services to assess the strengths and challenges of the current system and identify how to deliver client services more effectively and improve client outcomes. The review was guided by three key principles: providing quality services to vulnerable residents, efficient use of city resources, and achieving cost effectiveness by avoiding duplication. The reforms in this report build on the initiatives to alleviate homelessness already authorized and are aimed at preventing homelessness, improving conditions and safety in shelter, and helping New Yorkers move from shelter into permanent housing.

As a result of the review and building on reforms announced during the 90-day period, the City will implement an integrated management structure with both HRA and DHS reporting to a single Commissioner of Social Services. This will allow the two agencies to provide more seamless and effective client services. The City will leverage the shared services functions across the two agencies, resulting in better day-to-day management and building a unified mission across agencies. Prevention and rehousing will be moved out of DHS operations and integrated within current HRA operations. To advance accountability for preventing and alleviating homelessness across multiple City agencies, the City will create an Interagency Homelessness Accountability Council reporting to the Deputy Mayor for Health and Human Services.

These major programmatic and structural changes are based on comprehensive input from a range of stakeholders, client interviews and focus groups, client and staff surveys, a process review of functions, and an analysis of national best practices. As a result of the proposed reforms, there will be administrative and programmatic savings estimated at $38 million by eliminating duplicative operations and streamlining management.

OVERVIEW:

Since the beginning of the administration, the City has committed to improving the lives of homeless New Yorkers with an aggressive focus on preventing homelessness, improving conditions in shelter, and helping New Yorkers move from shelter into permanent housing. The City covers 56% of the $954 million annual cost of providing shelter to homeless New Yorkers, with the federal government providing 28% and the State providing 15% (including a capped contribution of $68 million for the cost for shelter for single adults). After the 90-day review began, the City announced a series of new reforms to transform the homeless services system by addressing street homelessness, prevention, shelter conditions and services, shelter safety, and permanent housing. The City has:

- Doubled the number of drop-in centers to provide services to street homeless individuals;
- Created the shelter repair scorecard to track improvements in shelter conditions;
- Created the shelter repair scorecard;
- Implemented an enhanced shelter repair program;
- Increased security at all commercial hotels that house homeless families and individuals;
- Provided 24/7 security coverage at mental health shelters;
- Begun enhancements of domestic violence services at shelters;
- Initiated a New York City Police Department (NYPD) shelter security review and retraining of Department of Homeless Services (DHS) peace officers;
- Committed to ending the cluster and commercial hotel programs;
- Implemented a plan to create 15,000 new units of supportive housing over the next 15 years.

These reforms are significant policy changes, and after a comprehensive review the administration has developed both programmatic and structural recommendations that will further enhance the current work and shift the system in a new direction.

New York City has been facing increasing economic inequality as a result of low wages, the lack of affordable housing, and an increased cost of living. Based on the most recent data available, approximately 45 percent of New Yorkers live at or near poverty; approximately 21 percent live below the poverty line. This income inequality, combined with other causes of homelessness such as domestic violence, overcrowding, eviction, and the loss of affordable housing in recent years are what bring people to our shelter system. Moreover, the precipitous elimination of the Advantage rental assistance program in the 2011 State budget resulted in substantial annual increases in the family shelter census that have exacerbated the homeless problem in New York City. We did not arrive at this crisis overnight and it will take some time to address the multifaceted drivers of homelessness. The chart below shows the trajectory of homelessness that the administration inherited in 2014 and the impact of the administration's programs to stabilize the shelter system census. Without these programs, the shelter census would have continued on a path to more than 71,000. The additional reforms further build on the initiatives to prevent and alleviate homelessness already authorized. A summary of these major policy reforms is set forth at the end of this report.

Shelter Census Forecast Compared to Historical Growth

KEY PROGRAMMATIC REFORMS:

Homelessness in New York City as reflected in the DHS shelter system census has increased by approximately 115% over the past two decades. Increasing homelessness is a product of today's economic realities - increasing income inequality, rents rising, and stagnant wages. The additional reforms below will cost an estimated $66 million which will be offset by the $38 million in administrative savings mentioned above.

Prevention:

Prevention is the common sense and best solution to homelessness, which is why the administration has already added substantial resources to help those on the brink of homelessness and eviction stay housed, resulting in a 24% decrease in evictions over the past two years. By using data analytics, the City can better target and proactively reach out to those at greatest risk of becoming homeless. The City will be implementing new community-based initiatives for families to seek crisis intervention services at Homebase sites instead of at DHS's shelter intake facility, PATH, and will test the effectiveness of the new approach at designated sites before system-wide implementation. Enhancing current prevention efforts and reorienting the system toward a "prevention first" model will help families avoid the trauma of homelessness and reduce the shelter census.

Current Prevention Process

Future Prevention Process

Addressing Street Homelessness:

With the full launch of HOME-STAT, the nation's most comprehensive street outreach program, with nearly 500 workers to help transition homeless individuals into shelters, the City will be able to address more effectively the needs of New Yorkers who are homeless and on the streets. By developing 500 new safe haven beds, the City will increase available low threshold options for those who need assistance but are not willing to enter shelter. The supportive housing plan will provide an additional tool to address street homelessness with a proven track record of success. These reforms coupled with a citywide case management system will enhance City service integration, continuous monitoring and outreach, and rapid response to individuals on the street, improving the quality of life for both clients and City residents.

Sheltering:

Because the number of clients in shelter has increased as a result of the exponential shelter system census growth from 2011 into 2014 presented in the chart above, it has become increasingly difficult for DHS to adequately oversee and monitor providers, ensure safe, clean and secure conditions, and provide necessary services to clients. Shelter safety can be improved right away through the deployment of an NYPD management team to DHS to develop an action plan to upgrade security at all shelters and the NYPD's retraining of the DHS peace officers. The City will create a multi-pronged approach to improving shelter conditions by: establishing a unit of City staff to observe conditions, monitor services, and determine vacancies; streamlining the inspection process for providers; and developing a capital needs repair program. Creating career employment pathways and enhancing education and training services for clients while in shelter coupled with program-focused shelters with targeted services and better provider accountability will reshape the role shelters play in helping clients move to permanent housing. Phasing out the use of clusters and commercial hotels is also essential to improving shelter conditions and services.

Rehousing:

This administration has rebuilt rental assistance programs and shelter prevention and exit strategies and thereby housed or prevented homelessness for more than 32,000 children and adults. It is significantly more cost-effective for taxpayers to keep families and individuals in their homes and assist with rent than to pay the full cost to shelter a family or individual. Establishing a unified management structure was critical to achieving the goal of ending chronic veteran homelessness, and so the City will replicate that structure to promote overall shelter move outs. The current rental assistance programs will be streamlined through consolidation and process improvements. In order to ensure effective usage of the programs, the City will increase enforcement of the source of income discrimination local law.

Process Finding: Disjointed Client Experience

Back-office process inefficiencies impact clients’ abilities to receive services, and move in and out of shelter quickly and efficiently, as they struggle through what is a difficult and traumatic experience. Clients interact with multiple City agencies and/or Providers, sometimes physically traveling across the city to multiple locations.

Coordination: Multiple agencies and Providers responsible for prevention services resulting in potential overlap or inefficient hand-offs

Intake: Manually-intensive and often duplicative processes; reliance on self-reported data leads to decisions made without whole context
Placement: Phone-based, manually-intensive system that takes hours and tremendous effort to place clients, who often wait well into the night before being placed in a shelter
Services: Need for more robust oversight processes results in inconsistent level of services for clients across various shelter sites

Voucher System: Voucher system confusing to both clients and landlords delays move-outs

Rehousing: Need for consolidated real estate processes and information increases the amount of time spent searching for available housing

REVIEW PROCESS:

Over the past 90 days, City Hall, HRA, DHS and Operations leadership and staff, supported by PwC<sup>1</sup>, conducted a review of homeless services to assess the strengths and challenges of the current system, and identify how to deliver client services more effectively and improve client outcomes. The programmatic and structural reforms below were informed by comprehensive input from a range of stakeholders, client interviews and focus groups, client and staff surveys, a process review of functions, and an analysis of national best practices.

Stakeholder Interviews:

The 90-day review included interviews with a variety of stakeholders in order to obtain feedback on service gaps for homeless New Yorkers and how New York City can best address homelessness. HRA Commissioner Steve Banks, Operations Director Mindy Tarlow, City Hall Health and Human Services staff, and PwC consultants interviewed more than 400 people. They met with homeless people in shelters, on the streets and in focus groups; advocates, shelter and homeless services providers, other non-profit organizations, national experts and researchers, former DHS Commissioners, and elected officials; and staff union leadership and managers and staff at DHS, HRA and other City agencies. They also surveyed best practices in other jurisdictions, and received feedback from the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). In all, 24 different government agencies and 60 non-profit providers participated in the review process. Interviewees were asked what they considered to be DHS's most pressing challenges, what critical changes they would like to see implemented to improve the provision of homeless services, and what benefits or drawbacks they saw in the structural relationship between DHS and HRA. Specific questions regarding homelessness prevention, street homelessness, shelter intake systems, rehousing resources, shelter conditions, safety and services, rental assistance and housing, technology improvements, and special populations were also asked.

Inputs:

- Over 400 people interviewed including City staff, providers, local and national advocates, external partners, former leaders and providers of services and 4 focus groups with clients
- Survey of 725 DHS staff and 630 shelter residents across shelter populations and types
- Process mapping of intake centers and visits to shelters
- Research of leading practices from other jurisdictions and academics
- Analysis of existing City policies and processes

<sup>1</sup> The City contracted with PwC for support services in the amount of $200,000 through its Business Consulting Services Contract.

Client Focus Groups:

In addition to the formal interviews, client focus groups were conducted with four homeless advocacy organizations in order to obtain client feedback. The focus groups were convened by the Coalition for the Homeless, the Urban Justice Center's Safety Net Project, Picture the Homeless, and VOCAL. Through this process, more than 80 clients shared their experiences directly with Commissioner Banks and staff and provided feedback on the delivery of services. Clients focused primarily on issues surrounding shelter conditions and policies, social service delivery, and housing. Additional client discussions were conducted in shelters and on the streets.

Staff and Client Surveys:

A survey was sent to DHS staff and a random sample of clients to assess what services are most important to address homelessness. More than 700 DHS staff responded to the online survey and 630 clients across shelter populations and types were surveyed. Both clients and staff overwhelmingly reported that rehousing programs and processes are the biggest area of opportunity for reform, with 34% of clients and 27% of staff citing it as the most critical issue. Within rehousing, staff and clients commented on the need to streamline rental assistance, have greater availability of affordable and supportive housing, and provide recourse for landlord source of income discrimination. In addition to the surveys, the DHS and HRA staffs were also invited to email Commissioner Banks and Health and Human Services staff directly with feedback, and agency staff provided detailed recommendations that were considered in our analysis.

Process Analysis:

A process analysis of prevention and intake, capacity planning and projections, and shelter operations was conducted to identify strengths of the system and areas of opportunity for reform. Through shelter and intake center visits, stakeholder interviews and a review of operations, we were able to identify where clients interact with multiple agencies and where there are gaps and overlap in service delivery.

Review of Best Practices:

Former DHS Commissioner Gilbert Taylor, with support from the Mayor's Office of Operations, conducted a national review of leading practices in homelessness. Best practices were culled based on a review of guidance from the federal government, national and local advocacy groups, academic literature, and direct interviews with peer cities. The review focused on the following areas: prevention and aftercare, street outreach, shelter services, housing permanency, coordination and governance structure, and data systems. HUD officials provided additional input regarding national practices.

STRUCTURAL REFORMS:

In order to best support the necessary reforms, different organizational structures were reviewed. The guiding principles considered were:

- Efficacy - what delivery model will most effectively provide services;
- Quality - what structure will support quality services; and
- Cost - how can the City leverage current investments and avoid duplication.

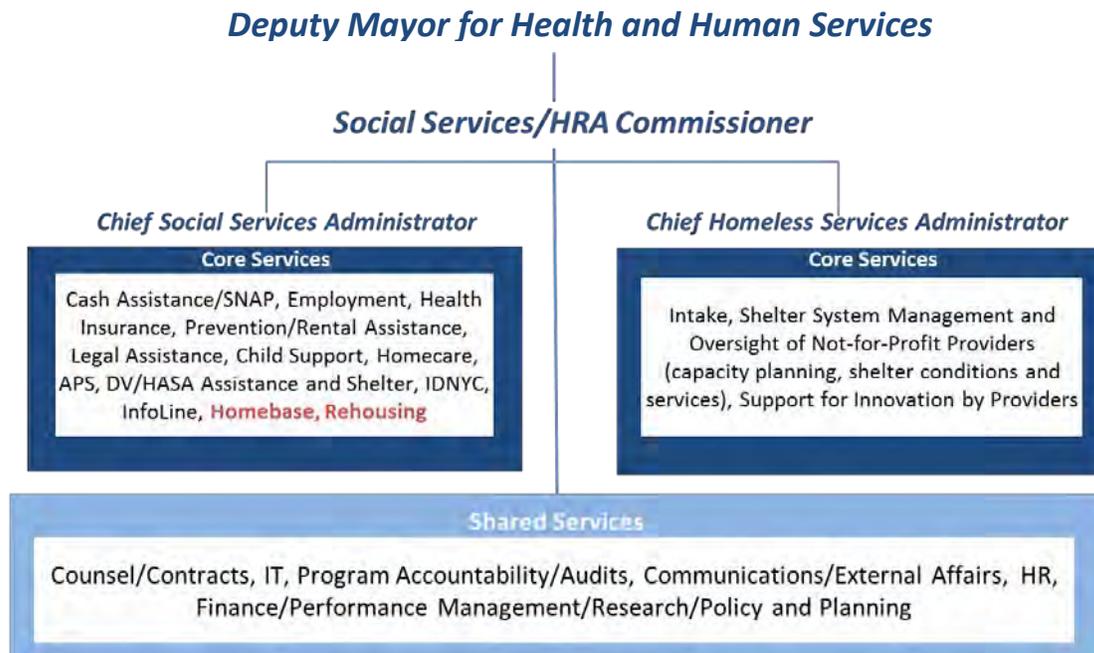

Three models with variations were considered: keeping two separate agencies, combining parts of the two agencies, merging both agencies into one.

The best means of quickly improving homeless services, while avoiding unnecessary bureaucratic details involved in a merger, is to create an integrated management structure with shared administrative services. Both HRA and DHS will report to the Social Services /Human Resources Administration Commissioner. The Commissioner will appoint a chief homeless services administrator for DHS and a chief social services administrator for HRA. The Social Services Commissioner will continue to report the Deputy Mayor for Health and Human Services. Creating an integrated reporting structure for both agencies reporting to a single Commissioner will create better day-to-day management and a unified mission across agencies. Rather than investing additional resources into DHS to support enhanced administrative operations, the City can leverage the shared services functions across the two agencies. A streamlined structure is the most cost effective because it leverages staff and resources that can be shared across agencies.

Prevention and rehousing will be integrated within current HRA operations under the new chief social services administrator. The current separation of those tasks leads to duplication, inefficiencies and ineffectiveness. Integrating prevention and rehousing under one agency will allow for more seamless and effective client services.

A shared service model for back office functions will save both time and money. It will allow DHS to have a clear and concrete focus. One of the challenges to delivering services identified during the review is that DHS’ scope of activity has evolved to encompass multiple services that are also being performed by other agencies. Furthermore, due to efficiencies provided by the new structure, $38 million in city tax levy savings are projected.

The City will also create an Interagency Homelessness Accountability Council. The Council will be led by the Deputy Mayor for Health and Human Services and advance accountability for preventing and alleviating homelessness across agencies. The Council is in addition to the multi-agency HOME-STAT case management program to focus resources and efforts to address street homelessness.

OVERVIEW OF REFORMS:

Prevention

Preventing homelessness before it occurs is critical to reducing the number of families and individuals living in shelter, and is a cost-effective and common sense solution to our City's homelessness crisis. These reforms refocus the system to place greater emphasis on the role of prevention services, expanding the tools and resources available to those in need, and pro-actively identifying and serving those who are most at-risk of becoming homeless.

1. Move Homebase program management from DHS to HRA: Management of the Homebase program will be moved to HRA, which already runs a number of homeless prevention programs and services. Integrating all prevention services under one agency will reduce inefficiencies and allow for more seamless and effective client services.
2. Expand Homebase staffing and services: HRA staff at Homebase offices will provide expanded on-site processing and triage for HRA benefits, including public assistance and rental assistance. Homebase not-for-profit staff will also expand their case management services to include landlord and family mediation, educational advancement, employment, and financial literacy services.

3. Expand the scope of Homebase as the first point of entry for those at risk of homelessness: The City will develop an intake model that builds on Homebase to focus greater attention on the role of communities in supporting families at risk of becoming homeless. Families seeking homeless prevention or shelter services will obtain these services within their borough, rather than through the City's centralized intake center in the Bronx.
4. Use data analytics to proactively target prevention services for at-risk clients: HRA will use client data collected by the agencies to proactively identify and target prevention services for New Yorkers who are most at risk of becoming homeless, such as families who are at risk of having their public assistance case closed administratively or reapplying for shelter.
5. Target outreach to doubled-up families with school-aged children: HRA will work with DOE to identify and proactively target prevention services for students of families living in doubled-up situations who are reported as homeless under the McKinney-Vento Act.
6. Deploy additional HRA prevention staff to single adult and adult family intake sites: The City will increase the HRA Diversion staff presence at these intake sites to expand services for clients.
7. Target services and rental assistance for youth in DYCD shelters: Eligibility criteria for the City's rental assistance programs will be expanded to include youth ages 18 – 24 living in DYCD youth shelters at risk of entering DHS shelters.
8. Target services and rental assistance for clients with mental health needs cycling between jail and homelessness: City rental assistance will be strategically targeted to identified at-risk clients with mental health needs cycling between Rikers Island and DHS shelters.
9. Create two new City/State Task Forces to increase homelessness prevention: The City is proposing that the State participate in two new City-State task forces, one that will develop and implement alternatives to avert discharges from State prisons to DHS shelters, and one that will work to implement community-based programs to eliminate the need for DHS mental health shelters. These two client groups account for a large proportion of the census for the City's single adult shelters.

Street Homelessness

The City's street homelessness reforms work together to better identify, engage, and transition homeless New Yorkers from the streets to appropriate services and permanent housing. The full launch of HOME-STAT builds our street homelessness prevention and response initiatives, and enhanced funding for additional safe haven beds, drop in centers, and supportive housing units ensures that those living on the streets have opportunities to come inside and connect to the services and supports they need.

10. Fully launch HOME-STAT to address street homelessness: The HOME-STAT initiative partners existing homeless response and prevention programs with a series of new innovations designed to better identify, engage, and transition homeless New Yorkers from the streets to appropriate services and permanent housing.

- 11. Enhance tools for outreach teams to bring people in from the streets: The City will increase safe haven beds, increase the number of drop in centers, and develop 15,000 units of supportive housing to provide essential tools to address street homelessness.

Shelter

The City is committed to providing decent living conditions and high-quality social services to every family and individual living in shelter. These reforms address immediate concerns around shelter security and building conditions and include long-term strategies for sustaining these reforms into the future. These reforms also address pressing social service needs, targeting services to specific high-risk populations and giving clients opportunities to enhance their income-building capacity by developing a career pathway while in shelter.

- 12. Increase safety in shelters through an NYPD management review and retraining program:
The NYPD will begin re-training all Department of Homeless Services security staff and deploy an NYPD management team at DHS to develop an action plan to upgrade security at all shelter facilities.
- 13. Enhanced domestic violence services in DHS shelters: HRA's NoVA (No Violence Again) out-stationed Domestic Violence Services will be expanded to DHS Tier II family shelters to provide families with access to domestic violence services. Trained staff from HRA will go to designated Tier II shelters to provide these services. Existing social services staff in Tier II shelters will participate in enhanced training that will provide them with the tools to identify and refer families and individuals to the NoVA team, a NYC Family Justice Center, or other community-based domestic violence providers.
- 14. Implement a more extensive reporting system for critical incidents that occur in shelters:
DHS has implemented a new, more comprehensive system for the reporting of critical incidents in shelters. To ensure that problems are identified, violence is now defined much more broadly to include wide-ranging definitions of domestic violence, assault, and both child abuse and neglect. DHS is implementing thorough reforms to ensure that all critical incidents, especially violent incidents, are appropriately categorized, and there is appropriate follow-up.
- 15. Expand Shelter Repair Squad 2.0 Operations: The City will continue to aggressively inspect homeless shelters to identify and address building violations and shelters in need of repairs. Inspections will be conducted twice a year at all sites used to house homeless individuals and families, and the Shelter Report Card will be produced regularly to hold the City and providers publicly accountable. The City will also ensure that all providers have clear information about the standards and regulations against which they are measured, explore ways to reduce the time it takes for violations to be cleared, and create a working group of shelter providers to discuss the best means of working together to improve shelter conditions.
- 16. Increase coordination among inspectors: To avoid duplication of effort, the City will establish a semi-annual multi-agency inspection process that includes all City agencies that have inspection responsibilities. The City again asks for joint participation by NYS Office of Temporary and Disability Assistance (OTDA) and the City and State Comptrollers.

17. Phasing out the use of cluster shelters: The City will phase out the use of cluster shelter units, returning them to the market so that the apartments can be restored as low-rent housing; 260 cluster units have already been designated for closure during this fiscal year. The City will continue with the plan to phase out the 16-year cluster program through a combination of code enforcement to address inadequate conditions; working with owners to return units to the permanent housing stock, rehabilitate the buildings, and permit families to remain in the upgraded units; and, to the extent necessary, replacing units with a new shelter model that combines transitional housing, permanent housing, and community space.
18. Assessing the potential conversion of existing shelters to permanent housing: Where feasible, the City will partially convert current shelter sites into permanent housing using new shelter models like Gateway Housing and Homestretch, which include affordable permanent housing, shelter units, and community space at the same location.
19. Phasing out use of commercial hotels: As the cluster takedown, the shelter conversion process, and the enhanced shelter move out efforts proceed, the City will prioritize ending reliance on renting blocks of rooms in commercial hotels as shelter.
20. Implement the domestic violence shelter expansion: The City will continue to implement the initiative to increase domestic violence services by adding 300 emergency beds and 400 Tier II units.
21. Implementing a capital repair program: The City will implement a program to systematically review and fix capital needs at shelters.
22. Rationalizing shelter provider rates: The City is evaluating payments to shelter providers to ensure they are sufficient to fund maintenance and services, and is assessing the capital needs of shelters which have not been adequately supported for many years.
23. Address ADA compliance in shelters: The City will hire a consultant to evaluate ADA accessibility in the DHS shelter system and formulate a compliance plan.
24. Expanding the scope of HRA's ADA coordinator to cover the shelter system: HRA's ADA Coordinator will coordinate and oversee ADA compliance and initiatives in the shelter system. The Coordinator will also develop and implement staff training and address client complaints.
25. Promote career pathways for shelter residents: The City will implement new programs to help shelter residents move forward on a career pathway. Adult literacy and High School equivalency programming will be implemented at all shelters for residents who need additional supports in these areas. The City will also implement a training and employment program at select shelters for residents to learn trades by providing system-wide shelter maintenance services in private shelters.
26. Targeting services for emerging new trends in the single adult population (persons 50 or older and 18 to 24): More effective targeting will promote our prevention and rehousing efforts.

27. Provide assistance to obtain federal disability benefits: The City will dedicate services to focus on enrolling shelter residents on SSI/SSD to increase income and promote rehousing.
28. Targeting services for families to move away from a one size fits all approach: The City will develop initiatives that focus on the varying needs of homeless families. The City will work with providers to develop shelter models in which placements may be differentiated based on the family's readiness to be rapidly rehoused; families who are assessed to likely have a shorter stay in shelter may be placed in different programs than families with higher needs and a likely longer length of stay.
29. Eliminate the requirement for school-age children to be present at PATH for multiple appointments: School-age children will no longer be required to be present with their families for multiple appointments in the shelter application process.
30. Align access procedures for adult families with procedures for families with children: The City will modify the intake process and improve capacity planning to avoid long waits and/or transporting clients in the middle of the night as a result of the delay in identifying available shelter placements.
31. Streamline access to DYCD shelter for homeless youth: City staff will be deployed at the entry points of the DHS shelter system to offer youth beds for individuals between the ages of 16 and 21. The plan to triple the number of youth beds is a critical element of this reform.
32. Implement tripling of DYCD shelter capacity for Runaway and Homeless Youth: DYCD will continue its expansion of RHY capacity. Nearly 200 additional beds have already been brought online and the City will open 100 beds each year for the following three years. This will bring the total system capacity from 250 when Mayor de Blasio took office to 750 by FY19.
33. Provide increased notice prior to non-emergency transfers: In non-emergency situations, clients will be given more notice that they are being transferred to another shelter.
34. Increasing transportation resources to reduce placement waiting time: The City will be deploying additional transportation resources to address this problem.
35. Deploy social workers to accompany families found ineligible who are returning to a community resource to provide on-the-spot assistance: This will enhance client services and address problems related to repeated reapplications.
36. Expand the shelter conditions complaint process through HRA's Infoline: The hotline's current purpose is to address conditions complaints. HRA will expand this to include complaints on all shelter services, including shelter conditions.
37. Communicate more information to clients through flyers, posters and other media: Better information for clients will enhance access to services, including employment and housing assistance.

Rehousing

Finding safe and affordable housing is essential to addressing homelessness. Coordinating rehousing resources in the City under one management structure, making the rental assistance programs easier to navigate, enhancing aftercare services, and enforcing housing discrimination laws will improve shelter move outs and housing stability.

38. Move Rehousing program management from DHS to HRA: Modeled on the veterans move out effort, HRA will develop a centralized reporting structure to promote move outs.
39. Streamline the HPD housing placement process: The City will establish a streamlined process to connect homeless clients to HPD-financed units that are available and appropriate for their needs.
40. Continue to utilize NYCHA placements to address homelessness: As provided in the City budget, within the needs-based NYCHA placements that are available during the year, the City will continue to place 1,500 DHS families on the NYCHA waiting list as well as 300 domestic violence survivors in HRA and DHS shelters and on the NYCHA waiting list into vacancies that arise.
41. Consolidating the LINC, SEPS and CityFEPS rental assistance programs: The City will consolidate and streamline the operations of its rental assistance programs.
42. Increasing enforcement of source of income discrimination law: The City will train and dedicate HRA staff to conduct testing to identify potential discriminatory practices and take enforcement action to supplement the efforts of the City Human Rights Commission.
43. Implementing a more effective aftercare program: Using the critical time intervention as a model, the City will enhance aftercare services for rehoused clients.
44. Incorporate Continuum of Care strategic planning into homeless strategy development and establish a leadership reporting structure: Drawing on the model in other jurisdictions, the City will enhance the role of the Continuum of Care in the policy and planning process. As part of this initiative, the City will explore ways to further coordinate access and assess need for those experiencing homelessness following the HUD approach.
45. Provide clear and concise information and written materials to clients about available assistance and programs: HRA and DHS will create and distribute more effective informational materials for clients in the community and in shelters.
46. Call on the State to: (a) permit use of Medicaid funds for apartment search and shelter relocation services for homeless clients with disabilities; and (b) approve HRA's requested FEPS plan modifications: These policy changes will enhance both rehousing and prevention efforts.

Hi Crystal,

Do you have a second for a quick call? Have a few time-sensitive Q's if you have a second. I'm at 646-200-5292.

Thanks a lot,

Hi Sam,

Joseph gave me a call after I reached out via email, and we confirmed his background chat with Sarah for 5:30 p.m. today. Will make sure to send you notes on how it went afterwards.

Thanks!

Hi Crystal and Rob,

As we discussed yesterday, I just wanted to shoot you a quick note that we are reaching out to the New York Times, the Brian Lehrer Show, and the New York Daily News on embargo, so we have those outlets covered. Aside from the Times, the New York Daily News and the Brian Lehrer Show are the only New York-focused outlets on our national embargo list.

If you have any questions about other outlets that may be borderline for national v. New York, please let us know and we can get back to you.

Thanks,

Sam

Hi Crystal, Rob,

Thanks again for our conversation earlier today. In advance of our call tomorrow, please find attached the:

- Template press release - for your use that will need to be reviewed by both you all and the Foundation one last time before finalizing

- Draft list of potential media tough questions - to be discussed on our call tomorrow

For our call tomorrow, here's an agenda to help guide the discussion:

TUESDAY CALL AGENDA

Overall Messaging

Top level reactions to draft package and fact sheet

Please send any redline edits/comments in advance, if applicable

Tough questions for media

Run through questions and start working through answers together

Discuss other challenges/opposition to be prepared for

Announcement strategy

Press outreach

Press release

Event

Editorial

Social media outreach

Stakeholder engagement

Next steps

Clarify/confirm who does what and deadlines

As an FYI, the additional documents M+R will be sharing include:

- Safety and Justice Challenge website blurb (draft for review)
- Template event media advisory (if needed)
- Template stakeholder and social media outreach materials (for your use)

In addition, once we've discussed the remaining materials tomorrow I will share a full recap of materials with notes about where they stand, which need further review and updating, and by when all materials need to be finalized.

Please let me know if you have any questions on the above and look forward to speaking with you all again tomorrow!

Best,

Hanah

Hi Ryan,

Glad to hear that you've taken interest in NYC's plans for the Safety and Justice Challenge.

Our Chief External Strategy Officer, Sarah Solon, should be able to jump on the phone with you this afternoon. She is well-versed in our plans and can answer all of your questions. If you have a preferred time in mind, let me know. Otherwise, I will have her reach out as soon as she is available.

From there, we can connect you with/provide a quote from the director of our office, Elizabeth Glazer.

As an aside, I'm newly at the Mayor's Office of Criminal Justice from a previous media position at the ACLU. I believe you worked with my former colleague Alexandra Ringe most often. Hope to be in close contact re: NYC criminal justice efforts in the near future.

Hi Crystal, we'd like to circle back with these reporters this morning if possible. Just to note the timelines, AP had asked for today and HuffPo had asked for today or Friday. Do you think we'll be able to make that timeline? At least for AP, the reporter might end up being set for reporting if it's not possible to set something up, but wanted to circle back with him on whether an interview today is something we can offer. And HuffPo still interested in setting something up.

Hi Rob and Crystal,

Jake Pearson at the AP would like to speak with someone Thursday about NYC's work through the initiative. He's written several pieces about the SJC, so he's well versed in the work overall.

Laurie at the Foundation is giving him an overview of the announcement at 11am on Thursday, so ideally some time in the afternoon.

Can you let me know if that's possible and who will be doing the interview? Once that's set, I'll plan to connect him to you two over email so you're in touch on any final logistics. Please let me know any questions or concerns.

Thanks so much,

Thank-you Crystal. I'm afraid I'm not free at 2pm, that's when I'm speaking with Laurie Garduque from the MacArthur Foundation. Does she have any other availability later this afternoon? I'm also not free from 3pm for about a half hour or so. If today does not work, I'm pretty flexible on Thursday. Tomorrow is tricky, but I would try to juggle if tomorrow works better.

Hi Crystal,

12:30 is great. Dave Goodman will likely come along as well.

Thank you,

Hi Joe,

Hope you enjoyed your weekend and that the background call with Sarah was helpful re: NYC Safety and Justice Challenge.

Liz Glazer can speak with you on the record tomorrow afternoon. Right now, she has time between 12:30 and 2 p.m. ET. Would you happen to have 20 minutes or so within that time frame to chat? Please let me know your preferences.

This statement says that campaign staff recommended committee members -- which in this case includes Rechnitz and Reichberg. And that Gabrielle Fialkoff, the chairwoman, chose who was on the committee.

Is that correct?

Now I want to speak to Gabrielle on this issue.

Karen, Gabrielle works for the mayor. It's not up to Berlin Rosen to act as the go-between.

Hi Crystal,

We're trying on this with USA Today. Given the late stage in the editing process, we're not sure they'll be able to make the change, but we are doing our best. Separately, can you please let us know how things went with the New York Times and whether they're planning anything?

Thank you,

Hi Sam,

We are going to have to go with the below. Please let me know if USA Today is able to accept the change. Thank you!

"New York City is developing individualized risk and needs profiles as well as a tool that will match individuals with appropriate, targeted diversion opportunities based on each individual's unique profile. The City is also building a public accountability website that will track progress in reducing case delay -- the single biggest driver of the City's jail population."

Hi Crystal,

Thanks so much for sharing this language with Hanah, and would love to hear how the call with NYT went and if Joe is planning to do any coverage now or down the line. We'll use this approved language if we're asked for more info by national reporters. Quick flag on the op-ed – USA Today has accepted the piece and is planning to run it online tomorrow. It would be tough to change the language at this point, but here is the paragraph in the op-ed. Is anything inaccurate here that raises a concern? Let us know.

“New York City is developing a special assessment to measure what impact a stay in jail would have on poor defendants— putting them at risk of losing their homes or jobs, or compromising their ability to care for their families—so that judges can consider these factors before setting an out-of-reach bail amount.”

