To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma; 'John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com)'
Subject: RE: FYI

Andrew Tuozzolo @ATuozzolo 2m2 minutes ago

@christhayes @BuzzFeedAndrew 1st the Hillary endorse snub, now the pile-on to the Hillary "immigrant parents" "gaffe". Coincidence?

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
Sent: Friday, April 17, 2015 3:43 PM
To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma; 'John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com)'
Subject: RE: FYI

<http://www.people.com/article/hillary-clinton-grandparents-immigration-story-wrong>

Hillary Clinton Got Her Grandparents' Immigration Story Wrong

BY TARA FOWLER

@waterfowlerta

04/16/2015 AT 07:40 AM EDT

No one said running for president was going to be easy.

While speaking in Iowa on Wednesday, Hillary Clinton shared that all of her grandparents had immigrated to the United States.

"All my grandparents, you know, came over here and you know my grandfather went to work in lace mill in Scranton, Pennsylvania, and worked there until he retired at 65," she said.

But, as Buzzfeed first noted, that story conflicts with census records, which state that Clinton's paternal grandmother, Hanna Jones Rodham, was born in Pennsylvania in 1882.

What's more is that Clinton's maternal grandmother, Della Howell (née Murray), was born in Illinois in 1902, according to records. She married Edwin Howell, also born in Illinois.

But a Clinton campaign spokesperson says it was an honest mistake. "Her grandparents always spoke about the immigrant experience and, as a result she has always thought of them as immigrants," the spokesperson tells PEOPLE.

"As has been correctly pointed out, while her grandfather was an immigrant, it appears that Hillary's grandmother was born shortly after her parents and siblings arrived in the U.S. in the early 1880s."

On Wednesday, Clinton was also called out for not leaving a tip in the tip jar at a Chipotle she visited during her road trip to Iowa on Sunday, *Bloomberg*reports.

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
Sent: Friday, April 17, 2015 3:41 PM
To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelegans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma; John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com)
Subject: FYI

Reporters taking it as trolling over HRC's recent comments on her grandmother:

Andrew Kaczynski Verified account @BuzzFeedAndrew

Andrew Kaczynski retweeted Bill de Blasio
What is going on with Bill de Blasio?
Andrew Kaczynski added,

Bill de Blasio @BilldeBlasio

Proud of my grandmother and the many immigrants who've made our city thrive. Happy #ImmigrantHeritageWeek.

3:38 PM - 17 Apr 2015

--

Mahen Gunaratna

Director of Research and Media Analysis

Mayor's Press Office | City Hall

mgunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov

(212) 676-3154 (o) | (347)-268-4295 (c)

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: Walzak, Phil; Gunaratna, Mahen; Wolfe, Emma; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: RE: FYI
Date: Friday, April 17, 2015 3:45:51 PM
Attachments: image005.png

This is ridiculous. We put out a press release today on immigrant heritage week\

From: Walzak, Phil
Sent: Friday, April 17, 2015 3:45 PM
To: Gunaratna, Mahen; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com'
Subject: Re: FYI

These guys have way to much time on their hands and craziness in their heads

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
Sent: Friday, April 17, 2015 03:44 PM
To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma; 'John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com)'
<jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: RE: FYI

Colin Campbell @BKcolin 2m2 minutes ago

Colin Campbell retweeted Bill de Blasio

Did Bill de Blasio just drop a huge subtweet on @HillaryClinton??

Colin Campbell added,

No. _____

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

54
JBS

PETITION FOR NATURALIZATION
FILED UNDER PROVISIONS OF ACT OF SEPTEMBER 22, 1922

To the Honorable the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York:
The petition of ANNA BRIGANTI DE BLASIO hereby filed, respectfully sheweth:
First, My place of residence is 7 W 35 New York City, N. Y.
Second, My occupation is wife
Third, I was born on the 13 day of Feb anno Domini 1882 at Cremona, Italy
Fourth, I emigrated to the United States from Italy on or about the 30 day of May anno Domini 1901 and arrived in the United States, at the port of NY on the 10 day of June anno Domini 1901 in the vessel Saracen Lloyd
Fifth, I declare my intention to become a citizen of the United States on the X day of _____ anno Domini 1924
Sixth, I am married My husband's name is Giovanni she was born on the 29 day of June anno Domini 1884 at Italy and now resides at 7 W 36
I have 3 children, and the names, date, and place of birth, and place of residence of each of said children is as follows:
Dorotas born Aug. 22, 1911 NY) Maria * May 14, 1917 NY) live with me Tale * Jan. 15, 1920 NY)
Married June 25, 1910
Married NY June 2, 1924

Seventh, I am not a disbeliever in or opposed to organized government or a member of or affiliated with any organization or body of persons teaching disbelief in or opposed to organized government. I am not a polygamist nor a believer in the practice of polygamy. I am attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and it is my intention to become a citizen of the United States and to renounce absolutely and forever all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty, and particularly to VICTOR EMANUEL III KING OF ITALY of whom at this time I am a subject, and it is my intention to reside permanently in the United States.

Eighth, I am able to speak the English language.
Ninth, I have resided continuously in the United States of America for the term of five years at least immediately preceding the date of this petition, to wit, since the 10 day of June anno Domini 1901 and in the State of New York continuously and preceding the date of this petition, since the 10 day of June anno Domini 1901 being a residence within this State of at least one year next preceding the date of this petition.

Tenth, I have not heretofore made petition for citizenship in any court. I make petition for citizenship in the _____ Court of _____ on the _____ day of _____ anno Domini 1924 and the said petition was denied by the said Court for the following reasons and causes, to wit: _____ and the cause of such denial has since been removed.

Attached hereto and made a part of this petition are my declarations of intention to become a citizen of the United States and the certificate from the Mayor of New York, together with my affidavit and the affidavits of the two certifying witnesses thereto, required by law. Wherefore your petitioner prays that he may be admitted a citizen of the United States of America.

Anna Briganti de Blasio
Petitioner

X Declaration of Intention No. X X with Certificate of Arrival from Department of Labor filed this X day of _____ 1924
Made in Class or Class - if petition entered in the United States on or after April 29, 1924 under the words "and Certificate of Arrival from Department of Labor."

AFFIDAVITS OF PETITIONER AND WITNESSES

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
Southern District of New York
The undersigned petitioner being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is the petitioner in the above-entitled proceedings; that he has read the foregoing petition and knows the contents thereof; that the said petition is signed with his full true name; that the same is true of his own knowledge, except as to matters therein stated to be alleged upon information and belief; and that as to those matters he believes it to be true.

Anna Briganti de Blasio
Petitioner

Aurora Aquaro _____ residence _____ wife _____ residing at 61 W 47 and Mary A. Poloso _____ occupation _____ wife _____ residing at 2023 - 83 St, Bklyn each being severally, duly, and respectively sworn, depose and say that he is a citizen of the United States of America; that he has personally known Anna Briganti De Blasio the petitioner above-mentioned, to have resided in the United States continuously immediately preceding the date of filing his petition, since the 1 day of Jan anno Domini 1915 and in the State in which the above-entitled petition is made continuously since the 1 day of _____ anno Domini 1915 and that he has personal knowledge that the said petitioner is a person of good moral character, attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and that he is in every way qualified, in his opinion, to be admitted a citizen of the United States.

Aurora Aquaro
Mary A. Poloso
Witnesses

Subscribed and sworn to before me by the above-named petitioner and witnesses in the office of the Clerk of said Court at New York, N. Y., this 10 day of Nov anno Domini 1924
J. H. Staher
U. S. Naturalization Examiner (Designated)

Bill de Blasio @BilldeBlasio
Proud of my grandmother and the many immigrants who've made our city thrive. Happy #ImmigrantHeritageWeek.

1 retweet 0 favorites
Reply

Retweet 1
Favorite
More

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
Sent: Friday, April 17, 2015 3:43 PM
To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma; 'John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com)'
Subject: RE: FYI

Josh Barro @jbarro 1m1 minute ago

@christihayes @BuzzFeedAndrew I think Andrew is suggesting this is a dig at Hillary

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
Sent: Friday, April 17, 2015 3:43 PM
To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma; 'John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com)'
Subject: RE: FYI

Andrew Tuozzolo @ATuozzolo 2m2 minutes ago

@christihayes @BuzzFeedAndrew 1st the Hillary endorse snub, now the pile-on to the Hillary "immigrant parents" "gaffe". Coincidence?

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
Sent: Friday, April 17, 2015 3:43 PM
To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma; 'John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com)'
Subject: RE: FYI

<http://www.people.com/article/hillary-clinton-grandparents-immigration-story-wrong>

Hillary Clinton Got Her Grandparents' Immigration Story Wrong

BY TARA FOWLER

@waterfowlerta

04/16/2015 AT 07:40 AM EDT

No one said running for president was going to be easy.

While speaking in Iowa on Wednesday, Hillary Clinton shared that all of her grandparents had immigrated to the United States.

"All my grandparents, you know, came over here and you know my grandfather went to work in lace mill in Scranton, Pennsylvania, and worked there until he retired at 65," she said.

But, as Buzzfeed first noted, that story conflicts with census records, which state that Clinton's paternal grandmother, Hanna Jones Rodham, was born in Pennsylvania in 1882.

What's more is that Clinton's maternal grandmother, Della Howell (née Murray), was born in Illinois in 1902, according to records. She married Edwin Howell, also born in Illinois.

But a Clinton campaign spokesperson says it was an honest mistake. "Her grandparents always spoke about the immigrant experience and, as a result she has always thought of them as immigrants," the spokesperson tells PEOPLE.

"As has been correctly pointed out, while her grandfather was an immigrant, it appears that Hillary's grandmother was born shortly after her parents and siblings arrived in the U.S. in the early 1880s."

On Wednesday, Clinton was also called out for not leaving a tip in the tip jar at a Chipotle she visited during her road trip to Iowa on Sunday, Bloombergreports.

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
Sent: Friday, April 17, 2015 3:41 PM
To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelegans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma; John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com)
Subject: FYI

Reporters taking it as trolling over HRC's recent comments on her grandmother:

Andrew Kaczynski Verified account @BuzzFeedAndrew

Andrew Kaczynski retweeted Bill de Blasio
What is going on with Bill de Blasio?
Andrew Kaczynski added,

Bill de Blasio @BilldeBlasio

Proud of my grandmother and the many immigrants who've made our city thrive. Happy #ImmigrantHeritageWeek.

3:38 PM - 17 Apr 2015

--

Mahen Gunaratna

Director of Research and Media Analysis

Mayor's Press Office | City Hall

mgunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov

(212) 676-3154 (o) | (347)-268-4295 (c)

From: B
To: Klein, Monica
Cc: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Re: clips from Omaha TV market
Date: Friday, April 17, 2015 5:52:08 PM

I'm impressed by how totally inaccurate several of these reports are

From: Klein, Monica
Sent: Thursday, April 16, 2015 11:45 AM
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: clips from Omaha TV market

Mayor de Blasio Discusses Income Inequality in Omaha, Nebraska

WOWT NBC 6 - 4:37 am

The leader of the largest city in America was in Omaha on Wednesday. UNO offered a warm welcome to New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio. Income inequality was one of the major themes of his lecture. Mayor de Blasio: "There's something happening in this country that defies our values as Americans, and undermines our security, and our stability, and our future – growing income inequality that undermines the very notion of the American dream, in the sense of this being a country for all." After speaking, de Blasio took questions from the audience. He also shared that he has family roots from Nebraska.

KETV ABC 7 - 6:03 am

While Hillary Clinton was making her way to Council Bluffs, the man who was the campaign manager of her successful Senate run was also in the metro. New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio was speaking at UNO Wednesday night. He refused to endorse Clinton on Sunday when she announced her campaign, saying he wants to hear her opinions and focus on an issue that he cares about, like income inequality. "They work harder and harder, and actually find themselves falling behind. That takes a national commitment. To address a problem of that magnitude takes a national commitment. It takes a change in how we think about things and a change in our willingness to act." De Blasio will speak at Drake University this morning in Des Moines, Iowa. Former Iowa senator Tom Harkin will also be there.

[KPTM FOX 42 - 9:12 pm \[4/15\]](#)

New York City and Omaha don't usually have much in common, but that's not the case tonight. New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio spoke tonight as part of a lecture series at UNO. He focused on college debt and what students can do about it. De Blasio also talked about his roots with Nebraska and the fact that his parents lived in Lincoln after growing up in Iowa.

[KETV ABC 7 - 10:00 pm \[4/15\]](#)

Hillary Clinton just arrived in Council Bluffs, where the democratic presidential candidate is wrapping up her Iowa campaign. In the morning, she's expected to head to New Hampshire. During her entire four-day stay in Iowa, Hillary Clinton did not address any questions from the media. She stated that her campaign is focused on the people she wants to serve, not the media. What's interesting about her arrival tonight is she's staying only a few miles from New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio, her campaign manager for her 2008 presidential run [sic]. Mayor de Blasio refused to endorse Clinton last Sunday, saying he wants to hear her opinions and focus on an issue that he cares about – income inequality. He spoke about that issue tonight at UNO. Mayor: "They work harder and harder, and actually find themselves falling behind. That takes a national commitment. To address a problem of that magnitude takes a national commitment. It takes a change in how we think about things and a change in our willingness to act." Clinton made a major push in Iowa during this campaign to speak with small business leaders about ways to improve the economy and job growth. This afternoon, she set up some private meetings, but would not say who with. During the last presidential campaign, Clinton did come in third during the Iowa caucuses. She hopes this early push and focus on the economy and small business will help bring her the win this time around.

[WOWT NBC 6 - 10:08 pm \[4/15\]](#)

The leader of the largest city in America is in Omaha tonight, with UNO offering a warm welcome to New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio. Income equality [sic] was one of the major themes of his lecture. Mayor: "There's something happening in this country that defies our values as Americans, and undermines our security, and our stability, and our future – growing income inequality that undermines the very notion of the American dream, in the sense of this being a country for all." After speaking, the mayor took questions from the audience. He also shared that he has family roots from Nebraska.

From: Carey, Michael
To: Stephanie Yazgi; John Del Cecato; Aaron Pickrell; Wolfe, Emma Subject: Re: Regular call time for TPA/ Mayors
Date: Friday, April 17, 2015 6:06:23 PM

I already spoke to Mayor about this. We are discussing how to make this realistic, but more likely to be on the weekends.

From: "[REDACTED]" <[REDACTED]>
Date: Friday, April 17, 2015 at 6:01 PM
To: Michael Carey <mpcarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Aaron Pickrell <[REDACTED]>, Emma Wolfe <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov> Subject: Regular call time for TPA/ Mayors

hi there...

Wanted to check in on this idea that we want him to do regular call time on TPA/ Mayors Organizing every week. JDC AP and I will figure out who needs what calls etc.. but wanted consistent time on calendar we can expect to be with him to get calls done.

Thank you!

Stephanie

From: Bill de Blasio
To: Hayley Prim
Cc: Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana; John Del Cecato; Aaron Pickrell
Subject: Re: Congress in Session in May
Date: Saturday, April 18, 2015 11:22:37 AM

Very helpful. This means we have few fallback dates anyway. Stick with May 12. That's an order to everyone. Let's do everything we can to make it work

Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

From: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Date: Sat, 18 Apr 2015 11:01:17 -0400
To: Bill de Blasio <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Congress in Session in May

Friday, May 1— last votes at 3pm
Tuesday May 12— votes begin at 6:30pm
Wednesday, May 13
Thursday, May 14
Friday, May 15— last votes at 3pm
Monday, May 18— votes begin at 6:30pm
Tuesday, May 19
Wednesday, May 20
Thursday, May 21— last votes at 3pm

Congress is on recess May 2-11 and May 22-31

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
To: Martinez, Julien
Cc: Klein, Monica; Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil; John Del Cecato; Carey, Michael
Subject: Re: Nebraska & Iowa Trip Coverage
Date: Sunday, April 19, 2015 1:15:17 PM

Thanks, Julien

Sent from my iPhone

On Apr 19, 2015, at 1:14 PM, Martinez, Julien <JAMartinez@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Nebraska & Iowa Trip Coverage

Morning Press Clips – Thursday, April 16, 2015

Mayor de Blasio, on Midwest Trip, Seeks to Lead a National Shift to the Left

NY TIMES - Michael Grynbaum

Mayor Bill de Blasio, dismayed by a Democratic Party that he believes has moved too slowly to embrace a populist platform, arrived in the Midwest on Wednesday with an audacious mission: leading the nation leftward.

On a two-day tour of Nebraska and Iowa — more than 1,200 miles from the New York City Hall where he has presided for 15 months — Mr. de Blasio is seeking to transcend his relative obscurity and jump-start a countrywide movement to promote liberal policies like raising taxes on the rich.

Already, the mayor's effort is drawing scrutiny. His refusal this week to endorse the presidential candidacy of Hillary Rodham Clinton, his former boss, spurred criticism from more centrist Democrats, who questioned whether the mayor had earned the credibility to drive an insurgency within his party.

Mr. de Blasio's aides did not anticipate the fierceness of the backlash to his comments about Mrs. Clinton, according to several people familiar with their thinking, but the episode underscored the notion that he could be positioned as the standard-bearer for the American left.

That is an image the mayor is keen to cultivate. A profile in Rolling Stone magazine is in the works. A forum for presidential candidates is being planned. The mayor will travel to Milwaukee and Washington this spring, and his aides are eyeing a West Coast trip to confer with liberal leaders in California.

First, however, the cerebral Mr. de Blasio will have to overcome a less lofty problem: basic name recognition. In Iowa, where he will appear on Thursday with former Senator Tom Harkin, political strategists said he remained unknown.

“Honestly, I think most people think Bloomberg is mayor of New York,” said Jeff Link, a Democratic consultant based in Des Moines, who helped arrange the mayor's visit with Mr. Harkin.

“He's a blank slate,” Mr. Link added, “which gives him the opportunity to fill that in.”

Mr. de Blasio began that work inside a University of Nebraska lecture hall here on Wednesday evening, telling the audience that “the rich and powerful are dominating the political discourse, which means they rig the game in their favor.”

The mayor called for higher wages, a national mandate for sick workers to receive paid time off and the abolition of a loophole used by hedge fund managers to pay a lower tax rate on their income. He dismissed the notion that his ideas might be seen as a form of class warfare, saying that President Franklin D. Roosevelt faced a similar critique.

“It’s never politically safe, or easy, to ask the most privileged Americans to pay more in taxes,” Mr. de Blasio said.

Still, some prominent Democrats say they are concerned that Mr. de Blasio, who has a short track record as mayor, is more focused on symbolism than substance.

The mayor “wants to be a big shot,” said William M. Daley, President Obama’s former chief of staff. If Mr. de Blasio wants a national profile, Mr. Daley said, he should “lay out specifics for urban America that are doable, not just, ‘We want the wealthy to be taxed more so we can spend their money somehow.’”

“Something specific that’s urban related,” Mr. Daley added. “Not just something amorphous, like ‘the progressive agenda.’”

Friends and colleagues of Mr. de Blasio’s say that his idea for a liberal coalition — it has not yet been given a formal name — is fueled by genuine moral dismay at the rise of economic inequality and that he wants to take advantage of his bully pulpit while it lasts.

“We’re talking about the state of the United States of America; we’re talking about the direction of the country at a time of crisis,” Mr. de Blasio told reporters in the Bronx on Tuesday, before his trip. “This is something that I’m going to speak about every chance I get, everywhere I go,” the mayor said.

Some of those opportunities are not exactly by chance. When Mr. Harkin, visiting Manhattan in September, suggested an Iowa visit to Mr. de Blasio, the mayor was intrigued, and he aggressively followed up. He enlisted one of his political consultants to work with contacts in Iowa to ensure that the trip would happen.

And his appearance on NBC’s “Meet the Press,” during which he made his comments about Mrs. Clinton, was solicited by Mr. de Blasio’s advisers this month — before it was clear when Mrs. Clinton would announce her bid — to help bring attention to his new coalition.

Mr. de Blasio has tweaked his fellow Democrats before. In November, some complained after he published an op-ed article in The Huffington Post suggesting that the party’s midterm losses could have been avoided if candidates had followed a liberal policy playbook similar to his own.

His decision to hold off endorsing Mrs. Clinton — he said he wanted to hear her “vision” first — led to accusations that the mayor was grandstanding; a New York congressman, Sean Patrick Maloney, said he “should have his head examined.” (“I appreciate his concern for my health,” Mr. de Blasio later replied.)

Others in the extended Clinton universe were even blunter. John Morgan, a prominent Florida lawyer and longtime Clinton campaign fund-raiser, called Mr. de Blasio’s broadside “a B-team move in a prime-time venue.”

“You ran her campaign; was she not progressive enough when you did that?” Mr. Morgan asked, referring to Mr. de Blasio’s management of Mrs. Clinton’s first Senate race.

Those on the Democratic left, however, welcomed Mr. de Blasio’s comments, with union leaders and activist groups praising the mayor for wanting to nudge the party left. A gathering hosted by the mayor this month at Gracie Mansion attracted Senator Sherrod Brown of Ohio, Gov. Dannel P. Malloy of Connecticut and Katrina vanden Heuvel, editor of The Nation magazine, among other notable liberals.

“He’s going to be a real spokesman in the Democratic Party for what we stand for as Democrats,” Mr. Harkin, a liberal lion of the party, said in an interview. Mr. Harkin said he did not “make anything of” the mayor’s decision not to endorse.

And is Mr. Harkin behind Mrs. Clinton’s bid?

“As a matter of fact,” the former senator said, “both my wife and I are big supporters.”

In Nebraska, de Blasio Calls for Tax Overhaul

WSJ - Michael Saul

New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio, who is seeking to become the face of the progressive movement in the U.S., on Wednesday began a tour around the country aimed at placing the issue of income inequality at the forefront of the national political debate.

During a speech at the University of Nebraska in Omaha, Mr. de Blasio outlined a series of policy proposals that he said would combat what he called the income-inequality crisis. The mayor and like-minded liberals are planning next month to release in Washington a “progressive” version of the Republicans’ 1990s-era Contract with America.

In a nod to Omaha’s Warren Buffett, the investor and philanthropist, Mr. de Blasio on Wednesday demanded a federal tax overhaul. He said the “Buffett rule” should be the law of the land; specifically, he said, millionaires shouldn’t be paying a lower tax rate than secretaries.

The mayor said the federal government should also end tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas. Instead, that money should be used to invest in roads, bridges and mass transit.

Mr. de Blasio said the “carried interest loophole,” which he said allows Wall Street managers to have their income taxed less than earned income, should be closed, as well.

The mayor later told reporters that he also supported an income-tax increase for the wealthiest people in the country. “Obviously, we have unprecedented concentration of wealth—it stands to reason that the wealthy should pay more so that we can actually get this country back on the right track.”

Mr. de Blasio said some of his critics will refer to his proposals as “class warfare.”

“They’ll say it’s impossible. They’ll say it’s unrealistic. They’ll say it’s mean-spirited,” he said. “It’s none of those things.”

The mayor said these proposed changes to the tax structure are about fairness, inclusion and rebuilding the middle class.

Mr. de Blasio discussed a number of other policies, such as raising the federal minimum wage, providing free prekindergarten to all 4-year-olds nationwide and passing national legislation to give workers paid sick leave.

Three protesters gathered outside the lecture hall where Mr. de Blasio delivered his speech. One held a sign that read, “Turn Your Back on Bill de Blasio.”

“We know that he’s a communist, a socialist,” said Henry Burke, a 69-year-old Republican retiree.

“We didn’t like that he threw the police officers under the bus,” he said, referring to the mayor’s recent dispute with police union officials who accused him of fostering an antipolice climate.

The mayor is heading Wednesday night to Iowa, where presidential candidate Hillary Clinton is finishing her first campaign swing. Mr. de Blasio drew criticism this week for taking a wait-and-see approach to endorsing Mrs. Clinton, his former boss and mentor.

“I don’t have any plans” to meet with Mrs. Clinton while in Iowa, he said.

Iowans Welcome New York City Mayor, Whoever He Is

WSJ - Michael Saul

When asked what he thought about the mayor of New York City, 27-year-old Jason Greeno, who works for an insurance company here, earnestly replied, “Was he the one who outlawed the large sodas?”

Mayor Bill de Blasio left New York City on Wednesday for a two-day swing through the Midwest, but interviews with more than a dozen people in the Des Moines area underscored that many know nothing about Mr. de Blasio or his policy views.

Mr. Greeno and many others confused Mr. de Blasio with his predecessor, Michael Bloomberg, who tried unsuccessfully to ban large, sugary drinks and led a national campaign against illegal guns.

Others’ knowledge of New York’s mayor was even more dated. “Is it—oh God—is it Giuliani?” said Cindy Knobloch, 55, a reference to former Mayor Rudy Giuliani, who left office in 2001, as she walked with her granddaughter along the square in Winterset, a small city southwest of Des Moines.

Mr. de Blasio was scheduled to speak Wednesday night in Nebraska, before heading to Iowa for a day. He aspires to be a national voice on liberal issues and plans to speak out during the trip on income inequality.

Some here praised him for speaking out on national questions, while others said people in the Midwest won't be influenced by anything a mayor of New York City says or thinks.

"Coming here, I question is he going to be running for president? Everyone else who comes to Des Moines is," said Iowa-born Marcia Schoeppner, 62, as she strolled past a sculpture garden in downtown Des Moines. "I do question his motives coming to Iowa."

Ms. Schoeppner lauded Mr. de Blasio for addressing income inequality but said she hadn't formed an opinion of him as a leader.

"I have a friend in New York who doesn't like him," she said, "because of his stand on police officers when everything blew up a few months ago." Mr. de Blasio drew fire a few months ago from union officials who accused him of fostering an antipolice climate, but the mayor has worked to repair the rift.

In 2007, when Mr. Bloomberg flirted with running for president, interviews with dozens of voters in Iowa showed most had heard of him. Still, few knew much about his biography or his record in business and government.

John Weaver, 51, general manager at Sundown Equipment in Bevington, Iowa, near Des Moines, where the showroom was filled with tractors, didn't know anything about Mr. de Blasio. But he said he supported his views on income inequality.

"I do know that they're passing laws to get the minimum wage increased, and I think that's important," he said. "These $7, $8 an hour jobs—people cannot survive on that. So, I'm all for wage increases."

He was less certain whether Mr. de Blasio would influence people's opinions in the Hawkeye State. "Honestly, probably not, not in Iowa—I don't think they really care," he said.

Gary Moore, a 66-year-old Democrat who is backing former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton's presidential bid, said he was pleased New Yorkers elected Mr. de Blasio.

"I was in favor of his election because of his mixed-race marriage," he said, referring to Mr. de Blasio's wife, Chirlane McCray, who is African-American. "My husband is black. So, I found that favorable."

Mr. Moore praised the mayor for pushing Mrs. Clinton and all candidates to adopt policies on income inequality. "I really would like to see more emphasis put on that," he said.

Madi White, a 15-year-old high school freshman, described Mr. de Blasio's visit as "very exciting." She said she was concerned about the ability to provide for herself and afford a home when she becomes an adult. Mostly, though, she was thrilled a big-time New Yorker was visiting.

"I've always wanted to go to New York City. Always," she said. "Times Square, New Year's Eve, I've always wanted to do that.”

Armand Cason, a retired machinist, said income issues weren't important to him. “When you get to be an old fossil, things are pretty much set,” said Mr. Cason, 87. “I'm not too concerned about my income.”

While several people here were suspicious that Mr. de Blasio harbored presidential ambitions, the mayor has said his only electoral plan is to run for re-election in 2017. Mr. de Blasio campaigned for John Edwards in Iowa in 2004, and he returned in 2008 championing Mrs. Clinton. The mayor's paternal grandmother was from Blanchard, Iowa, a small town near the state's border with Missouri.

Part of the problem for Mr. de Blasio is that he doesn't yet have a national profile. Tamara C. Jones, a Dallas resident who on Wednesday was visiting one of the famous bridges of Madison County southwest of Des Moines praised the mayor's initiative. “He's an unknown,” she said. “What do you stand for? What are you about?”

Brian Downes, 61, director of the John Wayne birthplace in Winterset, said that ultimately the mayor of New York and the people of Iowa come from “two different worlds.”

“He won't let us have Pepsi, right?”

Bill de Blasio talks income inequality during Nebraska visit

DAILY NEWS - Jennifer Fermino

In his latest out-of-state appearance to boost his profile as a national progressive voice, Mayor de Blasio focused on income inequality in a speech in Nebraska on Wednesday.

In the Omaha appearance, the mayor struck a personal note and revealed his family has roots in the Cornhusker State.

De Blasio, who rarely talks about his estranged father's side of the family, told the crowd at the University of Nebraska-Omaha that his paternal grandmother Nina Warren moved to the state when she was 8.

“I'm sure she's smiling down on us here tonight,” said de Blasio, who was born Warren Wilhelm but changed his name as an adult.

De Blasio spoke about the need for the country's leaders to address income inequality, which he called the “crisis of our time.”

“The crumbling of the middle class isn't just a problem on the East Coast,” he said. “It's a national problem, and it requires a national commitment to solving it.”

His trip to Nebraska will be followed by a visit to Iowa on Thursday, where he will give two speeches on the same topic.

It's the latest example of the mayor pushing himself on the national stage. He's made several trips out of state and also visited Britain to address the Labor Party conference.

He arrives in Iowa one day after 2016 contender Hillary Clinton — his former boss, whom he has so far refused to endorse — left the state.

De Blasio jabs Obama over income inequality

NY POST - Michael Gartland

President Obama is next in line for Bill de Knife.

Mayor Bill de Blasio charged Thursday that the president hasn't moved fast enough to address income inequality, an issue Hizzoner described as "the crisis of our time."

"My critique would be I wish the president had early and often talked about income inequality and rallied the American people to address the issue," the mayor said on the second day of his swing to the Midwest to promote his progressive agenda.

"I wish that had happened earlier on in his administration."

The barb came just a week after de Blasio appeared on "Meet the Press" to tell the nation he wasn't ready to endorse Hillary Clinton for president — even though she hired him as campaign manager for her 2000 US Senate race.

Like Clinton, Obama has strong ties to the mayor, having campaigned at his side in the 2013 mayoral race. Patrick Gaspard, the US ambassador to South Africa and former White House political director, is a close pal of the mayor.

Obama also took office as the country was in the grips of the national financial crisis.

De Blasio arrived in Iowa Thursday, where he delivered a speech at Drake University about income inequality.

In strikingly similar language to his remarks a day earlier in Nebraska, de Blasio warned that the divide between the rich and everyone else was threatening the fabric of American life.

His solutions included an immediate $13 minimum wage, going up to $15 in 2019, and higher taxes on the wealthy.

"There is no reason a hedge fund billionaire should pay a lower tax rate than the woman who cleans his beach house or the guy who pilots his private jet," he said.

About 50 people were in the audience, most of them students.

They were allowed to ask questions, but not about the 2016 race for the White House.

"The university asked us not to ask any questions about the presidential campaign," said Emma Wilson, a Drake journalism student from Ames, Iowa.

"I definitely thought that was weird. I hadn't ever experienced anything like that at any other speeches so I personally was a little concerned about why they did that."

De Blasio denied having anything to do with the gag order. A university spokesman said students were simply encouraged to address the topic of the day, income inequality.

The mayor again insisted that Clinton's campaign was not caught off guard by his refusal to endorse her before hearing more about her “vision” for the future.

“I have been beating this drum for quite awhile with Team Clinton,” he said. “She and a lot of people in her orbit understand how important these issues are and I’m very hopeful we’re going to see more about it.”

At least one student who heard the mayor’s remarks emerged from his speech convinced he’d make a better president than Clinton.

“He’d get my vote as of now,” said Tess Montgomery of Minneapolis, an advertising major. “Over Hillary? I’d say so.”

De Blasio, who plans to travel to Wisconsin on April 25 to stump on the same inequality issue, said he has no plans to run for president in 2016.

In Nebraska, de Blasio Outlines His National Progressive Vision

NY OBSERVER - Jillian Jorgensen

Mayor Bill de Blasio made addressing income inequality a hallmark of his 2013 mayoral campaign—and with presidential primaries approaching, he took the show on the road to the midwest today, outlining an eight-point progressive agenda that includes adopting some of his own signature policies nationwide.

Mr. de Blasio kicked off a two-day swing through the middle of the country in Omaha, Nebraska, where he gave a speech at the University of Nebraska calling on the country to adopt universal pre-Kindergarten and paid sick time laws to help close the wage gap that he deemed the “economic crisis of our time.”

“It’s not a theoretical problem for us to study, or a byproduct of a robust economy we must simply accept. It is the crisis of our time,” Mr. de Blasio was set to say, according to prepared remarks provided by his office.

The mayor—perhaps overshadowed outside the tri-state area by the three-term legacy and billions of dollars of former Mayor Michael Bloomberg—has been working to bolster his nationwide profile, particularly among the progressive left wing of the Democratic party. He plans to hold a forum on income inequality for presidential candidates, and caused a stir this week with his decision not to immediately back the presidential bid of former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, whose U.S. Senate campaign he managed in 2000. Tomorrow, he will head to Iowa, where Ms. Clinton is campaigning.

In his planned remarks today, Mr. de Blasio returned to a theme he first touched on in a Huffington Post opinion piece he wrote following the mid-term elections, which were disastrous for Democrats—that the party had not gone far enough left.

“In 2014, Democrats across the country talked about helping the middle class, but relatively few supported bold policies to actually stop the middle class from eroding. Very few did more than pay lip service to those struggling to get by. And almost nobody talked about poverty,” Mr. de Blasio’s speech reads. “It’s like that word has been erased from politicians’ vocabularies—even while it’s become more and more of an everyday reality for so many.”

The mayor laid out three ways to take on the crisis: by “making work pay,” offering help to working parents, and “honoring work, not just wealth.” From there, he offered more specific policy proposals he said could be enacted immediately—beginning with an increased minimum wage.

Mr. de Blasio made note that New York was “fighting” for a $13 minimum wage with indexing, to get to $15 by 2019. The political prospects of that plan are murky at best—the state legislature controls the city’s minimum wage, and Gov. Andrew Cuomo has proposed a considerably smaller hike. Even the governor’s more modest proposal was not included in the recent state budget deal. And New York’s state minimum wage is already $8.75, well above the national standard of $7.25.

Mr. de Blasio praised Nebraska for a recent hike to its minimum wage—now $8 an hour.

“You did so because there are no red wages or blue wages. Every American who works hard should earn enough so they’re not living in poverty. It’s as simple as that,” his speech read.

He also called for pressure on businesses to raise the wages of all workers, not just those earning the bare minimum, and for the creation of a wage-tracker to name and shame low-paying corporations and celebrate others.

A close ally of the labor-backed Working Families Party, Mr. de Blasio called on federal government contracts to “give special consideration” to businesses that recognize the right to unionize, blaming the decline of union power for the rise of income inequality.

“Since the late 1960s, the middle class has steadily been losing its share of national income—and it’s no coincidence that this trend line tracks very closely with that of declining union membership,” he said.

Then he turned to some of the measures he’d more successfully championed locally—full-day pre-Kindergarten chief among them. He said the expansion—which costs hundreds of millions in New York City alone—could be paid nationally for by enacting the so-called “Buffett Rule,” named for Omaha’s own billionaire Warren Buffett, which says no household making more than $1 million annually should pay a smaller share of income tax than those making under $250,000.

He also called for the passage of national legislation to provide paid sick leave, an expansion of which was one of the first major policies Mr. de Blasio enacted through the City Council.

Finally, he called for tax policy changes—ending overseas tax breaks and closing the carried interest loophole to expand the Earned Income Tax Credit for the working poor.

In making his case, Mr. de Blasio sought to show these ideas weren’t just held by progressives, but by scions of business too. In addition to Mr. Buffett, the mayor also name-checked investor Nick Hanauer and Goldman Sachs CEO Lloyd Blankfein.

“I realize that some of these ideas might be dismissed as unrealistic, or called class warfare,” Mr. de Blasio allowed in his written remarks, saying the same had been said of prior efforts. “It’s never politically safe or easy to ask the most privileged Americans to pay more in taxes. But the math is clear. Rebuilding the middle class simply isn't possible if those at the very top don't pay their fair share."

Tomorrow, Mr. de Blasio is set to speak at two events in Des Moines, Iowa: first he'll give a speech at Drake University, and later he'll offer remarks at a gathering of Progress Iowa.

New York mayor tackles income inequality in Nebraska speech

ASSOCIATED PRESS - Staff

Mayor Bill de Blasio called income inequality the economic crisis of our time in a speech Wednesday at the University of Nebraska in Omaha.

"The crumbling of the middle class isn't just a problem on the East Coast," he said. "It's a national problem, and it requires a national commitment to solving it."

The first-term mayor, a Democrat, said wealth has become increasingly concentrated at the very top of the economic ladder and a "typical American family, in real terms, is making less today than they were a quarter-century ago."

"For decades, prosperity has become elusive and exclusive: enjoyed intensely by a select few but out of reach for far too many who work hard and play by the rules," de Blasio said.

To fix the problem, de Blasio urged increasing taxes on the wealthy, passing legislation to provide paid sick leave, ending tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas, raising the minimum wage and pressuring businesses to raise wages for all workers.

De Blasio has made no secret of his efforts to become, along with U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Warren, of Massachusetts, a leading voice for the ultraliberal wing of the Democratic Party. He has taken steps to raise his profile, including making a bid for the 2016 Democratic National Convention and hosting a meeting of liberals at Gracie Mansion this month.

On Thursday, de Blasio travels to Iowa, where he'll deliver remarks at Drake University and meet with Des Moines Mayor Frank Cownie and other area mayors and business leaders.

New York City Mayor Speaks at UNO

WOWT - Alex Hassel

The leader of the largest city in America spoke in Omaha Wednesday night. UNO offered a warm welcome for New York City Mayor, Bill de Blasio, that evening. Income inequality was one of the major themes of de Blasio's lecture at the university. "Something happening in this country that defies our values as Americans, and undermines our security, and our stability, and our future: growing income inequality that undermines the very notion of the American dream, in a sense of this being a country for all," de Blasio said. After speaking, de Blasio took questions from the audience. He also shared that he has family roots from Nebraska.

In Omaha speech, NYC Mayor de Blasio says he wants leaders to take stand on income inequality

OMAHA WORLD HERALD - Robynn Tysver

New York Mayor Bill de Blasio came to Omaha on Wednesday to talk about income inequality and, in the process, took a jab at both Democrats and Republicans. The Democrat said that neither of the nation's two major political parties want to talk about the growing gap between the rich and the poor, a gap that de Blasio said has become a national crisis.

"Lord knows, fewer and fewer of our leaders are willing to say the word 'poor,'" said de Blasio, who was the keynote speaker at a lecture series sponsored by the University of Nebraska at Omaha and held in honor of the late U.S. Rep. Peter Hoagland of Omaha.

De Blasio, who rankled some Democrats earlier this week by refusing to endorse his longtime political ally Hillary Clinton in her presidential campaign, is believed to be trying to raise his national profile and his national "progressive" agenda.

Today he is scheduled to speak twice in Iowa: at Drake University and at a fundraiser in Des Moines. Iowa, of course, is home to the nation's first presidential caucuses.

In Omaha, de Blasio argued that the growing gap between rich and poor not only hurts lower-income Americans but eventually will hurt the wealthy. If people don't have enough money to purchase goods and services, the economy will suffer, cutting into everyone's bottom line, he said.

He said that one reason for the growing gap is the decline in the power and membership of the nation's labor unions.

He also argued that the wealthy bounced back from the Great Recession while many in the middle class are still struggling.

"The middle class, as we know it, is starting to disappear," he said.

During his speech, de Blasio said the income tax rate needed to be raised on wealthier Americans and said public pressure needed to be brought to bear to persuade executives to raise their workers' salaries.

He also praised Omaha investor Warren Buffett for raising the issue of income equality in 2012. At the time, Buffett supported a bill to raise the income tax rate for those making more than $1 million by arguing that his secretary was paying a higher income tax rate than her boss.

"That took decency and honesty to say that out loud to the world," de Blasio said.

New York mayor tackles income inequality in Nebraska speech

BEATRICE DAILY SUN - Staff

Mayor Bill de Blasio called income inequality the economic crisis of our time in a speech Wednesday at the University of Nebraska in Omaha.

"The crumbling of the middle class isn't just a problem on the East Coast," he said.

"It's a national problem, and it requires a national commitment to solving it."

The first-term mayor, a Democrat, said wealth has become increasingly concentrated at the very top of the economic ladder and a "typical American family, in real terms, is making less today than they were a quarter-century ago."

"For decades, prosperity has become elusive and exclusive: enjoyed intensely by a select few but out of reach for far too many who work hard and play by the rules," de Blasio said.

To fix the problem, de Blasio urged increasing taxes on the wealthy, passing legislation to provide paid sick leave, ending tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas, raising the minimum wage and pressuring businesses to raise wages for all workers.

De Blasio has made no secret of his efforts to become, along with U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Warren, of Massachusetts, a leading voice for the ultraliberal wing of the Democratic Party. He has taken steps to raise his profile, including making a bid for the 2016 Democratic National Convention and hosting a meeting of liberals at Gracie Mansion this month.

On Thursday, de Blasio travels to Iowa, where he'll deliver remarks at Drake University and meet with Des Moines Mayor Frank Cownie and other area mayors and business leaders.

Mayor De Blasio: Income Inequality Is A 'Profound Crisis'

CBS 2 - Staff

Mayor Bill de Blasio is headed for the Midwest Wednesday and while he'll be in a primary state of Iowa, he's not running for president.

Mayor de Blasio will speak at Drake University in Iowa and at the University of Nebraska- Omaha. The topic of both addresses will be income inequality, WCBS 880's Rich Lamb reported.

"This is something that I'm going to speak about every chance I get, everywhere I go, because this is a crisis facing our nation and facing our city. It's a profound crisis, it's a crisis that is not being addressed, and it is a dangerous, dangerous situation," de Blasio said.

The mayor added rarely in our history have we seen something so important go so under-recognized, so un-acted upon.

De Blasio has been under harsh criticism this week for his world class snub of Hillary Clinton, after he went on national television and said he wouldn't immediately endorse her.

Mayor Talks Income Inequality, Progressive Politics in Iowa

NY1 - Josh Robin

Mayor Bill de Blasio at City Hall. Des Moines City Hall.

"This is my favorite line. What are you doing here?" said de Blasio.

Iowa, of course, hosts the nation's first presidential caucuses.

De Blasio insists he isn't running for president, just trying to influence who the next one is.

"I'm working with progressive leaders all over the country and we are going to put together a progressive vision," said de Blasio.

It'll take him to Wisconsin this month. The mayor is also working on sponsoring a presidential forum. He wants commitments on paid sick leave and national pre-k and especially bridging the gap between rich and poor. He says the current president hasn't done enough.

"I wish the president had early and often talk about income inequality and rallied the American people," said the mayor.

As for who should replace Barack Obama, de Blasio is waiting, trying to first build his national exposure.

Helping him: a political strategist who advised Barack Obama on how to beat Hillary Clinton in Iowa seven years ago.

Some Democrats seethe over de Blasio's lack of a Clinton endorsement this time. He has long ties to the former first family.

De Blasio shrugs.

"I have been beating this drum for quite a while with team Clinton about the fact that these issues need to be addressed," said de Blasio.

Former Iowa senator Tom Harkin has been advising Hillary Clinton and they talked about the non-endorsement.

"She said 'Oh I love Bill de Blasio. Ran my campaign for the Senate. Great guy great mayor,'" said Harkin.

Some say the mayor should concentrate on New York issues. It's also Iowa love this week.

He is defending what many call the Hawkeye State's oversized role in the presidential race.

Statewide, Iowa caucuses draw as many people as are in some neighborhoods where de Blasio is mayor.

Even as he's far away from New York the Mayor can't escape local issues. He was asked about his intention to ban horse drawn carriages from Central Park. He says he stands by the decision.

Morning TV News — Thursday, April 16, 2015

Mayor de Blasio Discusses Income Inequality in Omaha, Nebraska

ABC 7 - Sandra Bookman - 5:34 am

The heartland gets a taste of Bill de Blasio today. The mayor is traveling to Des Moines, Iowa to deliver an address at Drake University. Yesterday, the mayor spoke at the University of Nebraska in Omaha. He warned that the crumbling of the middle class is a national problem, and he declared income inequality the economic crisis of our time.

NBC 4 - Darlene Rodriguez - 5:36 am

Mayor de Blasio is in the Midwest. Today, he will speak at Drake University in Des Moines, Iowa. He is expected to talk about income inequality, raising the minimum wage, and ending tax breaks for the wealthy. Those were a few of the issues he discussed last night in Omaha, Nebraska. Mayor de Blasio is also working on a forum for presidential candidates.

CBS 2 - Mary Calvi - 6:15 am

Mayor de Blasio is in Iowa today as part of a two-day visit to the Midwest that included a stop yesterday in Nebraska. De Blasio is not running for anything, but he's trying to push a populist agenda for the country that includes higher taxes on the rich.

[The following reports are from Omaha TV News:]

WOWT NBC 6 - 4:37 am

The leader of the largest city in America was in Omaha on Wednesday. UNO offered a warm welcome to New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio. Income inequality was one of the major themes of his lecture. Mayor: “There’s something happening in this country that defies our values as Americans, and undermines our security, and our stability, and our future – growing income inequality that undermines the very notion of the American dream, in the sense of this being a country for all.” After speaking, de Blasio took questions from the audience. He also shared that he has family roots from Nebraska.

KETV ABC 7 - 6:03 am

While Hillary Clinton was making her way to Council Bluffs, the man who was the campaign manager of her successful Senate run was also in the metro. New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio was speaking at UNO Wednesday night. He refused to endorse Clinton on Sunday when she announced her campaign, saying he wants to hear her opinions and focus on an issue that he cares about, like income inequality. “They work harder and harder, and actually find themselves falling behind. That takes a national commitment. To address a problem of that magnitude takes a national commitment. It takes a change in how we think about things and a change in our willingness to act.” De Blasio will speak at Drake University this morning in Des Moines, Iowa. Former Iowa senator Tom Harkin will also be there.

[KPTM FOX 42 - 9:12 pm \[4/15\]](#)

New York City and Omaha don’t usually have much in common, but that’s not the case tonight. New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio spoke tonight as part of a lecture series at UNO. He focused on college debt and what students can do about it. De Blasio also talked about his roots with Nebraska and the fact that his parents lived in Lincoln after growing up in Iowa.

[KETV ABC 7 - 10:00 pm \[4/15\]](#)

Hillary Clinton just arrived in Council Bluffs, where the democratic presidential candidate is wrapping up her Iowa campaign. In the morning, she’s expected to head to New Hampshire. During her entire four-day stay in Iowa, Hillary Clinton did not address any questions from the media. She stated that her campaign is focused on the people she wants to serve, not the media. What’s interesting about her arrival tonight is she’s staying only a few miles from New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio, her campaign manager for her 2008 presidential run [sic]. Mayor de Blasio refused to endorse Clinton last Sunday, saying he wants to hear her opinions and focus on an issue that he cares about – income inequality. He spoke about that issue tonight at UNO. Mayor: “They work harder and harder, and actually find themselves falling behind. That takes a national commitment. To address a problem of that magnitude takes a national commitment. It takes a change in how we think about things and a change in our willingness to act.” Clinton made a major push in Iowa during this campaign to speak with small business leaders about ways to improve the economy and job growth. This afternoon, she set up some private meetings, but would not say who with. During the last presidential campaign, Clinton did come in third during the Iowa caucuses. She hopes this early push and focus on the economy and small business will help bring her the win this time around.

[WOWT NBC 6 - 10:08 pm \[4/15\]](#)

The leader of the largest city in America is in Omaha tonight, and UNO is offering a warm welcome to New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio. Income equality [sic] was one of the major themes of his lecture. Mayor: “There’s something happening in this country that defies our values as Americans, and undermines our security, and our stability, and our future – growing income inequality that undermines the very notion of the American dream, in the sense of this being a country for all.” After speaking, the mayor took questions from the audience. He also shared that he has family roots from Nebraska.

Radio News – Thursday, April 16, 2015

Interview: De Blasio, Live From Iowa, on Hillary Clinton

WNYC - Brigid Bergin - 3:00 pm

New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio took his fight against income inequality on the road this week, making speeches in Nebraska on Wednesday and Iowa on Thursday. De Blasio called for national policy solutions to address the economic backslide of working families when he talked with WNYC’s Julianne Welby. He said that the people of Iowa and Nebraska who had invited him to speak were “hungry to talk about the issue” of income inequality. “The last time you could find income disparity this bad would be the 1920s, but the 1920s led to the New Deal,” de Blasio said. “We don’t have anything like that on the horizon.”

Morning Press Clips – Friday, April 17, 2015

Mayor de Blasio, in Iowa, Cites ‘Rampant Inequality’ in U.S.

NY TIMES - Michael Grynbaum

The tall man from out of town came dressed in the colors of the flag, carrying a message of woe about the nation: Washington, he lamented, was out of touch; working-class people were hurting; and political parties had “a lot of explaining to do.”

Mayor Bill de Blasio of New York, on a visit to this Midwest city on Thursday, often sounded a lot like the national player he aspires to be, delivering a fiery speech about the dangers of income inequality and calling for a revival of progressive-era politics.

He criticized Washington for its failure to address “rampant inequality” and said the “hyper-concentration of wealth is un-American,” one of several memorable lines that he added to his prepared remarks.

But even as Mr. de Blasio, a Democrat, sought to transcend the limits of his municipal office, espousing his brand of Brooklyn liberalism in a state 1,100 miles from home, it was hard to escape the nuisances of his day job.

Even in Iowa, it turns out, some people are angry about Mr. de Blasio’s proposal to take horse carriages out of Central Park.

“Isn’t it a little bit hypocritical?” asked Trent Loos, a rancher and radio host, who attended a news conference to see whether the mayor could reconcile his plan, which would eliminate several dozen jobs, with his broader defense of the working class. (Mr. de Blasio said the city would help the horse carriage drivers find new work.)

The mayor’s national tour — he was in Nebraska on Wednesday, and is expected to be in Milwaukee, Washington and California soon — is an effort to jump-start a national liberal coalition that might influence the presidential race.

Mr. de Blasio received a warm reception to his 40-minute speech in a wood-paneled, light-filled library at Drake University here, where some audience members murmured in agreement as he declared that the nation was “heading toward an iceberg.”

“Growing inequality and the things that could be done about it are literally not on the table in Washington, D.C.,” the mayor said.

Mr. de Blasio, who can be uneasy with the stilted nature of New York City news conferences, appeared confident and at ease in Iowa, recalling his experience as a caucus captain while working for the 2004 presidential campaign of John Edwards.

Asked whether he might consider his own run for president in 2016, Mr. de Blasio laughed. “I have one ambition,” he said. “I’m running for re-election as mayor of New York City.”

How about 2020? “I have one ambition,” the mayor replied, before repeating his response word-for-word.

A New Yorker by way of Cambridge, Mass., Mr. de Blasio nevertheless found creative ways to empathize with his Midwestern audiences.

Speaking in Omaha on Wednesday, he talked about his “family roots here in Nebraska,” noting that his paternal grandmother, Nina Warren, grew up in Lincoln, Neb.

In Des Moines, he brought up the same grandmother, but emphasized a different fact — she was born in Blanchard, Iowa. Nebraska went unmentioned.

While the mayor’s visit attracted coverage from a variety of Midwestern news media outlets, it was not clear how far his remarks would reach beyond his liberal base. After hearing the mayor speak in Omaha, Bert Mehrer, a retired lawyer, said he was impressed by Mr. de Blasio’s views but pessimistic they could gain wide traction.

“This auditorium, this evening, probably had 90 percent of all the Democrats in the state of Nebraska,” Mr. Mehrer said as he left the event, held on a University of Nebraska campus.

In Des Moines, Emma Wilson, a 20-year-old student at Drake University, said she thought Mr. de Blasio offered a viewpoint she had not heard from presidential contenders who visited her state.

“I feel like a lot of candidates that have come to Iowa recently, while maybe they say they support the middle class, that’s different than having a concrete list of steps that will definitely move the working class forward,” Ms. Wilson, a Democrat, said.

Back in New York, though, not all of Mr. de Blasio’s fellow Democrats had rave reviews.

“Dude, you do have a city to run,” State Senator Diane J. Savino of Staten Island wrote on Facebook on Thursday. “If you want to go on a day trip, come to Staten Island and fill some potholes, come to Coney Island and help with youth violence.”

Either undeterred or unaware of Ms. Savino’s comments, Mr. de Blasio ate lunch at Zombie Burger, a Des Moines mainstay, and then visited City Hall for a meeting with the mayor, Frank Cownie. In the afternoon, he spoke at a fund-raiser and reception for Progress Iowa, a liberal activist group.

At Drake, the mayor seemed struck by the neat appearance of the beaming college student who introduced him, and joked about the differences with his own scruffy undergraduate garb.

“I was by no means as clean-cut and proper-looking as you,” Mr. de Blasio told the student, alluding to photographs of his New York University days in which the future mayor has shaggy hair and heavy-lidded eyes.

“In fact,” he added, “even though I was clean-cut, I looked like I was high all the time.”

In Nebraska, de Blasio Calls for Tax Overhaul

WSJ - Michael Saul

New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio, who is seeking to become the face of the progressive movement in the U.S., on Wednesday began a tour around the country aimed at placing the issue of income inequality at the forefront of the national political debate.

During a speech at the University of Nebraska in Omaha, Mr. de Blasio outlined a series of policy proposals that he said would combat what he called the income-inequality crisis. The mayor and like-minded liberals are planning next month to release in Washington a “progressive” version of the Republicans’ 1990s-era Contract with America.

In a nod to Omaha’s Warren Buffett, the investor and philanthropist, Mr. de Blasio on Wednesday demanded a federal tax overhaul. He said the “Buffett rule” should be the law of the land; specifically, he said, millionaires shouldn’t be paying a lower tax rate than secretaries.

The mayor said the federal government should also end tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas. Instead, that money should be used to invest in roads, bridges and mass transit.

Mr. de Blasio said the “carried interest loophole,” which he said allows Wall Street managers to have their income taxed less than earned income, should be closed, as well.

The mayor later told reporters that he also supported an income-tax increase for the wealthiest people in the country. “Obviously, we have unprecedented concentration of wealth—it stands to reason that the wealthy should pay more so that we can actually get this country back on the right track.”

Mr. de Blasio said some of his critics will refer to his proposals as “class warfare.”

“They’ll say it’s impossible. They’ll say it’s unrealistic. They’ll say it’s mean-spirited,” he said. “It’s none of those things.”

The mayor said these proposed changes to the tax structure are about fairness, inclusion and rebuilding the middle class.

Mr. de Blasio discussed a number of other policies, such as raising the federal minimum wage, providing free prekindergarten to all 4-year-olds nationwide and passing national legislation to give workers paid sick leave.

Three protesters gathered outside the lecture hall where Mr. de Blasio delivered his speech. One held a sign that read, “Turn Your Back on Bill de Blasio.”

“We know that he’s a communist, a socialist,” said Henry Burke, a 69-year-old Republican retiree.

“We didn’t like that he threw the police officers under the bus,” he said, referring to the mayor’s recent dispute with police union officials who accused him of fostering an antipolice climate.

The mayor is heading Wednesday night to Iowa, where presidential candidate Hillary Clinton is finishing her first campaign swing. Mr. de Blasio drew criticism this week for taking a wait-and-see approach to endorsing Mrs. Clinton, his former boss and mentor.

“I don’t have any plans” to meet with Mrs. Clinton while in Iowa, he said.

NYC Mayor Bill de Blasio Decries Wealth Gap

WSJ - Michael Saul

New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio on Thursday accused U.S. political leaders on both sides of the aisle, including President Barack Obama, of failing to address what he called the crisis of income inequality.

“This hyper-concentration of wealth is un-American,” Mr. de Blasio said in a speech at Drake University here in Iowa, home of the first-in-the-country presidential nominating contest. “It is not consistent with our values. It’s not consistent with what this nation was founded to be.”

Mr. de Blasio, New York City’s first Democratic mayor in 20 years, singled out the titans of Wall Street and painted them in a negative light to illustrate his push for changes to the federal tax structure.

“There is no reason that a hedge-fund billionaire should pay a lower tax rate than the woman who cleans his beach house or the guy who pilots his private jet,” he said. “It’s as simple as that.”

Ed Cox, New York state’s GOP chairman, dismissed the mayor’s remarks.

“Mayor de Blasio is flapping his gums in Iowa about a lot of pie in the sky,” Mr. Cox said, “rather than being in New York managing a tough city, which to date he has mismanaged with misguided policies.”

The mayor traveled to the Midwest this week—speaking in Omaha, Neb., on Wednesday and in Iowa’s capital on Thursday—as part of a tour aimed at placing income inequality at the forefront of the national debate ahead of the 2016 presidential election.

Mr. de Blasio, who is seeking to be the face of the progressive movement in the nation, is planning to speak in Wisconsin on April 25 and release a progressive platform with like-minded liberals in Washington next month.

Earlier this week, the mayor declined to endorse Democratic presidential hopeful Hillary Clinton, his former boss and mentor, saying he wanted to hear her vision for her campaign. On Thursday, he criticized federal officials en masse, including Mr. Obama, who, with Mrs. Clinton, endorsed Mr. de Blasio's 2013 mayoral bid.

"Today we're heading toward an iceberg," Mr. de Blasio said. "And there's literally nothing emanating from Washington that will change our course."

Later, when talking to reporters, he said much of the blame belongs to Congress, but he directly criticized Mr. Obama.

"I wish the president had, you know, early and often talked about income inequality and rallied the American people to address the issue," he said.

The White House declined to comment.

Some Democrats have found the mayor's wait-and-see approach with Mrs. Clinton's presidential bid and his criticism of fellow party members to be disloyal.

Last year, in New York, Mr. de Blasio failed in his bid to put Democrats in control of the state Senate, and a poll from earlier this year showed less than half of city voters approved of the mayor's job performance.

Mrs. Clinton traveled to Iowa earlier this week but didn't cross paths with Mr. de Blasio. Still, the mayor said he hoped she and her aides were listening to his policy proposals.

"I have been beating this drum for quite a while with Team Clinton," he said.

During his Midwest swing, Mr. de Blasio outlined several national policy proposals, including ending tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas, raising the minimum wage and establishing free prekindergarten nationwide.

One of the college students who attended the mayor's speech, Tess Montgomery, a 22-year-old senior, said she would vote for Mr. de Blasio if he were running for president in 2016.

"He'd get my vote, as of now," she said, "over Hillary."

Mr. de Blasio insisted on Thursday that his only electoral ambition is re-election in 2017.

Former U.S. Sen. Tom Harkin, an Iowa Democrat who introduced Mr. de Blasio before his speech, called the mayor "one of our great progressive leaders in America."

Mr. Harkin, a supporter of Mrs. Clinton, said the former secretary of state attended a nine-person dinner party at his home on Wednesday. "She loves Bill de Blasio, I can tell you that," he said.

Mrs. Clinton didn't talk to him about the mayor's non-endorsement, Mr. Harkin said.

While in Iowa, Mr. de Blasio met with the mayor of Des Moines and other local mayors and business leaders to discuss federal transportation funding. He met with liberal-leaning donors and activists later in the day.

The mayor has both political and personal roots in the state. He campaigned for John Edwards in 2004 and Mrs. Clinton in 2008. In both of those races, Mr. de Blasio said, Iowa sent a message to the nation that it needs to move in a more progressive direction. Both Mr. Edwards and Mrs. Clinton lost the Iowa caucuses.

The mayor noted his paternal grandmother, Nina Warren, was born in Iowa in 1888 and lived in the town of Blanchard. According to family lore, her father—his great-grandfather—was once Blanchard's mayor, he said.

"Apparently I'm not the first member of my family to be a mayor," Mr. de Blasio said. "I guess I'm part of a political dynasty."

The Blanchard city clerk wasn't able to immediately confirm the relations.

Hillary Clinton 'loves' Bill de Blasio despite lack of endorsement, says former Sen. Tom Harkin

DAILY NEWS -Cameron Joseph

Hillary Clinton still "loves" Mayor de Blasio despite the mayor's refusal to endorse her, according to former Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin, who had dinner with the presidential candidate Wednesday night.

"I had dinner with her last night at my house, she came out, we had a small group, about nine people just for dinner," Harkin told reporters Thursday after an event with de Blasio at Drake University.

"I said I was going to be with Bill de Blasio today of New York, and she said 'I love Bill de Blasio, ran my campaign for the Senate, great guy, great mayor.' She was very high on Bill."

De Blasio, who has generated a lot of heat for his refusal to endorse Clinton on "Meet the Press" Sunday, played down any tension with the candidate, who left Iowa before he arrived in the state.

"I'd spoken to her and her campaign quite a bit before Sunday and as I said everything I said on 'Meet the Press' I'd said to Secretary Clinton and her team before that," he said. "I have been beating this drum for quite a while with team Clinton about the fact that these issues need to be addressed."

De Blasio was in Des Moines to deliver a pair of speeches outlining his progressive economic views, the first at Drake University at Harkin's invitation.

The mayor used his speech to call for "economic justice," a more progressive tax system, an increase in the minimum wage and protection for the right to unionize.

"Today we're heading towards an iceberg. We can see it, we can talk about it, it's visible," he said. "Rampant inequality, growing inequality, and the things that can be done about it are literally not on the table in Washington, D.C. ... I believe it's the crisis of our time. I believe it's an avoidable crisis."

When asked about his biracial kids and police brutality by a student, he said that he hoped for better police relations with minorities in the future.

"We're going through a painful time in America but again it is not a hopeless time, it's a time where things are changing," he said.

"In terms of my own family, I've been very open about this fact: I think I share a reality with families all over this nation who have children of color. Until we make this change of course we have to be careful to help our children understand the complexities they face, we have to help our children understand the police are there to protect them, we want to encourage belief and respect for our police and at the same time there's a history we have to overcome, parents have to sensitize our children to that as something that is a truth," he said.

De Blasio was well received by the few dozen students at the speech.

They laughed when he joked about his student days - "Even though I was clean-cut I looked like I was high all the time" - and gave him strong applause at the end.

Later, speaking at a gathering of activists in a teacher's union's headquarters, he got an even warmer reception.

"It's time to tax the wealthy so that we can do something about the ills that face this country," he told the crowd.

"I agree with him, I think that we're right where we can change, people are tired of the way things are," Iowa state Rep. Marti Anderson said.

Anderson, a Democrat, said she was a "Hillary person" last time around and is "a Hillary person, now even more," but said she had no problem with the mayor's reluctance to endorse his old boss.

"I just asked him, 'So are you going to endorse Hillary tonight?' He said 'I just have to hear more.' And I said okay," she said. "I just have to hear, to feel, that somebody's my candidate. I don't blame him for that."

Tess Montgomery, the 22-year-old biracial student who'd asked de Blasio at the Drake speech about police brutality, said she was impressed and would be "totally down" for voting for him for President.

"If he ran right now he'd get my vote as of now... Over Hillary, I'd say so."

But not everyone in the building was as enthusiastic about the mayor - or knew who he was.

Drake sophomore Sara Faber, 20, was studying on the floor below where he gave his speech, drew a blank on who de Blasio was. "I spend a lot of time in the library," she said with a laugh.

"Who? No," Marina Delic, who was walking up from fishing by the nearby river, said when asked if she knew who de Blasio is.

"Mayor of New York, right? Or governor - no, mayor," said Braxton Webb, who was taking a stroll. "He was here talking about income inequality I think."

Nebraska rancher slams Bill de Blasio for his proposal to ban carriage horses

DAILY NEWS - Jennifer Fermino

A sixth-generation rancher who hosts a Midwestern radio show didn't hold his horses in questioning Mayor de Blasio's determination to ban carriage rides in New York.

Nebraska-based Trent Loos — whose online radio show "Loos Tales" is peppered with ads for livestock auctions — grilled the mayor Wednesday night on why he was hell-bent on pushing carriage drivers out of their jobs when he bills himself as a champion of the working man.

"You said you were going to get rid of the working-class carriage owners in New York. Isn't that a bit hypocritical?" Loos asked after the mayor spoke at an Omaha event.

De Blasio responded: “I want to see replica antique cars that cover the same routes that get the same tourists paying the exact same money.”

The mayor, who traveled to Nebraska and Iowa to highlight the crisis of income inequality, did not address two snags in his antique car plan. Many carriage operators say they don’t want to drive the cars, and the Central Park Conservancy opposes allowing the antique autos into the crowded greenspace.

Loos also asked de Blasio why he wanted to ban the horses, which are rarely involved in accidents, when so many pedestrians are struck by cars.

“It’s not safe for the horses, and it’s also inhumane for the horses,” de Blasio said testily.

“Horses aren’t meant to be on the streets of the biggest city in the country in the middle of traffic.”

De Blasio admitted that he once took a horse and carriage ride himself, “long, long ago.”

“I think I was a kid,” he said.

As the Daily News reported last week, a study from a California academic who specializes in equine medicine found that the horses showed no signs of elevated cortisol — also known as the “stress hormone” — right before and after they work in Central Park.

The study was sponsored by the carriage industry.

De Blasio is pushing a City Council bill to ban the horse-drawn carriages — a tourist draw for decades.

It’s unclear how much support the bill has in the Council.

Stephen Malone, a carriage driver who also acts as a spokesman for the industry, said he wasn’t surprised the mayor has taken a horse-carriage ride, but he wishes he’d visit the stables.

“We’re still waiting,” said Malone.

Even if he does, he doesn’t know if it will help.

“He has his views, and we have ours,” said Malone.

Despite the threat to their livelihoods, Malone said morale is “good.”

“The controversy isn’t hurting our business,” he said. But he said it’s a constant worry. “It’s anxiety. Is it (the ban) coming today? The next day?”

De Blasio and Harkin agree on inequality, not Clinton

CAPITAL NY - Sally Goldenberg

Mayor Bill de Blasio and retired U.S. senator Tom Harkin spoke in unison on the issue of income inequality at a lecture event in Iowa today, but politely parted company when it came to support of Hillary Clinton's 2016 bid.

Unlike de Blasio, who seized headlines by declining to endorse Clinton on "Meet the Press" on Sunday, Harkin lavished praise on the lone Democratic candidate earlier on Thursday.

"She's going to be the next president of the United States," he said, when asked whether he is endorsing her.

(He said he is not giving her the official nod just yet, saying "there's a time and a place for everything," but applauded her campaign events in Iowa this week.)

"This is not going to be any high-altitude bombing run," Harkin said, standing beside de Blasio outside Drake University, where the mayor delivered a 41-minute speech on the nation's wealth gap. "This is going to be on the ground, it's going to be up close and personal and that's what she's doing and she's so good at that. She is so good at that. I think a lot of her talents and her ability in that area were ... maybe wasted in '08 because the campaign didn't run that way."