Thanks,

Hi Crystal, Rob,

Thanks again for our conversation earlier today. In advance of our call tomorrow, please find attached the:

- Template press release - for your use that will need to be reviewed by both you all and the Foundation one last time before finalizing
- Draft list of potential media tough questions - to be discussed on our call tomorrow

For our call tomorrow, here's an agenda to help guide the discussion:

TUESDAY CALL AGENDA

Overall Messaging

Top level reactions to draft package and fact sheet

Please send any redline edits/comments in advance, if applicable

Tough questions for media

Run through questions and start working through answers together

Discuss other challenges/opposition to be prepared for

Announcement strategy

Press outreach

Press release

Event

Editorial

Social media outreach

Stakeholder engagement

Next steps

Clarify/confirm who does what and deadlines

As an FYI, the additional documents M+R will be sharing include:

- Safety and Justice Challenge website blurb (draft for review)
- Template event media advisory (if needed)
- Template stakeholder and social media outreach materials (for your use)

In addition, once we've discussed the remaining materials tomorrow I will share a full recap of materials with notes about where they stand, which need further review and updating, and by when all materials need to be finalized.

Please let me know if you have any questions on the above and look forward to speaking with you all again tomorrow!

Best,
Hanah

I have no further details than I did when I last addressed this topic and am still unaware of any investigation.

Q. Lawyer?

A. No I have not. Barry Berke, the attorney for our 2013 campaign, is representing the campaign.

Q. Subpoenas?

A. No, but clearly communicated our willingness to assist.

Q. What did US Attorney say?

A. My understanding is they understood and acknowledged the offer. There have been no requests of the campaign, and we have no information as to whether there is an investigation.

Q. JCOPE investigation?

A. Can't speak to that - question for C41NY

Hey all, bringing this to you in separate email from ZD ticket. This was from email emerson.rosenthal@vice.com and in ticket 143345. BE WARNED images are very graphic:

Hi, I'm reporting on a story that transpired last night. Passersby a Link.NYC terminal were treated to an impromptu art installation after an artist used your terminal to display graphic pornography, dead bodies, and graffiti tags to the unsuspecting public. Images below [graphic]:

Do you care to comment on the exploit? How does Link.NYC feel about the use of their terminals for public interventions? Do you have countermeasures in place against this? Can/Will you do anything to prevent such future occurrences?

Also, can you comment on if / how your terminals will be used for wi-fi fingerprinting and/or civilian tracking in the future?

I look forward to your reply,

Yes, Google Images, Yes it will go black, and all the Links were patched this morning to force Google Image Search into safe mode.

Statement coming shortly will make these points – then we can hop on phone to discuss if needed.

What exactly happened here?

Was this just someone looking stuff up on google images and leaving it up for people to see? doesn't the screen go black if you're not using it for a short time?

I thought there were content restrictions in place?

Hi Sam,

Thank you so much for all of your outreach assistance in the lead-up to the announcement today. Here are notes on the interviews that Liz held yesterday. You'll see that the NYT interview went very much off track, but that he may write a longer lead piece in the next few weeks.

We ended up getting our release out a little after 1 p.m. ET, so we will monitor overnight to see if any local papers picked it up with info from the release.

- Jake Pearson of AP:
<http://bigstory.ap.org/article/c5a876353b4b42d28cb16f0ab1ceebbe/11-us-jails-win-millions-grants-overhaul-operations> (quotes Liz Glazer)
- Interview with Economist went extremely well. Planning a longer lead story to run after the New York primary on April 19
- Haven't seen anything yet from Ryan Reilly at HuffPost, but that interview went very well also.
- New York Times interview was extremely hostile; the interview started with a demand that we send a list of names of the top "churners" in the jail system. He did not seem interested in covering the actual grant. We've been massaging the dialogue via email over the past 24 hours to get things to a place where he might write a longer lead story in the next few weeks.

Exclusive Q&A: NYC Mayor's Office Of Sustainability Director Nilda Mesa

In an office market where sustainability figures increasingly into tenants' wish lists, we can be sure it'll play a huge role in the future of commercial real estate. We caught up with Nilda Mesa, director of the Mayor's Office of Sustainability and a speaker at our Future of Real Estate event next week, to get her take on where things are headed.

Bisnow: Can you explain the Mayor's "80 by 50" plan and say a bit about your office's role in it?
Nilda: In September 2014, Mayor de Blasio announced a plan to reduce greenhouse emissions 80% by the year 2050. When this...

I have the mayor's comments from yesterday on the campaign finance investigations in general. Do let me know if there's anything else I should know or if you want to touch base today.

Here you go with proposed quote for the Mayor highlighted in blue.

Here is our plan for run of show for the event.

Welcome from program director, my remarks (3-5 min), Mayor, business person if possible, labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible). Q and A. Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera). Then go to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Alternatives as speakers--representative from US DOE (Sec. King not available) or Jacqueline Jones from the Foundation for Child Development, or a parent.

Does the Mayor's office have a business representative they might like to feature or a state legislative leader?

Can you forward the full contact info for Devora and Jessica from DOE and CH communications.

He has a couple questions related to other elected officials, prominent figures to include at the event. Is that the sort of thing that Devora and Jessica can field – or should that type of question come to you?

Monroe County Republican Chairman Bill Reilich filed a complaint with the Board of Elections Wednesday asking for an additional investigation into fundraising there for then-Sen. Ted O'Brien. He cited three donations - $100,000 from CWA District One's PAC, $100,000 donation from UFT, and $25,000 from 32BJ - to the Monroe County Democrats which then transferred $218,663.25 to O'Brien. He said it's the same pattern of "money laundering" seen in Ulster and Putnam counties. Any response to this?

Hope you're well! We have been in touch with a criminal justice and race reporter at The Intercept, Alice Speri. She let us know that she's working on a deep-dive into efforts to address issues around Rikers—including advocacy to reduce its use or close it—and would love to speak with someone to hear more about the city's participation in the SJC. While we know these are sensitive issues, the inquiry does not seem hostile. This would be an on-the-record interview, and she's hoping to speak with someone next week or the week after.

Shall we connect you two directly?

Other things I wanted to note:

- We have provided her with the SJC fact sheet and press release, as well as the link to NYC's plan summary page on the SJC website.
- Alice will likely have already spoken with Laurie Garduque at the Foundation.

Thanks!

Sam

Hi Eric,

Thanks for checking in. Attached is the most recent version of the release, with the proposed quote for the Mayor below:

“High quality early education is a necessity, not a luxury,” said New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio. “Here in New York, we’ve seen first hand that action by state governments can lift enrollment and quality for thousands of children in our communities. At a time of political polarization, these initiatives receive wide bipartisan support – and for good reason. There’s no better way to ensure future success for our kids and our states.”

Steve, can you also send Eric the most up to date version of the report when you have a moment?

For the run of show, we are suggesting:

- Welcome from program director
- Steve's remarks (3-5 min)
- The Mayor
- Tentative: Either labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible) or business leader
- Libby Doggett from the DOE
- Q and A
- Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera).
- Then Mayor goes to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Let me know what else we can get you.

Thanks,

Leslie

Here you go with proposed quote for the Mayor highlighted in blue.

Here is our plan for run of show for the event.

Welcome from program director, my remarks (3-5 min), Mayor, business person if possible, labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible). Q and A. Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera). Then go to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Alternatives as speakers--representative from US DOE (Sec. King not available) or Jacqueline Jones from the Foundation for Child Development, or a parent.

Does the Mayor's office have a business representative they might like to feature or a state legislative leader?

New Report: Nationwide Access to High-Quality Pre-K Remains Low Despite Small Gains in Enrollment and Rising Standards

National Institute for Early Education Research Urges Federal and State Legislators to Prioritize State-Funded Pre-K

NEW YORK—Many three- and four-year olds still lack access to high-quality preschool education despite modest gains in enrollment, quality, and funding, according to an annual report by the nonpartisan National Institute for Early Education Research (NIEER) at Rutgers University. While one state, New York, made dramatic progress through a concerted effort to increase enrollment and funding and improve quality, the slow and uneven progress is mostly due to three states—California, Florida and Texas—that serve nearly 40 percent of all children in the U.S. and are failing on enrollment, quality, and funding.

Comment [L1]: Will insert hyperlink

The State of Preschool Report for the 2014-2015 school year, which includes objective state-by-state profiles and rankings, indicates that urgent action is needed from lawmakers at all levels of government to ensure that every child – particularly those from low-income families – have access to high-quality early education. For the first year, NIEER also analyzed states' early education workforce and Dual Language Learner policies, which reveal FINDINGS.

"We're encouraged to see several states increasing in enrollment and improving quality, but access to high-quality pre-K in the United States remains low and highly unequal," said NIEER Director Steve Barnett. "Expanding access to quality pre-K programs is one of the best investments we can make, and it's critical that we raise and standardize salaries for early education teachers and have strong Dual language Learner policies in states with large Hispanic populations. State governments should increase and stabilize funding for pre-K and raise standards for the benefit of all children. For proof that it's possible, one need look no further than New York."

The report's findings indicate that many states have made significant strides in expanding pre-K programs, which were among the hardest hit by the Great Recession. With New York leading the way, total state spending on pre-K programs increased by 10 percent, or $553 million, since the previous year, bringing state spending in 2014-2015 to over $6.2 billion. New York's efforts to expand pre-K, in particular in New York City, accounted for two-thirds of this increase. In just one year, New York added over 13,000 new spaces in its pre-K programs, expanded access to full-day services, and allocated $358 million dollars to improve quality.

The number of children served by state-funded pre-K served increased by 37,167 in 2014-2105, bringing the total to almost 1.4 million children – the largest number of children ever served by state-funded pre-K. With an average rate of $4,489, states also made one of the most significant increases in spending per child in recent history. In New York, funding per child increased by 70 percent. The report also indicates that several states made significant progress in terms of quality, with two states – West Virginia and Mississippi – reaching all 10 of the report’s quality standards benchmarks for the first time.

Despite these gains, the report’s findings underscore that those states like California, Florida, and Texas with the largest populations of young children are falling behind. These three states were among the states that met the fewest quality standards benchmarks. Texas and Florida also reduced enrollment and spending in 2014-2015.

NIEER released the report at an event in New York City with Mayor Bill de Blasio, Deputy Assistant Secretary for Policy and Early Learning at the U.S. Department of Education Dr. Libby Doggett, TKTKTK Secretary of Education John B. King Jr. appeared at the event via video.

Comment [L2]: To be filled in one finalized.

Sec. King Dr. Doggett said, “Quality early education programs nurture children’s cognitive, social, and emotional development to enhance their lives now and in the future. In the long run, this increases achievement, makes kids more likely to stay in school, decreases social problems, and leads to higher earnings. It’s heartening to see several states—led by both Republican and Democratic governors—commit to improving their pre-K programs. While we still have a lot of work ahead of us to ensure that all kids have access to high-quality pre-K, this year’s report indicates that many states are moving in the right direction.”

Enrollment nationwide has risen by just one percentage point for both four- and three-year olds over five years. The sluggish pace of change disproportionately impacted low-income families. At this year’s growth rate, it will be decades before all children in low-income families are enrolled. Across all income levels, it would take 150 years to reach 70 percent enrollment.

Comment [L3]: To be updated based on new numbers.

While most pre-K funding comes from state government budgets, local and federal governments also contribute to these programs. The Every Student Succeeds Act (ESSA), which Congress passed in December 2015, encourages state funding of early education by making federal grants available to states for quality pre-K programs. The NIEER report’s findings suggest that the federal government should provide additional incentives to states to fund high-quality pre-K to make more spots available and ensure that children enrolled receive excellent services.

Other key findings of The State of Preschool 2015 yearbook include:

- Across all public programs—Pre-K general and special education enrollments plus federally funded Head Start—at most 41 percent of 4-year-olds and 16 percent of 3-year-olds were served.

- Arkansas, Connecticut, Michigan, New York, South Carolina and Vermont added five percent or more to enrollment in 2014-2015.
- Mississippi, Indiana and Hawaii made notable new efforts in the 2014-2015 year.
- New York, DC, Michigan, Ohio, Connecticut, Washington, Alabama, New Mexico, California and Arizona increased funding by $10 million during the same period.
- Six states – Alabama, Alaska, North Carolina, Rhode Island, Mississippi and West Virginia – and one of Louisiana’s programs met all 10 of our quality benchmarks, up from four states in the previous school year; and 24 states met at least eight. West Virginia and Mississippi are the newest states to meet all 10 benchmarks.
- Five states met fewer than half of the benchmarks – California, Ohio and Vermont met four; Florida met three; and Texas met only two.

The State of Preschool Yearbook reviews state-funded pre-K programs on 10 benchmarks of quality standards, including the presence of a qualified instructor, class size, teacher-to-student ratio, presence of an assistant, and length of instruction per day.

Here you go with proposed quote for the Mayor highlighted in blue.

Here is our plan for run of show for the event.

Welcome from program director, my remarks (3-5 min), Mayor, business person if possible, labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible). Q and A. Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera). Then go to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Alternatives as speakers--representative from US DOE (Sec. King not available) or Jacqueline Jones from the Foundation for Child Development, or a parent.

Does the Mayor's office have a business representative they might like to feature or a state legislative leader?

Hi Eric,

Hope you're well and had a nice weekend. Wanted to check in on the below, and also share with you an op-ed that we would love for the Mayor to co-sign. It's attached here – would Mayor de Blasio and your office be open to that? We'd welcome feedback and edits, if so, and we're hoping to place in a high-value NYC target around the release.

Additionally, attached is the NYC section of the executive summary in the report, for reference.

Let me know if you have any questions, and what we can move forward on. Thanks!

Hi Eric,

Thanks for checking in. Attached is the most recent version of the release, with the proposed quote for the Mayor below:

“High quality early education is a necessity, not a luxury,” said New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio. “Here in New York, we’ve seen first hand that action by state governments can lift enrollment and quality for thousands of children in our communities. At a time of political polarization, these initiatives receive wide bipartisan support – and for good reason. There’s no better way to ensure future success for our kids and our states.”

Steve, can you also send Eric the most up to date version of the report when you have a moment?

For the run of show, we are suggesting:

- Welcome from program director
- Steve's remarks (3-5 min)
- The Mayor
- Tentative: Either labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible) or business leader
- Libby Doggett from the DOE

- Q and A
- Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera).
- Then Mayor goes to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Let me know what else we can get you.

Thanks,

Leslie

Other States Should Learn from New York on Early Education

By Steve Barnett [\[and Mayor Bill de Blasio\]](#)

At a time of particularly divisive politics in our country, there's widespread bipartisan agreement about at least one thing: smart early investments in our kids pay off for their future, our communities, and our economy. But with quality preschool still out of reach for millions of children, it's clear that we still have a long way to go. Preschool enrolment in the United States falls well below that of other developed countries, and those who need these services most – children from low-income families – have the least access to strong early education programs.

Here in New York, lawmakers have taken decisive action to ensure that every child has the opportunity to enroll in a high-quality preschool program that will pave the way for future success. New York has opened new classrooms across the state and expanded access to full-day services in New York City. New York City's Pre-K for All now serves 68,647 children, or 70% of the city's 4-year-olds in full-day prekindergarten, an increase of more than 250% in just two years while improving program quality. In early education, quality is just as important as quantity.

It's time for other states to follow New York's lead.

A new report from the National Institute for Early Education Research (NIEER) at Rutgers University finds that gains in enrollment and efforts to improve quality aren't keeping pace with the pressing need for these services. Though total state spending on pre-K programs has risen by 10 percent since the 2013-2014 school year, New York alone accounted for two-thirds of this increase.

[Comment \[L1\]: Hyperlink](#)

[Comment \[L2\]: Hyperlink](#)

Meanwhile, states with the largest populations of young children are falling behind. California, Florida, and Texas are home to nearly 40 percent of all children served by pre-K, but the report finds these three states were also among the lowest in terms of quality standards. Texas and Florida also reduced enrollment and spending while California showed signs of improvement.

A closer look at the national picture is equally troubling. Enrollment for three and four year olds crept up during the 2014-2015 school year, but an increase of less than one percentage point each year just isn't going to cut it – especially not for the low-income families who benefit most from these programs. At the current pace, it take the nation more than a century to reach the enrollment rate NYC achieved in just two years of expansion.

There are pockets of hope throughout the country. Six states – Alabama, Alaska, North Carolina, Rhode Island, Mississippi, and West Virginia – and one of Louisiana's programs met all 10 of NIEER's quality benchmarks, up from four states in the previous school year, and 24 states met at least eight. And, as state-funded pre-K begins to grow again, a bipartisan group of governors leads the way, from Alabama to New Mexico, which added significant funding. Six of the 10 leading states for enrollment are led by Republican Governors.

Change is coming for U.S. children, but at a glacial pace. The nation pays a high price for this delay. It's hard to believe, but a kindergartener's math and reading skills often predict his or her success throughout school. Early childhood is the worst time to fall behind. Our failure to make quality preschool accessible to every child helps explain why these achievement gaps have stubbornly persisted since the 1960's. Young children and their families need immediate action from elected officials at all levels of government to make early education a real priority.

The good news is that the solution is simple: high-quality, universal preschool.

A recent report from the Center for American Progress estimates that access to these programs would significantly reduce the achievement gap between low- and high-income children beginning kindergarten. For African American and Latino kindergarteners, access to high-quality pre-K has the potential to close the achievement gap in reading entirely and lessen the gap in math by large percentages. In addition to improving performance in school, research indicates that access to early education for low-income children increases productivity when they enter the workforce – further strengthening their chance of finding a good job and boosting American businesses in the process.

Every child deserves a level playing field when they start school, and that's exactly what access to high-quality preschool promises to children. To see that it's possible to make dramatic progress toward that goal in a short amount of time, just look at New York.

W. Steven Barnett is a Board of Governors Professor and Director of the National Institute for Early Education Research at Rutgers University.

[Mayor Bill de Blasio is the 109th Mayor of New York City.]

Pre-K for All is New York City's historic initiative to provide free, full-day, high-quality pre-kindergarten to every four-year-old in the city. Prior to expansion, 19,287 children attended full-day pre-kindergarten in New York City. The 2014-2015 school year marked the first year of the two-year expansion with 53,120 four-year-olds enrolled in pre-k. Enrollment is high across every community, with the highest participation among low-income families. In 2015-2016 the City's enrolled 68,647 children—a number more than triple the children who attended before expansion and larger than the entire school population of major cities like Boston--about 70 percent of all 4's in the City.

Pre-K for All is delivered in public and privately operated settings including district schools, charters, and independent organizations that contract with the City. Pre-k students receive a full day of education—6 hours and 20 minutes--for 180 days grounded in the Prekindergarten Foundation for the Common Core, the New York State pre-K learning standards covering all aspects of a child's development and learning. The NYCDOE supports all pre-k programs with differentiated support at both the classroom and program level. This includes: targeted professional learning for lead teachers, assistant teachers, and paraprofessionals, on-site support for leaders and teachers, resources, and guidance from 100 Instructional Coordinators and 125 Social Workers.

The expansion required significant investments in new educators, spaces, programming and oversight across more than a dozen City agencies. In the first year of expansion, New York City facilitated the opening of new sites, recruitment and development of new teachers, rigorous multi-agency inspections to ensure quality and safety, and extensive outreach to families to encourage enrollment in new programs.

The city's model is designed to ensure a sustainable high-quality workforce by recruiting, training, and retaining qualified teachers and administrators. All lead teachers have at least a BA, and are either certified or on a study plan for full certification. In order to retain highly qualified teachers, the NYCDOE encourages NYCEECs to pay competitive salaries and took extra steps to increase pay for pre-K teachers across the system with a goal of moving toward parity wherever possible.

Think it is important to say up front that he can raise money from those who do business with the City and would suggest working your background into the statement.

"The COIB letter clearly states solicitations from people who do business with the City are permissible while solicitations cannot be made of someone "with a matter pending or about to be pending" before the City. The Mayor scrupulously followed COIB's guidance."

Thoughts?

i wuld like to craft a response that mirrors what Henry wrote -

Courtney blatantly misstates the language from the COIB letter to reach an entirely incorrect conclusion
The letter specifically permits hi to solicit funds from people who do business with the City except from a person "with a matter pending or about to be pending" before the City.
And he scrupulously complied with that prohibition.

Stmnt -- "The COIB letter is clear that solicitations cannot be made of someone "with a matter pending or about to be pending" before the City, and the mayor scrupulously followed that guidance."

Background - The letter specifically permits solicitations from people who do business with the City - the letter does not require a blanket ban,

Ok, so like I said in my message we have been reviewing the donations and have found nearly 80 where the entity/individual had business before the city, was lobbying the city or was a union with a city contract.

In the original letter BDB got for approval to fundraise for the campaign for one new York, it specifically states he cannot solicit donations from people with business before the city or pending business before the city. (I attached the letter for your reference).

The donations clearly violate that. Some examples:

Thousands of dollars from the taxi industry in the midst of the uber fight

Thousands from school bus companies

DDG development 10 grand donation as they look for a variance

Domino

DC 37

1199

Developers affiliated with the construction of the Brooklyn library

360 tenth ave llc...

And I have a bunch more.

So here are the questions:

Did the mayor personally solicit money from these people?

Do these donation violate the waiver from COIB?

Importance: High

Can you send me the initial letter BDB received from COIB to set up the Campaign for One New York?

If you could send it ASAP, that would be great.

Thanks!

Hope your vacation was good.

Ok, so like I said in my message we have been reviewing the donations and have found nearly 80 where the entity/individual had business before the city, was lobbying the city or was a union with a city contract.

In the original letter BDB got for approval to fundraise for the campaign for one new York, it specifically states he cannot solicit donations from people with business before the city or pending business before the city. (I attached the letter for your reference).

The donations clearly violate that. Some examples:

Thousands of dollars from the taxi industry in the midst of the uber fight

Thousands from school bus companies

DDG development 10 grand donation as they look for a variance

Domino

1199

Developers affiliated with the construction of the Brooklyn library

360 tenth ave llc...

And I have a bunch more.

So here are the questions:

Did the mayor personally solicit money from these people?

Do these donation violate the waiver from COIB?

I just made a similar change that has the same effect. Let's combine them and go with the following:

"The COIB letter is clear. It permits solicitations of people who do business with the City. It only bars the solicitation of someone "with a matter pending or about to be pending" before the City. There was a process in place to insure that this guidance was scrupulously followed."

One New York COIB Letter

Ok, so like I said in my message we have been reviewing the donations and have found nearly 80 where the entity/individual had business before the city, was lobbying the city or was a union with a city contract.

In the original letter BDB got for approval to fundraise for the campaign for one new York, it specifically states he cannot solicit donations from people with business before the city or pending business before the city. (I attached the letter for your reference).

The donations clearly violate that. Some examples:

Thousands of dollars from the taxi industry in the midst of the uber fight

Thousands from school bus companies

DDG development 10 grand donation as they look for a variance

Domino

1199

Developers affiliated with the construction of the Brooklyn library

360 tenth ave llc...

And I have a bunch more.

So here are the questions:

Did the mayor personally solicit money from these people?

Do these donation violate the waiver from COIB?

Ok, so like I said in my message we have been reviewing the donations
and
found nearly 80

city

original letter
BDB got for approval to fundraise for the campaign for one new York, it specifically states he cannot solicit donations
from people with business
before the city or pending
the city. (I attached
the letter
for your reference).

The donations
clearly violate that.
Some examples:

Thousands
dollars from the taxi industry in the midst of the uber fight

Thousands
school bus companies
DDG development 10 grand donation as they look for a variance
Domino

Developers affiliated

And I have a bunch
more.

So here are the questions:

Did the mayor personally solicit

She called me and i gave off record thumbnail of statement. This is what she sent back.

Here are just two examples for my story tonight.

Hudson Companies gives in Febraury 2014
They are selected to build the Brooklyn library in September of that year.

1199 gives 250,000 in march of 2014. There contract is signed in June

Park tower group gives in march 2015. The renegotiated deal for greenpoint landing is done in July 1 of that year.

Then, there are obviously dozens of examples of people who are just lobbying the city.

Head Of Suffolk Dems: De Blasio Was Wrong In Fundraising Methods

CBS LOCAL – Marcia Kramer

<http://newyork.cbslocal.com/2016/05/02/de-blasio-fundraising-suffolk/>

The head of the Suffolk County Democratic Committee had a terse message for Mayor Bill de Blasio Monday – “You’re wrong.”

As CBS2 Political Reporter Marcia Kramer reported, Richard Schaffer said it is not a “normal thing” to accept checks that appear to skirt campaign finance laws.

Schaffer said he took immediate action when Steve Allinger, a lobbyist for the New York state teachers’ union, tried to give him a check for $100,000. The check was issued on the proviso that it be earmarked – sent to 2014 Democratic state senate candidate Adrienne Esposito.

“My take was that it was illegal,” Schaffer said. “If I had taken the action and followed with what they had said they wanted me to do, that I would be committing a violation of the campaign finance law, which is a criminal violation.”

It was a surprising disclosure, since in 2014, Mayor de Blasio was involved in a frantic campaign to help Democrats take control of the New York State Senate. The Esposito race was apparently key to his success.

“It was one of the targeted races that was being targeted in order to flip the senate to the Democrats,” Schaffer said.

The actions of team de Blasio are being investigated by state and federal prosecutors to see if donors, including labor unions, made large contributions to local county committees to evade the $10,300 individual donation limit.

When CBS2’s Kramer first asked de Blasio about his fundraising in October 2014, the mayor said his actions were completely acceptable campaign practice.

“It’s something that’s been going on a long time in this state,” de Blasio said at the time. “It’s a normal thing to provide support for party organizations.”

De Blasio denied that any “pay to play” was involved in his fundraising efforts.

“There’s nothing new here,” de Blasio said. “For years and years, people have supported party organizations.”

Schaffer, an attorney, said he disagreed – and that is why he sent the contribution back.

“At the outset, as soon as they said, ‘We’re sending you the money and we want you to spend it on Esposito,’ I knew that that was a violation,” Schaffer said.

Kramer asked Schaffer whether he was ever tempted to take the money, given that the race was hotly contested.

“As I’ve always said, the most important thing to me is my law license, and I’m not going to do anything to jeopardize that,” he replied.

When Kramer reached Allinger, he angrily referred her to the union office. A spokesman there insisted the union “has a long track record of adhering to the laws governing political action and campaign finance.”

The spokesman refused to say whether the union had received a subpoena. Schaffer said he will gladly talk to prosecutors.

Note the cut on Q&A and, when you can, please send me the title of the book at least a few days beforehand

"High-quality early education is a necessity, not a luxury," said New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio. "Here in New York, we've seen firsthand that action by city and state governments can lift enrollment and the quality of education for tens of thousands of children in our communities. At a time of political polarization, these initiatives receive wide bipartisan support – and for good reason. There's no better way to ensure future success for our kids and our states than to invest in their early education."

Hi Eric,

Hope you're well and had a nice weekend. Wanted to check in on the below, and also share with you an op-ed that we would love for the Mayor to co-sign. It's attached here – would Mayor de Blasio and your office be open to that? We'd welcome feedback and edits, if so, and we're hoping to place in a high-value NYC target around the release.

Additionally, attached is the NYC section of the executive summary in the report, for reference.

Let me know if you have any questions, and what we can move forward on. Thanks!

Hi Eric,

Thanks for checking in. Attached is the most recent version of the release, with the proposed quote for the Mayor below:

“High quality early education is a necessity, not a luxury,” said New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio. “Here in New York, we’ve seen first hand that action by state governments can lift enrollment and quality for thousands of children in our communities. At a time of political polarization, these initiatives receive wide bipartisan support – and for good reason. There’s no better way to ensure future success for our kids and our states.”

Steve, can you also send Eric the most up to date version of the report when you have a moment?

For the run of show, we are suggesting:

- Welcome from program director
- Steve's remarks (3-5 min)
- The Mayor
- Tentative: Either labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible) or business leader
- Libby Doggett from the DOE
- Q and A
- Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera).
- Then Mayor goes to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Let me know what else we can get you.

Thanks,

Here you go with proposed quote for the Mayor highlighted in blue.

Here is our plan for run of show for the event.

Welcome from program director, my remarks (3-5 min), Mayor, business person if possible, labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible). Q and A. Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera). Then go to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Alternatives as speakers--representative from US DOE (Sec. King not available) or Jacqueline Jones from the Foundation for Child Development, or a parent.

Does the Mayor's office have a business representative they might like to feature or a state legislative leader?

Hi Dan,

We're still working to finalize some of these details, but currently the plan is to hold the event in one of the classrooms at the Sugar Hill Museum preschool. There will be an area, possibly elevated, where the speakers make their remarks, and there would also be an area set up for the Mayor to read to a group of kids for a couple minutes in another portion of the room.

We're still working with the preschool to figure out which room and additional details, but do please let me know what specifics you'll need and also if the Mayor be bringing his own podium.

Thanks,

Leslie

Thanks, Leslie. I'll take a look at the piece and get back to you tomorrow on it. I edited the quote below, and it's approved to use with these small changes. I also edited the ROS, below that. Note the cut on Q&A and, when you can, please send me the title of the book at least a few days beforehand

"High-quality early education is a necessity, not a luxury," said New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio. "Here in New York, we've seen firsthand that action by city and state governments can lift enrollment and the quality of education for tens of thousands of children in our communities. At a time of political polarization, these initiatives receive wide bipartisan support – and for good reason. There's no better way to ensure future success for our kids and our states." than to invest in their early education."

- Welcome from program director
- Steve's remarks (3-5 min)
- The Mayor
- Tentative: Either labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible) or business leader
- Libby Doggett from the DOE
- Q and A
- Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera).
- Then Mayor goes to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Hi Eric,

Hope you're well and had a nice weekend. Wanted to check in on the below, and also share with you an op-ed that we would love for the Mayor to co-sign. It's attached here – would Mayor de Blasio and your office be open to that? We'd welcome feedback and edits, if so, and we're hoping to place in a high-value NYC target around the release.

Additionally, attached is the NYC section of the executive summary in the report, for reference.

Let me know if you have any questions, and what we can move forward on. Thanks!

Hi Eric,

Thanks for checking in. Attached is the most recent version of the release, with the proposed quote for the Mayor below:

“High quality early education is a necessity, not a luxury,” said New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio. “Here in New York, we’ve seen first hand that action by state governments can lift enrollment and quality for thousands of children in our communities. At a time of political polarization, these initiatives receive wide bipartisan support – and for good reason. There’s no better way to ensure future success for our kids and our states.”

Steve, can you also send Eric the most up to date version of the report when you have a moment?

For the run of show, we are suggesting:

- Welcome from program director
- Steve's remarks (3-5 min)
- The Mayor
- Tentative: Either labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible) or business leader
- Libby Doggett from the DOE
- Q and A
- Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera).
- Then Mayor goes to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Let me know what else we can get you.

Thanks,
Leslie

We have the speakers giving their remarks at a podium/elevated stage, an audience of maybe 50 people or so, including parents, the Mayor stepping off stage after the formal remarks to talk to a group of parents, and then the Mayor going to read to a group of kids in another part of the room. It will be a in a classroom, so the visuals of of a pre-K classroom at Sugar Hill Museum's preschool will be incorporated. The run of show we agreed on with Eric is:

- Welcome from program director
- Steve's remarks (3-5 min)
- The Mayor
- Tentative: Either labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible) or business leader
- Libby Doggett from the DOE
- Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera).
- Then Mayor goes to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

If that doesn't answer the question, can you let me know a little more specifically what you mean by visuals?

Thanks,
Leslie

Hi Dan,

We're still working to finalize some of these details, but currently the plan is to hold the event in one of the classrooms at the Sugar Hill Museum preschool. There will be an area, possibly elevated, where the speakers make their remarks, and there would also be an area set up for the Mayor to read to a group of kids for a couple minutes in another portion of the room.

We're still working with the preschool to figure out which room and additional details, but do please let me know what specifics you'll need and also if the Mayor be bringing his own podium.

Thanks,

Leslie

It's attached here – would Mayor de Blasio and your office be open to that? We'd welcome feedback and edits, if so, and we're hoping to place in a high-value NYC target around the release.

Additionally, attached is the NYC section of the executive summary in the report, for reference.

Hi Eric,

Thanks for checking in. Attached is the most recent version of the release, with the proposed quote for the Mayor below:

“High quality early education is a necessity, not a luxury,” said New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio. “Here in New York, we’ve seen first hand that action by state governments can lift enrollment and quality for thousands of children in our communities. At a time of political polarization, these initiatives receive wide bipartisan support – and for good reason. There’s no better way to ensure future success for our kids and our states.”

Steve, can you also send Eric the most up to date version of the report when you have a moment?

For the run of show, we are suggesting:

- Welcome from program director
- Steve's remarks (3-5 min)
- The Mayor
- Tentative: Either labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible) or business leader
- Libby Doggett from the DOE
- Q and A
- Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done

Here you go with proposed quote for the Mayor highlighted in blue.

Here is our plan for run of show for the event.

Welcome from program director, my remarks (3-5 min), Mayor, business person if possible, labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible). Q and A. Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera). Then go to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Alternatives as speakers--representative from US DOE (Sec. King not available) or Jacqueline Jones from the Foundation for Child Development, or a parent.

Does the Mayor's office have a business representative they might like to feature or a state legislative leader?

Can you forward the full contact info for Devora and Jessica from DOE and CH communications.

He has a couple questions related to other elected officials, prominent figures to include at the event. Is that the sort of thing that Devora and Jessica can field – or should that type of question come to you?

Just trying to keep things simple,

Here you go with proposed quote for the Mayor highlighted in blue.

Here is our plan for run of show for the event.

Welcome from program director, my remarks (3-5 min), Mayor, business person if possible, labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible). Q and A. Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera). Then go to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Alternatives as speakers--representative from US DOE (Sec. King not available) or Jacqueline Jones from the Foundation for Child Development, or a parent.

Does the Mayor's office have a business representative they might like to feature or a state legislative leader?