"It's going to be different this time and I think people will see a real, genuine person here in Hillary Clinton," he added.

Alluding to reports that the Clinton camp was angered by de Blasio, who served as manager of her Senate campaign in 2000, Harkin said she spoke fondly of the mayor during a dinner she attended Wednesday night at Harkin's house.

"We had a nice evening last night and by the way, she loved Bill de Blasio, I can tell you that," Harkin said.

He said that the non-endorsement didn't come up in conversation, but that Clinton merely acknowledged de Blasio's role as her campaign manager and called him a "great guy, great mayor."

"So she was very high on Bill," he added.

Harkin suggested reporters were being too hard on de Blasio for his comments on Clinton, in which he said he was waiting to understand her "vision" before deciding whether to support her.

"Well now listen just ease off, OK? Ease off a bit folks," Harkin said.

"That's how they say it in Iowa," de Blasio added, before heading to his next event, a closed-door meeting with Des Moines mayor Frank Cownie.

During the exchange, Harkin also made a point of calling de Blasio a national leader on progressive issues.

In his speech before several dozen university students, de Blasio made no mention of Clinton but, as he did in a similar lecture Wednesday night in Omaha, criticized the Democratic party at large.

"Both sides of the aisle have a lot to account for here," he said. "Both parties have a lot of explaining to do and a lot of making up to do in my book."

De Blasio noted that some Republican presidential candidates are discussing the issue.

"We have to challenge our leaders to, first, acknowledge the problem; second, talk about the solutions; and third, take us there," de Blasio said.

He laid out his recommendations for national leaders, including universal pre-kindergarten throughout the country, a law requiring companies provide their workers paid sick days and, perhaps most significantly, changing tax law to ensure the highest earners pay more. (He cited the famous call from billionaire investor Warren Buffet, who wrote an op-ed lamenting that he is taxed at a far lower rate than his workers.)

Following the speech, de Blasio fielded questions from students, though one woman told Capital the attendees were instructed by the university not to ask him anything about the presidential race.

"The university asked us to not ask any questions about the presidential campaign, but I would've really liked to have heard from him what he wants to see in a presidential candidate and what questions that he would ask those candidates to work towards," said junior Emma Wilson, who studies broadcast journalism. "They just said that since this is a private event they didn't want us to be asking questions like that during the speech I guess. I definitely thought that was weird and I hadn't ever experienced anything like that at any other speeches so I personally was a little bit concerned about why they did that."

De Blasio told reporters he was unaware of the policy.

Wilson said she was impressed by de Blasio's remarks.

"I was very supportive of what he said and I guess maybe I don't pay enough attention to New York politics but I didn't know that his views were so progressive and I would really love to see more candidates speaking out in that direction," she said. "I would love to see political leaders like him calling on potential candidates to address those issues."

UPDATE: Jarad Bernstein, a spokesman for Drake University, said the student mischaracterized the request and said the event was not private.

"Students who were invited guests of the Harkin Institute and Drake's Law, Politics, and Society program were encouraged to ask questions that focused on the event's stated topic—income inequality—rather than the 2016 election," Bernstein wrote in an email to Capital. "The event, which was open to the public, included a wide range of questions from other students and the general public."

Horse-carriage issue follows de Blasio to Iowa

CAPITAL NY - Sally Goldenberg

Even 1,200 miles away from New York City, Mayor Bill de Blasio could not escape controversy over his troubled plan to abolish horse-drawn carriages.

The mayor encountered an avid horse-carriage supporter throughout his trip this week to the Midwest, where he traveled to discuss income inequality as the 2016 presidential race takes shape.

Trent Loos, who hosts a radio show "Loos Tales" based out of Nebraska, showed up at de Blasio's first speech Wednesday night in Omaha to press him on his proposal to ban the industry.

"Every person in Nebraska wants to go to New York City. They want the quintessential visit, which is a Central Park ride in a carriage," Loos told de Blasio at the University of Nebraska, as the mayor took a few questions from reporters following his remarks inside a lecture hall.

Loos, wearing a scarf tied in a knot around his neck and holding an audio recorder, peppered the mayor with questions about his stance, insisting the horses and passengers are safe, the animals are treated humanely and the drivers need jobs.

De Blasio, who pledged during the mayor's race to abolish the industry during his first week in office, argued that the activity poses a threat to the animals that he believes do not belong on busy New York City streets.

Loos was dissatisfied with that response and said de Blasio reaped the financial benefit of a well-oiled campaign against one of his mayoral opponents, Chris Quinn, who was vilified in ads by animal-rights activists for refusing to ban the carriages when she was City Council speaker. (The ads were funded, in part, by the wealthy real-estate magnate Steve Nislick.)

De Blasio countered that his campaign "was financed by everyday people."

Loos then trekked to Des Moines, Iowa, at least two hours east, to continue pressing de Blasio on the matter on Thursday.

"I appreciate activist journalism; I really do," de Blasio said during a scrum with reporters after his speech at Drake University. "But the bottom line is the vast majority of the money for my campaign, as I said, coming from smaller donors. You can look at the facts."

He added that he is "very proud of what we're doing to protect animals and people."

Legislation introduced in the City Council at de Blasio's request in December would phase out the carriages by 2016 by outlawing the industry altogether.

It would also create a program to train the carriage owners and drivers and stable workers, and the city would help industry workers transition to driving outer-borough taxis instead.

Democratic Pol Bashes Bill de Blasio for Traveling to the Midwest

NY OBSERVER - Ross Barkan

State Senator Diane Savino has a message for Mayor Bill de Blasio: stay home.

The Staten Island and Brooklyn Democrat, who is known for her outspokenness, bashed the liberal mayor on Facebook today for traveling to Iowa and Nebraska to promote his progressive message.

"look, i have no problem with the mayor being a cheer leader for the democratic party or the left wing of it,either, but, dude, you do have a city to run," Ms. Savino, a member of the Independent Democratic Conference, wrote. "if you want to go on a day trip, come to staten island and fill some potholes, come to coney island and help with youth violence, brighton beach needs its' boardwalk back and we all have build it back issues. just a suggestion..."

Mr. de Blasio is attempting to build his profile as a national leader on the issue of income inequality and in turn move the Democratic Party leftward. He plans to hold a forum on income inequality for presidential candidates, and caused a stir this week with his decision not to immediately back the presidential bid of former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, whose U.S. Senate campaign he managed in 2000.

Today, he is in Iowa, where Ms. Clinton is campaigning. Some Democrats, including Congressman Sean Patrick Maloney, slammed Mr. de Blasio for dissing Ms. Clinton. Mr. Maloney said the mayor should have his "head examined."

But Ms. Savino, who has been critical of Mr. de Blasio before, would rather that the mayor tend to issues in his own backyard. Those include the city's plan to convert the iconic Riegelmann Boardwalk to concrete—a plan Ms. Savino and a host of elected officials loudly oppose.

Mr. de Blasio's office did not immediately return a request for comment.

State GOP Chair Hits de Blasio for 'Magical Mystery Tour' to Iowa

NY OBSERVER - Jillian Jorgensen

First Iowa saw Hillary Clinton's "Scooby Van"—and then it played host to Mayor Bill de Blasio's "Magic Mystery Tour."

That was the name New York Republican Party Chairman Ed Cox gave to Mr. de Blasio's recent swing through Nebraska and Iowa, blasting out a press release this morning calling for an end to the mayor's "Magical Mystery Tour." (Mr. de Blasio's trip has already ended—he flew back to New York this morning.)

"Bill de Blasio is blowing smoke in Iowa, but was smoked back down to earth by folks who realized he wasn't getting the facts straight about his job back home," Mr. Cox. "It's time for the Mayor to end this Magical Mystery Tour, stop playing to a national audience and come back home to deal with the realities of his misguided administration of our great city."

During Mr. de Blasio's trip, he has continued saying in speeches that the city's reforms to stop and frisk has led to police "targeting folks that have actually done something wrong," rather than stopping innocent people.

But as the Daily News pointed out twice this week, the vast majority of those who were stopped during the mayor's first year in office were also never charged with a crime—in 2014, 82 percent of those stopped and frisked were not charged with anything, only a small change from the 88 percent under Mayor Michael Bloomberg in 2013.

The GOP was quick to point out Mr. de Blasio's other adventures out of state, including his vacation to Italy, his trip to England to speak with the Labour Party, and his trip to Paris after the Charlie Hebdo murders. His trip to Iowa comes just days after he declined to back Ms. Clinton, the former secretary of state whose U.S. Senate campaign he ran in 2000, in her presidential bid. Ms. Clinton was also in Iowa this week.

“With his approval rating dropping below 50% this year, it’s time for New York’s Mayor to give up his national dreams and focus his mind on managing New York,” Mr. Cox said in a statement.

The GOP chairman is not the only one criticizing Mr. de Blasio’s travel. State Senator Diane Savino, a fellow Democrat who represents parts of Staten Island and Brooklyn, also knocked the mayor this week.

In a Facebook message, Ms. Savino offered this advice to the mayor: “dude, you have a city to run.”

And veterans angry that the mayor has yet to the meet with them also pointed out he’d had time for people in Iowa.

“This week you’ve met with voters in Nebraska and Iowa. But you haven’t met with us once,” Paul Rieckhoff, founder of the Iraq and Afghanistan Veterans of America, said yesterday.

Mr. de Blasio’s office did not respond to a request for comment.

Interview: De Blasio, Live From Iowa, on Hillary Clinton

WNYC – Brigid Bergin

New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio took his fight against income inequality on the road this week, making speeches in Nebraska on Wednesday and Iowa on Thursday.

De Blasio called for national policy solutions to address the economic backslide of working families when he talked with WNYC’s Julianne Welby. He said that the people of Iowa and Nebraska who had invited him to speak were “hungry to talk about the issue” of income inequality.

“The last time you could find income disparity this bad would be the 1920s, but the 1920s led to the New Deal,” de Blasio said. “We don’t have anything like that on the horizon.”

De Blasio said that Americans need a national policy solution, including changes to the minimum wage and tax policy, along with programs his administration has prioritized here in New York City, like universal prekindergarten and paid sick leave.

“Unless you want to have a negative competition between states and regions, you need national policy. You need one standard for the whole country,” said de Blasio.

De Blasio’s trip coincides with that of newly-minted presidential candidate Hillary Clinton. Reporters had made much of the fact that de Blasio has not yet endorsed her campaign. The mayor told WNYC that he wanted to hear from Clinton on domestic issues that she hasn’t spoken about since she was a presidential candidate eight years ago.

“Now is a time for her to formulate a vision and I think for a lot of us we need to hear that before we can jump forward, because it’s so essential we get it right this time,” he said.

De Blasio said he worried that no action would mean the growth of inequality, which would put the nation at risk of “destabilization.”

The mayor said he’s talked to economists about this issue. “So I think there’s lots of voices across the spectrum saying that this is a serious crisis that has gone under-recognized and under-addressed,” de Blasio said. I think it’s absolutely fair to say to any candidate, ‘Show us your plan and your vision’ before we can make a decision on who to support.”

De Blasio also spoke about the recent Brooklyn Bridge protest. The NYPD has confirmed that an off-duty police officer pulled his gun after being assaulted. The mayor said he supported the protests, but that they must be peaceful and in this case, they weren’t, he said.

“I’ll wait to get more information but I have every reason to believe that unfortunately that moment began with protesters attacking a police officer,” he said.

Bill De Blasio urges fight against income inequality in Iowa speech

AM NY – Michael Gormley

New York Mayor Bill de Blasio flew the Democratic Party's liberal banner in Iowa Thursday to urge the critical presidential primary state to force the country to confront a "profound national crisis" of income inequality.

De Blasio said the growing divide between the rich and poor is "the profound challenge facing this country." He cited President Franklin D. Roosevelt and others who stemmed the divide in the 1920s, but said the problem is in ways worse now. "The difference is that disparity is galloping forward," de Blasio said. "It is not being checked . . . today we are heading toward an iceberg and there is literally nothing emanating from Washington to change its course."

The speech at a progressive symposium at Drake University was de Blasio's second in two days to push presidential candidates, including Democrat Hillary Clinton, to confront the growing economic divide. He spoke in Nebraska on Wednesday and is scheduled to speak in Wisconsin on April 25.

He has so far withheld his endorsement of Clinton until she articulates how she will confront this issue. De Blasio once worked in the Clinton White House and was Hillary Clinton's campaign manager in her run for the Senate.

"I have been beating this drum for quite a while with Team Clinton about the fact that these issues need to be addressed," he told reporters after the speech. He said he is optimistic she will.

De Blasio blamed everyone in power, including Democratic President Barack Obama, for failing to address the problem.

"I wish the president had early and often talked about income inequality and rallied the American people to address the issue, I wish that had happened earlier on in his administration," de Blasio said, while noting Obama made great strides in this area through his national health care initiative. But "first and foremost in my view the Congress has failed to act."

"He is clearly interested in becoming a national spokesman for the left of the Democratic Party," said SUNY New Paltz political scientist Gerald Benjamin. "Thus the measured -- even cool -- reaction to the Clinton announcement . . . ambition sunders ties of strange bed-fellows."

De Blasio outlined several measures to fix the problem, including encouraging more unionization by awarding more government contracts to unionized companies, raising the minimum wage to $15 an hour, free pre-kindergarten, and changing the tax structure so billionaires don't pay a smaller share of income taxes than the people who work for them.

"We have to be very clear we are going to reward work -- that's the underlying notion . . . not just people who are clever enough to take a lot of money and make a lot more money with it," he said in the speech.

"I'm not trying to punish success," he said. "I am trying to create more success stories."

Despite spending a day in the primary-powerful state, de Blasio insisted he has no plans to run for president in 2016 or 2020. "Let me say this into your phone," he told a reporter, "I have one ambition: I am running for re-election to mayor 2017."

Opinion: Where have you gone, Bill de Blasio?

SI ADVANCE - Tom Wroblewski

Maybe Bill de Blasio wanted to give Hillary Clinton a chance to yell at him in person.

Why else would the mayor jet off to Iowa when there's plenty to keep him busy right here in New York City?

He does have a day job, after all.

De Blasio is on a two-day trip to Nebraska and Iowa, looking to make a name for himself as a national liberal, to push his progressive tax-the-rich agenda, and shove his own Democratic Party ever leftward.

Whatever happened to fixing the potholes, keeping mass transit running on time and making sure the trash gets picked up? Isn't that how the mayor of New York City is supposed to spend their time?

Iowa, of course, is home to the first-in-the-nation presidential caucuses. But if de Blasio has fever dreams of being presidential timber himself, he's in for a rude awakening. He can't even sell his agenda in true-blue New York without getting roadblocks thrown up. How is he going to make Middle America buy in?

The trip comes at an interesting time for de Blasio, seeing as he just showed the back of his hand to Mrs. Clinton and all her Democratic supporters by refusing to knee-jerk endorse Hillary's bid for the presidency.

Not that we should weep for Hillary just because somebody wouldn't genuflect to the inevitability of her coronation. But it was the Clintons who brung de Blasio to the party in the first place. He had a job in President Bill Clinton's administration, and ran Hillary's 2000 U.S. Senate campaign here in New York.

Even in politics there is supposed to be a speck of honor among all the backbiting. You don't show such open disloyalty.

But de Blasio is beholden to the Working Families Party, and the WFP is among those pushing U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Warren of Massachusetts to challenge Hillary in the primaries. So the mayor chooses one over the other. Maybe de Blasio is hoping for a veep spot on Ms. Warren's voyage if she ever does take the plunge.

And Hillary has been in Iowa in recent days. A shame they didn't meet up at a Chipotle somewhere on the road. They could have settled their differences over a couple of chicken bowls. De Blasio could have made nice by offering to pay.

But heaven help him if Hillary and Bill win through and start moving furniture back into the White House. De Blasio can expect to have his name near the top of the enemies list. He'll have to buy a ticket to get in the door.

Being mayor of the City of New York is a fulltime, 24/7 job.

This week alone we've had the City Council present its budget plan. We had an anti-police demonstration that shut down the Brooklyn Bridge; two cops were assaulted. We have a lunar landscape of potholes that need filling on the Island. Our crumbling roads need to be resurfaced.

On her Facebook page, State Sen. Diane Savino (D-North Shore/Brooklyn) also took a shot at de Blasio for being outta town.

They don't call it "the city that never sleeps" for nothing. It's not a springboard to be used to further your own political agenda. If you're looking to have enough free time to jet around the country and raise your own profile, it may not be the gig for you.

Bill de Blasio, you're needed at home.

Iowans Think de Blasio Is the Guy Who 'Outlawed the Large Sodas'

NY MAGAZINE - Jessica Roy

New York City mayor Bill de Blasio embarked on a trip to the midwest this week on a mission to "lead the nation leftward." That's a very noble goal and all, but unfortunately for Bill, nobody in Iowa seems to know who he is. "Was he the one who outlawed the large sodas?" one 27-year-old Iowan wondered when asked about de Blasio. He wasn't alone; according to The Wall Street Journal, many Iowa residents they spoke with thought the New York City mayor was still Michael Bloomberg, and one woman even thought Rudy Giuliani was still running the city. Without their own personal experience with de Blasio's policies to draw from, Iowans resorted to second-hand opinions. "I have a friend in New York who doesn't like him," one said. Welcome to #deblasiosmidwest.

De Blasio Takes Tax-the-Rich Call to Iowa After Clinton Snub

BLOOMBERG NEWS - Elizabeth Campbell, Henry Goldman

New York Mayor Bill de Blasio, who vowed to become national leader for progressives, took his campaign for higher taxes on the rich to America's heartland and the home of the first presidential test of 2016. De Blasio, 53, brought the same message to Des Moines, Iowa, that he delivered to New Yorkers a little more than a year ago, when he became the first Democrat in 20 years to run the largest U.S. city. He says income inequality is the defining issue of our time. "It's clear that the wealthy among us could sustain higher taxes," de Blasio said during remarks Thursday to a crowd of about 60 in Drake University's library, where he was a guest of former U.S. Senator Tom Harkin and the Harkin Institute for Policy and Citizen Engagement. "If we accept the status quo, and if we accept it in particular because we think it's politically untenable to confront it, we will put ourselves in danger." He cited Lloyd Blankfein, chief executive officer of Goldman Sachs Group Inc., who said last year that inequality was "destabilizing." He also quoted billionaire Warren Buffett, who said of successful investors, "potential taxes have never scared them off."

De Blasio's remarks came amid a Midwest swing that included a stop in Nebraska on Wednesday. He arrived in Iowa the same week as former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, the newly announced candidate and presumptive frontrunner for the Democratic presidential nomination.

De Blasio managed the former first lady's successful 2000 bid to become a U.S. senator from New York, and in 1997 he worked for the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development in her husband's administration.

No Endorsement

New York's tabloids made front-page news out of de Blasio's refusal to endorse Clinton on April 12, the same day she declared that she was in the race. The mayor said he would wait until she supports policies consistent with his agenda.

Clinton joined about nine others as Harkin's dinner guest at his home Wednesday night, the former Iowa senator said. They didn't discuss the mayor's non-endorsement, he told reporters.

"I said I was going to be with Bill de Blasio today and she said, 'I love Bill de Blasio,'" Harkin said. "She was very high on Bill."

On "Meet the Press" April 12, de Blasio said of Clinton, "she is one of the most qualified people to ever run for this office, but we need to see the substance."

De Blasio points out that since the 2008 financial crisis, the wealthiest 1 percent have gobbled up 95 percent of the additional earnings created in the recovery. For the rest, wealth and wages have remained stagnant or worse. Fairness and social cohesion require government to improve conditions for the middle class and poor, he says.

'National Convener'

He's pushed the theme since he won the mayoral election in 2013 by 49 percentage points -- the biggest margin ever for a non-incumbent. Weeks before taking office, he announced that the job included his acting as "a national convener" for "a progressive urban agenda" that mirrors what he's pushed in New York: universal all-day pre-kindergarten, housing subsidies to prevent homelessness, increasing the minimum wage, sick pay and scholarship aid to attend the city's public universities.

U.K. Trip

De Blasio has since taken his message to the U.K., where he addressed a Labour Party conference in September, and to frequent meetings with mayors in Boston and Washington to seek money for mass transportation, infrastructure maintenance and fewer restrictions on immigration.

It was a coincidence that put de Blasio and Clinton in Iowa the same week. He said he's planned the trip to Des Moines for months. Iowa will hold caucuses for the 2016 presidential election on Feb. 1.

At a Dairy Queen stand in east Des Moines, Sherri Harper, 42, who is unemployed, ordered a vanilla crunch cone and said she's never heard de Blasio, yet she wasn't surprised the mayor of New York would be in town.

"There's always politicians coming to Iowa," she said.

The mayor also addressed students at the University of Nebraska on Wednesday night. He told them he came from a city where an apartment recently sold for "a jaw-dropping $100 million" and another rented for $500,000 a month.

"At the same time that those at the top are doing so well, 46 percent of New Yorkers -- nearly half our city -- is living at or near the poverty level," he said.

DeBlasio hosted an April 2 meeting at Gracie Mansion, his official Manhattan residence, that included Connecticut Governor Dannel Malloy; former Governor Ted Strickland and U.S. Senator Sherrod Brown, both of Ohio; and Jonathan Soros, son of the billionaire hedge fund founder and philanthropist George Soros.

New Contract

They emerged pledging to create a new "contract with America" to draw 2016's presidential candidates to their agenda. The pact would push to tax the rich to pay for job-creating infrastructure improvements and help for families struggling to pay for education and housing, he said.

While Democrats have consensus around social issues, a divide remains on the economy between the “Wall Street wing of the party” and a more populist side, said Katrina vanden Heuvel, editor and publisher of The Nation magazine, which endorsed de Blasio early in the mayoral primary.

“Mayor de Blasio has become an important symbol of a national populist agenda,” said vanden Heuvel, who attended the Gracie Mansion gathering. “His mayoralty is being viewed by the country as a test case for progressive responses to what he considers the crisis of our time -- income inequality.”

Mayor Bill De Blasio Visits Iowa To Talk About Income Inequality

CBS 2 - Staff

New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio is calling income disparity a “profound challenge facing our country.”

De Blasio appeared Thursday at Drake University in Iowa at the invitation of former U.S. Sen. Tom Harkin. He spoke before about 50 people.

“We all know that tackling income inequality is no small thing,” de Blasio said in prepared remarks. “We face a massive crisis – one that wasn’t created overnight, and one that won’t be fixed overnight.”

De Blasio said the daily struggle of hardworking people to keep their heads above water is a national problem that requires a national commitment to solve it.

Among his proposals to address income inequality were raising the minimum wage and offering paid sick leave to all workers.

“This is something that I’m going to speak about every chance I get, everywhere I go, because this is a crisis facing our nation and facing our city. It’s a profound crisis, it’s a crisis that is not being addressed, and it is a dangerous, dangerous situation,” de Blasio said earlier this week before his trip.

De Blasio is seeking to be a voice for the liberal wing of the Democratic Party, alongside U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Warren, of Massachusetts. His efforts to raise his national profile include making a play for the 2016 Democratic National Convention and hosting a meeting of liberals at the mayor’s residence, Gracie Mansion, this month.

The first-term mayor took heat this week for not immediately endorsing Hillary Rodham Clinton for president.

NYC Mayor visits Iowa to talk about income inequality

SIOUX CITY JOURNAL - Staff

New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio is calling income disparity a "profound challenge facing our country."

De Blasio appeared Thursday at Drake University in Iowa the invitation of former U.S. Sen. Tom Harkin. He spoke before about 50 people. Among his proposals to address income inequality were raising the minimum wage and offering paid sick leave to all workers.

De Blasio is seeking to be a voice for the liberal wing of the Democratic Party, alongside U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Warren, of Massachusetts. His efforts to raise his national profile include making a play for the 2016 Democratic National Convention and hosting a meeting of liberals at the mayor's residence, Gracie Mansion, this month.

The first-term mayor took heat this week for not immediately endorsing Hillary Rodham Clinton for president.

De Blasio Takes Liberal Agenda to National Audience

NEWSMAX - Jennifer Hackey

Following in the footsteps of his predecessor, Michael Bloomberg, New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio used a two-day speaking tour to promote his agenda to a national audience and to raise his own profile, reports Capital New York.

The mayor, who has joined with MSNBC host Al Sharpton to lead the call for national criminal justice reforms, was in Omaha, Nebraska to push for an increase in the minimum wage, as well as a national legislation mandating businesses provide paid leave for their workers.

"There are no red wages or blue wages. People need decent wages," de Blasio told an audience at the University of Nebraska.

Participating in a lecture series sponsored by the university, de Blasio decried the lack of political leaders of either party who are willing to address issues related to poverty and income inequality.

"Lord knows, fewer and fewer of our leaders are willing to say the word 'poor,' " said de Blasio, according to The Omaha World-Herald.

Earlier this year, the mayor suggested to New York business owners that they voluntarily raise wages, a message he brought to Nebraska and Iowa, where he will be speaking today.

The same day as de Blasio was touting his proposals on income inequality, his office released copies of his 2014 tax returns, which showed he earned $217,656 in adjusted gross income during his first year as mayor, according to Newsday.

The figure includes $65,750 in rental income from two homes that he and his wife own in New York City.

After deductions, de Blasio and his wife, Chirlane McCray, paid $44,130 in federal, city, and state taxes at an effective tax rate of 20.3 percent, according to the joint return. The first couple gave $7,215 to charity.

His speaking tour and renewed focus on liberal economic policies has met with some skepticism among some Democrats who see the effort as a way to increase his profile.

Bill Daley, former chief of staff to President Barack Obama, believes de Blasio just "wants to be a big shot," and should concentrate on solutions that are "doable, not just, 'we want the wealthy to be taxed more so we can spend their money somehow.' "

"Something specific that's urban related," he added. "Not just something amorphous, like 'the progressive agenda.' "

After his speech on Wednesday, de Blasio told reporters that he planned to meet with progressive leaders next month in Washington "to put forward an organized plan around tax fairness and progressive taxation" and said he was confident "a lot of progressives will buy into it."

Morning TV News — Friday, April 17, 2015

Mayor de Blasio Criticizes President Obama on Income Inequality

PIX 11 - Sukanya Krishnan- 6:08 am

First Mayor de Blasio refused to endorse Hillary Clinton -- now, he's going after the president. The mayor says Obama has not moved fast enough to address income inequality. He says he wishes that it had happened earlier in his administration. The mayor is in Iowa to promote his progressive agenda.

Evening TV News – Friday, April 17, 2015

Critics Question Mayor de Blasio's Travels While Potholes Plague City Streets

CBS 2 - Marcia Kramer - 6:15 pm

Questions have arisen about Mayor Bill de Blasio's recent appearance on the national political stage. Some New Yorkers say he should be focusing on fixing problems here at home instead, like potholes that seem to be everywhere. De Blasio returned to New York City on Friday after a star turn in Iowa, where he lamented the nation's rampant income inequality and kind of upstaged Hillary Clinton, that other New York Democrat, on her first trip there as a presidential candidate. Mayor de Blasio: "We're in the great unknown right now. We're in a place we have not been because the income disparity in this country is sharper and different." But it turns out that there are a number of people in New York City who think the mayor should have put potholes before politicking. Take Staten Island Sen. Diane Savino, for example. De Blasio's fellow Democrat took to Facebook to say, "Dude, you do have a city to run. If you want to go on a day trip come to Staten Island and fill some potholes, come to Coney Island and help with youth violence." The Department of Transportation said that since last Saturday, 15,473 potholes have been filled. However, there's still a lot of work to be done. "His mind is elsewhere. It's not here in New York. It's on his national dreams, national ambitions, and that's what he's pursuing rather than managing this great city," state GOP Chairman Edward Cox said. Some voters think that instead of competing for the national spotlight, he should compete for the title of "Mayor Pothole." Since December, the city has filled more than 265,000 potholes. 67 crews will be sent out Saturday to continue the work. A spokesman for the mayor said that while he is "laser-focused on the nuts and bolts of government," he will also "continue to fight on the national stage for the city's fair share of funds for transportation, affordable housing and job creation."

[The following reports are from Des Moines TV News:]

Mayor de Blasio Discusses Income Inequality in Des Moines, Iowa

WHO NBC 13 - 5:04 am [4/16]

A close friend of Hillary Clinton and mayor of New York City, Bill de Blasio will be in the metro today. He has two scheduled events. First, he'll give a speech at Drake University on income inequality. Then he'll attend a fundraiser for advocacy group Progress Iowa. The mayor is making a number of out of state trips as he tries to grow a national profile.

KCCI CBS 8 - 12:06 pm [4/16]

New York Mayor Bill de Blasio is in Des Moines today talking about income inequality. De Blasio was invited to speak at Drake University by Senator Tom Harkin and was greeted by a crowd of nearly 100 people. He shared stories of citizens struggling to make ends meet. He shared stories of citizens struggling to make ends meet from his Iowa grandmother to residents of New York City. He says he considers income inequality a profound challenge for the country, one that is more apparent than ever before. He urged the need to increase the minimum wage, strengthen business, organize the middle class, and reward hard workers. Mayor de Blasio:

“We’re in the great unknown right now. We’re in a place we have not been because the income disparity in this country is sharper and different.” Des Moines is the second stop on the two-day tour of the Midwest for the mayor. He has not confirmed if he will endorse Hillary Clinton for president. He does hold close ties to the Clinton family for many years.

WHO NBC 13 - 5:05 pm [4/16]

One day after presidential candidate and New York native Hillary Clinton spent time in the metro, the mayor of New York City is stopping by. Bill de Blasio started his day at Drake University. He talked about pay inequity. Tonight, he’ll appear at a fundraiser for Progress Iowa. De Blasio will spend some time with Des Moines Mayor Frank Cownie, in addition to talking about the transportation bill working its way through Congress. The $478 million bill will provide funding for the country’s infrastructure for the next six years. Mayor de Blasio: “Mayors get it because they’re at the grassroots. By the way, the business community gets it. If we don’t invest in bridges, roads, highways, mass transit, we can’t keep growing our economy.

###

From: Bill de Blasio
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma; Williams, Dominic
Subject: Re: TPP
Date: Monday, April 20, 2015 8:06:21 AM

We need to quickly decide how we want to handle. Need a timeline here

Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

-----Original Message-----

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Date: Sat, 18 Apr 2015 18:05:35
To: [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: TPP

I think we need to schedule a meeting with you, Dom, Tony, and Emma for Monday... I'll get that scheduled...

In the meantime, I'm hoping you can connect with Reich and/or Trumka & get their latest read... Trumka will obviously oppose, but would be good to hear what his central, one-line message is - especially given that you're a mayor & not a Member of Congress... We need a line that speaks to income inequality and justifies why Fast Track & TPP are bad for NYC...

I believe we should land on opposition to both Fast Track authority & the deal itself — but we need to make sure we've got our argument down, and don't just look like we're doing whatever Labor tells us (or, worse, that we're just doing this to spit in the eye of Obama & make Hillary uncomfortable - even if that's what we're primed to do)...

On 4/18/15, 1:49 PM, "Bill de Blasio" <[REDACTED]> wrote:

>
>What do you want to do on this???
>
>Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

From: Carey, Michael
To: "John Del Cecato"
Subject: RE:
Date: Monday, April 20, 2015 5:16:41 PM

Why not head over around like 3?

Michael Paul Carey
Director of Scheduling and Advance
City Hall
New York, New York 10007
212.341.5396

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Monday, April 20, 2015 5:16 PM
To: Carey, Michael
Subject: Re:

I can - you tell me when... All i have is a 9am call that won't take too long

From: <Carey>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, April 20, 2015 at 4:11 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: <no subject>

Are you coming in the office early tomorrow?

Michael Paul Carey
Director of Scheduling and Advance
City Hall
New York, New York 10007
212.341.5396

From: Bill de Blasio
To: Williams, Dominic
Cc: John Del Cecato; Wolfe, Emma
Subject: Repatriation
Date: Monday, April 20, 2015 5:17:19 PM

Like TPP and Glass-Steagall, this is an area where I need to decide where I stand and how to talk about it. And asap. Will really need to speak to repatriation during the mayor's organizing around the transportation bill

Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: Walzak, Phil; B
Cc: John Del cecato; Leopold, Elana; Wolfe, Emma
Subject: RE: George Lucas /affordable housing on his land because 'we've got enough millionaires'
Date: Monday, April 20, 2015 5:50:50 PM

Think we should do something for sure!

From: Walzak, Phil
Sent: Monday, April 20, 2015 5:48 PM
To: Hagelgans, Andrea; B
Cc: John Del cecato; Leopold, Elana; Wolfe, Emma
Subject: RE: George Lucas /affordable housing on his land because 'we've got enough millionaires'

Call w Lucas?!

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
Sent: Monday, April 20, 2015 5:20 PM
To: B
Cc: Walzak, Phil; John Del cecato; Leopold, Elana; Wolfe, Emma Subject: George Lucas /affordable housing on his land because 'we've got enough millionaires'

Washington Post

George Lucas wants to build affordable housing on his land because 'we've got enough millionaires'

When George Lucas tried to expand his production company studios in California's wealthy Marin County, the community pushed back. Then the "Star Wars" creator wanted to sell the land to a developer who would build affordable housing.

"It's inciting class warfare," Carolyn Lenert, then head of the North San Rafael Coalition of Residents, told The New York Times at the time.

Now, two years after that project stalled, Lucas has decided to build the affordable housing and pay for it all himself.

"We've got enough millionaires here. What we need is some houses for regular working people," Lucas said through his lawyer Gary Giacomini, CBS affiliate KCBS reported.

[\[George Lucas chooses Chicago for 'Star Wars' museum\]](#)

The 224-unit affordable housing complex would go on Grady Ranch, where his once-planned studio expansion would have been, according to a plan being submitted to the Marin County Development Agency this week, the Contra Costa Times reported. The plan, which would allow development on 52 acres, includes workforce and senior residences, as well as a community center, pool and an orchard. Income requirements could be set so eligible residents had to make less than 80 percent of the area's median income, the paper reported. The median household income for Marin County is $90,839, according to U.S. Census Bureau estimates.

Lucas first bought land in Marin in 1978 and dubbed the property Skywalker Ranch.

Before Lucas sold his production company Lucasfilms to Disney, he abandoned plans in 2012 for a third studio expansion on another ranch in Marin called Grady. Residents had opposed the project, citing environmental and traffic concerns, and threatened to sue. The studio expansion would "pose a serious and alarming threat to the nature of our valley and our community," a homeowners' association warned, the Times reported.

"We love working and living in Marin, but the residents of Lucas Valley have fought this project for 25 years, and enough is enough," Lucasfilms had said in a statement. "We have several opportunities to build the production stages in communities that see us as a creative asset, not as an evil empire."

Lucas then tried to build affordable housing on the site, which once again stoked concern among some residents. The people who had opposed the studio expansion were being blamed for the possibility of low-income housing coming to a wealthy community.

"We got letters saying, 'You guys are going to get what you deserve. You're going to bring drug dealers, all this crime and lowlife in here,' " Carl Fricke, a board member of the Lucas Valley Estates Homeowners Association, told the Times in 2012.

The initiative did have supporters, including some residents and officials. But then it lost key financial backing in 2013. Costs for the project had been estimated at \$120 million to \$150 million at the time. Now Lucas has decided to bankroll the project himself. "George Lucas said, 'If I'm not going to do what I wanted to do there, what can I do that would be really beneficial to this community?'" Marin County Supervisor Steve Kinsey told KCBS.

[\[Affordable housing didn't cause the financial crisis\]](#)

While it's tempting to cast this latest venture as Lucas striking back at his millionaire neighbors, he has previously rejected that characterization. When Lucas first tried to build affordable housing on the land, he had told the Times, "I've been surprised to see some people characterize this as vindictive."

He had also emphasized the need for affordable housing in the county, so that people with moderate incomes who worked in Marin could also live there. "I wouldn't waste my time or money just to try and upset the neighbors," Lucas told the Times.

According to Census estimates, 7.7 percent of county residents live below the poverty line.

County Supervisor Damon Connolly worried about the impact that numerous development proposals could have, which would "literally and figuratively change the landscape in Marinwood and Lucas Valley," the Contra Costa Times reported. Another supervisor called the affordable housing proposal a "wonderful opportunity."

Lucas financing the project entirely means it can't stall because outside funders pull the plug, and he can set aside units for people like teachers and local employees who meet income requirements, Giacomini told the local newspaper. If the proposal is approved, the development could be finished by 2019, the lawyer added.

"The standard naysayers will be hanging around, but an awful lot of people will support it," Giacomini said. "We will have a healthy public process but it will not be one-sided."

From: Walzak, Phil
To: B; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma
Cc: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: RE: Mika
Date: Monday, April 20, 2015 8:24:49 PM

Do we want to look at a TPA MoJo appearance, next week, post- WI?

-----Original Message-----

From: B
Sent: Wednesday, April 15, 2015 4:58 PM
To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma
Cc: 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com'
Subject: Mika

I had a good talk with her earlier. She is very right-on re: HRC needed to address economic issues even if it costs her donors and is uncomfortable. She made a great point to this effect this AM. She generically asked if I would go on at some point and I generically said I would. We should discuss how to maximize these opportunities, and not run away from them. The mission is to address income inequality and challenge the orthodoxy. How do we do this the right way, that's high road and respectful and still makes the point clearly? We should consider MoJo for next week, and other Sunday shows soon, and keep bringing it back to the larger progressive organizing going on

----- Original Message -----

From: Klein, Monica
Sent: Wednesday, April 15, 2015 11:54 AM
To: B
Cc: Leopold, Elana
Subject: RE: Mike brezinski -- pls get me her contact info her cell is

-----Original Message-----

From: B
Sent: Wednesday, April 15, 2015 8:21 AM
To: Klein, Monica
Cc: Leopold, Elana
Subject: Mike brezinski -- pls get me her contact info

Elana, pls remind me to reach out to her re: her comment that hrc needs to "crush the forces" that bill clinton relied on

From: Bill de Blasio
To: Williams, Dominic; John Del Cecato
Subject: Re: TPP
Date: Monday, April 20, 2015 10:03:02 PM

Do this all by email for now. But Dom, less is more here. Perfect is the enemy of good. Just get me a simple, n quick product pls

Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

-----Original Message-----

From: "Williams, Dominic" <DWilliams@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Mon, 20 Apr 2015 21:23:20
To: BdB<[REDACTED]> John Del Cecato<jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: RE: TPP

Substance and process

Substance - we are finishing a brief breakdown of the policy items

Process - we're working on understanding the big points in time that are hooks to weigh in off of

Know that next couple of days are dicey for your calendar, but will figure out right way to have things teed up to have discussion for Wed. planning meeting, on this and other parallel issues.

-----Original Message-----

From: Bill de Blasio [[mailto:\[REDACTED\]](mailto:[REDACTED])]
Sent: Monday, April 20, 2015 5:18 PM
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: Williams, Dominic
Subject: Re: TPP

How/when are we resolving this??

Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

-----Original Message-----

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Date: Sat, 18 Apr 2015 18:05:35
To: [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: TPP

I think we need to schedule a meeting with you, Dom, Tony, and Emma for Monday... I'll get that scheduled...

In the meantime, I'm hoping you can connect with Reich and/or Trumka & get their latest read... Trumka will obviously oppose, but would be good to hear what his central, one-line message is - especially given that you're a mayor & not a Member of Congress... We need a line that speaks to income inequality and justifies why Fast Track & TPP are bad for NYC...

I believe we should land on opposition to both Fast Track authority & the deal itself — but we need to make sure we've got our argument down, and don't just look like we're doing whatever Labor tells us (or, worse, that we're just doing this to spit in the eye of Obama & make Hillary uncomfortable - even if that's what we're primed to do)...

On 4/18/15, 1:49 PM, "Bill de Blasio" <[REDACTED]> wrote:

>
>What do you want to do on this???
>
>Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

From: Carey, Michael
To: BdB; John Del Cecato
Cc: Aaron Pickrell
Subject: RE: <no subject>
Date: Tuesday, April 21, 2015 9:48:50 AM

AND

To be the peanut gallery – I need to see invite before it goes out

Michael Paul Carey
Director of Scheduling and Advance
City Hall
New York, New York 10007
212.341.5396

From: Bill de Blasio [mailto:████████████████████]
Sent: Tuesday, April 21, 2015 9:48 AM
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: Aaron Pickrell; Carey, Michael
Subject: Re: <no subject>

For THEIR May 12 morning event, yes of course. And I'm locked on to participate. We will discuss later today when we'll be ready to tell the world about OUR May 12 TPA event

Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Date: Tue, 21 Apr 2015 13:16:21 +0000
To: Bill de Blasio<████████████████████>
Cc: Aaron PickrellEmail<████████████████████>
Subject: <no subject>

Can we get your blessing for Roosevelt folks to send out Save the Date for May 12th? We really need to get that out so we can start crowd-building

From: Schwartz, Regina
To: Gabriel Schnake Mahl
Cc: Michael Carey; emma maquire wolfe; John Del Cecato
Subject: Re: note from bdb
Date: Tuesday, April 21, 2015 2:57:09 PM

When should we expect background/ briefing materials for this meeting.
Thank you.
Gina

Sent from my iPhone

On Apr 20, 2015, at 11:49 PM, Gabriel Schnake Mahl <[REDACTED]> wrote:

630PM
Mayor's Office
JDC can advise on agenda/materials

Sent from my iPhone

On Apr 20, 2015, at 11:34 PM, Schwartz, Regina
<RSchwartz@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Any materials or time for this meeting?
Thanks,
Gina

Sent from my iPhone

On Apr 20, 2015, at 4:04 PM, Michael Carey
<[REDACTED]> wrote:

for the TPA meeting?

On Mon, Apr 20, 2015 at 4:02 PM, emma maquire wolfe <[REDACTED]> wrote:
asks that regina and i join for tomorrow pls add to manifest and send whatever briefing materials
thanks

this is a personal account - for official business please email at ewolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov
thanks
#

From: Carey, Michael
To: Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma; John Del Cecato \(jfdc@akpdmedia.com\)
Subject: RE: Letterman Request
Date: Tuesday, April 21, 2015 5:20:14 PM

How exciting!

Michael Paul Carey
Director of Scheduling and Advance
City Hall
New York, New York 10007
212.341.5396

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
Sent: Tuesday, April 21, 2015 5:20 PM
To: Carey, Michael; Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma; John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com)
Subject: Letterman Request

We will have the request from them in the next 24 hrs. They are looking at a few things:

Naming 53rd between Broadway and 8th Ave "Letterman Way" and having the Mayor there to do that and putting on the show

The Mayor doing a proclamation

Mayor doing a Top Ten list

MOME has given DOT a heads up in the case we do a street naming.

Andrea Hagelgans
Office of the Mayor
Direct – 212.341.5372
Cell – 718.679.8965
ahagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov

From: Hayley Prim
To: BdB
Cc: John Del Cecato; Aaron Pickrell; John Davis; Leopold, Elana; Carey, Michael
Subject: Re: TPA calls
Date: Tuesday, April 21, 2015 11:06:06 PM

Got it, I'm on it. And will send you a list with contact info in the AM.

On Tue, Apr 21, 2015 at 10:34 PM, Bill de Blasio <[REDACTED]> wrote:

I want to start making these non-stop, every moment I get -- starting tmrw AM. Hayley. -- send me a top 10 or top 20 list asap in the AM so I can start. Will look for every chance to get a call in. Want to continue this on the way to the airport on friday and once I arrive in milwaukee both friday afternoon and sat. So long as I have people's cells, I can call nights and weekends. Pls send a list and keep checking in with me. Should include all nyc and Nys members of the progressive caucus in the House. Elana can help with cell #'s, as can IGA. Much appreciated

Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

From: Klein, Monica
To: B
Cc: FLONYC; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Re: Jose diaz balart and alex seitz-ward on msnbc at 9:10am this AM -- re: HRC and resurgent left in dem party. Need this transcript sent to all of us
Date: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 9:19:21 AM

Will do.

On 4/22/15, 9:17 AM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

From: Leopold, Elana
To: Walzak, Phil
Cc: Williams, Dominic; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma; jfdc@akpdmedia.com; Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: TPP Backgrounder
Date: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 9:23:59 AM

Yes- can discuss with mayor at planning meeting but need to huddle before then

Sent from my iPhone

On Apr 22, 2015, at 9:23 AM, Walzak, Phil <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Aren't we mtg tonight?

We should do @ planning mtg

From: Williams, Dominic
Sent: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 9:21 AM
To: Leopold, Elana
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com'; Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: TPP Backgrounder

Will set up a call for today. Sending times shortly.

From: Leopold, Elana
Sent: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 09:15 AM
To: Williams, Dominic
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma; jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: TPP Backgrounder

Mayor off

Can we put together a call to discuss this after OneNYC announcement please? Mayor should have some time around 4:30 today to discuss our conclusions. Thanks!

Sent from my iPhone

On Apr 22, 2015, at 9:09 AM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

We need to decide by COB today how we're handling this

From: Williams, Dominic
Sent: Tuesday, April 21, 2015 09:57 AM
To: B
Subject: TPP Backgrounder

The Trans-Pacific Partnership

Issues and Areas of Concern for New York City

The Trans-Pacific Partnership is a regulatory and investment treaty being negotiated by the Obama administration covering major economies of the Pacific Rim currently excluding China. It includes 12 nations consisting of nearly 40% of the world's economy: United States, Australia, Brunei Darussalam, Chile, Canada, Japan, Malaysia, Mexico, New Zealand, Peru, Singapore, Vietnam. New York State exports approximately $23 billion per year in goods to TPP economies. Overall, exports in goods support approximately 280,000 jobs.

The treaty includes reciprocal tariff reductions, akin to a traditional free trade agreement, but also includes chapters on other non-tariff regulatory issues, including intellectual property, labor, financial services, and the environment. Relative tariff levels between the United States and the other participating nations are already relatively low, so there has been intense focus on the non-tariff aspects of the deal.

FACTS ABOUT PROCESS

The agreement is being negotiated in secret: The text of the agreement has not been made public, limiting the ability for citizens or many advocacy groups to form opinions of the direction of the agreement. Instead, advocacy groups have needed to rely on leaked drafts of some chapters, which have been criticized by the Obama administration as being incomplete and partial. Members of Congress and stakeholder groups convened by the administration, including labor, environmental, and consumer advocacy representatives have seen confidential draft language.

The President is seeking “fast-track” authority over opposition and skepticism from Congressional Democrats, labor unions, and prominent environmental groups: The Administration is seeking Trade Promotion Authority (colloquially known as “fast track”) which allows the Administration to submit a negotiated agreement in total to be voted up or down by Congress with no opportunity for amendments and limited debate. This is the process that was used for NAFTA, WTO, and other high-profile trade agreements. Without an “up or down” vote, the administration argues that the deal would collapse under the weight of amendments. Harry Reid and Nancy Pelosi have opposed granting the President fast-track authority, but some Democrats and many Congressional Republicans are open to the idea.

BENEFITS OF A DEAL AS WE KNOW IT

While we do not know the final text, there are a number of key benefits that seem like likely outcomes of a successfully approved deal:

The agreement could increase opportunities for increased exports and domestic job creation, while expanding profit-making opportunities for U.S. companies abroad and potentially shift jobs or expand operations overseas. The White House has stated that approving this agreement would increase exports from the United States by approximately $120 billion per year, largely benefiting those companies and employees in export-oriented industries, and increase real incomes, in the form of lower prices and increased competition, by $77 billion per year. They point to increased opportunities for small and medium sized export-oriented U.S. businesses, reduced tariffs for goods and services from U.S. firms (including “financial services”), uniform regulations, and increased protections for the intellectual property from U.S. tech, medical, and media firms.

Would benefit large corporate entities with major footprints in New York City:

The benefits of additional corporate investment opportunities in the Pacific Rim created by TPP skews towards some categories of companies who have major presence in New York City: particularly companies who own valuable IP in tech, media, and pharmaceuticals, and companies that are positioned to increase “trade in services” – particularly financial institutions, law firms, and consulting companies.

This agreement would set the pattern for other future trade deals, including with

China and other nations across the world: The TPP is seen as an opportunity for the United States to take the lead in setting minimum standards for trade among major economic partners in the Pacific Rim, in an attempt to create “rules of the game” that these nations will play on American terms, rather than on the terms of Chinese interest, which may include less protection for labor, the environment, American security interests, and the interests of American corporations and workers. It is also seen as an important tool to knit together countries in the region to provide an economic counterweight to the rise of China. Roger Altman, former Treasury official, and Richard Haas of the Council on Foreign Relations, wrote that a failure of the TPP, “would leave the country poorer and the world less stable.”

CONCERNS ABOUT PROCEEDING WITH THE PENDING DEAL:

While we do not know the final text, there are a number of substantive concerns being raised by labor, environmental, and consumer protection advocates:

Treaty may include hortatory but toothless clauses on environmental protection and labor rights and could expand fossil fuel exports, exacerbating climate change and reinforcing dependence on fossil fuels.

The White House is planning on including broad protections against illegal trade in protected species, overfishing, and deforestation, but a leaked draft revealed a framework that lacked meaningful enforcement mechanisms and has drawn the skepticism of major environmental groups. In addition, while the White House insists they are looking to include protections for labor rights, including rights to collective bargaining, limits on child labor, and acceptable working conditions (safe work environments and maximum hours limitations), there are parallel concerns that these clauses will not be adequately enforceable. There is also no chapter on currency manipulation, which is concerning to domestic labor unions as member countries can use artificial currency depreciation to undercut U.S. manufacturing companies.

The agreement would likely expand expansive controversial U.S. intellectual property laws internationally:

A leaked version of the Intellectual Property right s chapter includes provisions that would expand U.S. intellectual property protections, including 80-year copyright protections and increased protections for patented brand-name pharmaceuticals. This would improve profit prospects for pharmaceutical companies, but may yield higher drug prices.

The agreement would likely expand the use of “Investor-State Dispute Settlement” giving investors and international corporations a trans-national forum to seek damages from governments for regulations that expropriate property:

The White House has identified these tribunals as vital protection from expropriation for U.S. companies doing business abroad, but Elizabeth Warren and other critics criticize them as potentially allowing global corporations to receive damages, paid for by U.S. taxpayers, from regulations designed to protect consumers but which the company will argue unfairly restrict profits. It is important to note, however, that most companies will continue to challenge rules in U.S. courts in order to overturn the laws all together. ISDS tribunals are only able to award damages, and have never done so in any of the thirteen cases that went to judgment against the United States.

“Buy America” provisions could be challenged: The White House insists that there will be no change to current law, and that states and localities’ ability to impose local purchasing requirements will not be disrupted. , but the AFL-CIO has claimed that this deal would undermine the ability of the United States to impose “Buy America” provisions.

Draft Recommended Position:

We don't need trade deals that exacerbate inequality and undermine worker's rights and environmental protections. We need trade deals with real and enforceable commitments to labor rights and environmental protections that improve the lot for hardworking Americans and raise living standards across the world, rather than exacerbating a race to the bottom. If this deal doesn't do that, Congress should reject it.

- <!--[if !supportLists]-->■ <!--[endif]-->Avoid weighing in on Fast Track – It's up to Congress and the President to decide the best way to achieve the best deal for American workers.
- <!--[if !supportLists]-->■ <!--[endif]-->Focus on substance – As it stands, this doesn't sound like a good deal for American workers.

From: Michael Carey
To: Hayley Prim
Cc: John Del Cecato; Aaron Pickrell; John Davis; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA calls
Date: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 9:41:02 AM

will do and will send you meeting invite in a few

On Wed, Apr 22, 2015 at 9:36 AM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:
ok great. i am going to schedule that time. Let me know if it gets adjusted at all

On Wed, Apr 22, 2015 at 9:35 AM, Michael Carey
<[REDACTED]> wrote:
While he is in Milwaukee he has from 930 AM -12 PM local time

On Wed, Apr 22, 2015 at 9:33 AM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
wrote:
Taking the Mayor off.

I am working on tracking down contact info for a lot of these folks this AM. Is there any block of time today or tomorrow, or in milwaukee when I could schedule calls and sit with him?

Would be easier to get in touch with the super high level folks if we know approximately when he's going to call, and would be better for downloading info as well.

Thanks,
Hayley

On Tue, Apr 21, 2015 at 10:34 PM, Bill de Blasio
<[REDACTED]> wrote:

I want to start making these non-stop, every moment I get -- starting tmrw
AM. Hayley. -- send me a top 10 or top 20 list asap in the AM so I can start.
Will look for every chance to get a call in. Want to continue this on the way to the airport on friday and once I arrive in milwaukee both friday afternoon and sat. So long as I have people's cells, I can call nights and weekends. Pls send a list and keep checking in with me. Should include all nyc and Nys members of the progressive caucus in the House. Elana can help with cell
#'s, as can IGA. Much appreciated

Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: Williams, Dominic
To: "BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov"; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Cc: Snyder, Thomas; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPP Backgrounder
Date: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 10:04:32 AM

We will come back to you before COB today with a recommendation for you to discuss and decide on.

From: B
Sent: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 09:09 AM
To: Williams, Dominic; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: Snyder, Thomas; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPP Backgrounder

We need to decide by COB today how we're handling this

From: Williams, Dominic
Sent: Tuesday, April 21, 2015 09:57 AM
To: B
Subject: TPP Backgrounder

The Trans-Pacific Partnership
Issues and Areas of Concern for New York City

The Trans-Pacific Partnership is a regulatory and investment treaty being negotiated by the Obama administration covering major economies of the Pacific Rim currently excluding China. It includes 12 nations consisting of nearly 40% of the world's economy: United States, Australia, Brunei Darussalam, Chile, Canada, Japan, Malaysia, Mexico, New Zealand, Peru, Singapore, Vietnam. New York State exports approximately $23 billion per year in goods to TPP economies. Overall, exports in goods support approximately 280,000 jobs.

The treaty includes reciprocal tariff reductions, akin to a traditional free trade agreement, but also includes chapters on other non-tariff regulatory issues, including intellectual property, labor, financial services, and the environment. Relative tariff levels between the United States and the other participating nations are already relatively low, so there has been intense focus on the non-tariff aspects of the deal.

FACTS ABOUT PROCESS

The agreement is being negotiated in secret: The text of the agreement has not been made public, limiting the ability for citizens or many advocacy groups to form opinions of the direction of the agreement. Instead, advocacy groups have needed to rely on leaked drafts of some chapters, which have been criticized by the Obama administration as being incomplete and partial. Members of Congress and stakeholder groups convened by the administration, including labor, environmental, and consumer advocacy representatives have seen confidential draft language.

The President is seeking "fast-track" authority over opposition and skepticism from Congressional Democrats, labor unions, and prominent environmental groups: The Administration is seeking Trade Promotion Authority (colloquially known as "fast track") which allows the Administration to submit a negotiated agreement in total to be voted up or down by Congress with no opportunity for amendments and limited debate. This is the process that was used for NAFTA, WTO, and other high-profile trade agreements. Without an "up or down" vote, the administration argues that the deal would collapse under the weight of amendments. Harry Reid and Nancy Pelosi have opposed granting the President fast-track authority, but some Democrats and many Congressional Republicans are open to the idea.

BENEFITS OF A DEAL AS WE KNOW IT

While we do not know the final text, there are a number of key benefits that seem like likely outcomes of a successfully approved deal:

The agreement could increase opportunities for increased exports and domestic job creation, while expanding profit-making opportunities for U.S. companies abroad and potentially shift jobs or expand operations overseas. The White House has stated that approving this agreement would increase exports from the United States by approximately $120 billion per year, largely benefiting those companies and employees in export-oriented industries, and increase real incomes, in the form of lower prices and increased competition, by $77 billion per year. They point to increased opportunities for small and medium sized export-oriented U.S. businesses, reduced tariffs for goods and services from U.S. firms (including “financial services”), uniform regulations, and increased protections for the intellectual property from U.S. tech, medical, and media firms.

Would benefit large corporate entities with major footprints in New York City: The benefits of additional corporate investment opportunities in the Pacific Rim created by TPP skews towards some categories of companies who have major presence in New York City: particularly companies who own valuable IP in tech, media, and pharmaceuticals, and companies that are positioned to increase “trade in services” – particularly financial institutions, law firms, and consulting companies.

This agreement would set the pattern for other future trade deals, including with China and other nations across the world: The TPP is seen as an opportunity for the United States to take the lead in setting minimum standards for trade among major economic partners in the Pacific Rim, in an attempt to create “rules of the game” that these nations will play on American terms, rather than on the terms of Chinese interest, which may include less protection for labor, the environment, American security interests, and the interests of American corporations and workers. It is also seen as an important tool to knit together countries in the region to provide an economic counterweight to the rise of China. Roger Altman, former Treasury official, and Richard Haas of the Council on Foreign Relations, wrote that a failure of the TPP, “would leave the country poorer and the world less stable.”

CONCERNS ABOUT PROCEEDING WITH THE PENDING DEAL:

While we do not know the final text, there are a number of substantive concerns being raised by labor, environmental, and consumer protection advocates:

Treaty may include hortatory but toothless clauses on environmental protection and labor rights and could expand fossil fuel exports, exacerbating climate change and reinforcing dependence on fossil fuels. The White House is planning on including broad protections against illegal trade in protected species, overfishing, and deforestation, but a leaked draft revealed a framework that lacked meaningful enforcement mechanisms and has drawn the skepticism of major environmental groups. In addition, while the White House insists they are looking to include protections for labor rights, including rights to collective bargaining, limits on child labor, and acceptable working conditions (safe work environments and maximum hours limitations), there are parallel concerns that these clauses will not be adequately enforceable. There is also no chapter on currency manipulation, which is concerning to domestic labor unions as member countries can use artificial currency depreciation to undercut U.S. manufacturing companies.

The agreement would likely expand expansive controversial U.S. intellectual property laws internationally: A leaked version of the Intellectual Property rights chapter includes provisions that would expand U.S. intellectual property protections, including 80-year copyright protections and increased protections for patented brand-name pharmaceuticals. This would improve profit prospects for pharmaceutical companies, but may yield higher drug prices.

The agreement would likely expand the use of “Investor-State Dispute Settlement” giving investors and international corporations a trans-national forum to seek damages from governments for regulations that expropriate property: The White House has identified these tribunals as vital protection from expropriation for U.S. companies doing business abroad, but Elizabeth Warren and other critics criticize them as potentially allowing global corporations to receive damages, paid for by U.S. taxpayers, from regulations designed to protect consumers but which the company will argue unfairly restrict profits. It is important to note, however, that most companies will continue to challenge rules in U.S. courts in order to overturn the laws all together. ISDS tribunals are only able to award damages, and have never done so in any of the thirteen cases that went to judgment against the United States.

“Buy America” provisions could be challenged: The White House insists that there will be no change to current law, and that states and localities’ ability to impose local purchasing requirements will not be disrupted, but the AFL-CIO has claimed that this deal would undermine the ability of the United States to impose “Buy America” provisions.

Draft Recommended Position:

We don’t need trade deals that exacerbate inequality and undermine worker’s rights and environmental protections. We need trade deals with real and enforceable commitments to labor rights and environmental protections that improve the lot for hardworking Americans and raise living standards across the world, rather than exacerbating a race to the bottom. If this deal doesn’t do that, Congress should reject it.

- Avoid weighing in on Fast Track – It’s up to Congress and the President to decide the best way to achieve the best deal for American workers.
- Focus on substance – As it stands, this doesn’t sound like a good deal for American workers.

From: Carey, Michael
To: Ko, Eunice; Thornton, Demetrius; Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Howe, Amanda; Wolfe, Emma; Darlington, Mandy \(OMB\); Wiley, Maya; "Jonathan@berlinrosen.com" \(Jonathan@berlinrosen.com\); Hagelgans, Andrea; "Liz Hegarty"; Griffith, Chantell; Chao, Raymond; John, Roxanne; Leopold, Elana; Fuleihan, Dean \(OMB\); "nbaldick@hilltoppublicsolutions.com" \(nbaldick@hilltoppublicsolutions.com\); "jfdc@akpdmedia.com" \(jfdc@akpdmedia.com\); Walzak, Phil; Fialkoff, Gabrielle
Subject: TONIGHT - - MBDB: Weekly Planning Meeting
Date: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 10:40:13 AM

Hi All,

Just a reminder that tonight's Meeting is a bit earlier.

Would also like you to note that the First Lady is hosting a dinner at Gracie starting at 630 PM, so please do not walk thru the Ballroom when you are leaving.

And only light snacks will be provided tonight.

Happy Earth Day!

Michael Paul Carey

Director of Scheduling and Advance

City Hall

New York, New York 10007

212.341.5396

-----Original Appointment-----

From: Carey, Michael

Sent: Thursday, April 9, 2015 8:21 AM

To: Carey, Michael; Ko, Eunice; Thornton, Demetrius; Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Howe, Amanda; Wolfe, Emma; Darlington, Mandy (OMB); Wiley, Maya; "Jonathan@berlinrosen.com" (Jonathan@berlinrosen.com); Hagelgans, Andrea; 'Liz Hegarty'; Griffith, Chantell; Chao, Raymond; John, Roxanne; Leopold, Elana; Fuleihan, Dean (OMB); "nbaldick@hilltoppublicsolutions.com" (nbaldick@hilltoppublicsolutions.com); "jfdc@akpdmedia.com" (jfdc@akpdmedia.com); Walzak, Phil; Fialkoff, Gabrielle

Subject: MBDB: Weekly Planning Meeting

When: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 5:00 PM-6:30 PM (UTC-05:00) Eastern Time (US & Canada).

Where: Gracie Mansion, The Parlor

From: Klein, Monica
To: B: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; FLONYC
Subject: Jose Diaz Balart and Alex Seitz-Ward
Date: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 11:37:44 AM

The Rundown - Jose Diaz Balart

MSNBC - 04/22/2015 9:10 am

Jose Diaz Balart: This morning, President Obama is trying to rally skeptical Democrats behind a transpacific trade deal. Some members of the president's own party say they're worried the deal could threaten American workers. One prominent Democrat is still uneasy over the proposal – Hillary Clinton. The presidential candidate distanced herself from the deal while wrapping up a campaign trip to New Hampshire.

Secretary Hillary Clinton: Any trade deal has to produce jobs, and raise wages, and increase prosperity, and protect our security. And we have to do our part in making sure we have the capabilities and the skills to be competitive.

Jose Diaz Balart: MSNBC's Alex Seitz-Ward is in Washington, fresh off his trip to the granite state with Hillary Clinton. Alex, good morning. How much of this type of rhetoric are we going to see of Clinton distancing herself from the White House?

Alex Seitz-Ward: Well in general, Jose, I think not very much at all actually. The president still remains very popular among Democrats, and he was, of course, her boss as secretary of state. So, the Clinton's campaign thinks it just wouldn't really pass the smell test if she tried to distance herself too much from him. That said – on trade specifically – this is a rare issue where the president is very out of step with a lot of the Democratic base. So she's in a tough spot here. On one hand, she wants to stay close to the president. On the other hand, she wants to appease this liberal base that's still a little bit wary about her candidacy. So she's trying to leave a little bit of room here and figure out how things go. She's leaving herself an opening on the – I would still think – unlikely chance that she ultimately comes out against this trade deal. But she wants to, you know, play a little bit tough and really try to show that she's speaking to the concerns that progressives are raising around this.

Jose Diaz Balart: And Alex, now there's this new narrative by the Clinton camp to paint her as the original Elizabeth Warren. Tell me a little bit about that.

Alex Seitz-Ward: Yeah, that's right. I mean, they point to – going back to the 90s in the Clinton White House when her husband ran as a very centrist Democrat, moderate on fiscal issues, was a big hawk on the deficit and social responsibility. And inside the administration people were uneasy about Hillary Clinton. They thought she was too far to the left. They even called her and her advisors the bolsheviks inside the Clinton administration. So the Clinton people are now trying to kind revive that legacy. It's something that she pushed aside and didn't want to emphasize when she got into the Senate. She made a big effort to work across the aisle with Republicans and present herself as sort of a, you know, compromising moderate centrist. And then that's sort of how she ran in 2008. But now with this revived progressive, activist left she's pointing to that legacy, and she's saying she was for universal healthcare before Barack Obama, she was for, you know, universal childcare – all these slew of issues before Elizabeth Warren, before a lot of other people in the party.

Jose Diaz Balart: Alex Seitz-Wald, thanks. It's good to see you.

From: John Del Cecato
To: Griffith, Chantell
Subject: Re: Can you set up?
Date: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 12:06:18 PM

How about 245p?

On 4/22/15, 12:00 PM, "Griffith, Chantell" <CGriffith@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>Unfortunately that doesn't work for everyone else. They will still be in >the Bronx. Call should last only 30 minutes.

>

>-----Original Message-----

>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

>Sent: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 12:00 PM

>To: Griffith, Chantell

>Subject: Re: Can you set up?

>

>I've got a 330pm - so earlier would be best... Maybe 1pm??

>

>On 4/22/15, 11:54 AM, "Griffith, Chantell" <CGriffith@cityhall.nyc.gov>

>wrote:

>

>>Hi Mr. del Cecato,

>>

>>Are you available at 3pm for a call?

>>

>>-----Original Message-----

>>From: Williams, Dominic

>>Sent: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 10:10 AM

>>To: Griffith, Chantell

>>Subject: Can you set up?

>>

>>Meeting/call for me, John del Cecato, Emma, Phil, Tom Snyder - 15

>>minutes today before 4?

>

From: Griffith, Chantell
To: "John Del Cecato"
Subject: RE: Can you set up?
Date: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 2:59:39 PM

Will let you know when to dial-in.

-----Original Message-----

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 12:18 PM
To: Griffith, Chantell
Subject: Re: Can you set up?

Okay - 3pm it is!!

On 4/22/15, 12:06 PM, "Griffith, Chantell" <CGriffith@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>Dom has a 2:30pm. :-(

>

>-----Original Message-----

>>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
>>Sent: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 12:07 PM
>>To: Griffith, Chantell
>>Subject: Re: Can you set up?

>

>>How about 245p?

>

>>On 4/22/15, 12:00 PM, "Griffith, Chantell" <CGriffith@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>>>Unfortunately that doesn't work for everyone else. They will still be >>>in the Bronx. Call should last only 30 minutes.

>>

>>-----Original Message-----

>>>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
>>>Sent: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 12:00 PM
>>>To: Griffith, Chantell
>>>Subject: Re: Can you set up?

>>

>>>I've got a 330pm - so earlier would be best... Maybe 1pm??

>>

>>>On 4/22/15, 11:54 AM, "Griffith, Chantell"

>>><CGriffith@cityhall.nyc.gov>

>>>wrote:

>>

>>>Hi Mr. del Cecato,

>>>

>>>>Are you available at 3pm for a call?

>>>

>>>-----Original Message-----

>>>>From: Williams, Dominic
>>>>Sent: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 10:10 AM
>>>>To: Griffith, Chantell
>>>>Subject: Can you set up?

>>>

>>>>Meeting/call for me, John del Cecato, Emma, Phil, Tom Snyder - 15

>>>>minutes today before 4?