Hi Dan,

We're still working to finalize some of these details, but currently the plan is to hold the event in one of the classrooms at the Sugar Hill Museum preschool. There will be an area, possibly elevated, where the speakers make their remarks, and there would also be an area set up for the Mayor to read to a group of kids for a couple minutes in another portion of the room.

We're still working with the preschool to figure out which room and additional details, but do please let me know what specifics you'll need and also if the Mayor be bringing his own podium.

Thanks,

Leslie

Thanks, Leslie. I'll take a look at the piece and get back to you tomorrow on it. I edited the quote below, and it's approved to use with these small changes. I also edited the ROS, below that. Note the cut on Q&A and, when you can, please send me the title of the book at least a few days beforehand

"High-quality early education is a necessity, not a luxury," said New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio. "Here in New York, we've seen firsthand that action by city and state governments can lift enrollment and the quality of education for tens of thousands of children in our communities. At a time of political polarization, these initiatives receive wide bipartisan support – and for good reason. There's no better way to ensure future success for our kids and our states than to invest in their early education."

- Welcome from program director
- Steve's remarks (3-5 min)
- The Mayor
- Tentative: Either labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible) or business leader
- Libby Doggett from the DOE
- Q and A
- Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera).
- Then Mayor goes to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Hi Eric,

Hope you're well and had a nice weekend. Wanted to check in on the below, and also share with you an op-ed that we would love for the Mayor to co-sign. It's attached here – would Mayor de Blasio and your office be open to that? We'd welcome feedback and edits, if so, and we're hoping to place in a high-value NYC target around the release.

Additionally, attached is the NYC section of the executive summary in the report, for reference.

Let me know if you have any questions, and what we can move forward on. Thanks!

Hi Eric,

Thanks for checking in. Attached is the most recent version of the release, with the proposed quote for the Mayor below:

“High quality early education is a necessity, not a luxury,” said New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio. “Here in New York, we’ve seen first hand that action by state governments can lift enrollment and quality for thousands of children in our communities. At a time of political polarization, these initiatives receive wide bipartisan support – and for good reason. There’s no better way to ensure future success for our kids and our states.”

Steve, can you also send Eric the most up to date version of the report when you have a moment?

For the run of show, we are suggesting:

- Welcome from program director
- Steve's remarks (3-5 min)
- The Mayor
- Tentative: Either labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible) or business leader
- Libby Doggett from the DOE
- Q and A
- Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera).
- Then Mayor goes to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Let me know what else we can get you.

Thanks,

Leslie

Hi Stefan and Javon,

Yes, I don't think that should be a problem. Let me know what day/time you were thinking and I can see if someone from the preschool can do a walkthrough with you.

Javon – please also see my questions below and let me know the answers when you have a moment.

Thanks,

Leslie

Hi Dan,

Wanted to make sure you saw this last week. Let me know if you have any questions on it. Also made a couple updates based on new confirmed speakers.

Also wanted to raise a question about timing – we are a little worried about parents starting to come pick up their kids from preschool in the middle of our event. I wonder if there's any possibility of bumping the event up to 1pm or 1:15pm. Understand if the Mayor's schedule doesn't allow for that, but let us know if there's any flexibility.

Additionally, as soon as you can, we need a list of who will be accompanying the Mayor or, at the least, a number of how many people will be with him.

Please let me know when you have a moment.

Thanks,
Leslie

We have the speakers giving their remarks at a podium/elevated stage, an audience of maybe 50 people or so, including parents, the Mayor stepping off stage after the formal remarks to talk to a group of parents, and then the Mayor going to read to a group of kids in another part of the room. It will be in a classroom, so the visuals of a pre-K classroom at Sugar Hill Museum's preschool will be incorporated. The run of show we agreed on with Eric is:

- Welcome from program director
- Steve's remarks (3-5 min)
- The Mayor
- Randi Weingarten, AFT
- Michael S. Hall, Major General, U.S. Air Force (Retired)
- Libby Doggett from the DOE
- Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera).
- Then Mayor goes to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

If that doesn't answer the question, can you let me know a little more specifically what you mean by visuals?

Thanks,
Leslie

Hi Dan,

We're still working to finalize some of these details, but currently the plan is to hold the event in one of the classrooms at the Sugar Hill Museum preschool. There will be an area, possibly elevated, where the speakers make their remarks, and there would also be an area set up for the Mayor to read to a group of kids for a couple minutes in another portion of the room.

We're still working with the preschool to figure out which room and additional details, but do please let me know what specifics you'll need and also if the Mayor be bringing his own podium.

Thanks,

Leslie

Thanks, Leslie. I'll take a look at the piece and get back to you tomorrow on it. I edited the quote below, and it's approved to use with these small changes. I also edited the ROS, below that. Note the cut on Q&A and, when you can, please send me the title of the book at least a few days beforehand

"High-quality early education is a necessity, not a luxury," said New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio. "Here in New York, we've seen firsthand that action by city and state governments can lift enrollment and the quality of education for tens of thousands of children in our communities. At a time of political polarization, these initiatives receive wide bipartisan support – and for good reason. There's no better way to ensure future success for our kids and our states than to invest in their early education."

- Welcome from program director
- Steve's remarks (3-5 min)
- The Mayor
- Tentative: Either labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible) or business leader
- Libby Doggett from the DOE
- Q and A
- Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera).
- Then Mayor goes to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Hi Eric,

Hope you're well and had a nice weekend. Wanted to check in on the below, and also share with you an op-ed that we would love for the Mayor to co-sign. It's attached here – would Mayor de Blasio and your office be open to that? We'd welcome feedback and edits, if so, and we're hoping to place in a high-value NYC target around the release.

Additionally, attached is the NYC section of the executive summary in the report, for reference.

Let me know if you have any questions, and what we can move forward on. Thanks!

Hi Eric,

Thanks for checking in. Attached is the most recent version of the release, with the proposed quote for the Mayor below:

“High quality early education is a necessity, not a luxury,” said New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio. “Here in New York, we’ve seen first hand that action by state governments can lift enrollment and quality for thousands of children in our communities. At a time of political polarization, these initiatives receive wide bipartisan support – and for good reason. There’s no better way to ensure future success for our kids and our states.”

Steve, can you also send Eric the most up to date version of the report when you have a moment?

For the run of show, we are suggesting:

- Welcome from program director
- Steve's remarks (3-5 min)
- The Mayor
- Tentative: Either labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible) or business leader
- Libby Doggett from the DOE
- Q and A
- Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera).
- Then Mayor goes to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Let me know what else we can get you.

Thanks,
Leslie

Here you go with proposed quote for the Mayor highlighted in blue.

Here is our plan for run of show for the event.

Welcome from program director, my remarks (3-5 min), Mayor, business person if possible, labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible). Q and A. Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera). Then go to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Alternatives as speakers--representative from US DOE (Sec. King not available) or Jacqueline Jones from the Foundation for Child Development, or a parent.

Does the Mayor's office have a business representative they might like to feature or a state legislative leader?

Can you forward the full contact info for Devora and Jessica from DOE and CH communications.

He has a couple questions related to other elected officials, prominent figures to include at the event. Is that the sort of thing that Devora and Jessica can field – or should that type of question come to you?

Hi Leslie, we will move the timing on our end to 1:15. Would we need to cut the book reading on the back end. Also, can you have someone from your team join Javon for the walkthrough?

Would someone be able to do a walkthrough with my colleague Javon Coney, cc'ed here, today? He is going to be lead on this event from my team.

Hi Dan,

Wanted to make sure you saw this last week. Let me know if you have any questions on it. Also made a couple updates based on new confirmed speakers.

Also wanted to raise a question about timing – we are a little worried about parents starting to come pick up their kids from preschool in the middle of our event. I wonder if there's any possibility of bumping the event up to 1pm or 1:15pm. Understand if the Mayor's schedule doesn't allow for that, but let us know if there's any flexibility.

Additionally, as soon as you can, we need a list of who will be accompanying the Mayor or, at the least, a number of how many people will be with him.

Please let me know when you have a moment.

Thanks,
Leslie

We have the speakers giving their remarks at a podium/elevated stage, an audience of maybe 50 people or so, including parents, the Mayor stepping off stage after the formal remarks to talk to a group of parents, and then the Mayor going to read to a group of kids in another part of the room. It will be in a classroom, so the visuals of a pre-K classroom at Sugar Hill Museum's preschool will be incorporated. The run of show we agreed on with Eric is:

- Welcome from program director
- Steve's remarks (3-5 min)
- The Mayor
- Randi Weingarten, AFT
- Michael S. Hall, Major General, U.S. Air Force (Retired)
- Libby Doggett from the DOE
- Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera).
- Then Mayor goes to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

If that doesn't answer the question, can you let me know a little more specifically what you mean by visuals?

Thanks,
Leslie

Hi Dan,

We're still working to finalize some of these details, but currently the plan is to hold the event in one of the classrooms at the Sugar Hill Museum preschool. There will be an area, possibly elevated, where the speakers make their remarks, and there would also be an area set up for the Mayor to read to a group of kids for a couple minutes in another portion of the room.

We're still working with the preschool to figure out which room and additional details, but do please let me know what specifics you'll need and also if the Mayor be bringing his own podium.

Thanks,
Leslie

Thanks, Leslie. I'll take a look at the piece and get back to you tomorrow on it. I edited the quote below, and it's approved to use with these small changes. I also edited the ROS, below that. Note the cut on Q&A and, when you can, please send me the title of the book at least a few days beforehand

"High-quality early education is a necessity, not a luxury," said New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio. "Here in New York, we've seen firsthand that action by city and state governments can lift enrollment and the quality of education for tens of thousands of children in our communities. At a time of political polarization, these initiatives receive wide bipartisan support – and for good reason. There's no better way to ensure future success for our kids and our states." than to invest in their early education."

- Welcome from program director
- Steve's remarks (3-5 min)
- The Mayor
- Tentative: Either labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible) or business leader
- Libby Doggett from the DOE
- Q and A
- Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera).
- Then Mayor goes to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Hope you're well and had a nice weekend. Wanted to check in on the below, and also share with you an op-ed that we would love for the Mayor to co-sign. It's attached here – would Mayor de Blasio and your office be open to that? We'd welcome feedback and edits, if so, and we're hoping to place in a high-value NYC target around the release.

Additionally, attached is the NYC section of the executive summary in the report, for reference.

Let me know if you have any questions, and what we can move forward on. Thanks!

Hi Eric,

Thanks for checking in. Attached is the most recent version of the release, with the proposed quote for the Mayor below:

“High quality early education is a necessity, not a luxury,” said New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio. “Here in New York, we’ve seen first hand that action by state governments can lift enrollment and quality for thousands of children in our communities. At a time of political polarization, these initiatives receive wide bipartisan support – and for good reason. There’s no better way to ensure future success for our kids and our states.”

Steve, can you also send Eric the most up to date version of the report when you have a moment?

For the run of show, we are suggesting:

- Welcome from program director
- Steve's remarks (3-5 min)
- The Mayor
- Tentative: Either labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible) or business leader
- Libby Doggett from the DOE
- Q and A
- Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera).
- Then Mayor goes to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Let me know what else we can get you.

Thanks,

Leslie

Here is our plan for run of show for the event.

Welcome from program director, my remarks (3-5 min), Mayor, business person if possible, labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible). Q and A. Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera). Then go to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Alternatives as speakers--representative from US DOE (Sec. King not available) or Jacqueline Jones from the Foundation for Child Development, or a parent.

Does the Mayor's office have a business representative they might like to feature or a state legislative leader?

IMPROVED ACCESS TO QUALITY PRE-K IN NEW YORK OUTPACES OTHER STATES

New York's Gains Serve as Example for Others to Follow

[NEW YORK, NY]—Many 3- and 4-year olds still lack access to high-quality preschool education despite modest gains in enrollment, quality, and funding, according to an annual report by the nonpartisan National Institute for Early Education Research (NIEER) at Rutgers University. While several states, including New York, made significant progress through a concerted effort to increase enrollment and funding and improve quality, progress is slow and uneven nationally and quality standards are particularly low for some of the nation's largest states like California, Florida and Texas. Despite the relatively good news this year, the rate of progress is so slow that it will take 150 years for the nation to reach 75 percent enrollment in state pre-K even at age 4.

Comment [1]: Will insert hyperlink

In New York State, enrollment was up by 13,210 children in 2014-2015, a 13 percent increase overall, with a surge in full-day services and the overall pre-K investment nearly doubling. There was no change in terms of quality standards— the state met 7 of NIEER's 10 minimum quality standards benchmarks. However, the latest expansion included supplemental funding to support quality improvement strategies as part-day seats were converted to full-day. New York has made substantial efforts to increase funding for the state's early learners, accounting for two-thirds of the overall national increase in state preschool funding. Governor Cuomo made a commitment to achieving access to universal pre-K within five years, and promised to fund every district that came forward with a plan for quality implementation. In the 2014-2015 school year, the state increased funding by $364M to expand early childhood education, and continued to grow in 2015-2016 with another funding increase of $30M to increase enrollment in high-needs districts

The most remarkable expansion in 2014 occurred in New York City, which built from an already strong base to increase access to a full day and raise quality under Mayor de Blasio's leadership. Through diligent effort on the part of the entire early education community, in the last two years, the city added more than 50,000 full-day opportunities through conversions of half day to full-day slots and new seats.

"New York City has proven that by working with a wide array of parties, from community leaders to developers and faith-based groups it is possible to identify capacity quickly and execute plans to good effect," said NIEER director Steve Barnett. "The result is that the number of full-day seats in community settings grew tenfold, expanding families' choices with an array of options in museums, libraries and other community programs."

The State of Preschool report for the 2014-2015 school year, which includes objective state-by-state profiles and rankings, indicates that urgent action is needed from lawmakers at all levels of government to ensure that every child – particularly those from low-income families – have access to high-quality early education. For the first year, NIEER also analyzed states’ early education workforce and Dual Language Learner policies, which reveals that New York still has much more to do if it is to adequately support dual language learners and provide teachers salary parity with elementary education.

The report finds that for the nation as a whole, total state spending on pre-K programs increased by 10 percent, or $553 million, since the previous year, bringing state spending in 2014-2015 to over $6.2 billion. The number of children served by state-funded pre-K served increased by 37,167 in 2014-2015, bringing the total to almost 1.4 million children – the largest number of children ever served by state-funded pre-K. With an average rate of $4,489, states also made one of the most significant increases in spending per child in recent history.

Despite these gains, the report’s findings underscore that those states like California, Florida, and Texas with the largest populations of young children are falling behind—they were among the states that met the fewest quality standards benchmarks, and Texas and Florida also reduced enrollment and spending in 2014-2015. Nationally, enrollment has risen by just one percentage point for both 4- and 3-year olds over five years. The sluggish pace of change disproportionately impacts low-income families.

“We’re encouraged to see several states increasing in enrollment and improving quality, but access to high-quality pre-K in the United States remains low and highly unequal,” said Barnett. “Expanding access to quality pre-K programs is one of the best investments we can make, and it’s critical that we raise and standardize salaries for early education teachers and have strong Dual language Learner policies in states with large Hispanic populations. State governments should increase and stabilize funding for pre-K and raise standards for the benefit of all children.”

The State of Preschool Report reviews state-funded pre-K programs on 10 benchmarks of quality standards, including the presence of a qualified instructor, class size, teacher-to-student ratio, presence of an assistant, and length of instruction per day.

New Report: Nationwide Access to High-Quality Pre-K Remains Low Despite Small Gains in Enrollment and Rising Standards

National Institute for Early Education Research Urges Federal and State Legislators to Prioritize State-Funded Pre-K

NEW YORK—Many three- and four-year olds still lack access to high-quality preschool education despite modest gains in enrollment, quality, and funding, according to an annual report by the nonpartisan National Institute for Early Education Research (NIEER) at Rutgers University. While some states step forward, others drop back resulting in slow and uneven progress. One state, New York, made dramatic progress through a concerted effort to increase enrollment and funding and improve quality in New York City. Yet, three states—California, Florida and Texas—that enroll nearly 40 percent of all children in state-funded pre-K have particularly low quality standards. Florida and Texas also reduced funding in 2014-2015.

The State of Preschool Report for the 2014-2015 school year, which includes objective state-by-state profiles and rankings, indicates that urgent action is needed from lawmakers at all levels of government to ensure that every child – particularly those from low-income families – have access to high-quality early education. For the first year, NIEER also analyzed states' early education workforce and Dual Language Learner (DLL) policies. These new surveys reveal that pre-K teachers are much more poorly paid and supported than teachers of older children even when they have equivalent qualifications and few states have the policies needed to adequately educate the nearly one in four preschoolers who are Dual Language Learners.

"We're encouraged to see several states increasing in enrollment and improving quality, but access to high-quality pre-K in the United States remains low and highly unequal," said NIEER Director Steve Barnett. "Expanding access to quality pre-K programs is one of the best investments we can make, and it's critical that we raise salaries and benefits for early education teachers and ensure that teachers are prepared to support children from homes speaking a language other than English, including states with large Hispanic populations. State governments should increase and stabilize funding for pre-K and raise standards for the benefit of all children. For proof that it's possible, one need look no further than New York."

The report's findings indicate that many states have made significant strides in expanding pre-K programs, which were among the hardest hit by the Great Recession. With New York leading the way, total state spending on pre-K programs increased by 10 percent, or $553 million, since the previous year, bringing state spending in 2014-2015 to over $6.2 billion. New York's efforts to expand pre-K, in particular in New York City, accounted for two-thirds of this increase. In 2014-2015, New York added over 13,000 new spaces in its pre-K programs, expanded access to full-day services, and allocated an additional $358 million dollars to improve quality.

"High-quality early education is a necessity, not a luxury," said New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio. "Here in New York, we've seen firsthand that action by city and state governments can lift enrollment and the quality of education for tens of thousands of children in our communities. At a time of political polarization, these initiatives receive wide bipartisan support – and for good reason. There's no better way to ensure future success for our kids than to invest in their early education."

The number of children served by state-funded pre-K served increased by 37,167 in 2014-2105, bringing the total to almost 1.4 million children – the largest number of children ever served by state-funded pre-K. With an average rate of $4,489, states also made one of the most significant increases in spending per child in recent history. In New York, funding per child increased by 70 percent. The report also indicates that several states made significant progress in terms of quality, with two states – West Virginia and Mississippi – reaching all 10 of the report's minimum quality standards benchmarks for the first time.

Despite these gains, the report's findings underscore that those states like California, Florida, and Texas with the largest populations of young children are falling behind. These three states were among the states that met the fewest quality standards benchmarks and Texas and Florida both reduced enrollment and funding.

NIEER ~~released~~is releasing the report at an event in New York City with Mayor Bill de Blasio, Deputy Assistant Secretary for Policy and Early Learning at the U.S. Department of Education Dr. Libby Doggett, President of the American Federation of Teachers, Randi Weingarten, and retired Major General in the U.S. Air Force Michael S. Hall.

Dr. Doggett said, "Quality early education programs nurture children's cognitive, social, and emotional development to enhance their lives now and in the future. In the long run, this increases achievement, makes kids more likely to stay in school, decreases social problems, and leads to higher earnings. It's heartening to see several states—led by both Republican and Democratic governors—commit to improving their pre-K programs. While we still have a lot of work ahead of us to ensure that all kids have access to high-quality pre-K, this year's report indicates that many states are moving in the right direction."

Enrollment nationwide has risen by just one percentage point for both four- and three-year olds over five years. The sluggish pace of change disproportionately impacted low-income families. At this growth rate, it will be decades before all children in low-income families are enrolled. Across all income levels, it would take more than 150 years to reach 75 percent enrollment.

While most pre-K funding comes from state government budgets, local and federal governments also contribute to these programs. The Every Student Succeeds Act (ESSA), which Congress passed in December 2015, encourages state funding of early education by making federal grants available to states for quality pre-K programs. The NIEER report's findings suggest that the federal government should provide additional incentives to states to fund high-quality pre-K to decrease the large numbers of children left out.

Other key findings of The State of Preschool 2015 yearbook include:

- Across all public programs—Pre-K general and special education enrollments plus federally funded Head Start—at most 41 percent of 4-year-olds and 16 percent of 3-year-olds were served.
- Arkansas, Connecticut, Michigan, New York, South Carolina and Vermont added five percent or more to enrollment in 2014-2015.
- Mississippi, Indiana and Hawaii made notable new efforts in the 2014-2015 year.
- New York, DC, Michigan, Ohio, Connecticut, Washington, Alabama, New Mexico, California and Arizona increased funding by $10 million during the same period.
- Six states – Alabama, Alaska, North Carolina, Rhode Island, Mississippi and West Virginia – and one of Louisiana’s programs met all 10 of the quality standards benchmarks, up from four states in the previous school year; and 24 states met at least eight. West Virginia and Mississippi are the newest states to meet all 10 benchmarks.
- Five states met fewer than half of the benchmarks – California, Ohio and Vermont met four; Florida met three; and Texas met only two.

The State of Preschool Yearbook reviews state-funded pre-K programs on 10 benchmarks for minimum quality standards, including the presence of a qualified teacher and assistant, class size, teacher-to-student ratio, presence of an assistant, and length of instruction per day.

DID STATE PRE-K GET BACK ON TRACK IN 2015?

Nationally, the 2014-2015 school year showed continued improvement in state funded pre-K as states recovered from the Great Recession. Enrollment increased. More states met the benchmarks for minimum quality standards. State funding for pre-K increased: for the third year in a row, spending per child exceeded the previous year.

Does this mean that state funded pre-K is back on track after being derailed by the recession? In some states, the answer seems to be a clear “yes.” New York is the most obvious example, but other states made noteworthy progress with enrollment, quality standards, and funding. However, not all states moved forward. Some even moved backwards, including two of the nation’s most populous states, Texas and Florida. For the nation as a whole, this means that access to a high quality preschool program remained highly unequal, and this situation is unlikely to change in the foreseeable future unless many more states follow the leaders.

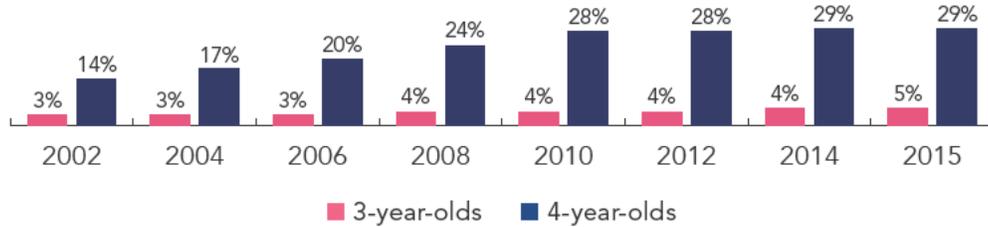

Table 1 summarizes the findings from this year’s report for enrollment, quality standards, and funding of state pre-K. We review findings for each of these three key aspects of state pre-K policy briefly below before considering “what’s new” in further detail.

Enrollment rose very modestly, growing by 37,167 children overall with most of the growth among 3-year-olds and just 7,091 4-year-olds added. New York, Michigan, South Carolina, and Alabama added large numbers of children at age four while Connecticut had a program newly qualify as state pre-K and Mississippi and Hawaii joined the states funding pre-K. Other states—Texas, Florida, Kentucky, Tennessee and Wisconsin-- decreased enrollment significantly.

Quality standards hit a new high. Five programs gained a quality standards benchmark and no programs lost benchmarks. Two Louisiana programs now meet the requirement for site visits as part of their program monitoring. Nebraska now requires that programs provide at least one meal per day and Missouri began requiring all teachers to receive at least 15 hours per year of professional development. West Virginia now meets all 10 benchmarks, and with Mississippi in the rankings for the first time, this raises to 7 the number of state programs that meet all ten of NIEER’s benchmarks for acceptable quality standards.

State funding for pre-K rose by more than $553 million in 2014-2015, adjusted for inflation, with almost two-thirds of this increase accounted for by New York. Total funding has now surpassed the peak pre-recession level, adjusting for inflation. States’ investments per child also continued an upward trend, with the largest single year increases in nearly a decade.

PERCENT OF NATIONAL POPULATION ENROLLED

AVERAGE STATE SPENDING PER CHILD ENROLLED (2015 DOLLARS)

WHAT'S NEW?

Resources:

- Total state funding for pre-K programs increased to $6.2 billion, an increase of more than $553 million across the 42 states plus D.C.<sup>1</sup> that offered pre-K in the 2014-2015 year, a 10 percent increase in real dollars. Two thirds of this increase comes from New York, up $358 million (inflation-adjusted) from the previous year, due largely to new investments in quality full-day preschool in New York City.
- State pre-K funding per child increased by $287 (inflation-adjusted) from the previous year to $4,489. New York again had a noticeable impact on the national average from its large increase in funding per child to raise quality and provide a full day.
- In addition to New York, Michigan increased funding by $62 million, and 8 other states reported increases of more than $10 million. On the other side, 4 states reported reductions in spending of more than $10 million each.

Enrollment:

- Nearly 1.4 million children attended state-funded pre-K, nearly 1.2 million at age 4. Almost five percent of 3-year-olds and 29 percent of 4-year-olds were served in state-funded pre-K.
- Across all public programs—Pre-K general and special education enrollments plus federally funded Head Start—41 percent of 4-year-olds and 16 percent of 3-year-olds were served. Since 2010, total enrollment in these programs at age 4 has risen by just one percentage point and enrollment at age 3 by one percentage point as well.
- Enrollment has grown little in recent years because unstable funding in many states does not support growth year after year. Instead, each year some states increased enrollment, while others made cuts. In 2014-15, 18 states (15 looking at just 3- and 4-year-olds) reduced enrollment with Florida, Tennessee, Texas, and Wisconsin cutting enrollment by more than 2,000 children each.

<sup>1</sup> For the sake of comparison, the District of Columbia will be referred to as a "state" throughout this report. Hence, there is a total of 43 states providing state funded pre K.

Quality:

- Five programs improved against NIEER's Quality Standards Benchmarks checklist and six states plus one program in Louisiana now meet all 10 benchmarks for minimum state pre-K quality standards. West Virginia and Mississippi are the newest states to earn all ten benchmarks.
- Also on the plus side, the states meeting all 10 minimums for quality standards include some with the highest percentages of children in poverty (e.g., AL, MS, LA, NC, and WV).
- On the downside, California, Texas, and Florida have the highest numbers of children in poverty, serve the largest numbers of children, and have some of the lowest quality standards in the nation.

Major Developments:

- Hawaii and Mississippi joined the vast majority of states in offering state-funded pre-K. Indiana began serving students in state-funded pre-K through two pilot initiatives in 2014. Although Indiana is not included in the rankings because these are small pilot programs, it is a noteworthy addition.
- New York's accelerated policy development sets an example for other states. In one year they added over 13,000 new spaces, greatly expanded access to full-day services, and put in place new policies and practices to support high quality. To do this, the state invested an additional $358 million dollars and raised funding per child by 70 percent.
- The District of Columbia served more 3- and 4-year-olds than ever in 2014-2015, but the percentage of the population served nevertheless fell. Census data reveal that the number of preschool age children (but not older children) in the District has increased since the District introduced new policies to support high quality pre-K for all. It appears families are voting with their feet (and housing choices) for high quality, full day, universal pre-K in the District of Columbia.
- Also good news is the continued expansion of California's Transitional Kindergarten, though not counted as state pre-K it serves children who are too young to enter kindergarten. By itself this program would add 77,274 children to the pre-K rolls, raising the national percentage served to 31 percent and adding $604 million to funding for a grand total of $6.8 billion nationally.

A CALL TO ACTION

State pre-K programs continued moving in the right direction during the 2014-2015 school year with larger increases in spending, spending per child, and enrollment than the previous year and additional states meeting more quality standards. States also moved off of the No Program list. However, state pre-K is still far from where it needs to be to ensure that all children receive a high quality education during the year (or two) before kindergarten.

Expansion of public pre-K is only a worthwhile public investment if children receive a high quality education. Unfortunately, even many of the states that have chosen to fund pre-K have not committed sufficient resources to fund a high quality program. Three of the four states with the largest populations of 3- and 4-year-olds rank toward the bottom on quality standards and spending per child. Florida stands out for offering universal pre-K funded at just $2,300 per child.

If young children are to receive the high quality education that leaves a sustained impact, state policies will have to change. Standards must be raised. Funding should be increased and stabilized. This will happen only if policy makers recognize that high quality pre-K is a necessity, not a luxury that can be passed over when the budget gets tight. Local and federal governments also can play a role in supporting improvements. Pre-K like public education generally depends on local and, to a lesser extent, federal government policy and funding, as well.

Where states have not led the way, cities often have taken up the challenge. From Boston to San Antonio, San Francisco to Seattle, cities have led the way on expanded access to higher quality pre-K. Hopefully, their states will follow with broader support. New York City provides an example of a city that successfully worked with its state to move an entire state forward, though it remains to be seen how much and how fast progress is extended to the rest of New York State.

Traditionally, the federal government has helped to lead by offering financial incentives for states to improve educational equity and excellence in education. The federal government also funds early childhood services for children in poverty directly through Head Start. Next year (2015-16) we expect to see the first impacts on states of the new federal Preschool Development Grant program that supports increased access to pre-K and which was subsequently included in the Every Student Succeeds Act.

Looking back across the years, it is evident that even this year's rate of progress is not enough to bring high quality pre-K to every child any time soon. Government at every level will need to redouble their efforts, and states, in particular, will have to move forward. Indeed, just one modest step taken by every state could ensure a much greater rate of progress: never take a step backwards. If every state kept a pledge to not cut funding, relax standards, or reduce enrollment, this alone could double annual progress.

BUILDING QUALITY PRE-K THE NEW YORK WAY

Pre-K for All is New York City's historic initiative to provide free, full-day, high-quality pre-kindergarten to every four-year-old in the city. Prior to expansion, 19,287 children attended full-day pre-kindergarten in New York City. The 2014-2015 school year marked the first year of the two-year expansion with 53,120 four-year-olds enrolled in pre-k. Enrollment is high across every community, with the highest participation among low-income families. In 2015-2016 the City enrolled 68,647 children—a number more than triple the children who attended before expansion and larger than the entire school population of major cities like Boston—about 70 percent of all 4's in the City.

Pre-K for All is delivered in public and privately operated settings including district schools, charters, and independent organizations that contract with the City. Pre-K students receive a full day of education—6 hours and 20 minutes—for 180 days grounded in the Prekindergarten Foundation for the Common Core, the New York State pre-K learning standards covering all aspects of a child's development and learning. The NYCDOE supports all pre-K programs with differentiated support at both the classroom and program level. This includes: targeted professional learning for lead teachers, assistant teachers, and paraprofessionals, on-site support for leaders and teachers, resources, and guidance from 100 Instructional Coordinators and 125 Social Workers.

The expansion required significant investments in new educators, spaces, programming and oversight across more than a dozen City agencies. In the first year of expansion, New York City facilitated the opening of new sites, recruitment and development of new teachers, rigorous multi-agency inspections to ensure quality and safety, and extensive outreach to families to encourage enrollment in new programs.

The city's model is designed to ensure a sustainable high-quality workforce by recruiting, training, and retaining qualified teachers and administrators. All lead teachers have at least a BA, and are either certified or on a study plan for full certification. In order to retain highly qualified teachers, the NYCDOE encourages all providers to pay competitive salaries and took extra steps to increase pay for pre-K teachers across the system with a goal of moving toward parity wherever possible.

* At least one program in these states did not break down total enrollment figures into specific numbers of 3 and 4 year olds served. As a result, enrollment by single year of age was estimated.

** Though not included in this year's state comparisons because it is a pilot program serving less than 1% of the state's 4 year olds, Indiana served 415 4 year olds or roughly .5% of 4 year olds in its pre K program.

† Data on Florida's quality standards are from the 2013-2014 school year. However, no policy changes are known that would have affected which benchmarks were met.

* Pre-K programs may receive additional funds from federal or local sources that are not included in this figure.

** Head Start per child spending for the 2014-2015 year includes funding only for 3- and 4-year-olds served. Past years figured have unintentionally included funds for Early Head Start.

*** K-12 expenditures include capital spending as well as current operating expenditures.

Data are for the '14-'15 school year, unless otherwise noted.

SPENDING PER CHILD ENROLLED

<sup>1</sup> Throughout this report, the District of Columbia is included like a state. Figures indicating change over time have been adjusted to reflect 50 state plus D.C. totals. D.C. is also included in rankings as a "state," creating a list of 43 states for rankings. In 2014-2015, Indiana began offering a state-funded pre-K program enrolling 415 children. Because it served less than 1% of 4-year-olds, it does not meet NIEER's criteria for a pre-K program and these children are not included in the enrollment total.

<sup>2</sup> NIEER's definitions of hours of operations are as follows: part-day programs serve children for fewer than 4 hours per day; school-day programs serve children at least 4 hours but fewer than 8 hours per day; and extended-day programs serve children for 8 or more hours per day. Some pre-K initiatives offer multiple hours of operation, such as a combination of part-day and school-day programs, but only the minimum one offered is listed here.

<sup>3</sup> The enrollment figure for federal Head Start, ages 3 and 4, includes children enrolled in the program in all 50 states, D.C., and the U.S. territories, as well as enrollment in the Migrant and American Indian/Alaskan Native programs. Past years did not include the enrollment of children in the territories. The enrollment figure for total federal Head Start, all ages, includes all children served in any location, including the U.S. territories, and migrant and American Indian programs. These numbers do not include children funded by state match.

<sup>4</sup> This figure is based on the Head Start Enrollment supported by state match as reported by ACE. This figure includes 16,052 children who attended programs that were considered to be state-funded preschool initiatives. These children are also counted in the state-funded preschool enrollment total.