>>
>

From: John Del Cecato
To: Griffith, Chantell
Cc: Seignious, Sandy; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel Subject: Re: Dial in.
Date: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 3:04:57 PM

I'm a little late

On Apr 22, 2015, at 3:04 PM, Griffith, Chantell <CGriffith@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Chantell Griffith
Special Assistant to the First Deputy Mayor
Office of the Mayor
(212) 788-3191
CGriffith@cityhall.nyc.gov

From: B
To: Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Fw: Few thoughts about Capital Gains and NYC
Date: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 6:06:23 PM

Fyi

-----Original Message-----

From: Alicia Glen
To: Bill de Blasio
Cc: Elana Leopold
Cc: James Patchett
Subject: Few thoughts about Capital Gains and NYC
Sent: Apr 2, 2015 11:10 AM

-If the federal government taxed capital gains at the same rate as income, it would earn an additional $3.7 billion annually from NYC taxpayers.

-NYC is only 2.6% of the US population, but accounts for 7.1% of the total US capital gains tax revenue.

-As a result, any incremental tax revenues from the change in treatment that the federal government earns from NYC residents should be directed towards long-term infrastructure investments that will support our growth and allow the NYC economy to diversify and create quality jobs for the 21st Century in an increasingly competitive environment for talent.

Alicia Glen
Deputy Mayor for Housing & Economic Development
aglen@cityhall.nyc.gov
O: 212-788-0120

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: Leopold, Elana
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com
Subject: Re: TPA calls pre trip
Date: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 7:17:53 PM

Jim Hoffa, Larry Cohen, Leo Gerard (USW) have been the loudest critics of trade deals.

Sent from my iPad

> On Apr 22, 2015, at 6:25 PM, Leopold, Elana <ELEopold@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
>
> Let me know who mayor should call in addition to trumka
>
> Thanks!

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: B; Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Re: how is it going?
Date: Thursday, April 23, 2015 8:04:39 AM

That is a good one.

----- Original Message -----

From: B
Sent: Thursday, April 23, 2015 07:59 AM
To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Fw: how is it going?

Damn, why didn't I think of the turn of the phrase below?! :)

-----Original Message-----

From: Kevin McCabe
To: Bill de Blasio
Subject: Re: how is it going?
Sent: Apr 23, 2015 7:48 AM

Tell them you are Running. Running the City

Sent from my iPhone

> On Apr 23, 2015, at 7:45 AM, Bill de Blasio <[REDACTED]> wrote:

>

>

> Pretty well, I'd say. And I'm running for dog catcher in 2016 :)

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Kevin McCabe
> To: Bill de Blasio
> Subject: how is it going?
> Sent: Apr 23, 2015 7:33 AM

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

From: Walzak, Phil
To: B; Hagelgans, Andrea; 'Jonathan@berlinrosen.com'; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com'
Cc: Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Times
Date: Thursday, April 23, 2015 8:33:16 AM

Got it

----- Original Message -----

From: B
Sent: Thursday, April 23, 2015 08:03 AM
To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; 'Jonathan@berlinrosen.com' <Jonathan@berlinrosen.com>; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Times

Remember I'm away most of that week and we will need time that monday to finish the TPA rollout on the 12th. Thus, I think the next week is better

----- Original Message -----

From: Walzak, Phil
Sent: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 09:38 PM
To: B; Hagelgans, Andrea; 'Jonathan@berlinrosen.com' <Jonathan@berlinrosen.com>; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: RE: Challenge flag!

on the 2nd note, we are in the process of scheduling a NYT ed board mtg the week of May 11 -- AFTER the exec budget has been introed...I spoke w them just today on this

From: B
Sent: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 8:59 PM
To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; 'Jonathan@berlinrosen.com'; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com'
Subject: Challenge flag!

It just dawned on me how totally fucked up it is that the Times has turned down the only 2 op-eds I've offered in 16 months, both on very weighty topics. I feel like challenging that to Arthur or to whoever makes sense. It's not cool that they won't allow the mayor of their city to ever have a chance to speak in his own voice. Pls advise. And separately, we should go do the editorial board in the third week of may. It's strange that we've only been in once

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: B; Walzak, Phil; "Jonathan@berlinrosen.com"; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Re: Challenge flag!
Date: Thursday, April 23, 2015 8:53:27 AM

We are discussing. Know JDC is working with the Warren camp on joint oped. That might be the time to apply the pressure.

----- Original Message -----

From: B
Sent: Thursday, April 23, 2015 08:03 AM
To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; 'Jonathan@berlinrosen.com' <Jonathan@berlinrosen.com>; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: Challenge flag!

And what about the FIRST topic???

----- Original Message -----

From: Walzak, Phil
Sent: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 09:38 PM
To: B; Hagelgans, Andrea; 'Jonathan@berlinrosen.com' <Jonathan@berlinrosen.com>; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: RE: Challenge flag!

on the 2nd note, we are in the process of scheduling a NYT ed board mtg the week of May 11 -- AFTER the exec budget has been introed...I spoke w them just today on this

From: B
Sent: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 8:59 PM
To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; 'Jonathan@berlinrosen.com'; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com'
Subject: Challenge flag!

It just dawned on me how totally fucked up it is that the Times has turned down the only 2 op-eds I've offered in 16 months, both on very weighty topics. I feel like challenging that to Arthur or to whoever makes sense. It's not cool that they won't allow the mayor of their city to ever have a chance to speak in his own voice. Pls advise. And separately, we should go do the editorial board in the third week of may. It's strange that we've only been in once

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: B; Walzak, Phil; "Jonathan@berlinrosen.com"; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: RE: Challenge flag!
Date: Thursday, April 23, 2015 11:12:03 AM

Sir,

Had Mahen's team run a search on Bloomberg op-eds in NYT when he was in office. Interestingly, of the ones they found, the op-eds were focused on national politics, not NYC announcements or changes. While that may be because that's where he chose to focus his op-ed time, it could also be an indication that they are looking for more national themes. Think the Warren/MBdB op-ed may be the test for us

Best,
Andrea

-----Original Message-----

From: B
Sent: Thursday, April 23, 2015 8:04 AM
To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; 'Jonathan@berlinrosen.com'; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com'
Subject: Re: Challenge flag!

And what about the FIRST topic???

----- Original Message -----

From: Walzak, Phil
Sent: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 09:38 PM
To: B; Hagelgans, Andrea; 'Jonathan@berlinrosen.com' <Jonathan@berlinrosen.com>; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: RE: Challenge flag!

on the 2nd note, we are in the process of scheduling a NYT ed board mtg the week of May 11 -- AFTER the exec budget has been introed...I spoke w them just today on this

From: B
Sent: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 8:59 PM
To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; 'Jonathan@berlinrosen.com'; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com'
Subject: Challenge flag!

It just dawned on me how totally fucked up it is that the Times has turned down the only 2 op-eds I've offered in 16 months, both on very weighty topics. I feel like challenging that to Arthur or to whoever makes sense. It's not cool that they won't allow the mayor of their city to ever have a chance to speak in his own voice. Pls advise. And separately, we should go do the editorial board in the third week of may. It's strange that we've only been in once

From: de Alwis, Ronalie
To: "Aaron Pickrell"; Michael Carey; John Del Cecato
Subject: RE: reich call
Date: Thursday, April 23, 2015 11:27:25 AM

This link doesn't work to open the op ed...trying to search for it

From: Aaron Pickrell [mailto:████████████████████]
Sent: Thursday, April 23, 2015 10:21 AM
To: Michael Carey; John Del Cecato; de Alwis, Ronalie
Subject: reich call

Few talking points for MBDB for Reich call

- Would like for Reich to sign on to TPA bullets
- Would like Reich to attend May 12 event in DC. MBDB will be doing Roosevelt in morning and TPA event will likely be on Hill at 3 PM
- Would like to see him in CA and ideally speak to his class at Berkley (MPC – not sure what availability there is)
- MBDB is coming out against TPP this weekend
 - Reich and Trumka did joint op ed in March laying out argument against TPP
 - <http://www.latimes.com/opinion/op-ed/la-oe-reich-trumka-tpp-trade-fast-track-20150303-story.html>
- Reich attended Fight for 15 rally in Berkley where he said
 - “It’s not just a fight about higher wages,” Reich said, “it’s a fight about morality, it’s a fight about decency, it’s a fight about dignity.”

From: John Del Cecato
To: de Alwis Ronalie; "Aaron Pickrell"; Michael Carey
Subject: Re: reich call
Date: Thursday, April 23, 2015 11:29:17 AM

This spring, President Obama and Republican leaders in Congress want to use an outdated process used to pass the North American Free Trade Agreement more than 20 years ago — a rule called “fast track” — to force through trade deals without a real debate or any amendments. And fast track would be used to speed passage of the giant Trans-Pacific Partnership, or TPP, trade deal.

If you haven't heard much about the TPP, that's part of the problem. It would be the largest trade deal in history — involving countries stretching from Chile to Japan, representing 792 million people and about 40% of the world economy.

The Trans-Pacific Partnership won't deliver jobs or curb China's power

Yet it's been devised in secret, with a disproportionate amount of advice coming from corporations and Wall Street. This secrecy is the norm since NAFTA. Most of the details that are known to the public have come through WikiLeaks. Instead, we'd like to see the negotiating texts made public, so there can be an honest and open debate.

A fast-tracked TPP would lock in a rigged set of economic rules, lasting potentially forever, before most Americans — let alone some members of Congress — have had a chance to understand it thoroughly. If the administration gets fast-track authority, it could hand a completed deal to Congress, which must then vote yes or no, without amendments and little debate, within 90 days.

It would be a grave mistake for Congress to authorize fast-tracking this giant trade deal.

We were both involved in the NAFTA debate — one of us as the leader of a major union, the other as secretary of Labor. No one knew how the agreement would turn out or the full ramifications of approving a trade deal without a full debate. We now know that NAFTA has cost the U.S. economy hundreds of thousands of jobs and is one reason why America's

Related

EDITORIAL

A West Coast ports pact is long past due

8

SEE ALL RELATED

workers haven't gotten a real raise in decades. It and agreements like it have also contributed to the huge U.S. trade deficits. We now import about $500 billion more in goods and services each year than we export.

Following NAFTA with the Trans-Pacific Partnership is like turning a bad television show into a terrible movie. It will be on a bigger screen and cost a lot more money. A few might walk away happy and rich, but it won't be the audience.

This isn't a contest between free trade and protectionism.

Congress should debate whether the Trans-Pacific Partnership promotes the shared values of democracy and prosperity that the U.S. stands for.

In the first three decades after World War II, “free trade” meant other countries opening their borders to American-made products, and the U.S. opening its borders to their goods. The United States chose free trade, and it worked. Living standards rose here and abroad. Jobs were created to take the place of jobs that were lost. Worldwide demand for products made by American workers grew and helped push up U.S. wages.

But American corporations have gone global, and in recent decades the payoffs from trade agreements have mainly gone to those at the top. Now they make many of their products overseas and ship them back to the United States. Recent trade agreements have protected their intellectual property abroad — patents, trademarks and copyrights — along with their overseas factories, equipment and financial assets.

But those deals haven't protected the incomes of most Americans, whose jobs have been outsourced abroad and whose wages have gone nowhere.

As for the problems with the TPP? What's been leaked about its proposals reveals, for example, that the pharmaceutical industry would get stronger patent protections, delaying cheaper generic versions of drugs.

cComments

@Daggersix You have to approve it to find out if it's legal.

BYCHRIS

AT 12 20 AM MARCH 09, 2015

29

ADD A COMMENT
SEE ALL COMMENTS

The deal also gives global corporations an international tribunal of private attorneys, outside any nation's legal system, that can order compensation for lost expected profits resulting from a nation's regulations, including our own. These extraordinary rights for corporations put governments on the defensive over legitimate public health or environmental rules.

As Wisconsin goes, so goes the nation? Let's hope not

The deal would encourage and reward American corporations for outsourcing even more jobs abroad. And it does nothing to prevent other nations from manipulating their currencies to boost their exports and undermine the competitiveness of U.S.-made products.

The administration calls the TPP a key part of its strategy to make U.S. engagement in the Asia-Pacific region a priority. It thinks the TPP will help contain China's power and influence. But the trade pact is likely to make giant U.S. global corporations even more powerful and influential. White House strategists believe such corporations are accountable to the U.S. government. Wrong. At most, they're answerable to their worldwide shareholders.

At a time when corporate profits are at record highs and the real median wage is lower than it's been in four decades, most Americans need protection — not from international trade but from the political power of giant global corporations and Wall Street.

We need trade agreements that address unfair trade practices such as currency manipulation, foreign subsidies to exports, corporate power grabs and systematic and egregious violation of internationally recognized labor rights.

Congress should debate whether the Trans-Pacific Partnership promotes the shared values of democracy and prosperity that the United States stands for, as well as sets high standards for countries such as China to follow. Or whether it merely speeds the global race to the bottom.

If it's the latter, Congress should be able to change it, not act as a rubber stamp on agreements negotiated in secret. It can start by not fast-tracking the Trans-Pacific Partnership.

Robert Reich was secretary of Labor in the Clinton administration; Richard Trumka is president of the AFL-CIO.

From: "<de Alwis>", Ronalie <rdealwis@cityhall.nyc.gov>

Date: Thursday, April 23, 2015 at 11:27 AM

To: Aaron Pickrell <[REDACTED]> Michael Carey <[REDACTED]> John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>

Subject: RE: reich call

This link doesn't work to open the op ed...trying to search for it

From: Aaron Pickrell [[mailto:\[REDACTED\]](mailto:[REDACTED])]

Sent: Thursday, April 23, 2015 10:21 AM

To: Michael Carey; John Del Cecato; de Alwis, Ronalie

Subject: reich call

Few talking points for MBDB for Reich call

- Would like for Reich to sign on to TPA bullets
- Would like Reich to attend May 12 event in DC. MBDB will be doing Roosevelt in morning and TPA event will likely be on Hill at 3 PM
- Would like to see him in CA and ideally speak to his class at Berkley (MPC – not sure what availability there is)
- MBDB is coming out against TPP this weekend
 - Reich and Trumka did joint op ed in March laying out argument against TPP
 - <http://www.latimes.com/opinion/op-ed/la-oe-reich-trumka-tpp-trade-fast-track-20150303-story.html>
- Reich attended Fight for 15 rally in Berkley where he said
 - "It's not just a fight about higher wages," Reich said, "it's a fight about morality, it's a fight about decency, it's a fight about dignity."

From: John Del Cecato
To: de Alwis, Ronalie; "Aaron Pickrell"; Michael Carey
Subject: Re: reich call
Date: Thursday, April 23, 2015 11:29:17 AM

yes

From: "<de Alwis>", Ronalie <rdealwis@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Thursday, April 23, 2015 at 11:28 AM
To: Aaron PickrellEmail <[REDACTED]> Michael Carey
<[REDACTED]> John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: RE: reich call

<http://www.latimes.com/opinion/op-ed/la-oe-reich-trumka-tpa-trade-fast-track-20150303-story.html>

Confirming this is it

From: Aaron Pickrell [[mailto:\[REDACTED\]](mailto:[REDACTED])]
Sent: Thursday, April 23, 2015 10:21 AM
To: Michael Carey; John Del Cecato; de Alwis, Ronalie
Subject: reich call

Few talking points for MBDB for Reich call

- Would like for Reich to sign on to TPA bullets
- Would like Reich to attend May 12 event in DC. MBDB will be doing Roosevelt in morning and TPA event will likely be on Hill at 3 PM
- Would like to see him in CA and ideally speak to his class at Berkley (MPC – not sure what availability there is)
- MBDB is coming out against TPP this weekend
 - Reich and Trumka did joint op ed in March laying out argument against TPP
 - <http://www.latimes.com/opinion/op-ed/la-oe-reich-trumka-tpa-trade-fast-track-20150303-story.html>
- Reich attended Fight for 15 rally in Berkley where he said
 - “It’s not just a fight about higher wages,” Reich said, “it’s a fight about morality, it’s a fight about decency, it’s a fight about dignity.”

From: John Del Cecato
To: Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma
Subject: Re: WH heads up on trade?
Date: Friday, April 24, 2015 8:10:38 AM

Cool

On 4/24/15, 7:38 AM, "Williams, Dominic" <DWilliams@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>Draft Note:

>

>Dom Emma and James participated in a briefing call with WH policy staff >and Jarrett's staff, where they made their pitch for TPP and TPA. We >ended that briefing with a sharp reiteration of your skepticism on the >treaty and on fast track.

>

>John will call Simas today to give him heads up on Saturday's speech.

>

>Emma will follow up with Patrick today to let him know the play.

>

>

>

>

>----- Original Message -----

>From: Wolfe, Emma

>Sent: Friday, April 24, 2015 07:26 AM

>To: 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Williams, Dominic

>Subject: Re: WH heads up on trade?

>

>I can sure

>

>----- Original Message -----

>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

>Sent: Friday, April 24, 2015 07:22 AM

>To: Wolfe, Emma; Williams, Dominic

>Subject: Re: WH heads up on trade?

>

>Minus BDB

>

>Dom - how did WH briefing go yesterday? Can you fill mayor in?

>

>Once that happens, I can tell Simas. Emma, do you want to tell Gaspard, >or should I?

>

>

>

>On 4/24/15, 7:16 AM, "Bill de Blasio" <[REDACTED]> wrote:

>

>>

>>What's the plan on this. We should alert patrick too

>>

>>

>>Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

>

From: John Del Cecato
To: BdB; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma
Subject: Re: WH heads up on trade?
Date: Friday, April 24, 2015 8:53:25 AM

All you need to do is try to reach Trumka, Mary Kay, and maybe 1 or 2 other labor leaders - only because it will make them feel special that they had a role in educating you on the negative effects of Fast Track

On 4/24/15, 8:44 AM, "Bill de Blasio" <[REDACTED]> wrote:

>
>Excellent. Let me know if I have to do anything
>
>-----Original Message-----
>From: Dom Williams
>To: Bill de Blasio
>To: Emma Wolfe
>To: John Del Cecato
>Subject: Re: WH heads up on trade?
>Sent: Apr 24, 2015 8:40 AM
>
>Emma, James, and I participated in a briefing call with WH policy staff >and Jarrett's staff, where they made their pitch for TPP and TPA. We >ended that briefing with a sharp reiteration of your skepticism on the >treaty and on fast track.
>
>John will call Simas today to give him heads up on Saturday's speech.
>
>Emma will follow up with Patrick today to let him know the play.
>
>----- Original Message -----
>From: Bill de Blasio [[mailto:\[REDACTED\]](mailto:[REDACTED])]
>Sent: Friday, April 24, 2015 07:16 AM
>To: Wolfe, Emma; John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmmedia.com>; Williams, Dominic >Subject: WH heads up on trade?
>
>
>What's the plan on this. We should alert patrick too
>
>
>Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T
>
>Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

From: John Del Cecato
To: Wolfe, Emma; B
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Williams, Dominic; Shorris, Anthony
Subject: Re: mansion tax
Date: Friday, April 24, 2015 10:31:06 AM

Re: the number of new tax increases on the wealthy that we're advocating/have advocated for, both locally & nationally...

Q: Are you obsessed with raising any tax you can get your hands on? I mean, mansion tax, income tax, carried interest loophole, offshore profits, capital gains, financial transactions - when it it ENOUGH?!

A: I make no bones about the fact that to address income inequality, and the disappearance of our middle class, we need to invest in things like education, infrastructure, and tax cuts for the working poor. And since there's no secret pot of money, we need new revenue. Instead of slashing one initiative that helps the middle class to fund another - robbing Peter to pay Paul — we need to ask those at the top to pay their fair share.

Q: But when does it end? Tax after tax on the rich? Won't they just leave the city - or leave the United States?

A: No, they won't. I think wealthy Americans of good conscience know that our tax code is skewed in their favor - that it rewards wealth instead of work. We need to reverse that, both because it's fair, and because it's the right way to build an economy that strengthens the middle class.

Q: But if you added up ALL of the tax increases you've proposed, it comes out to $XXX. Isn't that extreme?

A: First of all, the first rule of politics is that you never get anything you don't ask for. I have no illusions about how hard it will be to get even the most basic tax reform done. It's a battle. The billionaires and giant corporations have armies of lobbyists making the case for the status quo. I'm going to be a voice for the middle class and the working poor.

Second, what's extreme is how rigged the current system is right now - rigged on behalf of the rich and powerful. We want to change those rules - not to punish success, but to create more success stories.

On 4/24/15, 9:00 AM, "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>1. Good news. We may be landing the plane on 421a in terms of rebny; >alicia had v v positive convo with speyer yesterday and banks confirmed >last nite.
>
>2. Work just begins. Still a TON of work to do in albany but this starts >to line us up. But I don't want us to miss that this merely starts the >work up there, and it will be a long slog.
>
>3. Timing. This means we may come out on mansion tax in next 1-3 weeks;
>we will huddle internally and bring strategic recommendation.
>
>4. Policy note. We also need to further discuss the $$ amount of what we >are calling the "mansions" or residences post a discussion I had with >speaker ofc.

>

>5. National context. Voicing again - please consider in context of >national taxes we are calling for.

>

From: John Del Cecato
To: Klein, Monica; Walzak, Phil; Kadushin, Peter
Subject: Re: From MBdB: Jeb
Date: Friday, April 24, 2015 10:55:00 AM

I wouldn't put Bush in the Wisco remarks - would keep focus on Walker - but we should tee up reporters to ask about Bush in Q&A

From: <Klein>, Monica <MKlein@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Friday, April 24, 2015 at 9:45 AM
To: "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Kadushin, Peter" <pkadushin@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: From MBdB: Jeb

Frm MBdB --

Mayor should be prepped to T off on Jeb in Wisco (PK – for off T prep)

And he wants to see if we want to integrate anything about Bush into Wisco remarks

Thx

Jeb Bush: “Income Inequality Is Not Holding Americans Back”

NBC 4 - Chuck Scarborough - 6:10 pm

He hasn't thrown his hat into the presidential ring just yet, but former governor of Florida Jeb Bush is fielding questions like a candidate. Bush spoke at a Republican breakfast on the Upper East Side this morning. On his way out, he was asked what he thought of Mayor de Blasio and his goal of reducing income inequality. Bush says he's not a fan of the progressive agenda. Bush: “The challenge isn't that some people are successful and some people aren't. Taking from successful people to provide for those that aren't isn't the solution. The solution is how do you build capacity so people can achieve earned success.” When asked when he might officially enter the race for the White House, Bush responded, “Not today.”

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: Walzak, Phil; John Del Cecato \(jfdc@akpdmedia.com\)
Subject: FW: INCOMING: Fermino re: Wisconsin
Date: Friday, April 24, 2015 2:36:49 PM
Importance: High

How do you want to handle?

From: Mayor's Press Office
Sent: Friday, April 24, 2015 2:06 PM
To: @Incoming
Subject: INCOMING: Fermino re: Wisconsin

From: Fermino, Jennifer [<mailto:jfermino@nydailynews.com>]
Sent: Friday, April 24, 2015 1:56 PM
To: Mayor's Press Office
Subject:

Who is paying for Wisconsin trip? Who is going?

Jennifer Fermino
City Hall Bureau Chief
New York Daily News
(o) 212 210 1887
(c) 646 734 0320

This transmission is intended only for the use of the addressee and may contain information that is confidential, privileged and/or exempt from disclosure under applicable law. If you are not the intended recipient, you are hereby notified that any dissemination, distribution or copying of the information contained herein is strictly unauthorized and prohibited. If you have received this communication in error, please notify the sender immediately and delete this message. Thank you.

 (NJ)

From: Wolfe, Emma
To: B; Shorris, Anthony; Walzak, Phil; Williams, Dominic; Soliman, Sherif; Hagelgans, Andrea
Cc: FLONYC; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Re: Minimum wage
Date: Friday, April 24, 2015 6:43:16 PM

Got it

----- Original Message -----

From: B
Sent: Friday, April 24, 2015 06:41 PM
To: Shorris, Anthony; Walzak, Phil; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Soliman, Sherif; Hagelgans, Andrea
Cc: FLONYC; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: Minimum wage

I want to see a minimum wage maximization plan (yes, I know that sounds ironic). If we think referendum actually helps, include it. But either way, we need to fight hard for this over the next 2 months, and then again in '16 and '17. We should start doing rallies, working with allies, etc. I assume WFP would be a natural partner

----- Original Message -----

From: Shorris, Anthony
Sent: Thursday, April 23, 2015 10:20 AM
To: Walzak, Phil; B; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Soliman, Sherif; Hagelgans, Andrea
Cc: FLONYC; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: RE: Minimum wage

Me too -- let's find out what the legal structure would be for such a referendum (would it be binding? When would it have to be put on the ballot and by whom?). Can get started on that...

-----Original Message-----

From: Walzak, Phil
Sent: Thursday, April 23, 2015 10:19 AM
To: B; Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Soliman, Sherif; Hagelgans, Andrea
Cc: FLONYC; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com'
Subject: Re: Minimum wage

I like

----- Original Message -----

From: B
Sent: Thursday, April 23, 2015 09:00 AM
To: Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Soliman, Sherif; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea
Cc: FLONYC; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Minimum wage

I think OneNYC obligates us to fight more vividly for the minimum wage increase we believe in. Pls discuss no later than next planning mtg. We have now set a gutsy poverty reduction goal, we have to make it real thru the struggle in albany and in the court of public opinion. We need to raise the public demand level on this. One thought: call for a state referendum. May be the wrong idea, but worth considering. That we will win

From: John Del Cecato
To: BdB; Hayley Prim; Walzak, Phil
Cc: Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana; Jon Fromowitz
Subject: Re: Wisco speech
Date: Friday, April 24, 2015 7:31:40 PM

I'm free tomorrow AM - at least until 11am or so ET...

Adding Fromo too

On 4/24/15, 6:39 PM, "Bill de Blasio" <[REDACTED]> wrote:

>

>I need time in the AM to make the speech better: more passionate and >punchy. Pls figure out when I can do that and if I'm working with JDC or >someone else on this. Thanks

>

>Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

From: B
To: Carey, Michael
Cc: Leopold, Elana; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: AG
Date: Friday, April 24, 2015 7:44:42 PM

Just talked to him. Thanks. JDC/HP, pls download

----- Original Message -----

From: Carey, Michael
Sent: Friday, April 24, 2015 03:08 PM
To: B
Cc: Leopold, Elana
Subject: AG

Sir,

VP Gore texted me saying you called him last night. He is going to try your cell tonight around 6:30 pm your time

Michael Paul Carey
City Hall
New York, New York

From: John Del Cecato
To: Hayley Prim
Cc: Carey, Michael; Walzak, Phil; Leopold, Elana; Jon Fromowitz
Subject: Re: Wisco speech
Date: Saturday, April 25, 2015 6:44:50 AM

Cookie

On Apr 24, 2015, at 11:10 PM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:

Del Cecato he is going to call you around 830 am central time to discuss speech

On Friday, April 24, 2015, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

Yes - that would be great

On Apr 24, 2015, at 8:01 PM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:

Ok, can try to move his 930 call. Could you work with him until 10am central time?

On Friday, April 24, 2015, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

Yep. Family first. That's the way it is.

On Apr 24, 2015, at 7:51 PM, Carey, Michael <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

A kids BASEBALL GAME?!

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>

Date: Friday, April 24, 2015 at 7:42 PM

To: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>

Cc: Michael Carey <mpcarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Phil Walzak <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Elana Leopold <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Jon Fromowitz <jfromowitz@akpdmedia.com>

Subject: Re: Wisco speech

I'm gonna be a kid's baseball game, so no for me... But I could do earlier in the AM

From: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Date: Friday, April 24, 2015 at 7:39 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Phil Walzak <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Elana Leopold <ELEopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Jon Fromowitz <jfromowitz@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: Wisco speech

I'm talking 1115-12pm Milwaukee time. Does that work?

On Friday, April 24, 2015, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

That should be more than enough... That's 10:15am my time, right?

From: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Date: Friday, April 24, 2015 at 6:49 PM
To: "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Phil Walzak <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Elana Leopold <ELEopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: Wisco speech

Mayor off-- We can use some of call time tomorrow.

JDC, do you know how much time he needs? I have from 11:15am- 12pm unscheduled if you think that would be enough.

On Fri, Apr 24, 2015 at 6:39 PM, Bill de Blasio <[REDACTED]> wrote:

I need time in the AM to make the speech better: more passionate and punchy. Pls figure out when I can do that and if I'm working with JDC or someone else on this. Thanks

Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: FLONYC
To: B
Cc: Shorris, Anthony; Walzak, Phil; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Soliman, Sherif; Hagelgans, Andrea; jfdc@akpdmedia.com
Subject: Re: Minimum wage
Date: Saturday, April 25, 2015 7:48:29 AM

This is so right to do -- for many reasons. Love it.

#FLONYC
flo.nyc
Twitter@Chirlane

On Apr 24, 2015, at 6:41 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

I want to see a minimum wage maximization plan (yes, I know that sounds ironic). If we think referendum actually helps, include it. But either way, we need to fight hard for this over the next 2 months, and then again in '16 and '17. We should start doing rallies, working with allies, etc. I assume WFP would be a natural partner

----- Original Message -----

From: Shorris, Anthony
Sent: Thursday, April 23, 2015 10:20 AM
To: Walzak, Phil; B; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Soliman, Sherif; Hagelgans, Andrea
Cc: FLONYC; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: RE: Minimum wage

Me too -- let's find out what the legal structure would be for such a referendum (would it be binding? When would it have to be put on the ballot and by whom?). Can get started on that...

-----Original Message-----

From: Walzak, Phil
Sent: Thursday, April 23, 2015 10:19 AM
To: B; Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Soliman, Sherif; Hagelgans, Andrea
Cc: FLONYC; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com'
Subject: Re: Minimum wage

I like

----- Original Message -----

From: B

Sent: Thursday, April 23, 2015 09:00 AM
To: Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Soliman, Sherif; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea
Cc: FLONYC; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Minimum wage

I think OneNYC obligates us to fight more vividly for the minimum wage increase we believe in. Pls discuss no later than next planning mtg. We have now set a gutsy poverty reduction goal, we have to make it real thru the struggle in albany and in the court of public opinion. We need to raise the public demand level on this. One thought: call for a state referendum. May be the wrong idea, but worth considering. That we will win

From: Shorris, Anthony
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: Glen, Alicia; Wolfe, Emma; B; Williams, Dominic; Patchett, James; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Re: TPA
Date: Saturday, April 25, 2015 8:51:11 PM

Can we see the card? Might help focus our attention...

Anthony E. Shorris
First Deputy Mayor
City of New York
City Hall
New York, NY 10007
212-788-3191

> On Apr 25, 2015, at 8:28 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

>

> Hoping to send out TPA Palm Card on Monday at 9am

>

>

>

>> On Apr 25, 2015, at 6:40 PM, Glen, Alicia <AGlen@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>>

>> Ok

>>

>> ----- Original Message -----

>> From: Shorris, Anthony

>> Sent: Saturday, April 25, 2015 06:26 PM

>> To: Glen, Alicia

>> Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Wolfe, Emma; B; Williams, Dominic; Patchett, James; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea

>> Subject: Re: TPA

>>

>> And we'll be doing the same thing for mass transit as well -- likely supporting a local revenue stream (some day) to offset inadequate Federal support.

>>

>>

>>

>> Anthony E. Shorris

>> First Deputy Mayor

>> City of New York

>> City Hall

>> New York, NY 10007

>> 212-788-3191

>>

>>

>>> On Apr 25, 2015, at 6:11 PM, Glen, Alicia <AGlen@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>>>

>>> Agree, but we could argue that for everything.... Particularly mass transit.

>>>

>>> ----- Original Message -----

>>> From: Shorris, Anthony

>>> Sent: Saturday, April 25, 2015 05:36 PM

>>> To: Glen, Alicia

>>> Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Wolfe, Emma; B; Williams, Dominic; Patchett,

James; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea

>>> Subject: Re: TPA

>>>

>>> As long as the Federal government continues to abandon the affordable housing agenda, cities and states have no choice but to act on their own. Not perfect, but we have no choice right now.

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>> Anthony E. Shorris

>>> First Deputy Mayor

>>> City of New York

>>> City Hall

>>> New York, NY 10007

>>> 212-788-3191

>>>

>>>

>>>> On Apr 25, 2015, at 4:23 PM, Glen, Alicia <AGlen@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>>>>

>>>> We are close to sending you guys our thoughts.

>>>> On Tony's point about local vs national. The obvious trap, particularly for housing, is that the federal govt used to be, and should be, in the housing business bc it is fundamental to economic fairness and bc the mortgage interest deduction is the single biggest tax expenditure there is so it would be off not to address that as a national housing policy issue.

>>>>

>>>> ----- Original Message -----

>>>> From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

>>>> Sent: Saturday, April 25, 2015 03:27 PM

>>>> To: Shorris, Anthony; Wolfe, Emma

>>>> Cc: B; Williams, Dominic; Glen, Alicia; Patchett, James; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea

>>>> Subject: Re: TPA

>>>>

>>>> I like that, Tony. And it's very true.

>>>>

>>>>> On 4/25/15, 3:14 PM, "Shorris, Anthony" <AShorris@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>>>>>

>>>>> Maybe there is a line to be drawn here that distinguishes between local >>>>> tax hikes that need to be very few and very targeted at local needs (like >>>>> for pre-k or affordable housing) versus national tax policy that should >>>>> be and has always been the leading tool in addressing inequality. As a >>>>> Mayor, BDB has been very limited in suggesting raising any taxes locally
>>>>> -- and he always will be -- but we all know real inequality must be fixed >>>>> by national policy so as not to disadvantage any one community. Is that >>>>> too subtle, even if it's true?

>>>>>

>>>>>

>>>>>

>>>>> Anthony E. Shorris

>>>>> First Deputy Mayor

>>>>> City of New York

>>>>> City Hall

>>>>> New York, NY 10007

>>>>> 212-788-3191

>>>>>

>>>>>

>>>>>> On Apr 25, 2015, at 3:10 PM, Wolfe, Emma <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>

>>>>>> wrote:

>>>>>>

>>>>>> I've weighed in since mansion tax is a possibility. Happy to get on >>>>>> phone or lay out argument more, but also understand that I'm in minority >>>>>> on this one.

>>>>> Best,
>>>>> Local yokel emma
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>> On Apr 25, 2015, at 3:08 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
>>>>> wrote:
>>>>>
>>>>> Any word on this?
>>>>>
>>>>>> On 4/24/15, 8:45 AM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
>>>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>>>> Need a unified response from you guys before we cross the Rubicon. We >>>>>> need this to be in lots of hand on Monday so we need to figure out how >>>>>> we're setting up
>>>>>>
>>>>>> -----Original Message-----
>>>>>> From: John Del Cecato
>>>>>> To: Bill de Blasio
>>>>>> Subject: TPA
>>>>>> Sent: Apr 24, 2015 8:37 AM
>>>>>>
>>>>>> Are you comfortable with me sending out The Progressive Agenda with >>>>>> "discussion draft" bullets at the end, far & wide, at this point?
>>>>>> Alicia & her team are still preparing their response on some of the >>>>>> tax >>>>>> stuff - but as we discussed, I think we can always nix something >>>>>> before >>>>>> the "final-final" document is approved, if need be...
>>>>>> On capital gains, remember that Obama called for raising that tax to >>>>>> 28% >>>>>> back in his SOTU address... That's not a very far leap to treating it >>>>>> like >>>>>> earned income...
>>>>>> FWIW, here's what Center for American Progress had to say about FTT >>>>>> two >>>>>> full years ago... Van Hollen & Pelosi (not to mention Harkin) give it >>>>>> instant credibility - as least among progressives...
>>>>>> 5 Reasons the World Is Catching on to the Financial Transaction Tax
>>>>>> SOURCE: AP/ Yves Logghe
>>>>>> Campaigners and European trade unions dress as Robin Hood while >>>>>> calling >>>>>> on European Union leaders to go ahead with a financial transaction >>>>>> tax to >>>>>> mobilize money to help poor people hit by the economic crisis, in >>>>>> front >>>>>> of the European Council building in Brussels on May 23, 2012.
>>>>>> By Adam Hersh and Jennifer Erickson | February 25, 2013
>>>>>> PRINT: SHARE: It has been more than 70 years since John Maynard >>>>>> Keynes >>>>>> wrote about the value of a financial transaction tax in "mitigating
>>>>>> the >>>>>> predominance of speculation over enterprise in the United States." A >>>>>> financial transaction tax works by levying a miniscule fee on the >>>>>> estimated $2.9 trillion of daily financial activity through the >>>>>> trading >>>>>> of stocks, bonds, and derivatives in U.S. financial markets, based on >>>>>> our >>>>>> analysis. The tiny tax makes some of the most speculative unproductive >>>>>>> trading unprofitable, thus steadying markets and promoting real >>>>>>> investment while raising much-needed revenues. Though many countries >>>>>>> around the world already have a financial transaction tax in place,

>>>>>>> the
>>>>>>> United States does not yet levy such a fee on trading.
>>>>>>> While the idea of a modest financial transaction tax—or FTT, as it is >>>>>>> often known—has been around for a long time, with budget balances and >>>>>>> economic growth strained in the aftermath of the Great Recession >>>>>>> policymakers around the world are taking a new look at the tax.
>>>>>>> Below are five reasons why the world is catching on to the financial >>>>>>> transaction tax as a smart policy tool.
>>>>>>> A financial transaction tax would bring in much-needed revenue The >>>>>>> U.S. >>>>>>> government is currently operating at its lowest level of revenues in >>>>>>> more >>>>>>> than 60 years. A 2010 report from the International Monetary Fund >>>>>>> identifies the financial sector of the economy—particularly in the >>>>>>> United >>>>>>> States—as substantially undertaxed.
>>>>>>> Even a tiny financial transaction tax would raise tens of billions of >>>>>>> dollars in much-needed revenue. A tax applied at a very low rate—for >>>>>>> example, a 0.117 percent tax on stocks and stock-options trading, a >>>>>>> 0.002 >>>>>>> percent tax for bonds, and a 0.005 percent tax for futures, swaps, and >>>>>>> other derivatives trading—would raise an estimated $50 billion a year, >>>>>>> according to our calculations. To put that amount into perspective, >>>>>>> $50 >>>>>>> billion in essence pays for all of America’s veterans health services, >>>>>>> which ran to $50.6 billion in 2012. Historical evidence and economic >>>>>>> theory show that financial transaction taxes have the potential to >>>>>>> raise >>>>>>> substantial revenues without impeding the function of capital >>>>>>> markets. By >>>>>>> keeping constant the relative transaction costs of trading in >>>>>>> different >>>>>>> markets, a financial transaction tax can raise revenues without >>>>>>> distorting market behavior.
>>>>>>> Business and civic leaders support a financial transaction tax The >>>>>>> idea >>>>>>> of a financial transaction tax isn’t new, but the chorus singing its >>>>>>> praises is growing every day—from leading economists such as Nobel >>>>>>> Prize
>>>>>>> winners Joseph Stiglitz and Paul Krugman to entrepreneurs such as Bill >>>>>>> Gates and Marc Cuban, to financial leaders the likes of John Bogle, >>>>>>> founder of the mutual-fund giant Vanguard Group. The financial >>>>>>> transaction tax also has the support of unions for nurses and other >>>>>>> health care professionals and service-sector workers.
>>>>>>> Those in the financial sector have an obvious stake in any new tax on >>>>>>> their business. But even many within the industry are making the case >>>>>>> for >>>>>>> a financial transaction tax. John Fullerton, former managing director >>>>>>> at >>>>>>> JPMorgan and current president at the Capital Institute, has said, “A >>>>>>> modest financial transaction tax of less than 1 percent would serve >>>>>>> as a >>>>>>> remarkably efficient tool to achieve needed reform.” Bogle wrote >>>>>>> about a >>>>>>> transaction tax in his book, Clash of the Cultures: “Taxes can be >>>>>>> brought >>>>>>> back into play, replacing some of the frictional costs of investing

>>>>>>> that >>>>>>> served to moderate the speculation that prevailed in an earlier era.”
>>>>>>> Countless other financial professionals will concede, in the >>>>>>> anonymity of >>>>>>> polite company, that a modest and well-crafted tax on financial >>>>>>> transactions would have negligible impact on the dynamism of capital >>>>>>> markets, and might even help eliminate some of the more unsavory >>>>>>> financial practices that stack the deck in favor of big investors and >>>>>>> encourage unhealthy risk taking that can put the whole economy, as >>>>>>> well
>>>>>>> as taxpayers, on the hook for the costs.
>>>>>>> A financial transaction tax helps stabilize volatile financial >>>>>>> markets An >>>>>>> astounding share of transactions on financial markets today consists >>>>>>> of >>>>>>> high-frequency trades made on the millisecond by computers programmed >>>>>>> with sophisticated algorithms. The computers make large-volume trades >>>>>>> based on tiny changes in prices—fractions of a penny—and, in so doing, >>>>>>> reap tremendous trading profits. While economic theory might suggest >>>>>>> that >>>>>>> this would lead to slightly more efficient financial markets, the >>>>>>> Bank of >>>>>>> England’s Andrew Haldane has shown that “high-frequency trading >>>>>>> appears >>>>>>> to have amplified” the markets’ erratic undulations.
>>>>>>> High-frequency trading is sometimes associated with the phenomenon of >>>>>>> “flash crashes,” where market prices fall precipitously due to a >>>>>>> perfect >>>>>>> storm of preprogrammed computer trading. The largest flash crash to >>>>>>> date >>>>>>> came on May 6, 2010, when the Dow Jones Industrial Average dropped by >>>>>>> almost 10 percent from the opening level, and literally billions of >>>>>>> dollars in market value disappeared from the stock market in a matter
>>>>>>> of >>>>>>> minutes. Prices rebounded over the next week, though investors were >>>>>>> rattled and withdrew $137 billion from the market in the subsequent >>>>>>> months. Since then, there have been many more mini flash crashes with >>>>>>> no
>>>>>>> sign of abatement.
>>>>>>> Flash crashes are just one example of how financial market power and >>>>>>> high-frequency trading combine to create unfair and destabilizing >>>>>>> effects >>>>>>> in financial markets. Even a conservative financial transaction tax >>>>>>> would >>>>>>> make these types of trades unprofitable by levying a fee for every >>>>>>> transaction, thus eliminating this risky behavior from our markets.
>>>>>>> A financial transaction tax incentivizes investment for real growth
>>>>>>> The
>>>>>>> financial transaction tax by design increases transaction costs of >>>>>>> financial trading, thereby encouraging investors to hold financial >>>>>>> assets >>>>>>> in their investment portfolios for longer periods of time instead of >>>>>>> trading often. Investors who expect to hold stocks longer tend to pay >>>>>>> more attention to the enterprise and fundamental value of the stock >>>>>>> rather than aiming to leverage capital and computational power to >>>>>>> exploit >>>>>>> market loopholes for big short-term profits. A longer-term outlook for >>>>>>> investors and more stable financial markets mean more investment, more >>>>>>> jobs, and higher productivity in the real economy—all of which drives >>>>>>> growth.

>>>>>>> By changing the incentives that investors face in U.S. financial >>>>>>> markets,
>>>>>>> a tax on financial trading will shift behavior toward investment for
>>>>>>> the >>>>>>> long term, which is better for financing businesses and for stable >>>>>>> sustained economic growth.
>>>>>>> Many countries already have a financial transaction tax The standard >>>>>>> stalling tactic for bringing a financial transaction tax to the United >>>>>>> States is saying that we should wait until other countries do it >>>>>>> first.
>>>>>>> But financial transaction taxes already operate in at least 23 >>>>>>> countries >>>>>>> around the world—including in international financial centers such as
>>>>>>> the >>>>>>> United Kingdom, Switzerland, Hong Kong, and Japan—and that number is >>>>>>> about to grow.
>>>>>>> On January 22, 2013, 11 of the European Union’s 27 member countries, >>>>>>> including France, Germany, and Italy, indicated their intention to >>>>>>> initiate a financial transaction tax. As the policy nears >>>>>>> implementation, >>>>>>> other EU countries are certain to get on board. Of the world’s major >>>>>>> financial centers, only the United States has no tax on financial >>>>>>> trading.[1]
>>>>>>> As more European countries implement such a tax, the United States >>>>>>> could >>>>>>> easily jump on board and do the same, becoming part of a global >>>>>>> financial >>>>>>> transaction tax system. Globalizing the tax not only would greatly >>>>>>> reinforce its effectiveness and benefits, but would also avoid >>>>>>> concerns >>>>>>> about market migration and efforts to evade regulation in financial >>>>>>> havens. Now would be a smart time for politicians in Congress to also >>>>>>> rethink the benefits that a tax on financial transactions could bring >>>>>>> to
>>>>>>> our economy.
>>>>>>> Adam S. Hersh is an Economist at the Center for American Progress.
>>>>>>> Jennifer Erickson is the Director of Competitiveness and Economic >>>>>>> Growth
>>>>>>> at the Center.
>>>>

From: Anthony Shorris
To: BdB
Cc: John Del Cecato; Alicia Glen; Patchett, James; Dom Williams; Dean Fuleihan; Chirlane McCray
Subject: Re: Financial transaction tax
Date: Sunday, April 26, 2015 2:58:19 PM

I am comfortable road-testing this revenue source too -- again, only at a national level and ideally in alignment with other major financial trading nations, many of which have some version of this tax already.

On Apr 26, 2015, at 1:27 PM, Bill de Blasio <[\[REDACTED\]](#)> wrote:

Learned panel: what say you about the analysis below? If you agree, pls indicate. If not, pls indicate and explain why. Thanks
Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Date: Fri, 24 Apr 2015 12:37:29 +0000
To: Bill de Blasio <[\[REDACTED\]](#)>
Subject: TPA

Are you comfortable with me sending out The Progressive Agenda with "discussion draft" bullets at the end, far & wide, at this point?

Alicia & her team are still preparing their response on some of the tax stuff - but as we discussed, I think we can always nix something before the "final-final" document is approved, if need be...

On capital gains, remember that Obama called for raising that tax to 28% back in his SOTU address... That's not a very far leap to treating it like earned income...

FWIW, here's what Center for American Progress had to say about FTT two full years ago... Van Hollen & Pelosi (not to mention Harkin) give it instant credibility - as least among progressives...

5 Reasons the World Is Catching on to the Financial Transaction Tax

SOURCE: AP/ Yves Logghe

Campaigners and European trade unions dress as Robin Hood

while calling on European Union leaders to go ahead with a financial transaction tax to mobilize money to help poor people hit by the economic crisis, in front of the European Council building in Brussels on May 23, 2012.

By Adam Hersh and Jennifer Erickson | February 25, 2013

PRINT:

1.

SHARE:

-
-
-
-

It has been more than 70 years since John Maynard Keynes wrote about the value of a financial transaction tax in “mitigating the predominance of speculation over enterprise in the United States.” A financial transaction tax works by levying a miniscule fee on the estimated $2.9 trillion of daily financial activity through the trading of stocks, bonds, and derivatives in U.S. financial markets, based on our analysis. The tiny tax makes some of the most speculative unproductive trading unprofitable, thus steadying markets and promoting real investment while raising much-needed revenues. Though many countries around the world already have a financial transaction tax in place, the United States does not yet levy such a fee on trading.

While the idea of a modest financial transaction tax—or FTT, as it is often known—has been around for a long time, with budget balances and economic growth strained in the aftermath of the Great Recession policymakers around the world are taking a new look at the tax.

Below are five reasons why the world is catching on to the financial transaction tax as a smart policy tool.

A financial transaction tax would bring in much-needed revenue

The U.S. government is currently operating at its lowest level of revenues in more than 60 years. A 2010 report from the International Monetary Fund identifies the financial sector of the economy—particularly in the United States—as substantially undertaxed.

Even a tiny financial transaction tax would raise tens of billions of dollars in much-needed revenue. A tax applied at a very low rate—for example, a 0.117 percent tax on stocks and stock-options trading, a 0.002 percent tax for bonds, and a 0.005 percent tax for futures, swaps, and other derivatives trading—would raise an estimated $50 billion a year, according to our calculations. To put that amount into perspective, $50 billion in essence pays for all of America’s veterans health services, which ran to $50.6 billion in 2012. Historical evidence and economic theory show that financial transaction taxes have the potential to raise substantial revenues without impeding the function of capital markets. By keeping constant the relative transaction costs of trading in different markets, a financial transaction tax can raise revenues without distorting market behavior.

Business and civic leaders support a financial transaction tax

The idea of a financial transaction tax isn’t new, but the chorus singing its praises is growing every day—from leading economists such as Nobel Prize winners Joseph Stiglitz and Paul Krugman to entrepreneurs such as Bill Gates and Marc Cuban, to financial leaders the likes of John Bogle, founder of the mutual-fund giant Vanguard Group. The financial transaction tax also has the support of unions for nurses and other health care professionals and service-sector workers.

Those in the financial sector have an obvious stake in any new tax on their business. But even many within the industry are making the case for a financial transaction tax. John Fullerton, former managing director at JPMorgan and current president at the Capital Institute, has said, “A modest financial transaction tax of less than 1 percent would serve as a remarkably efficient tool to achieve needed reform.” Bogle wrote about a transaction tax in his book, Clash of the Cultures: “Taxes can be brought back into play, replacing some of the frictional costs of investing that served to moderate the speculation that prevailed in an earlier era.”

Countless other financial professionals will concede, in the anonymity of polite company, that a modest and well-crafted tax on financial transactions would have negligible impact on the dynamism of capital markets, and might even help eliminate some of the more unsavory financial practices that stack the deck in favor of big investors and encourage unhealthy risk taking that can put the whole economy, as well as taxpayers, on the hook for the costs.

A financial transaction tax helps stabilize volatile financial markets

An astounding share of transactions on financial markets today consists of high-frequency trades made on the millisecond by computers programmed with sophisticated algorithms. The computers make large-volume trades based on tiny changes in prices—fractions of a penny—and, in so doing, reap tremendous trading profits. While economic theory might suggest that this would lead to slightly more efficient financial markets, the Bank of England's Andrew Haldane has shown that “high-frequency trading appears to have amplified” the markets' erratic undulations.

High-frequency trading is sometimes associated with the phenomenon of “flash crashes,” where market prices fall precipitously due to a perfect storm of preprogrammed computer trading. The largest flash crash to date came on May 6, 2010, when the Dow Jones Industrial Average dropped by almost 10 percent from the opening level, and literally billions of dollars in market value disappeared from the stock market in a matter of minutes. Prices rebounded over the next week, though investors were rattled and withdrew \$137 billion from the market in the subsequent months. Since then, there have been many more mini flash crashes with no sign of abatement.

Flash crashes are just one example of how financial market power and high-frequency trading combine to create unfair and destabilizing effects in financial markets. Even a conservative financial transaction tax would make these types of trades unprofitable by levying a fee for every transaction, thus eliminating this risky behavior from our markets.

A financial transaction tax incentivizes investment for real growth

The financial transaction tax by design increases transaction costs of financial trading, thereby encouraging investors to hold financial assets in their investment portfolios for longer periods of time instead of trading often. Investors who expect to hold stocks longer tend to pay more attention to the enterprise and fundamental value of the stock rather than aiming to leverage capital and computational power to exploit market loopholes for big short-term profits. A longer-term outlook for investors and more stable financial markets mean more investment, more jobs, and higher productivity in the real economy—all of which drives growth.

By changing the incentives that investors face in U.S. financial markets, a tax on financial trading will shift behavior toward investment for the long term, which is better for financing businesses and for stable sustained economic growth.

Many countries already have a financial transaction tax

The standard stalling tactic for bringing a financial transaction tax to the United States is saying that we should wait until other countries do it first. But financial transaction taxes already operate in at least 23 countries around the world—including in international financial centers such as the United Kingdom, Switzerland, Hong Kong, and Japan—and that number is about to grow.

On January 22, 2013, 11 of the European Union's 27 member countries, including France, Germany, and Italy, indicated their intention to initiate a financial transaction tax. As the policy nears implementation, other EU countries are certain to get on board. Of the world's major financial centers, only the United States has no tax on financial trading.[1]

As more European countries implement such a tax, the United States could easily jump on board and do the same, becoming part of a global financial transaction tax system. Globalizing the tax not only would greatly reinforce its effectiveness and benefits, but would also avoid concerns about market migration and efforts to evade regulation in financial havens. Now would be a smart time for politicians in Congress to also rethink the benefits that a tax on financial transactions could bring to our economy.

Adam S. Hersh is an Economist at the Center for American Progress. Jennifer Erickson is the Director of Competitiveness and Economic Growth at the Center.

From: [REDACTED]
To: Anthony Shorris
Cc: BdB; John Del Cecato; Patchett, James; Dom Williams; Dean Fuleihan; Chirlane McCray
Subject: Re: Financial transaction tax
Date: Sunday, April 26, 2015 3:56:38 PM

Just to reiterate that what the EU is proposing, even if adopted, may not be enforceable. and what the UK does have right now is only retail tax. It literally does not apply to market makers.

On Apr 26, 2015, at 3:46 PM, Anthony Shorris <[REDACTED]> wrote:

Agree we need to be sensitive here. I thought your memo made some useful points (see below) -- all of which support the notion that we should propose that this has to be a national plan tightly aligned with a global agenda.

o Global: Approximately 40 countries have FTTs, most notably: Belgium, France, Switzerland, Singapore, India, and Brazil.

§ European Commission FTT is a proposal that would be implemented by January 1, 2016: 0.1% on stocks and bonds and 0.01% on derivatives; biggest opponent is UK given strength of London's financial sector.

§ UK has a Stamp Duty Reserve Tax – 0.5% tax on purchases of shares of UK based companies. However, there is relief for intermediaries such as market makers and large banks that are members of a qualifying exchange (they are obligated to provide liquidity, and are therefore exempt). As such, over 70% of transactions are exempt from the tax.

On Apr 26, 2015, at 3:38 PM, [REDACTED] wrote:

Of all of the issues being addressed/discussed in TPA, this is the most important and troubling one for me. If we advocate for FTT and not make it contingent on the European Union passing (and being able to enforce - which is a real question that need to be answered) it is local political suicide. Without doubt, ny banks and hedge funds and exchanges will move their trading operations to London and that will impact out employment numbers and our tax base.

No one believes the UK govt would pass an FTT precisely bc they know how well positioned they are to maintain dominance as the rest if the European smaller exchanges shrink and the City continues to grown as a percentage of the UK tax and eminent base.

So I really really think that as he mayor of NYC (as opposed to being a national democratic leader), we should stay silent on this issue or at least link it to London, bc this is not a "risk" of sector migration, it is a sure thing.

On Apr 26, 2015, at 1:27 PM, "Bill de Blasio"
<[REDACTED]> wrote:

Learned panel: what say you about the analysis below? If you agree, pls indicate. If not, pls indicate and explain why. Thanks
Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Date: Fri, 24 Apr 2015 12:37:29 +0000
To: Bill de Blasio<[REDACTED]>
Subject: TPA

Are you comfortable with me sending out The Progressive Agenda with "discussion draft" bullets at the end, far & wide, at this point?

Alicia & her team are still preparing their response on some of the tax stuff - but as we discussed, I think we can always nix something before the "final-final" document is approved, if need be...

On capital gains, remember that Obama called for raising that tax to 28% back in his SOTU address... That's not a very far leap to treating it like earned income...

FWIW, here's what Center for American Progress had to say about FTT two full years ago... Van Hollen & Pelosi (not to mention Harkin) give it instant credibility - as least among progressives...

5 Reasons the World Is Catching on to the Financial Transaction Tax

SOURCE: AP/ Yves Logghe

Campaigners and European trade unions dress as Robin Hood while calling on European Union leaders to go ahead with a financial transaction tax to mobilize money to help poor people hit by the economic crisis, in front of the European Council building in Brussels on May 23, 2012.

By Adam Hersh and Jennifer Erickson | February 25, 2013

PRINT:

1.

SHARE:

-
-
-
-

It has been more than 70 years since John Maynard Keynes wrote about the value of a financial transaction tax in “mitigating the predominance of speculation over enterprise in the United States.” A financial transaction tax works by levying a miniscule fee on the estimated $2.9 trillion of daily financial activity through the trading of stocks, bonds, and derivatives in U.S. financial markets, based on our analysis. The tiny tax makes some of the most speculative unproductive trading unprofitable, thus steadying markets and promoting real investment while raising much-needed revenues. Though many countries around the world already have a financial transaction tax in place, the United States does not yet levy such a fee on trading.

While the idea of a modest financial transaction tax—or FTT, as it is often known—has been around for a long time, with budget balances and economic growth strained in the aftermath of the Great Recession policymakers around the world are taking a new look at the tax.

Below are five reasons why the world is catching on to the financial transaction tax as a smart policy tool.

A financial transaction tax would bring in much-needed revenue

The U.S. government is currently operating at its lowest level of revenues in more than 60 years. A 2010 report from the International Monetary Fund identifies the financial sector of the economy—particularly in the United States—as substantially undertaxed.

Even a tiny financial transaction tax would raise tens of billions of dollars in much-needed revenue. A tax applied at a very low rate—for example, a 0.117 percent tax on stocks and stock-options trading, a 0.002 percent tax for bonds, and a 0.005 percent tax for futures, swaps, and other derivatives trading—would raise an estimated $50 billion a year, according to our calculations. To put that amount into perspective, $50 billion in essence pays for all of America’s veterans health services, which ran to $50.6 billion in 2012. Historical evidence and economic theory show that financial transaction taxes have the potential to raise substantial revenues without impeding the function of capital markets. By keeping constant the relative transaction costs of trading in different markets, a financial transaction tax can raise revenues without distorting market behavior.

Business and civic leaders support a financial transaction tax

The idea of a financial transaction tax isn't new, but the chorus singing its praises is growing every day—from leading economists such as Nobel Prize winners Joseph Stiglitz and Paul Krugman to entrepreneurs such as Bill Gates and Marc Cuban, to financial leaders the likes of John Bogle, founder of the mutual-fund giant Vanguard Group. The financial transaction tax also has the support of unions for nurses and other health care professionals and service-sector workers.

Those in the financial sector have an obvious stake in any new tax on their business. But even many within the industry are making the case for a financial transaction tax. John Fullerton, former managing director at JPMorgan and current president at the Capital Institute, has said, “A modest financial transaction tax of less than 1 percent would serve as a remarkably efficient tool to achieve needed reform.” Bogle wrote about a transaction tax in his book, Clash of the Cultures: “Taxes can be brought back into play, replacing some of the frictional costs of investing that served to moderate the speculation that prevailed in an earlier era.”

Countless other financial professionals will concede, in the anonymity of polite company, that a modest and well-crafted tax on financial transactions would have negligible impact on the dynamism of capital markets, and might even help eliminate some of the more unsavory financial practices that stack the deck in favor of big investors and encourage unhealthy risk taking that can put the whole economy, as well as taxpayers, on the hook for the costs.

A financial transaction tax helps stabilize volatile financial markets

An astounding share of transactions on financial markets today consists of high-frequency trades made on the millisecond by computers programmed with sophisticated algorithms. The computers make large-volume trades based on tiny changes in prices—fractions of a penny—and, in so doing, reap tremendous trading profits. While economic theory might suggest that this would lead to slightly more efficient financial markets, the Bank of England's Andrew Haldane has shown that “high-frequency trading appears to have amplified” the markets’ erratic undulations.

High-frequency trading is sometimes associated with the phenomenon of “flash crashes,” where market prices fall precipitously due to a perfect storm of preprogrammed computer trading. The largest flash crash to date came on May 6, 2010, when the Dow Jones Industrial Average dropped by almost 10 percent from the opening level, and literally billions of dollars in market value disappeared from the stock market in a matter of minutes. Prices rebounded over the next week, though investors were rattled and withdrew \$137 billion from the market in the subsequent months. Since then, there have been many more mini flash crashes with no sign of abatement.

Flash crashes are just one example of how financial market power and high-frequency trading combine to create unfair and destabilizing effects in financial markets. Even a conservative financial transaction tax would make these types of trades unprofitable by levying a fee for every transaction, thus eliminating this risky behavior from our markets.

A financial transaction tax incentivizes investment for real growth

The financial transaction tax by design increases transaction costs of financial trading, thereby encouraging investors to hold financial assets in their investment portfolios for longer periods of time instead of trading often. Investors who expect to hold stocks longer tend to pay more attention to the enterprise and fundamental value of the stock rather than aiming to leverage capital and computational power to exploit market loopholes for big short-term profits. A longer-term outlook for investors and more stable financial markets mean more investment, more jobs, and higher productivity in the real economy—all of which drives growth.

By changing the incentives that investors face in U.S. financial markets, a tax on financial trading will shift behavior toward investment for the long term, which is better for financing businesses and for stable sustained economic growth.

Many countries already have a financial transaction tax

The standard stalling tactic for bringing a financial transaction tax to the United States is saying that we should wait until other countries do it first. But financial transaction taxes already operate in at least 23 countries around the world—including in international financial centers such as the United Kingdom, Switzerland, Hong Kong, and Japan—and that number is about to grow.

On January 22, 2013, 11 of the European Union's 27 member countries, including France, Germany, and Italy, indicated their intention to initiate a financial transaction tax. As the policy nears implementation, other EU countries are certain to get on board. Of the world's major financial centers, only the United States has no tax on financial trading.[1]

As more European countries implement such a tax, the United States could easily jump on board and do the same, becoming part of a global financial transaction tax system. Globalizing the tax not only would greatly reinforce its effectiveness and benefits, but would also avoid concerns about market migration and efforts to evade regulation in financial havens. Now would be a smart time for politicians in Congress to also rethink the benefits that a tax on financial transactions could bring to our economy.

Adam S. Hersh is an Economist at the Center for American Progress. Jennifer Erickson is the Director of Competitiveness and Economic Growth at the Center.

From: [REDACTED]
To: Dom Williams
Cc: Shorris, Anthony; Patchett, James; Wolfe, Emma; jfdc@akpdmedia.com; [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: Financial transaction tax
Date: Sunday, April 26, 2015 7:50:32 PM

Doing all of this by email seems difficult and will make it hard for us to tell the mayor we have consensus
Wouldn't it make sense to spend half an hour tomorrow going through what are very complicated policies?

On Apr 26, 2015, at 7:43 PM, Dom Williams <[REDACTED]> wrote:

The Obama administration proposed paying for the transportation bill by doing a repatriation of overseas earning
They would charge a 14% rate on repatriated earnings, raising $238 billion in revenue for the US that would be reinvested in transportation. While not monolithic, there's substantial support for funding the transportation bill through repatriation.

Supporting that source for the transportation bill would be inconsistent with spending the tax change that Tony is proposing.

The tax treatment for sending jobs overseas is separate, and related in principle, but of minimal value from a revenue-raising perspective.

On Sun, Apr 26, 2015 at 7:06 PM, Shorris, Anthony
<AShorris@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Let's be clear on what I thought we are proposing. What I have been pressing for is repealing a loophole in the corporate tax law that allows US multi-national companies to defer payment of any corporate tax owed on profits made by their overseas subsidiaries until those profits are "repatriated" -- which is often never. This change has been estimated by CTJ to add some $60 billion a year ($600 over ten years plus $150 billion one-time spin-up from later years) by eliminating some of the worst of the Cayman Island and Bermuda tax games companies play to avoid taxes, and the incentive that current law provides for companies to shift activity and jobs overseas.

Why so what we are proposing here inconsistent with what we are suggesting for the transportation bill?

Anthony E. Shorris
First Deputy Mayor
City of New York
City Hall
New York, NY 10007
212-788-3191

On Apr 26, 2015, at 4:29 PM, Patchett, James
<JPatchett@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

This was the language that had been aged to: "Invest more funding in transportation infrastructure by generating more revenue, including through repatriation of US corporate assets overseas"

From: Wolfe, Emma
Sent: Sunday, April 26, 2015 04:24 PM
To: Patchett, James; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Shorris, Anthony
Cc: 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>;
[REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
[REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Subject: RE: Financial transaction tax

Thank you. Can we reconcile -- do you or Dom have language to suggest that would fix this?

From: Patchett, James
Sent: Sunday, April 26, 2015 4:22 PM
To: [REDACTED] Shorris, Anthony
Cc: 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com'; [REDACTED]
[REDACTED] Wolfe, Emma
Subject: Re: Financial transaction tax

-BdB and CMC and +Emma

As relates to the broader TPA, I just want to flag again that we may have a left hand /right hand problem on the way the current document characterizes additional revenues from "companies shipping jobs overseas."

Emma's team has been working with a broad coalition that includes business leaders for the DC day of action on funding for transportation funding. They have agreed to stand with us to call for more transportation funding paid for with additional revenues from overseas corporate operations. However, the way John's document characterizes the "shipping jobs overseas" would erode that support and is inconsistent with discussions to date. Just want to make sure that's part of the calculus since I believe folks felt speaking with one voice would be more powerful on that specific topic.

From: Anthony Shorris [[mailto:\[REDACTED\]](mailto:[REDACTED])]
Sent: Sunday, April 26, 2015 03:46 PM

To: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Cc: BdB; John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmmedia.com>; Patchett, James;
Dom Williams <[REDACTED]> Dean Fuleihan
<[REDACTED]> Chirlane McCray
Subject: Re: Financial transaction tax

Agree we need to be sensitive here. I thought your memo made some useful points (see below) -- all of which support the notion that we should propose that this has to be a national plan tightly aligned with a global agenda.

o Global: Approximately 40 countries have FTTs, most notably: Belgium, France, Switzerland, Singapore, India, and Brazil.

§ European Commission FTT is a proposal that would be implemented by January 1, 2016: 0.1% on stocks and bonds and 0.01% on derivatives; biggest opponent is UK given strength of London's financial sector.

§ UK has a Stamp Duty Reserve Tax – 0.5% tax on purchases of shares of UK based companies. However, there is relief for intermediaries such as market makers and large banks that are members of a qualifying exchange (they are obligated to provide liquidity, and are therefore exempt). As such, over 70% of transactions are exempt from the tax.

On Apr 26, 2015, at 3:38 PM, [REDACTED] wrote:

Of all of the issues being addressed/discussed in TPA, this is the most important and troubling one for me. If we advocate for FTT and not make it contingent on the European Union passing (and being able to enforce - which is a real question that need to be answered) it is local political suicide. Without doubt, ny banks and hedge funds and exchanges will move their trading operations to London and that will impact out employment numbers and our tax base. No one believes the UK govt would pass an FTT precisely bc they know how well positioned they are to maintain dominance as the rest if the European smaller exchanges shrink and the City continues to grown as a percentage of the UK tax and eminent base. So I really really think that as he mayor of NYC (as opposed to being a national democratic leader), we should stay silent on this issue or at least link it to London, bc this is not a "risk" of sector migration, it is a sure thing.