<sup>5</sup> This figure includes federal TANF funds directed toward preschool at states' discretion. In 2014-2015 Indiana began offering a state-funded pre-K program with $1 million in state funding. Because it served less than 1% of 4-year-olds, these funds are not reflected in the funding total.

National Overview

ENROLLMENT INCREASES MODESTLY

State-funded pre-K served 1,383,450 children in 2014-2015. State pre-K continues to be largely a program for 4-year-olds, with 4s accounting for almost 1.2 million, or about 84 percent, of the children enrolled. Table 2 reports the number and percentage of the population enrolled by state and in total.

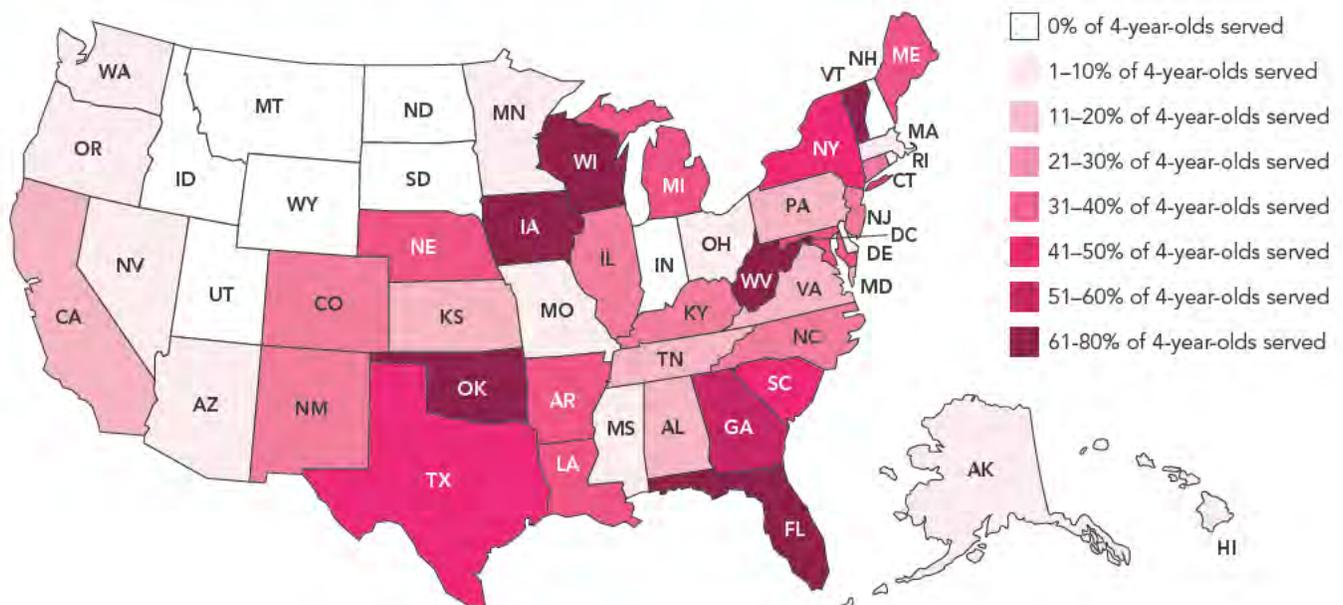

Total enrollment in 2014-2015 increased by 37,167 from the prior year, including 14,577 3-year-olds and 7,091 4-year-olds. And, while some states increased enrollment others cut back. Table 3 reports enrollment changes from the first year we started tracking state pre-K (2001-2002) and from 2013-2014.

Across the nation, 29 percent of 4-year-olds and nearly 5 percent of 3-year-olds were enrolled in state-funded pre-K in 2014-2015. Enrollment varied widely from state-to-state. The District of Columbia served the highest percentage of children at both ages 3 and 4. Vermont, Florida, and Oklahoma followed with each serving over 70 percent of the state's 4-year-olds. Other states enrolling more than half of 4-year-olds include West Virginia, Wisconsin, Iowa, and Georgia. On the other hand, 12 states served less than 10 percent of 4-year-olds. Seven other states had no program and Indiana began a small pilot program. Figure 1 displays a map state of pre-K enrollment at age 4 by state.

Twenty-eight of the 43 states with state pre-K programs enroll 3-year-olds. The highest percentages served are in the District of Columbia (64%), Vermont (26%), Arkansas (21%), Illinois (20%), and New Jersey (19%).

State-funded pre-K is not the only public program serving preschoolers. Both preschool special education and Head Start serve substantial numbers of children. Table 4 adds in children served in those publicly funded programs to yield total numbers and percentage of the population served at ages 3 and 4 by state. To the extent possible, we present unduplicated counts with children served by multiple programs only counted once. Enrollment across all three public programs is at most (because some duplication may remain) 41 percent at age 4 and 16 percent at age 3.

QUALITY STANDARDS

The Yearbook compares each state program’s standards against a checklist of 10 research-based quality standards benchmarks. These benchmarks are consistent with what research suggests as minimums for highly effective programs. They do not guarantee quality. Effective pre-K programs also require adequate funding and strong implementation. Funding adequacy is, of course, addressed separately in this report. Unfortunately, survey data do not provide a basis for evaluating implementation. A guide to the benchmarks and supporting research begins on page xx.

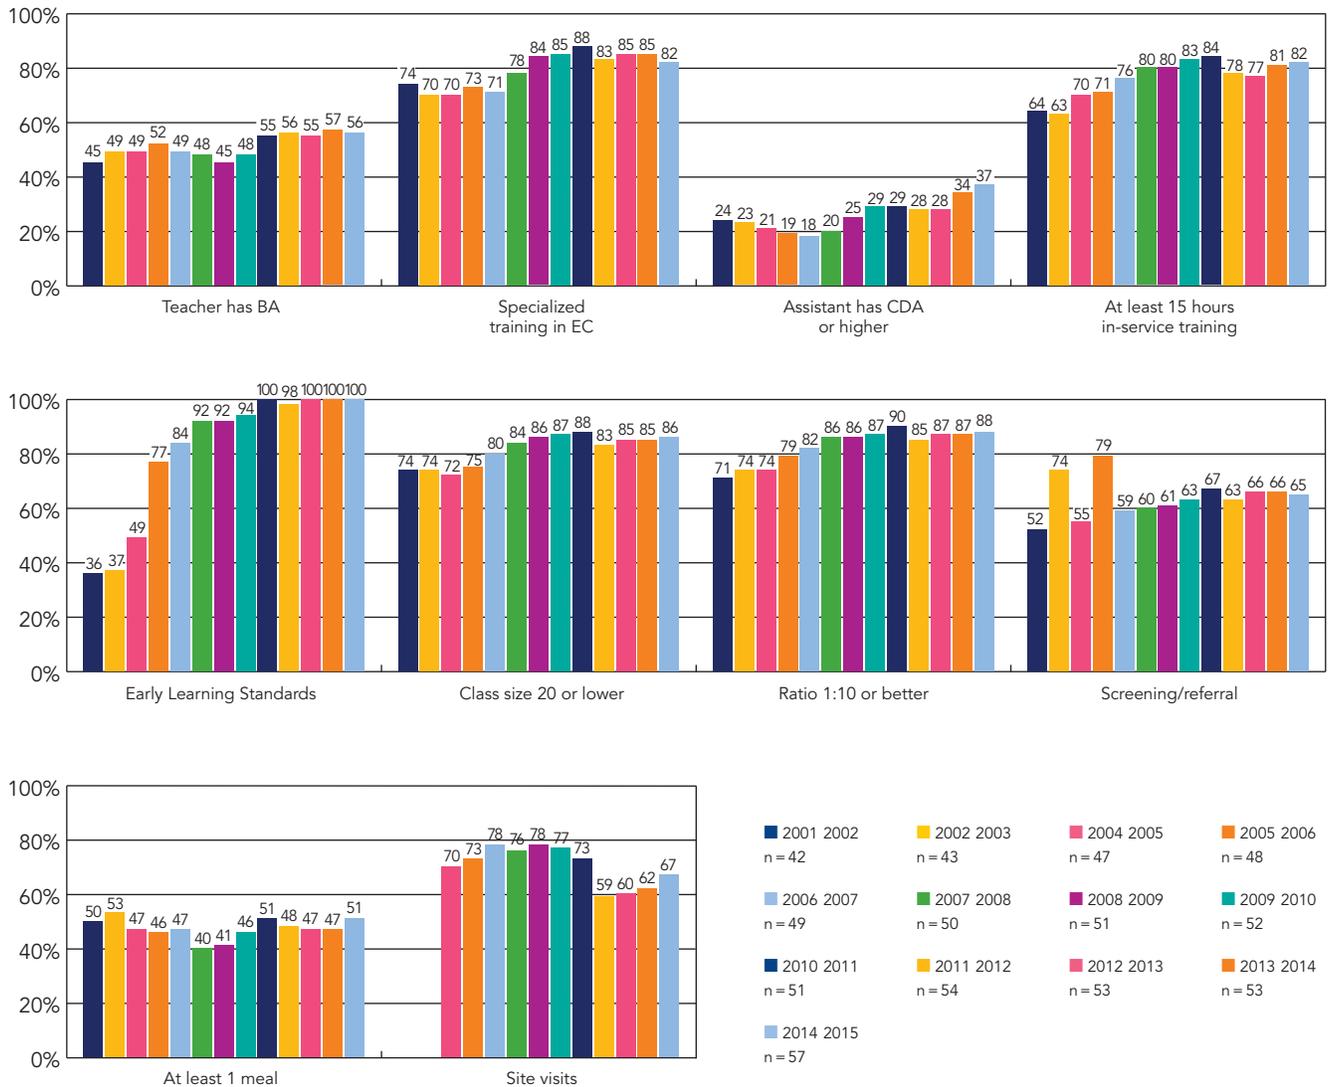

Figure 2 displays the percentage of programs meeting each of the quality standards from 2001-2002 through 2014-2015. Four states' policy changes (five programs) resulted in gaining an additional benchmark in 2014-2015: two of Louisiana's programs, Missouri, Nebraska, and West Virginia. Two Louisiana programs, LA 8(g) and LA 4, now meet the quality standard benchmark for site visits. Missouri now requires at least 15 hours per year of professional development and Nebraska now requires programs to provide at least one meal per day. West Virginia increased their assistant teacher credentials to require at least a CDA or equivalent and now meets all 10 quality standards.

In the 2014-2015 school year, seven state programs met all 10 benchmarks: Alabama, Alaska, Mississippi, North Carolina, Rhode Island, West Virginia, and one Louisiana program (NSECD). Nine states have programs that met nine of 10 benchmarks—Arkansas, Kentucky, Louisiana (LA 4 only), Minnesota, New Jersey (Abbott pre-K only), Oregon, Pennsylvania (HSSAP only), Tennessee, and Washington.

At the other end of the spectrum, seven programs met fewer than half of the 10 benchmarks. California, Ohio, and Vermont (both programs) met four; Florida met three; and Texas met only two. Pennsylvania's K4 program met three benchmarks this year. Particularly concerning, Texas and Pennsylvania's K4 program not only miss the class size and staff-child ratio benchmarks, but set statewide no limits on these at all. California also does not limit class size, but does limit ratio. Table 5 summarizes the quality standards benchmarks received by each program.

RESOURCES: MAKING REAL GAINS

In 2014-2015, 42 states plus the District of Columbia spent just over $6.2 billion on pre-K, not including special education funds. The 8 remaining states did not contribute to this total, as they had no pre-K initiative meeting our definition of state-funded pre-K during the 2014-2015 school year. (See page xx for our explanation of what constitutes a state-funded pre-K program.) Indiana spent almost $1.1 million on its new pre-K pilot but is not included in this year's report. One omission that is particularly noteworthy is the California transitional kindergarten program, which by itself would add almost $700 million in state spending to the total spent serving children during the year prior to kindergarten. Table 6 reports state spending per child and in total as well as changes in spending from the previous year.

Across the 42 states with pre-K and the District of Columbia, total state spending increased by over $553 million, a 10 percent increase in real spending from the prior year. Almost two-thirds, or over $358 million, of this increase is attributed to New York and primarily to expansion of pre-K in New York City.

Average spending per child increased by $287 (inflation-adjusted) to $4,489. Spending per child had edged up slightly in recent years, but this year's increase was more substantial. This jump marks the largest single year increase in spending per child in nearly a decade. However, about 40 percent of this increase is due to New York and per child spending is still below where it was in 2008 (in real dollars).

Spending by state varied dramatically. The District of Columbia spends the most per-child at $16,431, with New Jersey the highest for a state at $12,149. South Carolina and Mississippi report the lowest spending per child, both under $2,000 per-child. Year to year fluctuations in spending were dramatic, as well. Arizona, Missouri, New Mexico, New York, and Rhode Island all reported increases in per child spending of more than $1,000. Arkansas and Maryland reported decreases of about $1,000 per child. Table 6 reports the state spending per child and total state spending in 2014-2015 for each state as well as changes in spending since last year.

Many state-funded pre-K programs utilize additional funds from local and federal sources to help fund pre-K programs. In some states and local education agencies share the costs through a formula just as they do for K-12 education. Funding from all sources is a better indicator of the total resources available to support pre-K (though not a better indicator of state financial commitment). However, not all states can fully, or even partially, report spending from other sources. As a result the all-sources funding per child figures reported in Table 6 understate total spending nationally, and comparisons across states can be distorted by differences in reporting.

Despite the limitations of the "all reported" spending figures, we can determine that local schools and federal funds added at least $748 million to state pre-K funds in the 2014-2015 school year, or $542 per child. All-source spending totals nearly $7 billion. Non-state funds reported included $368 million in required local funds, $96 million in non-required local funds, and $284 in non-TANF federal funds. Reported spending per-child from all sources was $5,031 nationwide, up from the previous year's $4,765 (inflation-adjusted).

* Though not included in this year's state comparisons because it is a pilot program serving less than 1% of the state's 4 year olds, Indiana served 415 4 year olds or roughly .5% of 4 year olds in its pre K program.

** Nationwide, an additional 28,896 children of other ages were enrolled in state prekindergarten, for a total enrollment of 1,383,450.

* At least one program in these states did not break down total enrollment figures into specific numbers of 3- and 4-year olds served. As a result, the figures in this table are estimates.

** Though not included in this year's state comparisons because it is a pilot program serving less than 1% of the state's 4-year olds, Indiana served 415 4-year olds or roughly .5% of 4-year olds in its pre-K program.

* These states serve special education children in their state pre K programs but were not able to provide an unduplicated count for at least one of their programs. Estimations were used based on the average percent of special education students in state pre K and enrollment numbers for each program.

** Enrollment information for Indiana reflects only Pre K Special Education and Head Start. Indiana's pilot program is not included as it serves less than 1% of the state's 4 year olds.

† These states serve special education children in their state funded Head Start pre K programs but were not able to provide an unduplicated count for the Head Start program. Estimations were used based on the percent of children with IEPs as reported by the PIR.

†† Total on overstate public enrollment as some or all Head Start children may be served in a state's pre K program. Some states were able to report the number of Head Start children in state pre K for at least one program. This information was used to estimate an unduplicated count of Head Start enrollment.

* Vermont could not break out the state, local, and federal spending from the total amount reported. Vermont also provided updated spending information for the 2013-2014 school year, which is reflected in the calculations of change in spending.

** 1366 3 year old children were served in WV's Universal Pre K program but were funded by sources not reported by the state. They were removed from the per child spending calculations. A similar adjustment was made for 2013-2014.

*** Indiana funded a pilot state pre K program during the 2014-2015 year. It spent about $1.1 million to enroll 415 4 year olds. It is not included in the rankings because the program served fewer than 1% of 4 year olds.

WHAT QUALIFIES AS A STATE PRESCHOOL PROGRAM?

NIEER's State Preschool Yearbook series focuses on state-funded preschool education initiatives meeting the following criteria:

- The initiative is funded, controlled, and directed by the state.
- The initiative serves children of preschool age, usually 3 and/or 4. Although initiatives in some states serve broader age ranges, programs that serve only infants and toddlers are excluded. The program must reach at least one percent of the 3- or 4-year-old population in the state to be included.
- Early childhood education is the primary focus of the initiative. This does not exclude programs that offer parent education but does exclude programs that mainly focus on parent education. Programs that focus on parent work status or programs where child eligibility is tied to work status are also excluded.
- The initiative offers a group learning experience to children at least two days per week.
- State-funded preschool education initiatives must be distinct from the state's system for subsidized child care, preschool initiatives may be coordinated and integrated with the subsidy system for child care.
- The initiative is not primarily designed to serve children with disabilities, but services may be offered to children with disabilities.
- State supplements to the federal Head Start program are considered to constitute de facto state preschool programs if they substantially expand the number of children served, and if the state assumes some administrative responsibility for the program. State supplements to fund quality improvements, extended days, or other program enhancements or to fund expanded enrollment only minimally are not considered equivalent to a state preschool program.

While ideally this report would identify all preschool education funding streams at the federal, state, and local levels, there are a number of limitations on the data that make this extremely difficult to do. For example, preschool is only one of several types of education programs toward which local districts can target their Title I funds. Many states do not track how Title I funds are used at the local level, and therefore do not know the extent to which they are spent on preschool education. Another challenge involves tracking total state spending for child care, using a variety of available sources, such as CCDF dollars, TANF funds, and any state funding above and beyond the required matches for federal funds. Although some of these child care funds may be used for high-quality, educational, center-based programs for 3- and 4-year-olds that closely resemble programs supported by state-funded preschool education initiatives, it is nearly impossible to determine what proportion of the child care funds are spent this way.

AGE GROUPINGS USED IN THIS REPORT

Children considered to be 3 years old during the 2014-2015 school year are those who were eligible to enter kindergarten two years later, during the 2016-2017 school year. Children considered to be 4 years old during the 2014-2015 school year were eligible to enter kindergarten one year later, during the 2015-2016 school year. Children considered to be 5 years old during the 2014-2015 school year were already eligible for kindergarten at the beginning of the 2014-2015 school year.

Roadmap to the State Profile Pages

How to interpret data on the individual state profiles

For each state with a preschool education initiative, we include one page with a description of the state's program, followed by a page with data on the program's key features, focusing on access, quality, and resources.

The first page for each state begins with two sets of bar graphs. The first shows percentages of the state's 3-year-olds and 4-year-olds enrolled in the state prekindergarten program. The second set shows the state's spending per child enrolled in the state pre-K initiative. Both sets of bar graphs depict changes in state preschool over time, from fiscal year 2002 (which corresponds to the 2001-2002 school year) through fiscal year 2015 (which corresponds to the 2014-2015 school year). Due to space constraints, not all years can be included. Instead, data is included for the years ending in 2002, 2004, 2006, 2008, 2010, 2012, 2014, and 2015. Most of the data used for comparison purposes come from NIEER's previous Yearbooks, although spending figures are adjusted for inflation and represent 2015 dollars. In addition, there are some exceptions in cases where states revised data or reported data differently. The percent of children enrolled is calculated using Census estimates of 3- and 4-year-old children in each state.

Following the bar graphs is a brief narrative providing information on the main features of the state's initiative(s). This includes details such as the initiative's history, the types of settings in which state-funded preschool can be offered, enrollment eligibility criteria, and evaluations if conducted. In many cases, the narrative also describes unique or particularly interesting aspects of the state's initiatives that may not be highlighted elsewhere in the report, as well as relevant new developments in the 2014-2015 school year and expected changes for the 2015-2016 school year. New for the 2014-2015 Yearbook, information from the Dual Language Learner and Workforce supplemental surveys is also included. Some descriptive information in the narratives was originally based on information found in the reports Seeds of Success from the Children's Defense Fund and Quality Counts 2002 from Education Week.

For the 42 states with preschool programs and the District of Columbia, the bottom of the first page of each state profile presents four numbers showing the state's ranking on the following measures:

- The percentage of the state's 4-year-old population enrolled in the state's preschool program (Access Rankings – 4-Year-Olds);
- The percentage of the state's 3-year-old population enrolled in the state's preschool program (Access Rankings – 3-Year-Olds);
- State expenditures per child enrolled in the program (Resources Rankings – State Spending);
- All reported expenditures per child enrolled in the program, including local and federal spending as well as state spending (Resources Rankings – All Reported Spending).

The All Reported Spending ranking provides a more complete picture of pre-K spending in states using local and federal funding sources than the State Spending ranking alone. Because states vary in their ability to report spending from these other sources, however, this ranking is imperfect and sometimes underestimates total spending.

New for the 2014-2015 Yearbook, the bottom of the first page of each state profile also presents two boxes indicating whether or not the state has policies in place to support:

- Dual Language Learners
- Workforce (Teachers)

Connecticut, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Vermont, and Wisconsin each have more than one distinct preschool education initiative, therefore information is presented slightly differently for these states and is explained on their individual profiles.

State profile pages are also given for the 8 states that did not fund preschool education initiatives in the 2014-2015 school year. For these states, the table of quality standards is omitted. These profiles do report enrollment data for special education and federally funded Head Start, however. In addition, data on per-child spending for K-12 education and federal Head Start are included. When applicable, state-funded Head Start spending and enrollment are also provided for no-program states. Profile pages are also included for 6 US territories (American Samoa, Guam, Northern Mariana Islands, Palau, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands). For the territories, a narrative is provided but none fund pre-K programs for which we could report on access, quality standards, and resources.

The following sections provide an overview of information contained in the data tables on the state profile pages and explain why these elements are important. Data in the tables are for the 2014-2015 school year except where noted.

ACCESS

The Access data table begins with the total state program enrollment, which is the number of children of all ages enrolled at a specific point in time. Following that is the percentage of school districts (or other local education authorities, such as counties or parishes) providing state-funded prekindergarten programs. This information shows the extent of the initiative's geographic coverage. Next, the table shows what, if any, income requirement is used in determining eligibility for the program.

Data on the hours of operation (hours per day and days per week) and operating schedule (academic or calendar year) are shown as additional measures of access because working parents may find it difficult to get their children to and from programs that operate only a few hours a day. The amount of time children participate in a preschool program also matters for other reasons, such as influencing the program's effects on children's development and learning.

The Access data table also shows enrollment of 3- and 4-year-old children in two federally funded programs besides the state prekindergarten initiative: preschool special education and Head Start. The Head Start enrollment total includes children in the American Indian/Alaskan Native and Migrant Seasonal programs. The final item in the table reports how many children ages 3 and 4 are participating in Head Start through state supplemental funds.

Two Access pie charts illustrate the percentages of the state's 3- and 4-year-olds enrolled in the state-funded preschool initiative(s), special education, and Head Start. The remaining children are categorized as enrolled in "Other/None." These children may be enrolled in another type of private or publicly funded program (e.g., state-subsidized child care) or may not be attending a center-based program at all. For the 2015 Yearbook, we calculated an unduplicated count for special education enrollment in order to more accurately represent the number of children served in the state. The special education percentage in the pie chart represents children who are in special education but not enrolled in Head Start or state preschool programs. For the first time for the 2015 report, we also calculated an unduplicated count for Head Start enrollment in order to avoid double counting Head Start children enrolled in state prekindergarten. For the states that were able to report this information, the Head Start percentage does not include children also enrolled in state prekindergarten.

QUALITY STANDARDS CHECKLIST

State policies in 10 critical areas related to quality are shown in the Quality Standards Checklist table. For each area, states receive a checkmark when their policy meets or exceeds the related benchmark standard. On the right side of the page, a box displays the total number of benchmarks met by the state.

The Quality Standards Checklist represents a set of minimum criteria, established by state policy, needed to ensure the effectiveness of preschool education programs, especially when serving children who are at risk for school failure. While the checklist is not intended to be an exhaustive inventory of all the features of a high-quality program, each of these research-based standards is essential. Meeting all 10 standards does not necessarily guarantee that a program is of high quality, but no state's prekindergarten policies should be considered satisfactory unless all 10 benchmarks are met. Although programs may routinely engage in practices meeting criteria for quality standards, credit is given only when the practices are explicitly required in state policy.

The limitations of the research are such that judgment inevitably plays a role in setting specific benchmarks based on evidence. Studies find that the potential benefits from strong preschool education programs are such that the monetary investment in pre-K is returned 7 to 17 times.<sup>1</sup> Therefore, we gave more weight to the risk of losing substantial benefits by setting benchmarks too low than to the risk of raising costs by setting benchmarks too high. Costs of many preschool programs are currently quite low; thus, benchmarks steer closer to the characteristics of programs demonstrated to produce reasonably large education benefits for children in randomized trials and the strongest quasi-experimental studies (e.g., HighScope Perry Preschool and Chicago Child-Parent Centers) and farther from the characteristics of programs found in rigorous studies to have weak effects.<sup>2</sup>

Of the 10 standards we use to gauge the quality of state-funded preschool programs, four involve teacher credentials and training. State preschool policies are evaluated based on whether programs require teachers to have at least a bachelor's degree;<sup>3</sup> whether they require teachers to have specialization in preschool education;<sup>3</sup> whether they require assistant teachers to have at least a Child Development Associate (CDA) or equivalent credential based on coursework;<sup>4</sup> and whether they require teachers to have at least 15 hours of annual in-service training.<sup>5</sup> Teacher qualifications receive this emphasis in our checklist because research shows this area to be crucial in determining program quality. Better education and training for teachers can improve the interaction between children and teachers, which in turn affects children's learning.

Class size and staff-child ratios are also emphasized in the Quality Standards Checklist, with the expectation that states will limit class sizes to 20 children at the most<sup>6</sup> and have no more than 10 children per staff member.<sup>7</sup> With smaller classes and fewer children per teacher, children have greater opportunities for interaction with adults and can receive more individualized attention, resulting in a higher quality program.

<sup>4</sup> Preschool classrooms typically are taught by a team of a teacher and an assistant. Research focusing specifically on the qualifications of assistant teachers is rare, but the available evidence points to a relationship between assistant teacher qualifications and teaching quality. There is much evidence on the educational importance of the qualifications of teaching staff generally. Bowman, Donovan, & Burns (2001). Burchinal, Cryer, Clifford, & Howes (2002). Barnett (2003). New Haven, CT: Bush Center in Child Development and Social Policy, Yale University.

<sup>5</sup> Good teachers are actively engaged in their continuing professional development. Bowman, Donovan, & Burns (2001). Frede, E.C. (1998). Preschool program quality in programs for children in poverty. In W.S. Barnett & S.S. Boocock (Eds.). (1998). Early care and education for children in poverty: Promises, programs, and long term results (pp. 77-98). Albany, NY: SUNY Press. Whitebook, Howes, & Phillips (1989) found that teachers receiving more than 15 hours of training were more appropriate, positive, and engaged with children in their teaching practices.

<sup>7</sup> A large literature establishes linkages between staff-child ratio, program quality, and child outcomes. A ratio of 1:10 allows more children per teacher than in programs that have demonstrated large gains in disadvantaged children and is the lowest (fewest number of children per teacher) generally accepted by professional opinion. Barnett (1998). Bowman, Donovan, & Burns (2001). Frede (1998). NICHD Early Child Care Research Network (1999). National Association for the Education of Young Children (2005).

Early learning standards are also critical to quality, as they offer programs guidance and ensure that they cover the full range of areas essential to children’s learning and development.<sup>8</sup> States should have comprehensive early learning standards covering all areas identified as fundamental by the National Education Goals Panel<sup>9</sup>—children’s physical well-being and motor development, social/emotional development, approaches toward learning, language development, and cognition and general knowledge. These standards should be specifically tailored to the learning of preschool-age children so that it is appropriate for their level of development.

The Quality Standards Checklist also addresses the comprehensive services that preschool education programs should be expected to offer. Programs should provide at least one meal;<sup>10</sup> vision, hearing, and health screenings and referrals;<sup>11</sup> and other support services, such as parent education, parent conferences and/or home visits, or referrals for such services.<sup>12</sup> These items are included because children’s overall well-being and success in school involves not only their cognitive development but also their physical and social/emotional health.

It is important to note that the Quality Standards Checklist focuses on state preschool policy requirements rather than actual practice. A state with good policies may have some programs that fail to comply with these policies; conversely, a state with weak policies may have many programs that exceed state minimum standards. While evaluating implementation of standards is outside the scope of this report, the checklist does include an indicator of whether states are taking steps to monitor programs’ implementation of the quality standards. Policies requiring strong state quality standards are essential, but it is also necessary to have a means of ascertaining that individual pre-K programs meet those standards.<sup>13</sup> Therefore, programs should require at a minimum that all sites are visited for program quality at least once every five years to enforce standards and to ensure high-quality education in state-funded preschool programs.

RESOURCES

The table in the Resources section provides the following information: total state spending for the state prekindergarten initiative; whether a local match, monetary or in-kind, is required; amount of state Head Start spending (if applicable); state spending per child enrolled in the program; and all reported (local, state, and federal) spending per child enrolled in the program. These measures show various views of the resources dedicated to pre-K, which allows for a more complete picture of a state’s commitment to preschool education. For example, a state’s total spending may appear low, but may prove to be high relative to the number of children enrolled. On the other hand, a state with a high total funding level may have a low per-pupil spending level if it enrolls a large number of children. In some states, local communities contribute substantial additional funds to state preschool education by using local funding sources or by leveraging federal funding sources. In such cases, the figure that includes all reported spending is the best gauge of the level of available resources, to the extent that information about local and locally allocated federal spending is available.

The bar chart in the Resources section compares per-child spending in state-funded programs to federal Head Start and K-12 per-child spending. Head Start per-child spending for the 2014-2015 year includes funding only for 3- and 4-year-olds served. Past years’ figures have unintentionally included funds for Early Head Start, which made per-child amounts seem artificially higher. Different colors indicate the different funding sources (local, state, and federal). Separate colors are used to indicate any TANF funds that a state directs toward its preschool initiative. While TANF funds are federal dollars, it is the state’s decision to devote these funds to preschool education, as opposed to other purposes. Data on the amounts of local and federal preschool funds are included in the bar chart when available.

<sup>8</sup> Current practice too frequently underestimates children’s abilities to learn during the preschool years. Clear and appropriate expectations for learning and development across all domains are essential to an educationally effective preschool program. Bowman, Donovan, & Burns (2001). Frede (1998). <sup>11</sup> For some children, preschool provides the first opportunity to detect vision, hearing, and health problems that may impair a child’s learning and development. This opportunity should not be missed. Meisels, S.J., & Atkins Burnett, S. (2000). The elements of early childhood assessment. In J.P. Shonkoff & S.J. Meisels (Eds.). # Guide to State Profiles

ACCESS

Total state program enrollment.....	Number of all-age children in state pre-K program
School districts that offer state program .....	Percentage of school districts in state where program is offered
Income requirement .....	Maximum family income for participants
Hours of operation .....	Hours per day and days per week programs operate <sup>14</sup>
Operating schedule .....	Annual schedule of operation (academic year or calendar year)
Special education enrollment.....	Number of 3- and 4-year-olds served by the Preschool Grants Program of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act
Federally funded Head Start enrollment .....	Number of slots for 3- and 4-year-olds in Head Start funded with federal money
State-funded Head Start enrollment .....	Number of slots for 3- and 4-year-olds in Head Start funded with state money

POLICY

STATE PRE-K REQUIREMENT

Early learning standards .....	National Education Goals Panel content areas covered by state learning standards for preschool-age children must be comprehensive
Teacher degree .....	Lead teacher must have a BA, at minimum
Teacher specialized training .....	Lead teacher must have specialized training in a pre-K area
Assistant teacher degree .....	Assistant teacher must have a CDA or equivalent, at minimum
Teacher in-service .....	Teacher must receive at least 15 hours/year of in-service professional development and training
Maximum class size .....	Maximum number of children per classroom must be 20 or fewer
3-year-olds
4-year-olds
Staff-child ratio .....	Lowest acceptable ratio of staff to children in classroom (e.g., maximum number of students per teacher) must be 1:10 or better
3-year-olds
4-year-olds
Screening/referral and support services .....	Screenings and referrals for vision, hearing, and health must be required; at least one additional support service must be provided to families
Meals .....	At least one meal must be required daily
Monitoring.....	Site visits must be used to demonstrate ongoing adherence to state program standards

RESOURCES

Total state pre-K spending .....	Total state funds spent on state pre-K program
Local match required? .....	Whether state requires local providers to match state monetary contributions to program
State Head Start spending (when applicable) .....	Total state funds spent to supplement Head Start program
State spending per child enrolled.....	Amount of state funds spent per child participating in pre-K program
All reported spending per child enrolled.....	Amount of all reported funds (local, state, and federal) spent per child participating in pre-K program

<sup>14</sup> In an effort to ensure data is comparable from state to state, NIEER now provides guidelines for characterizing length of program day. "Part day" is defined as fewer than 4 hours per day; "school day" is at least 4 hours but fewer than eight hours per day; and "extended day" is eight or more hours per day.

Hi Eric,

Attached are the most recent versions of the national and NY-specific press release. Also attached is the most updated version of the report, but they are still making changes, so this isn't quite final.

Thanks,

Hi Eric -

Thank you so much. This sounds great to us. And just to confirm, since you'll all be bringing the Mayor's podium, we don't need to worry about a mic stand or anything?

Also, below is an updated ROS based on changes we've discussed. Let me know if you see any issues here (also, we know Mayor might not get there until 1:15pm).