On Apr 26, 2015, at 1:27 PM, "Bill de Blasio"

<[REDACTED]> wrote:

Learned panel: what say you about the analysis below? If you agree, pls indicate. If not, pls indicate and explain why.
Thanks
Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

From: John Del Cecato
<jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Date: Fri, 24 Apr 2015 12:37:29 +0000
To: Bill de Blasio<[REDACTED]>
Subject: TPA

Are you comfortable with me sending out The Progressive Agenda with “discussion draft” bullets at the end, far & wide, at this point?

Alicia & her team are still preparing their response on some of the tax stuff - but as we discussed, I think we can always nix something before the “final-final” document is approved, if need be...

On capital gains, remember that Obama called for raising that tax to 28% back in his SOTU address... That’s not a very far leap to treating it like earned income...

FWIW, here’s what Center for American Progress had to say about FTT two full years ago... Van Hollen & Pelosi (not to mention Harkin) give it instant credibility - as least among progressives...

5 Reasons the World Is Catching on to the Financial Transaction Tax

SOURCE: AP/ Yves Logghe

Campaigners and European trade unions dress as Robin Hood while calling on European Union leaders to go ahead with a financial transaction tax to mobilize money to help poor people hit by the economic crisis, in front of the European Council building in Brussels on May 23, 2012.

By Adam Hersh and Jennifer Erickson | February 25, 2013

PRINT:

1.

SHARE:

-
-
-
-

It has been more than 70 years since John Maynard Keynes wrote about the value of a financial transaction tax in “mitigating the predominance of speculation over enterprise in the United States.” A financial transaction tax works by levying a miniscule fee on the estimated

$2.9 trillion of daily financial activity through the trading of stocks, bonds, and derivatives in U.S. financial markets, based on our analysis. The tiny tax makes some of the most speculative unproductive trading unprofitable, thus steadying markets and promoting real investment while raising much-needed revenues. Though many countries around the world already have a financial transaction tax in place, the United States does not yet levy such a fee on trading.

While the idea of a modest financial transaction tax—or FTT, as it is often known—has been around for a long time, with budget balances and economic growth strained in the aftermath of the Great Recession policymakers around the world are taking a new look at the tax.

Below are five reasons why the world is catching on to the financial transaction tax as a smart policy tool.

A financial transaction tax would bring in much-needed revenue

The U.S. government is currently operating at its lowest level of revenues in more than 60 years. A 2010 report from the International Monetary Fund identifies the financial sector of the economy—particularly in the United States—as substantially undertaxed.

Even a tiny financial transaction tax would raise tens of billions of dollars in much-needed revenue. A tax applied at a very low rate—for example, a 0.117 percent tax on stocks and stock-options trading, a 0.002 percent tax for bonds, and a 0.005 percent tax for futures, swaps, and other derivatives trading—would raise an estimated $50 billion a year, according to our calculations. To put that amount into perspective, $50 billion in essence pays for all of America's veterans health services, which ran to $50.6 billion in 2012. Historical evidence and economic theory show that financial transaction taxes have the potential to raise substantial revenues without impeding the function of capital markets. By keeping constant the relative transaction costs of trading in different markets, a financial transaction tax can raise revenues without distorting market behavior.

Business and civic leaders support a financial transaction tax

The idea of a financial transaction tax isn't new, but the chorus singing its praises is growing every day—from leading economists such as Nobel Prize winners Joseph Stiglitz and Paul Krugman to entrepreneurs such as Bill Gates and Marc Cuban, to financial leaders the likes of John Bogle, founder of the mutual-fund giant Vanguard Group. The financial transaction tax also has the support of unions for nurses and other health care professionals and service-sector workers.

Those in the financial sector have an obvious stake in any new tax on their business. But even many within the industry are making the case for a financial transaction tax. John Fullerton, former managing director at JPMorgan and current president at the Capital Institute, has said, “A modest financial transaction tax of less than 1 percent would serve as a remarkably efficient tool to achieve needed reform.” Bogle wrote about a transaction tax in his book, Clash of the Cultures: “Taxes can be brought back into play, replacing some of the frictional costs of investing that served to moderate the speculation that prevailed in an earlier era.”

Countless other financial professionals will concede, in the anonymity of polite company, that a modest and well-crafted tax on financial transactions would have negligible impact on the dynamism of capital markets, and might even help eliminate some of the more unsavory financial practices that stack the deck in favor of big investors and encourage unhealthy risk taking that can put the whole economy, as well as taxpayers, on the hook for the costs.

A financial transaction tax helps stabilize volatile financial markets

An astounding share of transactions on financial markets today consists of high-frequency trades made on the millisecond by computers programmed with sophisticated algorithms. The computers make large-volume trades based on tiny changes in prices—fractions of a penny—and, in so doing, reap tremendous trading profits. While economic theory might suggest that this would lead to slightly more efficient financial markets, the Bank of England’s Andrew Haldane has shown that “high-frequency trading appears to have amplified” the markets’ erratic undulations.

High-frequency trading is sometimes associated with the phenomenon of “flash crashes,” where market prices fall precipitously due to a perfect storm of preprogrammed computer trading. The largest flash crash to date came on May 6, 2010, when the Dow Jones Industrial Average dropped by almost 10 percent from the opening level, and literally billions of dollars in market value disappeared from the stock market in a matter of minutes. Prices rebounded over the next week, though investors were rattled and withdrew \$137 billion from the market in the subsequent months. Since then, there have been many more mini flash crashes with no sign of abatement.

Flash crashes are just one example of how financial market power and high-frequency trading combine to create unfair and destabilizing effects in financial markets. Even a conservative financial transaction tax would make these types of trades unprofitable by levying a fee for every transaction, thus eliminating this risky behavior from our markets.

A financial transaction tax incentivizes investment for real growth

The financial transaction tax by design increases transaction costs of financial trading, thereby encouraging investors to hold financial assets in their investment portfolios for longer periods of time instead of trading often. Investors who expect to hold stocks longer tend to pay more attention to the enterprise and fundamental value of the stock rather than aiming to leverage capital and computational power to exploit market loopholes for big short-term profits. A longer-term outlook for investors and more stable financial markets mean more investment, more jobs, and higher productivity in the real economy—all of which drives growth.

By changing the incentives that investors face in U.S. financial markets, a tax on financial trading will shift behavior toward investment for the long term, which is better for financing businesses and for stable sustained economic growth.

Many countries already have a financial transaction tax

The standard stalling tactic for bringing a financial transaction tax to the United States is saying that we should wait until other countries do it first. But financial transaction taxes already operate in at least 23 countries around the world—including in international financial centers such as the United Kingdom, Switzerland, Hong Kong, and Japan—and that number is about to grow.

On January 22, 2013, 11 of the European Union’s 27 member countries, including France, Germany, and Italy, indicated their intention to initiate a financial transaction tax. As the policy nears implementation, other EU countries are certain to get on board. Of the world’s major financial centers, only the United States has no tax on financial trading.[1]

As more European countries implement such a tax, the United States could easily jump on board and do the same, becoming part of a global financial transaction tax system. Globalizing the tax not only would greatly reinforce its effectiveness and benefits, but would also avoid concerns about market migration and efforts to evade regulation in financial havens. Now would be a smart time for politicians in Congress to also rethink the benefits that a tax on financial transactions could bring to our economy.

Adam S. Hersh is an Economist at the Center for American Progress. Jennifer Erickson is the Director of Competitiveness and Economic Growth at the Center.

--
Dom Williams

From: Wolfe, Emma
To: Dom Williams
Cc: [REDACTED]; Shorris, Anthony; Patchett, James; jfdc@akpdmedia.com; [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: Financial transaction tax
Date: Sunday, April 26, 2015 7:57:01 PM

Me too

On Apr 26, 2015, at 7:51 PM, Dom Williams <[REDACTED]> wrote:

agree with Alicia.

On Sun, Apr 26, 2015 at 7:51 PM, <[REDACTED]> wrote:
Doing all of this by email seems difficult and will make it hard for us to tell the mayor we have consensus
Wouldn't it make sense to spend half an hour tomorrow going through what are very complicated policies?

On Apr 26, 2015, at 7:43 PM, Dom Williams <[REDACTED]> wrote:

The Obama administration proposed paying for the transportation bill by doing a repatriation of overseas earning
They would charge a 14% rate on repatriated earnings, raising $238 billion in revenue for the US that would be reinvested in transportation.
While not monolithic, there's substantial support for funding the transportation bill through repatriation.

Supporting that source for the transportation bill would be inconsistent with spending the tax change that Tony is proposing.

The tax treatment for sending jobs overseas is separate, and related in principle, but of minimal value from a revenue-raising perspective.

On Sun, Apr 26, 2015 at 7:06 PM, Shorris, Anthony <AShorris@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Let's be clear on what I thought we are proposing. What I have been pressing for is repealing a loophole in the corporate tax law that allows US multi-national companies to defer payment of any corporate tax owed on profits made by their overseas subsidiaries until those profits are "repatriated" -- which is often never. This change has been estimated by CTJ to add some $60 billion a year

($600 over ten years plus $150 billion one-time spin-up from later years) by eliminating some of the worst of the Cayman Island and Bermuda tax games companies play to avoid taxes, and the incentive that current law provides for companies to shift activity and jobs overseas.

Why so what we are proposing here inconsistent with what we are suggesting for the transportation bill?

Anthony E. Shorris
First Deputy Mayor
City of New York
City Hall
New York, NY 10007
212-788-3191

On Apr 26, 2015, at 4:29 PM, Patchett, James
<JPatchett@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

This was the language that had been agreed to: "Invest more funding in transportation infrastructure by generating more revenue, including through repatriation of US corporate assets overseas"

From: Wolfe, Emma
Sent: Sunday, April 26, 2015 04:24 PM
To: Patchett, James; [REDACTED]
<[REDACTED]> Shorris, Anthony
Cc: 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>;
[REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
[REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Subject: RE: Financial transaction tax

Thank you. Can we reconcile -- do you or Dom have language to suggest that would fix this?

From: Patchett, James
Sent: Sunday, April 26, 2015 4:22 PM
To: [REDACTED] Shorris, Anthony
Cc: 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com'; [REDACTED]
[REDACTED] Wolfe, Emma
Subject: Re: Financial transaction tax

-BdB and CMC and +Emma

As relates to the broader TPA, I just want to flag again that we may have a left hand /right hand problem on the way the current document characterizes additional revenues from "companies shipping jobs overseas."

Emma's team has been working with a broad coalition that includes business leaders for the DC day of action on funding for transportation funding. They have agreed to stand with us to call for more transportation funding paid for with additional revenues from overseas corporate operations. However, the way John's document characterizes the "shipping jobs overseas" would erode that support and is inconsistent with discussions to date. Just want to make sure that's part of the calculus since I believe folks felt speaking with one voice would be more powerful on that specific topic.

From: Anthony Shorris [<mailto:> ██████████]
Sent: Sunday, April 26, 2015 03:46 PM
To: ██████████ <██████████>
Cc: BdB; John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Patchett, James; Dom Williams <██████████> Dean Fuleihan <██████████> Chirlane McCray <██████████>
Subject: Re: Financial transaction tax

Agree we need to be sensitive here. I thought your memo made some useful points (see below) -- all of which support the notion that we should propose that this has to be a national plan tightly aligned with a global agenda.

- o Global: Approximately 40 countries have FTTs, most notably: Belgium, France, Switzerland, Singapore, India, and Brazil.

§ European Commission FTT is a proposal that would be implemented by January 1, 2016: 0.1% on stocks and bonds and 0.01% on derivatives; biggest opponent is UK given strength of London's financial sector.

§ UK has a Stamp Duty Reserve Tax – 0.5% tax on purchases of shares of UK based companies. However, there is relief for intermediaries such as market makers and large banks that are members of a qualifying exchange (they are obligated to provide liquidity, and are therefore exempt). As such, over 70% of transactions are exempt from the tax.

On Apr 26, 2015, at 3:38 PM,
[REDACTED] wrote:

Of all of the issues being addressed/discussed in TPA, this is the most important and troubling one for me. If we advocate for FTT and not make it contingent on the European Union passing (and being able to enforce - which is a real question that need to be answered) it is local political suicide. Without doubt, ny banks and hedge funds and exchanges will move their trading operations to London and that will impact out employment numbers and our tax base.

No one believes the UK govt would pass an FTT precisely bc they know how well positioned they are to maintain dominance as the rest if the European smaller exchanges shrink and the City continues to grown as a percentage of the UK tax and eminent base.

So I really really think that as he mayor of NYC (as opposed to being a national democratic leader), we should stay silent on this issue or at least link it to London, bc this is not a "risk" of sector migration, it is a sure thing.

On Apr 26, 2015, at 1:27 PM, "Bill de Blasio" <[REDACTED]> wrote:

Learned panel: what say you about the analysis below? If you agree, pls indicate. If not, pls indicate and explain why. Thanks
Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

From: John Del Cecato
<jfdc@akpdmmedia.com>

Date: Fri, 24 Apr 2015

12:37:29 +0000

To: Bill de

Blasio<

>

Subject: TPA

Are you comfortable with me sending out The Progressive Agenda with “discussion draft” bullets at the end, far & wide, at this point?

Alicia & her team are still preparing their response on some of the tax stuff - but as we discussed, I think we can always nix something before the “final-final” document is approved, if need be...

On capital gains, remember that Obama called for raising that tax to 28% back in his SOTU address... That’s not a very far leap to treating it like earned income...

FWIW, here’s what Center for American Progress had to say about FTT two full years ago... Van Hollen & Pelosi (not to mention Harkin) give it instant credibility - as least among progressives...

5 Reasons the World Is Catching on to the Financial Transaction Tax

SOURCE: AP/ Yves
Logghe

Campaigners and European trade unions dress as Robin
Hood while calling on European Union leaders to go ahead with a financial transaction tax to mobilize money to help poor people hit by the economic crisis, in front of the European Council building in Brussels on May 23, 2012.

By Adam
Hersh and Jennifer
Erickson |
February 25, 2013

PRINT:

1.

SHARE:

-
-
-
-

It has been more than 70 years since John Maynard Keynes wrote about the value of a financial transaction tax in “mitigating the predominance of speculation over enterprise in the United States.” A financial transaction tax works by levying a miniscule fee on the estimated $2.9 trillion of daily financial activity through the trading of stocks, bonds, and derivatives in U.S. financial markets, based on our analysis. The tiny tax makes some of the most speculative unproductive trading unprofitable, thus steadying markets and promoting real investment while raising much-needed revenues.

Though many countries around the world already have a financial transaction tax in place, the United States does not yet levy such a fee on trading.

While the idea of a modest financial transaction tax—or FTT, as it is often known—has been around for a long time, with budget balances and economic growth strained in the aftermath of the Great Recession policymakers around the world are taking a new look at the tax.

Below are five reasons why the world is catching on to the financial transaction tax as a smart policy tool.

A financial

transaction tax would bring in much-needed
revenue

The U.S. government is currently operating at its lowest level of revenues in more than 60 years. A 2010 report from the International Monetary Fund identifies the financial sector of the economy—particularly in the United States—as substantially undertaxed.

Even a tiny financial transaction tax would raise tens of billions of dollars in much-needed revenue. A tax applied at a very low rate—for example, a 0.117 percent tax on stocks and stock-options trading, a 0.002 percent tax for bonds, and a 0.005 percent tax for futures, swaps, and other derivatives trading—would raise an estimated $50 billion a year, according to our calculations. To put that amount into perspective, $50 billion in essence pays for all of America's veterans health services, which ran to $50.6 billion in 2012. Historical evidence and economic theory show that financial transaction taxes have the potential to raise substantial revenues without impeding the function of capital markets. By keeping constant the relative transaction costs of trading in different markets, a financial transaction tax can raise revenues without distorting market behavior.

Business and civic leaders support a financial
transaction tax

The idea of a financial transaction tax isn't new, but the chorus singing its praises is growing every day—from leading economists such as Nobel Prize winners Joseph Stiglitz and Paul Krugman to entrepreneurs such as Bill Gates and Marc Cuban, to financial leaders the likes of John Bogle, founder of the mutual-fund giant Vanguard Group. The financial transaction tax also has the support of unions for nurses and other health care professionals and service-sector workers.

Those in the financial sector have an obvious stake in any new tax on their business. But even many within the industry are making the case for a financial transaction tax. John Fullerton, former managing director at JPMorgan and current president at the Capital Institute, has said, “A modest financial transaction tax of less than 1 percent would serve as a remarkably efficient tool to achieve needed reform.” Bogle wrote about a transaction tax in his book, Clash of the Cultures: “Taxes can be brought back into play, replacing some of the frictional costs of investing that served to moderate the speculation that prevailed in an earlier era.”

Countless other financial professionals will concede, in the anonymity of polite company, that a modest and well-crafted tax on financial transactions would have negligible impact on the dynamism of capital markets, and might even help eliminate some of the more unsavory financial practices that stack the deck in favor of big investors and encourage unhealthy risk taking that can put the whole economy, as well as taxpayers, on the hook for the costs.

A financial transaction tax helps stabilize volatile financial markets

An astounding share of transactions on financial markets

today consists of high-frequency trades made on the millisecond by computers programmed with sophisticated algorithms. The computers make large-volume trades based on tiny changes in prices—fractions of a penny—and, in so doing, reap tremendous trading profits. While economic theory might suggest that this would lead to slightly more efficient financial markets, the Bank of England’s Andrew Haldane has shown that “high-frequency trading appears to have amplified” the markets’ erratic undulations.

High-frequency trading is sometimes associated with the phenomenon of “flash crashes,” where market prices fall precipitously due to a perfect storm of preprogrammed computer trading. The largest flash crash to date came on May 6, 2010, when the Dow Jones Industrial Average dropped by almost 10 percent from the opening level, and literally billions of dollars in market value disappeared from the stock market in a matter of minutes. Prices rebounded over the next week, though investors were rattled and withdrew \$137 billion from the market in the subsequent months. Since then, there have been many more mini flash crashes with no sign of abatement.

Flash crashes are just one example of how financial market power and high-frequency trading combine to create unfair and destabilizing effects in financial markets.

Even a conservative financial transaction tax would make these types of trades unprofitable by levying a fee for every transaction, thus eliminating this risky behavior from our markets.

A financial transaction tax incentivizes investment for real growth

The financial transaction tax by design increases transaction costs of financial trading, thereby encouraging investors to hold financial assets in their investment portfolios for longer periods of time instead of trading often. Investors who expect to hold stocks longer tend to pay more attention to the enterprise and fundamental value of the stock rather than aiming to leverage capital and computational power to exploit market loopholes for big short-term profits. A longer-term outlook for investors and more stable financial markets mean more investment, more jobs, and higher productivity in the real economy—all of which drives growth.

By changing the incentives that investors face in U.S. financial markets, a tax on financial trading will shift behavior toward investment for the long term, which is better for financing businesses and for stable sustained economic growth.

Many countries already have a financial transaction tax

The standard stalling tactic for bringing a financial transaction tax to the United States is saying that we should wait until other countries do it first. But financial transaction taxes already operate in at least 23 countries around the world—including in international financial centers such as the United Kingdom, Switzerland, Hong Kong, and Japan—and that number is about to grow.

On January 22, 2013, 11 of the European Union's 27 member countries, including France, Germany, and Italy, indicated their intention to initiate a financial transaction tax. As the policy nears implementation, other EU countries are certain to get on board. Of the world's major financial centers, only the United States has no tax on financial trading.[1]

As more European countries implement such a tax, the United States could easily jump on board and do the same, becoming part of a global financial transaction tax system.

Globalizing the tax not only would greatly reinforce its effectiveness and benefits, but would also avoid concerns about market migration and efforts to evade regulation in financial havens. Now would be a smart time for politicians in Congress to also rethink the benefits that a tax on financial transactions could bring to our economy.

Adam S. Hersh is an Economist at the Center for American Progress. Jennifer Erickson is the Director of Competitiveness and Economic Growth at the Center.

--
Dom Williams

--

Dom Williams

From: Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel
To: Wolfe, Emma; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Cc: [REDACTED]; [REDACTED]; Shorris, Anthony; Patchett, James; [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: Financial transaction tax
Date: Sunday, April 26, 2015 8:47:56 PM

Ok. Will get on sked

From: Wolfe, Emma
Sent: Sunday, April 26, 2015 07:57 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: Dom Williams <[REDACTED]> <[REDACTED]> <[REDACTED]>
Shorris, Anthony; Patchett, James; [REDACTED]; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel
Subject: Re: Financial transaction tax

+Gabriel for cat herding

On Apr 26, 2015, at 7:54 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

Fine by me

From: Dom Williams <[REDACTED]>
Date: Sunday, April 26, 2015 at 7:52 PM
To: "[REDACTED]" <[REDACTED]>
Cc: Anthony Shorris <AShorris@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Patchett, James" <JPatchett@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Dean Fuleihan <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: Financial transaction tax

agree with Alicia.

On Sun, Apr 26, 2015 at 7:51 PM, <[REDACTED]> wrote:

Doing all of this by email seems difficult and will make it hard for us to tell the mayor we have consensus

Wouldn't it make sense to spend half an hour tomorrow going through what are very complicated policies?

On Apr 26, 2015, at 7:43 PM, Dom Williams <[REDACTED]> wrote:

The Obama administration proposed paying for the transportation bill by doing a repatriation of overseas earning

They would charge a 14% rate on repatriated earnings, raising $238 billion in revenue for the US that would be reinvested in transportation.

While not monolithic, there's substantial support for funding the transportation bill through repatriation.

Supporting that source for the transportation bill would be inconsistent with spending the tax change that Tony is proposing.

The tax treatment for sending jobs overseas is separate, and related in principle, but of minimal value from a revenue-raising perspective.

On Sun, Apr 26, 2015 at 7:06 PM, Shorris, Anthony

<AShorris@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Let's be clear on what I thought we are proposing. What I have been pressing for is repealing a loophole in the corporate tax law that allows US multi-national companies to defer payment of any corporate tax owed on profits made by their overseas subsidiaries until those profits are "repatriated" -- which is often never. This change has been estimated by CTJ to add some $60 billion a year ($600 over ten years plus $150 billion one-time spin-up from later years) by eliminating some of the worst of the Cayman Island and Bermuda tax games companies play to avoid taxes, and the incentive that current law provides for companies to shift activity and jobs overseas.

Why so what we are proposing here inconsistent with what we are suggesting for the transportation bill?

Anthony E. Shorris
First Deputy Mayor
City of New York
City Hall
New York, NY 10007
212-788-3191

On Apr 26, 2015, at 4:29 PM, Patchett, James

<JPatchett@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

This was the language that had been agreed to: "Invest more funding in transportation infrastructure by generating more revenue, including through repatriation of US corporate assets overseas"

From: Wolfe, Emma
Sent: Sunday, April 26, 2015 04:24 PM
To: Patchett, James; [REDACTED]
<[REDACTED]> Shorris, Anthony
Cc: 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>;
[REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Subject: RE: Financial transaction tax

Thank you. Can we reconcile -- do you or Dom have language to suggest that would fix this?

From: Patchett, James
Sent: Sunday, April 26, 2015 4:22 PM
To: [REDACTED] Shorris, Anthony
Cc: 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com'; [REDACTED]
[REDACTED] Wolfe, Emma
Subject: Re: Financial transaction tax

-BdB and CMC and +Emma

As relates to the broader TPA, I just want to flag again that we may have a left hand /right hand problem on the way the current document characterizes additional revenues from "companies shipping jobs overseas."

Emma's team has been working with a broad coalition that includes business leaders for the DC day of action on funding for transportation funding. They have agreed to stand with us to call for more transportation funding paid for with additional revenues from overseas corporate operations. However, the way John's document characterizes the "shipping jobs overseas" would erode that support and is inconsistent with discussions to date. Just want to make sure that's part of the calculus since I believe folks felt speaking with one voice would be more powerful on that specific topic.

From: Anthony Shorris [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Sunday, April 26, 2015 03:46 PM
To: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Cc: BdB; John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>;
Patchett, James; Dom Williams
<[REDACTED]> Dean Fuleihan
<[REDACTED]> Chirlane McCray
Subject: Re: Financial transaction tax

Agree we need to be sensitive here. I thought your memo made some useful points (see below) -- all of which support the notion that we should propose that this has to be a national plan tightly aligned with a global agenda.

o Global: Approximately 40 countries have FTTs, most notably: Belgium, France, Switzerland, Singapore, India, and Brazil.

§ European Commission FTT is a proposal that would be implemented by January 1, 2016: 0.1% on stocks and bonds and 0.01% on derivatives; biggest opponent is UK given strength of London's financial sector.

§ UK has a Stamp Duty Reserve Tax – 0.5% tax on purchases of shares of UK based companies. However, there is relief for intermediaries such as market makers and large banks that are members of a qualifying exchange (they are obligated to provide liquidity, and are therefore exempt). As such, over 70% of transactions are exempt from the tax.

On Apr 26, 2015, at 3:38 PM,
[REDACTED] wrote:

Of all of the issues being addressed/discussed in TPA, this is the most important and troubling one for me. If we advocate for FTT and not make it contingent on the European Union passing (and being able to enforce - which is a real question that need to be answered) it is local political suicide. Without doubt, ny banks and hedge funds and exchanges will move their trading operations to London and that will impact out employment numbers and our tax base.

No one believes the UK govt would pass an FTT precisely bc they know how well positioned they are to maintain dominance as the rest if the European smaller exchanges shrink and the City continues to grown as a percentage of the UK tax and eminent base.

So I really really think that as he mayor of NYC (as opposed to being a national democratic leader), we should stay silent on this issue or at least link it to London, bc this is not a "risk" of sector migration, it is a sure thing.

On Apr 26, 2015, at 1:27 PM, "Bill de Blasio" <[REDACTED]> wrote:

Learned panel: what say you about the analysis below? If you agree, pls indicate. If not, pls indicate and explain why. Thanks
Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

From: John Del Cecato
<jfdc@akpdmedia.com>

Date: Fri, 24 Apr 2015
12:37:29 +0000

To: Bill de

Blasio <[REDACTED]>

>

Subject: TPA

Are you comfortable with me sending out The Progressive Agenda with "discussion draft" bullets at the end, far & wide, at this point?

Alicia & her team are still preparing their response on some of the tax stuff - but as we discussed, I think we can always nix something before the "final-final" document is approved, if need be...

On capital gains, remember that Obama called for raising that tax to 28% back in his SOTU address... That's not a very far leap to treating it like earned income...

FWIW, here's what Center for American Progress had to say about FTT two full years ago... Van Hollen & Pelosi (not to mention Harkin) give it instant credibility - as least among progressives...

5 Reasons the World Is Catching on to the Financial Transaction Tax

SOURCE: AP/ Yves Logghe

Campaigners and European trade unions dress as Robin Hood while calling on European Union leaders to go ahead with a financial transaction tax to mobilize money to help poor people hit by the economic crisis, in front of the European Council building in Brussels on May 23, 2012.

By Adam
Hersh and Jennifer
Erickson |
February 25, 2013

PRINT:

1.

SHARE:

-
-
-
-

It has been more than 70 years since John Maynard Keynes wrote about the value of a financial transaction tax in “mitigating the predominance of speculation over enterprise in the United States.” A financial transaction tax works by levying a miniscule fee on the estimated $2.9 trillion of daily financial activity through the trading of stocks, bonds, and derivatives in U.S. financial markets, based on our analysis. The tiny tax makes some of the most speculative unproductive trading unprofitable, thus steadying markets and promoting real investment while raising much-needed revenues.

Though many countries around the world already have a financial transaction tax in place, the United States does not yet levy such a fee on trading.

While the idea of a modest financial transaction tax—or FTT, as it is often known—has been around for a long time, with budget balances and economic growth strained in the aftermath of the Great

Recession policymakers around the world are taking a new look at the tax.

Below are five reasons
why the world is catching on to the financial transaction tax as a smart policy tool.

A financial transaction tax
would bring in much-needed
revenue

The U.S. government is currently operating at its lowest level of revenues in more than 60 years. A
2010 report from the International Monetary Fund identifies the financial sector of the economy
—particularly in the United States—as substantially undertaxed.

Even a tiny financial transaction tax would raise tens of billions of dollars in much-needed revenue. A tax applied at a very low rate—for example, a 0.117 percent tax on stocks and stock-options trading, a 0.002 percent tax for bonds, and a 0.005 percent tax for futures, swaps, and other derivatives trading—would raise an estimated $50 billion a year, according to our calculations. To put that amount into perspective, $50 billion in essence pays for all of America's veterans health services, which ran to $50.6 billion in 2012. Historical evidence and economic theory show that financial transaction taxes have the potential to raise substantial revenues without impeding the function of capital markets. By keeping constant the relative transaction costs of trading in different markets, a financial transaction tax can raise revenues without distorting market behavior.

Business and civic leaders support a financial transaction tax

The idea of a financial transaction tax isn't new, but the chorus singing its praises is growing every day—from leading economists such as Nobel Prize winners Joseph Stiglitz and Paul Krugman to entrepreneurs such as Bill Gates and Marc Cuban, to financial leaders the likes of John Bogle, founder of the mutual-fund giant Vanguard Group. The financial transaction tax also has the support of unions for nurses and other health care professionals and service-sector workers.

Those in the financial sector have an obvious stake in any new tax on their business. But even many within the industry are making the case for a financial transaction tax. John Fullerton, former managing director at JPMorgan and current president at the Capital Institute, has said, “A modest financial transaction tax of less than 1 percent would serve as a remarkably efficient tool to achieve needed reform.” Bogle wrote about a transaction tax in his book, Clash of the Cultures: “Taxes can be brought back into play, replacing some of the frictional costs of investing that served to moderate the speculation that prevailed in an earlier era.”

Countless other financial professionals will concede, in the anonymity of polite company, that a modest and well-crafted tax on financial transactions would have negligible impact on the dynamism of capital markets, and might even help eliminate some of the more unsavory financial practices that stack the deck in favor of big investors and encourage unhealthy risk taking that can put the whole economy, as well as taxpayers, on the hook

for the costs.

A financial transaction tax
helps stabilize volatile financial markets

An astounding share of transactions on financial markets today consists of high-frequency trades made on the millisecond by computers programmed with sophisticated algorithms. The computers make large-volume trades based on tiny changes in prices—fractions of a penny—and, in so doing, reap tremendous trading profits. While economic theory might suggest that this would lead to slightly more efficient financial markets, the Bank of England's Andrew Haldane has shown that “high-frequency trading appears to have amplified” the markets’ erratic undulations.

High-frequency trading is sometimes associated with the phenomenon of “flash crashes,” where market prices fall precipitously due to a perfect storm of preprogrammed computer trading. The largest flash crash to date came on May 6, 2010, when the Dow Jones Industrial Average dropped by almost 10 percent from the opening level, and literally billions of dollars in market value disappeared from the stock market in a matter of minutes. Prices rebounded over the next week, though investors were rattled and withdrew $137 billion from the market in the subsequent months.

Since then, there have been many more mini flash crashes with no sign of abatement.

Flash crashes are just one example of how financial market power and high-frequency trading combine to create unfair and destabilizing effects in financial markets.

Even a conservative financial transaction tax would make these types of trades unprofitable by levying a fee for every transaction, thus eliminating this risky behavior from our markets.

A financial transaction tax incentivizes investment for real

growth

The financial transaction tax by design increases transaction costs of financial trading, thereby encouraging investors to hold financial assets in their investment portfolios for longer periods of time instead of trading often. Investors who expect to hold stocks longer tend to pay more attention to the enterprise and fundamental value of the stock rather than aiming to leverage capital and computational power to exploit market loopholes for big short-term profits. A longer-term outlook for investors and more stable financial markets mean more investment, more jobs, and higher productivity in the real economy—all of which drives growth.

By changing the incentives that investors face in U.S. financial markets, a tax on financial trading will shift behavior toward investment for the long term, which is better for financing businesses and for stable sustained economic growth.

Many countries already have a financial
transaction tax

The standard stalling tactic for bringing a financial transaction tax to the United States is saying that we should wait until other countries do it first. But financial transaction taxes already operate in at least 23 countries around the world—including in international financial centers such as the United Kingdom, Switzerland, Hong Kong, and Japan—and that number is about to grow.

On January 22, 2013, 11 of the European Union's 27 member countries, including France, Germany, and Italy, indicated their intention to initiate a financial transaction tax. As the policy nears implementation, other EU countries are certain to get on board. Of the world's major financial centers, only the United States has no tax on financial trading.[1]

As more European countries implement such a tax, the United States could easily jump on board and do the same, becoming part of a global financial transaction tax system.

Globalizing the tax not only would greatly reinforce its effectiveness and benefits, but would also avoid concerns about market migration and efforts to evade regulation in financial havens. Now would be a smart time for politicians in Congress to also rethink the benefits that a tax on financial transactions could bring to our economy.

Adam S. Hersh is an Economist at the Center for American Progress. Jennifer Erickson is the Director of Competitiveness and Economic Growth at the Center.

--

Dom Williams

[REDACTED]
[REDACTED]

--

Dom Williams

[REDACTED]
[REDACTED]

From: Griffith, Chantell
To: Darlington, Mandy \(OMB\)
Cc: Bruch, Mary; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Valle, Rosita; Miranda, Josephine; lhegarty@akpdmedia.com
Subject: Re: Financial transaction tax
Date: Monday, April 27, 2015 8:29:20 AM

Sorry for late reply. 11am for Tony

Sent from my iPhone

On Apr 27, 2015, at 8:11 AM, Darlington, Mandy (OMB) <DarlingtonM@omb.nyc.gov> wrote:

Ok for Dean

Sent from my iPhone

On Apr 26, 2015, at 10:52 PM, Bruch, Mary <MBruch@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

12-1or 4-4:30 work for DM Glen. Both James and DM Glen have staff meeting at 11.

----- Original message-----

From: Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel
Date: Sun, Apr 26, 2015 9:12 PM
To: Griffith, Chantell; Valle, Rosita; Bruch, Mary; Miranda, Josephine; Darlington, Mandy (OMB); 'lhegarty@akpdmedia.com';
Subject: Re: Financial transaction tax

+ real liz email

----- Original Message -----

From: Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel
Sent: Sunday, April 26, 2015 09:10 PM
To: Griffith, Chantell; Valle, Rosita; Bruch, Mary; Miranda, Josephine; Darlington, Mandy (OMB); 'lhegarty@akpdmedia.com' <lhegarty@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Financial transaction tax

Need to get a meeting on financial transaction tax on the books tomorrow: tony, dom, alicia, james, dean, john and emma.

All of the above have been discussing via email and are aware that we are scheduling a mtg.

Can make EW avail @ 930am, 11am, 12pm or 4pm. Let me know what works for folks. Thanks.

From: Miranda, Josephine
To: Griffith, Chantell; Darlington, Mandy \(OMB\)
Cc: Bruch, Mary; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Valle, Rosita; lhegarty@akpdmedia.com
Subject: RE: Financial transaction tax
Date: Monday, April 27, 2015 8:32:58 AM

12 to 1pm works for James

Josie

From: Griffith, Chantell
Sent: Monday, April 27, 2015 8:30 AM
To: Darlington, Mandy (OMB)
Cc: Bruch, Mary; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Valle, Rosita; Miranda, Josephine; lhegarty@akpdmedia.com
Subject: Re: Financial transaction tax

We will make 12 work

Sent from my iPhone

On Apr 27, 2015, at 8:11 AM, Darlington, Mandy (OMB) <DarlingtonM@omb.nyc.gov> wrote:

Ok for Dean

Sent from my iPhone

On Apr 26, 2015, at 10:52 PM, Bruch, Mary <MBruch@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

12-1or 4-4:30 work for DM Glen. Both James and DM Glen have staff meeting at 11.

----- Original message-----

From: Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel
Date: Sun, Apr 26, 2015 9:12 PM
To: Griffith, Chantell; Valle, Rosita; Bruch, Mary; Miranda, Josephine; Darlington, Mandy (OMB); 'lhegarty@akpdmedia.com';
Subject: Re: Financial transaction tax

+ real liz email

----- Original Message -----

From: Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel
Sent: Sunday, April 26, 2015 09:10 PM
To: Griffith, Chantell; Valle, Rosita; Bruch, Mary; Miranda, Josephine; Darlington, Mandy (OMB); 'lhegarty@akpdmedia.com' <lhegarty@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Financial transaction tax

Need to get a meeting on financial transaction tax on the books tomorrow: tony, dom, alicia, james, dean, john and emma.

All of the above have been discussing via email and are aware that we are scheduling a mtg.

Can make EW avail @ 930am, 11am, 12pm or 4pm. Let me know what works for folks. Thanks.

From: B
To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea
Cc: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Snyder, Thomas; Leopold, Elana; Carey, Michael
Subject: Re: TPA media
Date: Monday, April 27, 2015 11:46:11 AM

There's ALWAYS a news nugget to drop, either TPA-related or govt-related. And why on Earth have I never done Rachel Maddow's show in all this time. Consider that too for before or after may 12

----- Original Message -----

From: Walzak, Phil
Sent: Sunday, April 26, 2015 02:13 PM
To: B; Hagelgans, Andrea
Cc: 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Snyder, Thomas; Leopold, Elana; Carey, Michael
Subject: Re: TPA media

Jfdc has a roll in plan he is refining
He can circ when ready
Like MoJo. Is there another news nugget we cud drop to maximize the appearance?

----- Original Message -----

From: B
Sent: Sunday, April 26, 2015 12:48 PM
To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea
Cc: 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Snyder, Thomas; Leopold, Elana; Carey, Michael
Subject: TPA media

We need to make decisions re: MoJo and Ben smith asap. We need to create come energy leading into May 12. Pls set a time to discuss today or tmrw

From: John Del Cecato
To: Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel
Subject: Re: You here at City hall or want to be on via phone?
Date: Monday, April 27, 2015 12:36:53 PM

i'm in MPC office

On 4/27/15, 12:35 PM, "Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel"
<GSchnakeMahl@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>For financial transaction tax discussion

From: Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel
To: "John Del Cecato"
Subject: RE: You here at City hall or want to be on via phone?
Date: Monday, April 27, 2015 12:37:03 PM

Cool

-----Original Message-----

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Monday, April 27, 2015 12:38 PM
To: Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel
Subject: Re: You here at City hall or want to be on via phone?

i'm in MPC office

On 4/27/15, 12:35 PM, "Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel"
<GSchnakeMahl@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>For financial transaction tax discussion

From: John Del Cecato
To: Griffith, Chantell; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Liz Hegarty
Cc: Darlington, Mandy \(OMB\); Bruch, Mary; Valle, Rosita; Miranda, Josephine
Subject: Re: Financial transaction tax
Date: Monday, April 27, 2015 12:40:50 PM

In with boss - be there shortly

From: <Griffith>, Chantell <CGriffith@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, April 27, 2015 at 12:39 PM
To: "Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel" <GSchnakeMahl@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Liz Hegarty <lhegarty@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: "Darlington, Mandy (OMB)" <DarlingtonM@omb.nyc.gov>, "Bruch, Mary" <MBruch@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Valle, Rosita" <rvalle@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Miranda, Josephine" <JMiranda@Cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: Financial transaction tax

Tony is ready! Please come to his office.

From: Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel
Sent: Monday, April 27, 2015 9:20 AM
To: 'John Del Cecato'; Liz Hegarty; Griffith, Chantell
Cc: Darlington, Mandy (OMB); Bruch, Mary; Valle, Rosita; Miranda, Josephine
Subject: RE: Financial transaction tax

Great – we are a go for noon. Will send invite.

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Monday, April 27, 2015 8:47 AM
To: Liz Hegarty; Griffith, Chantell
Cc: Darlington, Mandy (OMB); Bruch, Mary; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Valle, Rosita; Miranda, Josephine
Subject: Re: Financial transaction tax

Good by me

From: Liz Hegarty <lhegarty@akpdmedia.com>
Date: Monday, April 27, 2015 at 8:42 AM
To: "Griffith, Chantell" <CGriffith@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: "Darlington, Mandy (OMB)" <DarlingtonM@omb.nyc.gov>, "Bruch, Mary" <MBruch@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel" <GSchnakeMahl@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Valle, Rosita" <rvalle@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Miranda, Josephine" <JMiranda@Cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: Financial transaction tax

Looping in JDC since I will be on a flight for the next few hours.

Sent from my iPhone

On Apr 27, 2015, at 7:31 AM, Griffith, Chantell <CGriffith@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

We will make 12 work

Sent from my iPhone

On Apr 27, 2015, at 8:11 AM, Darlington, Mandy (OMB) <DarlingtonM@omb.nyc.gov> wrote:

Ok for Dean

Sent from my iPhone

On Apr 26, 2015, at 10:52 PM, Bruch, Mary <MBruch@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

12-1or 4-4:30 work for DM Glen. Both James and DM Glen have staff meeting at 11.

----- Original message-----

From: Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel

Date: Sun, Apr 26, 2015 9:12 PM

To: Griffith, Chantell;Valle, Rosita;Bruch, Mary;Miranda, Josephine;Darlington, Mandy (OMB);'lhergarty@akpdmedia.com';

Subject:Re: Financial transaction tax

+ real liz email

----- Original Message -----

From: Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel

Sent: Sunday, April 26, 2015 09:10 PM

To: Griffith, Chantell; Valle, Rosita; Bruch, Mary; Miranda, Josephine; Darlington, Mandy (OMB); 'lhergarty@akpdmedia.com'

<lhergarty@akpdmedia.com>

Subject: Financial transaction tax

Need to get a meeting on financial transaction tax on the books tomorrow: tony, dom, alicia, james, dean, john and emma.

All of the above have been discussing via email and are aware that we are scheduling a mtg.

Can make EW avail @ 930am, 11am, 12pm or 4pm. Let me know what works for folks. Thanks.

From: Wolfe, Emma
To: John Del Cecato; Williams, Dominic
Subject: Weird "CEO" release
Date: Monday, April 27, 2015 1:15:53 PM
Attachments: 0422-statement-tpa.pdf
ATT00001.txt

<http://www.usmayors.org/pressreleases/uploads/2015/0422-statement-tpa.pdf>

The United States Conference of Mayors

1620 Eye Street, N.W. • Washington, D.C. 20006
Phone (202) 293-7330 • Fax (202) 293-2352
E-mail: info@usmayors.org URL: usmayors.org

For Immediate Release:
Wednesday, Apr 22, 2015

Contact:
Elena Tempere-Webb etempere@usmayors.org 202-286-1100
Karen Hinton Karen@hintoncommunications.com 703-798-3109

U.S. CONFERENCE OF MAYORS CEO AND EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR TOM COCHRAN ISSUES STATEMENT ON INTRODUCTION OF TRADE PROMOTION AUTHORITY

Washington, D.C. – The United States Conference of Mayors CEO and Executive Director Tom Cochran today issued the following statement in support of the introduction of the Trade Promotion Authority legislation (TPA-2015):

“The United States Conference of Mayors is pleased that Senate Finance Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch, Ranking Member Ron Wyden, along with Ways and Means Committee Chairman Paul Ryan have reached agreement on Trade Promotion Authority legislation (TPA-2015). At its 2014 Annual Meeting in Dallas, TX, the nation’s mayors adopted policy in support of TPA that includes high standard objectives. TPA-2015 contains objectives that help protect intellectual property rights and addresses various trade barriers.

“The U.S. Conference of Mayors strongly supports enforceable labor and environmental provisions in future trade agreements that raise global standards. U.S. metro economies represent more than 90% of the nation’s gross domestic product and 92% of the nation’s future economic growth, one-third of which is projected to come from expanding exports. TPA paves the way for our metro economies to take full advantage of dramatically expanding markets overseas, which are critical to our economic future.

“Coupled with stronger Trade Adjustment Assistance legislation, TPA will ensure that U.S. metro economies continue their expansion into the global marketplace. We look forward to working with Congress and the Administration as further details on major trade agreements emerge. Based on our policy resolution, we call on Congress to move TPA-2015 legislation forward.”

###

The U.S. Conference of Mayors is the official nonpartisan organization of cities with populations of 30,000 or more. There are nearly 1400 such cities in the country today, and each city is represented in the Conference by its chief elected official, the mayor. Like us on Facebook at facebook.com/usmayors, or follow us on Twitter at twitter.com/usmayors.

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: B
Cc: Snyder, Thomas; John Del Cecato \(jfdc@akpdmedia.com\); Walzak, Phil; Fuleihan, Dean \(OMB\); Wolfe, Emma; Shorris, Anthony; Leopold, Elana; de Alwis, Ronalie
Subject: Paid Family Leave research
Date: Monday, April 27, 2015 4:22:35 PM

Per your request

Overview: Paid Family Leave Proposals

No universal definition, but rough definition of “paid family leave” is a set of policies that allow workers to continue receiving financial support while they take time off from work to deal with or recover from a personal health condition, care for an ill family member, or give birth to or care for a newborn child.

Maternity and paternity leave are what most folks think about, but “paid family leave” also encompasses the notion of paid sick leave.

It is being identified in the media as the women’s “wedge” issue for this election.

Federal Proposals –

- Legislation – Senator Gillibrand’s FAMILY Act would establish a National Family Economic Security Program to ensure that the U.S. will no longer be the only industrialized nation in the world without any form of paid family leave. Her legislation establishes a national, gender-neutral paid family and medical leave insurance program including includes maternity and paternity leave, personal medical leave, and spousal support.
 - Funding Mechanism: The proposed funding mechanism is an independent trust fund within the Social Security Administration to collect fees (based on employee and employer contributions of .2% of wages) and provide benefits.
- White House Push – Senior Advisor Valerie Jarrett and Labor Secretary Tom Perez have recently hit the road to highlight states, localities, and private businesses that are taking the lead on providing paid leave to workers.
- Obama Executive Action – In January 2015, the President signed a memo modernizing federal leave policies for childbirth, adoption and foster care. The memo directs agencies to advance up to six weeks of paid sick leave to federal employees with a newborn child.
 - Funding Mechanism: The cost is approximately $250 million and would be covered within existing agency budgets under current discretionary funding caps.
- Additional Note – Morgan Stanley Vice Chairman Tom Nides, who moderated your recent Q&A session at Morgan Stanley, has been mobilizing business leaders in support of paid leave.

State Proposals –

- Only states that currently offer robust paid family leave are California, New Jersey, and Rhode Island (four weeks of paid leave up to 60% of salary). The leave provisions in California and New Jersey are not job-protected.
 - Funding Mechanism: The funding mechanism is not taxpayers or employers, but rather a pool of employee paycheck contributions.
- In New York State, the leading proposal is the Paid Family Leave Insurance Act, which would expand the Temporary Disability Insurance (TDI) program to cover a worker who needs time off to care for a newborn child or a sick family member.
 - Funding Mechanism: The plan would be jointly funded by both employers and employees, with a modest premium increase for covered employees.

De Blasio Campaign Proposal –

Currently, the NYC government does not provide robust paid family leave benefits.

A copy of your 2014 campaign proposal is included below:

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE: August 23, 2013

CONTACT: DAN LEVITAN dan@berlinrosen.com, 646-200-5315

DE BLASIO PROPOSES PAID FAMILY LEAVE FOR NEW YORK CITY

New York, NY - Bill de Blasio today proposed making New York City the first city in the United States to provide paid family leave for new mothers and fathers, as well as people caring for a serious or terminally ill or injured spouse, parent, or child.

“If you want to spend quality time with a new child, or if you or a loved one faces a major medical emergency, your job or paychecks shouldn't be in jeopardy. This is good public policy that will help all families in this city,” said Bill de Blasio.

Based on successful programs in New Jersey and California, De Blasio's plan would expand the eligibility of disability coverage with a small surcharge on existing disability insurance premiums. The benefit would pay 50% of a New Yorker's average weekly salary for up to 12 weeks, up to a maximum of $340/week (double the current benefit levels for temporary disability).

The United States is the only high-income country in the world not to offer paid family leave.[1] These programs are successful, humane, and popular. After the introduction of a similar program in California, more than 90% of employers reported either

“no noticeable effect” or a “positive effect” on productivity, profitability, turnover, and morale.[2]

De Blasio has also called for full, comprehensive paid sick day leave for New York City workers. Speaker Quinn blocked that legislation in the City Council for three years to placate business interests, and then later under intense political pressure passed a watered-down version of the bill that excluded more than 300,000 New Yorkers.

De Blasio’s plan would:

- Cover every New York City worker currently covered by the State’s disability insurance system.
- Would cover mothers or fathers seeking to bond with a new baby within 12 months of birth or adoption.
- Would cover caregivers with proof of a very serious or terminal illness afflicting a child, spouse, or parent.
- Pay 50% of a New Yorker’s average weekly salary for up to 12 weeks, up to a maximum of $340/week (double the current benefit levels for temporary disability).
- Be financed through a small increase in worker’s temporary disability insurance premium determined by an actuary each year. In New Jersey, a similar program, covering 2/3 of participating employees salary for six weeks up to a maximum of $524/week cost just 60 cents per worker per week in 2013.[3]

This proposal would require legislation in Albany.

[1] Tara Siegel Bernard, “In Paid Family Leave, U.S. Trails Most of the Globe,” NY Times, February 22, 2013. (“While the United States takes great pride in its family values, it is the only high-income country that does not offer a paid leave program.”)

[2] Eileen Appelbaum and Ruth Milkman, “Leaves that Pay: Employer and Worker Experiences with Paid Leave in California.” Available at http://www.paidfamilyleave.org/pdf/leaves_that_pay.pdf.

[3] State of New Jersey, Department of Labor and Workforce Development, <http://lwd.dol.state.nj.us/labor/fli/content/cost.html>

NPR: Is it time to make Medical and Family Leave Paid? April 22, 2015

It's been more than 20 years since passage of the landmark Family and Medical Leave Act, which allows workers to take up to 12 weeks of unpaid time off for medical or family reasons without losing their jobs.

Some workers' advocates and politicians say it's time to plug a big hole in the law by requiring that workers get paid while they're on leave. But the change faces stiff opposition from some small business and other groups that argue that it would be too expensive and an unnecessary government intrusion.

Saying the reality for many families is that both parents must work, President Obama has pushed for paid family leave, calling it an "economic necessity" in his State of the Union address. He proposed \$2.2 billion in next year's federal budget to help five states get paid leave programs up and running, and an additional $35 million for states to conduct planning and startup activities.

Meanwhile, Democrats have reintroduced the Family and Medical Insurance Leave Act that would create a national paid leave program to cover two-thirds of people's wages for up to 60 days a year. With Republicans in control of Congress, however, there's little chance it will pass.

Supporters say that many workers can't afford to take unpaid leave and others aren't eligible for leaves because they work for small employers. The law allows workers to take time off to care for a newborn or adopted child, or if they or family members have a serious health condition. But it doesn't apply to companies with fewer than 50 workers, and workers have to have worked for at least a year and logged at least 1,250 hours in the previous year to qualify for the benefit.

Only 13 percent of workers had access to paid family leave in 2013, according to the Department of Labor's 2014 national compensation survey. Meanwhile, 59 percent of workers were eligible for unpaid leave under the FMLA in 2012.

Four states have implemented paid family leave programs, and their experience may provide guidance for a national paid family leave law.

Three of them — California, New Jersey and Rhode Island — fund the programs entirely by withholding employee wages. The programs are administered by states' unemployment insurance agencies in conjunction with temporary disability insurance programs, according to human resources consultant Mercer. (Washington state has a paid leave program on the books, but it has never been implemented because legislators haven't approved funding.)

California's program is well established after more than a decade. It allows workers up to six weeks of leave annually at 55 percent of their weekly pay, up to a cap of $1,104 weekly in 2015.

When Allison Guevara's children, now aged 5 and 2, were born, she twice took paid time off from her half-time job as a field representative for the American Federation of Teachers-affiliated union that represents librarians and lecturers at the University of California.

Guevara, 36, says that getting just 55 percent of her salary might have been problematic, but she was able to negotiate with her employer to use accrued vacation and sick time to make up the other 45 percent of her pay.

Altogether, she took off at least three months with pay for each baby. Her husband, who works for the city of Santa Cruz, was not so lucky. The law typically doesn't apply to public sector employees.

"The time off was very necessary," says Guevara. In addition to bonding with her kids, "breastfeeding was very difficult with my first one, it took eight weeks to get that going."

Guevara stumbled upon the information about her paid leave options by accident. That's not surprising. A survey conducted last fall for the California Center for Research on Women and Families found that just 36 percent of Californians knew about the state's paid leave program, a decline from three years earlier when 43 percent said they knew about the law.

"Those who know about it are those who disproportionately work for employers who already do it," says Vicki Shabo, a vice president at the National Partnership for Women and Families. "That leaves out many lower-paid workers."

California employers are generally positive about the paid family leave law, according to a study prepared for the U.S. Department of Labor last year. Ninety percent of employers in a 2010 survey said the law had either a positive effect on productivity, profit and morale, or it had no effect.

California, New Jersey and Rhode Island have built their programs around existing short-term paid disability program infrastructures; only five states have such disability programs in place, says Catherine Stamm, a senior consultant at Mercer.

"It's not as difficult or momentous for these employers," Stamm says.

Under the Democrats' bill, workers and employers would split the cost of the program, which would be administered by the Social Security administration.

But that's a problem for small business owners, says Jack Mozloom, national media director for the National Federation of Independent Business, a trade group. Many of their members have fewer than 10 employees, Mozloom says, and if someone's out on leave, it's likely that they have to hire a temporary worker or pay someone overtime to do the job.

Financing a paid leave program would "represent a real expense that some of them cannot absorb," he says. "When it's mandated, it puts them in a hole."

Capital NY--- Paid Family Leave in NY Focus of Talks with Obama Official April 24, 2015

A senior member of the Obama administration met with labor leaders and advocates in Manhattan on Thursday morning to discuss efforts to bring paid family leave to New York, Donna Dolan, executive director of the New York State Paid Leave Coalition, said.

Valerie Jarrett, senior adviser to the president, met at the Midtown headquarters of 1199 SEIU, the health care workers' union, with about 30 other people, including 1199 president George Gresham and members of his union, representatives from 32BJ SEIU, which represents property service workers, and the New York Paid Family Leave Insurance Campaign, said Dolan, who also attended.

Jarrett is in town for this week's Women in the World Summit but she and U.S. Secretary of Labor Tom Perez are on a national tour to promote President Obama's "Lead on Leave" initiative to push states to adopt paid family leave as part of a proposal the president announced during his State of the Union address in January.

“[Jarrett] was interested in an update of the campaign in New York and how we saw it at this juncture” Dolan said.

Jarrett said the White House is interested in the various paid family leave campaigns around the country and discussed with those attending Thursday's meeting possible paths to enacting legislation, Dolan said.

In New York, a national coalition of women's advocates has attempted to push paid family leave to the forefront, after Governor Andrew Cuomo said earlier this year he thought lawmakers lacked “the appetite” to consider such a proposal.

Last year, during his re-election campaign, Cuomo said paid family leave would have to wait until after the Legislature passed a 10-point package of bills known as the Women’s Equality Act, which he had made both a centerpiece of his campaign and the scaffolding for a new political party he created to advance passage of the W.E.A.

A bipartisan Senate committee held a public hearing in March on the possibility and costs associated with a paid family leave proposal that was included in the State Senate's one-house budget and in a separate Assembly proposal.

The Assembly passed its own version of paid leave bill; the Senate proposal was dropped from the final budget.

Cuomo’s office later said his administration is seriously studying the issue, and a spokeswoman said that while the governor supports “the notion of providing paid family leave in New York State,” he wants the Senate and the Assembly to come up with a “workable” proposal on which both chambers can agree.

Amid an ongoing federal investigation into Senate Republican leader Dean Skelos, political observers are skeptical about whether paid family leave can pass this year.

Still, Dolan said she and other advocates are encouraged by progress that has been made on the issue.

Last month's Senate hearing “was the first time there’s been a Senate hearing on paid family leave in eight years,” she said, noting that she and other advocates have held talks with representatives from the Cuomo administration over the course of several months.

But challenges remain.

Last June, at a Summit on Working Families in Washington, D.C., Perez, the labor secretary, said states could apply for grants from a $500,000 fund, to help government officials study the costs associated with paid family leave. The Cuomo Administration declined to apply.

“We were very disappointed that the governor’s office did not apply,” Dolan said. “And they felt that they had been collecting information for months on paid family leave. We had had conversations with them during the winter, bringing in national experts to talk about cost, and we’d had those conversations with them and they said they’d collected all the material they felt they needed.”

Andrea Hagelgans
Office of the Mayor
Direct – 212.341.5372
Cell – 718.679.8965
ahagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov

From: John Del Cecato
To: Walzak, Phil; Klein, Monica
Cc: Hagelgans, Andrea; Richardson, Jerika
Subject: Re: TPP
Date: Monday, April 27, 2015 4:32:29 PM

In a word, from what we've seen - which hasn't been much, since so much of this has been done in secret, this takes us in the wrong direction - handing more power to corporations, and putting workers' jobs at risk...

On 4/27/15, 4:07 PM, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>Here is speech language-

>

>Those are issues that unite Democrats. But I know we have our share of > differences, too. That's okay. We shouldn't be afraid to talk about them.

>

>In recent days, there's been a lot of talk about passing Fast-Track trade > authority for the new Trans-Pacific Partnership treaty.

>

>I believe that would be a huge mistake.

>

>I believe the American people should have a say in trade agreements – > especially massive deals that can mean the difference between countless > jobs being CREATED in America...or being SHIPPED overseas.

>

>I believe that we should be rewriting the rules to give working people > MORE of a say... rules that protect American jobs and American consumers... > rules that rein in the excesses of giant multi-national corporations and > their relentless pursuit to put profits before people.

>

> On all those counts, Fast Track is a raw deal for American workers.

>

>Sent from my iPad

>

>> On Apr 27, 2015, at 4:06 PM, "Klein, Monica" <MKlein@cityhall.nyc.gov> >> wrote:

>>

>> Ok

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>> On 4/27/15, 4:05 PM, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>>>

>>> Just headsup him I think he is ready

>>>

>>> Sent from my iPad

>>>

>>>> On Apr 27, 2015, at 4:03 PM, "Klein, Monica" <MKlein@cityhall.nyc.gov> >>>> wrote:

>>>>

>>>> FYI Sally said she's going to ask about TPP and wants more of an >>>> explanation on why he is against it than what he said on Saturday >>>> night.

>>>>

>>>> Anything else we want him to say here?

>>

From: John Del Cecato
To: Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Did you send?
Date: Monday, April 27, 2015 5:34:03 PM

Just did

On 4/27/15, 5:28 PM, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>

>Sent from my iPhone

From: Bill de Blasio
To: Andrea Hagelgans
Cc: John Del Cecato; PhilWalzak; [REDACTED] Dom Williams; Emma Wolfe; Fuleihan, Dean \(OMB\); Snyder, Thomas; Shorris, Anthony; Bob Linn
Subject: Re: TPA agenda
Date: Monday, April 27, 2015 8:03:42 PM

Adding Dean. And all TPA threads should be on official email from now on (except for JDC, of course, who will use civilian email). Per the lawyers, that is how we should comport ourselves from now on. And Dean, we need to discuss tmrw with you, Tony and Bob how we will respond when asked if NYC will consider its own family leave program for our citizens, or even just for City employees.

Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

From: Andrea Hagelgans <[REDACTED]>
Date: Mon, 27 Apr 2015 19:48:12 -0400
To: [REDACTED]
Cc: John Del Cecato<jfdc@akpdmmedia.com>; Phil Walzak<[REDACTED]>
Dom Williams<[REDACTED]> Emma Wolfe<[REDACTED]>
Subject: TPA agenda

Mahen has reviewed current TPA contract and our only fault line is paid family leave. He and I both feel we have some cover given national focus.

I sent paid family leave info earlier but let me know if you need me to resend

Sent from my iPhone

On Apr 27, 2015, at 11:12 AM, Bill de Blasio <[REDACTED]> wrote:

"Wall Street and corporate predators"? "Wall Street and foreclosure predators"?

Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmmedia.com>
Date: Mon, 27 Apr 2015 11:26:08 +0000
To: Bill de Blasio<[REDACTED]> Phillip Walzak<[REDACTED]> Andrea Hagelgans<[REDACTED]> Dom Williams<[REDACTED]> Emma Wolfe<[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: Edits to Warren/BDB op-ed

One edit that I thought about in the middle of the night.. Should probably go with paid family leave rather than paid sick leave - in part because we don't currently offer in NYC (and would be a boost for us, if the feds offered), and in part because Roosevelt folks have said that paid family leave was a real game-changer

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>

Date: Sunday, April 26, 2015 at 10:21 PM

To: Bill de Blasio <[REDACTED]> Phillip Walzak

<[REDACTED]> Andrea Hagegans <[REDACTED]> Dom Williams

<[REDACTED]> Emma Wolfe <[REDACTED]>

Subject: Edits to Warren/BDB op-ed

<!--[if !supportAnnotations]--> <!--[endif]-->

I cleaned up their language a bit, and added a few more specifics - namely, paid sick leave, Buffett Rule, carried interest...

I noted in the comments that pre-school vs. pre-K might be confusing & that maybe we just talk about Pre-K...

Also noted that we need to explain what "scheduling practices" are... (NOTE: they're talking about the crazy practice where companies don't give workers their hours until the last minute, making it really hard for low-wage workers to plan for just about anything & basically be "on call" all the damn time.)

I also noted in the comments section that MBDB came out against TPP - and that we'd be willing to mention that here... But it may be that Team Warren feels like their battle with Obama is something that's worn them down & would just as soon leave out...

Haven't run this by them yet, but assuming you guys are good, I will do so tomorrow AM...

====

<!--[if !supportAnnotations]--><!--[endif]-->

In this land of big dreams, there was never a dream bigger or more important than the one so deeply rooted in our values that it became known as the American Dream. Across generations and geography, Americans shared the belief that hard work would bring opportunity and a better life for everyone. America wasn't perfect, but we invested in our kids and put in place policies to build a strong middle class.

We don't do that anymore, and the result is clear: the rich get richer, while everyone else falls behind. The game is rigged, and the people who rigged it want it to stay that way. They claim that if we act to improve the economic well-being of hard-working Americans – whether by increasing the minimum wage, reining in the Wall Street predators, or practically anything else – we threaten economic growth.

They are wrong.

In a report this week, economist Joseph E. Stiglitz has provided the latest proof that they're absolutely upside down in their thinking. It's a false choice to decide between economic growth and strengthening the middle class. In fact, the growing disparity between rich and poor, Stiglitz shows, actually "leads to lower growth and less efficiency."

!supportAnnotations]-->[\[DG1\]](#)<!--[endif]-->

The foundations for the Stiglitz report are simple: When there's a strong middle class, consumers have money to spend at businesses, and when businesses have more customers they build more factories, hire more workers, and sell more products – and the economy grows. But when customers don't have money, they can't buy, and that means businesses can't grow.

For decades, our economy was built around this core understanding. We embraced the idea that we were all in this together. We made big investments in the things that would create opportunities for everyone: public schools and universities; roads and bridges and power grids; research that took us to the moon and back and then into cyberspace. We supported strong unions that pushed for better wages and working conditions, seeing those unions improve lives both for their own members and for workers everywhere, union or not.

And it worked. From the 1930s to the late 1970s, as GDP went up, wages increased more or less across the board. In fact, 90 percent of all workers got about 70 percent of all new income growth. Sure, the richest 10 percent gobbled up more than their share, but overall, as the economic pie got bigger, pretty much everyone was getting a little more—that was how America built a great middle class.

And then in the early 1980s, a new theory swept the country. Some said that if government policies took care of the rich and powerful, wealth would trickle down for everyone else. Trickle-down advocates cut taxes sharply for those at the top, and pushed for “deregulation” -- hobbling the cops on Wall Street and letting the most powerful corporations do as they pleased.

In modern history, we’ve seen trickle-down economics fail disastrously. The rich and powerful have become richer and more powerful, while everyone else was left behind. In the last 35 years, the top 10 percent got ALL the growth in income—ALL of it. The rest of America – 90 percent of Americans – got nothing. Zip. Zero.

Government policies matter. Strengthening the American dream is about the basics:

Make work pay by increasing the minimum wage, empowering unions to bargain collectively, improving scheduling practices^[JD2], passing paid family leave, and making sure people get the overtime pay they deserve.

End the squeeze on working parents by investing in pre-school and childcare, after-school programs, and extended learning days. Let families with children have a chance to build some economic security on their own.

Ensure everyone can get a great education without drowning in debt. Rein in the cost of college and allow families to refinance student loans at lower rates. Give every child in America access to full-day pre-kindergarten^[JD3]. Education is still the best ticket to the middle class.

Focus on research and innovation needed to develop the technologies of the future. Investments in medical and scientific research let us build whole new industries and give us the chance to create good jobs right here in America.

Invest in infrastructure – in roads, bridges, rail, water, power and broadband. Businesses—and the jobs they create—can’t grow if the foundation is crumbling beneath us. A 21st Century economy needs 21st Century infrastructure.

Strengthen and expand Social Security, not just for today’s seniors, but for today’s young people. Work is changing. A strong Social Security system will ensure that every worker, no matter the companies or number of jobs they piece together during their careers, can count on a secure retirement.

Strengthen the rules of the marketplace. We don’t build a future by turning the biggest banks loose to do whatever they want, and markets don’t create value when corporations can deliberately cheat people or roll over their upstart competition.

Reform the tax code: End the billions in tax breaks for corporations shipping jobs overseas and the big oil companies, and ensure that millionaires and billionaires pay their fair share by closing the “carried-interest” loophole, implementing the “Buffett rule,” and rewarding work rather than just wealth.

It won’t be easy, but real change rarely is. It’s time to be bold. The American dream hangs in the balance.

<!--[if !supportAnnotations]-->[\[D4\]](#)<!--[endif]-->

##

<!--[if !supportAnnotations]-->

<!--[endif]-->

<!--[if !supportAnnotations]-->

<!--[endif]--><!--[if !supportAnnotations]--><!--[endif]-->

<!--[if !supportAnnotations]-->[\[DG1\]](#)<!--[endif]-->Note that this is a placeholder until we get a copy of the draft report from Roosevelt.

<!--[if !supportAnnotations]-->

<!--[endif]-->

<!--[if !supportAnnotations]-->
<!--[endif]--><!--[if !supportAnnotations]--><!--[endif]-->
<!--[if !supportAnnotations]-->[\[D2\]](#)<!--[endif]-->Do we need to make this more clear?
<!--[if !supportAnnotations]-->
<!--[endif]-->
<!--[if !supportAnnotations]-->
<!--[endif]--><!--[if !supportAnnotations]--><!--[endif]-->
<!--[if !supportAnnotations]-->[\[D3\]](#)<!--[endif]-->Should we cut the “pre-school” reference earlier so people aren’t confused?
<!--[if !supportAnnotations]-->
<!--[endif]-->
<!--[if !supportAnnotations]-->
<!--[endif]--><!--[if !supportAnnotations]--><!--[endif]-->
<!--[if !supportAnnotations]-->[\[D4\]](#)<!--[endif]-->FWIW – MBDB came out against TPP on Saturday – and is happy to include this here – unless you guys have decided you’ve laid down your marker there & don’t want to re-raise it?
<!--[if !supportAnnotations]-->
<!--[endif]-->

From: Williams, Dominic
To: Shorris, Anthony; John Del Cecato; Wolfe, Emma; Snyder, Thomas
Subject: For Background - Reforming Labor Law
Date: Monday, April 27, 2015 8:08:38 PM

Reforming Labor Law

Background: When workers try to organize unions they are often harassed, intimidated or fired, taking away their bargaining power and harming their access to adequate wages and quality healthcare. Workers in unions earn 30 percent higher wages and are 63 percent more likely to have employer-provided health insurance.