1-1:15pm: Speakers in holding room, last minute prep/questions
1:15pm: Welcome remarks from program director
1:17pm: Steve Barnett's remarks
1:22pm: Mayor's remarks

1:30pm: Randi Weingarten's remarks
1:35pm: General Hall's remarks
1:40pm: Libby Doggett's remarks
1:45pm: Mayor speaks to parents (3-5mins)
1:50pm: Libby reads to children
2:00pm: End

Thanks!
Leslie

Steve and Leslie, based on our walkthrough, our thought is that we can do the program in room 6. Backdrop is a classroom that the school will adorn with extra classroomy things. We'll have the mayor's podium and 4 or 5 seats off to the side of the podium for program speakers to sit in when they are not at the podium speaking. The space isn't very large, but we could put down 30-50 chairs and have press set up on the floor along the back of the room. After the speaking program, we could have the mayor move into the foyer area right next to room 6 to talk with some of the parents while standing. Press could capture some of this from the corner of the foyer.

How does this sound to your team?

Sorry – we all agree the book-reading would have been nice but unfortunately the Mayor's had something come up on the backend of the event that is pressing our schedule. We'll have to cut that portion. He'll have a security detail and three or four staff with him for the event. 1:15 push up for a start time works. Thanks.

Book reading is probably the best visual the Mayor will get on national networks--people respond emotionally to this demonstration of what the Mayor's initiative is really about and how much he cares in way it is difficult to get with a speech.

Hi Dan,

Wanted to make sure you saw this last week. Let me know if you have any questions on it. Also made a couple updates based on new confirmed speakers.

Also wanted to raise a question about timing – we are a little worried about parents starting to come pick up their kids from preschool in the middle of our event. I wonder if there's any possibility of bumping the event up to 1pm or 1:15pm. Understand if the Mayor's schedule doesn't allow for that, but let us know if there's any flexibility.

Additionally, as soon as you can, we need a list of who will be accompanying the Mayor or, at the least, a number of how many people will be with him.

Please let me know when you have a moment.

Thanks,
Leslie

We have the speakers giving their remarks at a podium/elevated stage, an audience of maybe 50 people or so, including parents, the Mayor stepping off stage after the formal remarks to talk to a group of parents, and then the Mayor going to read to a group of kids in another part of the room. It will be in a classroom, so the visuals of a pre-K classroom at Sugar Hill Museum's preschool will be incorporated. The run of show we agreed on with Eric is:

- Welcome from program director
- Steve's remarks (3-5 min)
- The Mayor
- Randi Weingarten, AFT
- Michael S. Hall, Major General, U.S. Air Force (Retired)
- Libby Doggett from the DOE
- Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera).
- Then Mayor goes to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

If that doesn't answer the question, can you let me know a little more specifically what you mean by visuals?

Thanks,
Leslie

Hi Dan,

We're still working to finalize some of these details, but currently the plan is to hold the event in one of the classrooms at the Sugar Hill Museum preschool. There will be an area, possibly elevated, where the speakers make their remarks, and there would also be an area set up for the Mayor to read to a group of kids for a couple minutes in another portion of the room.

We're still working with the preschool to figure out which room and additional details, but do please let me know what specifics you'll need and also if the Mayor be bringing his own podium.

Thanks,

Thanks, Leslie. I'll take a look at the piece and get back to you tomorrow on it. I edited the quote below, and it's approved to use with these small changes. I also edited the ROS, below that. Note the cut on Q&A and, when you can, please send me the title of the book at least a few days beforehand

these initiatives receive wide bipartisan support – and for good reason. There’s no better way to ensure future success for our kids ~~and our states.~~” than to invest in their early education.”

- Welcome from program director
- Steve's remarks (3-5 min)
- The Mayor
- Tentative: Either labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible) or business leader
- Libby Doggett from the DOE
- Q and A
- Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera).
- Then Mayor goes to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Hope you’re well and had a nice weekend. Wanted to check in on the below, and also share with you an op-ed that we would love for the Mayor to co-sign. It’s attached here – would Mayor de Blasio and your office be open to that? We’d welcome feedback and edits, if so, and we’re hoping to place in a high-value NYC target around the release.

Additionally, attached is the NYC section of the executive summary in the report, for reference.

Let me know if you have any questions, and what we can move forward on. Thanks!

Hi Eric,

Thanks for checking in. Attached is the most recent version of the release, with the proposed quote for the Mayor below:

“High quality early education is a necessity, not a luxury,” said New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio. “Here in New York, we’ve seen first hand that action by state governments can lift enrollment and quality for thousands of children in our communities. At a time of political polarization, these initiatives receive wide bipartisan support – and for good reason. There’s no better way to ensure future success for our kids and our states.”

Steve, can you also send Eric the most up to date version of the report when you have a moment?

For the run of show, we are suggesting:

- Welcome from program director
- Steve's remarks (3-5 min)
- The Mayor
- Tentative: Either labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible) or business leader
- Libby Doggett from the DOE
- Q and A
- Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera).
- Then Mayor goes to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Let me know what else we can get you.

Thanks,

Leslie

Here you go with proposed quote for the Mayor highlighted in blue.

Here is our plan for run of show for the event.

Welcome from program director, my remarks (3-5 min), Mayor, business person if possible, labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible). Q and A. Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera). Then go to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Alternatives as speakers--representative from US DOE (Sec. King not available) or Jacqueline Jones from the Foundation for Child Development, or a parent.

Does the Mayor's office have a business representative they might like to feature or a state legislative leader?

Hi Eric -

Thank you so much. This sounds great to us. And just to confirm, since you'll all be bringing the Mayor's podium, we don't need to worry about a mic stand or anything?

Also, below is an updated ROS based on changes we've discussed. Let me know if you see any issues here (also, we know Mayor might not get there until 1:15pm).

1-1:15pm: Speakers in holding room, last minute prep/questions
1:15pm: Welcome remarks from program director
1:17pm: Steve Barnett's remarks
1:22pm: Mayor's remarks
1:30pm: Randi Weingarten's remarks
1:35pm: General Hall's remarks
1:40pm: Libby Doggett's remarks
1:45pm: Mayor speaks to parents (3-5mins)
1:50pm: Libby reads to children
2:00pm: End

Thanks!

Steve and Leslie, based on our walkthrough, our thought is that we can do the program in room 6. Backdrop is a classroom that the school will adorn with extra classroomy things. We'll have the mayor's podium and 4 or 5 seats off to the side of the podium for program speakers to sit in when they are not at the podium speaking. The space isn't very large, but we could put down 30-50 chairs and have press set up on the floor along the back of the room. After the speaking program, we could have the mayor move into the foyer area right next to room 6 to talk with some of the parents while standing. Press could capture some of this from the corner of the foyer.

How does this sound to your team?

Sorry – we all agree the book-reading would have been nice but unfortunately the Mayor’s had something come up on the backend of the event that is pressing our schedule. We’ll have to cut that portion. He’ll have a security detail and three or four staff with him for the event. 1:15 push up for a start time works. Thanks.

Book reading is probably the best visual the Mayor will get on national networks--people respond emotionally to this demonstration of what the Mayor's initiative is really about and how much he cares in way it is difficult to get with a speech.

Hi Dan,

Wanted to make sure you saw this last week. Let me know if you have any questions on it. Also made a couple updates based on new confirmed speakers.

Also wanted to raise a question about timing – we are a little worried about parents starting to come pick up their kids from preschool in the middle of our event. I wonder if there's any possibility of bumping the event up to 1pm or 1:15pm. Understand if the Mayor's schedule doesn't allow for that, but let us know if there's any flexibility.

Additionally, as soon as you can, we need a list of who will be accompanying the Mayor or, at the least, a number of how many people will be with him.

Please let me know when you have a moment.

Thanks,
Leslie

We have the speakers giving their remarks at a podium/elevated stage, an audience of maybe 50 people or so, including parents, the Mayor stepping off stage after the formal remarks to talk to a group of parents, and then the Mayor going to read to a group of kids in another part of the room. It will be in a classroom, so the visuals of a pre-K classroom at Sugar Hill Museum's preschool will be incorporated. The run of show we agreed on with Eric is:

- Welcome from program director
- Steve's remarks (3-5 min)
- The Mayor
- Randi Weingarten, AFT
- Michael S. Hall, Major General, U.S. Air Force (Retired)
- Libby Doggett from the DOE
- Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera).

- Then Mayor goes to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

If that doesn't answer the question, can you let me know a little more specifically what you mean by visuals?

Thanks,
Leslie

Hi Dan,

We're still working to finalize some of these details, but currently the plan is to hold the event in one of the classrooms at the Sugar Hill Museum preschool. There will be an area, possibly elevated, where the speakers make their remarks, and there would also be an area set up for the Mayor to read to a group of kids for a couple minutes in another portion of the room.

We're still working with the preschool to figure out which room and additional details, but do please let me know what specifics you'll need and also if the Mayor be bringing his own podium.

Thanks,

Thanks, Leslie. I'll take a look at the piece and get back to you tomorrow on it. I edited the quote below, and it's approved to use with these small changes. I also edited the ROS, below that. Note the cut on Q&A and, when you can, please send me the title of the book at least a few days beforehand

“High-quality early education is a necessity, not a luxury,” said New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio. “Here in New York, we’ve seen firsthand that action by city and state governments can lift enrollment and the quality of education for tens of thousands of children in our communities. At a time of political polarization, these initiatives receive wide bipartisan support – and for good reason. There’s no better way to ensure future success for our kids and our states than to invest in their early education.”

- Welcome from program director
- Steve's remarks (3-5 min)
- The Mayor
- Tentative: Either labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible) or business leader
- Libby Doggett from the DOE
- Q and A
- Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera).
- Then Mayor goes to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

It's attached here – would Mayor de Blasio and your office be open to that? We'd welcome feedback and edits, if so, and we're hoping to place in a high-value NYC target around the release.

Additionally, attached is the NYC section of the executive summary in the report, for reference.

Let me know if you have any questions, and what we can move forward on. Thanks!

Hi Eric,

Thanks for checking in. Attached is the most recent version of the release, with the proposed quote for the Mayor below:

“High quality early education is a necessity, not a luxury,” said New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio. “Here in New York, we’ve seen first hand that action by state governments can lift enrollment and quality for thousands of children in our communities. At a time of political polarization, these initiatives receive wide bipartisan support – and for good reason. There’s no better way to ensure future success for our kids and our states.”

Steve, can you also send Eric the most up to date version of the report when you have a moment?

For the run of show, we are suggesting:

- Welcome from program director
- Steve's remarks (3-5 min)
- The Mayor
- Tentative: Either labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible) or business leader
- Libby Doggett from the DOE
- Q and A
- Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera).
- Then Mayor goes to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Let me know what else we can get you.

Thanks,

Leslie

Here you go with proposed quote for the Mayor highlighted in blue.

Here is our plan for run of show for the event.

Welcome from program director, my remarks (3-5 min), Mayor, business person if possible, labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible). Q and A. Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera). Then go to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Alternatives as speakers--representative from US DOE (Sec. King not available) or Jacqueline Jones from the Foundation for Child Development, or a parent.

Does the Mayor's office have a business representative they might like to feature or a state legislative leader?

Michaela,

Steve has a few questions about the event

Can you forward the full contact info for Devora and Jessica from DOE and CH communications.

He has a couple questions related to other elected officials, prominent figures to include at the event. Is that the sort of thing that Devora and Jessica can field – or should that type of question come to you?

Just trying to keep things simple,

Betty

THANK YOU so much for shepherding through the event for the Yearbook!

Nancy and I had a few minutes to catch up with Steve Barnett, and we have just a few details and questions we'd like to vet with you about the event.

Do you have a few minutes between now and Friday?

We are very flexible. We are thinking this would take not more than 15 minutes or so

Yes, sorry. Bio here:

Mr. Hall is a founding member and Vice-President of PFA Consulting, a firm responsible for designing and delivering a wide range of leadership and organizational development programs for private and public clients. Representative client services include mediation, large group facilitation and employee coaching. PFA Consulting also provides strategic planning seminars for senior management and customized risk management programs, in addition to organizational assessments, training and development of policy and programs in sexual harassment prevention, diversity management, employment practices liability and ethics programs.

Prior to forming PFA Consulting, Mr. Hall was Commissioner (1992-1995) of the New York State Division of Military and Naval Affairs, the agency tasked with the administration of the Army and Air National Guard. As the Adjutant General, Mr. Hall provided visionary leadership during a difficult period of transition, effectively managing one-third of a billion dollars of state and federal funds. Mr. Hall devised and implemented a quality management program which resulted in an unprecedented record of excellence. He instituted a comprehensive, top-down ethics program, successfully resolving agency-wide compliance issues and actively recruited and assigned to positions of senior executive level responsibility previously underrepresented minority members.

Mr. Hall served as Chair of the New York State Disaster Preparedness Commission, (1992-1995), a multi-agency commission tasked with disaster preparedness and response for the State of New York. Mr. Hall was responsible for the integration of the functions of over a dozen diverse agencies to create a cohesive disaster response team to protect the property and welfare of the citizens of the State.

Mr. Hall's distinguished career includes 27 years in the Air Force, including an assignment as the Commander of a Tactical Fighter Wing where he pioneered the use of F-16 aircraft to provide close air support. Mr. Hall served as the Senior Allied Air Liaison Officer during the first Gulf War and attained the rank of Major General before retiring in 1995.

Hi Eric -

Thank you so much. This sounds great to us. And just to confirm, since you'll all be bringing the Mayor's podium, we don't need to worry about a mic stand or anything?

Also, below is an updated ROS based on changes we've discussed. Let me know if you see any issues here (also, we know Mayor might not get there until 1:15pm).

1-1:15pm: Speakers in holding room, last minute prep/questions
1:15pm: Welcome remarks from program director
1:17pm: Steve Barnett's remarks
1:22pm: Mayor's remarks
1:30pm: Randi Weingarten's remarks

1:35pm: General Hall's remarks
1:40pm: Libby Doggett's remarks
1:45pm: Mayor speaks to parents (3-5mins)
1:50pm: Libby reads to children
2:00pm: End

Thanks!

Steve and Leslie, based on our walkthrough, our thought is that we can do the program in room 6. Backdrop is a classroom that the school will adorn with extra classroomy things. We'll have the mayor's podium and 4 or 5 seats off to the side of the podium for program speakers to sit in when they are not at the podium speaking. The space isn't very large, but we could put down 30-50 chairs and have press set up on the floor along the back of the room. After the speaking program, we could have the mayor move into the foyer area right next to room 6 to talk with some of the parents while standing. Press could capture some of this from the corner of the foyer.

How does this sound to your team?

Sorry – we all agree the book-reading would have been nice but unfortunately the Mayor's had something come up on the backend of the event that is pressing our schedule. We'll have to cut that portion. He'll have a security detail and three or four staff with him for the event. 1:15 push up for a start time works. Thanks.

Book reading is probably the best visual the Mayor will get on national networks--people respond emotionally to this demonstration of what the Mayor's initiative is really about and how much he cares in way it is difficult to get with a speech.

Hi Dan,

Wanted to make sure you saw this last week. Let me know if you have any questions on it. Also made a couple updates based on new confirmed speakers.

Also wanted to raise a question about timing – we are a little worried about parents starting to come pick up their kids from preschool in the middle of our event. I wonder if there's any possibility of bumping the event up to 1pm or 1:15pm. Understand if the Mayor's schedule doesn't allow for that, but let us know if there's any flexibility.

Additionally, as soon as you can, we need a list of who will be accompanying the Mayor or, at the least, a number of how many people will be with him.

Please let me know when you have a moment.

Thanks,
Leslie

We have the speakers giving their remarks at a podium/elevated stage, an audience of maybe 50 people or so, including parents, the Mayor stepping off stage after the formal remarks to talk to a group of parents, and then the Mayor going to read to a group of kids in another part of the room. It will be in a classroom, so the visuals of a pre-K classroom at Sugar Hill Museum's preschool will be incorporated. The run of show we agreed on with Eric is:

- Welcome from program director
- Steve's remarks (3-5 min)
- The Mayor
- Randi Weingarten, AFT
- Michael S. Hall, Major General, U.S. Air Force (Retired)
- Libby Doggett from the DOE
- Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera).
- Then Mayor goes to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

If that doesn't answer the question, can you let me know a little more specifically what you mean by visuals?

Thanks,
Leslie

Hi Dan,

We're still working to finalize some of these details, but currently the plan is to hold the event in one of the classrooms at the Sugar Hill Museum preschool. There will be an area, possibly elevated, where the speakers make their remarks, and there would also be an area set up for the Mayor to read to a group of kids for a couple minutes in another portion of the room.

We're still working with the preschool to figure out which room and additional details, but do please let me know what specifics you'll need and also if the Mayor be bringing his own podium.

Thanks,
Leslie

Thanks, Leslie. I'll take a look at the piece and get back to you tomorrow on it. I edited the quote below, and it's approved to use with these small changes. I also edited the ROS, below that. Note the cut on Q&A and, when you can, please send me the title of the book at least a few days beforehand

"High-quality early education is a necessity, not a luxury," said New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio. "Here in New York, we've seen firsthand that action by city and state governments can lift enrollment and the quality of education for tens of thousands of children in our communities. At a time of political polarization, these initiatives receive wide bipartisan support – and for good reason. There's no better way to ensure future success for our kids ~~and our states.~~ than to invest in their early education."

- Welcome from program director
- Steve's remarks (3-5 min)
- The Mayor
- Tentative: Either labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible) or business leader
- Libby Doggett from the DOE
- Q and A
- Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera).
- Then Mayor goes to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Hi Eric,

Hope you're well and had a nice weekend. Wanted to check in on the below, and also share with you an op-ed that we would love for the Mayor to co-sign. It's attached here – would Mayor de Blasio and your office be open to that? We'd welcome feedback and edits, if so, and we're hoping to place in a high-value NYC target around the release.

Additionally, attached is the NYC section of the executive summary in the report, for reference.

Let me know if you have any questions, and what we can move forward on. Thanks!

Hi Eric,

Thanks for checking in. Attached is the most recent version of the release, with the proposed quote for the Mayor below:

“High quality early education is a necessity, not a luxury,” said New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio. “Here in New York, we’ve seen first hand that action by state governments can lift enrollment and quality for thousands of children in our communities. At a time of political polarization, these initiatives receive wide bipartisan support – and for good reason. There’s no better way to ensure future success for our kids and our states.”

Steve, can you also send Eric the most up to date version of the report when you have a moment?

For the run of show, we are suggesting:

- Welcome from program director
- Steve's remarks (3-5 min)
- The Mayor
- Tentative: Either labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible) or business leader
- Libby Doggett from the DOE
- Q and A
- Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents

- about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera).
- Then Mayor goes to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Let me know what else we can get you.

Thanks,

Leslie

Here you go with proposed quote for the Mayor highlighted in blue.

Here is our plan for run of show for the event.

Welcome from program director, my remarks (3-5 min), Mayor, business person if possible, labor leader (Randi Weingarten AFT possible). Q and A. Then Mayor leaves stage and has 5 minute conversation with parents about what pre-K has done for their children and families (on camera). Then go to classroom where Mayor reads short book or part of book to kids on camera.

Alternatives as speakers--representative from US DOE (Sec. King not available) or Jacqueline Jones from the Foundation for Child Development, or a parent.

Does the Mayor's office have a business representative they might like to feature or a state legislative leader?

Steve has a few questions about the event

Can you forward the full contact info for Devora and Jessica from DOE and CH communications.

He has a couple questions related to other elected officials, prominent figures to include at the event. Is that the sort of thing that Devora and Jessica can field – or should that type of question come to you?

To whom it may concern:

I'm writing up a story on the Louis CK fundraiser last night for Gawker and I had a few questions I was hoping you could clarify for me:

1. Reports in Politico/DNAinfo etc quoted you guys as saying you raised $500,000 once matching donations are counted. Is it equal matching on those donations or some other structure?
2. Who is matching those funds?
3. Was there a target amount you guys were expecting to hit w/ the fundraiser?
4. The NY Post in particular has insinuated that sales of tickets at the thousand-dollar level and above were low and instead you guys filled the crowd with attendees at the hundred dollar level. Can you confirm/deny that assertion?

Thanks

Hi Stanley –

Revised camera language below:

Links include cameras on the tablet to enable user-initiated video features, and above each 55" display. They are not currently turned on, but in the future they will be used to monitor and maintain the Links. Any footage or images created by those cameras will be subject to our privacy policy, and not sold or shared with third parties. CityBridge would require a subpoena or similar lawful request before sharing any camera data with any law enforcement agency.

To whom it may concern,

My name is Philip Messing and I'm a reporter for The New York Post.

I am preparing a story for tomorrow's paper that deals with the LinkedNYC effort to provide kiosks to people in Manhattan so they can make free phone calls and use the Internet -- and I'm hoping to discuss a part of this effort with a LinkedNYC spokesman, or spokeswoman.

I am on deadline and I'm hoping that someone can contact me about this story that I'm working on.

I can be reached at this email address --
pmessing@nypost.com

I would also be appreciative if you also replied to my personal email -- [REDACTED].

Additionally, I can be reached at either of these phone numbers:

Work: 212-930-8633

Cell: [REDACTED]

Thank you so much.

Best,
Philip Messing
New York Post reporter

Hey there. Carl Campanile of the NY Post here. Can one of you folks get a comment from the mayor for me?

In an interview today, presumptive GOP presidential nominee Donald Trump teed off on Mayor de Blasio.

Trump called de Blasio "the single worst mayor in the history of New York City."

Asked about the investigations in de Blasio's fundraising activities, Trump said, "What he's done is really criminal."

Trump claimed the city's quality of life has declined under de Blasio.

"All of a sudden the squeegee guys are at the cars. All of a sudden you have homeless people living on streets you didn't see a few years ago, which is sad for the people."

He's letting a great deal go to hell. The city has a lot less spirit under him . . .

Trump even complained that he never got a phone call or a letter of thanks for completing and opening the Ferry Point golf course in The Bronx.

"We got it done in less than a year. It's open and it's very successful. I never a got a note of congratulations from this maniac. I never got a thank you letter," he said.

"I save the city's ass. I never got a phone call."

Let me know. Thanks. CC

We're doing a story on what gov is doing behind the scenes to shape 2017.

Want to offer you guys a chance to comment, if you'd like, on the following pieces:

-- Do you expect the governor's support in the election, or do you think he will back someone else/encourage someone else to run?

-- What do you say to the constant public comments by the governor that seem designed to undermine the mayor's competency?

-- Are you aware of the governor's efforts behind the scenes to encourage other candidates, sew discord against the mayor?

-- How do you think the feud shapes the re-election campaign? (We have many others weighing in on this but welcome any opinion from you.)

-- Do you have a plan to combat any possible influence by the governor into the 2017 race, should he get fully involved?

-- Has the governor and mayor chatted at all about the mayor's re-election? (I think I know the answer to this!)

-- Do you see any downsides for the governor should he decide to get involved in the mayor's re-election effort?

I am not expecting a long or candid answer, necessarily, to all of these questions and imagine I'll get a statement saying pre-K, affordable housing is great, crime is down, etc. but want to give you a chance to address the points in our story - should you choose!

Hi Mary and Giselle – Hope you are both well!

Mayor is signing new legislation that will make feminine hygiene products available in all DHS and HRA family with children, adult family, and single adult female shelters.

Would you be interested in including statement in the release? Would need by 11am tomorrow if so.

Thanks in advance for considering.

THE CITY OF NEW YORK
OFFICE OF THE MAYOR

NEW YORK, NY 10007

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE: July 13, 2016

CONTACT: pressoffice@cityhall.nyc.gov, (212) 788-2958

MAYOR DE BLASIO SIGNS LEGISLATION INCREASING ACCESS TO FEMININE HYGIENE PRODUCTS FOR STUDENTS, SHELTER RESIDENTS AND INMATES

NEW YORK—Mayor Bill de Blasio today signed a package of legislation increasing access to feminine hygiene products for New York City’s shelter residents, students and inmates. With Intros 1122-A, 1123-A and 1128-A, New York City guarantees these essential products to all Department of Corrections inmates; any person residing in a City shelter or under the care of Children’s Services – including transgender, intersex and gender non-conforming New Yorkers; and all public school students. The Mayor signed the legislation at XPLACE, further solidifying NYC as a national leader in advocating for women and girls.

“There should be no stigma around something as fundamental as menstruation. These laws recognize that feminine hygiene products are a necessity – not a luxury,” said Mayor Bill de Blasio. “Students should be able to concentrate on their studies, New Yorkers in shelter should be able to focus on rebuilding their lives, and women in our Corrections Department should be able to work toward rehabilitation and release without the indignity of inadequate access to tampons and pads. As a father, husband and feminist, I am proud to sign these bills into law.”

FLONYC

Azadeh Khalili, Executive Director of the Mayor’s Commission on Gender Equity, said, “No one should have to worry about whether they have access to feminine hygiene products when they’re already worrying about an upcoming math final or finding a permanent and safe home for their family. The Commission on Gender Equity was formed to ensure City government creates policy supportive of women and girls, regardless of gender expression, and today’s laws are a great sign of more to come in increasing fairness and access for our city’s female-bodied residents.”

The first bill, Intro. 1122-A, requires the Department of Correction to ensure that all female inmates are guaranteed access to feminine hygiene products, codifying an existing practice into law. This bill reaffirms that everyone under the care of the City should have access to the hygiene products they need. In his remarks, the Mayor thanked the bill’s sponsors, Council Speaker Melissa Mark-Viverito and Council Member Julissa Ferreras-Copeland.

The second bill, Intro. 1123-A, requires the Department of Citywide Administrative Services to make feminine hygiene products available to agencies that operate temporary shelters or have oversight of providers operating temporary shelters. This includes the Department of Homeless Services family shelters and single adult shelters; HIV/AIDS Services Administration shelters; and Human Resources Administration domestic violence shelters. The bill also requires DCAS to make such products available to youth in secure detention facilities, and youth awaiting placement with a licensed foster care agency in congregate care facilities, both of which are operated by the Administration for Children's Services.

By making feminine hygiene products available in all single-adult shelters – not just women's shelters – the bill guarantees that transgender, intersex and gender non-conforming New Yorkers will all have access to the products, regardless of their gender identity or expression. In his remarks, the Mayor thanked the bill's sponsors, Council Speaker Melissa Mark-Viverito and Council Member Stephen Levin.

The third bill, Intro. 1128-A, requires the Department of Education to make free feminine hygiene products available to students in the bathrooms of school buildings, making New York City's the largest program of its kind nationwide. This bill ensures that students have the support they need to focus on learning and feel comfortable in the classroom.

This policy will apply to school buildings in which there are students in grades 6 to 12, including charter schools in DOE controlled and operated spaces. To better educate New York City families on this program, schools will host parent workshops and student information sessions about feminine hygiene products during the 2015-2016 school year. In his remarks, the Mayor thanked the bill's sponsors, Council Speaker Melissa Mark-Viverito and Council Member Julissa Ferreras-Copeland.

Intro. 1128-A comes after a successful pilot program during the 2015-2016 school year. The City placed 380 dispensers across 25 middle and high schools and trained staff members in assisting students and parents in any concerns with the program. School principals responded positively to the pilot.

Hello,

I'm writing a follow up story to the rolling out of Link NYC kiosks and I'm hoping I can speak to an official to get comments about some reactions I've gotten from residents on the Upper East side. Residents have said they either don't use the kiosks, they congest sidewalks or they've seen homeless people camp out around them for hours. The one person I saw using the kiosk yesterday was homeless.

Many residents also wondered why the beta phase was rolling out in the Upper East Side when other neighborhoods might have a greater need for internet access. Is it because of the exposure of advertisements?

I would love to have a graphic go along with story that shows the number of kiosks that are working, the number of kiosks installed and the number of kiosks that are planned to be installed in the city. Could someone please send me that data and info?

Feel free to give me a call.

As discussed, we approached News 12 about the Per Scholas story. They swung by a Link today to meet our Per Scholas street team, though the story seems to be also focused on excitement on how the Bronx got to get Links before the other outerboroughs.

Clip should air shortly, we'll send around when it does.

Wiley,

Per your request attached please find draft press release from SL Green announcing their settlement of litigation w Midtown Trackage. While some wording and details may change this is far enough along to share. As of now the plan is to announce this tomorrow but that is not yet final.

Let me know any questions or concerns.

Thanks,

Jonathan

SL Green Announces ~~Settlement Agreement~~ with Midtown TDR Ventures to ~~End~~ Withdraw One Vanderbilt Litigation

NEW YORK – SL Green Realty Corp. (NYSE: SLG) today announced an agreement with Midtown TDR Ventures to settle their litigation regarding SL Green’s One Vanderbilt, an iconic new office tower under construction adjacent to Grand Central Terminal. The settlement resolves the legal claims that Midtown TDR Ventures asserted to invalidate the Vanderbilt Corridor rezoning amendment and the One Vanderbilt special permit, thereby eliminating uncertainty surrounding the building.

“This is a major milestone for the future of East Midtown, clearing the way for One Vanderbilt to deliver state-of-the-art Class A office space and unprecedented investment in Grand Central’s transit infrastructure,” said Marc Holliday, CEO of SL Green Realty Corp. “We’re ~~pleased~~ grateful that the new ownership of Midtown TDR Ventures shares our commitment to development in East Midtown and worked with us to quickly reach this ~~settlement agreement~~. ~~With demolition nearly complete and work already underway on public improvements, progress can now continue without delay being~~ tweaked! One Vanderbilt is well on the way to becoming a reality.”

One Vanderbilt is bounded by Vanderbilt Avenue and Madison Avenue between East 42nd and East 43rd Streets in Manhattan’s East Midtown business district. The 63-story skyscraper will be 1,501 feet tall and contain 1.6 million square feet of Class A commercial space. Designed by Kohn Pedersen Fox (KPF), One Vanderbilt’s architecture and building materials pay homage to the landmarked Terminal and the surrounding East Midtown business district. One Vanderbilt features open floor plans, efficient use of space, and the highest level of sustainable design in New York City. As part of the development, SL Green will invest $220 million in public infrastructure in and around Grand Central Terminal.

Maybe something like this for starters?

Citi Bike continues to break records both at home and abroad, and it saw it's first day over 60,000 trips on Wednesday. Citi Bike is the busiest bike share system in North America and one of the busiest in the world. London's program which is larger and older has only beaten 60,000 trips twice in their history.

Hey there,

We've gotten some interest from print so far, amNY and potentially NYPost. We'd love to do a release, let me know if you need help from us. I am looping in Madeline from Berlin Rosen, she's up to speed. I am tied up with a big announcement in SF that's happening first thing tomorrow.

Best,

Dani

Our current draft of release. Would be great if you all could please update stats and perhaps add some of your latest boiler plate at end?

CITI BIKE SETS NEW DAILY RIDERSHIP RECORDS

Mayor Bill de Blasio today announced that Citi Bike, New York City's bike-share system had set new daily ridership records this week. For the first time, more than 60,000 Citi Bike rides were taken on both Wednesday and Thursday. With more than 9 million rides taken so far in 2016, Citi Bike should exceed the annual record of 10 million rides it achieved during 2015 sometime within the next month.

"Now that it is reaching even more and more diverse neighborhoods of New York City, Citi Bikes are now being ridden in record numbers – breaking 60,000 rides for the first time on Wednesday and then hitting a new daily record of XXXXX yesterday," said Mayor de Blasio. "With 565 stations and counting in Manhattan, Queens and Brooklyn, Citi Bike is growing and we remain committed to bringing this great transit alternative to even more New Yorkers in the years ahead."

"In Brooklyn neighborhoods like Park Slope, where Citi Bikes arrived only in the last two weeks, they have become so well-used and popular, it's already hard to remember what it was like without them," said DOT Commissioner Trottenberg. "Getting around brownstone Brooklyn -- along with other new Citi Bike neighborhoods like East Harlem and Red Hook -- has never been so easy, convenient and affordable."

"With this new 60,000 trip milestone, Citi Bike is the busiest bike share system in North America and one of the busiest across the globe," said Jay Walder, the CEO of Motivate, which operates Citi Bike. "The system is becoming not just a leader in bike share internationally, but a leader in transit right here in New York— on par with green cabs or the Staten Island Ferry. It is a useful part of our city's transit network, and we encourage everyone to strap on a helmet and give it a try."

Hi guys;

Here are some answers to your questions:

Did today's record break yesterday's? -- will not know until the end of the day

What was our previous daily ridership record? 23 Aug 2016, 58665 trips

How is our annual ridership looking so far this year as compared to last

5,936,430 as of 9/7/15;

8,949,075 as of 9/7/16

(and for what it's worth, on that date last year there were just over 30,000 rides— so the day more than doubled)

Current size of the system-- 565 stations and growing daily

Let me know if you have others.

Thanks!

Madeline

CITI BIKE SETS NEW DAILY RIDERSHIP RECORDS

Mayor Bill de Blasio today announced that Citi Bike, New York City's bike-share system had set new daily ridership records this week. For the first time, more than 60,000 Citi Bike rides were taken on both Wednesday and Thursday. With more than 9 million rides taken so far in 2016, Citi Bike should exceed the annual record of 10 million rides it achieved during 2015 sometime within the next month.

“Now that it is reaching even more and more diverse neighborhoods of New York City, Citi Bikes are now being ridden in record numbers – breaking 60,000 rides for the first time on Wednesday and then hitting a new daily record of 61,266 rides yesterday,” said Mayor de Blasio. “With 565 stations and counting in Manhattan, Queens and Brooklyn, Citi Bike is growing and we remain committed to bringing this great transit alternative to even more New Yorkers in the years ahead.”

“In Brooklyn neighborhoods like Park Slope, where Citi Bikes arrived only in the last two weeks, they have become so well-used and popular, it’s already hard to remember what it was like without them,” said DOT Commissioner Trottenberg. “Getting around brownstone Brooklyn -- along with other new Citi Bike neighborhoods like East Harlem and Red Hook -- has never been so easy, convenient and affordable.”

"With this new 60,000 trip milestone, Citi Bike is the busiest bike share system in North America and one of the busiest across the globe,” said Jay Walder, the CEO of Motivate, which operates Citi Bike. “The system is becoming not just a leader in bike share internationally, but a leader in transit right here in New York— on par with green cabs or the Staten Island Ferry. It is a useful part of our city's transit network, and we encourage everyone to strap on a helmet and give it a try.”

About Citi Bike: The Citi Bike program is New York’s bike share system. It will have 10,000 bikes at over 600 stations by the end of 2016. Stations are located in Manhattan below 86th Street and in the Brooklyn neighborhoods of Downtown Brooklyn, DUMBO, Brooklyn Heights, Fort Greene, Clinton Hill, Bedford-Stuyvesant, Williamsburg, and Greenpoint and in Long Island City, Queens, with stations located every few blocks, and the program is expanding this year – into Harlem, Park Slope, Boerum Hill, Cobble Hill, Carroll Gardens, Gowanus, and Red Hook. Annual members receive an electronic key to undock a bike from any station, allowing unlimited trips up to 45 minutes without incurring any additional costs. Twenty-four-hour passes are available for purchase at any Citi Bike station or through the Citi Bike app and provide unlimited 30-minute trips. Reduced cost memberships are available for NYCHA residents and members of select credit unions throughout the city, and for IDNYC holders in their first year of membership. For more info visit: www.citibikenyc.com/expansion.

Maybe something like this for starters?

Citi Bike continues to break records both at home and abroad, and it saw its first day over 60,000 trips on Wednesday. Citi Bike is the busiest bike share system in North America and one of the busiest in the world. London's program which is larger and older has only beaten 60,000 trips twice in their history.

Hi Valerie,

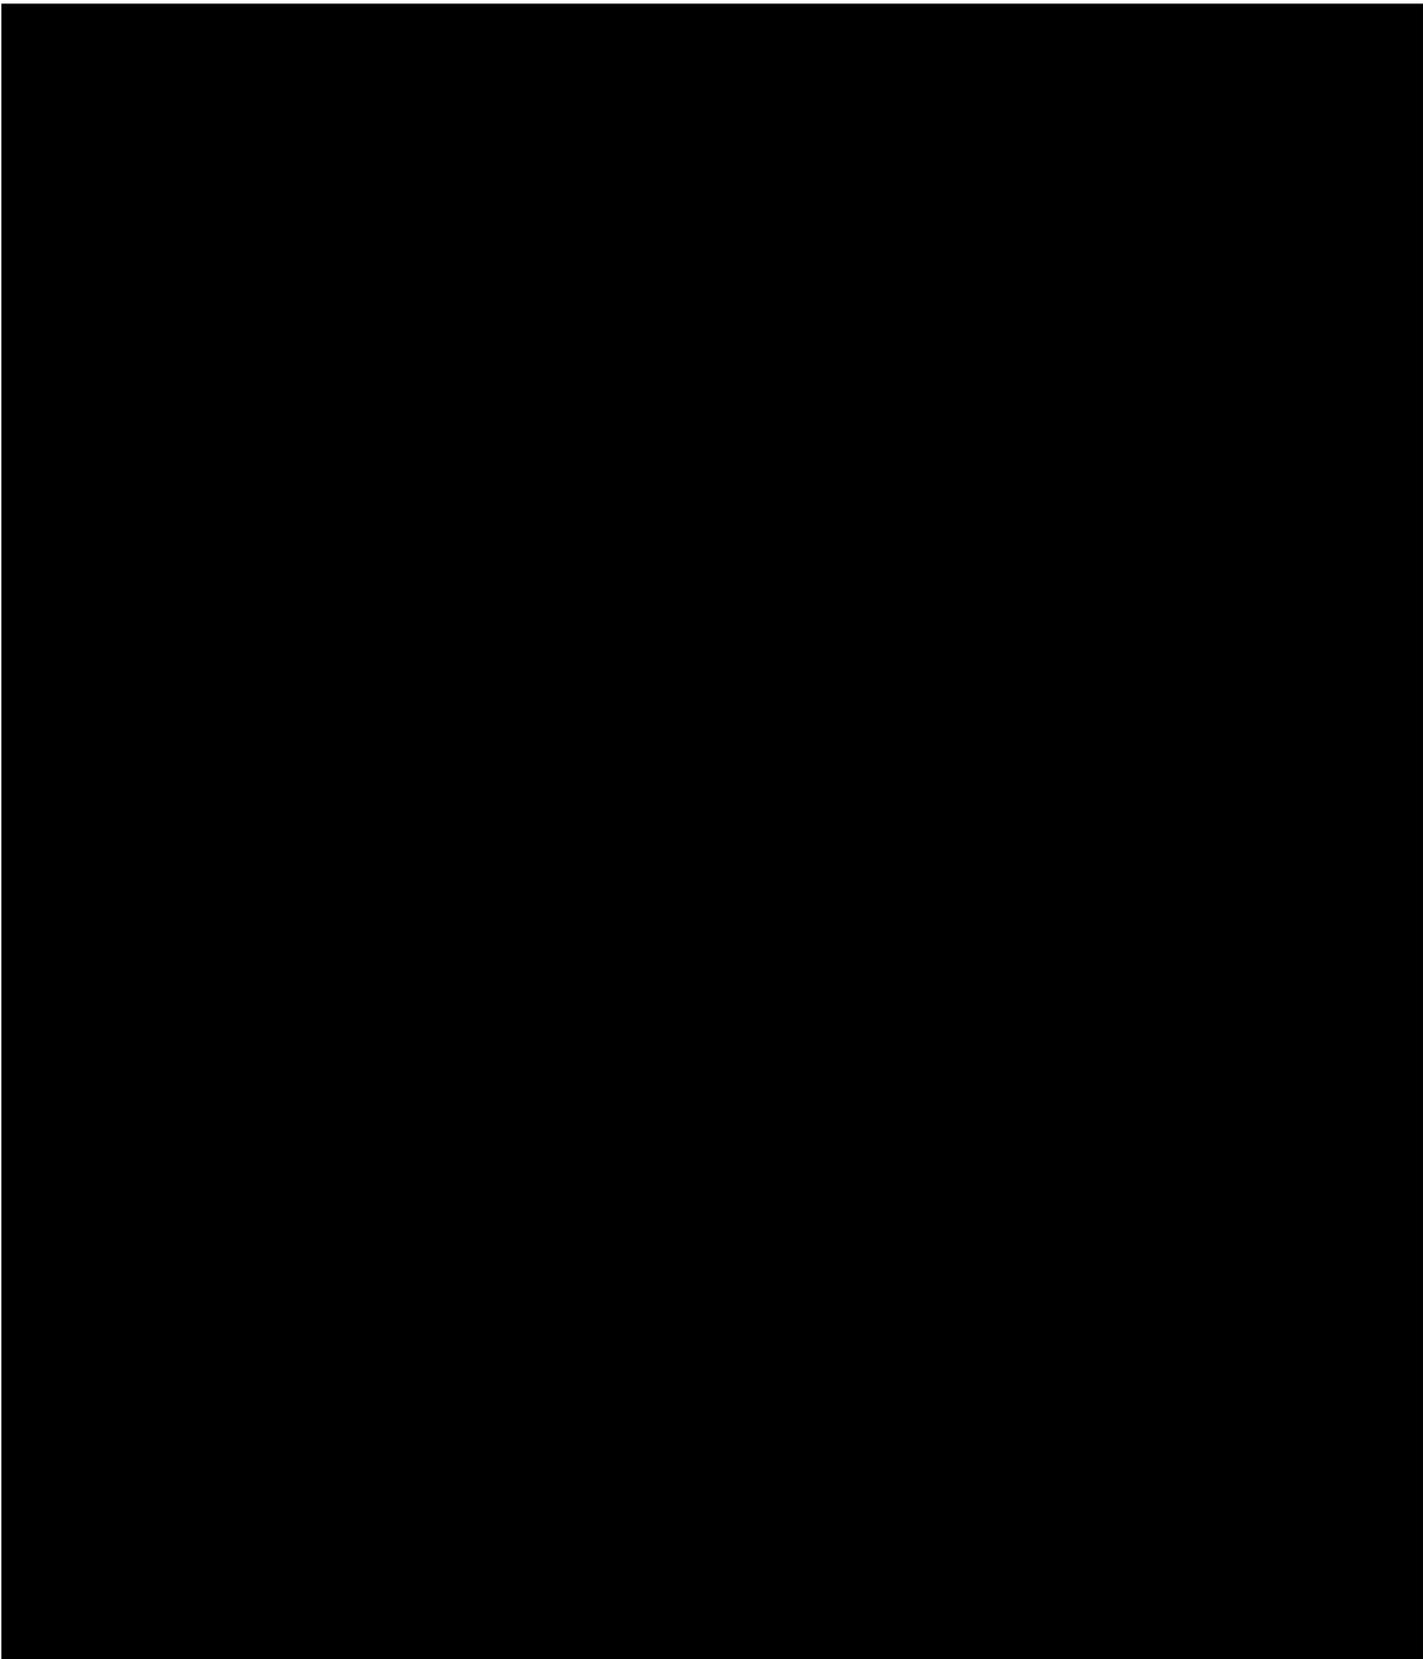

Thank you so much for speaking with me today and offering assistance as I execute my job search. It was a real pleasure to finally talk to you as Evan speaks of you and Amy often.

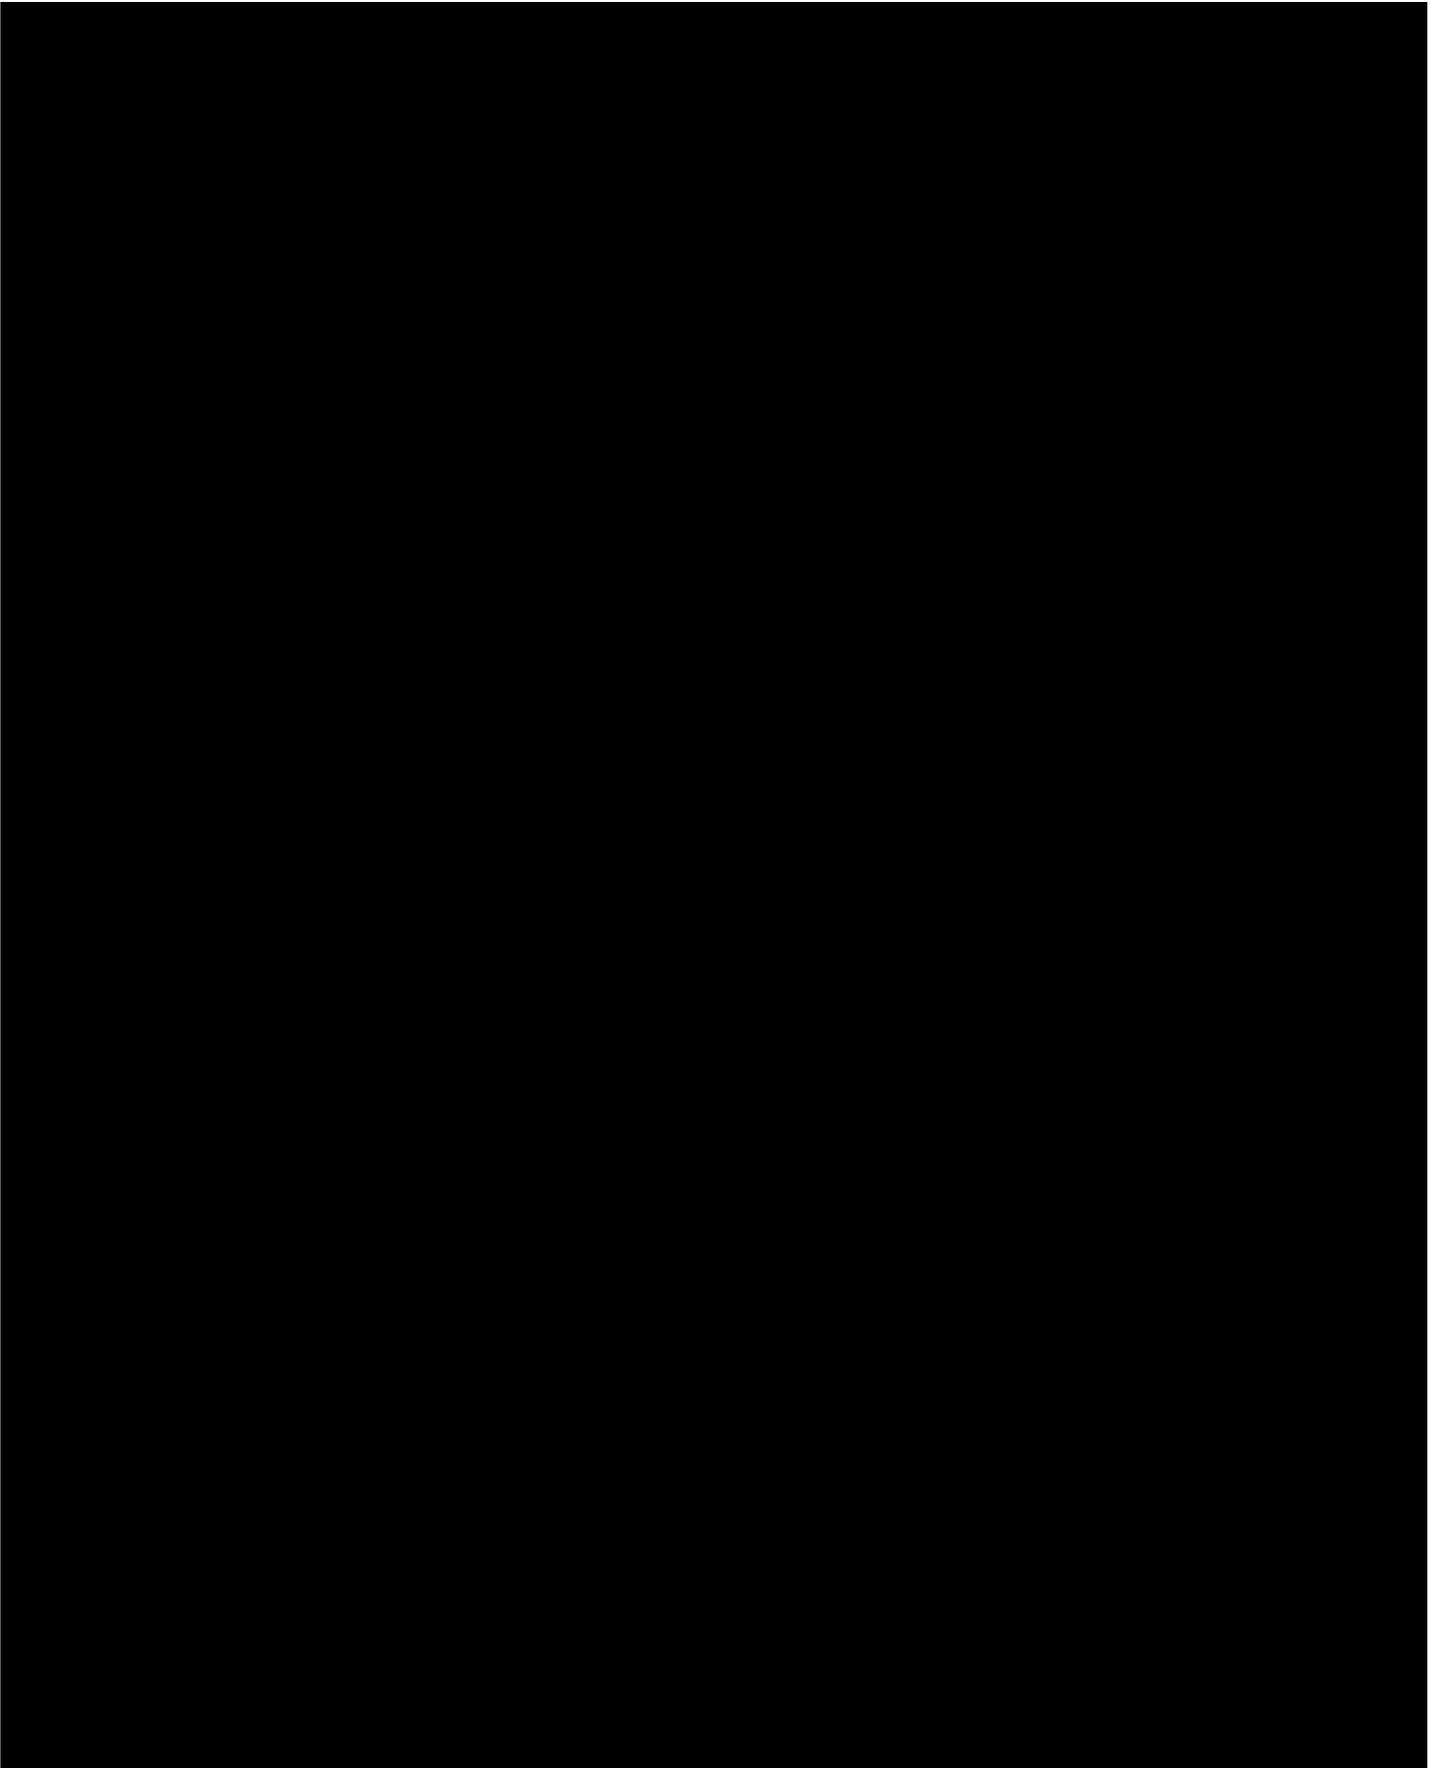

As promised, attached is my resume. Please feel free to share it as you see fit. The position I applied for at DYCD is Deputy Director of Employer Engagement and Partnerships; the NYCHA role is Executive Vice President for Community Programs and Development. Both opportunities match my desire for a leadership role in a city agency committed to serving the highest need communities. I would like to capitalize on my experience building relationships with a diverse group of stakeholders, and designing and managing systems and programs that help disenfranchised families access vital resources. If you become aware of other positions you think would be a fit for someone with my background and experience, please let me know.

Thank you again for all your help.

Have a great evening!

Hi -- wanted to follow up with the communications folks from our call yesterday; adding Danny Massey from Berlin Rosen. We're really excited about the scheduling legislation and want to get the biggest splash we can from the announcement next week. A few things:

- It'd be powerful to be able to frame the scheduling issue as the Mayor's cutting edge response to a serious, widespread problem that deeply affects the lives of fast food workers across the country, and that the Mayor in partnership with 32BJ is responding to a call from workers as part of a national movement and finding a way to change the lives of thousands in NYC.

- With that in mind, we'd love to be able to pitch an advance exclusive to a reporter who'd understand and respect the worker aspect of this, as opposed to focusing on the politics. Some ideas are Noam Scheiber or Patty Cohen at the Times, and Steve Greenhouse.

- We know it gets dicey for you all to pitch exclusives, so we'd be happy to have the pitch come from us, and of course work collaboratively on the substance of it.

Let me know what you think. Thanks,

Elaine

Good afternoon,

I wanted to reach out to learn a bit more about the filters used at the WiFi kiosks around the city. After an incident in front of Third & 31st this weekend, families in that area are concerned (They say a man was watching pornography and masturbating). They say this is not the first instance of people using the wifi for inappropriate things.

How is it possible that inappropriate videos are being accessed? What time of controls are in place to prevent this? Is there a way to implement stricter controls at this kiosks?

I appreciate your help. We are going to be looking into the problems parents have presented, however I have no exact deadline for when we'd like to air the piece. I would like to receive comment from the city before we decide and move forward.

On Thursday, Mayor de Blasio will be making an announcement about the City's next big policy push: fair scheduling. As you know, hourly employees too often have very little control over their work schedules, particularly in the fast food industry. They are typically not asked for input during scheduling and their hours can change with very little notice. This makes it very hard for workers to plan ahead for childcare and eldercare.

My colleague Joni, ccd here, can brief you on the announcement more specifically if desired.

Hi Andrea, Joni and Freddi -

Below is our statement on the Mayor's fair scheduling policy; please let us know if you would like us to make any changes or additions.

"Every worker deserves a family friendly workplace," said Vivien Labaton, co-director of Make It Work. "It doesn't matter who you work for, what you do, or how much you're paid — none of us should have to choose between earning a paycheck and caring for our loved ones. Mayor de Blasio's proposal to ensure fair scheduling is not only an important move toward a more stable workforce and a stronger economy, but also in strengthening families and communities in New York City."

Thanks again for the opportunity to be part of this effort! If you have social media assets you would like us to promote, please let us know.

-- It'd be powerful to locate this action by the Mayor as part of the movement of fast food workers that started right here in NYC and has grown nationally and even internationally. Their courage and perseverance has been and continues to be the heart of this fight.

-- seems like an opportunity to recognize that this scheduling bill for fast food workers would be the first of its kind (specifically for these workers) in the country. The Mayor and his administration are making a bold move here that will hopefully reverberate around the country; he is leading the way on an issue workers feel passionately about and will literally change lives.

-- we'd like Hector and 32BJ to be mentioned specifically -- we've been key to the growth and successes of the fast food movement in New York, will continue to do so in an increasingly public way and have been an important partner to the administration over the years.

Thanks,

Elaine

Folks still working on but here's a draft of rls. At end will include some info about OLPS + list of other admin policies to help working New Yorkers.

MAYOR DE BLASIO, COUNCILMEMBERS, ADVOCATES ANNOUNCE PLAN TO ENSURE NEW YORK CITY'S FAST FOOD WORKERS ARE PROTECTED BY FAIR WORK WEEK LEGISLATION

Tens of thousands of hourly workers in NYC lack predictable, stable, and transparent work hours Absence of fair scheduling makes planning for days and months ahead nearly impossible for working families

Mayor calls for advance notice and public posting of schedules; additional compensation for working unscheduled hours; addressing problems caused by "clopenings"

NEW YORK — Today, standing outside of a McDonald's in Brooklyn, Mayor Bill de Blasio was joined by elected officials, labor leaders, workers, clergy and community members to announce support for "Fair Work Week" legislation to ensure that 65,000 hourly employees in the fast food industry receive fair notification on their work hours. Currently, employers aren't required to provide their hourly employees with advance notice of upcoming shifts. As a result, too many families cannot budget in advance, plan for education or family care, or secure a necessary second job.

Across the country, nearly one in five Americans has an unstable work schedule and about 40 percent of early career workers, defined as workers aged 26-32, have less than one week advance notice of their schedules. We know this is particularly an issue with fast food workers, whose national average age is 29 and more than a quarter of whom are parents raising children. Too many of New York City's 65,000 fast food workers can't make the necessary arrangements for child care or the care of elderly parents. Unpredictable schedules make it nearly impossible to budget expenses or plan for the future.

In the coming months, Mayor de Blasio will work with members of the City Council, advocates, labor groups, and the business community and to draft specific legislation to support hardworking fast food hourly employees who are currently hit hardest by these practices.

Specifically, Fair Work Week legislation would:

- Require employers, beginning with the fast food industry, to schedule a majority of expected shifts and publicly post a workplace schedule two weeks in advance;
- Protect workers by requiring employers to provide additional compensation when workers are required to accommodate last-minute changes to their schedules for reasons within employers' ability to plan or control;
- Address problems created by the practice of "clopenings," or shifts that require employees to consecutively work closing and opening shifts with fewer than ten hours between them.

These measures will give hourly fast food employees more stability and predictability, while preventing employers from deliberately under scheduling workers and forcing them to remain "on call," a state in which employees do not know if they will be called into work or not. These measures will also allow employers and employees flexibility to adjust schedules when unforeseen issues arise outside of either party's control.

By knowing their schedules ahead of time, employees will have more certainty over their income and finances, and a greater ability to accommodate extra work if it's available. Most importantly, this proposal means employees will now have more flexibility: flexibility to take classes, care for their children, accompany an ailing parent to a doctor's appointment, or work a second job.

When Flavia Cabral leaves her first job at XXpm to head to her second job at a McDonald's in WHERE?, she doesn't know when she's coming home. She doesn't know when she'll see her family or even when she'll get a full night's sleep next.

That's because Flavia's schedule, like that of so many of her fellow 65,000 fast food workers in New York City, is at the mercy of her employer. McDonald's and other similar fast food chains country aren't currently required to provide hourly workers with sufficiently advance notice of upcoming shifts – how many they're getting or even when those shifts are. A manager can call a worker who's just gotten home and tell them they have to be back at work in an hour.

And if that short-notice assignment conflicts with a long-scheduled doctor's appointment for an elderly parent or a parent-teacher conference, or if the number of hours you get isn't enough to pay the rent or buy groceries, there's not much you can do. Often, if you can't or don't agree to the assigned hours, your hours could be cut or you could lose their job altogether.

All this adds up to hardworking New Yorkers being forced into untenable situations. While they're taking care of growing kids or aging parents, they have to deal with an arbitrary schedule at a job where they still don't necessarily make ends meet.

Every worker in our city has the right to a stable, healthy life, whether they go to work at a burger joint, the local coffee shop, a favorite take-out spot, or anywhere else.

Unsurprisingly, when fair scheduling practices aren't in place, there's a negative impact on children and families.

Kids in homes where parents have unpredictable schedules tend to have poorer health, don't do as well in school, and have challenges developing memory and communications skills.

It makes it much harder to find a second job because working in fast food isn't enough to keep food on the table.

And it hurts the workers themselves, whose health suffers.

Perhaps most importantly, it prevents the next generation from breaking the cycle that can lead to working in fast food in the first place. [We can't tie affordability to fluctuating hours]. Many of Flavia's college-age coworkers face the same fate, unable to afford or commit to attending classes when they never know in advance how much they're going to take home or even when they can go home.

As Flavia says, without an education our young people are much more likely to get and stay in the same job she has now. "It won't be a successful country," she says, "if so many families can't send people to go to school."

She's right.

That is why today, we begin to create change for our families, our communities, our city, and our country.

In the months ahead, we're going to work together with our partners in the City Council, advocates, and the business community to craft a law that helps make sure that fast food employees have fair and transparent scheduling practices. This law will require employers to publicly post a schedule two weeks in advance, and, if hours need to be changed on short notice, require employers to appropriately compensate employees.

We're also going to address the problem of "clopenings," or shifts that require employees to consecutively work closing and opening shifts with fewer than 10 hours between them.

Making our fellow New Yorkers in the fast food industry and healthier and stronger will lift our economy, too.

Since January 2014, the City of New York has expanded Paid Sick Leave to more than half a million more New Yorkers. Employers with 20 or more employees are now required to provide pre-tax benefits you can use to buy your monthly Metrocard. There's even a new City office – the Office of Labor Policy and Standards, the first of its kind in New York, focused on protecting workers.

And while we've been working on this, our city has added more than 290,000 private sector jobs and the number of people employed in our city is at an all-time high of 4.3 million.

Flavia says, "we don't want to be rich... we just want to have a decent salary and educate our children."

By creating a fair work week, we're not just doing right by Flavia. Treating workers with respect and fairness lifts up all our communities, our city, and our country.

Ok so we have a single mom with a young child who wants to do it but is scheduled to work Thursday and trying to get someone to switch shifts with her. She's making calls tonight to try to arrange it.

As back-up I have [REDACTED] confirmed. He's already been vetted. He has 2 kids in hS and 2 in college. His wife has health problems and can't work right now so he is sole support of his family. His schedule is changed all the time the day before/day of and his hours are often cut by these changes. So not only does this make it hard to meet commitments with his kids but he doesn't even know how much money he'll earn each week. [REDACTED] is also available to do a call at 10:30 tomorrow morning if you want to get more details from him.

We're still connecting with more workers so I hope to have a few more options by the morning.

lives in a shelter

[REDACTED]

in Brooklyn
He is a student-- but recently had to drop out because of scheduling issues that made it too difficult for him to keep up with his classes.

When organizer confirms with [REDACTED] she'll also ask him for the shelter address and his DOB.

We are still working on getting in touch with [REDACTED] as a back-up but he also doesn't have a cell phone and his work schedule is not very fixed so he's harder to find at work but I'm hoping to have more news this evening.

I will keep you all posted.

Yes, sorry. Really the lead is people fear it won't stop homeless from congregating at the hot spots.

Carmine Soprano, manager of Iron Bar on the corner of 45th Street and 8th Avenue, said the kiosk has been an issue ever since the city put one up on 8th right in front of the restaurant.

"They've become these little homeless hubs. They come in groups of six or seven people, they bring all their friends, and they camp out, start smoking weed, and are just having a little party out. They'll take up half the sidewalk and just hang out. For a place that's open like this, it's very disruptive for us and our customers."

"I've seen drug deals happening through it. They'll (a homeless person) will contact someone through the phone on there and the person with the drugs will come and meet them (the caller) right out front."

Also, head of Garment District BID said shes happy, but worried hoomless with cell phones will congregate with their own phones

Both opportunities match my desire for a leadership role in a city agency committed to serving the highest need communities. I would like to capitalize on my experience building relationships with a diverse group of stakeholders, and designing and managing systems and programs that help disenfranchised families access vital resources. If you become aware of other positions you think would be a fit for someone with my background and experience, please let me know.

Hello,

The Children's Defense Fund- New York has released its policy recommendations on how school-based health centers can stay afloat in a political landscape in flux.

School-based health centers are critical lifelines for New York City's underserved children. Today, these comprehensive service providers serve thousands of children in 345 schools throughout New York City. However, in a few short months, many of these school-based health centers could find themselves in financial jeopardy. A mandate that school-based health centers transition to a Medicaid managed care reimbursement model by July 1, 2017 could threaten their viability.

CDF-NY's recommendations will help ensure that existing school-based health centers keep their doors open, and high-need schools aren't deterred from opening these much-needed centers.

Recommendations include:

- Creating a transition to Medicaid managed care
- Developing a pathway for SBHCs to bill for services delivered to children covered by Child Health Plus
- Building the necessary infrastructure to claim Medicaid reimbursement for non-SBHC services

To watch a webinar on the recommendations, please click here. The briefs discussed in the film can be found at www.cdfny.org; you can also refer to the one-pager attached to this email.

Let us know if you plan to cover this.

Children's Defense Fund

A strong, effective, independent voice for all the children of America

Key Information on School-Based Health Centers: Keeping Students Healthy, Keeping School-Based Care Financially Sound

Summary: New York City educates 1.1 million students across roughly 1,800 schools. Schools are now recognized as critical health care access points, ones that uniquely bridge the city's health and education systems by reaching children who would otherwise go without medical care. Over the past several years, New York City has created a number of school-based health centers (SBHCs) aimed at expanding the delivery of health services in schools. While SBHCs are proven to be incredibly effective in improving health outcomes, schools must take requisite steps to ensure these valuable institutions remain financially sound.

Children must be healthy in order to learn:

- Research has proven that children with unmet health needs are far less likely to succeed in school:
  - New York City children who are considered to be in excellent or very good health are more likely to receive mostly As and Bs than children who are in fair or poor health.
  - In New York City, neighborhoods with the highest rates of chronic elementary school absenteeism are communities where both child and adult residents continue to face overwhelming health disparities.
- In many New York City neighborhoods, children face significant barriers accessing high-quality primary care.
  - While in New York City the percentage of children under 18 with health insurance is approximately 97 percent, only about 60 percent of adolescents received the recommended number of well child visits.

School-based health centers provide students with much-needed care:

- As of March 2016, 145 SBHCs were serving 345 schools throughout New York City:
  - SBHCs, which are located within schools and deliver health care to children at no cost, offer students, primary and preventative care, chronic disease management and treatment of urgent care needs.
  - For many underserved children, SBHCs are the first and only place in which they are able to access health care services.
- We know that SBHCs are effective:
  - Research has shown that these clinics have helped secure significant gains to children's physical health, weight and nutrition, dental and vision care, mental health and reproductive health.
  - SBHCs have improved attendance rates and decreased tardiness, in many cases improving educational outcomes as well.

Recommendations to keep SBHCs solvent:

SBHCs are cost-intensive, and schools must work to maximize available funds to keep these institutions afloat, especially in light of recent NYS policy changes. Steps to maximize funds include:

- Creating a transition to Medicaid managed care:
  - NYS' Department of Health has scheduled school-based health center providers to transition into a Medicaid-managed care reimbursement model by July 1, 2017. This could potentially weaken the financial viability of SBHCs.
  - SBHCs will need to secure guaranteed reimbursement for services delivered to students. SBHCs must also be able to provide chronic disease, urgent, behavioral and reproductive care without first securing authorization.
- Developing a pathway for SBHCs to bill for services delivered to children covered by Child Health Plus:
  - As SBHCs transition into Medicaid managed care, they will need to develop the capacity to bill multiple managed care organizations.
  - More complete billing will enable SBHCs to secure a greater amount of revenue and decrease the amount of uncompensated care delivered.
- Building the necessary infrastructure to claim Medicaid reimbursement for non-SBHC services:
  - Since 2009, the New York City DOE has claimed only a small portion of the Medicaid reimbursement for which it is eligible. A recent study from the City Comptroller reports that DOE has lost $356 million in potential Medicaid reimbursement because of insufficient data collection and overly burdensome federal and state regulations.
  - The DOE can better position itself to generate the Medicaid dollars for which it is eligible by improving its data collections systems and investing in administrative support to appropriately claim this reimbursement.
- Implementing the free care policy change in New York State:
  - In December 2014, the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS) reversed a longstanding policy that heavily restricted school districts' ability to bill Medicaid for preventative, evaluative and medically necessary health and mental health services offered to all students at no cost.
  - The free care policy change is the opportunity for the New York City Department of Education to more broadly bill Medicaid for preventative, evaluative and medically necessary health and mental health services.