Possible Solution: The Employee Free Choice Act: A Congressional bill that would make it easier for workers to join unions, make it easier for newly unionized workers to reach contracts with their employers, and strengthen penalties for those that violate labor law to seek to prevent workers from using their right to organize. The legislation removes the power of employers to demand an additional and separate ballot if a majority of employee signatures were collected. It also assigns the organizing union as the official collective bargaining representative if a majority of employee signatures are collected. The legislation also requires employers and their unions to enter binding arbitration to produce a collective agreement if one cannot be met 90 days after the unionization of employees, and after 30 days of mediation time (120 days total). The arbitration agreement would be binding for a period of two years. Lastly, the legislation increases penalties on employers who discriminate against workers for union involvement.

From: Williams, Dominic
Sent: Monday, April 27, 2015 7:57 PM
To: Shorris, Anthony; John Del Cecato; Wolfe, Emma; Snyder, Thomas
Subject: For Background - Student Loan Refinancing

Student Loan Refinancing

Background: Some with outstanding loans pay interest rates of 7% or higher for undergraduate loans, while students taking out new undergraduate loans pay 3.86% under the Bipartisan Student Loan Certainty Act passed by Congress in summer 2013. Outstanding student loans now total more than $1.2 trillion, surpassing total credit card debt. One in seven borrowers defaults on federal student loans within three years of beginning repayment.

Possible Solutions: S. 2432 – Bank on Students Emergency Loan Refinancing Act: Would allow more than 25 million people with outstanding student loan debt to refinance their federal student loans or private loans at the lower interest rates currently offered to new borrowers, while maintaining full borrower protections of federal student loans (rather than forcing borrowers refinance with private banks). The loss of federal revenue from the lower loan interest income would require additional DOE direct spending (via its Direct Loan Program), according to the CBO, but would be offset in full by the “Buffet Rule” – a minimum 30% income tax payment from people who earn between $1 and $2 million.

From: John Del Cecato
To: Leopold, Elana
Cc: Snyder, Thomas; Williams, Dominic; Carey, Michael; Wolfe, Emma; de Alwis, Ronalie
Subject: Re: Final TPA doc
Date: Monday, April 27, 2015 8:18:06 PM

Yep - can do... Sorry, I didn't send to you - will send to you both now

> On Apr 27, 2015, at 8:16 PM, Leopold, Elana <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
>
> Mayor wanted me to reiterate that he wants the final doc tonight. JDC- can you get on the phone w him after his dinner and walk him through? Do we need others on the call? Thanks
>
> Sent from my iPhone

From: Fuleihan, Dean \(OMB\)
To: BdB; Andrea Hagelgans
Cc: John Del Cecato; PhilWalzak [REDACTED] Dom Williams; Emma Wolfe; Snyder, Thomas; Shorris, Anthony; Robert Linn \(OLR\)
Subject: RE: TPA agenda
Date: Monday, April 27, 2015 8:24:53 PM

We are working on estimates for paid family leave for City employees

From: John Del Cecato
To: Williams, Dominic; Shorris, Anthony; Wolfe, Emma; Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: For Background - Student Loan Refinancing
Date: Monday, April 27, 2015 8:35:10 PM

Right on.

From: <Williams>, Dominic Williams <DWilliams@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, April 27, 2015 at 7:57 PM
To: Anthony Shorris <AShorris@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: For Background - Student Loan Refinancing

Student Loan Refinancing

Background: Some with outstanding loans pay interest rates of 7% or higher for undergraduate loans, while students taking out new undergraduate loans pay 3.86% under the Bipartisan Student Loan Certainty Act passed by Congress in summer 2013. Outstanding student loans now total more than $1.2 trillion, surpassing total credit card debt. One in seven borrowers defaults on federal student loans within three years of beginning repayment.

Possible Solutions: S. 2432 – Bank on Students Emergency Loan Refinancing Act: Would allow more than 25 million people with outstanding student loan debt to refinance their federal student loans or private loans at the lower interest rates currently offered to new borrowers, while maintaining full borrower protections of federal student loans (rather than forcing borrowers refinance with private banks). The loss of federal revenue from the lower loan interest income would require additional DOE direct spending (via its Direct Loan Program), according to the CBO, but would be offset in full by the “Buffet Rule” – a minimum 30% income tax payment from people who earn between $1 and $2 million.

From: John Del Cecato
To: Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Final TPA doc
Date: Monday, April 27, 2015 9:37:19 PM
Attachments: TheProgressiveAgendaFINAL4.docx
[default\[2\].xml](#)

The Progressive Agenda
To Combat Income Inequality
4/27/15
630pm

1. Lift the Floor for Working People

- Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.
- Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.
- Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
- Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

2.
Support
Working Families

- Pass national paid sick leave.
- Pass national paid family leave.
- Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
- Expand Earned Income Tax Credit.
- Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

3.
Tax
Fairness

- Close the carried interest loophole.
- End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
- Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to exploit "performance pay" write-offs.

###

On 4/27/15, 8:54 PM, "Leopold, Elana" <ELEopold@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>Did you send? Thanks

>

>Sent from my iPhone

>

>> On Apr 27, 2015, at 8:33 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

>>

>> Cool tx

>>

>>> On 4/27/15, 8:33 PM, "Leopold, Elana" <ELEopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>

>>>wrote:

>>>

>>> 9:45ish

>>>

>>> Sent from my iPhone

>>>

>>>> On Apr 27, 2015, at 8:32 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>

>>>>wrote:

>>>>

>>>> When is his dinner over approx?

>>>>

>>>>> On 4/27/15, 8:15 PM, "Leopold, Elana" <ELEopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>

>>>>> wrote:

>>>>>

>>>>> Mayor wanted me to reiterate that he wants the final doc tonight.

>>>>>JDC-

>>>>> can you get on the phone w him after his dinner and walk him through?

>>>>> Do

>>>>> we need others on the call? Thanks

>>>>>

>>>>> Sent from my iPhone

>>

The Progressive Agenda

To Combat Income Inequality

4/27/15

630pm

1. Lift the Floor for Working People

- Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.
- Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.
- Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
- Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

2. Support Working Families

- Pass national paid sick leave.
- Pass national paid family leave.
- Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
- Expand Earned Income Tax Credit.
- Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

3. Tax Fairness

- Close the carried interest loophole.
- End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
- Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to exploit "performance pay" write-offs.

###

From: John Del Cecato
To: Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Final TPA doc
Date: Monday, April 27, 2015 9:39:34 PM

Yeah, i sent to him a long time ago... i'll send again

On 4/27/15, 9:37 PM, "Leopold, Elana" <ELEopold@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>Ok- I assume you sent this to the mayor? I will tell him you are free to >chat when he's done

>

>Sent from my iPhone

>

>> On Apr 27, 2015, at 9:37 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

>>

>> The Progressive Agenda

>> To Combat Income Inequality

>> 4/27/15

>> 630pm

>>

>> 1. Lift the Floor for Working People

>>

>> · Raise the federal minimum >> wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.

>> · Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance >> workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.

>> · Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and >> protect against >> exploitation of low-wage workers.

>> · Oppose trade >> deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American >> jobs,

>> workers' rights, and the environment.

>>

>>

>> 2.

>> Support

>> Working Families

>>

>> · Pass national paid >> sick leave.

>> · Pass national paid >> family leave.

>> · Make Pre-K, after-school >> programs and childcare universal.

>> · Expand Earned

>> Income Tax Credit.

>> · Allow students to refinance >> student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

>>

>> 3.

>> Tax

>> Fairness

>>

>> · Close the carried >> interest loophole.

>> · End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.

>> · Implement the "Buffett
>> Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
>> · Close the CEO >> tax loophole that allows corporations to exploit "performance pay" >> write-offs.
>>
>> ###
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>> On 4/27/15, 8:54 PM, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
>>>wrote:
>>>
>>> Did you send? Thanks
>>>
>>> Sent from my iPhone
>>>
>>>> On Apr 27, 2015, at 8:33 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
>>>>wrote:
>>>>
>>>> Cool tx
>>>>
>>>>> On 4/27/15, 8:33 PM, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
>>>>> wrote:
>>>>>
>>>>> 9:45ish
>>>>>
>>>>> Sent from my iPhone
>>>>>
>>>>>> On Apr 27, 2015, at 8:32 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
>>>>>> wrote:
>>>>>>
>>>>>> When is his dinner over approx?
>>>>>>
>>>>>>> On 4/27/15, 8:15 PM, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
>>>>>>> wrote:
>>>>>>>
>>>>>>> Mayor wanted me to reiterate that he wants the final doc tonight.
>>>>>>> JDC-
>>>>>>> can you get on the phone w him after his dinner and walk him >>>>>>>through?
>>>>>>> Do
>>>>>>> we need others on the call? Thanks
>>>>>>>
>>>>>>> Sent from my iPhone
>>>>
>>
>> <TheProgressiveAgendaFINAL4.docx>
>> <default[2].xml>

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: Walzak, Phil; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Gunaratna, Mahen
Subject: Fw: TPA latest
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 7:38:33 AM

Anything explicitly we want to do for seniors?

From: Bill de Blasio [mailto:████████████████████]
Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 07:36 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: FLONYC; Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic; Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma; Snyder, Thomas; Fuleihan, Dean (OMB)
Subject: Re: TPA latest

Except for the persistent lack of "the" before EITC, I think it's great. Well done, John!

Is there anything of major concern to the CH team, or are we ready to lock down? Team, speak up pls asap.

And I assume we'll navigate whatever tough questions we get on paid family leave for NYC and the city government's lack of paid leave -- this will force us to address the issue, which we need to do anyway.

So last chance to weigh in on all this: speak now or forever hold your peace!

Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Date: Tue, 28 Apr 2015 01:41:03 +0000
To: Bill de Blasio <████████████████████>
Subject: TPA latest

The Progressive Agenda

To Combat Income Inequality

4/27/15
630pm

<!--[if !supportLists]-->1. <!--[endif]-->Lift the Floor for Working People

<!--[if !supportLists]-->• <!--[endif]-->Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->• <!--[endif]-->Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->• <!--[endif]-->Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->• <!--[endif]-->Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->2. <!--[endif]-->Support Working Families

<!--[if !supportLists]-->• <!--[endif]-->Pass national paid sick leave.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->• <!--[endif]-->Pass national paid family leave.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->• <!--[endif]-->Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->• <!--[endif]-->Expand Earned Income Tax Credit.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->• <!--[endif]-->Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->3. <!--[endif]-->Tax Fairness

<!--[if !supportLists]-->• <!--[endif]-->Close the carried interest loophole.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->• <!--[endif]-->End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->• <!--[endif]-->Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->• <!--[endif]-->Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to exploit "performance pay" write-offs.

###

From: Shorris, Anthony
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmmedia.com; FLONYC; Williams, Dominic; Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil; Snyder, Thomas; Wolfe, Emma; Fuleihan, Dean \(OMB\)
Subject: Re: TPA latest
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 7:54:51 AM

Works for me...fair taxation of capital gains and universal post-secondary education next please on the road to justice.

Anthony E. Shorris
First Deputy Mayor
City of New York
City Hall
New York, NY 10007
212-788-3191

> On Apr 28, 2015, at 7:52 AM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>

> Resending from govt email, which all we govt folks should use for this. Thanks

>

> -----Original Message-----

> To: John Del Cecato

> Cc: Chirlane McCray

> Cc: Tony Shorris

> Cc: Dom Williams

> Cc: Andrea Hagelgans

> Cc: Phil Walzak

> Cc: Emma Wolfe

> Cc: Tom Snyder

> Cc: Dean Fuleihan

> Subject: Re: TPA latest

> Sent: Apr 28, 2015 7:36 AM

>

>

> Except for the persistent lack of "the" before EITC, I think it's great. Well done, John!

>

> Is there anything of major concern to the CH team, or are we ready to lock down? Team, speak up pls asap.

>

> And I assume we'll navigate whatever tough questions we get on paid family leave for NYC and the city government's lack of paid leave -- this will force us to address the issue, which we need to do anyway.

>

> So last chance to weigh in on all this: speak now or forever hold your peace!

>

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: John Del Cecato

> To: Bill de Blasio

> Subject: TPA latest

> Sent: Apr 27, 2015 9:41 PM

>

- > The Progressive Agenda
- > To Combat Income Inequality
- > 4/27/15
- > 630pm
- >
- > 1. Lift the Floor for Working People
- >
- > · Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.
- > · Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.
- > · Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
- > · Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.
- >
- >
- > 2. Support Working Families
- >
- > · Pass national paid sick leave.
- > · Pass national paid family leave.
- > · Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
- > · Expand Earned Income Tax Credit.
- > · Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.
- >
- > 3. Tax Fairness
- >
- > · Close the carried interest loophole.
- > · End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- > · Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
- > · Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to exploit "performance pay" write-offs.
- >
- > ###
- >

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: John Del Cecato
Subject: Re: TPA latest
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 8:23:57 AM so what is plan, timing on sending this out for comment? will we be recommending a common message of intro to those who get it, when we want response, etc...

Sent from my iPad

> On Apr 28, 2015, at 7:59 AM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmmedia.com> wrote:

>

> Arggh - sorry about the missing "the" - will include...

>

> To Andrea - no, I think think we'll cover seniors in the op-ed we do with

> E. Warren... Can't do everything here...

>

> I've gotten backup from Dom & company on all the things you requested,

> Mayor... Will put into one document so that you have...

>

> On paid family leave, I'm at peace that we can focus on need for this to > be national effort - and as you say, that we're doing what we can vis a > vis Albany & seeing what incremental stuff we can do for city employees...

>

>

>

>> On 4/28/15, 7:52 AM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>>

>>

>> Resending from govt email, which all we govt folks should use for this.

>> Thanks

>>

>> -----Original Message-----

>> To: John Del Cecato

>> Cc: Chirlane McCray

>> Cc: Tony Shorris

>> Cc: Dom Williams

>> Cc: Andrea Hagelgans

>> Cc: Phil Walzak

>> Cc: Emma Wolfe

>> Cc: Tom Snyder

>> Cc: Dean Fuleihan

>> Subject: Re: TPA latest

>> Sent: Apr 28, 2015 7:36 AM

>>

>>

>> Except for the persistent lack of "the" before EITC, I think it's great.

>> Well done, John!

>>

>> Is there anything of major concern to the CH team, or are we ready to >> lock down? Team, speak up pls asap.

>>

>> And I assume we'll navigate whatever tough questions we get on paid >> family leave for NYC and the city government's lack of paid leave -- this >> will force us to address the issue, which we need to do anyway.

>>

>> So last chance to weigh in on all this: speak now or forever hold your >> peace!

>>
>>
>>
>> -----Original Message-----
>> From: John Del Cecato
>> To: Bill de Blasio
>> Subject: TPA latest
>> Sent: Apr 27, 2015 9:41 PM
>>
>> The Progressive Agenda
>> To Combat Income Inequality
>> 4/27/15
>> 630pm
>>
>> 1. Lift the Floor for Working People
>>
>> · Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while >> indexing it to inflation.
>> · Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right
>> to organize and rebuild the middle class.
>> · Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and >> protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
>> · Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the >> expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.
>>
>>
>> 2. Support Working Families
>>
>> · Pass national paid sick leave.
>> · Pass national paid family leave.
>> · Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
>> · Expand Earned Income Tax Credit.
>> · Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of >> lower interest rates.
>>
>> 3. Tax Fairness
>>
>> · Close the carried interest loophole.
>> · End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
>> · Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
>> · Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to exploit >> "performance pay" write-offs.
>>
>> ###
>

From: John Del Cecato
To: Walzak, Phil; B; FLONYC; Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic; Hagelgans, Andrea; Snyder, Thomas; Wolfe, Emma; Fuleihan, Dean \(OMB\)
Subject: Re: TPA latest
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 8:34:22 AM

I'm working on a backgrounder that addresses (most of) Phil's concerns.

On 4/28/15, 8:27 AM, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>I also think its great

>

>One thing we will have to prepare for is specifics on some of these >categories -- reform NLRA how/what provisions? What pieces of natl imm >reform? How to pay for universal childcare Etc -- but I like it overall v >much

>

>----- Original Message -----

>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

>Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 08:01 AM

>To: B; FLONYC; Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic; Hagelgans, Andrea;

>Walzak, Phil; Snyder, Thomas; Wolfe, Emma; Fuleihan, Dean (OMB)

>Subject: Re: TPA latest

>

>Arggh - sorry about the missing "the" - will include...

>

>To Andrea - no, I think think we'll cover seniors in the op-ed we do with >E. Warren... Can't do everything here...

>

>I've gotten backup from Dom & company on all the things you requested, >Mayor... Will put into one document so that you have...

>

>On paid family leave, I'm at peace that we can focus on need for this to >be national effort - and as you say, that we're doing what we can vis a >vis Albany & seeing what incremental stuff we can do for city employees...

>

>

>

>On 4/28/15, 7:52 AM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>>

>>Resending from govt email, which all we govt folks should use for this.

>>Thanks

>>

>>-----Original Message-----

>>To: John Del Cecato

>>Cc: Chirlane McCray

>>Cc: Tony Shorris

>>Cc: Dom Williams

>>Cc: Andrea Hagelgans

>>Cc: Phil Walzak

>>Cc: Emma Wolfe

>>Cc: Tom Snyder

>>Cc: Dean Fuleihan

>>Subject: Re: TPA latest

>>Sent: Apr 28, 2015 7:36 AM

>>

>>

>>Except for the persistent lack of "the" before EITC, I think it's great.
>>Well done, John!
>>
>>Is there anything of major concern to the CH team, or are we ready to >>lock down? Team, speak up pls asap.
>>
>>And I assume we'll navigate whatever tough questions we get on paid >>family leave for NYC and the city government's lack of paid leave -- this >>will force us to address the issue, which we need to do anyway.
>>
>>So last chance to weigh in on all this: speak now or forever hold your >>peace!
>>
>>
>>
>>-----Original Message-----
>>From: John Del Cecato
>>To: Bill de Blasio
>>Subject: TPA latest
>>Sent: Apr 27, 2015 9:41 PM
>>
>>The Progressive Agenda
>>To Combat Income Inequality
>>4/27/15
>>630pm
>>
>>1. Lift the Floor for Working People
>>
>>· Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while >>indexing it to inflation.
>>· Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right
>>to organize and rebuild the middle class.
>>· Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and
>>protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
>>· Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the >>expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.
>>
>>
>>2. Support Working Families
>>
>>· Pass national paid sick leave.
>>· Pass national paid family leave.
>>· Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
>>· Expand Earned Income Tax Credit.
>>· Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of >>lower interest rates.
>>
>>3. Tax Fairness
>>
>>· Close the carried interest loophole.
>>· End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
>>· Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
>>· Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to exploit >>"performance pay" write-offs.
>>
>>###
>>
>

From: John Del Cecato
To: Williams, Dominic; Snyder, Thomas; Mahen Gunaratna
Subject: Does this look right?
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 8:35:07 AM
Attachments: TPA BACKGROUNDER .docx

Combined Dom's stuff with some stuff I found re: NLRA... Shorter is always better for MBDB...

Reforming Labor Law

Background: When workers try to organize unions they are often harassed, intimidated or fired, taking away their bargaining power and harming their access to adequate wages and quality healthcare. Workers in unions earn 30 percent higher wages and are 63 percent more likely to have employer-provided health insurance.

Possible Solution: The Employee Free Choice Act: A Congressional bill that would make it easier for workers to join unions, make it easier for newly unionized workers to reach contracts with their employers, and strengthen penalties for those that violate labor law to seek to prevent workers from using their right to organize. The legislation removes the power of employers to demand an additional and separate ballot if a majority of employee signatures were collected. It also assigns the organizing union as the official collective bargaining representative if a majority of employee signatures are collected. The legislation also requires employers and their unions to enter binding arbitration to produce a collective agreement if one cannot be met 90 days after the unionization of employees, and after 30 days of mediation time (120 days total). The arbitration agreement would be binding for a period of two years. Lastly, the legislation increases penalties on employers who discriminate against workers for union involvement.

Immigration Reform and Wage Theft

Immigrant workers are even more vulnerable because they can be threatened with deportation. In 2002, the Supreme Court ruled that undocumented workers cannot seek basic labor protections because they are not legally allowed to work. Therefore, employers can subject undocumented immigrants to abuse and dangerous working conditions for little pay, without worrying about legal action.

<http://thinkprogress.org/immigration/2013/07/10/2276121/dc-undocumented-immigrant-wage-theft/>

Student Loan Refinancing

Background: Some with outstanding loans pay interest rates of 7% or higher for undergraduate loans, while students taking out new undergraduate loans pay 3.86% under the Bipartisan Student Loan Certainty Act passed by Congress in summer 2013. Outstanding student loans now total more than $1.2 trillion, surpassing total credit card debt. One in seven borrowers defaults on federal student loans within three years of beginning repayment.

Possible Solutions: S. 2432 – Bank on Students Emergency Loan Refinancing Act: Would allow more than 25 million people with outstanding student loan debt to refinance their federal student loans or private loans at the lower interest rates currently offered to new borrowers, while maintaining full borrower protections of federal student loans (rather than forcing borrowers refinance with private banks). The loss of federal revenue from the lower loan interest income would require additional DOE direct spending (via its Direct Loan Program), according to the CBO, but would be offset in full by the “Buffet Rule” – a minimum 30% income tax payment from people who earn between $1 and $2 million.

Paid Family Leave

The United States is the only advanced economy without a national paid-leave law. Only three states -- California, New Jersey and Rhode Island -- offer this critical support for working men and women. Even Human Rights Watch has noticed, citing America for failing its families in a scathing report a few years back. In the latest edition of Expecting Better, a report card issued annually by the National Partnership for Women and Families, not a single state merited an "A." California took home an A-minus, New Jersey, a B-plus, and New York, a lackluster B-minus.

<http://www.huffingtonpost.com/susan-ochshorn/new-yorks-real-wealth-pro b 6950998.html>

Tax Breaks for Shipping Jobs Overseas/Deferral/Inversion/Repatriation

SMALLER ONE (NOT AFFECTED BY REPATRIATION):

“Firms can generally deduct business expenses,” said Kimberly Clausing, the Thormund A. Miller and Walter Mintz Professor of Economics at Reed College. “Thus, of course, if firms incurred expenses in moving abroad, they would be able to deduct those expenses.”

BIGGER ONE (AFFECTED BY REPATRIATION):

We’ve also written before on several occasions that the tax code has long allowed U.S. corporations doing business abroad to defer paying taxes on any of their “unrepatriated income.” That is to say that the revenue earned by the company’s foreign subsidiary remains untaxed by the IRS until that money is brought back to the parent company in the U.S.

Sometimes politicians also refer to this as a “tax break for shipping jobs overseas.” And Clausing told us that this part of tax law could motivate companies to move business abroad.

“This can provide a huge incentive for locating jobs and income abroad, since many tax haven countries have tax rates that are very low, even approaching zero, and thus the money can grow abroad ‘tax free’ until it is repatriated,” she said.

<http://www.factcheck.org/2012/10/talking-tax-breaks-for-offshoring/>

From: John Del Cecato
To: Walzak, Phil; B; FLONYC; Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic; Hagelgans, Andrea; Snyder, Thomas; Wolfe, Emma; Fuleihan, Dean \(OMB\); Patchett, James
Subject: Re: TPA latest
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 8:36:49 AM
Attachments: TheProgressiveAgendaToCombatIncomeInequality.docx

Alicia/James - if you're at peace, I think we're good to go...

On 4/28/15, 8:27 AM, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>I also think its great

>

>One thing we will have to prepare for is specifics on some of these >categories -- reform NLRA how/what provisions? What pieces of natl imm >reform? How to pay for universal childcare Etc -- but I like it overall v >much

>

>----- Original Message -----

>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

>Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 08:01 AM

>To: B; FLONYC; Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic; Hagelgans, Andrea;

>Walzak, Phil; Snyder, Thomas; Wolfe, Emma; Fuleihan, Dean (OMB)

>Subject: Re: TPA latest

>

>Arggh - sorry about the missing "the" - will include...

>

>To Andrea - no, I think think we'll cover seniors in the op-ed we do with >E. Warren... Can't do everything here...

>

>I've gotten backup from Dom & company on all the things you requested, >Mayor... Will put into one document so that you have...

>

>On paid family leave, I'm at peace that we can focus on need for this to >be national effort - and as you say, that we're doing what we can vis a >vis Albany & seeing what incremental stuff we can do for city employees...

>

>

>

>On 4/28/15, 7:52 AM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>>

>>Resending from govt email, which all we govt folks should use for this.

>>Thanks

>>

>>-----Original Message-----

>>To: John Del Cecato

>>Cc: Chirlane McCray

>>Cc: Tony Shorris

>>Cc: Dom Williams

>>Cc: Andrea Hagelgans

>>Cc: Phil Walzak

>>Cc: Emma Wolfe

>>Cc: Tom Snyder

>>Cc: Dean Fuleihan

>>Subject: Re: TPA latest

>>Sent: Apr 28, 2015 7:36 AM

>>

>>
>>Except for the persistent lack of "the" before EITC, I think it's great.
>>Well done, John!
>>
>>Is there anything of major concern to the CH team, or are we ready to >>lock down? Team, speak up pls asap.
>>
>>And I assume we'll navigate whatever tough questions we get on paid >>family leave for NYC and the city government's lack of paid leave -- this >>will force us to address the issue, which we need to do anyway.
>>
>>So last chance to weigh in on all this: speak now or forever hold your >>peace!
>>
>>
>>
>>-----Original Message-----
>>From: John Del Cecato
>>To: Bill de Blasio
>>Subject: TPA latest
>>Sent: Apr 27, 2015 9:41 PM
>>
>>The Progressive Agenda
>>To Combat Income Inequality
>>4/27/15
>>630pm
>>
>>1. Lift the Floor for Working People
>>
>>· Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while >>indexing it to inflation.
>>· Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right
>>to organize and rebuild the middle class.
>>· Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and
>>protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
>>· Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the >>expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.
>>
>>
>>2. Support Working Families
>>
>>· Pass national paid sick leave.
>>· Pass national paid family leave.
>>· Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
>>· Expand Earned Income Tax Credit.
>>· Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of >>lower interest rates.
>>
>>3. Tax Fairness
>>
>>· Close the carried interest loophole.
>>· End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
>>· Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
>>· Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to exploit >>"performance pay" write-offs.
>>
>>###
>>
>

The Progressive Agenda

To Combat Income Inequality

1. Lift the Floor for Working People

- Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.
- Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.
- Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
- Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

2. Support Working Families

- Pass national paid sick leave.
- Pass national paid family leave.
- Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
- Expand the Earned Income Tax Credit.
- Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

3. Tax Fairness

- Close the carried interest loophole.
- End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
- Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to exploit "performance pay" write-offs.

###

From: Shorris, Anthony
To: "John Del Cecato"; Walzak, Phil; Williams, Dominic; Hagelgans, Andrea; Snyder, Thomas; Wolfe, Emma; Fuleihan, Dean \(OMB\)
Subject: RE: TPA latest
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 8:57:06 AM

I would recommend we have at least a paragraph -- if not a page -- on each of these describing the impact, the cost, any legislation already pending, what it would mean for NYC, and what NYC is already doing to advance this goal. If this is a formal governmental project, we can ask some combination of the DC office and the folks at CEO's research unit to do this for us. Otherwise, we can find outside folks I'm sure. What is the status on that aspect of this work?

-----Original Message-----

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 8:36 AM
To: Walzak, Phil; B; FLONYC; Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic; Hagelgans, Andrea; Snyder, Thomas; Wolfe, Emma; Fuleihan, Dean (OMB)
Subject: Re: TPA latest

I'm working on a backgrounder that addresses (most of) Phil's concerns.

On 4/28/15, 8:27 AM, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>I also think its great

>

>One thing we will have to prepare for is specifics on some of these >categories -- reform NLRA how/what provisions? What pieces of natl imm >reform? How to pay for universal childcare Etc -- but I like it overall >v much

>

>----- Original Message -----

>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
>Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 08:01 AM
>To: B; FLONYC; Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic; Hagelgans, Andrea;
>Walzak, Phil; Snyder, Thomas; Wolfe, Emma; Fuleihan, Dean (OMB)
>Subject: Re: TPA latest

>

>Arggh - sorry about the missing "the" - will include...

>

>To Andrea - no, I think think we'll cover seniors in the op-ed we do >with E. Warren... Can't do everything here...

>

>I've gotten backup from Dom & company on all the things you requested, >Mayor... Will put into one document so that you have...

>

>On paid family leave, I'm at peace that we can focus on need for this >to be national effort - and as you say, that we're doing what we can >vis a vis Albany & seeing what incremental stuff we can do for city >employees...

>

>

>

>On 4/28/15, 7:52 AM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>>

>>Resending from govt email, which all we govt folks should use for this.

>>Thanks

>>

>>-----Original Message-----

>>To: John Del Cecato
>>Cc: Chirlane McCray
>>Cc: Tony Shorris
>>Cc: Dom Williams
>>Cc: Andrea Hagelgans
>>Cc: Phil Walzak
>>Cc: Emma Wolfe
>>Cc: Tom Snyder
>>Cc: Dean Fuleihan
>>Subject: Re: TPA latest
>>Sent: Apr 28, 2015 7:36 AM

>>

>>

>>Except for the persistent lack of "the" before EITC, I think it's great.

>>Well done, John!

>>

>>Is there anything of major concern to the CH team, or are we ready to >>lock down? Team, speak up pls asap.

>>

>>And I assume we'll navigate whatever tough questions we get on paid >>family leave for NYC and the city government's lack of paid leave -- >>this will force us to address the issue, which we need to do anyway.

>>

>>So last chance to weigh in on all this: speak now or forever hold your >>peace!

>>

>>

>>

>>-----Original Message-----

>>From: John Del Cecato
>>To: Bill de Blasio
>>Subject: TPA latest
>>Sent: Apr 27, 2015 9:41 PM

>>

>>The Progressive Agenda

>>To Combat Income Inequality

>>4/27/15

>>630pm

>>

>>1. Lift the Floor for Working People

>>

>>· Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while >>indexing it to inflation.

>>· Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right
>>to organize and rebuild the middle class.

>>· Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and
>>protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.

>>· Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the >>expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

>>

>>

>>2. Support Working Families

>>

>>· Pass national paid sick leave.

>>· Pass national paid family leave.

>>· Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.

>>· Expand Earned Income Tax Credit.

>>· Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of >>lower interest rates.

```
>>
>>3. Tax Fairness
>>
>>· Close the carried interest loophole.
>>· End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
>>· Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
>>· Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to exploit >>"performance pay" write-offs.
>>
>>###
>>
>
```

From: John Del Cecato
To: Snyder, Thomas
Cc: Aaron PickrellEmail; John Davis; Hayley Prim; Jon Fromowitz
Subject: Re: TPA latest
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 9:20:14 AM
Attachments: TPAemail.docx

Here's updated

On 4/28/15, 9:13 AM, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>Real good. One question, should it mention signers are welcome/encouraged >to attend the May 12 event, or is that for a later invite?

>

>-----Original Message-----

>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

>Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 9:12 AM

>To: Snyder, Thomas

>Cc: Aaron PickrellEmail; John Davis; Hayley Prim; Jon Fromowitz

>Subject: Re: TPA latest

>

>Tom - what do you think of the following?

>

>Adding my team as well...

>

>

>

>On 4/28/15, 8:23 AM, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>>so what is plan, timing on sending this out for comment? will we be >>recommending a common message of intro to those who get it, when we >>want response, etc...

>>

>>Sent from my iPad

>>

>>>

>

On Tuesday, May 12 at 3:00pm, national progressive leaders will gather at the U.S. Capitol Building's House Triangle to declare their support for The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality.

The group of supporters will include federal and local elected officials, labor officials, cultural leaders, and progressive thought leaders.

The Progressive Agenda – a progressive alternative, of sorts, to the 1994 Republican Contract with America – will include specific proposals to lift the floor for working people, support working parents, and promote tax fairness – policies that reward work rather than just wealth.

The event stems from a summit that Mayor de Blasio convened in New York City in early April, where a small group of national progressive leaders gathered to discuss ways the country could combat the crisis of our time -- income inequality.

The Progressive Agenda builds upon the work of dozens of economists, lawmakers, think tanks, and progressive activists. It is not meant to be seen as a comprehensive collection of how to combat income inequality, but rather a bold collection of policy proposals around which progressives can organize and mobilize.

You are cordially invited to join us at 3pm on May 12!

If you cannot attend in person, we'd still urge you to sign on to the document.

To sign on, please email me back as soon as possible, but no later than this Friday, May 1.

Thanks for your consideration, and feel free to contact me with any questions or concerns.

The Progressive Agenda To Combat Income Inequality

1. Lift the Floor for Working People

- Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.
- Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.

- Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
- Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

2. Support Working Families

- Pass national paid sick leave.
- Pass national paid family leave.
- Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
- Expand the Earned Income Tax Credit.
- Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

3. Tax Fairness

- Close the carried interest loophole.
- End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
- Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to exploit "performance pay" write-offs.

###

From: Walzak, Phil
To: "John Del Cecato"; Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic; Hagelgans, Andrea; Snyder, Thomas; Wolfe, Emma; Fuleihan, Dean \(OMB\)
Subject: RE: TPA latest
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 9:23:45 AM

I agree w this approach

Have strong material at the ready to answer qs, push back on falsehoods -- but NOT overburden the msg

Agree

-----Original Message-----

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 9:18 AM
To: Shorris, Anthony; Walzak, Phil; Williams, Dominic; Hagelgans, Andrea; Snyder, Thomas; Wolfe, Emma; Fuleihan, Dean (OMB)
Subject: Re: TPA latest

Just to be clear, my interest/intent is in arming our outreach team with this info (in response to questions from potential signers), but NOT to distribute the backgrounder widely...

Tom & I (and others) were thinking that putting TOO much meat on the bones will give people an excuse to not sign on (because of this or that nitpicky provision in a certain piece of legislation)... We're trying to walk a line between being specific ENOUGH without being so specific that it will scare off folks..

On 4/28/15, 8:57 AM, "Shorris, Anthony" <AShorris@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>I would recommend we have at least a paragraph -- if not a page -- on >each of these describing the impact, the cost, any legislation already >pending, what it would mean for NYC, and what NYC is already doing to >advance this goal. If this is a formal governmental project, we can >ask some combination of the DC office and the folks at CEO's research >unit to do this for us. Otherwise, we can find outside folks I'm sure.
>What is the status on that aspect of this work?

>

>-----Original Message-----

>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
>Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 8:36 AM
>To: Walzak, Phil; B; FLONYC; Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic;
>Hagelgans, Andrea; Snyder, Thomas; Wolfe, Emma; Fuleihan, Dean (OMB)
>Subject: Re: TPA latest

>

>I'm working on a backgrounder that addresses (most of) Phil's concerns.

>

>On 4/28/15, 8:27 AM, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>>I also think its great

>>

>>One thing we will have to prepare for is specifics on some of these >>categories -- reform NLRA how/what provisions? What pieces of natl imm >>reform? How to pay for universal childcare Etc -- but I like it >>overall v much

>>

>>----- Original Message -----

>>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
>>Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 08:01 AM

>>To: B; FLONyc; Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic; Hagelgans, Andrea;
>>Walzak, Phil; Snyder, Thomas; Wolfe, Emma; Fuleihan, Dean (OMB)
>>Subject: Re: TPA latest
>>
>>Arggh - sorry about the missing "the" - will include...
>>
>>To Andrea - no, I think think we'll cover seniors in the op-ed we do >>with E. Warren... Can't do everything here...
>>
>>I've gotten backup from Dom & company on all the things you requested, >>Mayor... Will put into one document so that you have...
>>
>>On paid family leave, I'm at peace that we can focus on need for this >>to be national effort - and as you say, that we're doing what we can >>vis a vis Albany & seeing what incremental stuff we can do for city >>employees...
>>
>>
>>
>>On 4/28/15, 7:52 AM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
>>
>>>
>>>Resending from govt email, which all we govt folks should use for this.
>>>Thanks
>>>
>>>-----Original Message-----
>>>To: John Del Cecato
>>>Cc: Chirlane McCray
>>>Cc: Tony Shorris
>>>Cc: Dom Williams
>>>Cc: Andrea Hagelgans
>>>Cc: Phil Walzak
>>>Cc: Emma Wolfe
>>>Cc: Tom Snyder
>>>Cc: Dean Fuleihan
>>>Subject: Re: TPA latest
>>>Sent: Apr 28, 2015 7:36 AM
>>>
>>>
>>>Except for the persistent lack of "the" before EITC, I think it's great.
>>>Well done, John!
>>>
>>>Is there anything of major concern to the CH team, or are we ready to >>>lock down? Team, speak up pls asap.
>>>
>>>And I assume we'll navigate whatever tough questions we get on paid >>>family leave for NYC and the city government's lack of paid leave -- >>>this will force us to address the issue, which we need to do anyway.
>>>
>>>So last chance to weigh in on all this: speak now or forever hold >>>your peace!
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>-----Original Message-----
>>>From: John Del Cecato
>>>To: Bill de Blasio
>>>Subject: TPA latest
>>>Sent: Apr 27, 2015 9:41 PM
>>>

>>>The Progressive Agenda
>>>To Combat Income Inequality
>>>4/27/15
>>>630pm
>>>
>>>1. Lift the Floor for Working People
>>>
>>>· Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, >>>while
>>>indexing it to inflation.
>>>· Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers'
>>>right
>>>to organize and rebuild the middle class.
>>>· Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and
>>>protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
>>>· Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the >>>expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.
>>>
>>>
>>>2. Support Working Families
>>>
>>>· Pass national paid sick leave.
>>>· Pass national paid family leave.
>>>· Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
>>>· Expand Earned Income Tax Credit.
>>>· Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage
>>>of
>>>lower interest rates.
>>>
>>>3. Tax Fairness
>>>
>>>· Close the carried interest loophole.
>>>· End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
>>>· Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair >>>share.
>>>· Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to exploit >>>"performance pay" write-offs.
>>>
>>>###
>>>
>>
>

From: John Del Cecato
To: Snyder, Thomas
Cc: Aaron PickrellEmail; John Davis; Hayley Prim; Jon Fromowitz
Subject: Re: TPA latest
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 10:07:38 AM

Yes, that is all good

From: <Snyder>, Thomas <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 at 9:45 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: Aaron PickrellEmail <[REDACTED]> John Davis <[REDACTED]> Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> Jon Fromowitz <jfromowitz@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: RE: TPA latest

I think it looks good. Final pester. Do I assume correctly that the ENTIRE list will be emailed this morning and that each of our people assigned to a target will regularly update info on the google doc? And I think that instead of relying upon individuals to periodically see how we're doing, it would be good to get at least one, possibly two, consolidated result reports per day. (And not assume that everyone is plugging into google doc.) Or at least send me one consolidated report per day so I can keep up to speed in real time. Can you make this happen?

-----Original Message-----

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 9:21 AM
To: Snyder, Thomas
Cc: Aaron PickrellEmail; John Davis; Hayley Prim; Jon Fromowitz
Subject: Re: TPA latest

Here's updated

On 4/28/15, 9:13 AM, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>Real good. One question, should it mention signers are >welcome/encouraged to attend the May 12 event, or is that for a later invite?
>

>-----Original Message-----

>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
>Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 9:12 AM
>To: Snyder, Thomas
>Cc: Aaron PickrellEmail; John Davis; Hayley Prim; Jon Fromowitz
>Subject: Re: TPA latest

>
>Tom - what do you think of the following?
>

>Adding my team as well...

>

>

>

>On 4/28/15, 8:23 AM, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>>so what is plan, timing on sending this out for comment? will we be >>recommending a common message of intro to those who get it, when we >>want response, etc...

>>

>>Sent from my iPad

>>

>>>

>

From: John Del Cecato
To: Patchett, James
Subject: Re: TPA latest
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 10:25:18 AM

I don't see any harm in that. Thank you!

On 4/28/15, 10:22 AM, "Patchett, James" <JPatchett@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>We're good if we can change "exploit" to "take advantage of" in the last >bullet

>
>

>----- Original Message -----

>>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

>>Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 10:20 AM

>>To: Patchett, James

>>Subject: Re: TPA latest

>

>awesome

>

>>On 4/28/15, 10:11 AM, "Patchett, James" <JPatchett@cityhall.nyc.gov>

>>wrote:

>>

>>>She's been at a breakfast. She should call me in the next 15 minutes.

>>>

>>>-----Original Message-----

>>>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

>>>Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 10:06 AM

>>>To: Patchett, James

>>>Subject: Re: TPA latest

>>>

>>>You think we can have a green light/blessing by 11am at the latest?

>>>Really need to get this thing moving

>>>

>>>On 4/28/15, 9:37 AM, "Patchett, James" <JPatchett@cityhall.nyc.gov>

>>>wrote:

>>>

>>>>As soon as I see Alicia, I will double check with her.

>>>>

>>>>-----Original Message-----

>>>>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

>>>>Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 8:38 AM

>>>>To: Walzak, Phil; B; FLONYC; Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic;

>>>>Hagelgans, Andrea; Snyder, Thomas; Wolfe, Emma; Fuleihan, Dean (OMB);

>>>>Patchett, James

>>>>Subject: Re: TPA latest

>>>>

>>>>>Alicia/James - if you're at peace, I think we're good to go...

>>>>>

>>>>>On 4/28/15, 8:27 AM, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>>>>>

>>>>>>I also think its great

>>>>>>

>>>>>>One thing we will have to prepare for is specifics on some of these >>>>>>categories -- reform NLRA how/what provisions? What pieces of natl imm >>>>>>reform? How to pay for universal childcare Etc -- but I like it >>>>>>overall v much

>>>>
>>>>----- Original Message -----
>>>>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
>>>>Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 08:01 AM
>>>>To: B; FLONYC; Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic; Hagelgans, Andrea;
>>>>Walzak, Phil; Snyder, Thomas; Wolfe, Emma; Fuleihan, Dean (OMB)
>>>>Subject: Re: TPA latest
>>>>
>>>>Arggh - sorry about the missing "the" - will include...
>>>>
>>>>To Andrea - no, I think think we'll cover seniors in the op-ed we do >>>>with E. Warren... Can't do everything here...
>>>>
>>>>I've gotten backup from Dom & company on all the things you requested, >>>>Mayor... Will put into one document so that you have...
>>>>
>>>>On paid family leave, I'm at peace that we can focus on need for this >>>>to be national effort - and as you say, that we're doing what we can >>>>vis a vis Albany & seeing what incremental stuff we can do for city >>>>employees...
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>On 4/28/15, 7:52 AM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>Resending from govt email, which all we govt folks should use for >>>>>this.
>>>>>Thanks
>>>>>
>>>>>-----Original Message-----
>>>>>To: John Del Cecato
>>>>>Cc: Chirlane McCray
>>>>>Cc: Tony Shorris
>>>>>Cc: Dom Williams
>>>>>Cc: Andrea Hagelgans
>>>>>Cc: Phil Walzak
>>>>>Cc: Emma Wolfe
>>>>>Cc: Tom Snyder
>>>>>Cc: Dean Fuleihan
>>>>>Subject: Re: TPA latest
>>>>>Sent: Apr 28, 2015 7:36 AM
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>Except for the persistent lack of "the" before EITC, I think it's >>>>>great.
>>>>>Well done, John!
>>>>>
>>>>>Is there anything of major concern to the CH team, or are we ready to >>>>>lock down? Team, speak up pls asap.
>>>>>
>>>>>And I assume we'll navigate whatever tough questions we get on paid >>>>>family leave for NYC and the city government's lack of paid leave -- >>>>>this will force us to address the issue, which we need to do anyway.
>>>>>
>>>>>So last chance to weigh in on all this: speak now or forever hold >>>>>your peace!
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>

>>>>-----Original Message-----

>>>>From: John Del Cecato

>>>>To: Bill de Blasio

>>>>Subject: TPA latest

>>>>Sent: Apr 27, 2015 9:41 PM

>>>>

>>>>The Progressive Agenda

>>>>To Combat Income Inequality

>>>>4/27/15

>>>>630pm

>>>>

>>>>1. Lift the Floor for Working People

>>>>

>>>>· Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour,

>>>>while

>>>>>indexing it to inflation.

>>>>· Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers'

>>>>>right

>>>>>to organize and rebuild the middle class.

>>>>· Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and

>>>>>protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.

>>>>· Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the >>>>>expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

>>>>

>>>>

>>>>2. Support Working Families

>>>>

>>>>· Pass national paid sick leave.

>>>>· Pass national paid family leave.

>>>>· Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.

>>>>· Expand Earned Income Tax Credit.

>>>>· Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage

>>>>>of

>>>>>lower interest rates.

>>>>

>>>>3. Tax Fairness

>>>>

>>>>· Close the carried interest loophole.

>>>>· End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.

>>>>· Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair >>>>>share.

>>>>· Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to exploit

>>>>>"performance pay" write-offs.

>>>>

>>>>###

>>>>

>>>>

>>>

>>

>

From: John Del Cecato
To: B; FLONYC; Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic; Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil; Snyder, Thomas; Wolfe, Emma; Fuleihan, Dean \(OMB\); Leopold, Flana
Subject: Re: TPA latest
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 10:29:56 AM
Attachments: TheProgressiveAgendaToCombatIncomeInequality.docx
TPAemail.docx
[default\[4\].xml](#)

Alicia has signed off - just asked that we change "exploit" to "take advantage of" for the CEO Pay Loophole, which I am fine with.

Final document, along with email that we'll be sending out as soon as MBDB blesses, is below:

On Tuesday, May 12 at 3:00pm, national progressive leaders will gather at the U.S. Capitol Building's House Triangle to declare their support for The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality.

The group of supporters will include federal and local elected officials, labor officials, cultural leaders, and progressive thought leaders.

The Progressive Agenda – a progressive alternative, of sorts, to the 1994 Republican Contract with America – will include specific proposals to lift the floor for working people, support working parents, and promote tax fairness – policies that reward work rather than just wealth.

The event stems from a summit that Mayor de Blasio convened in New York City in early April, where a small group of national progressive leaders gathered to discuss ways the country could combat the crisis of our time -- income inequality.

The Progressive Agenda builds upon the work of dozens of economists, lawmakers, think tanks, and progressive activists. It is not meant to be seen as a comprehensive collection of how to combat income inequality, but rather a bold collection of policy proposals around which progressives can organize and mobilize.

You are cordially invited to join us at 3pm on May 12!

If you cannot attend in person, we'd still urge you to sign on to the document.

To sign on, please email me back as soon as possible, but no later than this Friday, May 1.

Thanks for your consideration, and feel free to contact me with any questions or concerns.

The Progressive Agenda
To Combat Income Inequality

1. Lift the Floor for Working People

- Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.
- Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.
- Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
- Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

2.
Support
Working Families

- Pass national paid sick leave.
- Pass national paid family leave.
- Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
- Expand the Earned Income Tax Credit.
- Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

3.
Tax
Fairness

- Close the carried interest loophole.
- End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
- Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to take advantage of "performance pay" write-offs.

###

On 4/28/15, 7:52 AM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>Resending from govt email, which all we govt folks should use for this.

>Thanks

>

>-----Original Message-----

>To: John Del Cecato

>Cc: Chirlane McCray

>Cc: Tony Shorris

>Cc: Dom Williams

>Cc: Andrea Hagelgans

>Cc: Phil Walzak

>Cc: Emma Wolfe

>Cc: Tom Snyder

>Cc: Dean Fuleihan

>Subject: Re: TPA latest

>Sent: Apr 28, 2015 7:36 AM

>

>

>Except for the persistent lack of "the" before EITC, I think it's great.

>Well done, John!

>

>Is there anything of major concern to the CH team, or are we ready to >lock down? Team, speak up pls asap.

>

>And I assume we'll navigate whatever tough questions we get on paid >family leave for NYC and the city government's lack of paid leave -- this >will force us to address the issue, which we need to do anyway.

>

>So last chance to weigh in on all this: speak now or forever hold your >peace!

>

>

>

>-----Original Message-----

>From: John Del Cecato

>To: Bill de Blasio

>Subject: TPA latest

>Sent: Apr 27, 2015 9:41 PM

>

>The Progressive Agenda

>To Combat Income Inequality

>4/27/15

>630pm

>

>1. Lift the Floor for Working People

>

>· Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while >indexing it to inflation.

>· Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right
>to organize and rebuild the middle class.

>· Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and
>protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.

>· Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the >expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

>

>

>2. Support Working Families

>

>· Pass national paid sick leave.

>· Pass national paid family leave.

>· Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.

>· Expand Earned Income Tax Credit.

- >· Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of
- >lower interest rates.
- >
- >3. Tax Fairness
- >
- >· Close the carried interest loophole.
- >· End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- >· Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
- >· Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to exploit
- >"performance pay" write-offs.
- >
- >###
- >

The Progressive Agenda

To Combat Income Inequality

1. Lift the Floor for Working People

- Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.
- Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.
- Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
- Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

2. Support Working Families

- Pass national paid sick leave.
- Pass national paid family leave.
- Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
- Expand the Earned Income Tax Credit.
- Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

3. Tax Fairness

- Close the carried interest loophole.
- End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
- Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to take advantage of "performance pay" write-offs.

###

On Tuesday, May 12 at 3:00pm, national progressive leaders will gather at the U.S. Capitol Building's House Triangle to declare their support for The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality.

The group of supporters will include federal and local elected officials, labor officials, cultural leaders, and progressive thought leaders.

The Progressive Agenda – a progressive alternative, of sorts, to the 1994 Republican Contract with America – will include specific proposals to lift the floor for working people, support working parents, and promote tax fairness – policies that reward work rather than just wealth.

The event stems from a summit that Mayor de Blasio convened in New York City in early April, where a small group of national progressive leaders gathered to discuss ways the country could combat the crisis of our time -- income inequality.

The Progressive Agenda builds upon the work of dozens of economists, lawmakers, think tanks, and progressive activists. It is not meant to be seen as a comprehensive collection of how to combat income inequality, but rather a bold collection of policy proposals around which progressives can organize and mobilize.

You are cordially invited to join us at 3pm on May 12!

If you cannot attend in person, we'd still urge you to sign on to the document.

To sign on, please email me back as soon as possible, but no later than this Friday, May 1.

Thanks for your consideration, and feel free to contact me with any questions or concerns.

The Progressive Agenda To Combat Income Inequality

1. Lift the Floor for Working People

- Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.
- Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.

- Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
- Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

2. Support Working Families

- Pass national paid sick leave.
- Pass national paid family leave.
- Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
- Expand the Earned Income Tax Credit.
- Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

3. Tax Fairness

- Close the carried interest loophole.
- End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
- Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to take advantage of "performance pay" write-offs.

###

From: Carey, Michael
To: B
Cc: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com" (jfdc@akpdmedia.com); Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Al Gore
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 12:16:01 PM

Should have put a Subject: And that would have been Al Gore.

Michael Paul Carey
Director of Scheduling and Advance
City Hall
New York, New York 10007
212.341.5396

From: Carey, Michael
Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 12:07 PM
To: B
Cc: 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' (jfdc@akpdmedia.com); Snyder, Thomas
Subject:

He just called me to say he can't make it to DC on the 12th. I sent him the document to see if he would at least sign on.

Michael Paul Carey
Director of Scheduling and Advance
City Hall
New York, New York 10007
212.341.5396

From: B
To: Carey, Michael
Cc: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Snyder, Thomas; [REDACTED]
Subject: Gore
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 12:26:21 PM

Thanks. And I will follow up with him re: potential of sign-on and/or a separate event built around his sched

From: Carey, Michael
Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 12:07 PM
To: B
Cc: 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' (jfdc@akpdmedia.com) <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Snyder, Thomas
Subject:

He just called me to say he can't make it to DC on the 12th. I sent him the document to see if he would at least sign on.

Michael Paul Carey
Director of Scheduling and Advance
City Hall
New York, New York 10007
212.341.5396

From: Williams, Dominic
To: [REDACTED] Snyder, Thomas
Cc: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Re: Does this look right?
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 12:44:10 PM

Let's use these numbers:

The Bureau of Labor Statistics has updated its statistics to reflect the 2014 annual averages, and shows that the median weekly earnings of full time wage or salaried union members is $970, while non-union workers median weekly earnings is $763, a 27% difference (Bureau of Labor Statistics, Economic News Release: Union Membership, Table 2., <http://www.bls.gov/news.release/union2.t02.htm>, <http://www.bls.gov/news.release/union2.t02.htm>, January 25, 2015).

In 2009, the Center for American Progress published a report showing that union workers are 28.2 percent more likely to be covered by employer-provided health insurance and 53.9 percent more likely to have employer-provided pensions compared to non-union workers with similar characteristics (Madland, David & Karla Walter, Unions Are Good for the American Economy, Center for American Progress Action Fund, http://images2.americanprogress.org/CAPAF/2009/02/US_EFCA.pdf, February 18, 2009).

From: Mahen Gunaratna [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 11:29 AM
To: Snyder, Thomas
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Williams, Dominic
Subject: Re: Does this look right?

In addition to Tom's points, what's the exact backup/sourcing for the 63% more likely to have insurance stat?

Recommend we run some of this congressional/legislative language by our Federal Affairs shop - msevillia@cityhall.nyc.gov or [REDACTED].

On Tue, Apr 28, 2015 at 9:05 AM, Snyder, Thomas <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

2 things:

On Labor Law, are you sure about the 30% higher wage premium?

On Immigration Reform, you cover the wage theft argument but have nothing on the claim that reform grows the economy. I know that CAP has issued a number of reports that document this claim.

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 8:36 AM
To: Williams, Dominic; Snyder, Thomas; Mahen Gunaratna
Subject: Does this look right?

Combined Dom's stuff with some stuff I found re: NLRA... Shorter is always better for MBDB...

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: Hayley Prim; Aaron PickrellEmail; John Davis
Subject: Re: TPA
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 1:47:51 PM

Thanks

Sent from my iPhone

On Apr 28, 2015, at 1:19 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

Haha - no - I appreciate the pressure!

Let's say 5pm ET for the report back from 11am until then

From: <Snyder>, Thomas <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 at 1:14 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: TPA

Me again...what do you think is a good time each day to get me a consolidated results list of signers, etc onto the TPA? First thing in morning, end of day? Whatever? Tired of me yet?

From: John Del Cecato
To: Stephanie Yazgi; Neal Kwatra; Wolfe, Emma; Agarwal, Nisha; James Freedland
Subject: Re: CITIES FOR ACTION REBRAND concepts
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 1:59:50 PM

I like number 4

From: Stephanie Yazgi <[REDACTED]>
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 at 11:07 AM
To: Neal Kwatra <[REDACTED]> John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Emma Mw <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Agarwal, Nisha" <NAgarwal@cityhall.nyc.gov>, James Freedland <[REDACTED]>
Subject: CITIES FOR ACTION REBRAND concepts

Guys... we want to set up a website for transportation day of action.
These are the latest concepts for Cities for Action.

Any preferences?

Nisha- can we soon move the CUIA page to under IMMIGRATION tab if we are able to get this generic website up and running and using the citiesforaction.us?

should we wait on that and do a larger roll out?

Mine is between 3 and 4.. like the gradient, but also like the little retro icons by each issue

Thoughts?

Stephanie

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: TPA media
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 2:04:58 PM

Are we giving any journalist an exclusive on the email that went out today? Back to Dan Balz? Or is it too late?

From: John Del Cecato
To: B: [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: I'm 100% with Elizabeth Warren and Sherrod Brown
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 2:14:30 PM

I said the same thing!! Great minds

On 4/28/15, 2:06 PM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>
>Then he should be 100% with us, too :)
>
>-----Original Message-----
>From: Ted Strickland
>Sender: Ted Strickland
>To: Bill de Blasio
>ReplyTo: info@tedstrickland.com
>Subject: I'm 100% with Elizabeth Warren and Sherrod Brown
>Sent: Apr 28, 2015 1:06 PM
>
>Hey Bill –
>I'm ready to help lead in the U.S. Senate.
>This weekend, Senators Sherrod Brown and Elizabeth Warren wrote a >powerful letter to President Obama, and if I were in the U.S. Senate, I >would stand with them 100%.
>They call on President Obama to stop keeping secrets from the American >people and to disclose details of the proposed Trans-Pacific Partnership >(TPP).
>The bottom line: Our leaders must fight for everyday citizens -- not for >corporations that make deals behind closed doors.
>Yet, my opponent supports this devastating free-trade agreement that will >ship millions of American jobs overseas, just like NAFTA did before. He >happily rakes in cash from Wall Street and other corporate special >interests, while Ohioans struggle to make ends meet.
>But Wall Street doesn't own this Senate seat. This is our seat, our >Senate, our fight.
>I'm facing an important fundraising deadline at the end of this month.
>Will you contribute now to help our campaign reach our $10,000 >fundraising goal before midnight April 30?
>If you've saved your payment information with ActBlue Express, your >donation will go through immediately:
>Express Donate: $10
>Express Donate: $25
>Express Donate: $100
>Or, donate another amount.
>We're fighting against big corporations who flood millions of dollars >into our political system and drown any hope for hardworking Americans to >reach the American dream.
>I'm tired of it. Americans are tired of it. It's not good enough, and >America needs to change.
>We're all in this together, and together, we can make our government work >for everyday Americans again. Chip in today, before the end-of-month >deadline:
><https://secure.actblue.com/contribute/page/10KforTed>.
>Thanks for all you do,
>Ted
>
>CONTRIBUTE»

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>Paid for by Strickland for Senate
>
>
>
>Contributions or gifts to Strickland for Senate are not tax deductible.
>
>
>Strickland for Senate
>545 East Town Street
>Columbus OH 43215 United States
>
>If you believe you received this message in error or wish to no longer >receive email from us, please unsubscribe.

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Cc: Snyder, Thomas; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Fw: Warren-BDB Op-Ed
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 3:05:34 PM

GOVERNMENT EMAIL. JDC, STOP!!! STOP sending me email re: TPA to my personal email. Government email only when addressing all of us on TPA

-----Original Message-----

To: John Del Cecato
To: Phil Walzak
To: Andrea Hagelgans
Subject: Re: Warren-BDB Op-Ed
Sent: Apr 28, 2015 3:03 PM

Excellent. And much better if it would be published pre-May 12 (soon as possible) and reference Stiglitz more broadly -- or even tease that his report is coming, which would increase interest in it (I'm happy to call Elizabeth to make this point if needed). Approved. Pls keep me posted. And let Dan know I've talked to Stiglitz repeatedly on strategy and we want to magnify all he's doing -- which means we need roll-ins and rollouts connected to his conference

-----Original Message-----

From: John Del Cecato
To: Bill de Blasio
To: Phil Walzak
To: Andrea Hagelgans
Subject: Warren-BDB Op-Ed
Sent: Apr 28, 2015 12:45 PM

Took out the "added planks."
Switched out predators for manipulators.
Added some movement stuff to punch up the end.
Let me know if I can send back to Team Warren.

In this land of big dreams, there was never a dream bigger or more important than the one so deeply rooted in our values that it became known as the American Dream. Across generations and geography, Americans shared the belief that hard work would bring opportunity and a better life for everyone. America wasn't perfect, but we invested in our kids and put in place policies to build a strong middle class.

We don't do that anymore, and the result is clear: the rich get richer, while everyone else falls behind. The game is rigged, and the people who rigged it want it to stay that way. They claim that if we act to improve the economic well-being of hard-working Americans -- whether by increasing the minimum wage, reining in the Wall Street manipulators, or practically anything else -- we threaten economic growth.

They are wrong.

In a report this week, economist Joseph E. Stiglitz has provided the latest proof that they're absolutely upside down in their thinking. It's a false choice to decide between economic growth and strengthening the middle class. In fact, the growing disparity between rich and poor, Stiglitz shows, actually "leads to lower growth and less efficiency.”[DG1]

The foundations for the Stiglitz report are simple: When there’s a strong middle class, consumers have money to spend at businesses, and when businesses have more customers they build more factories, hire more workers, and sell more products – and the economy grows. But when customers don’t have money, they can’t buy, and that means businesses can’t grow.

For decades, our economy was built around this core understanding. We embraced the idea that we were all in this together. We made big investments in the things that would create opportunities for everyone: public schools and universities; roads and bridges and power grids; research that took us to the moon and back and then into cyberspace. We supported strong unions that pushed for better wages and working conditions, seeing those unions improve lives both for their own members and for workers everywhere, union or not.

And it worked. From the 1930s to the late 1970s, as GDP went up, wages increased more or less across the board. In fact, 90 percent of all workers got about 70 percent of all new income growth. Sure, the richest 10 percent gobbled up more than their share, but overall, as the economic pie got bigger, pretty much everyone was getting a little more—that was how America built a great middle class.

And then in the early 1980s, a new theory swept the country. Some said that if government policies took care of the rich and powerful, wealth would trickle down for everyone else. Trickle-down advocates cut taxes sharply for those at the top, and pushed for “deregulation” -- hobbling the cops on Wall Street and letting the most powerful corporations do as they pleased.

In modern history, we’ve seen trickle-down economics fail disastrously. The rich and powerful have become richer and more powerful, while everyone else was left behind. In the last 35 years, the top 10 percent got ALL the growth in income—ALL of it. The rest of America – 90 percent of Americans – got nothing. Zip. Zero.

Government policies matter. Strengthening the American dream is about the basics:

Make work pay by increasing the minimum wage, empowering unions to bargain collectively, improving scheduling practices[JD2] , passing paid family leave, and making sure people get the overtime pay they deserve.

End the squeeze on working parents by investing in pre-school and childcare, after-school programs, and extended learning days. Let families with children have a chance to build some economic security on their own.

Ensure everyone can get a great education without drowning in debt. Rein in the cost of college and allow families to refinance student loans at lower rates. Give every child in America access to full-day pre-kindergarten[JD3] . Education is still the best ticket to the middle class.

Focus on research and innovation needed to develop the technologies of the future. Investments in medical and scientific research let us build whole new industries and give us the chance to create good jobs right here in America.

Invest in infrastructure – in roads, bridges, rail, water, power and broadband. Businesses—and the jobs they create—can’t grow if the foundation is crumbling beneath us. A 21st Century economy needs 21st Century infrastructure.

Strengthen and expand Social Security, not just for today’s seniors, but for today’s young people. Work is changing. A strong Social Security system will ensure that every worker, no matter the companies or number of jobs they piece together during their careers, can count on a secure retirement.

Strengthen the rules of the marketplace. We don’t build a future by turning the biggest banks loose to do whatever they want, and markets don’t create value when corporations can deliberately cheat people or roll over their upstart competition.

Reform the tax code: End the billions in tax breaks for corporations shipping jobs overseas and the big oil companies, and level the playing field so that millionaires and billionaires pay their fair share.

It won't be easy, but real change rarely is. It's time to be bold.

Just last month, 60,000 workers in 200 cities took to the streets to fight for a higher minimum wage.

That is where real change comes from – grassroots organizing, fueled by a common mission. Neighborhood by neighborhood. Block by block.

The American people are standing up and speaking out. Their elected leaders need to listen. The American dream hangs in the balance.

##

[DG1]Note that this is a placeholder until we get a copy of the draft report from Roosevelt.

[JD2]Do we need to make this more clear?

[JD3]Should we cut the "pre-school" reference earlier so people aren't confused?

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Cc: [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: Keep me posted
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 4:29:30 PM

Okay - good point on Morrison.

But as far as getting core signatures goes, I think that's the process we're undergoing right now. The document isn't "locked" until May 12th. I just wanted to push people to THINK about it being locked to discourage lower-level folks from futzing with it.

From: BDB Official <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 at 3:12 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> Aaron PickrellEmail <[REDACTED]>
" [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: Keep me posted

She is different than everyone else. And it's easy for he not to sign -- and for many others too. You can say the language is fixed when you have a bunch of signatories in place. And so NOW it dawns on me that we should have secured a core set on signatures and sent it around with singnatories already on board to anchor it. We may pay for that mistake. We need yesses quickly so we have a rationale for sticking to the wording as is

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 02:59 PM
To: B
Cc: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
<[REDACTED]> <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: Keep me posted

True. And while I originally asked Hayley to send to you - now I'm kinda thinking we handle at staff level and see if we can ram thru/just tell her the Language is set

On Apr 28, 2015, at 2:58 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Interesting. Well, this is the kind of thing we'll get a lot of. Let's think about how to handle. AND I might also ask her NOT to sign but still to write something for our effort

From: Hayley Prim [mailto: [REDACTED]]

Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 02:28 PM

To: B

Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; [REDACTED]
<[REDACTED]> [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>

Subject: Re: Keep me posted

Feedback from Toni Morrison:

She thinks the trade deal language we use is too confrontational, and suggests saying the below instead. She said if we change it to this, then she would sign on...

Instead of Oppose, she wants:

"Closely examine trade deals to ensure they do not hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment."

Might be worth a call from you.

On Tue, Apr 28, 2015 at 12:37 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Let me know any anecdotal info throughout the day as to how people are responding to the TPA. Thanks

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
To: Carey, Michael; Walzak, Phil; John Del Cecato \(jfdc@akpdmedia.com\); Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: FW: NY Times: Richard Trumka, A.F.L.-C.I.O. Chief, Warns Candidates on Inequality
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 5:11:42 PM

In terms of scheduling, should coordinate with AFL-CIO to make sure that Mayor's presidential forum doesn't conflict with any of the four "Raising Wage Summits" announced today

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 4:48 PM
To: B; FLONYC
Cc: John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com); Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma; [REDACTED] Walzak, Phil
Subject: NY Times: Richard Trumka, A.F.L.-C.I.O. Chief, Warns Candidates on Inequality

3:45PM ET

BY Jonathan Martin

Richard Trumka, A.F.L.-C.I.O. Chief, Warns Candidates on Inequality

Richard Trumka, the president of the A.F.L.-C.I.O., vowed Tuesday that organized labor would no longer accept "cautious half-measures" from presidential candidates about how to address economic fairness, an implicit but unmistakable attempt to nudge Hillary Rodham Clinton toward embracing a liberal agenda during her presidential run.

Without mentioning Mrs. Clinton by name, Mr. Trumka used pointed language to blame the business-friendly approach of both parties for soaring income inequality and stagnant wages.

"Workers have swallowed the politics of hedged bets for almost two generations," Mr. Trumka said in a speech at the labor federation's headquarters in Washington. "We've waited for the scraps that remain after the pollsters shape the politics."

His comments come as unions and other groups on the left are moving more aggressively to demand that employers and politicians act boldly to improve the prospects of working-class Americans. The push from the left has created tensions within the Democratic Party, most notably on trade.

Labor is aggressively lobbying to block the Trans-Pacific Partnership, a free trade pact between the United States and a dozen Pacific Rim nations that unions say would result in job losses and lower wages. President Obama and his top advisers have scrambled to rebut such claims, and Mr. Obama has even tangled publicly with high-profile opponents of the agreement, including Senator Elizabeth Warren, Democrat of Massachusetts. A group of unions, including the federation itself, have suspended contributions to members of Congress until after a vote on the pact.

Mrs. Clinton supported the Trans-Pacific Partnership as Mr. Obama's secretary of state, but has sidestepped the issue since beginning her presidential campaign.

"Any trade deal has to produce jobs and raise wages and increase prosperity and protect our security," she said last week in New Hampshire.

Mr. Trumka made clear that he wanted Mrs. Clinton, and all the White House hopefuls, to unambiguously state their opposition both to the trade pact and any "fast track" measure giving presidents the authority to negotiate trade agreements that Congress cannot amend.

"The labor movement opposes fast track," the union leader said. "And we expect those who seek to lead our nation forward to oppose fast track, as well. There's no middle ground, and the time for deliberations is drawing to a close."

Asked after his speech specifically about Mrs. Clinton's position on the trade agreement, Mr. Trumka said: "No candidate can be silent on any issue that's important to the people. She'll have to respond like every other candidate."

With such pointed but carefully delivered language — referring to the entire presidential field rather than singling out Mrs. Clinton — Mr. Trumka is walking a line between pressuring the likely Democratic standard-bearer on behalf of his members without angering her and her top advisers and risk losing influence should she become president. Unions are widely expected to ultimately rally behind Mrs. Clinton's campaign, just as many of them did during her 2008 bid.

Mr. Trumka, however, did want to send a message to Mrs. Clinton about labor's frustration with some of the centrist economic policies pursued by recent Republican presidents as well as Mr. Obama and President Bill Clinton.

"Since the 1980s, the growing political power of the wealthiest among us has rewritten our labor laws, our trade laws, our tax laws, our monetary policy, our fiscal policy, our financial regulations, all to push wages down and to increase corporate profits, to put speculation over private investment and tax cuts over public investment," he said.

Mr. Trumka announced that the A.F.L.-C.I.O. would create what he billed as "raising wages summits" in the first four presidential nominating states. He said that the first gathering would take place next month in Iowa and would aim to set a policy "standard by which presidential aspirations will be judged."

"No candidate can be all things to all people and still meet this standard," he added. "Standing with working people once in a while won't work."

Follow The New York Times Politics and Washington on Facebook and Twitter, and sign up for the First Draft politics newsletter.

--

Mahen Gunaratna

Director of Research and Media Analysis

Mayor's Press Office | City Hall

mgunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov

(212) 676-3154 (o) | (347)-268-4295 (c)

From: John Del Cecato
To: Wiley, Maya
Subject: <no subject>
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 5:27:47 PM

Hey - can you give me a shout when you have a moment? [REDACTED]

From: John Del Cecato
To: Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Status Report
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 5:36:43 PM

Two more, just in

Jeannette Huevo
Executive Director & Senior Popular Educator
UFE: United for a Fair Economy

Will sign, staff will attend

And

Heather McGhee, Executive Director of DEMOS (who will be signing, attending, and bringing one of her colleagues along with her)

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 at 5:21 PM
To: "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: FW: Status Report

Hey Tom. Here's where we are on Same Day Signers

From: Hayley Prim <hprim@hilltoppublicsolutions.com>
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 at 5:18 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Status Report

Since 11:15am when we started reaching out, the following people have agreed to sign on to the document, and Larry Cohen has also confirmed his attendance in DC on the 12th.

Campaign for America's Future	Co-Director	Robert	Borosage
Former Governor/Democracy for America	Founder	Howard	Dean
Economic Policy Institute	Founder	Jeff	Faux
Fiscal Policy Institute	Deputy Director and Chief Economist	James	Parrott
The Wessel Group	President	Michael	Wessell
CWA	President	Larry	Cohen

--

Hayley Prim

Hilltop Public Solutions

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Cc: Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Conflict on May 12???
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 5:42:09 PM

I have no idea. I really don't think they're trying to screw us intentionally. In fact, the Roosevelt folks were nervous that we'd be so mad that we'd blow up their event for that morning.

I think the Stiglitz folks are just doing whatever Warren wants them to do. And it could be that her team just didn't put 2 & 2 together on signing ceremony.

Option 1: I can Geldon & try to get Warren to move her briefing to 4pm.
Option 2: You call Elizabeth & try to get the same.
Option 3: We move our event to 4pm. This wouldn't be the end of the world, by any means. Nobody who's signed on at this point is dead set on the 3pm time. Their schedules are fluid. We can always change the time slightly.

On 4/28/15, 5:21 PM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>
>How did Stiglitz and his people let this happen if we had already talked >to them repeatedly about 3pm????
>
>
>
>----- Original Message -----
>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
>Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 04:32 PM
>To: B
>Cc: Snyder, Thomas
>Subject: Re: Conflict on May 12???
>
>Yes, that's correct - 15 minutes before our event. Pick made a run at >Dave Palmer, who said it was being driven by Warren.
>
>I think you should call Elizabeth & see if they could do 4pm instead of >2:45pm. Or, if that won't work, we could move our time - and do 4pm.
>It's less good for press purposes, but still doable. And I'd have to >double check to ensure we can still have the House Triangle for that time, >although I suspect that will be fine
>
>On 4/28/15, 3:10 PM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
>
>>
>>Tom just said Stiglitz and Warren are doing something with Senators at >>the EXACT SAME time as the TPA on May 12???. How on Earth can that be >>after so many discussions with them. I need to intervene today
>>
>

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: "John Del Cecato"; B
Cc: Aaron PickrellEmail; John Davis
Subject: RE: Policy items - recap of day
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 7:40:31 PM

I agree with all the below points.

-----Original Message-----

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 5:52 PM
To: B
Cc: Snyder, Thomas; Aaron PickrellEmail; John Davis
Subject: Policy items - recap of day

1. Trade. Patty Murray is nervous about appearing to oppose POTUS on trade. I think "losing" her is far less significant than depressing/angering all of the labor folks/labor-allied electeds, who are super-charged on trade & we may well lose if we lost that plank.
Recommendation: No change.
2. Trade. Toni Morrison wanted to water down the language a bit. You & I have already discussed, and I think having her write something positive about our efforts trumps her signing the document anyway. (She wouldn't be able to attend, in any event). Recommendation: No change.
3. Debt-Free College. Harkin and Heather McGhee both brought this up as something they'd like to add. We're not going to lose either one, no matter what we do. But I also want to explore adding it ON to the list, as I don't think anyone would fall off the list if we did - and we might even gain some.
Recommendation: Hold for now, but discuss adding.
4. Requiring federal contractors to pay a living wage. Bob Borosage and Katrina VH are bummed that it fell off the list. But Bob is signing on anyway, and will be there. I sense the same with Katrina. We know that we have exposure here in terms of NYC. Recommendation: No change.

So far, we're 6.5 hours in, and we have 8 confirmed signers. I think that's a great start, as most folks need at LEAST a day or two to process things before signing on the dotted line.

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: B; Aaron Pickrell; John Davis
Subject: Re: Policy items - recap of day
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 7:52:16 PM

Why can't we say no presidentials since I thought there is a plan to have a forum with them later?

Sent from my iPhone

> On Apr 28, 2015, at 6:11 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

>

> Just got Number 9 (to sing & attend) - Mike Lux - big liberal > funder/coalition builder/talker/thought leader

>

> Two other items:

>

> 1. We may need you, Mayor, to do a conference call to the Progressive > Caucus as a courtesy before they sign on. I think it will be relatively > painless - and we could just throw out a time, and whomever can be on,

> will be on. Purpose is really just to make them feel loved & respected.

>

> 2. I'm increasingly nervous (in a good way) that we need a strategy for > the presidentials. If I'm Martin O'Malley & get wind of what we're doing,

> I'm going to show up on May 12th. Same with Bernie Sanders. Maybe Jim

> Webb. In many way, the more the merrier. But clearly don't want the > story to be MBDB & 3 of Hillary's challengers (and no Hillary).

>

> Best I can recommend is that we: a) don't specifically invite any of them;

> b) accept them if they insist on coming; c) make it clear to reporters on > background that we did NOT seek these folks out (and tell Hillary the > same); and d) try to keep them out of the front row!

>

>

>> On 4/28/15, 5:52 PM, "John Del Cecato" <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

>>

>> 1. Trade. Patty Murray is nervous about appearing to oppose POTUS on >> trade. I think "losing" her is far less significant than >> depressing/angering all of the labor folks/labor-allied electeds, who are >> super-charged on trade & we may well lose if we lost that plank.

>> Recommendation: No change.

>>

>> 2. Trade. Toni Morrison wanted to water down the language a bit. You &

>> I have already discussed, and I think having her write something positive >> about our efforts trumps her signing the document anyway. (She wouldn't >> be able to attend, in any event). Recommendation: No change.

>>

>> 3. Debt-Free College. Harkin and Heather McGhee both brought this up as >> something they'd like to add. We're not going to lose either one, no >> matter what we do. But I also want to explore adding it ON to the list, >> as I don't think anyone would fall off the list if we did - and we might >> even gain some. Recommendation: Hold for now, but discuss adding.

>>

>> 4. Requiring federal contractors to pay a living wage. Bob Borosage and >> Katrina VH are bummed that it fell off the list. But Bob is signing on >> anyway, and will be there. I sense the same with Katrina. We know that >> we have exposure here in terms of NYC. Recommendation: No change.

>>

>> So far, we're 6.5 hours in, and we have 8 confirmed signers. I think >> that's a great start, as most folks need at LEAST a day or two to process >> things before signing on the dotted line.
>

From: John Del Cecato
To: Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Fwd: The Final Document...
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 8:51:38 PM

The full list

Begin forwarded message:

From: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Date: April 28, 2015 at 8:51:16 PM EDT
To: Aaron Pickrell <[REDACTED]>
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmmedia.com>, John Davis <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: The Final Document...

Hi John!

Wasn't at my computer before.

This is the list of everyone who has signed on as of tonight:

Unite Here	President	D	Taylor
Demos	Executive Director	Heather	McGhee
Campaign for America's Future	Co-Director	Robert	Borosage
Former Governor/Democracy for America	Founder	Howard	Dean
Economic Policy Institute	Founder	Jeff	Faux
Fiscal Policy Institute	Deputy Director and Chief Economist	James	Parrott
The Wessel Group	President	Michael	Wessell
Young Democrats of America		Akila	Ensley (YDA)
United for a Fair Economy	Executive Director	Jeannette	Huezo
Progressive Strategies	Director	Mike	Lux
CWA	President	Larry	Cohen

On Tue, Apr 28, 2015 at 8:17 PM, Aaron Pickrell

<[REDACTED]> wrote:

Is "doing my best to be there" considered a hard yes?

On Apr 28, 2015, at 8:05 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

"Almost got" is like "almost pregnant".... I want a HARD YES

From: John Davis <[REDACTED]>
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 at 7:47 PM
To: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Aaron PickrellEmail <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: The Final Document...

Sorry to do this but is it possible to get the list sent in the text of yeses? I think I've almost got hirono but I'm away from my computer and can't access the master list.

John

On Apr 28, 2015, at 7:43 PM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:

I got D Taylor too!

On Tuesday, April 28, 2015, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
Up to 10. Are Hayley and I the only ones coming through ??

Begin forwarded message:

From: Abigail Disney
<absedna@forkoffice.com>
Date: April 28, 2015 at 6:50:52 PM
EDT
To: John Del Cecato
<jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: The Final Document...

fantastic!!! I'm goign to do my best to be there!

Abigail E. Disney

Filmmaker | Philanthropist | Activist

25 East 21st Street | 7th Floor | New York, NY 10010

tel \(212\) 782-3702782-3702) @abigaildisney

On Tue, Apr 28, 2015 at 11:28 AM,
John Del Cecato
<jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

Hey Abby... It's finally here! Thanks for everything - esp the nudge on CEO Pay - which has become a big part of the effort!

===

On Tuesday, May 12 at 3:00pm, national progressive leaders will gather at the U.S. Capitol Building's House Triangle to declare their support for The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality.

The group of supporters will include federal and local elected officials, labor officials, cultural leaders, and progressive activists.

The Progressive Agenda – a progressive alternative, of sorts, to the 1994 Republican Contract with America – will include specific proposals to lift the floor for working people, support working parents, and promote tax fairness – policies that reward work rather than just wealth.

The event stems from a summit that Mayor de Blasio convened in New York City in early April, where a group of national progressive leaders gathered to discuss ways the country could combat the crisis of our time -- income inequality.

The Progressive Agenda builds upon the work of dozens of economists, lawmakers, think tanks, and progressive activists. It is not meant to be seen as a comprehensive set of proposals to combat income inequality, but rather a bold collection of core policy proposals around which progressives can organize and mobilize.

You are cordially invited to join us at 3pm on May 12!

If you cannot attend in person, we'd still urge you to sign on to the document.

To sign on, please email me back as soon as possible, preferably no later than Monday, May 4.

Thanks for your consideration, and feel free to contact me with any questions or concerns.

The Progressive Agenda

To Combat Income Inequality

1. Lift the Floor for Working People

- Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.
- Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.
- Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
- Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

2. Support Working Families

- Pass national paid sick leave.
- Pass national paid family leave.
- Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
- Expand the Earned Income Tax Credit.
- Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

3. Tax Fairness

- Close the carried interest loophole.
- End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.

- Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to take advantage of “performance pay” write-offs.

###

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Cc: Snyder, Thomas; Aaron PickrellEmail; Wolfe, Emma
Subject: Fwd: warren sanders letter (released tomorrow, restricted)
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 9:14:47 PM

FYI. Borosage obviously wants us in this fight (as does Katrina). Doesn't necessarily need to be TPA - but maybe we rally fellow mayors to press POTUS accordingly.

Begin forwarded message:

From: Robert Borosage <borosage@ourfuture.org>
Date: April 28, 2015 at 8:55:59 PM EDT
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmmedia.com>
Subject: warren sanders letter (released tomorrow, restricted)

Senate signers to date include: Sanders, Warren, Durbin, Franken, Merkley, Wyden, Mikulski, Blumenthal, Hirono, Stabenow, Murphy, Reed, Baldwin, Markey

President Barack Obama
The White House
1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20500

Dear Mr. President:

We applaud your recent executive order to raise the minimum wage for federal contract workers to $10.10 an hour and crack-down on wage theft and other labor law violations. This has helped not only struggling contract workers, but also millions of financially-strapped workers in the private sector. We urge you to continue taking bold executive action to help restore the middle class by making the government a “model employer.”

In the year since you declared that you would “lead by example” through executive action, major companies – from The Gap to Wal-Mart – have started to increase pay, mayors issued executive orders to raise wages, and state and local governments overwhelmingly passed minimum wage hikes. In addition to spurring the growing national movement to pay living wages, your legal compliance order encouraged numerous cities and states to adopt similar measures to end wage theft.

Now is the time to further build on that momentum.

The federal government continues to be America's largest low-wage job creator, subsidizing poverty-level wages through taxpayer-financed contracts, loans and grants with private companies. To add insult to injury, many of these contract workers are forced to rely on public assistance programs to supplement their meager incomes. That means taxpayers are double-billed – once for the cost of the contract and then again for the cost of public programs like food stamps and Medicaid.

We believe that our taxpayer dollars should reward good companies that create middle class jobs for America, not companies that force workers to depend on public aid programs.

We therefore call on you to issue an executive order giving preference in government contracting to “model employers” who pay a living wage, offer decent benefits such as paid leave for sickness and care-giving, provide full-time hours and stable schedules, and give workers a voice through collective bargaining so they do not need to strike to be heard.

You have held up profitable companies, such as Costco, as examples of model employers to be emulated because they pay their workers living wages and benefits as well as respect their right to organize unions. Now is the time to declare that the federal government will invest our taxpayer dollars to incentivize model employers that commit to creating good jobs and rebuilding America's ailing middle class.

Mr. President, the stroke of your pen can have transformative impact for millions of workers. As low-wage fast food, retail and federal contract workers continue to strike in growing numbers to “Fight for $15 and a Union”, we urge you to harness the power of the Presidency to help these workers achieve the American Dream.

With the economy rebounding and unemployment declining, now is the time to make sure hard-working Americans share in the rewards of our renewed prosperity. We look forward to working with you to rebuild the middle class by having the federal government serve as a model employer.

Sincerely yours,

--

Robert L. Borosage | Co-Director

1825 K Street, NW, Suite 400, Washington, DC 20006
202-955-5665 (tel) | 202-955-5606 (fax) | www.ourfuture.org

From: Agarwal, Nisha
To: Stephanie Yazgi
Cc: Neal Kwatra; John Del Cecato; Wolfe, Emma; James Freedland
Subject: Re: CITIES FOR ACTION REBRAND concepts
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 9:57:36 PM

Fun! I like #3 too, though think maybe the peach box could be a gradient or something a little less blocky.

For the tabs, I like the icons and the multi-colored boxes, not the ones with just the >. Though I think the employment icon might be the logo for the United Way or something?

I think we might need to do a tiny bit of process with the immigration cities before we move to this webpage, but not much so should be able to switch over soon -- Steph let's just talk about how to intro the Cities for Action thing and away from CUIA to the cities....

Nisha Agarwal
Mayor's Office of Immigrant Affairs

On Apr 28, 2015, at 11:07 AM, Stephanie Yazgi <> wrote:

Guys... we want to set up a website for transportation day of action. These are the latest concepts for Cities for Action.

Any preferences?

Nisha- can we soon move the CUIA page to under IMMIGRATION tab if we are able to get this generic website up and running and using the citiesforaction.us?

should we wait on that and do a larger roll out?

Mine is between 3 and 4.. like the gradient, but also like the little retro icons by each issue

Thoughts?

Stephanie

<CFAweb1.pdf>

<CFAweb2.pdf>

<CFAweb3.pdf>

<CFAweb4.pdf>

<CFAweb5.pdf>

From: John Del Cecato
To: Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: FYI
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 10:38:52 PM

Yes

> On Apr 28, 2015, at 10:27 PM, Snyder, Thomas <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
>
> U mean to sign on?
>
> Sent from my iPhone
>
>> On Apr 28, 2015, at 9:32 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
>>
>> We are gonna work on VP Biden
>>
>>

From: John Del Cecato
To: Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Policy items - recap of day
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 10:39:24 PM

CEO of Roosevelt - Stiglitz's joint

> On Apr 28, 2015, at 10:27 PM, Snyder, Thomas <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
>
> Who is Felicia?
>
> Sent from my iPhone
>
>> On Apr 28, 2015, at 8:03 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
>>
>> Number 11 is in... D Taylor...
>>
>> Mayor - I left a voicemail for Felicia... She's at her husband's documentary >> premier or somesuch, but I expect a call back tomorrow AM at the latest...
>> I feel like we will work this out
>>
>>> On 4/28/15, 7:10 PM, "John Del Cecato" <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
>>>
>>> Number 10 just signed on - Abby Disney - who will also do everything >>> possible to be there in person.
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>> On Apr 28, 2015, at 6:12 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
>>>>
>>>> Just got Number 9 (to sing & attend) - Mike Lux - big liberal >>>> funder/coalition builder/talker/thought leader
>>>>
>>>> Two other items:
>>>>
>>>> 1. We may need you, Mayor, to do a conference call to the Progressive >>>> Caucus as a courtesy before they sign on. I think it will be relatively >>>> painless - and we could just throw out a time, and whomever can be on,
>>>> will be on. Purpose is really just to make them feel loved & respected.
>>>>
>>>> 2. I'm increasingly nervous (in a good way) that we need a strategy for >>>> the presidentials. If I'm Martin O'Malley & get wind of what we're >>>> doing,
>>>> I'm going to show up on May 12th. Same with Bernie Sanders. Maybe Jim >>>> Webb. In many way, the more the merrier. But clearly don't want the >>>> story to be MBDB & 3 of Hillary's challengers (and no Hillary).
>>>>
>>>> Best I can recommend is that we: a) don't specifically invite any of >>>> them;
>>>> b) accept them if they insist on coming; c) make it clear to reporters
>>>> on >>>> background that we did NOT seek these folks out (and tell Hillary the >>>> same); and d) try to keep them out of the front row!
>>>>
>>>>

>>>> On 4/28/15, 5:52 PM, "John Del Cecato" <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
>>>>
>>>> 1. Trade. Patty Murray is nervous about appearing to oppose POTUS on >>>> trade. I think "losing" her is far less significant than >>>> depressing/angering all of the labor folks/labor-allied electeds, who >>>> are >>>> super-charged on trade & we may well lose if we lost that plank.
>>>> Recommendation: No change.
>>>>
>>>> 2. Trade. Toni Morrison wanted to water down the language a bit.
>>>> You &
>>>> I have already discussed, and I think having her write something >>>> positive
>>>> about our efforts trumps her signing the document anyway. (She >>>> wouldn't >>>> be able to attend, in any event). Recommendation: No change.
>>>>
>>>> 3. Debt-Free College. Harkin and Heather McGhee both brought this up
>>>> as >>>> something they'd like to add. We're not going to lose either one, no >>>> matter what we do. But I also want to explore adding it ON to the >>>> list,
>>>> as I don't think anyone would fall off the list if we did - and we >>>> might >>>> even gain some. Recommendation: Hold for now, but discuss adding.
>>>>
>>>> 4. Requiring federal contractors to pay a living wage. Bob Borosage
>>>> and
>>>> Katrina VH are bummed that it fell off the list. But Bob is signing on >>>> anyway, and will be there. I sense the same with Katrina. We know >>>> that >>>> we have exposure here in terms of NYC. Recommendation: No change.
>>>>
>>>> So far, we're 6.5 hours in, and we have 8 confirmed signers. I think >>>> that's a great start, as most folks need at LEAST a day or two to >>>> process
>>>> things before signing on the dotted line.
>>

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Cc: Snyder, Thomas; [REDACTED] [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: Policy items - recap of day
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 10:44:00 PM

Will do. Will report back tomorrow AM

> On Apr 28, 2015, at 10:04 PM, B <iBCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
>
>
> Send me in if needed
>
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
> Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 08:04 PM
> To: B
> Cc: Snyder, Thomas; Aaron PickrellEmail <[REDACTED]> John Davis
<[REDACTED]>
> Subject: Re: Policy items - recap of day
>
> Number 11 is in... D Taylor....
>
> Mayor - I left a voicemail for Felicia... She's at her husband's documentary > premier or somesuch, but I expect a call back tomorrow AM at the latest...
> I feel like we will work this out
>
>> On 4/28/15, 7:10 PM, "John Del Cecato" <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
>>
>> Number 10 just signed on - Abby Disney - who will also do everything >> possible to be there in person.
>>
>>
>>
>>> On Apr 28, 2015, at 6:12 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
>>>
>>> Just got Number 9 (to sing & attend) - Mike Lux - big liberal >>> funder/coalition builder/talker/thought leader
>>>
>>> Two other items:
>>>
>>> 1. We may need you, Mayor, to do a conference call to the Progressive >>> Caucus as a courtesy before they sign on. I think it will be relatively >>> painless - and we could just throw out a time, and whomever can be on,
>>> will be on. Purpose is really just to make them feel loved & respected.
>>>
>>> 2. I'm increasingly nervous (in a good way) that we need a strategy for >>> the presidentials. If I'm Martin O'Malley & get wind of what we're >>> doing,
>>> I'm going to show up on May 12th. Same with Bernie Sanders. Maybe Jim >>> Webb. In many way, the more the merrier. But clearly don't want the >>> story to be MBDB & 3 of Hillary's challengers (and no Hillary).
>>>
>>> Best I can recommend is that we: a) don't specifically invite any of >>> them;

>>> b) accept them if they insist on coming; c) make it clear to reporters
>>> on
>>> background that we did NOT seek these folks out (and tell Hillary the >>> same); and d) try to keep them out of the front row!
>>>
>>>
>>>> On 4/28/15, 5:52 PM, "John Del Cecato" <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
>>>>
>>>> 1. Trade. Patty Murray is nervous about appearing to oppose POTUS on >>>> trade. I think "losing" her is far less significant than >>>> depressing/angering all of the labor folks/labor-allied electeds, who
>>>> are
>>>> super-charged on trade & we may well lose if we lost that plank.
>>>> Recommendation: No change.
>>>>
>>>> 2. Trade. Toni Morrison wanted to water down the language a bit.
>>>> You &
>>>> I have already discussed, and I think having her write something
>>>> positive
>>>> about our efforts trumps her signing the document anyway. (She >>>> wouldn't >>>> be able to attend, in any event). Recommendation: No change.
>>>>
>>>> 3. Debt-Free College. Harkin and Heather McGhee both brought this up
>>>> as >>>> something they'd like to add. We're not going to lose either one, no >>>> matter what we do. But I also want to explore adding it ON to the >>>> list,
>>>> as I don't think anyone would fall off the list if we did - and we >>>> might >>>> even gain some. Recommendation: Hold for now, but discuss adding.
>>>>
>>>> 4. Requiring federal contractors to pay a living wage. Bob Borosage
>>>> and
>>>> Katrina VH are bummed that it fell off the list. But Bob is signing on >>>> anyway, and will be there. I sense the same with Katrina. We know >>>> that >>>> we have exposure here in terms of NYC. Recommendation: No change.
>>>>
>>>> So far, we're 6.5 hours in, and we have 8 confirmed signers. I think >>>> that's a great start, as most folks need at LEAST a day or two to >>>> process
>>>> things before singing on the dotted line.
>>>
>

From: John Del Cecato
To: B; Snyder, Thomas; Aaron PickrellEmail; Williams, Dominic
Subject: Debt-free college
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 7:07:52 AM

Arizona lawmakers propose debt-free college

Two Arizona Democrats think college graduates should leave school with a cap, gown and diploma — and a zero balance on their student loans.

U.S. Reps. Raúl Grijalva of Tucson and Ruben Gallego of Phoenix are helping to lead the charge among liberals in Congress to guarantee debt-free college.

The proposal, which has the support of key Democratic senators such as Elizabeth Warren and Chuck Schumer, faces long odds in the GOP-controlled Congress, where a majority of lawmakers oppose expensive expansions of government.

But Republicans are talking about the need to lower college debt as well, and the discussion already is figuring into the 2016 presidential race.

Republican presidential candidate Marco Rubio last year put forward a plan that relied on private-sector solutions, such as free online classes.

The only Democrat officially in the presidential race, Hillary Clinton, is weighing the debt-free college plan, her campaign said this week.

JANUARY: ASU's Crow says no tuition hikes despite state funding cuts

Grijalva said students across the country will be asking presidential candidates for solutions.

"There is a general feeling out there that we have abandoned a college education as accessible for all students," he told The Arizona Republic. "Education shouldn't (mean) mortgaging your career to pay off your loan."

An Arizona member on the other side of the aisle, Republican Rep. Matt Salmon, is talking about college affordability, too.

He introduced bipartisan legislation with Rep. Jared Polis, D-Colo., last session to encourage universities to shorten the time students need to graduate by awarding credit for life experience when they pass a competency test or through other methods. The bill generally addresses military veterans and professionals returning to school.

Less time in classes would reduce the cost to attend, Salmon said.

"People should be rewarded for what they know and not for their seat time," he said.

Salmon intends to bring back the legislation, which unanimously passed the House last year and garnered support from President Barack Obama, but stalled in the Senate.

The idea is part of the liberal plan introduced in the House last week by Grijalva, which calls for "innovations" to shorten class time.

But the promise of debt-free college could be far more costly than Obama's recent call for free community college. The liberal plan would extend to all university degrees, including graduate school, law school and medical school. And it's more sweeping than what Washington politicians have tried to do in recent years, such as lowering interest rates on student loans.

But the idea of a debt-free education is popular among students such as Arizona State University senior Shauna Evans. The 22-year-old estimates she will owe about $25,000 in federal and private loans when she graduates next month with a bachelor's degree in marketing.

She's debating whether to go to work after graduation or take on more debt to get a master's degree.

"You see how much debt you have, and it just puts more pressure on you,"

she said.

U.S. Reps. Kyrsten Sinema, whose district includes ASU, and Ann Kirkpatrick, whose district represents Northern Arizona University, did not respond to requests for comment on whether they would support the legislation. The two Democratic lawmakers hold seats in swing districts where liberal proposals aren't always welcome.

The legislation so far is light on details, including how to pay for it. Supporters say they could raise at least $29 billion for the plan by taxing wealthy individuals and corporations, a move that is unlikely to attract GOP support.

The plan would boost federal financial aid such as Pell Grants, which students aren't required to repay. The GOP has sought to freeze that program to balance the federal budget.

The proposal would also give more funding to public universities, which have raised tuition in response to state budget cuts.

No state has cut more from its higher-education budget than Arizona, according to the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, a Washington, D.C.-based think tank. Tuition and fees have nearly doubled since the recession. ASU now charges $10,157 per year for in-state undergraduates, although grants and scholarships lower the out-of-pocket cost for many students.

Gov. Doug Ducey and the Republican-led Legislature cut $100 million from the state universities for fiscal 2016, which is about 13 percent of state funding.

The decision "severely undercut all three universities and passed the generational tax on to (students and) their parents," Gallego said. "We have to start pushing back."

The governor had to make tough decisions to balance a $1.5 billion shortfall, said Ducey spokesman Daniel Scarpinato.

"In Washington, they don't have to do that, but here we do," he said.

"Governor Ducey wants to see Arizona universities remain as affordable as possible," Scarpinato said, noting that Ducey urged the Arizona Board of Regents to find efficiencies instead of raising tuition. "They are a great value as they stand, and we would like to see that continue."

Jay Heiler, vice chairman of the regents, said debt-free college sounds nice but may not be realistic.

"I appreciate all aspirational energy in furthering higher education for America's youth, but they must be grounded in reality and not political fantasy," he said.

Salmon said he opposes the state cuts to university funding but filling the hole with federal money, as the Democratic proposal in Congress would do, isn't the solution.

"Arizona has cut way back, which I don't agree with, but the answer is not now to move it toward ... the federal government. ... We already have an $18 trillion federal debt," he said.

But Salmon found common cause with Gallego and Grijalva, who argue the brunt of the problem falls on middle-income families.

"As the state has backed away, the poor kids continue to get Pell Grants," Salmon said. "The rich kids — their families can weather the storm. It's the middle class that's totally getting the shaft here, and it really makes me angry."

Since the recession, more undergraduates at Arizona's state universities have left with student-loan debt. The share has risen from 52 percent of undergraduates to about 60 percent from five years ago, according to data from the regents.

Students also owe more. Graduating seniors with student-loan debt owed an average of $22,903 last year — a 15 percent increase over five years ago.

That's still less than the national average, though, where bachelor's-degree recipients at public universities who graduated with debt borrowed an average of $25,600 in 2013, according to the College Board, a non-profit group that researches trends in higher education. About 59 percent borrowed money.

Some critics have blamed easy access to loans and grants as one factor pushing up the cost of college. In 1987, then-U.S. Secretary of Education William Bennett wrote an op-ed piece in the New York Times that said increases in federally subsidized loans enabled colleges "blithely to raise their tuitions, confident that Federal loan subsidies would help cushion the increase."

This idea has been debated in educational circles ever since.

National education experts say some student-loan debt isn't a bad thing because college graduates generally go on to higher-paying jobs and better career opportunities. College graduates also have lower unemployment rates, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The key, though, is balancing debt with earnings. That balance can be tricky right out of college.

Having too much student-loan debt can affect other spending.

"Students who graduate with tens of thousands of dollars in debt are unable to continue to contribute to Arizona's economy, unable to purchase a car or a home after they graduate when they are barely scraping by," said Corina Tapscott, incoming president of ASU's Downtown Phoenix campus, who spoke in support of the liberal debt-free college plan.

The regents on Monday touched on student-loan debt at a meeting where members discussed tuition proposals for the upcoming school year. Debt is one of several factors the regents monitor.

Regent Heiler said students have been borrowing money for decades with student loans extended on fairly easy terms for people on all income levels.

"There are all kinds of decisions that go into debt," he said, noting that sometimes students are tired of being poor and decide to borrow money.

The universities don't restrict how students spend their student-loan money, Regent Rick Myers said. For example, some could choose to buy cars with their loan money.

"We don't force students to use their federal debt to just spend their money on education," he said.

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Cc: Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: FYI
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 7:09:49 AM

Definitely worth a shot. Worst he can say is no!

On 4/28/15, 11:15 PM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>
>Fascinating. But I think the trade plank is a bridge too far for him.
>Although there may be a way to make the wording positive -- what is >necessary in a trade deal -- that might move some people our way
>
>
>
>----- Original Message -----
>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
>Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 10:44 PM
>To: B
>Cc: Snyder, Thomas
>Subject: Re: FYI
>
>Biden feels freer from Obama than ever before. And he wants to be Prez - >and is mad that he gets left as an afterthought. If he endorsed our >plan, he could tell Obama that he was protecting left flank, while also >building a little lane for himself just in case HRC stumbles and O'Malley >seems too green.
>
>
>
>> On Apr 28, 2015, at 10:03 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
>>
>>
>> That seems kinda strange, although kinda inspired. Let me hear your >>rationale
>>
>>
>>
>> ----- Original Message -----
>> From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
>> Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 09:33 PM
>> To: B; Snyder, Thomas
>> Subject: FYI
>>
>> We are gonna work on VP Biden
>>
>>

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Subject: Gore & trade
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 8:43:20 AM

Maybe Gore would be opposed to the trade deal for the same reason Sierra Club is?

SIERRA CLUB WEIGHS IN AGAINST TRADE DEAL - Per release: "The Sierra Club launched a targeted ad campaign in California, Washington, and Oregon today, exposing the Trans-Pacific Partnership for its complete lack of transparency and its potential to wreak havoc on the health of our air, water, and communities. The ads point to the proposed deal's secrecy as well as its provisions that would expedite dangerous fossil fuel exports and extraction and give broad new powers to corporations"

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Cc: Snyder, Thomas; [REDACTED]; [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: Policy items - recap of day
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 10:45:10 AM

Okay, I spoke to Felicia.

1. Stiglitz loves what we're doing/gets why we need to do the signing ceremony.
2. He might want to be a part of that, but team still deliberating - need to figure out if it's too confusing for him to lay out the big framework in the morning & then appear at an event that is a smaller number of items/not as far reaching (left unsaid: financial transactions tax, breaking up big banks, etc).
3. I said that was fine - but what I was really worried about were the Senators they may be blocking from our event. Felicia said that Warren is driving the bus there. They don't know who they're briefing or where - they're leaving it all to Warren.

I'm going to ping Geldon & see if he can get me more intel on what they're planning/which Senators/whether they could move to 4pm.

If that doesn't work, we could move our event to 4pm, which might actually boost turnout for us - in that, Senators might get fired up by Stiglitz address & feel emboldened to come to our Capitol press conference.

On 4/28/15, 10:03 PM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>
>Send me in if needed
>
>
>----- Original Message -----
>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
>Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 08:04 PM
>To: B
>Cc: Snyder, Thomas; Aaron PickrellEmail <[REDACTED]> John >Davis <[REDACTED]>
>Subject: Re: Policy items - recap of day
>
>Number 11 is in... D Taylor....
>
>Mayor - I left a voicemail for Felicia... She's at her husband's documentary >premier or somesuch, but I expect a call back tomorrow AM at the latest...
>I feel like we will work this out
>
>On 4/28/15, 7:10 PM, "John Del Cecato" <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
>
>>Number 10 just signed on - Abby Disney - who will also do everything >>possible to be there in person.
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>> On Apr 28, 2015, at 6:12 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
>>>wrote:

>>>
>>> Just got Number 9 (to sing & attend) - Mike Lux - big liberal >>> funder/coalition builder/talker/thought leader
>>>
>>> Two other items:
>>>
>>> 1. We may need you, Mayor, to do a conference call to the Progressive >>> Caucus as a courtesy before they sign on. I think it will be >>>relatively >>> painless - and we could just throw out a time, and whomever can be on, >>> will be on. Purpose is really just to make them feel loved & >>>respected.
>>>
>>> 2. I'm increasingly nervous (in a good way) that we need a strategy
>>>for >>> the presidentials. If I'm Martin O'Malley & get wind of what we're >>>doing,
>>> I'm going to show up on May 12th. Same with Bernie Sanders. Maybe Jim >>> Webb. In many way, the more the merrier. But clearly don't want the >>> story to be MBDB & 3 of Hillary's challengers (and no Hillary).
>>>
>>> Best I can recommend is that we: a) don't specifically invite any of
>>>them;
>>> b) accept them if they insist on coming; c) make it clear to reporters
>>>on >>> background that we did NOT seek these folks out (and tell Hillary the >>> same); and d) try to keep them out of the front row!
>>>
>>>
>>>> On 4/28/15, 5:52 PM, "John Del Cecato" <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
>>>>
>>>> 1. Trade. Patty Murray is nervous about appearing to oppose POTUS on >>>> trade. I think "losing" her is far less significant than >>>> depressing/angering all of the labor folks/labor-allied electeds, who
>>>>are
>>>> super-charged on trade & we may well lose if we lost that plank.
>>>> Recommendation: No change.
>>>>
>>>> 2. Trade. Toni Morrison wanted to water down the language a bit.
>>>>You &
>>>> I have already discussed, and I think having her write something
>>>>positive
>>>> about our efforts trumps her signing the document anyway. (She >>>>wouldn't >>>> be able to attend, in any event). Recommendation: No change.
>>>>
>>>> 3. Debt-Free College. Harkin and Heather McGhee both brought this up
>>>>as >>>> something they'd like to add. We're not going to lose either one, no >>>> matter what we do. But I also want to explore adding it ON to the >>>>list,
>>>> as I don't think anyone would fall off the list if we did - and we >>>>might >>>> even gain some. Recommendation: Hold for now, but discuss adding.
>>>>
>>>> 4. Requiring federal contractors to pay a living wage. Bob Borosage
>>>>and
>>>> Katrina VH are bummed that it fell off the list. But Bob is signing >>>>on >>>> anyway, and will be there. I sense the same with Katrina. We know >>>>that >>>> we have exposure here in terms of NYC. Recommendation: No change.

>>>>
>>>> So far, we're 6.5 hours in, and we have 8 confirmed signers. I think >>>> that's a great start, as most folks need at LEAST a day or two to >>>>process
>>>> things before signing on the dotted line.
>>>>
>>>>
>

From: Leopold, Elana
To: "Moore, Colleen"; de Alwis, Ronalie
Cc: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: RE: Mayor's Event in Washington, DC May 12
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 11:51:20 AM

Hi Coleen-

Looping you with John Del Cecato who can provide you with all the info you need. Thanks very much

Elana

From: Moore, Colleen [mailto:CMoore@usw.org]
Sent: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 11:34 AM
To: Leopold, Elana; de Alwis, Ronalie
Subject: Mayor's Event in Washington, DC May 12

Hello ladies!

During last Friday's phone call with Mr. Gerard, Mayor de Blasio asked that he participate in an event being planned for May 12 in Washington, DC. I am trying to finalize Mr. Gerard's schedule for that week and will need to make a number of airline reservations on either end of the May 12 trip to DC. I would appreciate your forwarding to me ASAP any information you have regarding the DC event. Thank you!

Colleen Moore
USW – President's Office

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: John Del Ceccato \(jfdc@akpdmedia.com\)
Subject: question
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 12:00:53 PM

When do you think we should do thorough check-in on who has signed, and who has not that we really need to get after?

From: FLONYC
To: Carey, Michael
Cc: B; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com" \(jfdc@akpdmedia.com\)
Subject: Re: Santa Clara
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 1:20:01 PM

Thanks! I just let her know.

Sent from my iPhone

On Apr 29, 2015, at 1:00 PM, Carey, Michael <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

We are locked for Santa Clara on the 14th at 430 PM.

Same set up as we did Nebraska and Iowa – remarks and q and a. Greet with some students.

Just wanted to make sure Chiara knew before it went fully public.

Michael Paul Carey
Director of Scheduling and Advance
City Hall
New York, New York 10007
212.341.5396

From: Leopold, Elana
To: Carey, Michael
Cc: John Del Cecato
Subject: Re: Steyer running late. About 10 away.
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 5:33:44 PM

Ok great bc so are we

Can you call Kennedy she's been at Gracie forever but she will have to wait until after the Steyer meeting to see the mayor

Sent from my iPhone

> On Apr 29, 2015, at 5:27 PM, Carey, Michael <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
>
>
>
>
> Michael Paul Carey
> City Hall
> New York, New York

From: John Del Cecato
To: Leopold, Elana; de Alwis, Ronalie; Carey, Michael
Subject: When MBDB meets Steyer
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 5:35:33 PM

Josh Fryday will be with us. BdB worked with Fryday on Edwards in 04 and should "remember" him

From: Leopold, Elana
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: de Alwis, Ronalie; Carey, Michael
Subject: Re: When MBDB meets Steyer
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 5:36:08 PM

RDA can you flag

Also make sure mayor calls RO- thanks!

Sent from my iPhone

> On Apr 29, 2015, at 5:35 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
>
> Josh Fryday will be with us. BdB worked with Fryday on Edwards in 04 and should "remember" him
>
>

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Cc: Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Draft email
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 5:36:38 PM

Yes, got it. I will do more thinking/working on this

On Apr 29, 2015, at 5:34 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

And I told you yesterday that I spoke to Stiglitz directly about the importance of him being there and he totally got

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 05:27 PM
To: B
Cc: Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Draft email

Ah. Well, that's tougher. Let's talk tonight

On Apr 29, 2015, at 4:27 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

I'm not worried about the Senators. I don't want to lose Stiglitz

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 03:28 PM
To: B
Cc: Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Draft email

Correct. My conversation with Felicia (Roosevelt CEO) boiled down to: "you gotta talk to Team Warren - we're just doing what they tell us."

Let's wait to see how Geldon responds to my email, and then I may tap you to talk to EW. Again, I don't think it's necessarily a disaster. We could always move our event back, or we could just do as planned & miss out on a Senator or two.

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 at 3:02 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: Draft email

So you couldn't get the Roosevelt folks to solve this? Let me know when I need to call Warren

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 01:58 PM
To: B
Cc: Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Draft email

I'm going to go ahead & send this in 30 minutes, barring any last minute objections

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 at 10:58 AM
To: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Draft email

I don't usually sweat the wording on emails, but since the joint op-ed & our relationship with Warren is so important, I wanted to run my draft email to Dan Geldon by you before I hit send...

Hey Dan. Wanted to check in with you on another front.

I know Sen. Warren is going to have Stiglitz brief a number of Senators on his work product on 5/12....at 2:45pm?

The one issue there is that we were planning to gather our group of national progressives (electeds, labor leaders, etc.) at the House Triangle to do a signing ceremony for our "progressive Contract with America" event at 3pm.

I wasn't expecting Sen. Warren to join our press conference (although that would totally make our day!!) - BUT, I was concerned that we might lose other Senators to the Stiglitz briefing - folks we might otherwise have a chance of securing for our press conference.

Was wondering how set in stone the 2:45pm time was - or whether that could happen earlier or later? Or, if it's totally set, do you think I should move our press conference to, say, 4pm? Just looking for some advice...

From: de Alwis, Ronalie
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: He needs to remember to invite to cohost event in CA.
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 6:02:31 PM

Needs to be prompted if not.

Ronalie de Alwis
Office of the Mayor
City of New York
Cell:347-952-9525

From: Walzak, Phil
To: Gunaratna, Mahen; B; FLONYC
Cc: John Del Cecato \(jfdc@akpdmedia.com\); Hagelgans, Andrea Subject: RE: Transcript - HRC Speech on Criminal Justice Reform
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 6:21:12 PM

Re-adding this

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
Sent: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 12:12 PM
To: B; FLONYC
Cc: Walzak, Phil; John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com); Hagelgans, Andrea Subject: Transcript - HRC Speech on Criminal Justice Reform

Here are the remarks as prepared:

Hillary Clinton: It's time to end the era of mass incarceration

REMARKS AT THE DINKINS FORUM

NEW YORK, NY

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 29, 2015

Thank you so much. I am absolutely delighted to be back here at Columbia. I want to thank President Bollinger, Dean Janow, and everyone at the School of International and Public Affairs. It is a special treat to be here with and on behalf of a great leader of this city and our country, David Dinkins. He has made such an indelible impact on New York, and I had the great privilege of working with him as First Lady and then, of course, as a new senator.

When I was just starting out as a senator, David's door was always open. He and his wonderful wife Joyce were great friends and supporters and good sounding boards about ideas that we wanted to consider to enhance the quality of life and the opportunities for the people of this city. I was pleased to address the Dinkins Leadership and Public Policy Forum in my first year as a senator, and I so appreciated then as I have in the years since David's generosity with his time and most of all his wisdom. So 14 years later, I'm honored to have this chance, once again, to help celebrate the legacy of one of New York's greatest public servants.

I'm pleased too that you will have the opportunity after my remarks to hear from such a distinguished panel, to go into more detail about some of the issues that we face. I also know that Manhattan Borough President Gail Brewer is here, along with other local and community leaders.

Because surely this is a time when our collective efforts to devise approaches to the problems that still afflict us is more important than ever. Indeed, it is a time for wisdom.

For yet again, the family of a young black man is grieving a life cut short.

Yet again, the streets of an American city are marred by violence. By shattered glass and shouts of anger and shows of force.

Yet again a community is reeling, its fault lines laid bare and its bonds of trust and respect frayed.

Yet again, brave police officers have been attacked in the line of duty.

What we've seen in Baltimore should, indeed does, tear at our soul.

And, from Ferguson to Staten Island to Baltimore, the patterns have become unmistakable and undeniable.

Walter Scott shot in the back in Charleston, South Carolina. Unarmed. In debt. And terrified of spending more time in jail for child support payments he couldn't afford.

Tamir Rice shot in a park in Cleveland, Ohio. Unarmed and just 12 years old.

Eric Garner choked to death after being stopped for selling cigarettes on the streets of this city.

And now Freddie Gray. His spine nearly severed while in police custody.

Not only as a mother and a grandmother but as a citizen, a human being, my heart breaks for these young men and their families.

We have to come to terms with some hard truths about race and justice in America.

There is something profoundly wrong when African American men are still far more likely to be stopped and searched by police, charged with crimes, and sentenced to longer prison terms than are meted out to their white counterparts.

There is something wrong when a third of all black men face the prospect of prison during their lifetimes. And an estimated 1.5 million black men are "missing" from their families and communities because of incarceration and premature death.

There is something wrong when more than one out of every three young black men in Baltimore can't find a job.

There is something wrong when trust between law enforcement and the communities they serve breaks down as far as it has in many of our communities.

We have allowed our criminal justice system to get out of balance. And these recent tragedies should galvanize us to come together as a nation to find our balance again.

We should begin by heeding the pleas of Freddie Gray's family for peace and unity, echoing the families of Michael Brown, Trayvon Martin, and others in the past years.

Those who are instigating further violence in Baltimore are disrespecting the Gray family and the entire community. They are compounding the tragedy of Freddie Gray's death and setting back the cause of justice. So the violence has to stop.

But more broadly, let's remember that everyone in every community benefits when there is respect for the law and when everyone in every community is respected by the law. That is what we have to work towards in Baltimore and across our country.

We must urgently begin to rebuild the bonds of trust and respect among Americans. Between police and citizens, yes, but also across society.

Restoring trust in our politics, our press, our markets. Between and among neighbors and even people with whom we disagree politically.

This is so fundamental to who we are as a nation and everything we want to achieve together.

It truly is about how we treat each other and what we value. Making it possible for every American to reach his or her God-given potential—regardless of who you are, where you were born, or who you love.

The inequities that persist in our justice system undermine this shared vision of what America can be and should be.

I learned this firsthand as a young attorney just out of law school—at one of those law schools that will remain nameless here at Columbia. One of my earliest jobs for the Children's Defense Fund, which David had mentioned—I was so fortunate to work with Marian Wright Edelman as a young lawyer and then serving on the board of the Children's Defense Fund—was studying the problem then of youth, teenagers, sometimes preteens, incarcerated in adult jails. Then, as director of the University of Arkansas School of Law's legal aid clinic, I advocated on behalf of prison inmates and poor families.

I saw repeatedly how our legal system can be and all too often is stacked against those who have the least power, who are the most vulnerable.

I saw how families could be and were torn apart by excessive incarceration. I saw the toll on children growing up in homes shattered by poverty and prison.

So, unfortunately, I know these are not new challenges by any means.

In fact they have become even more complex and urgent over time. And today they demand fresh thinking and bold action from all of us.

Today there seems to be a growing bipartisan movement for commonsense reforms in our criminal justice systems. Senators as disparate on the political spectrum as Cory Booker and Rand Paul and Dick Durbin and Mike Lee are reaching across the aisle to find ways to work together. It is rare to see Democrats and Republicans agree on anything today. But we're beginning to agreeing on this: We need to restore balance to our criminal justice system.

Now of course it is not enough just to agree and give speeches about it—we actually have to work together to get the job done.

We need to deliver real reforms that can be felt on our streets, in our courthouses, and our jails and prisons, in communities too long neglected.

Let me touch on two areas in particular where I believe we need to push for more progress.

First, we need smart strategies to fight crime that help restore trust between law enforcement and our communities, especially communities of color.

There's a lot of good work to build on. Across the country, there are so many police officers out there every day inspiring trust and confidence, honorably doing their duty, putting themselves on the line to save lives. There are police departments already deploying creative and effective strategies, demonstrating how we can protect the public without resorting to unnecessary force. We need to learn from those examples, build on what works.

We can start by making sure that federal funds for state and local law enforcement are used to bolster best practices, rather than to buy weapons of war that have no place on our streets.

President Obama's task force on policing gives us a good place to start. Its recommendations offer a roadmap for reform, from training to technology, guided by more and better data.

We should make sure every police department in the country has body cameras to record interactions between officers on patrol and suspects.

That will improve transparency and accountability, it will help protect good people on both sides of the lens. For every tragedy caught on tape, there surely have been many more that remained invisible. Not every problem can be or will be prevented with cameras, but this is a commonsense step we should take.

The President has provided the idea of matching funds to state and local governments investing in body cameras. We should go even further and make this the norm everywhere.

And we should listen to law enforcement leaders who are calling for a renewed focus on working with communities to prevent crime, rather than measuring success just by the number of arrests or convictions.

As your Senator from New York, I supported a greater emphasis on community policing, along with putting more officers on the street to get to know those communities.

David Dinkins was an early pioneer of this policy. His leadership helped lay the foundation for dramatic drops in crime in the years that followed.

And today smart policing in communities that builds relationships, partnerships, and trust makes more sense than ever.

And it shouldn't be limited just to officers on the beat. It's an ethic that should extend throughout our criminal justice system. To prosecutors and parole officers. To judges and lawmakers.

We all share a responsibility to help re-stitch the fabric of our neighborhoods and communities.

We also have to be honest about the gaps that exist across our country, the inequality that stalks our streets. Because you cannot talk about smart policing and reforming the criminal justice system if you also don't talk about what's needed to provide economic opportunity, better educational chances for young people, more support to families so they can do the best jobs they are capable of doing to help support their own children.

Today I saw an article on the front page of USA Today that really struck me, written by a journalist who lives in Baltimore. And here's what I read three times to make sure I was reading correctly: At a conference in 2013 at Johns Hopkins University, Vice Provost Jonathan Bagger pointed out that only six miles separate the Baltimore neighborhoods of Roland Park and Hollins Market.

But there is a 20-year difference in the average life expectancy. We have learned in the last few years that life expectancy, which is a measure of the quality of life in communities and countries, manifests the same inequality that we see in so many other parts of our society.

Women—white women without high school education—are losing life expectancy. Black men and black women are seeing their life expectancy goes down in so many parts of our country.

This may not grab headlines, although I was glad to see it on the front page of USA Today. But it tells us more than I think we can bear about what we are up against.

We need to start understanding how important it is to care for every single child as though that child were our own.

David and I started our conversation this morning talking about our grandchildren; now his are considerably older than mine. But it was not just two longtime friends catching up with each other. It was so clearly sharing what is most important to us, as it is to families everywhere in our country.

So I don't want the discussion about criminal justice, smart policing, to be siloed and to permit discussions and arguments and debates about it to only talk about that. The conversation needs to be much broader. Because that is a symptom, not a cause, of what ails us today.

The second area where we need to chart a new course is how we approach punishment and prison.

It's a stark fact that the United States has less than 5 percent of the world's population, yet we have almost 25 percent of the world's total prison population. The numbers today are much higher than they were 30, 40 years ago, despite the fact that crime is at historic lows.

Of the more than 2 million Americans incarcerated today, a significant percentage are low-level offenders: people held for violating parole or minor drug crimes, or who are simply awaiting trial in backlogged courts.

Keeping them behind bars does little to reduce crime. But it does a lot to tear apart families and communities.

One in every 28 children now has a parent in prison. Think about what that means for those children.

When we talk about one and a half million missing African American men, we're talking about missing husbands, missing fathers, missing brothers.

They're not there to look after their children or bring home a paycheck. And the consequences are profound.

Without the mass incarceration that we currently practice, millions fewer people would be living in poverty.

And it's not just families trying to stay afloat with one parent behind bars. Of the 600,000 prisoners who reenter society each year, roughly 60 percent face long-term unemployment.

And for all this, taxpayers are paying about $80 billion a year to keep so many people in prison.

The price of incarcerating a single inmate is often more than $30,000 per year—and up to $60,000 in some states. That’s the salary of a teacher or police officer.

One year in a New Jersey state prison costs $44,000—more than the annual tuition at Princeton.

If the United States brought our correctional expenditures back in line with where they were several decades ago, we’d save an estimated $28 billion a year. And I believe we would not be less safe. You can pay a lot of police officers and nurses and others with $28 billion to help us deal with the pipeline issues.

It’s time to change our approach. It’s time to end the era of mass incarceration. We need a true national debate about how to reduce our prison population while keeping our communities safe.

I don’t know all the answers. That’s why I’m here—to ask all the smart people in Columbia and New York to start thinking this through with me. I know we should work together to pursue together to pursue alternative punishments for low-level offenders. They do have to be in some way registered in the criminal justice system, but we don’t want that to be a fast track to long-term criminal activity, we don’t want to create another “incarceration generation.”

I’ve been encouraged to see changes that I supported as Senator to reduce the unjust federal sentencing disparity between crack and powder cocaine crimes finally become law.

And last year, the Sentencing Commission reduced recommended prison terms for some drug crimes.

President Obama and former Attorney General Holder have led the way with important additional steps. And I am looking forward to our new Attorney General, Loretta Lynch, carrying this work forward.

There are other measures that I and so many others have championed to reform arbitrary mandatory minimum sentences are long overdue.

We also need probation and drug diversion programs to deal swiftly with violations, while allowing low-level offenders who stay clean and stay out of trouble to stay out of prison. I’ve seen the positive effects of specialized drug courts and juvenile programs work to the betterment of individuals and communities. And please, please, let us put mental health back at the top of our national agenda.

You and I know that the promise of de-institutionalizing those in mental health facilities was supposed to be followed by the creation of community-based treatment centers. Well, we got half of that equation—but not the other half. Our prisons and our jails are now our mental health institutions.

I have to tell you I was somewhat surprised in both Iowa and New Hampshire to be asked so many questions about mental health. “What are we going to do with people who need help for substance abuse or mental illness?” “What are we going to do when the remaining facilities are being shut down for budget reasons?” “What are we going to do when hospitals don’t really get reimbursed for providing the kind of emergency care that is needed for mental health patients?”

It’s not just a problem in our cities. There’s a quiet epidemic of substance abuse sweeping small-town and rural America as well. We have to do more and finally get serious about treatment.

I’ll be talking about all of this in the months to come, offering new solutions to protect and strengthen our families and communities.

I know in a time when we’re afflicted by short-termism, we’re not looking over the horizon for the investments that we need to make in our fellow citizens, in our children. So I’m well aware that progress will not be easy, despite the emerging bipartisan consensus for certain reforms. And that we will have to overcome deep divisions and try to begin to replenish our depleted reservoirs of trust.

But I am convinced, as the congenital optimist I must be to live my life, that we can rise to this challenge. We can heal our wounds. We can restore balance to our justice system and respect in our communities. And we can make sure that we take actions that are going to make a difference in the lives of those who for too long have been marginalized and forgotten.

Let’s protect the rights of all our people. Let’s take on the broader inequities in our society. You can’t separate out the unrest we see in the streets from the cycles of poverty and despair that hollow out those neighborhoods.

Despite all the progress we’ve made in this country lifting people up—and it has been extraordinary—too many of our fellow citizens are still left out.

Twenty-five years ago, in his inaugural address as Mayor, David Dinkins warned of leaving “too many lost amidst the wealth and grandeur that surrounds us.”

Today, his words and the emotion behind them ring truer than ever. You don’t have to look too far from this magnificent hall to find children still living in poverty or trapped in failing schools. Families who work hard but can’t afford the rising prices in their neighborhood.

Mothers and fathers who fear for their sons’ safety when they go off to school—or just to go buy a pack of Skittles.

These challenges are all woven together. And they all must be tackled together.

Our goal must truly be inclusive and lasting prosperity that's measured by how many families get ahead and stay ahead...

How many children climb out of poverty and stay out of prison...

How many young people can go to college without breaking the bank...

How many new immigrants can start small businesses ...

How many parents can get good jobs that allow them to balance the demands of work and family.

That's how we should measure prosperity. With all due respect, that is a far better measurement than the size of the bonuses handed out in downtown office buildings.

Now even in the most painful times like those we are seeing in Baltimore ...

When parents fear for their children...

When smoke fills the skies above our cities...

When police officers are assaulted...

Even then—especially then—let's remember the aspirations and values that unite us all: That every person should have the opportunity to succeed. That no one is disposable. That every life matters.

So yes, Mayor Dinkins. This is a time for wisdom.

A time for honesty about race and justice in America.

And, yes, a time for reform.

David Dinkins is a leader we can look to. We know what he stood for. Let us take the challenge and example he presents and think about what we must do to make sure that this country we love—this city we live in—are both good and great.

And please join me in saying a prayer for the family of Freddie Gray, and all the men whose names we know and those we don't who have lost their lives unnecessarily and tragically. And in particular today, include in that prayer the people of Baltimore and our beloved country.

Thank you all very much.

--

Mahen Gunaratna

Director of Research and Media Analysis

Mayor's Press Office | City Hall

mgunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov

(212) 676-3154 (o) | (347)-268-4295 (c)

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
To: B; FLONYC
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; John Del Cecato \(jfdc@akpdmmedia.com\); Wolfe, Emma Subject: AP: Vermont Sen. Bernie Sanders: "I am running for president"
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 8:23:54 PM

Vermont Sen. Bernie Sanders: 'I am running for president'

By DAVE GRAM

Apr. 29, 2015 8:14 PM EDT

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — Promising to fight what he deems "obscene levels" of income disparity and a campaign finance system that is a "real disgrace," independent Vermont Sen. Bernie Sanders said Wednesday he will run for president as a Democrat.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Sanders confirmed his plans to formally join the race Thursday.

The self-described "democratic socialist" enters the race as a robust liberal alternative to Hillary Rodham Clinton, and he pledged to do more than simply raise progressive issues or nudge the former secretary of state to the left in a campaign in which she is heavily favored.

"People should not underestimate me," Sanders said. "I've run outside of the two-party system, defeating Democrats and Republicans, taking on big-money candidates and, you know, I think the message that has resonated in Vermont is a message that can resonate all over this country."

As he has for months in prospective campaign stops in the early voting states, and throughout his political career, the former mayor of Burlington, Vermont, on Wednesday assailed an economic system that he said has devolved over the past 40 years and eradicated the nation's middle class.

"What we have seen is that while the average person is working longer hours for lower wages, we have seen a huge increase in income and wealth inequality, which is now reaching obscene levels," Sanders told the AP.

"This is a rigged economy, which works for the rich and the powerful, and is not working for ordinary Americans. ... You know, this country just does not belong to a handful of billionaires."

The son of an immigrant from Poland who sold paint for a living in Brooklyn, Sanders has for decades championed working-class Americans. He lost several statewide races in the 1970s before he was elected mayor of Burlington in 1981, and went on to represent Vermont in the U.S. House for 16 years before his election to the Senate in 2006.

An independent in the Senate, he caucuses with Democrats in Washington and he is likely to attract some interest from voters who have unsuccessfully sought to draft Massachusetts Sen. Elizabeth Warren to join the race.

But Sanders rejected the idea his appeal is limited to voters on the left, boldly predicting Wednesday that his message would appeal to both fellow independents and Republicans.

Sanders said he would release "very specific proposals" to raise taxes on wealthy Americans and corporations, as well as offer tuition-free education at all public colleges and universities. He touched on his past opposition to free-trade agreements, his support for heavier regulations of Wall Street and the nation's banking industry, and his vote against the Keystone XL oil pipeline as a preview of his campaign.

"So to me, the question is whose views come closer to representing the vast majority of working people in this country," Sanders said. "And you know what? I think my views do."

The 73-year-old Sanders starts his campaign as an undisputed underdog against Clinton. Sanders said he has known the former first lady, senator from New York and secretary of state for more than two decades. "I respect her and like her," he said.

He noted he has "never run a negative ad in my life," but still drew a distinction with Clinton in the interview, promising to talk "very strongly about the need not to get involved in perpetual warfare in the Middle East."

"I voted against the war in Iraq," he said. "Secretary Clinton voted for it when she was in the Senate."

Clinton is hosting a series of fundraisers this week, starting what could be an effort that raises more than $1 billion. Sanders said he will make money and politics a central theme of his campaign, including a call for a constitutional amendment to overturn the U.S. Supreme Court's 2010 Citizens United decision, which he blames for unleashing a torrent of money from wealthy donors into politics.

"What you're looking at here is a real disgrace," he said. "It is an undermining of American democracy.

"But can we raise the hundreds of millions of dollars that we need, primarily through small campaign contributions to run a strong campaign? And I have concluded that I think there is a real chance that we can do that."

Sanders is the first major challenger to enter the race against Clinton, who earlier this month became the first Democrat to formally declare her intention to run for president. He is likely to be joined in the coming months by former Maryland Gov. Martin O'Malley, former Virginia Sen. Jim Webb and ex-Rhode Island Gov. Lincoln Chafee.

--

Mahen Gunaratna

Director of Research and Media Analysis

Mayor's Press Office | City Hall

mgunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov

(212) 676-3154 (o) | (347)-268-4295 (c)

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma; Gunaratna, Mahen; Leopold, Elana; Carey, Michael
Subject: Re: Fwd: Rolling Stone fact checking
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 10:26:08 PM

Meeting is accurate

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 10:24 PM
To: Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma; Hagelgans, Andrea; Gunaratna, Mahen; Leopold, Elana; Carey, Michael
Subject: Fwd: Rolling Stone fact checking

Begin forwarded message:

From: Rebecca Katz <[REDACTED]>
Date: April 29, 2015 at 9:49:38 PM EDT
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Rolling Stone fact checking

Please forward to Mahen, Andrea, Emma, Phil, MPC, and EL.

Thanks.

There were a few mistakes I already went over with the fact checker (like he only served two council terms) and I talked to her about CMC's rotation into City Hall, but Mahen -- can you comb through this and make sure all is good? Need exact prek numbers, etc. I clarified that they do go to church often and consider themselves spiritual, just don't belong. They need it tomorrow.

Andrea/ Emma -- everything check out from meeting? Emma -- you good with how they characterize PA work?

MPC/ Elana -- can you please look over the bits about City Hall/ his office? All looks right to me, but just double checking.

Does anyone know Dan Katz? Mayor should have heads up that they spoke.

JDC -- for question 26, no?

If other flags, please speak up asap. Thanks.

1. Is it better to list the Mayor's height as 6'5" or 6'6"? I've seen a fairly humorous article that talks about him being actually 6'5 and

- 7/8 of an inch tall, but which is better as shorthand?
2. The Mayor met with our reporter on the back porch of Gracie Mansion, from which can be seen views of the East River and the Triborough Bridge.
 3. There are wicker chairs on the porch.
 4. There are soccer nets set up in the yard, where the Mayor and his wife, Chirlane McCray, occasionally play with their son, Dante.
 5. Dante is a high school senior.
 6. Their daughter, Chiara, is currently a junior at Santa Clara University in California.
 7. Prior to the announcement of the Mayor's planned progressive version of a 'Contract with America', the various members of the group had a meeting that was closed to the press.
 8. The de Blasio family does not belong to a church of any kind.
 9. The de Blasio and Mc Cray were married in 1994 by a pair of gay ministers. (Just confirming that both ministers were gay.)
 10. While serving as NYC's Public Advocate, de Blasio created an entire department of community organizers.
 11. Both of de Blasio's parents were 44 when he was born.
 12. De Blasio's father left the family when de Blasio was seven.
 13. His brother Steven's name is spelled STEVEN, not STEPHEN.
 14. He was friends, at NYU, with now labor historian Dan Katz.
 15. They became friends in 1980 after being separately elected to represent their dorms in student government.
 16. They went on to co-found the Coalition for Students Rights, which led protests on campus of things like tuition hikes.
 17. He studied Latin American politics at Columbia University. (Is this what his Masters is in, though? It seems like his Masters may be in something else?)
 18. After working for Mayor David Dinkins' campaign in 1989, he went on to work as an aide in Mayor Dinkins' office.
 19. De Blasio met Mc Cray when they were both working for Dinkins at City Hall. (Here I'm a little confused, because while I have often seen that reported, I also see that Mc Cray told Essence in 2013 that she had been working in the press office of the NYC Commission on Human Rights and was "sent to City Hall." It's a little unclear to me if that means she was specifically working for Dinkins or regularly at City Hall vs. just at City Hall for the day. Thanks for any clarification!)
 20. Prior to being elected Mayor, de Blasio served THREE terms on the City Council and ONE term as Public Advocate.
 21. De Blasio's signature pre-K program began in September 2014.
 22. It served 51,000 pre-schoolers at over 1,600 locations.
 23. Richard Buery was the deputy mayor tasked with implementing universal pre-K.
 24. De Blasio backed or supported several Democrats running in state races outside of New York City in 2014, but none of them were able to win their elections.
 25. De Blasio also worked on Dinkins' 1993 re-election campaign.
 26. At the time when our writer spoke to de Blasio, it had not yet been decided whether or not the bipartisan forum his progressive alliance will hold this year in advance of the 2016 election would be in the form of one forum, for both major parties, or two separate forums.

Has that been decided?

27. Oil paintings of past mayors hang in New York's City Hall.
28. The portrait of Bloomberg is a photorealistic one of him standing in front of a sea of cubicles.
29. This office floor plan added by Bloomberg remains at City Hall.
30. De Blasio works in his own office on the floor below, at a desk previously used by Fiorello La Guardia, who was a hero to his family.
31. There was a Mets jersey in de Blasio's office when Mark visited, as well as a boom box and a stack of CDs.
32. During one of our writers' visits, de Blasio was holding a meeting to discuss his new housing plan, which included Human Resources Administration Commissioner Stephen Banks.
33. Banks was there speaking of tenants' rights issues.
34. Emma Wolfe, who is 34, and is the director of Intergovernmental Affairs, sat beside him.
35. She has previously worked at ACORN and as a labor organizer.
36. The Mayor has an old school style flip phone.