Release is below, with quotes still being added.

Full Stack Modular LLC Purchases Core Assets of FC Modular, LLC from Forest City Ratner Companies

Leading Member of FC Modular and Award-Winning Inventor of High-Rise Modular Technology Acquires Company's Core Assets, Launches Full Stack Modular

Full Stack Modular to Build on the Success of 461 Dean Street, The World's Tallest Modular Residential High Rise

Brooklyn, NY – October 5, 2016 – Full Stack Modular, LLC announced today that it has purchased the core assets of FC Modular from Forest City Ratner Companies (FCRC), a wholly owned subsidiary of Forest City Realty Trust, Inc., (NYSE: FCEA and FCEB). Full Stack Modular will offer turn-key modular solutions for developers of new multi-family buildings, hotels and dormitories and will continue to operate out of the 100,000+ square foot factory in the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

Full Stack Modular's CEO and founder, Roger Krulak, was formerly Senior Vice President of Modular Construction at FCRC where he was a leading member of the team that built the modular business that formed the foundation of FCRC's flagship project, 461 Dean Street, the tallest modular building in the world. 461 Dean is now leasing and will welcome its first tenants this fall to breathtaking views and amenities made possible by its modular construction.

The deal includes the long-term lease at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, all equipment and Intellectual Property, as well as the bespoke technology created for this manufacturing process. Full Stack Modular will also maintain the groundbreaking collective bargaining agreement with the Building and Construction Trades Council of New York and its members, and anticipates rehiring much of the original workforce responsible for 461 Dean Street.

"I am very proud to own a company that will continue to build upon our original mission at Forest City, and further grow the valuable relationships with the community, the unions and the talented workers who help bring our vision to life," said Krulak. "Modular is the future of multifamily construction and Full Stack Modular will be at the forefront of innovation in our industry. Our systems are not only more efficient and cost effective than conventional building, but also more sustainable and community-friendly."

"We have always been firm believers in modular construction and we are incredibly proud of the breakthroughs we've made that will soon be seen at 461 Dean Street," said MaryAnne Gilmartin, President and CEO of Forest City Ratner Companies. "The sale allows us to put our focus on our core strengths – management of our assets and our incredible pipeline of development. We are thrilled that the high-rise residential modular industry we launched will continue its ground-breaking innovations in the skilled hands of Roger Krulak at Full Stack Modular. We know it will be a great success."

An internationally recognized expert in modular construction and innovation, Roger Krulak was the recipient of the 2014 Popular Mechanics 'Breakthrough Award' for his work on the creation of the high-rise modular process, has been appointed to the Building Innovation Panel for the Country of Singapore and regularly speaks all over the world.

About Full Stack Modular

Full Stack Modular provides turn-key modular solutions for developers of new multi-family buildings, hotels and dormitories. Full Stack Modular is dedicated to the innovation and creation of environmentally-conscious, cost-effective and labor-friendly development of multi-family housing. The company is located in New York City, in the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

Good news, we have sold the business and will be announcing tomorrow. The DM mentioned her desire to be helpful - perhaps she wants to put a quote in the new buyers release? Keeping factory, rehiring workers, union jobs

Bill de Blasio: I stay in touch with him and his team a lot. He has recently asked to have increased direct access to her so he can tell his progressive partners what she thinks about issues important to them. He also thinks he can be most helpful to her if he has that kind of relationship. He wants to be seen as the loudest progressive voice for her and in order to do that he needs access. In the next 6 months, someone else will have to inherit this relationship because it will not be tenable for HRC.

We are writing an article off Tish's James' worst landlord list. The No. 3 person on list, Efstathios Valiotis, was also a key contributor to Mayor de Blasio's Campaign for One New York and to his 2013 campaign. Records show that his firm Alma Realty gave $5,000 to the non-profit and his employees donated another $5,525 to de Blasio's 2013 campaign as the company was trying to get zoning changes approved in the Rockaways and its Astoria Cove plan approved by the city.

Please let me know if you'd like to comment.

We’re looking at doing a kickstand that will sit in front of the dirt and be about 6 feet long, ensures the whole message gets in every shot. There wasn’t a good way to do something overhead that would be in all the shots and look nice.

Can you help me quickly fact check/add in missing pieces?

People served by area transit:

- 154,000 commuters use the Grand Central Lexington Line stop—2nd busiest in city

Transit Improvements at Grand Central: $220 million, paid for by SL Green

- Refurbish Grand Central's crumbling subway mezzanine
- New exits at ends of both 4-5-6 platforms
- More room on 4-5-6 platforms, by narrowing obstructions
  - Narrowed staircases
  - Narrowed columns
- More turnstiles
- More connections from mezzanine directly to streets (reducing crowding at existing exits)
- Reduced overcrowding will allow for 1 extra train per hour—making room for 1,100 more riders each hour
- Direct connections from the new tower to subway, MetroNorth and future LIRR
- 4,000 s/f transit hall/waiting room in ground floor of tower
- Vanderbilt between 42nd and 43rd closed to traffic, becomes pedestrian plaza—more room to breathe in crowded heart of Midtown
- Completed January 2020
- New building CANNOT be occupied until transit work is complete

About the Building: 1 Vanderbilt

- 65-story
- New headquarters for TD Bank
- TKTK temporary jobs
- TKTK permanent jobs

Edits in CAPS or highlights.

People served by area transit:

- 154,000 commuters use the Grand Central Lexington Line stop—2nd busiest in city

Transit Improvements at Grand Central: $220 million, paid for by SL Green

- Approximately two thirds of the $220 million in public infrastructure funding will go to enhancing connections and circulation spaces along the Lexington Avenue 4/5/6 subway line.
- Refurbish Grand Central's crumbling subway mezzanine
- New exits at ends of both 4-5-6 platforms
- More room on 4-5-6 platforms, by narrowing obstructions
  - Narrowed staircases
  - Narrowed columns
- More turnstiles
(NONE OF OUR STUFF TALKS ABOUT TURNSTILES, NOT SURE ABOUT THIS, ASSUME NEW ENTRANCES MEANS MORE TURNSTILES)
- More connections from mezzanine directly to streets (reducing crowding at existing exits)
- Reduced overcrowding will allow for 1 extra train per hour—making room for 1,100 more riders each hour
- Direct connections from the new tower to subway, MetroNorth and future LIRR
- 4,000 s/f transit hall/waiting room in ground floor of tower
- Vanderbilt between 42nd and 43rd closed to traffic, becomes pedestrian plaza—more room to breathe in crowded heart of Midtown
- Completed January 2020
- New building CANNOT be occupied until transit work is complete
THIS IS ONLY TRUE FOR THE BONUSABLE SPACE.

About the Building: 1 Vanderbilt

- 65-story
1,401 FEET TALL, 58 STORIES
  - New headquarters for TD Bank

TD BANK IS ANCHOR COMMERCIAL AND RETAIL TENANT BUT IT IS NOT THEIR HQ

- TKTk temporary jobs
- TKTk permanent jobs
- 8,000 workers
- 5,200 construction jobs
- 190 permanent union jobs
- Desperately needed modern office space adjacent to Grand Central Terminal
- Significantly increased tax revenues

SL Green Breaks Ground on One Vanderbilt Avenue

Cutting-edge, 1,401-foot-tall skyscraper at doorstep of Grand Central Terminal to reshape city skyline and transform the 21st century workplace

New York, NY (October 18, 2016) – SL Green Realty Corp. (NYSE: SLG) today broke ground on One Vanderbilt Avenue, a state-of-art office skyscraper that will anchor the modernization of the East Midtown business district and stand as the second tallest tower in New York City. Rising adjacent to Grand Central Terminal, One Vanderbilt will include direct connections to its network of mass transit, improved by $220 million in upgrades SL Green is implementing as part of the project.

To mark the construction milestone, SL Green Chief Executive Officer Marc Holliday was joined by elected officials and partners, including New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio, Congresswoman Carolyn Maloney, Manhattan Borough President Gale Brewer, Councilmember Dan Garodnick and Gregg Gerken, Head of Commercial Real Estate at TD Bank, at an on-site groundbreaking ceremony.

“One Vanderbilt will be the best of the best, an ultra-modern, high-performing addition to the skyline that will retain the global companies that East Midtown needs to continue as the business capital of the world,” said SL Green CEO Marc Holliday. “As the largest commercial property owner in New York, we are proud to partner with the City to create a model for unsubsidized development that drives our economy and makes a critical contribution to its infrastructure.”

Insert CM Garodnick quote

Designed by Kohn Pedersen Fox (KPF) Associates, One Vanderbilt will encompass an entire city block, bounded by Madison and Vanderbilt Avenues to the west and east, and East 43rd and East 42nd Streets to the north and south. Standing 1,401 feet tall, the building's tapered form will pay tribute to New York's iconic skyscrapers, while its sharp lines and bold angles will punctuate Manhattan's skyline with an elegant, 21st-century articulation. At its base along 42nd Street, the building will set back at an angle to permanently reveal Grand Central's majestic Vanderbilt cornice – a view which has been obstructed for nearly a century.

Expected to achieve the highest possible LEED certification, the trophy tower will offer 1.6 million rentable square feet of Class A office space across 58 floors, featuring column-free floors and stunning views through floor-to-ceiling windows. One Vanderbilt will also offer tenants floor to ceiling slab heights ranging from 14'6" to 20', a 30,000 square foot tenant-only amenity floor and world-class dining.

Insert KPF quote

Through SL Green's unprecedented $220 million public infrastructure investment, One Vanderbilt will transform the commuting experience for hundreds of thousands of travelers commuting through Grand Central each day. Specifically, this package of infrastructure upgrades will create a new jewel box transit hall in the base of One Vanderbilt, a new 14,000 square foot pedestrian plaza on Vanderbilt Avenue, and enhanced access into and out of the Grand Central complex for riders of the city subway system, Metro-North and future Long Island Railroad East Side Access.

SL Green has secured TD Bank as an anchor tenant set to occupy approximately 200,000 square feet of office and retail space in One Vanderbilt, including a flagship store at the corner of 42nd Street and Madison Avenue. Hines is SL Green's development manager and AECOM's Tishman Construction is the construction manager. Construction is expected to be complete in 2020.

We’re looking at doing a kickstand that will sit in front of the dirt and be about 6 feet long, ensures the whole message gets in every shot. There wasn’t a good way to do something overhead that would be in all the shots and look nice.

Quotes so far are below. Still waiting on Garodnick.

You'll get us one from your side to use in ours? Thanks.

Congresswoman Carolyn B. Maloney (D-NY12): "Not only will One Vanderbilt Avenue be a new iconic tower in the heart of New York City, but with $220 million in public improvements, it will revolutionize the way we use Grand Central Terminal and midtown. This is a great example of a public-private partnership, where the public gets new open space and better access to transportation. I want to thank SL Green for being a thoughtful and generous participant in a land use process that really took into account the community's needs."

"It's gratifying to be breaking ground not just on this building, but on what it represents: a massive investment in our transit and pedestrian infrastructure, and a first step toward the future of East Midtown," said Manhattan Borough President Gale A. Brewer. "When development is done carefully, collaboratively, and produces real investments in the public realm that improve the neighborhood, everyone wins."

"One Vanderbilt will be the best of the best, an ultra-modern, high-performing addition to the skyline that will retain the global companies that East Midtown needs to continue as the business capital of the world," said SL Green CEO Marc Holliday. "As the largest commercial property owner in New York, we are proud to partner with the City to create a model for unsubsidized development that drives our economy and makes a critical contribution to its infrastructure."

"The One Vanderbilt building is a historic addition to the New York City skyline and we're proud to participate in the financing of this transformational project," said Gregg Gerken, Head of Commercial Real Estate for TD Bank. "We also look forward to becoming a tenant. This building is designed to exceed LEED Gold requirements, which aligns with our commitment to being an environmental leader - and that's something we know is important to our employees and customers."

"It is a privilege to be a partner with SL Green in this transformational development," said Tommy Craig, Senior Managing Director of Hines. "The property's direct connection to Grand Central Terminal, its remarkable open space at grade, aspirational architecture and best-in-class technology, will have a catalytic effect on midtown Manhattan for decades to come."

"As the leading builder of New York's greatest iconic towers, we're excited to be breaking ground such a distinctive and visually stunning building, which will be the cornerstone of a revitalized East Midtown," said Jay Badame, President of AECOM Tishman. "By demonstrating a tremendous commitment to an area of New York that needs new building, SL Green is transforming a neighborhood, and that's something we are always proud to be a part of."

Jamie von Klemperer, Kohn Pedersen Fox Associates: "One Vanderbilt will not only emerge as an elegant, tapered new icon on the New York skyline, but will also serve as a leading example of a global trend of connecting train stations to tall towers. This building will change its neighborhood for the better. It will provide a new gateway to the city made possible only through the unusually harmonious partnership between architect, developer, and the City of New York.

Here's Garodnick:

“This is an exciting new day for East Midtown, where our rules are not only promoting growth but also matching it with extraordinary transit improvements,” said Councilmember Dan Garodnick. “The result will be class A office buildings, and just as importantly, a class A office district. We expect that One Vanderbilt is going to set an important precedent for the rest of East Midtown.”

Draft City release / missing some quotes.

Mayor de Blasio, SL Green, Local Officials Break Ground on New Office Tower, $220 Million in Transit Upgrades for Riders at Grand Central

New model in East Midtown demands developers invest in public transit as city grows

Congestion relief on 4-5-6 line, renovating Grand Central's subway mezzanine, more exits and stairs to ease overcrowding, more space for pedestrians on Vanderbilt Avenue

New York, NY— Mayor de Blasio joined SL Green and local officials today to break ground on a new office building and $220 million in transit improvements to Grand Central Terminal. The upgrades are part of a new development model, secured by the de Blasio administration, Council Member Dan Garodnick and Borough President Gale Brewer, that demands new development in East Midtown invest in better commutes and reducing congestion.

“This new office tower, pedestrian plaza, and key upgrades at Grand Central Station, including much improved subway platforms, is what I call smart growth. I congratulate our elected officials and business and community leaders for their bold vision – one that puts the public and hundreds of thousands of commuters first. With this project, we ensure New York City continues to lead the global economy.”

Grand Central's Lexington Line stop is the second busiest in the city, with 154,000 riders each day. With the unprecedented $220 million public infrastructure investment, One Vanderbilt will transform the commuting experience and reduce overcrowding. Specifically, this package of infrastructure upgrades will add more staircases to ease crowding on the 4-5-6 subway platforms, a renovated subway mezzanine and new exits directly to street level. When completed in 2020, the upgrades will increase the Lexington Avenue line's capacity by an extra train per hour in each direction—or 2,200 riders.

One Vanderbilt, the 1,401-foot-tall commercial office building rising a block west of the E. 42nd Street station, will include a new transit hall and waiting room in the base of the building, a new 14,000-square-foot pedestrian plaza on Vanderbilt Avenue, and enhanced access into and out of the Grand Central complex for riders of the city subway system, Metro-North and future Long Island Railroad East Side Access.

The City's proposed 73-block Midtown East rezoning plan, which encompasses the area surrounding Grand Terminal, is in on track for a full public review, including by the New York City Council. Like the proposed rezoning, the construction and infrastructure improvements announced today will play a leading role keeping New York growing and competitive.

Congresswoman Carolyn B. Maloney (D-NY12): “Not only will One Vanderbilt Avenue be a new iconic tower in the heart of New York City, but with $220 million in public improvements, it will revolutionize the way we use Grand Central Terminal and midtown. This is a great example of a public-private partnership, where the public gets new open space and better access to transportation. I want to thank SL Green for being a thoughtful and generous participant in a land use process that really took into account the community's needs."

"It's gratifying to be breaking ground not just on this building, but on what it represents: a massive investment in our transit and pedestrian infrastructure, and a first step toward the future of East Midtown," said Manhattan Borough President Gale A. Brewer. "When development is done carefully, collaboratively, and produces real investments in the public realm that improve the neighborhood, everyone wins."

"This is an exciting new day for East Midtown, where our rules are not only promoting growth but also matching it with extraordinary transit improvements," said Councilmember Dan Garodnick. "The result will be class A office buildings, and just as importantly, a class A office district. We expect that One Vanderbilt is going to set an important precedent for the rest of East Midtown."

"One Vanderbilt will be the best of the best, an ultra-modern, high-performing addition to the skyline that will retain the global companies that East Midtown needs to continue as the business capital of the world," said SL Green CEO Marc Holliday. "As the largest commercial property owner in New York, we are proud to partner with the City to create a model for unsubsidized development that drives our economy and makes a critical contribution to its infrastructure."

As part of a deal with SL Green, the company will make the improvements to Grand Central Station, create a block-long public plaza, and also build a public waiting area for commuters on the ground floor of the new building.

The access upgrades include:

- Refurbish Grand Central's crumbling subway mezzanine
  - More connections from mezzanine directly to streets (reducing crowding at existing exits)
- Approximately 2/3 of the $220 million in public infrastructure funding will go to enhancing connections and circulation spaces along the Lexington Avenue 4/5/6 subway line.
  - New exits at ends of both 4-5-6 platforms
  - More room on 4-5-6 platforms, by narrowing obstructions
  - Narrowed staircases
  - Narrowed columns
- Reduced overcrowding will allow for one additional train per hour in each direction—making room for 1,100 more riders each hour in each direction
- Direct connections from the new tower to subway, MetroNorth and future LIRR
- A 4,000-square-foot public transit hall on the ground floor of One Vanderbilt
- Vanderbilt between 42nd and 43rd will become a pedestrian plaza in the heart of Midtown
- The upper floors of the tower cannot be occupied until transit work is complete

The project means important and permanent boosts to private and union jobs, and tax revenue for the City. It represents 5,200 construction jobs. Once complete, the tower will be home to 8,000 workers, 190 of them with permanent union jobs. TD Bank, the anchor commercial tenant, will also have retail space in the building.

Marking the beginning of construction, the mayor today joined Congresswoman Carolyn Maloney, Manhattan Borough President Gale Brewer, Councilmember Dan Garodnick, SL Green Chief Executive Officer Marc Holliday, and Gregg Gerken, Head of Commercial Real Estate at TD Bank, at an on-site groundbreaking ceremony.

“One Vanderbilt will be the best of the best, an ultra-modern, high-performing addition to the skyline that will retain the global companies that East Midtown needs to continue as the business capital of the world,” said SL Green CEO Marc Holliday. “As the largest commercial property owner in New York, we are proud to partner with the City to create a model for unsubsidized development that drives our economy and makes a critical contribution to its infrastructure.”

Designed by Kohn Pedersen Fox (KPF) Associates, One Vanderbilt will encompass an entire city block, bounded by Madison and Vanderbilt Avenues to the west and east, and East 43rd and East 42nd Streets to the north and south. Standing 1,401 feet tall, the building’s tapered form pays tribute to New York’s iconic skyscrapers, while its sharp lines and bold angles will punctuate Manhattan’s skyline with a 21st-century articulation. At its base along 42nd Street, the building will set back at an angle to permanently reveal Grand Central’s majestic Vanderbilt cornice – a view which has been obstructed for nearly a century.

Expected to achieve the highest possible LEED certification, the tower will offer 1.6 million rentable square feet of Class A office space across 58 floors, featuring column-free floors and views through floor-to-ceiling windows. One Vanderbilt will also offer tenants floor to ceiling slab heights ranging from 14’6” to 20’, a 30,000 square foot tenant-only amenity floor and world-class dining.

"As the leading builder of New York's greatest iconic towers, we're excited to be breaking ground such a distinctive and visually stunning building, which will be the cornerstone of a revitalized East Midtown," said Jay Badame, President of AECOM Tishman. "By demonstrating a tremendous commitment to an area of New York that needs new building, SL Green is transforming a neighborhood, and that's something we are always proud to be a part of."

Jamie von Klemperer, of Kohn Pedersen Fox Associates said, “One Vanderbilt will not only emerge as an elegant, tapered new icon on the New York skyline, but will also serve as a leading example of a global trend of connecting train stations to tall towers. This building will change its neighborhood for the better. It will provide a new gateway to the city made possible only through the unusually harmonious partnership between architect, developer, and the City of New York.”

SL Green has secured TD Bank as an anchor tenant set to occupy approximately 200,000 square feet of office and retail space in One Vanderbilt, including a flagship store at the corner of 42nd Street and Madison Avenue. Hines is SL Green’s development manager and AECOM’s Tishman Construction is the construction manager. Construction is expected to be complete in 2020.

"The One Vanderbilt building is a historic addition to the New York City skyline and we're proud to participate in the financing of this transformational project," said Gregg Gerken, Head of Commercial Real Estate for TD Bank. "We also look forward to becoming a tenant. This building is designed to exceed LEED Gold requirements, which aligns with our commitment to being an environmental leader - and that's something we know is important to our employees and customers."

Grand Central's Lexington Line stop is the second busiest in the city, with 154,000 riders each day. With the unprecedented $220 million public infrastructure investment, One Vanderbilt will transform the commuting experience and reduce overcrowding. Specifically, this package of infrastructure upgrades will add more staircases to ease crowding on the 4-5-6 subway platforms, a renovated subway mezzanine and new exits directly to street level. When completed in 2020, the upgrades will increase the Lexington Avenue line's capacity by an extra train per hour in each direction—or 2,200 riders.

One Vanderbilt, the 1,401-foot-tall commercial office building rising a block west of the E. 42nd Street station, will include a new transit hall and waiting room in the base of the building, a new 14,000-square-foot pedestrian plaza on Vanderbilt Avenue, and enhanced access into and out of the Grand Central complex for riders of the city subway system, Metro-North and future Long Island Railroad East Side Access.

The City's proposed 73-block Midtown East rezoning plan, which encompasses the area surrounding Grand Terminal, is in on track for a full public review, including by the New York City Council. Like the proposed rezoning, the construction and infrastructure improvements announced today will play a leading role keeping New York growing and competitive.

Congresswoman Carolyn B. Maloney (D-NY12): “Not only will One Vanderbilt Avenue be a new iconic tower in the heart of New York City, but with $220 million in public improvements, it will revolutionize the way we use Grand Central Terminal and midtown. This is a great example of a public-private partnership, where the public gets new open space and better access to transportation. I want to thank SL Green for being a thoughtful and generous participant in a land use process that really took into account the community's needs.”

“It's gratifying to be breaking ground not just on this building, but on what it represents: a massive investment in our transit and pedestrian infrastructure, and a first step toward the future of East Midtown,” said Manhattan Borough President Gale A. Brewer. “When development is done carefully, collaboratively, and produces real investments in the public realm that improve the neighborhood, everyone wins.”

“This is an exciting new day for East Midtown, where our rules are not only promoting growth but also matching it with extraordinary transit improvements,” said Councilmember Dan Garodnick. “The result will be class A office buildings, and just as importantly, a class A office district. We expect that One Vanderbilt is going to set an important precedent for the rest of East Midtown.”

“One Vanderbilt will be the best of the best, an ultra-modern, high-performing addition to the skyline that will retain the global companies that East Midtown needs to continue as the business capital of the world,” said SL Green CEO Marc Holliday. “As the largest commercial property owner in New York, we are proud to partner with the City to create a model for unsubsidized development that drives our economy and makes a critical contribution to its infrastructure.”

As part of a deal with SL Green, the company will make the improvements to Grand Central Station, create a block-long public plaza, and also build a public waiting area for commuters on the ground floor of the new building.

The access upgrades include:

- Refurbish Grand Central's crumbling subway mezzanine
  - More connections from mezzanine directly to streets (reducing crowding at existing exits)
- Approximately 2/3 of the $220 million in public infrastructure funding will go to enhancing connections and circulation spaces along the Lexington Avenue 4/5/6 subway line.
  - New exits at ends of both 4-5-6 platforms
  - More room on 4-5-6 platforms, by narrowing obstructions
  - Narrowed staircases
  - Narrowed columns
- Reduced overcrowding will allow for one additional train per hour in each direction—making room for 1,100 more riders each hour in each direction
- Direct connections from the new tower to subway, MetroNorth and future LIRR
- A 4,000-square-foot public transit hall on the ground floor of One Vanderbilt
- Vanderbilt between 42nd and 43rd will become a pedestrian plaza in the heart of Midtown
- The upper floors of the tower cannot be occupied until transit work is complete

The project means important and permanent boosts to private and union jobs, and tax revenue for the City. It represents 5,200 construction jobs. Once complete, the tower will be home to 8,000 workers, 190 of them with permanent union jobs. TD Bank, the anchor commercial tenant, will also have retail space in the building.

Marking the beginning of construction, the mayor today joined Congresswoman Carolyn Maloney, Manhattan Borough President Gale Brewer, Councilmember Dan Garodnick, SL Green Chief Executive Officer Marc Holliday, and Gregg Gerken, Head of Commercial Real Estate at TD Bank, at an on-site groundbreaking ceremony.

"One Vanderbilt will be the best of the best, an ultra-modern, high-performing addition to the skyline that will retain the global companies that East Midtown needs to continue as the business capital of the world," said SL Green CEO Marc Holliday. "As the largest commercial property owner in New York, we are proud to partner with the City to create a model for unsubsidized development that drives our economy and makes a critical contribution to its infrastructure."

Designed by Kohn Pedersen Fox (KPF) Associates, One Vanderbilt will encompass an entire city block, bounded by Madison and Vanderbilt Avenues to the west and east, and East 43rd and East 42nd Streets to the north and south. Standing 1,401 feet tall, the building's tapered form pays tribute to New York's iconic skyscrapers, while its sharp lines and bold angles will punctuate Manhattan's skyline with a 21st-century articulation. At its base along 42nd Street, the building will set back at an angle to permanently reveal Grand Central's majestic Vanderbilt cornice – a view which has been obstructed for nearly a century.

Expected to achieve the highest possible LEED certification, the tower will offer 1.6 million rentable square feet of Class A office space across 58 floors, featuring column-free floors and views through floor-to-ceiling windows. One Vanderbilt will also offer tenants floor to ceiling slab heights ranging from 14'6" to 20', a 30,000 square foot tenant-only amenity floor and world-class dining.

"As the leading builder of New York's greatest iconic towers, we're excited to be breaking ground such a distinctive and visually stunning building, which will be the cornerstone of a revitalized East Midtown," said Jay Badame, President of AECOM Tishman. "By demonstrating a tremendous commitment to an area of New York that needs new building, SL Green is transforming a neighborhood, and that's something we are always proud to be a part of."

Jamie von Klemperer, of Kohn Pedersen Fox Associates said, "One Vanderbilt will not only emerge as an elegant, tapered new icon on the New York skyline, but will also serve as a leading example of a global trend of connecting train stations to tall towers. This building will change its neighborhood for the better. It will provide a new gateway to the city made possible only through the unusually harmonious partnership between architect, developer, and the City of New York."

SL Green has secured TD Bank as an anchor tenant set to occupy approximately 200,000 square feet of office and retail space in One Vanderbilt, including a flagship store at the corner of 42nd Street and Madison Avenue. Hines is SL Green's development manager and AECOM's Tishman Construction is the construction manager. Construction is expected to be complete in 2020.

"The One Vanderbilt building is a historic addition to the New York City skyline and we're proud to participate in the financing of this transformational project," said Gregg Gerken, Head of Commercial Real Estate for TD Bank. "We also look forward to becoming a tenant. This building is designed to exceed LEED Gold requirements, which aligns with our commitment to being an environmental leader - and that's something we know is important to our employees and customers."

"It is a privilege to be a partner with SL Green in this transformational development," said Tommy Craig, Senior Managing Director of Hines. "The property's direct connection to Grand Central Terminal, its remarkable open space at grade, aspirational architecture and best-in-class technology, will have a catalytic effect on midtown Manhattan for decades to come."

I congratulate our elected officials and business and community leaders for their bold vision – one that puts the public and hundreds of thousands of commuters first. With this project, we ensure New York City continues to lead the global economy.”

Grand Central's Lexington Line stop is the second busiest in the city, with 154,000 riders each day. With the unprecedented $220 million public infrastructure investment, One Vanderbilt will transform the commuting experience and reduce overcrowding. Specifically, this package of infrastructure upgrades will add more staircases to ease crowding on the 4-5-6 subway platforms, a renovated subway mezzanine and new exits directly to street level. When completed in 2020, the upgrades will increase the Lexington Avenue line's capacity by an extra train per hour in each direction—or 2,200 riders.

One Vanderbilt, the 1,401-foot-tall commercial office building rising a block west of the E. 42nd Street station, will include a new transit hall and waiting room in the base of the building, a new 14,000-square-foot pedestrian plaza on Vanderbilt Avenue, and enhanced access into and out of the Grand Central complex for riders of the city subway system, Metro-North and future Long Island Railroad East Side Access.

The City's proposed 73-block Midtown East rezoning plan, which encompasses the area surrounding Grand Terminal, is in on track for a full public review, including by the New York City Council. Like the proposed rezoning, the construction and infrastructure improvements announced today will play a leading role keeping New York growing and competitive.

Congresswoman Carolyn B. Maloney (D-NY12): “Not only will One Vanderbilt Avenue be a new iconic tower in the heart of New York City, but with $220 million in public improvements, it will revolutionize the way we use Grand Central Terminal and midtown. This is a great example of a public-private partnership, where the public gets new open space and better access to transportation. I want to thank SL Green for being a thoughtful and generous participant in a land use process that really took into account the community’s needs.”

“It’s gratifying to be breaking ground not just on this building, but on what it represents: a massive investment in our transit and pedestrian infrastructure, and a first step toward the future of East Midtown,” said Manhattan Borough President Gale A. Brewer. “When development is done carefully, collaboratively, and produces real investments in the public realm that improve the neighborhood, everyone wins.”

“This is an exciting new day for East Midtown, where our rules are not only promoting growth but also matching it with extraordinary transit improvements,” said Councilmember Dan Garodnick. “The result will be class A office buildings, and just as importantly, a class A office district. We expect that One Vanderbilt is going to set an important precedent for the rest of East Midtown.”

“One Vanderbilt will be the best of the best, an ultra-modern, high-performing addition to the skyline that will retain the global companies that East Midtown needs to continue as the business capital of the world,” said SL Green CEO Marc Holliday. “As the largest commercial property owner in New York, we are proud to partner with the City to create a model for unsubsidized development that drives our economy and makes a critical contribution to its infrastructure.”

As part of a deal with SL Green, the company will make the improvements to Grand Central Station, create a block-long public plaza, and also build a public waiting area for commuters on the ground floor of the new building.

The access upgrades include:

- Refurbish Grand Central’s crumbling subway mezzanine
- More connections from mezzanine directly to streets (reducing crowding at existing exits)
- Approximately 2/3 of the $220 million in public infrastructure funding will go to enhancing connections and circulation spaces along the Lexington Avenue 4/5/6 subway line.

- <!--[if !supportLists]-->○ <!--[endif]-->New exits at ends of both 4-5-6 platforms
- <!--[if !supportLists]-->○ <!--[endif]-->More room on 4-5-6 platforms, by narrowing obstructions
- <!--[if !supportLists]-->○ <!--[endif]-->Narrowed staircases
- <!--[if !supportLists]-->○ <!--[endif]-->Narrowed columns
- <!--[if !supportLists]-->• <!--[endif]-->Reduced overcrowding will allow for one additional train per hour in each direction—making room for 1,100 more riders each hour in each direction
- <!--[if !supportLists]-->• <!--[endif]-->Direct connections from the new tower to subway, MetroNorth and future LIRR
- <!--[if !supportLists]-->• <!--[endif]-->A 4,000-square-foot public transit hall on the ground floor of One Vanderbilt
- <!--[if !supportLists]-->• <!--[endif]-->Vanderbilt between 42nd and 43rd will become a pedestrian plaza in the heart of Midtown
- <!--[if !supportLists]-->• <!--[endif]-->The upper floors of the tower cannot be occupied until transit work is complete

The project means important and permanent boosts to private and union jobs, and tax revenue for the City. It represents 5,200 construction jobs. Once complete, the tower will be home to 8,000 workers, 190 of them with permanent union jobs. TD Bank, the anchor commercial tenant, will also have retail space in the building.

Marking the beginning of construction, the mayor today joined Congresswoman Carolyn Maloney, Manhattan Borough President Gale Brewer, Councilmember Dan Garodnick, SL Green Chief Executive Officer Marc Holliday, and Gregg Gerken, Head of Commercial Real Estate at TD Bank, at an on-site groundbreaking ceremony.

“One Vanderbilt will be the best of the best, an ultra-modern, high-performing addition to the skyline that will retain the global companies that East Midtown needs to continue as the business capital of the world,” said SL Green CEO Marc Holliday. “As the largest commercial property owner in New York, we are proud to partner with the City to create a model for unsubsidized development that drives our economy and makes a critical contribution to its infrastructure.”

Designed by Kohn Pedersen Fox (KPF) Associates, One Vanderbilt will encompass an entire city block, bounded by Madison and Vanderbilt Avenues to the west and east, and East 43rd and East 42nd Streets to the north and south. Standing 1,401 feet tall, the building’s tapered form pays tribute to New York’s iconic skyscrapers, while its sharp lines and bold angles will punctuate Manhattan's skyline with a 21st-century articulation. At its base along 42nd Street, the building will set back at an angle to permanently reveal Grand Central's majestic Vanderbilt cornice – a view which has been obstructed for nearly a century.

Expected to achieve the highest possible LEED certification, the tower will offer 1.6 million rentable square feet of Class A office space across 58 floors, featuring column-free floors and views through floor-to-ceiling windows. One Vanderbilt will also offer tenants floor to ceiling slab heights ranging from 14'6" to 20', a 30,000 square foot tenant-only amenity floor and world-class dining.