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Cc: [REDACTED] Snyder, Thomas; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Warren
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 10:53:04 PM

All consistent with what I thought.

Will get back with you on plan - but 330 is a totally valid time

> On Apr 29, 2015, at 10:36 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>

> 1. Very enthusiastic about the op-ed and fine with it going next week. Agrees that referencing Stiglitz report coming is good way to build focus on it

>

> 2. REMIND ME to alert Team Hillary before the op-ed runs and to send them copy right before it's public

>

> 3. Warren claims no sense of her own schedule and little involvement in it (which sounded true and I can relate to). This is a further reminder that if we don't deal with staff folks more aggressively and smartly, we will lose out every time. She believes that her mtg with Senators and Stiglitz, by it's nature, is unmovable. She said she will tell her scheduling director Emily Ross to work with you guys to see if anything can be done, such as getting Stiglitz and Senators out of the mtg and promptly over to us. But it sounds like we should either write all of them off as a loss, or change the time. I await your proposal. Thanks

From: John Del Cecato
To: Wolfe, Emma
Cc: Carey, Michael; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Gunaratna, Mahen; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Rolling Stone fact checking
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 11:15:48 PM

Good call! I will make sure RKK gets all of these

From: <Wolfe>, Emma <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 at 11:03 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Gunaratna, Mahen" <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: Rolling Stone fact checking

24 incorrect

First -- we supported state senate Dems across board. One competitive race won - Panepinto in Buffalo.

Second technical: We supported senate Democrats efforts writ large thru coalition efforts not specific individual campaign committees - except for Marc Panepinto in western New York who won.

On Apr 29, 2015, at 10:55 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

Me too. I also saw him trying to fix something with it with a paper clip the other day.
Hysterical.

On Apr 29, 2015, at 10:29 PM, Carey, Michael <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

I kinda love the last fact!!

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 at 10:24 PM
To: Phil Walzak <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Emma Wolfe <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Andrea Hagelgans <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Mahen Gunaratna <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Elana Leopold <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Michael Carey <mpcarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>

Subject: Fwd: Rolling Stone fact checking

Begin forwarded message:

From: Rebecca Katz <[REDACTED]>
Date: April 29, 2015 at 9:49:38 PM EDT
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Rolling Stone fact checking

Please forward to Mahen, Andrea, Emma, Phil, MPC, and EL.

Thanks.

There were a few mistakes I already went over with the fact checker (like he only served two council terms) and I talked to her about CMC's rotation into City Hall, but Mahen -- can you comb through this and make sure all is good? Need exact prek numbers, etc. I clarified that they do go to church often and consider themselves spiritual, just don't belong. They need it tomorrow.

Andrea/ Emma -- everything check out from meeting? Emma -- you good with how they characterize PA work?

MPC/ Elana -- can you please look over the bits about City Hall/ his office? All looks right to me, but just double checking.

Does anyone know Dan Katz? Mayor should have heads up that they spoke.

JDC -- for question 26, no?

If other flags, please speak up asap. Thanks.

1. Is it better to list the Mayor's height as 6'5" or 6'6"? I've seen a fairly humorous article that talks about him being actually 6'5 and 7/8 of an inch tall, but which is better as shorthand?

2. The Mayor met with our reporter on the back porch of Gracie Mansion, from which can be seen views of the East River and the Triborough Bridge.
3. There are wicker chairs on the porch.
4. There are soccer nets set up in the yard, where the Mayor and his wife, Chirlane McCray, occasionally play with their son, Dante.
5. Dante is a high school senior.
6. Their daughter, Chiara, is currently a junior at Santa Clara University in California.
7. Prior to the announcement of the Mayor's planned progressive version of a 'Contract with America', the various members of the group had a meeting that was closed to the press.
8. The de Blasio family does not belong to a church of any kind.
9. The de Blasio and Mc Cray were married in 1994 by a pair of gay ministers. (Just confirming that both ministers were gay.)
10. While serving as NYC's Public Advocate, de Blasio created an entire department of community organizers.
11. Both of de Blasio's parents were 44 when he was born.
12. De Blasio's father left the family when de Blasio was seven.
13. His brother Steven's name is spelled STEVEN, not STEPHEN.
14. He was friends, at NYU, with now labor historian Dan Katz.
15. They became friends in 1980 after being separately elected to represent their dorms in student government.
16. They went on to co-found the Coalition for Students Rights, which led protests on campus of things like tuition hikes.
17. He studied Latin American politics at Columbia University. (Is this what his Masters is in, though? It seems like his Masters may be in something else?)
18. After working for Mayor David Dinkins' campaign in 1989, he went on to work as an aide in Mayor Dinkins' office.
19. De Blasio met Mc Cray when they were both working for Dinkins at City Hall. (Here I'm a little confused, because while I have often seen that reported, I also see that Mc Cray told Essence in 2013 that she had been working in the press office of the NYC Commission on Human Rights and was "sent to City Hall." It's a little unclear to me if that means she was specifically working for Dinkins or regularly at City Hall vs. just at City Hall for the day.

Thanks for any clarification!)

20. Prior to being elected Mayor, de Blasio served THREE terms on the City Council and ONE term as Public Advocate.
21. De Blasio's signature pre-K program began in September 2014.
22. It served 51,000 pre-schoolers at over 1,600 locations.
23. Richard Buery was the deputy mayor tasked with implementing universal pre-K.
24. De Blasio backed or supported several Democrats running in state races outside of New York City in 2014, but none of them were able to win their elections.
25. De Blasio also worked on Dinkins' 1993 re-election campaign.
26. At the time when our writer spoke to de Blasio, it had not yet been decided whether or not the bipartisan forum his progressive alliance will hold this year in advance of the 2016 election would be in the form of one forum, for both major parties, or two separate forums. Has that been decided?
27. Oil paintings of past mayors hang in New York's City Hall.
28. The portrait of Bloomberg is a photorealistic one of him standing in front of a sea of cubicles.
29. This office floor plan added by Bloomberg remains at City Hall.
30. De Blasio works in his own office on the floor below, at a desk previously used by Fiorello La Guardia, who was a hero to his family.
31. There was a Mets jersey in de Blasio's office when Mark visited, as well as a boom box and a stack of CDs.
32. During one of our writers' visits, de Blasio was holding a meeting to discuss his new housing plan, which included Human Resources Administration Commissioner Stephen Banks.
33. Banks was there speaking of tenants' rights issues.
34. Emma Wolfe, who is 34, and is the director of Intergovernmental Affairs, sat beside him.
35. She has previously worked at ACORN and as a labor organizer.
36. The Mayor has an old school style flip phone.

From: John Del Cecato
To: de Alwis, Ronalie; Wolfe, Emma; Carey, Michael
Cc: Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA draft for Sharpton Breakfast
Date: Thursday, April 30, 2015 12:16:20 AM
Attachments: TheProgressiveAgendaToCombatIncomeInequality.docx
TPAemail v3.docx

Not sure where the meeting came about, but here's the latest TPA, plus TPA Email Preamble

On 4/29/15, 11:27 PM, "de Alwis, Ronalie" <rdealwis@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>Mayor is asking for brief for this meeting tomorrow morning. Can someone >please send?
>
>Thanks!
>R
>
>Sent from my iPhone

The Progressive Agenda

To Combat Income Inequality

1. Lift the Floor for Working People

- Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.
- Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.
- Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
- Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

2. Support Working Families

- Pass national paid sick leave.
- Pass national paid family leave.
- Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
- Expand the Earned Income Tax Credit.
- Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

3. Tax Fairness

- Close the carried interest loophole.
- End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
- Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to take advantage of "performance pay" write-offs.

###

Please join us and declare your support for The Progress Agenda to Combat Income Inequality on May 12, 2015 at 3:00pm at the U.S. Capitol Building's House Triangle.

More and more progressive leaders are signing on every day. So far supporters include:

- Howard Dean, Former Governor of Vermont & Founder, Democracy for America
- Robert Reich, Chancellor's Professor of Public Policy at University of California at Berkeley & Former U.S. Secretary of Labor
- Leo Gerard, President, United Steelworkers
- Larry Cohen, President, Communication Workers of America
- D Taylor, President, UNITE HERE!
- Heather McGhee, Executive Director, DEMOS
- Atima Omara, President, Young Democrats of America
- Jeff Faux, Founder, Economic Policy Institute
- James Parrott, Deputy Director and Chief Economist, Fiscal Policy Institute
- Jeannette Huevo, Executive Director, United for a Fair Economy
- Mike Lux, Co-Founder and President, Progressive Strategies
- Robert Borosage, Co-Director Campaign for America's Future
- Michael Wessel, President, The Wessel Group

The group of supporters will include federal and local elected officials, labor officials, cultural leaders, and progressive activists.

The Progressive Agenda – a progressive alternative, of sorts, to the 1994 Republican Contract with America – will include specific proposals to lift the floor for working people, support working parents, and promote tax fairness – policies that reward work rather than just wealth.

The event stems from a summit that Mayor de Blasio convened in New York City in early April, where a group of national progressive leaders gathered to discuss ways the country could combat the crisis of our time -- income inequality.

The Progressive Agenda builds upon the work of dozens of economists, lawmakers, think tanks, and progressive activists. It is not meant to be seen as a comprehensive set of proposals to combat income inequality, but rather a bold collection of core policy proposals around which progressives can organize and mobilize.

If you cannot attend in person, we'd still urge you to sign on to the document.

To sign on, please email me back as soon as possible, preferably no later than Monday, May 4.

Thanks for your consideration, and feel free to contact me with any questions or concerns.

The Progressive Agenda To Combat Income Inequality

1. Lift the Floor for Working People

- Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.
- Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.
- Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
- Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

2. Support Working Families

- Pass national paid sick leave.
- Pass national paid family leave.
- Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
- Expand the Earned Income Tax Credit.
- Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

3. Tax Fairness

- Close the carried interest loophole.
- End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
- Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to take advantage of "performance pay" write-offs.

###

From: Wolfe, Emma
To: Leopold, Elana
Cc: de Alwis, Ronalie; Carey, Michael; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Re: TPA draft for Sharpton Breakfast
Date: Thursday, April 30, 2015 7:37:23 AM

K

----- Original Message -----

From: Leopold, Elana
Sent: Thursday, April 30, 2015 07:10 AM
To: Wolfe, Emma
Cc: de Alwis, Ronalie; Carey, Michael; jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: TPA draft for Sharpton Breakfast

Emma- can he call you en route to Sharpton to be briefed on non TPA issues?

Sent from my iPhone

> On Apr 29, 2015, at 11:43 PM, Wolfe, Emma <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
>
> Non TPA Items for Briefing:
>
> In case non-TPA items come up:
>
> I. Albany Big fights: rent, mayoral control, minimum wage. Suss out interest if opening.
>
> II. Criminal Justice Initiatives:
> A. Justice "reboot" announcement (summons, bail reforms)
> B. Albany fights --- Grand jury transparency and raising the age are two bills we want to campaign for.
> (Note: Special prosecutor proposal: we are looking at "third ways" for your review; regardless system needs to change. Would be interested in RAS' take.)
>
> III. Locally, NYPD: you know the progress talking points better than anyone. Would add in body cameras expansion and pilots of new community policing models in four precincts.
>
> IV. Local work to collaborate on: NYCHA, Education
>
> V. NOTE: we heard he's looking to assist TWU on Vision Zero, but none of his folks have confirmed.
Goal: squash!

>
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Wolfe, Emma
> Sent: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 11:29 PM
> To: de Alwis, Ronalie; Carey, Michael
> Cc: Leopold, Elana; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
> Subject: Re: TPA draft for Sharpton Breakfast

> I'm sorry --- what is this?

>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: de Alwis, Ronalie
> Sent: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 11:27 PM
> To: Wolfe, Emma; Carey, Michael
> Cc: Leopold, Elana; John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
> Subject: TPA draft for Sharpton Breakfast

>
> Mayor is asking for brief for this meeting tomorrow morning. Can someone please send?
>
> Thanks!
> R
>
> Sent from my iPhone

From: John Davis
To: B; [REDACTED]
Cc: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; [REDACTED] Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Original Priority List
Date: Thursday, April 30, 2015 12:24:46 PM

I spoke with Sen. Baldwin's scheduler this morning. She assures me that we will have an answer this afternoon. Thanks, John

On Thursday, April 30, 2015 12:16 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

NOTE: you guys need to address me ONLY on this government email from now on, per the lawyers.

Updates: Sharpton is confirmed to sign the document and join the event in DC. And what's up with Tammy Baldwin? What is her staffer saying? I want to follow up with Tammy by email asap. Also I need to call John Lewis today

-----Original Message-----

From: Hayley Prim
To: Bill de Blasio
Cc: John Del Cecato
Subject: Original Priority List
Sent: Apr 29, 2015 10:34 PM

This is who was on the original priority list of 30 people we were working through, and the status on each person. The vast majority are still outstanding.

First Last Signing Attending Notes Steve Adler TBD TBD
Tammy Baldwin TBD TBD
Larry Cohen YES YES
Rosa de Lauro TBD TBD
Howard Dean YES TBD 90% there on attending Keith Ellison TBD TBD
Al Franken TBD TBD
Al Gore TBD NO
Raul Grijalva YES YES
Luis Gutierrez TBD TBD
Tom Harkin TBD TBD Sent us feedback re: contract, we are waiting to hear back
Mary Kay Henry TBD TBD
Barbara Lee TBD TBD
John Lewis TBD TBD
Jeff Merkeley TBD TBD
Toni Morrison TBD NO Sent us feedback re: contract, we are waiting to hear back
Janet Murguia TBD TBD
Ed Murray TBD TBD

Marc Perrone TBD TBD
Stephanie Rawlings Blake TBD TBD
Robert Reich YES NO
Lee Saunders TBD TBD
Chuck Schumer TBD TBD
Al Sharpton TBD TBD
Tom Steyer TBD TBD
Richard Trumka TBD TBD
Marty Walsh TBD TBD
Elizabeth Warren TBD NO
Randi Weingarten TBD TBD 90% there on signing and attending Marian Wright
Edelman TBD TBD

--

Hayley Prim

c:

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
To: "John Del Cecato"; Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma; Hagelgans, Andrea; Leopold, Elana; Carey, Michael
Subject: RE: Rolling Stone fact checking
Date: Thursday, April 30, 2015 2:19:45 PM

Have some other fact check edits, which I'll send along shortly.

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Thursday, April 30, 2015 2:20 PM
To: Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma; Hagelgans, Andrea; Gunaratna, Mahen; Leopold, Elana; Carey, Michael
Subject: Re: Rolling Stone fact checking

Wanted to flag this one, since none of us seems to know who Dan Katz is. Andrea, can you make sure MBDB knows that the Rolling Stone reporter tracked down one of his NYT pals & apparently spoke to him?

1. He was friends, at NYU, with now labor historian Dan Katz.

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 at 10:24 PM
To: Phil Walzak <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Emma Wolfe <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Mahen Gunaratna <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Elana Leopold <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Fwd: Rolling Stone fact checking

Begin forwarded message:

From: Rebecca Katz <[REDACTED]>
Date: April 29, 2015 at 9:49:38 PM EDT
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Rolling Stone fact checking

Please forward to Mahen, Andrea, Emma, Phil, MPC, and EL.

Thanks.

There were a few mistakes I already went over with the fact checker (like he only served two council terms) and I talked to her about CMC's rotation into City Hall, but Mahen -- can you comb through this and make sure all is good? Need exact prek numbers, etc. I clarified that they do go to church often and consider themselves spiritual, just don't belong. They need it tomorrow.

Andrea/ Emma -- everything check out from meeting? Emma -- you good with how they characterize PA work?

MPC/ Elana -- can you please look over the bits about City Hall/ his office? All looks right to me, but just double checking.

Does anyone know Dan Katz? Mayor should have heads up that they spoke.

JDC -- for question 26, no?

If other flags, please speak up asap. Thanks.

1. Is it better to list the Mayor's height as 6'5" or 6'6"? I've seen a fairly humorous article that talks about him being actually 6'5 and 7/8 of an inch tall, but which is better as shorthand?
2. The Mayor met with our reporter on the back porch of Gracie Mansion, from which can be seen views of the East River and the Triborough Bridge.
3. There are wicker chairs on the porch.
4. There are soccer nets set up in the yard, where the Mayor and his wife, Chirlane McCray, occasionally play with their son, Dante.
5. Dante is a high school senior.
6. Their daughter, Chiara, is currently a junior at Santa Clara University in California.
7. Prior to the announcement of the Mayor's planned progressive version of a 'Contract with America', the various members of the group had a meeting that was closed to the press.
8. The de Blasio family does not belong to a church of any kind.
9. The de Blasio and Mc Cray were married in 1994 by a pair of gay ministers. (Just confirming that both ministers were gay.)
10. While serving as NYC's Public Advocate, de Blasio created an entire department of community organizers.
11. Both of de Blasio's parents were 44 when he was born.
12. De Blasio's father left the family when de Blasio was seven.
13. His brother Steven's name is spelled STEVEN, not STEPHEN.
14. He was friends, at NYU, with now labor historian Dan Katz.
15. They became friends in 1980 after being separately elected to represent their dorms in student government.
16. They went on to co-found the Coalition for Students Rights, which led protests on campus of things like tuition hikes.
17. He studied Latin American politics at Columbia University. (Is this what his Masters is in, though? It seems like his Masters may be in something else?)
18. After working for Mayor David Dinkins' campaign in 1989, he went on to work as an aide in Mayor Dinkins' office.
19. De Blasio met Mc Cray when they were both working for Dinkins at City Hall. (Here I'm a little confused, because while I have often seen that reported, I also see that Mc Cray told Essence in 2013 that she had been working in the press office of the NYC Commission on Human Rights and was "sent to City Hall." It's a little unclear to me if that means she was specifically working for Dinkins or regularly at City Hall vs. just at City Hall for the day. Thanks for any clarification!)

20. Prior to being elected Mayor, de Blasio served THREE terms on the City Council and ONE term as Public Advocate.
21. De Blasio's signature pre-K program began in September 2014.
22. It served 51,000 pre-schoolers at over 1,600 locations.
23. Richard Buery was the deputy mayor tasked with implementing universal pre-K.
24. De Blasio backed or supported several Democrats running in state races outside of New York City in 2014, but none of them were able to win their elections.
25. De Blasio also worked on Dinkins' 1993 re-election campaign.
26. At the time when our writer spoke to de Blasio, it had not yet been decided whether or not the bipartisan forum his progressive alliance will hold this year in advance of the 2016 election would be in the form of one forum, for both major parties, or two separate forums. Has that been decided?
27. Oil paintings of past mayors hang in New York's City Hall.
28. The portrait of Bloomberg is a photorealistic one of him standing in front of a sea of cubicles.
29. This office floor plan added by Bloomberg remains at City Hall.
30. De Blasio works in his own office on the floor below, at a desk previously used by Fiorello La Guardia, who was a hero to his family.
31. There was a Mets jersey in de Blasio's office when Mark visited, as well as a boom box and a stack of CDs.
32. During one of our writers' visits, de Blasio was holding a meeting to discuss his new housing plan, which included Human Resources Administration Commissioner Stephen Banks.
33. Banks was there speaking of tenants' rights issues.
34. Emma Wolfe, who is 34, and is the director of Intergovernmental Affairs, sat beside him.
35. She has previously worked at ACORN and as a labor organizer.
36. The Mayor has an old school style flip phone.

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
To: "John Del Cecato"; Wolfe, Emma; Carey, Michael
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Leopold, Elana
Subject: RE: Rolling Stone fact checking
Date: Thursday, April 30, 2015 2:43:11 PM
Attachments: Fact-Check - Rolling Stone Article.docx

See attached fact-check edits for RKK/Rolling Stone.

Still waiting on the lines highlighted in yellow, but for now recommend passing this along.

Most articles online (and I believe Mayor himself has said) say that his parents were 44 years old at the time of his birth. But, based on the birthdates listed in Mayor's security clearance forms, his mother technically turned 44 the week after he was born. And his father turned 44 four months later.

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Thursday, April 30, 2015 12:21 AM
To: Gunaratna, Mahen; Wolfe, Emma; Carey, Michael
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Rolling Stone fact checking

4 or 5pm tomorrow (Thurs) I think

From: <Gunaratna>, Mahen <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 at 10:53 PM
To: "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: Rolling Stone fact checking

What time tomorrow is this due? I'll quarterback and will get done - just need a sense of whether end of the day is okay.

From: Wolfe, Emma
Sent: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 10:35 PM
To: Carey, Michael
Cc: John Del Cecato; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Gunaratna, Mahen; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Rolling Stone fact checking

Two not three council terms
(Led campaign against term limits extension!)

On Apr 29, 2015, at 10:28 PM, Carey, Michael <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

I kinda love the last fact!!

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>

Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 at 10:24 PM

To: Phil Walzak <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Emma Wolfe <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Andrea Hagelgans <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Mahen Gunaratna <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Elana Leopold <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Michael Carey <mpcarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>

Subject: Fwd: Rolling Stone fact checking

Begin forwarded message:

From: Rebecca Katz <[REDACTED]>
Date: April 29, 2015 at 9:49:38 PM EDT
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Rolling Stone fact checking

Please forward to Mahen, Andrea, Emma, Phil, MPC, and EL.

Thanks.

There were a few mistakes I already went over with the fact checker (like he only served two council terms) and I talked to her about CMC's rotation into City Hall, but Mahen -- can you comb through this and make sure all is good? Need exact prek numbers, etc. I clarified that they do go to church often and consider themselves spiritual, just don't belong. They need it tomorrow.

Andrea/ Emma -- everything check out from meeting? Emma -- you good with how they characterize PA work?

MPC/ Elana -- can you please look over the bits about City Hall/ his office? All looks right to me, but just double checking.

Does anyone know Dan Katz? Mayor should have heads up that they spoke.

JDC -- for question 26, no?

If other flags, please speak up asap. Thanks.

1. Is it better to list the Mayor's height as 6'5" or 6'6"? I've seen a fairly humorous article that talks about him being actually 6'5 and 7/8 of an inch tall, but which is better as shorthand?
2. The Mayor met with our reporter on the back porch of Gracie Mansion, from which can be seen views of the East River and the Triborough Bridge.
3. There are wicker chairs on the porch.
4. There are soccer nets set up in the yard, where the Mayor and

- his wife, Chirlane McCray, occasionally play with their son, Dante.
5. Dante is a high school senior.
 6. Their daughter, Chiara, is currently a junior at Santa Clara University in California.
 7. Prior to the announcement of the Mayor's planned progressive version of a 'Contract with America', the various members of the group had a meeting that was closed to the press.
 8. The de Blasio family does not belong to a church of any kind.
 9. The de Blasio and Mc Cray were married in 1994 by a pair of gay ministers. (Just confirming that both ministers were gay.)
 10. While serving as NYC's Public Advocate, de Blasio created an entire department of community organizers.
 11. Both of de Blasio's parents were 44 when he was born.
 12. De Blasio's father left the family when de Blasio was seven.
 13. His brother Steven's name is spelled STEVEN, not STEPHEN.
 14. He was friends, at NYU, with now labor historian Dan Katz.
 15. They became friends in 1980 after being separately elected to represent their dorms in student government.
 16. They went on to co-found the Coalition for Students Rights, which led protests on campus of things like tuition hikes.
 17. He studied Latin American politics at Columbia University. (Is this what his Masters is in, though? It seems like his Masters may be in something else?)
 18. After working for Mayor David Dinkins' campaign in 1989, he went on to work as an aide in Mayor Dinkins' office.
 19. De Blasio met Mc Cray when they were both working for Dinkins at City Hall. (Here I'm a little confused, because while I have often seen that reported, I also see that Mc Cray told Essence in 2013 that she had been working in the press office of the NYC Commission on Human Rights and was "sent to City Hall." It's a little unclear to me if that means she was specifically working for Dinkins or regularly at City Hall vs. just at City Hall for the day. Thanks for any clarification!)
 20. Prior to being elected Mayor, de Blasio served THREE terms on the City Council and ONE term as Public Advocate.
 21. De Blasio's signature pre-K program began in September 2014.
 22. It served 51,000 pre-schoolers at over 1,600 locations.
 23. Richard Buery was the deputy mayor tasked with implementing universal pre-K.
 24. De Blasio backed or supported several Democrats running in state races outside of New York City in 2014, but none of them were able to win their elections.
 25. De Blasio also worked on Dinkins' 1993 re-election campaign.
 26. At the time when our writer spoke to de Blasio, it had not yet been decided whether or not the bipartisan forum his

- progressive alliance will hold this year in advance of the 2016 election would be in the form of one forum, for both major parties, or two separate forums. Has that been decided?
27. Oil paintings of past mayors hang in New York's City Hall.
 28. The portrait of Bloomberg is a photorealistic one of him standing in front of a sea of cubicles.
 29. This office floor plan added by Bloomberg remains at City Hall.
 30. De Blasio works in his own office on the floor below, at a desk previously used by Fiorello La Guardia, who was a hero to his family.
 31. There was a Mets jersey in de Blasio's office when Mark visited, as well as a boom box and a stack of CDs.
 32. During one of our writers' visits, de Blasio was holding a meeting to discuss his new housing plan, which included Human Resources Administration Commissioner Stephen Banks.
 33. Banks was there speaking of tenants' rights issues.
 34. Emma Wolfe, who is 34, and is the director of Intergovernmental Affairs, sat beside him.
 35. She has previously worked at ACORN and as a labor organizer.
 36. The Mayor has an old school style flip phone.

Fact-Check – Rolling Stone Article:

Note: Yellow = still working to confirm

Formatted: Highlight

1. Is it better to list the Mayor's height as 6'5" or 6'6"? I've seen a fairly humorous article that talks about him being actually 6'5 and 7/8 of an inch tall, but which is better as shorthand? – His height is most commonly-cited as 6'5", but the reality is that he's really just a tad bit shy of 6'6".
2. The Mayor met with our reporter on the back porch of Gracie Mansion, from which can be seen views of the East River and the Triborough Bridge.
3. There are wicker chairs on the porch.
4. There are soccer nets set up in the yard, where the Mayor and his wife, Chirlane McCray, occasionally play with their son, Dante.
5. Dante is a high school senior. – Correct, graduating soon and attending Yale in the fall.
6. Their daughter, Chiara, is currently a junior at Santa Clara University in California. – Correct
7. Prior to the announcement of the Mayor's planned progressive version of a 'Contract with America', the various members of the group had a meeting that was closed to the press.
8. The de Blasio family does not belong to a church of any kind. – Correct, but they do attend church services regularly across the five boroughs and consider themselves spiritual, but don't belong to a specific denomination.
9. The de Blasio and Mc Cray were married in 1994 by a pair of gay ministers. (Just confirming that both ministers were gay.) – Correct
10. While serving as NYC's Public Advocate, de Blasio created an entire department of community organizers.
11. Both of de Blasio's parents were 44 when he was born. – They were technically 43 years old.
12. De Blasio's father left the family when de Blasio was seven. – Correct
13. His brother Steven's name is spelled STEVEN, not STEPHEN. – Correct
14. He was friends, at NYU, with now labor historian Dan Katz.
15. They became friends in 1980 after being separately elected to represent their dorms in student government. – Mayor was President of Weinstein Hall as an undergraduate at NYU. Not sure about Dan Katz.
16. They went on to co-found the Coalition for Students Rights, which led protests on campus of things like tuition hikes. – Correct about the Mayor. Not sure about Dan Katz.
17. He studied Latin American politics at Columbia University. (Is this what his Masters is in, though? It seems like his Masters may be in something else?) – He received a Masters of International Affairs, with a concentration in Latin American and Iberian Studies, at SIPA (Columbia University)
18. After working for Mayor David Dinkins' campaign in 1989, he went on to work as an aide in Mayor Dinkins' office. – Correct, he was a City Hall aide.
19. De Blasio met Mc Cray when they were both working for Dinkins at City Hall. (Here I'm a little confused, because while I have often seen that reported, I also see that Mc Cray told Essence in 2013 that she had been working in the press office of the NYC Commission on Human Rights and was "sent to City Hall." It's a little unclear to me if that means she was specifically working for Dinkins or regularly at City Hall vs. just at City Hall for the day. Thanks for any clarification!) – She was working in the Press

Formatted: Highlight

Formatted: Highlight

Formatted: Highlight

Office for a few weeks on a rotational assignment. These remarks should help clarify:
<http://www.cityandstateny.com/2/83/political-power-couple.html#.VUJutfnF9ik>

20. Prior to being elected Mayor, de Blasio served ~~THREE-TWO~~ terms on the City Council and ONE term as Public Advocate.
21. De Blasio's signature pre-K program began in September 2014. - Correct, but implementation started months before that. But the first day of school/pre-k was September 4, 2014.
22. It served 51,000 pre-schoolers at over 1,600 locations. - More accurate to say, "It served over 53,000 pre-schoolers at nearly 1,700 locations."
23. Richard Buery ~~was is~~ the deputy mayor tasked with implementing universal pre-K. Correct-
24. De Blasio backed or supported several Democrats running in state races outside of New York City in 2014, but none of them were able to win their elections. - Incorrect: - Incorrect; The Mayor supported State Senate Democratic candidates across the board, but only one candidate in a competitive race won - State Senator Marc Panepinto in Buffalo. The Mayor supported State Senate Democratic effort writ large through coalition efforts, not through individual campaign committees, with the exception of Panepinto in Western New York, who won.
25. De Blasio also worked on Dinkins' 1993 re-election campaign. - Correct
26. At the time when our writer spoke to de Blasio, it had not yet been decided whether or not the bipartisan forum his progressive alliance will hold this year in advance of the 2016 election would be in the form of one forum, for both major parties, or two separate forums. Has that been decided? - It will be a single presidential forum and Republican candidates will be invited as well to discuss solutions to the crisis of income inequality.
27. Oil paintings of past mayors hang in New York's City Hall. - Correct, but Mayor Koch's is an actual photograph, not an oil painting.
28. The portrait of Bloomberg is a photorealistic one of him standing in front of a sea of cubicles. - Correct
29. This office floor plan added by Bloomberg remains at City Hall. - Correct, we preserved the "bullpen"-style setup on the second floor.
30. De Blasio works in his own office on the floor below, at a desk previously used by Fiorello La Guardia, who was a hero to his family. - Correct
31. There was a Mets jersey in de Blasio's office when Mark visited, as well as a boom box and a stack of CDs. - Correct
32. During one of our writers' visits, de Blasio was holding a meeting to discuss his new housing plan, which included Human Resources Administration Commissioner ~~Stephen~~ Steven Banks. - Correct
33. Banks was there speaking of tenants' rights issues. - Correct
34. Emma Wolfe, who is ~~34~~35, and is the director of Intergovernmental Affairs, sat beside him. - Emma is 35 years old - born [REDACTED]
35. She has previously worked at ACORN and as a labor organizer. - Correct
36. The Mayor has an old school style flip phone. - Correct

Formatted: Not Highlight

Formatted: Highlight

Formatted: Not Highlight

Formatted: Not Highlight

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
To: "John Del Cecato"
Subject: RE: Rolling Stone fact checking
Date: Thursday, April 30, 2015 2:58:19 PM

For the first three highlighted in yellow, those are all correct. Triborough/RFK Bridge.

For the final two in yellow (#10 and #14), those are better posed to MBdB and EW, respectively.

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Thursday, April 30, 2015 2:55 PM
To: Gunaratna, Mahen; Wolfe, Emma; Carey, Michael
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Rolling Stone fact checking

Damn, you're thorough! Thanks Mahen

From: <Gunaratna>, Mahen <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Thursday, April 30, 2015 at 2:43 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: Rolling Stone fact checking

See attached fact-check edits for RKK/Rolling Stone.

Still waiting on the lines highlighted in yellow, but for now recommend passing this along.

Most articles online (and I believe Mayor himself has said) say that his parents were 44 years old at the time of his birth. But, based on the birthdates listed in Mayor's security clearance forms, his mother technically turned 44 the week after he was born. And his father turned 44 four months later.

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Thursday, April 30, 2015 12:21 AM
To: Gunaratna, Mahen; Wolfe, Emma; Carey, Michael
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Rolling Stone fact checking

4 or 5pm tomorrow (Thurs) I think

From: <Gunaratna>, Mahen <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 at 10:53 PM
To: "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>

Subject: RE: Rolling Stone fact checking

What time tomorrow is this due? I'll quarterback and will get done - just need a sense of whether end of the day is okay.

From: Wolfe, Emma
Sent: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 10:35 PM
To: Carey, Michael
Cc: John Del Cecato; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Gunaratna, Mahen; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Rolling Stone fact checking

Two not three council terms
(Led campaign against term limits extension!)

On Apr 29, 2015, at 10:28 PM, Carey, Michael <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

I kinda love the last fact!!

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 at 10:24 PM
To: Phil Walzak <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Emma Wolfe <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Andrea Hagelgans <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Mahen Gunaratna <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Elana Leopold <LEopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Michael Carey <mpcarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Fwd: Rolling Stone fact checking

Begin forwarded message:

From: Rebecca Katz <[REDACTED]>
Date: April 29, 2015 at 9:49:38 PM EDT
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Rolling Stone fact checking

Please forward to Mahen, Andrea, Emma, Phil, MPC, and EL.

Thanks.

There were a few mistakes I already went over with the fact checker (like he only served two council terms) and I talked to her about CMC's rotation into City Hall, but Mahen -- can you comb through this and make sure all is good? Need exact prek numbers, etc. I clarified that they do go to church often and consider themselves spiritual, just don't belong. They need it tomorrow.

Andrea/ Emma -- everything check out from meeting? Emma -- you good with how they characterize PA work?

MPC/ Elana -- can you please look over the bits about City Hall/ his office? All looks right to me, but just double checking.

Does anyone know Dan Katz? Mayor should have heads up that they spoke.

JDC -- for question 26, no?

If other flags, please speak up asap. Thanks.

1. Is it better to list the Mayor's height as 6'5" or 6'6"? I've seen a fairly humorous article that talks about him being actually 6'5 and 7/8 of an inch tall, but which is better as shorthand?
2. The Mayor met with our reporter on the back porch of Gracie Mansion, from which can be seen views of the East River and the Triborough Bridge.
3. There are wicker chairs on the porch.
4. There are soccer nets set up in the yard, where the Mayor and his wife, Chirlane McCray, occasionally play with their son, Dante.
5. Dante is a high school senior.
6. Their daughter, Chiara, is currently a junior at Santa Clara University in California.
7. Prior to the announcement of the Mayor's planned progressive version of a 'Contract with America', the various members of the group had a meeting that was closed to the press.
8. The de Blasio family does not belong to a church of any kind.
9. The de Blasio and Mc Cray were married in 1994 by a pair of gay ministers. (Just confirming that both ministers were gay.)
10. While serving as NYC's Public Advocate, de Blasio created an entire department of community organizers.
11. Both of de Blasio's parents were 44 when he was born.
12. De Blasio's father left the family when de Blasio was seven.
13. His brother Steven's name is spelled STEVEN, not STEPHEN.
14. He was friends, at NYU, with now labor historian Dan Katz.
15. They became friends in 1980 after being separately elected to represent their dorms in student government.
16. They went on to co-found the Coalition for Students Rights, which led protests on campus of things like tuition hikes.
17. He studied Latin American politics at Columbia University. (Is this what his Masters is in, though? It seems like his Masters may be in something else?)
18. After working for Mayor David Dinkins' campaign in 1989, he went on to work as an aide in Mayor Dinkins' office.

19. De Blasio met Mc Cray when they were both working for Dinkins at City Hall. (Here I'm a little confused, because while I have often seen that reported, I also see that Mc Cray told Essence in 2013 that she had been working in the press office of the NYC Commission on Human Rights and was "sent to City Hall." It's a little unclear to me if that means she was specifically working for Dinkins or regularly at City Hall vs. just at City Hall for the day. Thanks for any clarification!)
20. Prior to being elected Mayor, de Blasio served THREE terms on the City Council and ONE term as Public Advocate.
21. De Blasio's signature pre-K program began in September 2014.
22. It served 51,000 pre-schoolers at over 1,600 locations.
23. Richard Buery was the deputy mayor tasked with implementing universal pre-K.
24. De Blasio backed or supported several Democrats running in state races outside of New York City in 2014, but none of them were able to win their elections.
25. De Blasio also worked on Dinkins' 1993 re-election campaign.
26. At the time when our writer spoke to de Blasio, it had not yet been decided whether or not the bipartisan forum his progressive alliance will hold this year in advance of the 2016 election would be in the form of one forum, for both major parties, or two separate forums. Has that been decided?
27. Oil paintings of past mayors hang in New York's City Hall.
28. The portrait of Bloomberg is a photorealistic one of him standing in front of a sea of cubicles.
29. This office floor plan added by Bloomberg remains at City Hall.
30. De Blasio works in his own office on the floor below, at a desk previously used by Fiorello La Guardia, who was a hero to his family.
31. There was a Mets jersey in de Blasio's office when Mark visited, as well as a boom box and a stack of CDs.
32. During one of our writers' visits, de Blasio was holding a meeting to discuss his new housing plan, which included Human Resources Administration Commissioner Stephen Banks.
33. Banks was there speaking of tenants' rights issues.
34. Emma Wolfe, who is 34, and is the director of Intergovernmental Affairs, sat beside him.
35. She has previously worked at ACORN and as a labor organizer.
36. The Mayor has an old school style flip phone.

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: "John Del Cecato"; Gunaratna, Mahen; Wolfe, Emma; Carey, Michael
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Leopold, Elana
Subject: RE: Rolling Stone fact checking
Date: Thursday, April 30, 2015 2:58:55 PM

I've emailed him

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Thursday, April 30, 2015 2:55 PM
To: Gunaratna, Mahen; Wolfe, Emma; Carey, Michael
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Rolling Stone fact checking

Damn, you're thorough! Thanks Mahen

From: <Gunaratna>, Mahen <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Thursday, April 30, 2015 at 2:43 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: Rolling Stone fact checking

See attached fact-check edits for RKK/Rolling Stone.

Still waiting on the lines highlighted in yellow, but for now recommend passing this along.

Most articles online (and I believe Mayor himself has said) say that his parents were 44 years old at the time of his birth. But, based on the birthdates listed in Mayor's security clearance forms, his mother technically turned 44 the week after he was born. And his father turned 44 four months later.

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Thursday, April 30, 2015 12:21 AM
To: Gunaratna, Mahen; Wolfe, Emma; Carey, Michael
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Rolling Stone fact checking

4 or 5pm tomorrow (Thurs) I think

From: <Gunaratna>, Mahen <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 at 10:53 PM
To: "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: Rolling Stone fact checking

What time tomorrow is this due? I'll quarterback and will get done - just need a sense of whether end of the day is okay.

From: Wolfe, Emma
Sent: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 10:35 PM
To: Carey, Michael
Cc: John Del Cecato; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Gunaratna, Mahen; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Rolling Stone fact checking

Two not three council terms
(Led campaign against term limits extension!)

On Apr 29, 2015, at 10:28 PM, Carey, Michael <MPCCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

I kinda love the last fact!!

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Date: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 at 10:24 PM
To: Phil Walzak <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Emma Wolfe <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Andrea Hagelgans <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Mahen Gunaratna <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Elana Leopold <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Michael Carey <mpccarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Fwd: Rolling Stone fact checking

Begin forwarded message:

From: Rebecca Katz <[REDACTED]>
Date: April 29, 2015 at 9:49:38 PM EDT
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Rolling Stone fact checking

Please forward to Mahen, Andrea, Emma, Phil, MPC, and EL.

Thanks.

There were a few mistakes I already went over with the fact checker (like he only served two council terms) and I talked to her about CMC's rotation into City Hall, but Mahen -- can you comb through this and make sure all is good? Need exact prek numbers, etc. I clarified that they do go to church often and consider themselves spiritual, just don't belong. They need it tomorrow.

Andrea/ Emma -- everything check out from meeting? Emma -- you good with how they characterize PA work?

MPC/ Elana -- can you please look over the bits about City Hall/ his office? All looks right to me, but just double checking.

Does anyone know Dan Katz? Mayor should have heads up that they spoke.

JDC -- for question 26, no?

If other flags, please speak up asap. Thanks.

1. Is it better to list the Mayor's height as 6'5" or 6'6"? I've seen a fairly humorous article that talks about him being actually 6'5 and 7/8 of an inch tall, but which is better as shorthand?
2. The Mayor met with our reporter on the back porch of Gracie Mansion, from which can be seen views of the East River and the Triborough Bridge.
3. There are wicker chairs on the porch.
4. There are soccer nets set up in the yard, where the Mayor and his wife, Chirlane McCray, occasionally play with their son, Dante.
5. Dante is a high school senior.
6. Their daughter, Chiara, is currently a junior at Santa Clara University in California.
7. Prior to the announcement of the Mayor's planned progressive version of a 'Contract with America', the various members of the group had a meeting that was closed to the press.
8. The de Blasio family does not belong to a church of any kind.
9. The de Blasio and Mc Cray were married in 1994 by a pair of gay ministers. (Just confirming that both ministers were gay.)
10. While serving as NYC's Public Advocate, de Blasio created an entire department of community organizers.
11. Both of de Blasio's parents were 44 when he was born.
12. De Blasio's father left the family when de Blasio was seven.
13. His brother Steven's name is spelled STEVEN, not STEPHEN.
14. He was friends, at NYU, with now labor historian Dan Katz.
15. They became friends in 1980 after being separately elected to represent their dorms in student government.
16. They went on to co-found the Coalition for Students Rights, which led protests on campus of things like tuition hikes.
17. He studied Latin American politics at Columbia University. (Is this what his Masters is in, though? It seems like his Masters may be in something else?)
18. After working for Mayor David Dinkins' campaign in 1989, he went on to work as an aide in Mayor Dinkins' office.
19. De Blasio met Mc Cray when they were both working for

- Dinkins at City Hall. (Here I'm a little confused, because while I have often seen that reported, I also see that Mc Cray told Essence in 2013 that she had been working in the press office of the NYC Commission on Human Rights and was "sent to City Hall." It's a little unclear to me if that means she was specifically working for Dinkins or regularly at City Hall vs. just at City Hall for the day. Thanks for any clarification!)
20. Prior to being elected Mayor, de Blasio served THREE terms on the City Council and ONE term as Public Advocate.
 21. De Blasio's signature pre-K program began in September 2014.
 22. It served 51,000 pre-schoolers at over 1,600 locations.
 23. Richard Buery was the deputy mayor tasked with implementing universal pre-K.
 24. De Blasio backed or supported several Democrats running in state races outside of New York City in 2014, but none of them were able to win their elections.
 25. De Blasio also worked on Dinkins' 1993 re-election campaign.
 26. At the time when our writer spoke to de Blasio, it had not yet been decided whether or not the bipartisan forum his progressive alliance will hold this year in advance of the 2016 election would be in the form of one forum, for both major parties, or two separate forums. Has that been decided?
 27. Oil paintings of past mayors hang in New York's City Hall.
 28. The portrait of Bloomberg is a photorealistic one of him standing in front of a sea of cubicles.
 29. This office floor plan added by Bloomberg remains at City Hall.
 30. De Blasio works in his own office on the floor below, at a desk previously used by Fiorello La Guardia, who was a hero to his family.
 31. There was a Mets jersey in de Blasio's office when Mark visited, as well as a boom box and a stack of CDs.
 32. During one of our writers' visits, de Blasio was holding a meeting to discuss his new housing plan, which included Human Resources Administration Commissioner Stephen Banks.
 33. Banks was there speaking of tenants' rights issues.
 34. Emma Wolfe, who is 34, and is the director of Intergovernmental Affairs, sat beside him.
 35. She has previously worked at ACORN and as a labor organizer.
 36. The Mayor has an old school style flip phone.

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: "John Del Cecato"; B
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana; Snyder, Thomas
Subject: RE: Morning Joe!
Date: Thursday, April 30, 2015 3:07:14 PM

Ideally, I'd love to time all of this for Wed since, strategically, I would like to keep Tuesday saved for the First Lady's mental health announcements.

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Thursday, April 30, 2015 12:23 PM
To: B; Hagelgans, Andrea
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana; Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Morning Joe!

I think Warren's shop might have more success in pitching NYT - but I'm coordinating with Geldon & will keep you in loop

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Thursday, April 30, 2015 at 12:12 PM
To: "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <LEopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: Morning Joe!

Exactly right. Combining the timing is perfect, and Elizabeth told me last night she's fine with the op-ed going next week. So let's see if we can get the days to align exactly. Can we start shopping the op-ed to nyt, then WaPo, then WSJ (hopefully NYT has the wisdom to take it this time)? When should that happen? Who will do that?

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
Sent: Thursday, April 30, 2015 11:07 AM
To: B
Cc: Walzak, Phil; John Del cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana; Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Morning Joe!

Good Morning,

I spoke with Morning Joe producers and they are eager to have you on next week. Given the potential timing of the MBdB/Warren op-ed (which I did not discuss with them, of course), I offered Tuesday or Wednesday as days that we would consider.

Details:
Time- 7:30 am - 8am (most viewers)
Location - 30 Rockefeller

Segment- 10 minutes on income inequality, progressive values
Participants -YOU (only guest), Mika, Joe, and Willie

Topics they are most interested in:

- your recent trips and why you have taken up the torch on these issues
- Issues of most interest: Equal pay, minimum wage (MIKA focus); Small business growth/entrepreneurship, youth jobs (Joe)

I'm going to send them a packet of information and work with them on more details. JDC, can you let me know when we might have a sense of the op-ed timing? I think the ideal is having the NYT oped pop and then we are on the show right after

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: John Del Ceccato \(jfdc@akpdmedia.com\)
Subject: list
Date: Thursday, April 30, 2015 5:27:30 PM

Can you get the updated list of signers, speakers etc sent to me? Thanks.

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Cc: [REDACTED] Snyder, Thomas; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Warren
Date: Thursday, April 30, 2015 6:08:25 PM

Challenge accepted!

> On Apr 30, 2015, at 6:08 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>

> John Del Taxo, prove me wrong! I dare you!

>

>

>

> ----- Original Message -----

> From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

> Sent: Thursday, April 30, 2015 06:02 PM

> To: B

> Cc: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>

Snyder, Thomas; Leopold, Elana

> Subject: Re: Warren

>

> Today is going very well

>

>

>

>> On Apr 30, 2015, at 5:10 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>>

>>

>> Excellent. Keep the time at 3pm. Now let's go get Tammy

>>

>>

>>

>> ----- Original Message -----

>> From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

>> Sent: Thursday, April 30, 2015 02:37 PM

>> To: B; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>

<[REDACTED]>

>> Cc: Snyder, Thomas; Leopold, Elana

>> Subject: Re: Warren

>>

>> After doing a lot of legwork/checking - I think we keep the 3pm as >> planned, and move forward.

>>

>> 1. We will be with Stiglitz and Warren in the AM. Our connection to >> them/blessing from them will be heavily implied.

>> 2. Our list is getting better and better. My new (happy) worry is what >> we're going to do with all these big leaguers who are going to insist on >> saying more than two sentences.

>> 3. Mike Lux is progressive organizer/advisor to the stars, for many >> years. He's personally close with a lot of Senators (including Warren), >> and is helping us get Senators there. If some Senators want to do the >> Warren thing first, I strongly suspect that our event will still be going >> on in time for them to show up & add their beautiful mugs to our group.

>>

>>

>>

>>> On 4/29/15, 10:34 PM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>>>

>>>

>>> 1. Very enthusiastic about the op-ed and fine with it going next week.

>>> Agrees that referencing Stiglitz report coming is good way to build focus >>> on it

>>>

>>> 2. REMIND ME to alert Team Hillary before the op-ed runs and to send them >>> copy right before it's public

>>>

>>> 3. Warren claims no sense of her own schedule and little involvement in >>> it (which sounded true and I can relate to). This is a further reminder >>> that if we don't deal with staff folks more aggressively and smartly, we >>> will lose out every time. She believes that her mtg with Senators and >>> Stiglitz, by it's nature, is unmovable. She said she will tell her >>> scheduling director Emily Ross to work with you guys to see if anything >>> can be done, such as getting Stiglitz and Senators out of the mtg and >>> promptly over to us. But it sounds like we should either write all of >>> them off as a loss, or change the time. I await your proposal. Thanks

>>

From: John Del Cecato
To: Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Fwd: Re:
Date: Thursday, April 30, 2015 6:08:55 PM

Begin forwarded message:

From: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Date: April 30, 2015 at 6:01:17 PM EDT
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: jeani murray <[REDACTED]> John Davis
<[REDACTED]> Aaron Pickrell <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re:

yep, this is the list. Going to send an easier to read version to the Mayor too

- Eileen Appelbaum, Senior Economist, Center for Economic and Policy Research
- Dean Baker, Co-Director, Center for Economic and Policy Research
- Deepak Bhargava, Executive Director, Center for Community Change
- Robert Borosage, Co-Director Campaign for America's Future
- Steve Buscemi, Actor
- Larry Cohen, President, Communication Workers of America
- Sheila Crowley, President and CEO, National Low Income Housing Coalition
- Bill de Blasio, Mayor of New York, New York
- Rosa DeLauro, U.S. Representative from Connecticut
- Howard Dean, Former Governor of Vermont & Founder, Democracy for America
- Abigail Disney, Filmmaker, Philanthropist
- Jeff Faux, Founder, Economic Policy Institute
- Leo Gerard, President, United Steelworkers
- Lisa Graves, Executive Director, Center for Media and Democracy/PRWatch/ALECexposed.org
- Raúl Grijalva. U.S. Representative from Arizona, Co-Chair Congressional Progressive Caucus
- Jeannette Huezco, Executive Director, United for a Fair Economy

- Mike Lux, Co-Founder and President, Progressive Strategies
- Chirlane McCray, First Lady of New York City
- Heather McGhee, Executive Director, DEMOS
- Lawrence Mishel, President, Economic Policy Institute
- Cynthia Nixon, Actor
- Atima Omara, President, Young Democrats of America
- James Parrott, Deputy Director and Chief Economist, Fiscal Policy Institute
- Robert Reich, Chancellor's Professor of Public Policy at University of California at Berkeley & Former U.S. Secretary of Labor
- Mark Ruffalo, Actor, Director, Producer & Activist
- Jeff Sachs, Economist & Director of the Earth Institute at Columbia University
- Susan Sarandon, Actress, Activist
- Reverend Al Sharpton, Founder and President of National Action Network
- Lee Saunders, President, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees
- D Taylor, President, UNITE HERE!
- Katrina vanden Heuval, Editor, The Nation
- Randi Weingarten, President, American Federation of Teachers
- Michael Wessel, President, The Wessel Group
- Nan Whaley, Mayor of Dayton, Ohio
- Marjorie E. Wood, PhD, Senior Associate, Global Economy Project & Managing Editor, Inequality.org
- Marion Wright Edelman, Founder and President, Children's Defense Fund

On Thu, Apr 30, 2015 at 6:00 PM, John Del Cecato

<jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

Hayley - can you send me latest list with Rosa included for Tom Snyder?

--
 Hayley Prim
 c: [REDACTED]

From: John Del Cecato
To: Hayley Prim; B
Subject: Re: April 30 Status Update: 34 Signers, 14 Attendees
Date: Thursday, April 30, 2015 6:30:09 PM

In labor leaders alone, you've got close to 5 million American workers represented... If we can bring home Trunk and Mary Kay, that's more like 20 million

From: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Date: Thursday, April 30, 2015 at 6:07 PM
To: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: April 30 Status Update: 34 Signers, 14 Attendees

Confirmed attendees are: Deepak Bhargava, Larry Cohen, Sheila Crowley, Howard Dean, Rosa DeLauro, Leo Gerard, Raul Grijalva, Heather McGhee, Mike Lux, Atima Omara, Lee Saunders, Al Sharpton, Randi Weingarten, Mayor Nan Whaley

Full list of signers here:

Economic Policy Institute	Senior Economist	Eileen	Appelbaum
Center for Economic and Policy Research	Co-Director	Dean	Baker
Communities for Change	Executive Director	Deepak	Bhargava
Campaign for America's Future	Co-Director	Robert	Borosage
	Actor	Steve	Buscemi
CWA	President	Larry	Cohen
National Low Income Housing Coalition	President	Sheila	Crowley
Former Governor/Democracy for America	Founder	Howard	Dean
Connecticut	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Rosa	DeLauro
Philanthropist/ Fimmaker		Abigail	Disney
Economic Policy Institute	Founder	Jeff	Faux
Steelworkers	President	Leo	Gerard
Center for Media and Democracy	Executive Director	Lisa	Graves
Arizona	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Raul	Grijalva
United for a Fair Economy	Executive Director	Jeannette	Huezo
Progressive Strategies	Director	Mike	Lux
Demos	Executive Director	Heather	McGhee
Economic Policy Institute	President	Lawrence	Mishel
	Actor	Cynthia	Nixon

Young Democrats of America	President	Atima	Omara
Fiscal Policy Institute	Deputy Director and Chief Economist	James	Parrott
University of California at Berkley	Chancellor's Professor	Robert	Reich
	Actor	Mark	Ruffalo
Columbia University	Economist/Director of Earth Institute	Jeff	Sachs
Actress		Susan	Sarandon
AFSCME	President	Lee	Saunders
NAN	President	Al	Sharpton
Unite Here	President	D	Taylor
The Nation	Editor	Katrina	Vanden Heuvel
AFT	President	Randi	Weingarten
The Wessel Group	President	Michael	Wessel
Dayton	Mayor	Nan	Whaley
Inequality.org	Managing Editor	Marjorie	Wood
Childrens Defense Fund	President/Founder	Marian	Wright Edelman

--

Hayley Prim

c:

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
To: B
Cc: John Del Cecato; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma
Subject: HuffPost: Hillary Clinton Agrees With Elizabeth Warren On Trade Dispute With Obama
Date: Thursday, April 30, 2015 7:13:37 PM

Hillary Clinton Agrees With Elizabeth Warren On Trade Dispute With Obama

HUFFINGTON POST – Zach Carter, Amanda Terkel, Ryan Grim
http://www.huffingtonpost.com/2015/04/30/hillary-clinton-trans-pacific-partnership_n_7173108.html

Hillary Clinton is opposed to a critical piece of the Obama administration's Trans-Pacific Partnership, which would give corporations the right to sue sovereign nations over laws or regulations that could potentially curb their profits.

The policy position is contained in her book Hard Choices, and was confirmed to HuffPost by a spokesperson for her presidential campaign. Obama and congressional Democrats are locked in a bitter public feud over TPP -- a deal between 12 Pacific nations -- with much of the controversy derived from concerns it will undermine regulatory standards.

Clinton writes in her book:

Currently the United States is negotiating comprehensive agreements with eleven countries in Asia and in North and South America, and with the European Union. We should be focused on ending currency manipulation, environmental destruction, and miserable working conditions in developing countries, as well as harmonizing regulations with the EU. And we should avoid some of the provisions sought by business interests, including our own, like giving them or their investors the power to sue foreign governments to weaken their environmental and public health rules, as Philip Morris is already trying to do in Australia. The United States should be advocating a level and fair playing field, not special favors. (Emphasis added.) Obama's TPP deal would be enforced by a process known as "investor-state dispute settlement," which allows foreign companies to attack domestic laws or regulations before an international tribunal if they believe those rules unfairly curb investment returns. Those tribunals can't directly overturn laws, but they can impose hefty fines on the countries they rule against.

Financial watchdogs and environmental activists are particularly concerned the process will be used to stymie future rulemaking with the threat of international fines. Congress often considers trade commitments when debating domestic legislation, at times diluting or derailing it. Foreign countries have halted anti-smoking rules over ISDS lawsuits.

Obama has vigorously defended ISDS against criticism from Sen. Elizabeth Warren (D-Mass.) and others, insisting it is necessary to protect American companies abroad.

"In a lot of countries, U.S. companies are discriminated against, and going through their court system would not give them relief," Obama told reporters on a conference call last week. "The notion that corporate America is going to be able to use this provision to eliminate our financial regulations and our food safety regulations and our consumer regulations -- that's just bunk. It's not true."

The Australian case that Clinton referenced in her book, however, is instructive. The Australian government enacted legislation that would require tobacco products be sold only with plain, simple packaging that includes health warnings -- labeling the tobacco companies objected to. Philip Morris Asia is suing Australia under a different free trade pact, using a similar ISDS provision, arguing that the Australian law is cutting into its profit. It's easy to see how laws in, say, New York City, would be similarly targeted.

On the same conference call, Obama defended the system further:

There are over 3,000 different ISDS agreements among countries across the globe, and this neutral arbitration system has existed since the 1950s. The United States has investment agreements with 54 different countries over the last 30 years. Under these various ISDS provisions, the U.S. has been sued a total of 17 times. Thirteen of those cases have been decided so far; we've won them all.

They have no ability to undo U.S. laws. They don't have the ability to result in punitive damages. ISDS has come under some legitimate criticism when they're poorly written, because they've been used in particular by some tobacco companies in some countries to challenge anti-tobacco regulation. And that's why we have made sure that some of the legitimate criticisms around past ISDS provisions are tightened, are strengthened so that there is no possibility of smaller countries or weaker countries getting clobbered by the legal departments of somebody like R.J. Reynolds so that they can't pass anti-smoking legislation. That, by the way, is more of a legitimate concern for the other signatories to the deal who would not be able to manage expensive litigation, than it is an argument that our laws would be challenged.

Indeed, environmental watchdogs are concerned corporations will use TPP to undermine environmental protections abroad. And while ISDS provisions have existed for a long time, companies didn't really take advantage of them until the 21st century. As Warren noted in an op-ed for The Washington Post, less than 100 ISDS cases were initiated between 1959 and 2002, while 58 were filed in 2012 alone. Warren and others are not only worried the U.S. might lose ISDS cases, but that expanding the ISDS regime will prevent governments from enacting future regulations.

There are other ways to enforce trade deals that do not elevate corporations to the same status of sovereign nations. Under World Trade Organization treaties, companies must first convince their home government to accept the case. The governments of the two countries then face off before WTO adjudicators.

Clinton has been cautious about Obama's TPP deal since launching her campaign. In mid-April, a Clinton spokesman issued a statement saying Clinton "will be watching closely to see what is being done to crack down on currency manipulation" and to "improve labor rights, protect the environment and health" in the final deal.

"We shouldn't be giving special rights to corporations at the expense of workers and consumers," the statement reads.

Obama opposes using TPP to combat currency manipulation -- a tactic by which Japan and China have been able to curb U.S. exports by making their own goods cheaper.

Other potential candidates for the 2016 Democratic presidential nomination, including Sen. Bernie Sanders (I-Vt.) and former Maryland Gov. Martin O'Malley, have been sharply critical of TPP.

Committees in the House and Senate approved legislation last week that would grant Obama "fast track" authority on trade, stripping Congress of its power to amend whatever deal the administration ultimately reaches.

Sent from my iPhone

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Subject: Re: <no subject>
Date: Thursday, April 30, 2015 8:20:57 PM

Really?? Ok - I could make a run at him. Hard to see how the architect of the 2014 strategy would be a kindred spirit just a few months later.

On Apr 30, 2015, at 8:06 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

I disagree on first blush. I think it says the party is shifting

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Thursday, April 30, 2015 06:41 PM
To: B
Subject: <no subject>

Mike Lux asked me whether we wanted to recruit Harry Reid. I reflexively said no, since he's far from the progressive wing of the party... But I realize that I should ask you before I turn down an offer to help with someone of that stature.. But I think I am properly channeling you here...

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Re: <no subject>
Date: Thursday, April 30, 2015 9:14:46 PM

And that may be why you want him, brother

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Thursday, April 30, 2015 08:23 PM
To: B
Subject: Re: <no subject>

Remember that Reid is the guy who told the Caucus that they were decidedly not going in the "de Blasio direction" after you won in 2013

On Apr 30, 2015, at 8:06 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

I disagree on first blush. I think it says the party is shifting

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Thursday, April 30, 2015 06:41 PM
To: B
Subject: <no subject>

Mike Lux asked me whether we wanted to recruit Harry Reid. I reflexively said no, since he's far from the progressive wing of the party... But I realize that I should ask you before I turn down an offer to help with someone of that stature.. But I think I am properly channeling you here...

From: Leopold, Elana
To: "John Del Cecato"; [REDACTED]
Subject: RE: MSNBC
Date: Friday, May 01, 2015 9:44:56 AM

It is! You should discuss with Mayor today

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Friday, May 01, 2015 9:44 AM
To: Leopold, Elana; [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: MSNBC

No - that's good news!

From: <Leopold>, Elana <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Friday, May 1, 2015 at 9:38 AM
To: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: MSNBC

Did Mayor relay to you that Sharpton said he would help pump up May 12th with the other MSNBC peeps?

From: John Del Cecato
To: Snyder, Thomas; B
Cc: Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA logos
Date: Friday, May 01, 2015 9:51:18 AM

Elana - could you show the mayor the four samples today & have him weigh in? Otherwise, we'll just go with the steps logo

From: <Snyder>, Thomas <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Thursday, April 30, 2015 at 10:07 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: TPA logos

To me it conveyed people climbing the economic ladder. Either works.

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Thursday, April 30, 2015 9:36 AM
To: Snyder, Thomas; B
Cc: Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA logos

I could live with that one, too... Just made me feel a little like we were "up on our soapbox" - but that may be a simplistic interpretation

From: <Snyder>, Thomas <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Thursday, April 30, 2015 at 8:54 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: TPA logos

I like the steps logo, for what its worth.

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 11:55 AM
To: B
Cc: Snyder, Thomas; Leopold, Elana
Subject: TPA logos

Hey there. Sources tell me that you wanted to sign off on the logo for TPA. My preference is the third one in this collection of four — the one with the people locking arms. Adding Elana to print out for you.

From: Leopold, Elana
To: "John Del Cecato"; Snyder, Thomas; B
Subject: RE: TPA logos
Date: Friday, May 01, 2015 9:51:36 AM

yes

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Friday, May 01, 2015 9:52 AM
To: Snyder, Thomas; B
Cc: Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA logos

Elana - could you show the mayor the four samples today & have him weigh in? Otherwise, we'll just go with the steps logo

From: <Snyder>, Thomas <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Thursday, April 30, 2015 at 10:07 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: TPA logos

To me it conveyed people climbing the economic ladder. Either works.

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Thursday, April 30, 2015 9:36 AM
To: Snyder, Thomas; B
Cc: Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA logos

I could live with that one, too... Just made me feel a little like we were "up on our soapbox" - but that may be a simplistic interpretation

From: <Snyder>, Thomas <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Thursday, April 30, 2015 at 8:54 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: TPA logos

I like the steps logo, for what its worth.

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Wednesday, April 29, 2015 11:55 AM
To: B
Cc: Snyder, Thomas; Leopold, Elana
Subject: TPA logos

Hey there. Sources tell me that you wanted to sign off on the logo for TPA. My preference is the third one in this collection of four — the one with the people locking arms. Adding Elana to print out for you.

From: John Del Cecato
To: Snyder, Thomas; Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Fuleihan, Dean \(OMB\)
Subject: Re: NYT: Editorial: Picking Up the Tab for Low Wages
Date: Friday, May 01, 2015 9:53:10 AM

I like the California approach - reminiscent of our Worst Landlords Watch List

The other approach, which is very similar to the Bad Business Fee, was originally part of TPA - but got cut, I believe because we felt it was a little too small - but we can/should look into championing legislation to this effect on the city level & whether that's feasible. Seems like a sensible policy.

From: <Snyder>, Thomas <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Friday, May 1, 2015 at 9:03 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmmedia.com>, Anthony Shorris <AShorris@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Dominic Williams <DWilliams@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Fuleihan, Dean (OMB)" <fuleihand@omb.nyc.gov>
Subject: FW: NYT: Editorial: Picking Up the Tab for Low Wages

Have we ever considered a policy for NYC that accomplishes what this lead editorial in today's Times addresses? See highlighted sentences near bottom.

From: Clips
Sent: Friday, May 01, 2015 8:15 AM
Subject: NYT: Editorial: Picking Up the Tab for Low Wages

Editorial: Picking Up the Tab for Low Wages

NY TIMES – Editorial

<http://www.nytimes.com/2015/05/01/opinion/picking-up-the-tab-for-low-wages.html?ref=opinion>

It is hard to overstate the extent to which work no longer results in a decent paycheck and a rising standard of living in this country. The portion of the economic pie that goes to working people is currently near the smallest on record, in data going back to 1947. Similarly, the gap between worker pay and labor productivity has widened since the 1970s. In a healthy economy, wages and productivity would rise in tandem, but in recent decades, productivity gains have flowed increasingly to executive compensation and shareholder returns, rather than wages.

These dynamics are not inevitable. Low-wage employers, in particular, pay low wages because they can and the main reason they can is that Congress has failed, over decades, to adequately update the minimum wage and other labor standards, including rules for overtime pay, employee benefits and union organizing.

That failure has had deep and perverse repercussions, extending beyond harming low-wage workers. As a recent report in The Times by Patricia Cohen explained, when work does not pay workers enough to get by, they are forced to rely on public assistance programs, mainly Medicaid, food stamps and low-earner tax credits.

Nearly three-fourths of the people helped by public aid for the poor are members of families headed by someone who works, according to a new study by the Berkeley Center for Labor

Research and Education at the University of California. It estimates that state and federal governments spend more than $150 billion a year on such aid.

In one respect, this shows that the safety net, though strained and inadequate, is functioning. Low-earner tax credits, for instance, create an incentive to work by tying cash assistance to earnings. Other programs enable people to work by subsidizing health care, child care and transportation.

The problem is that as labor standards have eroded, allowing profitable corporations to pay chronically low wages, taxpayers are not only supporting the working poor, as intended, but also providing a huge subsidy for employers by picking up the difference between what workers earn and what they need to meet basic living costs. The low-wage business model has essentially turned public aid into a form of corporate welfare.

The best corrective is to raise the federal minimum wage. A new bill introduced on Thursday by congressional Democrats would lift the minimum from its current level of $7.25 an hour to $12 an hour by 2020. At that level, there would still be a need for public aid to ensure that some working families are kept out of poverty. But that aid would decline as take-home pay increases, leaving workers — and taxpayers — better off. If a higher minimum wage were coupled with increased tax credits for low earners, the poverty fighting effects of the higher minimum would be amplified, further reducing the need for workers to use public aid for food and health care.

A handful of states are considering ways to recover public funds from low-wage employers, say, by requiring payment of a fee to the state for each worker who makes less than $15 an hour. In 2016, California will start publishing the names of employers that have more than 100 employees on Medicaid and how much these companies cost the state in public aid.

Depressed wages are the result of outdated policies and lack of public awareness, that may, at long last, be changing for the better.