"As the leading builder of New York's greatest iconic towers, we're excited to be breaking ground such a distinctive and visually stunning building, which will be the cornerstone of a revitalized East Midtown," said Jay Badame, President of AECOM Tishman. "By demonstrating a tremendous commitment to an area of New York that needs new building, SL Green is transforming a neighborhood, and that's something we are always proud to be a part of."

Jamie von Klemperer, of Kohn Pedersen Fox Associates said, "One Vanderbilt will not only emerge as an elegant, tapered new icon on the New York skyline, but will also serve as a leading example of a global trend of connecting train stations to tall towers. This building will change its neighborhood for the better. It will provide a new gateway to the city made possible only through the unusually harmonious partnership between architect, developer, and the City of New York."

SL Green has secured TD Bank as an anchor tenant set to occupy approximately 200,000 square feet of office and retail space in One Vanderbilt, including a flagship store at the corner of 42nd Street and Madison Avenue. Hines is SL Green's development manager and AECOM's Tishman Construction is the construction manager. Construction is expected to be complete in 2020.

"The One Vanderbilt building is a historic addition to the New York City skyline and we're proud to participate in the financing of this transformational project," said Gregg Gerken, Head of Commercial Real Estate for TD Bank. "We also look forward to becoming a tenant. This building is designed to exceed LEED Gold requirements, which aligns with our commitment to being an environmental leader - and that's something we know is important to our employees and customers."

"It is a privilege to be a partner with SL Green in this transformational development," said Tommy Craig, Senior Managing Director of Hines. "The property's direct connection to Grand Central Terminal, its remarkable open space at grade, aspirational architecture and best-in-class technology, will have a catalytic effect on midtown Manhattan for decades to come.”

Mayor de Blasio, SL Green, Local Officials Break Ground on New Office Tower, $220 Million in Transit Upgrades for Riders at Grand Central

New model in East Midtown demands developers invest in public transit as city grows

New York, NY– Mayor de Blasio joined SL Green and local officials today to break ground on a new office building and $220 million in transit improvements to Grand Central Terminal. The upgrades are part of a new development model, secured by the de Blasio administration, Council Member Dan Garodnick and Borough President Gale Brewer, that demands new development in East Midtown invest in better commutes and reducing congestion.

“This new office building, transit upgrades at Grand Central, and expanded pedestrian space are what I call smart growth. We demanded and secured private investments into important City infrastructure that put hundreds of thousands of commuters first. This strategy helps to keep our city competitive while improving the lives of New Yorkers,” Mayor de Blasio said.

One Vanderbilt's Grand Central station improvements: A glimpse at changes to come

New York's next supertall skyscraper aims to complement Grand Central Terminal—above ground and below.

Developers SL Green will hold a ceremonial groundbreaking on Tuesday for One Vanderbilt, its glassy, angular 1,401-foot tower that will be among the tallest in the city. Located between Vanderbilt and Madison avenues and 42nd and 43rd streets, the building will soar over the neighboring transit hub and stretch above midtown's Chrysler and Empire State buildings.

“One of the key elements for our architectural design is how our building will relate to Grand Central,” said Robert Schiffer, a managing director at SL Green. “From an architectural perspective — one consideration is the fact that Grand Central is New York City's foremost landmark ... so we didn't want to do something that was very commercial, orthogonal and standard and boring.”

The firm will also be delivering $220 million in transit improvements for the terminal, streetscape and nearby subway facilities as part of an agreement for air rights — marking the first time a private developer will be leading such substantial MTA construction.

All improvements should be ready by 2020, when the commercial building is slated to open. They're the result of hard-fought negotiations involving the firm, local community leaders, and city and state agencies.

“This new office building, transit upgrades at Grand Central, and expanded pedestrian space are what I call smart growth,” said Mayor Bill de Blasio in a statement. “We demanded and secured private investments into important City infrastructure that put hundreds of thousands of commuters first.”

On the street level, SL Green will transform Vanderbilt Avenue between 42nd and 43rd streets into a pedestrian plaza. Down below, the MTA's notoriously congested Grand Central subway complex, which served 160,294 commuters on an average weekday last year, will get upgrades to increase capacity.

That starts with two new subway entrances. The firm will also raze the Hyatt Hotel basement that dips into the subway station, creating 40% more commuter space in the station's mezzanine.

On the subway station platforms of the 4, 5 and 6 trains, SL Green will build three new staircases, reconfigure existing stairs and, to find more commuter space, remove bulky encasements of columns that rise up to support the Hyatt.

Ultimately, the MTA estimates that these adjustments will allow for the accommodation of roughly 4,000 to 6,000 additional passengers per hour, which translates into running an additional subway car per hour along the Lexington Avenue line.

The improvements to Grand Central Terminal itself are proactive. One Vanderbilt's footprint sits above the MTA's massive East Side Access Project to bring the Long Island Railroad to Grand Central. The firm will build a new concourse under One Vanderbilt to give future LIRR riders a direct connection to the Grand Central subway complex.

"The MTA supports innovative proposals that link development with transit investment," said MTA Spokesman Kevin Ortiz in an email, "and we believe the One Vanderbilt proposal offers significant benefits for our customers and for the entire city."

Layla Law-Gisiko, chair of the landmarks committee of Manhattan Community Board 5 said she was opposed to building so tall on a site sitting just across the street from Grand Central and didn't care for some aspects of One Vanderbilt's final design.

"The base of the building had these slanted lines," Law-Gisiko said. "You have these angles that make the base of the building very aggressive. It looks like the mouth of a Pac-Man that is going to eat Grand Central. We thought it wasn't ideal."

But she added that the streetscape upgrades will be a "vast improvement."

"It's one of those situations where is everyone happy? No, but it's a better building than the one that was proposed," she said. "If it does function the way it was supposed to function and be an anchor tenant and bring in jobs ... it's a good thing."

This should be our final:

MAYOR DE BLASIO, SL GREEN, LOCAL OFFICIALS BREAK GROUND ON NEW OFFICE TOWER, $220 MILLION IN TRANSIT UPGRADES FOR RIDERS AT GRAND CENTRAL

New model in Midtown East secures new investment in public transit as city grows

NEW YORK—Mayor Bill de Blasio joined SL Green and local officials today to break ground on a new office building and $220 million in transit improvements to Grand Central Terminal. The upgrades are part of a new development model, secured by the de Blasio Administration, Council Member Dan Garodnick and Manhattan Borough President Gale Brewer. That approach demands more of developers, securing private investment in better commutes and reducing congestion as Midtown East grows.

“The new office building, transit upgrades at Grand Central and expanded pedestrian space are what I call smart growth. We demanded and secured private investments into important City infrastructure that put hundreds of thousands of straphangers first. This strategy helps to keep our city competitive while improving the lives of New Yorkers,” said Mayor Bill de Blasio.

Grand Central’s Lexington Line stop is the second busiest in the city, with 154,000 riders each day. With the unprecedented $220 million public infrastructure investment, One Vanderbilt will transform the commuting experience and reduce overcrowding. Specifically, this package of infrastructure upgrades will add more staircases to ease crowding on the 4-5-6 subway platforms, a renovated subway mezzanine and new exits directly to street level. When completed in 2020, the upgrades will increase the Lexington Avenue line’s capacity by an extra train per hour in each direction – or 2,200 riders.

One Vanderbilt, the 1,401-foot-tall commercial office building rising a block west of the E. 42nd Street station, will include a new transit hall and waiting room in the base of the building, a new 14,000-square-foot pedestrian plaza on Vanderbilt Avenue, and enhanced access into and out of the Grand Central complex for riders of the city subway system, Metro-North and future Long Island Rail Road East Side Access.

The City’s proposed 78-block Greater East Midtown rezoning plan, which encompasses the area surrounding Grand Central Terminal, will enter into public review by the end of the year. Building on a vision process led by Manhattan Borough President Brewer and Council Member Garodnick, the proposal couples strategies for promoting office development with specific transit and public realm improvements as well as support for landmarks that distinguish this iconic district. Like the proposed rezoning, the construction and infrastructure improvements announced today will play a leading role in keeping New York growing and competitive.

“This is an exciting new day for East Midtown, where our rules are not only promoting growth but also matching it with extraordinary transit improvements,” said Councilmember Dan Garodnick. “The result will be class A office buildings, and just as importantly, a class A office district. We expect that One Vanderbilt is going to set an important precedent for the rest of East Midtown.”

“It’s gratifying to be breaking ground not just on this building, but on what it represents: a massive investment in our transit and pedestrian infrastructure, and a first step toward the future of East Midtown,” said Manhattan Borough President Gale A. Brewer. “When development is done carefully, collaboratively, and produces real investments in the public realm that improve the neighborhood, everyone wins.”

Congresswoman Carolyn B. Maloney said, “Not only will One Vanderbilt Avenue be a new iconic tower in the heart of New York City, but with $220 million in public improvements, it will revolutionize the way we use Grand Central Terminal and midtown. This is a great example of a public-private partnership, where the public gets new open space and better access to transportation. I want to thank SL Green for being a thoughtful and generous participant in a land use process that really took into account the community’s needs.”

City Planning Commission Chairman Carl Weisbrod said, "East Midtown has been the premier economic engine of New York City for many years, a title that One Vanderbilt will help it retain. By committing to $220 million in public investment, One Vanderbilt will benefit not only its tenants but the city as a whole. As we move forward with a proposal to revitalize Greater East Midtown, we believe that One Vanderbilt will signal this neighborhood's full potential. For East Midtown, the best is yet to come."

“One Vanderbilt will be a high-performing addition to the Manhattan skyline serving as a blueprint for 21st century commercial development,” said SL Green CEO Marc Holliday. “As the largest commercial property owner in New York, we are proud to partner with the City to create a model for unsubsidized development that drives our economy and makes a critical contribution to its infrastructure.”

SL Green will make improvements to Grand Central Terminal, create a block-long public plaza, and also build a public waiting area for commuters on the ground floor of the new building. The access upgrades include:

- Refurbish Grand Central’s crumbling subway mezzanine
  - More connections from mezzanine directly to streets (reducing crowding at existing exits)
- Approximately 2/3 of the $220 million in public infrastructure funding will go to enhancing connections and circulation spaces along the Lexington Avenue 4/5/6 subway line.
  - New exits at ends of both 4-5-6 platforms
  - More room on 4-5-6 platforms, by narrowing obstructions
  - Narrowed staircases
  - Narrowed columns
- Reduced overcrowding will allow for one additional train per hour in each direction—making room for 1,100 more riders each hour in each direction
- Direct connections from the new tower to subway, MetroNorth and future LIRR

- A 4,000-square-foot public transit hall on the ground floor of One Vanderbilt
- Vanderbilt between 42nd and 43rd will become a pedestrian plaza in the heart of Midtown
- The upper floors of the tower cannot be occupied until transit work is complete

The project means important and permanent boosts to private and union jobs, and tax revenue for the City. It represents 5,200 construction jobs. Once complete, the tower will be home to 8,000 workers, 190 of them with permanent union jobs. TD Bank, the anchor commercial tenant, will also have retail space in the building.

Marking the beginning of construction, the mayor today joined Congresswoman Carolyn Maloney, Manhattan Borough President Gale Brewer, Councilmember Dan Garodnick, SL Green Chief Executive Officer Marc Holliday, and Gregg Gerken, Head of Commercial Real Estate at TD Bank, among others at an on-site groundbreaking ceremony.

Designed by Kohn Pedersen Fox (KPF) Associates, One Vanderbilt will encompass an entire city block, bounded by Madison and Vanderbilt Avenues to the west and east, and East 43rd and East 42nd Streets to the north and south. Standing 1,401 feet tall, the building's tapered form pays tribute to New York's iconic skyscrapers, while its sharp lines and bold angles will punctuate Manhattan's skyline with a 21st-century articulation. At its base along 42nd Street, the building will set back at an angle to permanently reveal Grand Central's majestic Vanderbilt cornice – a view which has been obstructed for nearly a century.

Expected to achieve the highest possible LEED certification, the tower will offer 1.7 million square feet of Class A office space across 58 floors, featuring column-free floors and views through floor-to-ceiling windows. One Vanderbilt will also offer tenants floor to ceiling slab heights ranging from 14'6" to 20', a 30,000 square foot tenant-only amenity floor and world-class dining.

SL Green has secured TD Bank as an anchor tenant set to occupy approximately 200,000 square feet of office and retail space in One Vanderbilt, including a flagship store at the corner of 42nd Street and Madison Avenue. Hines is SL Green's development manager and AECOM's Tishman Construction is the construction manager.

"As the leading builder of New York's greatest iconic towers, we're excited to be breaking ground such a distinctive and visually stunning building, which will be the cornerstone of a revitalized East Midtown," said Jay Badame, President of AECOM Tishman. "By demonstrating a tremendous commitment to an area of New York that needs new building, SL Green is transforming a neighborhood, and that's something we are always proud to be a part of."

Jamie von Klemperer, of Kohn Pedersen Fox Associates said, "One Vanderbilt will not only emerge as an elegant, tapered new icon on the New York skyline, but will also serve as a leading example of a global trend of connecting train stations to tall towers. This building will change its neighborhood for the better. It will provide a new gateway to the city made possible only through the unusually harmonious partnership between architect, developer, and the City of New York."

"The One Vanderbilt building is a historic addition to the New York City skyline and we're proud to participate in the financing of this transformational project," said Gregg Gerken, Head of Commercial Real Estate for TD Bank. "We also look forward to becoming a tenant. This building is designed to achieve the highest possible LEED certification, which aligns with our commitment to being an environmental leader - and that's something we know is important to our employees and customers."

"Today's groundbreaking is an important step forward in the modernization and future of Midtown East," said John H. Banks III, President of the Real Estate Board of New York. "We congratulate SL Green on this milestone, One Vanderbilt will now become a catalyst for the creation of good middle class jobs and important tax revenue. This project will serve the needs of Midtown East's aging office supply and set new standards in sustainability and design, further ensuring that New York City remains the center of world commerce, culture, media, and finance."

"It is a privilege to be a partner with SL Green in this transformational development," said Tommy Craig, Senior Managing Director of Hines. "The property's direct connection to Grand Central Terminal, its remarkable open space at grade, aspirational architecture and best-in-class technology, will have a catalytic effect on midtown Manhattan for decades to come."

As the leading builder of New York's greatest iconic towers, we're excited to be breaking ground such a distinctive and visually stunning building, which will be the cornerstone of a revitalized East Midtown," said Jay Badame, President of AECOM Tishman. "By demonstrating a tremendous commitment to an area of New York that needs new building, SL Green is transforming a neighborhood, and that's something we are always proud to be a part of."

Hey—I'm working on a story that mentions the investigations into the mayor's political nonprofit, specifically donors from Broadway Stages. The story is about a state studio project on SI, not anything city-related yet. (tho city actions will one day be necessary)

Don't think comment from you guys is necessary, but figured I'd check. I will say neither the mayor nor anyone in his admin have been accused of any wrongdoing.

Hi,

I'm cc-ing both of you on this because I'm writing a story that either of you might want to respond to, that we're planning to run later this afternoon.

It's about the role that de Blasio was trying to play in the 2016 election, and his attempts to help push the presidential agenda leftward.

It's not anything particularly new, just a synthesis of everything that's happened — from his launch of the progressive agenda campaign, to the correspondence laid out in the Wikileaks hack, to the failure of the forum.

My argument is that de Blasio correctly anticipated the political moment, and the economic populism on the left that fueled Bernie Sanders' rise, but that he made missteps and also experienced some bad political timing, and hasn't particularly elevated his standing or reputation as a progressive within the party.

I talked to Symone Sanders, from Bernie Sanders' campaign. She argued that de Blasio's timing just didn't work out -- and that he's a member of the Democratic political establishment, which made his non-endorsement of Clinton difficult.

Quotes from Symone:

"I just don't think the timing was right for bill de Blasio."

"He wanted to position himself as this progressive champion, which he is, But when Sen. Sanders had clearly emerged in the 2016 primary as the progressive candidate...and you've got sec. Clinton who very much represents establishment politics on the democratic side, it makes it tough for bill de Blasio to come out and keep his bearings and leanings as a staunch progressive rabble rouser," she said.

"I really think it damaged his ability to be effective in the way he wanted to be, in the primary," Sanders said.

"His rhetoric and how he is and what he believes in met with the harsh realities of what the primary election was on the 2016 side. it was a fight for the soul of the democratic party."

Here's a quote from George Arzt:

"I think Bill wanted to be Elizabeth Warren."

de Blasio "had put all his chips down on trying to look like a hero to the progressive wing at the beginning by saying no i'm not going to reflexively endorse her until i see something, and then trying to pressure the hillary people into a bigger role and i think it kind of backfired on him."

Let me know if you want to comment for this, or push back?

Hi all,

FYI, here is a long article on two new resolutions.

Columbia & Greene Counties Pass Resolutions Supporting Justice Equality Act.

"It is a fundamental right of all persons in the United States to be represented by counsel in all criminal prosecutions," according to the resolution passed by the Columbia County Board of Supervisors. "The United States Supreme Court ruled that persons who were unable to afford counsel had a constitutional right to be defended by an appointed attorney paid by the state."

S.8114 – DeFrancisco

AN ACT to amend the county law, the executive law and the state finance law, in relation to indigent defense services

---

APPROVAL RECOMMENDED

Hon. Andrew M. Cuomo
Governor of the State of New York
Executive Chamber
Albany, New York 12224

Dear Governor Cuomo:

The above-referenced bill is now before you for executive action.

This bill requires that the State reimburse, over a four-year phase-in period, counties and cities in which a county is wholly located, the full amount of expenses of counsel services for indigent legal defendants. This bill also requires the Office of Indigent Legal Services to ensure the presence of counsel at the first appearance of any eligible defendant charged with a crime, establish caseload/workload regulations for attorneys providing mandated representation that allow for meaningful and effective assistance of counsel, and improve the quality of mandated representation.

In Gideon v. Wainwright, the Supreme Court ruled that it is a fundamental right of all persons in the United States to be represented by counsel in all criminal prosecutions. In the Hurrell-Harring, et al. v. State of New York lawsuit settled in 2014, New York State acknowledged the lack of adequate State funding, resources and oversight to the public defense system, which threatened to deprive these defendants and the class they represent of their constitutional right to meaningful and effective assistance of counsel. Under the agreement announced in 2014, the State agreed to adopt major reforms focusing on five New York counties – Ontario, Onondaga (Syracuse), Schuyler, Suffolk and Washington.

While the settlement agreement pertains to only five counties, its criteria establish a standard for providing indigent legal services that should apply statewide. The State should implement statewide standards to improve the quality of indigent defense and ensure representation at all criminal proceedings, as required under Gideon.

Financing indigent legal services on the State level ensures that indigent defense providers will be properly funded throughout the State in order to uphold the Supreme Court's mandate to provide the constitutional right to effective assistance of counsel.

Accordingly, it is urged that this bill be approved.

Very truly yours,

BILL DE BLASIO, Mayor

Hi, Erin — we're finalizing the media advisory for the HOPE Center ribbon cutting, which will mention that the First Lady is attending and giving remarks. We're planning to start pitching that tomorrow morning to broadcast, Harlem press, city hall reporters, health reporters, and others. Let us know if you'd like to chat in advance.

Best,

Emma

Dear Jose and Company,

Again, deep, deep thanks for all of your assistance in securing a spot on the First Lady's calendar for our upcoming H.O.P.E. Center ribbon cutting ceremony. We are over-the-moon thrilled!

Our phenomenal PR firm, Berlin Rosen is feverishly assisting us with getting the word out about the ceremony. With that said, I wanted to introduce our lead PR professional, Emma Woods to you. We wanted to make certain that the work of Emma's office did not conflict with any of the First Lady's press corps initiatives. If you would kindly connect Emma to the person(s) who oversee Ms. McCray's media coverage I would greatly appreciate the gesture (Emma is copied on this communique).

As always, please feel free to reach out to me with any additional questions you may have surrounding this event.

MAKE it a great day!

Here is the advisory we asked your team to provide feedback on.

Also attached is Kyndra's bio and headshot.

Below is some pitch language you might find helpful.

And here is the church's calendar listing for the event: <http://m.fbcnyc.org/event/save-date-ribbon-cutting-hope-center>

Over 6.8 million African Americans have a diagnosable mental illness, but due to long-standing stigma and lack of affordable resources, only a fraction get the help they need. Within the black church, with its history of "pray it away" solutions to mental health, the silence is even more pronounced. Following recent public battles of celebrities Kanye West and Kid Cudi, leaders in the black community have placed an imperative on tackling this crisis.

That's why First Corinthian Baptist Church, a prominent historically black church in Harlem, is taking a new approach: hands-on, high-quality, inexpensive mental health services offered by the church at a standalone mental health center -- a move that pivots away from the black church's long history of ignoring or sidestepping issues plaguing its congregants, now more than ever.

With the HOPE Center, opening on December 15, FCBC's leader Pastor Mike Walrond is helping the church become a key player in breaking down mental health taboos in New York City's black community, with nationwide implications. Thought you'd be interested in an exclusive on this first-of-its-kind initiative ahead of the Center's ribbon cutting.

The church has provided informal counseling on its premises for years, but the new facility, located a few blocks from the church on 116th St, is over 700 square feet and contains a waiting area, private meeting rooms, and a large group meeting room. It will be staffed by two highly experienced counselors, including Rev. Kyndra Frazier, FCBC's new Associate Pastor of Pastoral Care and Counseling.

Happy to give you a tour of the HOPE Center and set you up to interview key figures:

- Senior Pastor Mike Walrond, who's grown the church from 300 to 11,000 congregants in just over a decade, most of whom are millennials with no prior religious affiliation.

- Executive Pastor Lakeesha Walrond, a strong advocate for accessibility to health services in Harlem and a sexual assault survivor.
- Rev. Kyndra Frazier and Joyce Johnson, lead counselors for the Center.

Bio/Hopes for The H.O.P.E. Center

Rev. Kyndra Frazier is a native of Charlotte, North Carolina. She holds a Bachelor's of Science in Business Management from North Carolina A&T State University, and is a 2010 Master of Divinity graduate of Candler School of Theology, Emory University, concentrating in church and community leadership. Kyndra is also a Licensed Master Social Worker, holding a Master of Science in Social Work from Columbia University in the city of New York, concentrating in clinical social work in the health and mental health fields. Kyndra has held a variety of clinical pastoral and therapeutic positions. The most recent was as Lead Therapist at The Imara Center, where she worked with Kindergarten through Fifth graders at Dunbar Elementary School in Atlanta, GA. During her two years with the behavioral health agency she specialized in Trauma-Focused Cognitive Behavioral Therapy, as the students she served navigated a variety of behavioral and mental health challenges ranging from sexual abuse, ODD, ADHD, to PTSD. Kyndra is currently the Associate Pastor of Pastoral Care and Counseling at First Corinthian Baptist Church. A great deal of her pastoral responsibilities are to create a system of care for this ecclesial community, as well as direct The H.O.P.E (Healing On Purpose and Evolving) Center, a counseling center that is it's own incorporated ministry located within walking distance of the church.

I find the H.O.P.E. Center to be such a unique gem for the Harlem community, as it is the manifestation of Senior Pastor Michael A. Walrond's vision to address the vast mental health needs of the congregants of FCBC and the community at large. Often fundamentalist theological suppositions and religious dogma can hinder faith communities from engaging mental health services. However, FCBC recognizes the importance of addressing psychological and socio-emotional issues in light of our faith. This holistic approach to caring for people has the potential to be a model for faith communities around the world. I am looking forward to The H.O.P.E Center becoming one of the world's premier models for addressing religious trauma particularly, and trauma in general. Too often spiritual abuse and religious trauma syndrome can go overlooked and be misdiagnosed, particularly for persons within socially constructed minority groups such as those within the LGBTQ community. Due to the stigma shrouding so many communities of color when seeking mental health services, persons often incur wounds ranging from various traumas (i.e. domestic violence, severe accidents, sexual abuse, death, etc.) and embrace them as normative, not realizing that their destinies don't have to be tied to their wounds. Our commitment to heal is what catapults our destinies into living the lives we were created to live. This is where the acronym Healing On Purpose and Evolving (H.O.P.E.) comes from. The time is now for persons to accept the invitation to engage in their healing on purpose, so our individual and collective evolutionary journeys can be centered in thriving.

Within the black church, with its history of "pray it away" solutions to mental health, the silence is even more pronounced. Following recent public battles of celebrities Kanye West and Kid Cudi, leaders in the black community have placed an imperative on tackling this crisis.

That's why First Corinthian Baptist Church, a prominent historically black church in Harlem, is taking a new approach: hands-on, high-quality, inexpensive mental health services offered by the church at a standalone mental health center -- a move that pivots away from the black church's long history of ignoring or sidestepping issues plaguing its congregants, now more than ever.

With the HOPE Center, opening on December 15, FCBC's leader Pastor Mike Walrond is helping the church become a key player in breaking down mental health taboos in New York City's black community, with nationwide implications. Thought you'd be interested in an exclusive on this first-of-its-kind initiative ahead of the Center's ribbon cutting.

The church has provided informal counseling on its premises for years, but the new facility, located a few blocks from the church on 116th St, is over 700 square feet and contains a waiting area, private meeting rooms, and a large group meeting room. It will be staffed by two highly experienced counselors, including Rev. Kyndra Frazier, FCBC's new Associate Pastor of Pastoral Care and Counseling.

Happy to give you a tour of the HOPE Center and set you up to interview key figures:

- Senior Pastor Mike Walrond, who's grown the church from 300 to 11,000 congregants in just over a decade, most of whom are millennials with no prior religious affiliation.
- Executive Pastor Lakeesha Walrond, a strong advocate for accessibility to health services in Harlem and a sexual assault survivor.
- Rev. Kyndra Frazier and Joyce Johnson, lead counselors for the Center.

Good morning Erin,

Attached you'll find the finalized advisory. We plan to start getting this out soon, so if you could send us some feedback as soon as possible, that would be ideal. Run of show soon to follow, we waiting on the finalized version from FCBC. We are also drafting a release for this ribbon-cutting, so if your office could send us a quote from the First Lady, that would be great!

Hi, Erin — we're finalizing the media advisory for the HOPE Center ribbon cutting, which will mention that the First Lady is attending and giving remarks. We're planning to start pitching that tomorrow morning to broadcast, Harlem press, city hall reporters, health reporters, and others. Let us know if you'd like to chat in advance.

Best,

Emma

Dear Jose and Company,

Again, deep, deep thanks for all of your assistance in securing a spot on the First Lady's calendar for our upcoming H.O.P.E. Center ribbon cutting ceremony. We are over-the-moon thrilled!

Our phenomenal PR firm, Berlin Rosen is feverishly assisting us with getting the word out about the ceremony. With that said, I wanted to introduce our lead PR professional, Emma Woods to you. We wanted to make certain that the work of Emma's office did not conflict with any of the First Lady's press corps initiatives. If you would kindly connect Emma to the person(s) who oversee Ms. McCray's media coverage I would greatly appreciate the gesture (Emma is copied on this communique).

As always, please feel free to reach out to me with any additional questions you may have surrounding this event.

MAKE it a great day!

Dear Jose and Company,

Again, deep, deep thanks for all of your assistance in securing a spot on the First Lady's calendar for our upcoming H.O.P.E. Center ribbon cutting ceremony. We are over-the-moon thrilled!

Our phenomenal PR firm, Berlin Rosen is feverishly assisting us with getting the word out about the ceremony. With that said, I wanted to introduce our lead PR professional, Emma Woods to you. We wanted to make certain that the work of Emma's office did not conflict with any of the First Lady's press corps initiatives. If you would kindly connect Emma to the person(s) who oversee Ms. McCray's media coverage I would greatly appreciate the gesture (Emma is copied on this communique).

As always, please feel free to reach out to me with any additional questions you may have surrounding this event.

MAKE it a great day!

Historic Harlem Church Cuts Ribbon on First-of-its-Kind Mental Health Center with First Lady Chirlane McCray, Elected Officials

First Corinthian Baptist Church Opens New HOPE Center, Will Offer High-Quality, Affordable Mental Health Services to Harlem Community

Groundbreaking Facility Takes a New Approach to Breaking Down Mental Health Stigmas in the Black Church

Harlem, NY – First Corinthian Baptist Church (FCBC) today marked the official opening of the HOPE Center, a new facility on West 116th street in Harlem that will offer affordable, hands-on, high-quality mental health counseling services to an underserved community. With this new resource, FCBC and Senior Pastor Rev. Michael A. Walrond, Jr. lead the charge in providing better mental health care to historically neglected African American communities, breaking down longstanding stigmas in the church and reducing cost barriers to care.

Pastor Walrond, who leads FCBC's congregation of more than 11,000 and heads New York City's Clergy Advisory Council, was joined by New York City First Lady Chirlane McCray, Assistant Professor of Clinical Psychiatry at Columbia University Dr. Sidney Hankerson, and members of the Harlem community to celebrate the occasion with a ribbon cutting at the HOPE Center.

"For too long, the response from church leaders to real mental health problems has been silence – or worse, a call to 'pray it away.' Today, we take a step toward healing and empowering our community by providing access to inexpensive, quality mental health counseling right here in Harlem," said Rev. Michael A. Walrond Jr., Senior Pastor at First Corinthian Baptist Church. "Getting help should not be taboo – in fact, it is the first step toward realizing one's full potential. I look forward to welcoming New Yorkers through the doors of the HOPE Center."

"XXX," said New York City First Lady Chirlane McCray.

The HOPE Center, which stands for Healing On Purpose and Evolving, will be staffed by licensed clinicians and led by Rev. Kyndra Frazier, FCBC's new Associate Pastor of Pastoral Care and Counseling. The counselors will provide affordable, effective therapeutic services to those in need, with the ability to support a variety of everyday challenges likely to impact members of the community, including depression, anxiety, trauma, sexual assault, domestic violence, bereavement counseling and marriage guidance. The 735 square foot facility, within walking distance of the church, contains space for both one-on-one and group counseling.

Rev. Kyndra Frazier, Associate Pastor of Pastoral Care and Counseling at First Corinthian Baptist Church, said: “Too often, faith communities are held back from engaging in mental health services – but First Corinthian Baptist Church recognizes the importance of addressing psychological and socio-emotional issues in light of our faith. This holistic approach to caring for people has the potential to be a model for faith communities around the world. I am looking forward to the HOPE Center becoming one of the world’s premier models for addressing religious trauma, and trauma in general.”

About First Corinthian Baptist Church

FCBC is an ever-evolving church community of visionaries and dreamers located in New York, NY. Currently led by Senior Pastor Michael A. Walrond Jr., it was founded in 1933. The 10,000+ plus congregation serves the greater Harlem community through 21 dynamic ministries. For more information, please visit fbcnyc.org.

Hi, Erin — we're finalizing the media advisory for the HOPE Center ribbon cutting, which will mention that the First Lady is attending and giving remarks. We're planning to start pitching that tomorrow morning to broadcast, Harlem press, city hall reporters, health reporters, and others. Let us know if you'd like to chat in advance.

Best,

Dear Jose and Company,

Again, deep, deep thanks for all of your assistance in securing a spot on the First Lady's calendar for our upcoming H.O.P.E. Center ribbon cutting ceremony. We are over-the-moon thrilled!

Our phenomenal PR firm, Berlin Rosen is feverishly assisting us with getting the word out about the ceremony. With that said, I wanted to introduce our lead PR professional, Emma Woods to you. We wanted to make certain that the work of Emma's office did not conflict with any of the First Lady's press corps initiatives. If you would kindly connect Emma to the person(s) who oversee Ms. McCray's media coverage I would greatly appreciate the gesture (Emma is copied on this communique).

As always, please feel free to reach out to me with any additional questions you may have surrounding this event.

MAKE it a great day!

Sharon

Hi, Erin — we're finalizing the media advisory for the HOPE Center ribbon cutting, which will mention that the First Lady is attending and giving remarks. We're planning to start pitching that tomorrow morning to broadcast, Harlem press, city hall reporters, health reporters, and others. Let us know if you'd like to chat in advance.

Best,

Emma

Dear Jose and Company,

Again, deep, deep thanks for all of your assistance in securing a spot on the First Lady's calendar for our upcoming H.O.P.E. Center ribbon cutting ceremony. We are over-the-moon thrilled!

Our phenomenal PR firm, Berlin Rosen is feverishly assisting us with getting the word out about the ceremony. With that said, I wanted to introduce our lead PR professional, Emma Woods to you. We wanted to make certain that the work of Emma's office did not conflict with any of the First Lady's press corps initiatives. If you would kindly connect Emma to the person(s) who oversee Ms. McCray's media coverage I would greatly appreciate the gesture (Emma is copied on this communique).

As always, please feel free to reach out to me with any additional questions you may have surrounding this event.

MAKE it a great day!

Sharon

Sharon,

The First Lady is confirmed to attend. Copy the rest of the team here to discuss logistics. Please note the First Lady timing will be 10AM-10:30AM. We need to make sure ribbon cutting happens during that time.

Thanks so much!

Hi Andrew,

Attached is the final version of our release. Also, there's been an addition to the run of show: Manhattan Borough President Gale Brewer will be in attendance.

Any luck on getting a quote for the release?

Good morning Erin,

Attached you'll find the finalized advisory. We plan to start getting this out soon, so if you could send us some feedback as soon as possible, that would be ideal. Run of show soon to follow, we waiting on the finalized version from FCBC. We are also drafting a release for this ribbon-cutting, so if your office could send us a quote from the First Lady, that would be great!