From: John Del Cecato
To: Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma; Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: TPA & MBDB
Date: Friday, May 01, 2015 2:00:57 PM

+Tom

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Date: Friday, May 1, 2015 at 2:01 PM
To: "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: TPA & MBDB

Boss would like to do a call at some point to go over branding of TPA (in a word - he isn't loving the title)... Wouldn't change what we're calling our "thing" in the leads-up to 5/12 - but he'd like us to hash out what we call our movement in the days after 5/12 (which mean we'd have to discuss soon)... I told him we'd already discussed & arrived - but he said process was ad hoc (which I interpret to mean he wants to be in on it)...

We should also discuss what we do if/when presidentials ask us to sign on to TPA (O'Malley, Sanders, etc.) - how do we handle?

From: John Del Cecato
To: B; Snyder, Thomas
Subject: American Prospect
Date: Saturday, May 02, 2015 8:58:30 AM

Really smart, longer piece by Robert Reich...

The Political Roots of Widening Inequality

*This article appears in the Spring 2015 issue of The American Prospect magazine. Subscribe here.

Celebrate our 25th Anniversary with us by clicking here for a free download of this special issue.

For the past quarter-century—at least since Bob Kuttner, Paul Starr, and I founded The American Prospect—I’ve offered in articles, books, and lectures an explanation for why average working people in advanced nations like the United States have failed to gain ground and are under increasing economic stress: Put simply, globalization and technological change have made most of us less competitive. The tasks we used to do can now be done more cheaply by lower-paid workers abroad or by computer-driven machines.

My solution—and I’m hardly alone in suggesting this—has been an activist government that raises taxes on the wealthy, invests the proceeds in excellent schools and other means people need to become more productive, and redistributes to the needy. These recommendations have been vigorously opposed by those who believe the economy will function better for everyone if government is smaller and if taxes and redistributions are curtailed.

While the explanation I offered a quarter-century ago for what has happened is still relevant—indeed, it has become the standard, widely accepted explanation—I’ve come to believe it overlooks a critically important phenomenon: the increasing concentration of political power in a corporate and financial elite that has been able to influence the rules by which the economy runs. And the governmental solutions I have propounded, while I believe them still useful, are in some ways beside the point because they take insufficient account of the government’s more basic role in setting the rules of the economic game.

Worse yet, the ensuing debate over the merits of the “free market” versus an activist government has diverted attention from how the market has come to be organized differently from the way it was a half-century ago, why its current organization is failing to deliver the widely shared prosperity it delivered then, and what the basic rules of the market should be. It has allowed America to cling to the meritocratic tautology that individuals are paid what they’re “worth” in the market, without examining the legal and political institutions that define the market. The tautology is easily confused for a moral claim that people deserve what they are paid. Yet this claim has meaning only if the legal and political institutions defining the market are morally justifiable.

Most fundamentally, the standard explanation for what has happened ignores power.

Most fundamentally, the standard explanation for what has happened ignores power. As such, it lures the unsuspecting into thinking nothing can or should be done to alter what people are paid because the market has decreed it.

The standard explanation has allowed some to argue, for example, that the median wage of the bottom 90 percent—which for the first 30 years after World War II rose in tandem with productivity—has stagnated for the last 30 years, even as productivity has continued to rise, because middle-income workers are worth less than they were before new software technologies and globalization made many of their old jobs redundant. They therefore have to settle for lower wages and less security. If they want better jobs, they need more education and better skills. So hath the market decreed.

Yet this market view cannot be the whole story because it fails to account for much of what we have experienced. For one thing, it doesn't clarify why the transformation occurred so suddenly. The divergence between productivity gains and the median wage began in the late 1970s and early 1980s, and then took off. Yet globalization and technological change did not suddenly arrive at America's doorstep in those years. What else began happening then?

Nor can the standard explanation account for why other advanced economies facing similar forces of globalization and technological change did not succumb to them as readily as the United States. By 2011, the median income in Germany, for example, was rising faster than it was in the United States, and Germany's richest 1 percent took home about 11 percent of total income, before taxes, while America's richest 1 percent took home more than 17 percent. Why have globalization and technological change widened inequality in the United States to a much greater degree?

Nor can the standard explanation Advertisement account for why the compensation packages of the top executives of big companies soared from an average of 20 times that of the typical worker 40 years ago to almost 300 times. Or why the denizens of Wall Street, who in the 1950s and 1960s earned comparatively modest sums, are now paid tens or hundreds of millions annually. Are they really "worth" that much more now than they were worth then?

Finally and perhaps most significantly, the market explanation cannot account for the decline in wages of recent college graduates. If the market explanation were accurate, college graduates would command higher wages in line with their greater productivity. After all, a college education was supposed to boost personal incomes and maintain American prosperity.

To be sure, young people with college degrees have continued to do better than people without them. In 2013, Americans with four-year college degrees earned 98 percent more per hour on average than people without a college degree. That was a bigger advantage than the 89 percent premium that college graduates earned relative to non-graduates five years before, and the 64 percent advantage they held in the early 1980s.

But since 2000, the real average hourly wages of young college graduates have dropped. (See chart below.) The entry-level wages of female college graduates have dropped by more than 8 percent, and male graduates by more than 6.5 percent. To state it another way, while a college education has become a prerequisite for joining the middle class, it is no longer a sure means for gaining ground once admitted to it. That's largely because the middle class's share of the total economic pie continues to shrink, while the share going to the top continues to grow.

Chart data source: Economic Policy Institute Analysis of Current Population Survey Outgoing Rotation Group Microdata

Data are for college graduates ages 21-24 who do not have an advanced degree and are not enrolled in further schooling. Shaded areas denote recessions. Data for 2014 represent 12-month average from April 2013-March 2014.

A deeper understanding of what has happened to American incomes over the last 25 years requires an examination of changes in the organization of the market. These changes stem from a dramatic increase in the political power of large corporations and Wall Street to change the rules of the market in ways that have enhanced their profitability, while reducing the share of economic gains going to the majority of Americans.

This transformation has amounted to a redistribution upward, but not as “redistribution” is normally defined. The government did not tax the middle class and poor and transfer a portion of their incomes to the rich. The government undertook the upward redistribution by altering the rules of the game.

Intellectual property rights—patents, trademarks, and copyrights—have been enlarged and extended, for example. This has created windfalls for pharmaceuticals, high tech, biotechnology, and many entertainment companies, which now preserve their monopolies longer than ever. It has also meant high prices for average consumers, including the highest pharmaceutical costs of any advanced nation.

Do you want to see news done right?

In an age where cat memes are considered “news,” The American Prospect is dedicated to providing deep, well-reported coverage of vital issues and stories like this. Please sign up and we’ll send you more like this one.

At the same time, antitrust laws have been relaxed for corporations with significant market power. This has meant large profits for Monsanto, which sets the prices for most of the nation’s seed corn; for a handful of companies with significant market power over network portals and platforms (Amazon, Facebook, and Google); for cable companies facing little or no broadband competition (Comcast, Time Warner, AT&T, Verizon); and for the largest Wall Street banks, among others. And as with intellectual property rights, this market power has simultaneously raised prices and reduced services available to average Americans. (Americans have the most expensive and slowest broadband of any industrialized nation, for example.)

Financial laws and regulations instituted in the wake of the Great Crash of 1929 and the consequential Great Depression have been abandoned—restrictions on interstate banking, on the intermingling of investment and commercial banking, and on banks becoming publicly held corporations, for example—thereby allowing the largest Wall Street banks to acquire unprecedented influence over the economy. The growth of the financial sector, in turn, spawned junk-bond financing, unfriendly takeovers, private equity and “activist” investing, and the notion that corporations exist solely to maximize shareholder value.

Chart Data Source: Bureau of Economic Analysis

Bankruptcy laws have been loosened for large corporations—notably airlines and automobile manufacturers—allowing them to abrogate labor contracts, threaten closures unless they receive wage concessions, and leave workers and communities stranded. Notably, bankruptcy has not been extended to homeowners who are burdened by mortgage debt and owe more on their homes than the homes are worth, or to graduates laden with student debt. Meanwhile, the largest banks and auto manufacturers were bailed out in the downturn of 2008–2009. The result has been to shift the risks of economic failure onto the backs of average working people and taxpayers.

Contract laws have been altered to require mandatory arbitration before private judges selected by big corporations. Securities laws have been relaxed to allow insider trading of confidential information. CEOs have used stock buybacks to boost share prices when they cash in their own stock options. Tax laws have created loopholes for the partners of hedge funds and private-equity funds, special favors for the oil and gas industry, lower marginal income-tax rates on the highest incomes, and reduced estate taxes on great wealth.

All these instances represent distributions upward—toward big corporations and financial firms, and their executives and shareholders—and away from average working people.

Meanwhile, corporate executives and Wall Street managers and traders have done everything possible to prevent the wages of most workers from rising in tandem with productivity gains, in order that more of the gains go instead toward corporate profits. Higher corporate profits have meant higher returns for shareholders and, directly and indirectly, for the executives and bankers themselves.

Workers worried about keeping their jobs have been compelled to accept this transformation without fully understanding its political roots. For example, some of their economic insecurity has been the direct consequence of trade agreements that have encouraged American companies to outsource jobs abroad. Since all nations' markets reflect political decisions about how they are organized, so-called "free trade" agreements entail complex negotiations about how different market systems are to be integrated. The most important aspects of such negotiations concern intellectual property, financial assets, and labor. The first two of these interests have gained stronger protection in such agreements, at the insistence of big U.S. corporations and Wall Street. The latter—the interests of average working Americans in protecting the value of their labor—have gained less protection, because the voices of working people have been muted.

Rising job insecurity can also be Advertisement traced to high levels of unemployment. Here, too, government policies have played a significant role. The Great Recession, whose proximate causes were the bursting of housing and debt bubbles brought on by the deregulation of Wall Street, hurled millions of Americans out of work. Then, starting in 2010, Congress opted for austerity because it was more interested in reducing budget deficits than in stimulating the economy and reducing unemployment. The resulting joblessness undermined the bargaining power of average workers and translated into stagnant or declining wages.

Some insecurity has been the result of shredded safety nets and disappearing labor protections. Public policies that emerged during the New Deal and World War II had placed most economic risks squarely on large corporations through strong employment contracts, along with Social Security, workers' compensation, 40-hour workweeks with time-and-a-half for overtime, and employer-provided health benefits (wartime price controls encouraged such tax-free benefits as substitutes for wage increases). But in the wake of the junk-bond and takeover mania of the 1980s, economic risks were shifted to workers. Corporate executives did whatever they could to reduce payrolls—outsource abroad, install labor-replacing technologies, and utilize part-time and contract workers. A new set of laws and regulations facilitated this transformation.

As a result, economic insecurity became baked into employment.

As a result, economic insecurity became baked into employment. Full-time workers who had put in decades with a company often found themselves without a job overnight—with no severance pay, no help finding another job, and no health insurance. Even before the crash of 2008, the Panel Study of Income Dynamics at the University of Michigan found that over any given two-year stretch in the two preceding decades, about half of all families experienced some decline in income.

Today, nearly one out of every five working Americans is in a part-time job. Many are consultants, freelancers, and independent contractors. Two-thirds are living paycheck to paycheck. And employment benefits have shriveled. The portion of workers with any pension connected to their job has fallen from just over half in 1979 to under 35 percent today. In MetLife's 2014 survey of employees, 40 percent anticipated that their employers would reduce benefits even further.

The prevailing insecurity is also a consequence of the demise of labor unions. Fifty years ago, when General Motors was the largest employer in America, the typical GM worker earned $35 an hour in today's dollars. By 2014, America's largest employer was Walmart, and the typical entry-level Walmart worker earned about $9 an hour.

This does not mean the typical GM employee a half-century ago was “worth” four times what the typical Walmart employee in 2014 was worth. The GM worker was not better educated or motivated than the Walmart worker. The real difference was that GM workers a half-century ago had a strong union behind them that summoned the collective bargaining power of all autoworkers to get a substantial share of company revenues for its members. And because more than a third of workers across America belonged to a labor union, the bargains those unions struck with employers raised the wages and benefits of non-unionized workers as well. Non-union firms knew they would be unionized if they did not come close to matching the union contracts.

Today's Walmart workers do not have a union to negotiate a better deal. They are on their own. And because less than 7 percent of today's private-sector workers are unionized, most employers across America do not have to match union contracts. This puts unionized firms at a competitive disadvantage. Public policies have enabled and encouraged this fundamental change. More states have adopted so-called "right-to-work" laws. The National Labor Relations Board, understaffed and overburdened, has barely enforced collective bargaining. When workers have been harassed or fired for seeking to start a union, the board rewards them back pay—a mere slap on the wrist of corporations that have violated the law. The result has been a race to the bottom.

Given these changes in the organization of the market, it is not surprising that corporate profits have increased as a portion of the total economy, while wages have declined. (See charts above.) Those whose income derives directly or indirectly from profits—corporate executives, Wall Street traders, and shareholders—have done exceedingly well. Those dependent primarily on wages have not.

The underlying problem, then, is not that most Americans are "worth" less in the market than they had been, or that they have been living beyond their means. Nor is it that they lack enough education to be sufficiently productive. The more basic problem is that the market itself has become tilted ever more in the direction of moneyed interests that have exerted disproportionate influence over it, while average workers have steadily lost bargaining power—both economic and political—to receive as large a portion of the economy’s gains as they commanded in the first three decades after World War II. As a result, their means have not kept up with what the economy could otherwise provide them. To attribute this to the impersonal workings of the “free market” is to disregard the power of large corporations and the financial sector, which have received a steadily larger share of economic gains as a result of that power. As their gains have continued to accumulate, so has their power to accumulate even more.

Under these circumstances, education is no panacea. Reversing the scourge of widening inequality requires reversing the upward distributions within the rules of the market, and giving workers the bargaining leverage they need to get a larger share of the gains from growth. Yet neither will be possible as long as large corporations and Wall Street have the power to prevent such a restructuring. And as they, and the executives and managers who run them, continue to collect the lion’s share of the income and wealth generated by the economy, their influence over the politicians, administrators, and judges who determine the rules of the game may be expected to grow.

The answer to this conundrum is not found in economics. It is found in politics. The changes in the organization of the economy have been reinforcing and cumulative: As more of the nation’s income flows to large corporations and Wall Street and to those whose earnings and wealth derive directly from them, the greater is their political influence over the rules of the market, which in turn enlarges their share of total income. The more dependent politicians become on their financial favors, the greater is the willingness of such politicians and their appointees to reorganize the market to the benefit of these moneyed interests. The weaker unions and other traditional sources of countervailing power become economically, the less able they are to exert political influence over the rules of the market, which causes the playing field to tilt even further against average workers and the poor.

Ultimately, the trend toward widening inequality in America, as elsewhere, can be reversed only if the vast majority, whose incomes have stagnated and whose wealth has failed to increase, join together to demand fundamental change. The most important political competition over the next decades will not be between the right and left, or between Republicans and Democrats. It will be between a majority of Americans who have been losing ground, and an economic elite that refuses to recognize or respond to its growing distress.

From: Carey, Michael
To: B
Cc: Leopold, Elana; jfdc@akpdmedia.com; Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: UPDATED: MINI Schedule for Saturday, May 2, 2015
Date: Saturday, May 02, 2015 11:26:43 AM

Will do

Michael Paul Carey
City Hall
New York, New York

On May 2, 2015, at 11:13 AM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Can we add a call with Team TPA for my ride up to the FDNY event? Thanks

From: Carey, Michael
Sent: Friday, May 01, 2015 05:51 PM
To: B; FLONYC
Cc: Leopold, Elana
Subject: UPDATED: MINI Schedule for Saturday, May 2, 2015

UPDATED: Added Rent Regulations Meeting at 3 PM

SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO
CITY OF NEW YORK
Saturday, May 2, 2015

WEATHER: Hi of 68. Low of 52. Partly Cloudy.
ATTIRE: Business casual
NOTES: - YOU have 30 mins. to change at the gym
- Ronalie will meet YOU at the gym

11:00-11:30 TRAVEL FROM GRACIE MANSION EN ROUTE 357 9TH
STREET//COMMUNICATIONS CALL
Travel Time: 30 mins.

11:30-12:30 WORKOUT
Location: 357 9th Street

1:00-1:30 TRAVEL FROM 357 9TH STREET EN ROUTE 1367 FIFTH AVENUE,
MANHATTAN // OFF TOPIC PREP WITH PHIL

Travel Time: 30 Minutes

1:30 - 2:30 FDNY CITY-WIDE 150TH ANNIVERSARY COMMUNITY EVENT WITH COMMISSIONER NIGRO

Location: Engine 58 and Ladder 26, 1367 Fifth Avenue at 114th Street

Note: There is NO speaking program.

Note: YOU are scheduled to do a short gaggle post greeting folks.

2:30 - 2:45 TRAVEL FROM 1367 FIFTH AVENUE EN ROUTE GRACIE MANSION

Travel Time: 15 mins.

2:30 – 2:45 CONFERENCE CALL ON CLERGY

Dial-in: [REDACTED]

ID: [REDACTED]

3:00-3:30 RENT REGULATIONS MEETING

Location: Gracie Mansion, The Parlor

3:30 - 5:00 BUDGET PRESENTATION PREP

Location: Gracie Mansion, The Dining Room

5:30 - 6:00 WEEKLY SCHEDULING REVIEW

Dial-in: [REDACTED]

ID: [REDACTED]

PRESS CONFERENCES

To be updated.

FLONYC SCHEDULE

No public schedule.

Michael Paul Carey
Director of Scheduling and Advance
City Hall
New York, New York 10007
212.341.5396

Michael Paul Carey
Director of Scheduling and Advance
City Hall
New York, New York 10007
212.341.5396

From: B
To: Carey, Michael
Cc: Leopold, Elana; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: UPDATED: MINI Schedule for Saturday, May 2, 2015
Date: Saturday, May 02, 2015 12:35:45 PM

Can do off-topic on-site with phil. Fairly slow news day

From: Carey, Michael
Sent: Saturday, May 02, 2015 11:27 AM
To: B
Cc: Leopold, Elana; jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: UPDATED: MINI Schedule for Saturday, May 2, 2015

Actually you need to do off topic prep too

Michael Paul Carey
City Hall
New York, New York

On May 2, 2015, at 11:13 AM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Can we add a call with Team TPA for my ride up to the FDNY event? Thanks

From: Carey, Michael
Sent: Friday, May 01, 2015 05:51 PM
To: B; FLONYC
Cc: Leopold, Elana
Subject: UPDATED: MINI Schedule for Saturday, May 2, 2015

UPDATED: Added Rent Regulations Meeting at 3 PM

SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO
CITY OF NEW YORK
Saturday, May 2, 2015

WEATHER: Hi of 68. Low of 52. Partly Cloudy.
ATTIRE: Business casual
NOTES: - YOU have 30 mins. to change at the gym
- Ronalie will meet YOU at the gym

11:00-11:30 TRAVEL FROM GRACIE MANSION EN ROUTE 357 9TH
STREET//COMMUNICATIONS CALL

Travel Time: 30 mins.

11:30-12:30 WORKOUT
Location: 357 9th Street

1:00-1:30 TRAVEL FROM 357 9TH STREET EN ROUTE 1367 FIFTH AVENUE,
MANHATTAN // OFF TOPIC PREP WITH PHIL
Travel Time: 30 Minutes

1:30 - 2:30 FDNY CITY-WIDE 150TH ANNIVERSARY COMMUNITY EVENT WITH COMMISSIONER NIGRO
Location: Engine 58 and Ladder 26, 1367 Fifth Avenue at 114th Street
Note: There is NO speaking program.
Note: YOU are scheduled to do a short gaggle post greeting folks.

2:30 - 2:45 TRAVEL FROM 1367 FIFTH AVENUE EN ROUTE GRACIE MANSION
Travel Time: 15 mins.

2:30 – 2:45 CONFERENCE CALL ON CLERGY
Dial-in: [REDACTED]
ID: [REDACTED]

3:00-3:30 RENT REGULATIONS MEETING
Location: Gracie Mansion, The Parlor

3:30 - 5:00 BUDGET PRESENTATION PREP
Location: Gracie Mansion, The Dining Room

5:30 - 6:00 WEEKLY SCHEDULING REVIEW
Dial-in: [REDACTED]
ID: [REDACTED]

PRESS CONFERENCES
To be updated.

FLONYC SCHEDULE
No public schedule.

Michael Paul Carey
Director of Scheduling and Advance
City Hall
New York, New York 10007
212.341.5396

Michael Paul Carey
Director of Scheduling and Advance
City Hall
New York, New York 10007
212.341.5396

From: Carey, Michael
To: B; FLONYC
Cc: Leopold, Elana; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Re: MINI Schedule for Sunday, May 3, 2015
Date: Saturday, May 02, 2015 4:10:23 PM

Yes sir.

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Saturday, May 2, 2015 at 4:09 PM
To: Michael Carey <mpcarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Chirlane McCray <FLONYC@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: Elana Leopold <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: MINI Schedule for Sunday, May 3, 2015

Pls add a TPA call tmrw but must include ALL TPA staff and walzak, andrea and rosen. Thanks

From: Carey, Michael
Sent: Friday, May 01, 2015 05:39 PM
To: B; FLONYC
Cc: Leopold, Elana
Subject: MINI Schedule for Sunday, May 3, 2015

SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO
CITY OF NEW YORK
Sunday, May 3, 2015

WEATHER: Hi of 77. Low of 57. Partly Cloudy.
ATTIRE: Casual

11:00 - 11:30 TRAVEL FROM GRACIE MANSION EN ROUTE 357 9TH STREET
Travel Time: 30 mins.

11:30 - 12:30 WORKOUT
Location: 357 9th Street

12:30 - 1:00 TRAVEL FROM 357 9TH STREET EN ROUTE GRACIE MANSION
Travel Time: 30 mins.

12:30 - 1:00 COMMUNICATIONS CALL
Press Contact: Monica Klein

1:30 - 5:00 WHITESPACE // CALL TIME
Location: Gracie Mansion

7:00 - 8:30

PRESS CONFERENCES

To be updated.

FLONYC SCHEDULE

No public schedule.

Michael Paul Carey
Director of Scheduling and Advance
City Hall
New York, New York 10007
212.341.5396

From: John Del Cecato
To: B; [REDACTED]
Cc: [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: Tammy B
Date: Saturday, May 02, 2015 8:45:47 PM

I'll send latest in clean email directly to you now

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>

Date: Saturday, May 2, 2015 at 7:48 PM

To: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>

Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "[REDACTED]" <[REDACTED]>

Subject: Re: Tammy B

That's fine. Will get it to Tammy tonight or tmrw

From: Hayley Prim [[mailto:\[REDACTED\]](mailto:[REDACTED])]

Sent: Saturday, May 02, 2015 07:48 PM

To: B

Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>

Subject: Re: Tammy B

Got it, will do. I am away from my computer for a bit. Can I send to you tonight?

On Saturday, May 2, 2015, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Smart -- yes. Hayley, pls send me a new email with the latest version and I'll forward it

----- Original Message -----

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

Sent: Saturday, May 02, 2015 07:31 PM

To: B

Cc: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>, [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>, [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>

Subject: Re: Tammy B

I guess that's as good as we can do at this point. Do you want to email her the latest document yourself? Hayley has the latest. I think that will move her more than waiting for staff to brief her

> On May 2, 2015, at 7:15 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>

> She's upbeat but hasn't been briefed and can't yet commit to the document or the event. We agreed staffs would talk and we would resolve next week

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

From: B
To: [REDACTED]
Cc: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Re: John Lewis cell: [REDACTED]
Date: Sunday, May 03, 2015 2:41:20 PM

Try to sched call for tmrw and have me cold call his office when I can

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Saturday, May 02, 2015 02:43 PM
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: John Lewis cell: [REDACTED]

The only other number we have used is the DC office number. I reached to get another, and will send as soon as i have it.

On Sat, May 2, 2015 at 2:36 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

The other # we had for the original call sheets worked. See if you can locate that

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Saturday, May 02, 2015 02:34 PM
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: John Lewis cell: [REDACTED]

Hm, that's strange. That's the number his scheduler gave me a couple of weeks ago.

I'll track a new one down and send over.

On Sat, May 2, 2015 at 2:29 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

This # is disconnected. Send me a better one pls

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Saturday, May 02, 2015 01:43 PM
To: B
Subject: John Lewis cell: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: Hayley Prim
To: B
Cc: Snyder, Thomas; [REDACTED] jfdc@akpdmedia.com; [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: May 1 Status Update: 38 Signers, 18 attendees
Date: Sunday, May 03, 2015 2:42:44 PM

I have been in touch with him. He is reviewing and said he would be back in touch. Let me ping him

On Sunday, May 3, 2015, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

What's up with John Stocks and Lily Ekelsen Garcia of NEA? If unclear, make me call them. Thanks

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Friday, May 01, 2015 04:40 PM
To: B; Snyder, Thomas
Cc: Aaron Pickrell <[REDACTED]> John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; John Davis <[REDACTED]>
Subject: May 1 Status Update: 38 Signers, 18 attendees

Names in bold are confirmed attendees. You are also confirmed to do a call with the Progressive Caucus on Monday, which should provide a large bump in numbers.

Economic Policy Institute	Senior Economist	Eileen	Appelbaum
Center for Economic and Policy Research	Co-Director	Dean	Baker
Communities for Change	Executive Director	Deepak	Bhargava
Campaign for America's Future	Co-Director	Robert	Borosage
	Actor	Steve	Buscemi
National Low Income Housing Coalition	President	Sheila	Crowley
Former Governor/Democracy for America	Founder	Howard	Dean
Connecticut	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Rosa	DeLauro
	Philanthropist/ Filmmaker	Abigail	Disney
Minnesota	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Keith	Ellison
Pennsylvania	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Chaka	Fattah
Economic Policy Institute	Founder	Jeff	Faux
Steelworkers	President	Leo	Gerard
Center for Media and Democracy	Executive Director	Lisa	Graves
Arizona	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Raul	Grijalva
United for a Fair Economy	Executive Director	Jeannette	Huezo
Texas	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Sheila	Jackson-Lee

Progressive Strategies	Director	Mike	Lux
Demos	Executive Director	Heather	McGhee
Economic Policy Institute	President	Lawrence	Mishel
	Actor	Cynthia	Nixon
Young Democrats of America	President	Atima	Omara
Fiscal Policy Institute	Deputy Director and Chief Economist	James	Parrott
University of California at Berkley	Chancellor's Professor	Robert	Reich
	Actor	Mark	Ruffalo
Columbia University	Economist/Director of Earth Institute	Jeff	Sachs
	Actress	Susan	Sarandon
AFSCME	President	Lee	Saunders
NAN	President	Al	Sharpton
Unite Here	President	D	Taylor
The Nation	Editor	Katrina	Vanden Heuvel
AFT	President	Randi	Weingarten
The Wessel Group	President	Michael	Wessel
Dayton	Mayor	Nan	Whaley
Inequality.org	Managing Editor	Marjorie	Wood
Childrens Defense Fund	President/Founder	Marian	Wright Edelman
Progress Now	Executive Director	Arshad	Hasan
CWA	President	Larry	Cohen

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: B; FLONYC
Cc: John Del cecato; Walzak, Phil; Carey, Michael; Wolfe, Emma
Subject: Morning Joe-- Confirmed for Wednesday
Date: Sunday, May 03, 2015 4:43:05 PM

Sir,

We are confirmed for Morning Joe on Wednesday within the 7:30am half/hour (10 minute segment). Focus will be on income inequality, progressive agenda. I've sent background materials, including the Huff Po op-ed, remarks from your recent trips, the Confab transcript and OneNYC remarks and release to show how we are addressing income inequality here in NYC.

They've not indicated any additional topics but I will stay close to them to make sure no updates.

Thanks,
Andrea

From: B
To: [REDACTED]
Cc: "ifdc@akpdmedia.com"; [REDACTED]; [REDACTED]; [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: Fwd: Calls Tomorrow
Date: Sunday, May 03, 2015 11:05:43 PM

Bill Moyers -- loves what we're doing -- can't attend but will consider sign-on. Also thinks he can help us build our movement after may 12

Lily Eskelsen Garcia -- loves what we're doing -- says yes to May 12

Mary kay henry -- loves what we're doing -- trying to get out of a West Coast commitment so she can join us May 12

Raul Grijalva - phone tag

Tom Harkin -- left message

John Lewis -- need call scheduled tmrw

Janet Murguia -- Will join us briefly on May 12. Pls confirm sign-on with favio espinal of her staff

Toni Morrison -- Will write an essay/op-ed for us for May 12. Can't be in DC. Not yet formally signing the TPA, but supporting it thru the written piece for the event

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Sunday, May 03, 2015 02:37 PM
To: B
Subject: Fwd: Calls Tomorrow

----- Forwarded message -----

From: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Date: Friday, May 1, 2015
Subject: Calls Tomorrow
To: Michael Carey <[REDACTED]>
Cc: Elana Leopold <[REDACTED]>

These are the calls we would like him to make if possible:

Congressman John Lewis (big name)

Numbers- office: [REDACTED]; cell: [REDACTED]

Raul Grijalva (to reassure him that while he knows members of CPC want this bigger and bolder, TPA is just the start – and they can and SHOULD use it to highlight their bigger and bolder stuff)

Numbers- [REDACTED], scheduler: [REDACTED] cell: [REDACTED]

Toni Morrison (to get her to write something in advance of the event – and to get her to sign on to TPA)

Home Number: [REDACTED]

Bill Moyers (big name, interesting name)

Cell: [REDACTED]

Tom Harkin (still hasn't confirmed on staff level. Wants federal govt to assume all student debt rather than refinancing)

Cell: [REDACTED]

Mary Kay Henry (because she's huge & we haven't gotten confirmation from her staff yet)

Numbers: cell: [REDACTED] office: [REDACTED]

Janet Murguia (La Raza is important, haven't gotten response at staff level)

Numbers: asst: [REDACTED]; cell: [REDACTED]

On Thu, Apr 30, 2015 at 4:41 PM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:
Great. Elana let me know if you want me to schedule a few calls, or just send you names and phone numbers

On Thu, Apr 30, 2015 at 4:28 PM, Michael Carey <[REDACTED]> wrote:

He has time from 9-1230, you should work with EL to see what calls he can do in the AM along with his Mayors Call.

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

From: Fuleihan, Dean \(OMB\)
To: B; Wolfe, Emma; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Debbie Rosen
Subject: RE: The Facebook Effect (On Real Estate Prices)
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 9:00:04 AM

+Debbie

From: B [mailto:BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 8:56 AM
To: Wolfe, Emma; Fuleihan, Dean (OMB); 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com'
Cc: Phillip Walzak; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Fw: The Facebook Effect (On Real Estate Prices)

Note at the bottom that the now-discredited and disastrous Cali property tax cap has been adopted by NY's own Andrew Cuomo. This point has not been made clearly enough in the public discourse. And Dean, pls add Deb Rosen to this thread -- I don't have her govt email

From: Singleton, Jessica
Sent: Sunday, May 03, 2015 04:55 PM
To: B
Cc: de Alwis, Ronalie
Subject: The Facebook Effect (On Real Estate Prices)

The Facebook Effect (On Real Estate Prices)

Kim-Mai Cutler
April 29, 2015

Four years ago, Facebook announced that they were decamping to Menlo Park from their longstanding home of Palo Alto. Just last month, the company finally cut the ribbons on a beautiful 430,000-square foot building designed by Frank Gehry that is basically one giant, open-air room with an enormous park on top.

The effect on the prices of surrounding real estate has been profound.

If you look at the chart below, published last week in the Almanac and Palo Alto Weekly, the price increases are mainly concentrated in Menlo Park and the neighboring city of East Palo Alto.

East Palo Alto is a historically black and now majority Latino community that took shape more than half a century ago through a legacy of racially discriminatory practices in Bay Area housing markets. Given that it is the most affordable community left in Silicon Valley, the city's economy also supplies low-wage labor to the neighboring affluent suburbs of Palo Alto, Menlo Park and Atherton. It has a resilient, but sometimes painful history.

An East Palo Alto musician named Freddy Lopez and a group of teenagers from the neighborhood recently made the music video and documentary above about what it's like to constantly live in fear of being priced out of the community you've always known. (Some of them are affiliated with Live in Peace, the non-profit that Facebook chief product officer Chris Cox backed with $1 million earlier this year.)

It's no surprise, but those who quite literally live on the margins of capital are the most vulnerable to its swings and busts. The price surges in East Palo Alto are more extreme because one-third of the city's homes went into foreclosure after the subprime crisis, only to be bid and bought back up again during the new tech boom.

There is no reason that the prodigious level of job creation over the last few years here has to negatively impact low-income communities throughout the Bay Area — except for the fact that the peninsula and South Bay suburbs are clinging to a mid-20th century suburban model of development that is no longer suitable for the kind of economy we have in Northern California.

The peninsula and South Bay suburbs are clinging to a mid-20th century suburban model of development that is no longer suitable for the kind of economy we have in Northern California.

The Wall Street Journal had a story on this yesterday: space is so tight that tech companies are paying north of $90 a square foot in Mountain View. Those are Manhattan skyscraper prices for 1980s-era suburban office parks. It is like running the entire industry on the physical equivalent of MS-DOS.

You can either scale the physical infrastructure of the region or you can move the jobs. I favor doing both, but it seems obvious that the world is on an inexorable path towards mass urbanization and that the type of creative and collaborative work done in the industry today favors density.

The younger generation in tech understands that in a knowledge-based economy, the value of what is created in Silicon Valley both economically and culturally is in the network. It depends upon who we can bring and include here — not in physical assets like a piece of land or a home.

But the peninsula cities have majority homeowner voting bases, and their elected political bodies are incentivized to protect these assets through slow-growth policies and exclusionary zoning.

This approach has paid off handsomely. Palo Alto home prices, for instance, have outperformed the S&P 500 by almost 2X over the past 16 years with significantly lower volatility.

And while San Francisco was the second worst metro area in the country for producing housing in the earlier part of this decade, some of the richer peninsula suburbs have done an even crappier job. Menlo Park permitted 22 percent of its state-mandated housing projections from 2007 to 2014, while Palo Alto did 37 percent and Atherton, one of the wealthiest towns in the entire country, did 1 percent. Menlo Park was even sued by three non-profits for not producing enough affordable housing back in 2012

Even more troubling, the scaffolding that all of these cities and the state of California have erected over the last 40 years to make 1960s suburban ranch homes a fantastic store of value also perversely makes them attractive to non-resident overseas capital. This has been more pronounced over the last three years after the Chinese property market plateaued and Xi Jinping embarked on an anti-corruption campaign, which are both driving capital offshore into foreign real estate markets and into a relatively obscure U.S. visa program called EB-5 that was maxed out for the first time in its 24-year history last fall. EB-5 might be OK if it's an alternate source of financing for big projects that may not otherwise get built like the thousands of proposed homes in San Francisco's Hunters Point.

But not if overseas capital ends up being parked in empty homes, pricing would-be community members out of homeownership. In San Francisco, it appears relatively limited; a study from the regional think tank SPUR using 2012 data found that only 2.4 percent of housing units were left vacant by non-resident owners for seasonal use.

However, the phenomenon may be larger in the suburbs where property isn't subject to the same stringent tenant laws. It's hard to quantify because the region is split between dozens of suburbs, but anecdotally, real estate agents have told the Chronicle that more than one-quarter of current buyers in Palo Alto are from China, fueling concerns about a spate of "ghost homes" inside the tony suburb. We need a new region-wide approach to monitoring this with data.

In aggregate, the costs of this rent-seeking and zoning abuse are enormous to both Silicon Valley and the U.S. economy. Because the infrastructure and housing stock is not expanding with population growth, people are either getting forced out or are going to areas that have fewer job opportunities and weaker social mobility. UC Berkeley economist Enrico Moretti and Chang-Tai Hsieh calculated in a paper last year that if the country's most economically productive regions like Silicon Valley, New York and Boston had a more elastic housing supply, the aggregate output of the U.S. economy since 1964 would be 13.5 percent larger. That is the equivalent of $2 trillion per year, or $10,000 per American.

Menlo Park thankfully has engaged in some changes, with 202 units being planned for downtown and by allowing a 394-unit complex near Facebook's headquarters.

But this is not imaginative enough. Facebook has grown its headcount by 48 percent in the last year to just north of 10,000 employees, with roughly half of them in Menlo Park.

A few hundred units is not going to cut it.

Given its market capitalization and position, Facebook is the company in the best position to re-imagine what new urbanism looks like in the old heart of Silicon Valley. In February, they acquired a 56-acre piece of property in Menlo Park for an estimated $400 million and have signaled that they are open to doing more with it than just office space.

So far, they've had to go and assure nearby residents in low-income neighborhood of Belle Haven that they are not going to be erecting nine-story buildings on it.

But they should build high and they should offer meaningful concessions — in the tens or hundreds of millions of dollars — for appropriate infrastructure or permanently affordable housing in a quid pro quo deal for dense, tall and walkable workforce housing in a mixed-use, mixed-income environment. If they're successful, they could demonstrate to the surrounding communities that post-suburbia isn't so scary after all. That would be the real Facebook effect.

While it isn't ideal to have a single for-profit corporation influence so much of a city's development policy like Google in Mountain View or Apple in Cupertino, the current system of governance has produced a short-sighted, fragmented (and frankly selfish) approach that has not kept pace with population growth. This is partly why the tech industry has expanded north into San Francisco, with ripple effects impacting the Latino community in the Mission and the black community in Oakland.

And if the suburban local governments in the south need to extract financial concessions out of these enormous publicly-traded companies to support this density, so be it. In an ideal world, in-fill development should pay for itself through more resident taxpayers. But unfortunately, California's municipal and public school financing systems are kind of messed up given the property tax caps that home-owning voters gave themselves under 1978's Proposition 13 and then the requirement of a majority vote for any new revenue-generating fees or taxes under 1996's Proposition 218.

These deals should also be logistically easier to work out down in the suburbs than in San Francisco, where it's likely impossible because the tech workforce comprises only roughly 7 percent of the population, is split between 1,800 or so companies and doesn't have a company with the market capitalization, profitability and dominance of a Google, Apple or Facebook yet.

Anyway, if you are a younger tech worker that favors market-based solutions and is generally dismissive of government for being incompetent or inefficient, remember that public institutions are only as good as the public that holds them accountable. The current system is tilted to favor older commercial and residential property interests, which are extremely organized and which can actually consistently turn people out to vote. Can you?

And remember that you are already paying an extraordinary tax to be here that doesn't really do anything for infrastructure, transit or education. It is among the highest in the nation.

It is called rent.

From: B
To: [REDACTED]
Cc: "ifdc@akpdmedia.com"; [REDACTED]; [REDACTED] Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Fwd: Calls Tomorrow
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 10:51:03 AM

Mayor Ras Baraka - Newark - LM

Mayor Jorge Elorza - Providence - can't attend may 12 but considering sign-on

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 10:28 AM
To: B
Cc: ifdc@akpdmedia.com <ifdc@akpdmedia.com>; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
[REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Fwd: Calls Tomorrow

George Gresham just confirmed signing and attending this morning.

On Mon, May 4, 2015 at 10:25 AM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

What's up with maria elena durazo? Is she signing on? Is she attending? And george gresham?

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Sunday, May 03, 2015 02:37 PM
To: B
Subject: Fwd: Calls Tomorrow

----- Forwarded message -----

From: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Date: Friday, May 1, 2015
Subject: Calls Tomorrow
To: Michael Carey <[REDACTED]>
Cc: Elana Leopold <[REDACTED]>

These are the calls we would like him to make if possible:

Congressman John Lewis (big name)

Numbers- office: [REDACTED] cell: [REDACTED].

Raul Grijalva (to reassure him that while he knows members of CPC want this bigger and bolder, TPA is just the start – and they can and SHOULD use it to highlight their bigger and bolder stuff)

Numbers- [REDACTED], scheduler: [REDACTED] cell: [REDACTED].

Toni Morrison (to get her to write something in advance of the event – and to get her to sign on to TPA)

Home Number: [REDACTED].

Bill Moyers (big name, interesting name)

Cell: [REDACTED]

Tom Harkin (still hasn't confirmed on staff level. Wants federal govt to assume all student debt rather than refinancing)

Cell: [REDACTED]

Mary Kay Henry (because she's huge & we haven't gotten confirmation from her staff yet)

Numbers: cell: [REDACTED]; office: [REDACTED]

Janet Murguia (La Raza is important, haven't gotten response at staff level)

Numbers: asst: [REDACTED] cell: [REDACTED].

On Thu, Apr 30, 2015 at 4:41 PM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:
Great. Elana let me know if you want me to schedule a few calls, or just send you names and phone numbers

On Thu, Apr 30, 2015 at 4:28 PM, Michael Carey <[REDACTED]> wrote:
He has time from 9-1230, you should work with EL to see what calls he can do in the AM along with his Mayors Call.

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: B
To: [REDACTED]
Cc: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; [REDACTED] Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Calls Tomorrow
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 11:03:42 AM

Tom S -- jump in on this pls -- help aaron get it done

From: Aaron Pickrell [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 10:29 AM
To: B; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Cc: 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Calls Tomorrow

On Maria Elena, I have two calls and two emails into her, but haven't gotten any word back. I was going to try her again this afternoon

From: B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, May 4, 2015 at 10:25 AM
To: "[REDACTED]" <[REDACTED]>
Cc: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com" <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, John Davis <[REDACTED]> AARON PICKRELL <[REDACTED]> "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: Fwd: Calls Tomorrow

What's up with maria elena durazo? Is she signing on? Is she attending? And george gresham?

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Sunday, May 03, 2015 02:37 PM
To: B
Subject: Fwd: Calls Tomorrow

----- Forwarded message -----

From: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Date: Friday, May 1, 2015
Subject: Calls Tomorrow
To: Michael Carey <[REDACTED]>
Cc: Elana Leopold <[REDACTED]>

These are the calls we would like him to make if possible:

Congressman John Lewis (big name)

Numbers- office: [REDACTED] cell: [REDACTED]

Raul Grijalva (to reassure him that while he knows members of CPC want this bigger and bolder, TPA is just the start – and they can and SHOULD use it to highlight their bigger and bolder stuff)

Numbers- [REDACTED], scheduler: [REDACTED], cell: [REDACTED]

Toni Morrison (to get her to write something in advance of the event – and to get her to sign on to TPA)

Home Number: [REDACTED]

Bill Moyers (big name, interesting name)

Cell: [REDACTED]

Tom Harkin (still hasn't confirmed on staff level. Wants federal govt to assume all student debt rather than refinancing)

Cell: [REDACTED]

Mary Kay Henry (because she's huge & we haven't gotten confirmation from her staff yet)

Numbers: cell: [REDACTED] office: [REDACTED]

Janet Murguia (La Raza is important, haven't gotten response at staff level)

Numbers: asst: [REDACTED] cell: [REDACTED]

On Thu, Apr 30, 2015 at 4:41 PM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:

Great. Elana let me know if you want me to schedule a few calls, or just send you names and phone numbers

On Thu, Apr 30, 2015 at 4:28 PM, Michael Carey <[REDACTED]> wrote:

He has time from 9-1230, you should work with EL to see what calls he can do in the AM along with his Mayors Call.

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

From: B
To: [REDACTED]
Cc: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; [REDACTED]; [REDACTED] Snyder, Thomas;
Subject: Re: Fwd: Calls Tomorrow
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 12:17:42 PM

Mayor cranley - cincinnati - LM and emailed TPA

Senator merkeley - LM

John lewis - just spoke with his COS michael collins and sent him the TPA. Definitely interested, but has to talk to the Congressman

Mayor schaefer - oakland - will be in DC and wants to join us pending review of agenda and her sched. I sent her TPA. Pls follow up with staff

Congresswoman Sanchez -- interested for sure. I emailed her info. Follow up with staff too pls

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 10:28 AM
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
[REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Fwd: Calls Tomorrow

George Gresham just confirmed signing and attending this morning.

On Mon, May 4, 2015 at 10:25 AM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

What's up with maria elena durazo? Is she signing on? Is she attending? And george gresham?

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Sunday, May 03, 2015 02:37 PM
To: B
Subject: Fwd: Calls Tomorrow

----- Forwarded message -----

From: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>

Date: Friday, May 1, 2015

Subject: Calls Tomorrow

To: Michael Carey <[REDACTED]>

Cc: Elana Leopold <[REDACTED]>

These are the calls we would like him to make if possible:

Congressman John Lewis (big name)

Numbers- office: [REDACTED] cell: [REDACTED].

Raul Grijalva (to reassure him that while he knows members of CPC want this bigger and bolder, TPA is just the start – and they can and SHOULD use it to highlight their bigger and bolder stuff)

Numbers- [REDACTED] scheduler: [REDACTED] cell: [REDACTED].

Toni Morrison (to get her to write something in advance of the event – and to get her to sign on to TPA)

Home Number: [REDACTED].

Bill Moyers (big name, interesting name)

Cell: [REDACTED]

Tom Harkin (still hasn't confirmed on staff level. Wants federal govt to assume all student debt rather than refinancing)

Cell: [REDACTED]

Mary Kay Henry (because she's huge & we haven't gotten confirmation from her staff yet)

Numbers: cell: [REDACTED]; office: [REDACTED].

Janet Murguia (La Raza is important, haven't gotten response at staff level)

Numbers: asst: [REDACTED]; cell: [REDACTED].

On Thu, Apr 30, 2015 at 4:41 PM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:
Great. Elana let me know if you want me to schedule a few calls, or just send you names and phone numbers

On Thu, Apr 30, 2015 at 4:28 PM, Michael Carey <[REDACTED]> wrote:
He has time from 9-1230, you should work with EL to see what calls he can do in the AM along with his Mayors Call.

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: B
To: Snyder, Thomas; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: TPA
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 2:14:47 PM

Excellent! Thanks

From: Snyder, Thomas
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 02:13 PM
To: B; John Del Ceccato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com) <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Hayley Prim
<[REDACTED]>
Subject: TPA

Mariaelena Durazo will sign later today and will attend the May 12 event.

From: Hayley Prim
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com; [REDACTED] Snyder,
Thomas
Subject: Re: Latest Version TPA Email
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 2:15:15 PM

Will send you new version in clean email

On Mon, May 4, 2015 at 2:13 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Says "Progress" NOT "Progressive" -- DO NOT USE. Edit asap and send me new email with corrected version. Pls proofread in the future

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 11:45 AM
To: B
Subject: Latest Version TPA Email

Please join Bill de Blasio, Mayor of New York City, and declare your support for The Progress Agenda to Combat Income Inequality on May 12, 2015 at 3:00pm at the U.S. Capitol Building's House Triangle.

More and more progressive leaders are signing on every day. So far supporters include:

- Eileen Appelbaum, Senior Economist, Center for Economic and Policy Research
- Dean Baker, Co-Director, Center for Economic and Policy Research
- Deepak Bhargava, Executive Director, Center for Community Change
- Robert Borosage, Co-Director Campaign for America's Future
- Steve Buscemi, Actor
- Larry Cohen, President, Communication Workers of America
- Sheila Crowley, President and CEO, National Low Income Housing Coalition
- Bill de Blasio, Mayor of New York City
- Howard Dean, Former Governor of Vermont & Founder, Democracy for America
- Rosa DeLauro, U.S. Representative from Connecticut
- Abigail E. Disney, Filmmaker
- Keith Ellison, U.S. Representative from Minnesota
- Chaka Fattah, U.S. Representative from Pennsylvania

- Jeff Faux, Founder, Economic Policy Institute
- Lily Eskelsen García, President, National Education Association
- Leo Gerard, President, United Steelworkers
- Lisa Graves, Executive Director, Center for Media and Democracy/PRWatch/ALECexposed.org
- George Gresham, President, 1199SEIU
- Raúl Grijalva, U.S. Representative from Arizona, Co-Chair Congressional Progressive Caucus
- Arshad Hasan, Executive Director, ProgressNow
- Jeannette Huevo, Executive Director, United for a Fair Economy
- Sheila Jackson Lee, U.S. Representative from Texas
- Mike Lux, Co-Founder and President, Progressive Strategies
- Chirlane McCray, First Lady of New York City
- Heather McGhee, Executive Director, DEMOS
- Lawrence Mishel, President, Economic Policy Institute
- Cynthia Nixon, Actor
- Atima Omara, President, Young Democrats of America
- James Parrott, Deputy Director and Chief Economist, Fiscal Policy Institute
- Robert Reich, Chancellor's Professor of Public Policy at University of California at Berkeley & Former U.S. Secretary of Labor
- Mark Ruffalo, Actor, Director, Producer & Activist
- Jeff Sachs, Economist & Director of the Earth Institute at Columbia University
- Bill Samuels, Chairman, EffectiveNY
- Susan Sarandon, Actress, Activist
- Lee Saunders, President, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees
- Reverend Al Sharpton, Founder and President of National Action Network
- D. Taylor, President, UNITE HERE!
- Richard L. Trumka, President, AFL-CIO
- Katrina vanden Heuvel, Editor, The Nation
- Randi Weingarten, President, American Federation of Teachers
- Michael Wessel, President, The Wessel Group
- Nan Whaley, Mayor of Dayton, Ohio

- Marjorie E. Wood, PhD, Senior Associate, Global Economy Project & Managing Editor, Inequality.org
- Marian Wright Edelman, Founder and President, Children's Defense Fund

The group of supporters will include federal and local elected officials, labor officials, cultural leaders, and progressive activists.

The Progressive Agenda – a progressive alternative, of sorts, to the 1994 Republican Contract with America – will include specific proposals to lift the floor for working people, support working parents, and promote tax fairness – policies that reward work rather than just wealth.

The event stems from a summit that Mayor de Blasio convened in New York City in early April, where a group of national progressive leaders gathered to discuss ways the country could combat the crisis of our time -- income inequality.

The Progressive Agenda builds upon the work of dozens of economists, lawmakers, think tanks, and progressive activists. It is not meant to be seen as a comprehensive set of proposals to combat income inequality, but rather a bold collection of core policy proposals around which progressives can organize and mobilize.

If you cannot attend in person, we'd still urge you to sign on to the document.

To sign on, please email me back as soon as possible, preferably no later than Monday, May 4.

Thanks for your consideration, and feel free to contact me with any questions or concerns.

The Progressive Agenda To Combat Income Inequality

1. Lift the Floor for Working People

- Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.
- Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.
- Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
- Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs,

workers' rights, and the environment.

2. Support Working Families

- Pass national paid sick leave.
- Pass national paid family leave.
- Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
- Expand the Earned Income Tax Credit.
- Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

3. Tax Fairness

- Close the carried interest loophole.
- End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
- Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to take advantage of "performance pay" write-offs.

###

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

From: B
To: [REDACTED]
Cc: "ifdc@akpdmedia.com"; [REDACTED] [REDACTED] Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Fw: John Lewis
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 2:19:57 PM

At least in terms of contact info, SCORE!! And yes, I went and found this on my own. Watch and learn, my friends... :)

-----Original Message-----

From: Elana Leopold
To: Bill de Blasio
Subject: Re: John Lewis
Sent: May 4, 2015 2:11 PM

Cell ([REDACTED]) Home ([REDACTED]) Work ([REDACTED]) Car ([REDACTED])

Sent from my iPhone
On May 4, 2015, at 2:10 PM, Bill de Blasio <[REDACTED]> wrote:

Pls get this info for me
Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T From: Janice Enright <jenright@ickesenright.com> Date: Mon, 4 May 2015 15:22:32 +0000 To: Bill de Blasio <[REDACTED]> Subject: Fwd: John Lewis
In case you ever need it

Sent from my iPhone
Begin forwarded message:

From: Minyon Moore <Minyon.Moore@deweysquare.com>
Date: May 4, 2015 at 8:15:46 AM PDT
To: Janice Enright <jenright@ickesenright.com>
Subject: FW: John

Total Control Panel Login

Remove this send list You received this message because the sender is on your allow list. <John Lewis.vcf>

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: B; John Del Ceccato \(jfdc@akpdmedia.com\); Hayley Prim
Subject: TPA
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 2:29:05 PM

UNITE HERE President D Taylor cannot attend on the 12th. He has to be at a Las Vegas membership meeting about the upcoming contract. It covers 60,000 people so he really can't avoid since he is running the meeting. He sends regrets. And feels guilty!

From: John Del Cecato
To: Snyder, Thomas; B; Hayley Prim
Subject: Re: TPA
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 2:33:27 PM

Awesome!

From: <Snyder>, Thomas <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, May 4, 2015 at 2:13 PM
To: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Hayley Prim
<>
Subject: TPA

Mariaelena Durazo will sign later today and will attend the May 12 event.

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: "Hayley Prim"; B
Cc: [REDACTED] jfdc@akpdmedia.com; [REDACTED]
Subject: RE: The Progressive Agenda
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 2:34:58 PM

She quit and has been replaced by Rudy Lopez. I am sure Kim can put you in touch with Rudy.

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 2:34 PM
To: B
Cc: [REDACTED] jfdc@akpdmedia.com; [REDACTED]
Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: The Progressive Agenda

I am talking to Kim Bobo, the Founding Director of Interfaith Worker Justice who aligns with what we are talking about re: wages, paid sick leave, and organizing.

Will keep you updated

On Mon, May 4, 2015 at 2:25 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Bring 'em into the fold, Jeani!

From: jeani murray [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 02:24 PM
To: B
Cc: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>, jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>, [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: The Progressive Agenda

I'm speaking to the Leadership Conference for Civil and Human Rights at 4 p.m. Have been playing email & phone tag for the last several days.
(Wade Henderson's group - coalition of several civil rights, human rights orgs) ~ they sound interested, just need more details.

<http://www.civilrights.org>

On Mon, May 4, 2015 at 2:18 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

We need more faith/civil rights leaders. Who can work on this? Thanks

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 02:17 PM
To: B
Subject: The Progressive Agenda

Please join Bill de Blasio, Mayor of New York City, and declare your support for The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality on May 12, 2015 at 3:00pm at the U.S. Capitol Building's House Triangle.

More and more progressive leaders are signing on every day. So far supporters include:

- Eileen Appelbaum, Senior Economist, Center for Economic and Policy Research
- Dean Baker, Co-Director, Center for Economic and Policy Research
- Deepak Bhargava, Executive Director, Center for Community Change
- Robert Borosage, Co-Director Campaign for America's Future
- Steve Buscemi, Actor
- Larry Cohen, President, Communication Workers of America
- Sheila Crowley, President and CEO, National Low Income Housing Coalition
- Bill de Blasio, Mayor of New York City
- Howard Dean, Former Governor of Vermont & Founder, Democracy for America
- Rosa DeLauro, U.S. Representative from Connecticut
- Abigail E. Disney, Filmmaker
- Keith Ellison, U.S. Representative from Minnesota
- Chaka Fattah, U.S. Representative from Pennsylvania
- Jeff Faux, Founder, Economic Policy Institute
- Lily Eskelsen García, President, National Education Association
- Leo Gerard, President, United Steelworkers
- Lisa Graves, Executive Director, Center for Media and Democracy/PRWatch/ALECexposed.org
- George Gresham, President, 1199SEIU
- Raúl Grijalva, U.S. Representative from Arizona, Co-Chair Congressional Progressive Caucus
- Arshad Hasan, Executive Director, ProgressNow
- Jeannette Huevo, Executive Director, United for a Fair Economy

- Sheila Jackson Lee, U.S. Representative from Texas
- Mike Lux, Co-Founder and President, Progressive Strategies
- Chirlane McCray, First Lady of New York City
- Heather McGhee, Executive Director, DEMOS
- Lawrence Mishel, President, Economic Policy Institute
- Cynthia Nixon, Actor
- Atima Omara, President, Young Democrats of America
- James Parrott, Deputy Director and Chief Economist, Fiscal Policy Institute
- Robert Reich, Chancellor's Professor of Public Policy at University of California at Berkeley & Former U.S. Secretary of Labor
- Mark Ruffalo, Actor, Director, Producer & Activist
- Jeff Sachs, Economist & Director of the Earth Institute at Columbia University
- Bill Samuels, Chairman, EffectiveNY
- Susan Sarandon, Actress, Activist
- Lee Saunders, President, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees
- Reverend Al Sharpton, Founder and President of National Action Network
- D. Taylor, President, UNITE HERE!
- Richard L. Trumka, President, AFL-CIO
- Katrina vanden Heuvel, Editor, The Nation
- Randi Weingarten, President, American Federation of Teachers
- Michael Wessel, President, The Wessel Group
- Nan Whaley, Mayor of Dayton, Ohio
- Marjorie E. Wood, PhD, Senior Associate, Global Economy Project & Managing Editor, Inequality.org
- Marian Wright Edelman, Founder and President, Children's Defense Fund

The group of supporters will include federal and local elected officials, labor officials, cultural leaders, and progressive activists.

The Progressive Agenda – a progressive alternative, of sorts, to the 1994 Republican Contract with America – will include specific proposals to lift the floor for working people, support working parents, and promote tax fairness – policies that reward work rather than just wealth.

The event stems from a summit that Mayor de Blasio convened in New York City in early April, where a group of national progressive leaders gathered to discuss ways the country could combat the crisis of our time -- income inequality.

The Progressive Agenda builds upon the work of dozens of economists, lawmakers, think tanks, and progressive activists. It is not meant to be seen as a comprehensive set of proposals to combat income inequality, but rather a bold collection of core policy proposals around which progressives can organize and mobilize.

If you cannot attend in person, we'd still urge you to sign on to the document.

To sign on, please email me back as soon as possible, preferably no later than Monday, May 4.

Thanks for your consideration, and feel free to contact me with any questions or concerns.

The Progressive Agenda To Combat Income Inequality

1. Lift the Floor for Working People

- Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.
- Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.
- Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
- Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

2. Support Working Families

- Pass national paid sick leave.

- Pass national paid family leave.
- Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
- Expand the Earned Income Tax Credit.
- Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

3. Tax Fairness

- Close the carried interest loophole.
- End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
- Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to take advantage of "performance pay" write-offs.

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: jeani murray
To: B
Cc: [REDACTED] jfdc@akpdmedia.com; [REDACTED] Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: The Progressive Agenda
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 2:39:34 PM

Invites have been sent - rec'd "thanks" -- am hitting them again today & enlisting some additional help there. (NAACP went to Hilary Shelton)

These might be folks to add to a call list.

On Mon, May 4, 2015 at 2:35 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Excellent! Thanks. But I also mean we should invite leaders of the NAACP, Urban League, Latino civil rights groups, etc

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 02:34 PM
To: B
Cc: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> jfdc@akpdmedia.com
<jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
[REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: The Progressive Agenda

I am talking to Kim Bobo, the Founding Director of Interfaith Worker Justice who aligns with what we are talking about re: wages, paid sick leave, and organizing.

Will keep you updated

On Mon, May 4, 2015 at 2:25 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Bring 'em into the fold, Jeani!

From: jeani murray [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 02:24 PM
To: B
Cc: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> jfdc@akpdmedia.com
<jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
[REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: The Progressive Agenda

I'm speaking to the Leadership Conference for Civil and Human Rights at 4 p.m. Have been playing email & phone tag for the last several days. (Wade Henderson's group - coalition of several civil rights, human rights orgs) ~ they sound interested, just need more details.

<http://www.civilrights.org>

On Mon, May 4, 2015 at 2:18 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

We need more faith/civil rights leaders. Who can work on this? Thanks

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:████████████████████]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 02:17 PM
To: B
Subject: The Progressive Agenda

Please join Bill de Blasio, Mayor of New York City, and declare your support for The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality on May 12, 2015 at 3:00pm at the U.S. Capitol Building's House Triangle.

More and more progressive leaders are signing on every day. So far supporters include:

- Eileen Appelbaum, Senior Economist, Center for Economic and Policy Research
- Dean Baker, Co-Director, Center for Economic and Policy Research
- Deepak Bhargava, Executive Director, Center for Community Change
- Robert Borosage, Co-Director Campaign for America's Future
- Steve Buscemi, Actor
- Larry Cohen, President, Communication Workers of America
- Sheila Crowley, President and CEO, National Low Income Housing Coalition
- Bill de Blasio, Mayor of New York City
- Howard Dean, Former Governor of Vermont & Founder, Democracy for America
- Rosa DeLauro, U.S. Representative from Connecticut
- Abigail E. Disney, Filmmaker
- Keith Ellison, U.S. Representative from Minnesota
- Chaka Fattah, U.S. Representative from Pennsylvania
- Jeff Faux, Founder, Economic Policy Institute
- Lily Eskelsen García, President, National Education Association
- Leo Gerard, President, United Steelworkers
- Lisa Graves, Executive Director, Center for Media and Democracy/PRWatch/ALECexposed.org
- George Gresham, President, 1199SEIU
- Raúl Grijalva, U.S. Representative from Arizona, Co-Chair Congressional Progressive Caucus

- Arshad Hasan, Executive Director, ProgressNow
- Jeannette Huezco, Executive Director, United for a Fair Economy
- Sheila Jackson Lee, U.S. Representative from Texas
- Mike Lux, Co-Founder and President, Progressive Strategies
- Chirlane McCray, First Lady of New York City
- Heather McGhee, Executive Director, DEMOS
- Lawrence Mishel, President, Economic Policy Institute
- Cynthia Nixon, Actor
- Atima Omara, President, Young Democrats of America
- James Parrott, Deputy Director and Chief Economist, Fiscal Policy Institute
- Robert Reich, Chancellor's Professor of Public Policy at University of California at Berkeley & Former U.S. Secretary of Labor
- Mark Ruffalo, Actor, Director, Producer & Activist
- Jeff Sachs, Economist & Director of the Earth Institute at Columbia University
- Bill Samuels, Chairman, EffectiveNY
- Susan Sarandon, Actress, Activist
- Lee Saunders, President, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees
- Reverend Al Sharpton, Founder and President of National Action Network
- D. Taylor, President, UNITE HERE!
- Richard L. Trumka, President, AFL-CIO
- Katrina vanden Heuvel, Editor, The Nation
- Randi Weingarten, President, American Federation of Teachers
- Michael Wessel, President, The Wessel Group
- Nan Whaley, Mayor of Dayton, Ohio
- Marjorie E. Wood, PhD, Senior Associate, Global Economy Project & Managing Editor, Inequality.org
- Marian Wright Edelman, Founder and President, Children's Defense Fund

The group of supporters will include federal and local elected officials, labor officials, cultural leaders, and progressive activists.

The Progressive Agenda – a progressive alternative, of sorts, to the 1994 Republican Contract with America – will include specific proposals to lift the floor for working people, support working parents, and promote tax fairness – policies that reward work rather than just wealth.

The event stems from a summit that Mayor de Blasio convened in New York City in early April, where a group of national progressive leaders gathered to discuss ways the country could combat the crisis of our time -- income inequality.

The Progressive Agenda builds upon the work of dozens of economists, lawmakers, think tanks, and progressive activists. It is not meant to be seen as a comprehensive set of proposals to combat income inequality, but rather a bold collection of core policy proposals around which progressives can organize and mobilize.

If you cannot attend in person, we'd still urge you to sign on to the document.

To sign on, please email me back as soon as possible, preferably no later than Monday, May 4.

Thanks for your consideration, and feel free to contact me with any questions or concerns.

The Progressive Agenda To Combat Income Inequality

1. Lift the Floor for Working People

- Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.
- Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.
- Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
- Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

2. Support Working Families

- Pass national paid sick leave.
- Pass national paid family leave.
- Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.

- Expand the Earned Income Tax Credit.
- Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

3. Tax Fairness

- Close the carried interest loophole.
- End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
- Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to take advantage of "performance pay" write-offs.

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

From: B
To: [REDACTED]
Cc: [REDACTED] "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; [REDACTED]; [REDACTED]
Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: The Progressive Agenda
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 2:39:58 PM

I can call marc morial at urban league and the new naacp head, as well as latino organization leaders. Keep doing all you can at the staff level, but add to my call list as needed

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 02:39 PM
To: B
Cc: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> jfdc@akpdmedia.com
<jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> [REDACTED]
<[REDACTED]> Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: The Progressive Agenda

Ok will do.

And I think Kim and Rudy would both be good people to add to this. Even if Kim isn't the acting director, she is highly regarded as a faith leader and activist. will circle back.

On Mon, May 4, 2015 at 2:35 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Excellent! Thanks. But I also mean we should invite leaders of the NAACP, Urban League, Latino civil rights groups, etc

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 02:34 PM
To: B
Cc: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> jfdc@akpdmedia.com
<jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> [REDACTED]
[REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: The Progressive Agenda

I am talking to Kim Bobo, the Founding Director of Interfaith Worker Justice who aligns with what we are talking about re: wages, paid sick leave, and organizing.

Will keep you updated

On Mon, May 4, 2015 at 2:25 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Bring 'em into the fold, Jeani!

From: jeani murray [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 02:24 PM
To: B

Cc: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> ifdc@akpdmedia.com
<ifdc@akpdmedia.com>; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
[REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> Snyder, Thomas

Subject: Re: The Progressive Agenda

I'm speaking to the Leadership Conference for Civil and Human Rights at 4 p.m. Have been playing email & phone tag for the last several days. (Wade Henderson's group - coalition of several civil rights, human rights orgs) ~ they sound interested, just need more details.

<http://www.civilrights.org>

On Mon, May 4, 2015 at 2:18 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

We need more faith/civil rights leaders. Who can work on this? Thanks

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 02:17 PM
To: B
Subject: The Progressive Agenda

Please join Bill de Blasio, Mayor of New York City, and declare your support for The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality on May 12, 2015 at 3:00pm at the U.S. Capitol Building's House Triangle.

More and more progressive leaders are signing on every day. So far supporters include:

- Eileen Appelbaum, Senior Economist, Center for Economic and Policy Research
- Dean Baker, Co-Director, Center for Economic and Policy Research
- Deepak Bhargava, Executive Director, Center for Community Change
- Robert Borosage, Co-Director Campaign for America's Future
- Steve Buscemi, Actor
- Larry Cohen, President, Communication Workers of America
- Sheila Crowley, President and CEO, National Low Income Housing Coalition
- Bill de Blasio, Mayor of New York City
- Howard Dean, Former Governor of Vermont & Founder, Democracy for America
- Rosa DeLauro, U.S. Representative from Connecticut
- Abigail E. Disney, Filmmaker
- Keith Ellison, U.S. Representative from Minnesota
- Chaka Fattah, U.S. Representative from Pennsylvania

- Jeff Faux, Founder, Economic Policy Institute
- Lily Eskelsen García, President, National Education Association
- Leo Gerard, President, United Steelworkers
- Lisa Graves, Executive Director, Center for Media and Democracy/PRWatch/ALECexposed.org
- George Gresham, President, 1199SEIU
- Raúl Grijalva, U.S. Representative from Arizona, Co-Chair Congressional Progressive Caucus
- Arshad Hasan, Executive Director, ProgressNow
- Jeannette Huevo, Executive Director, United for a Fair Economy
- Sheila Jackson Lee, U.S. Representative from Texas
- Mike Lux, Co-Founder and President, Progressive Strategies
- Chirlane McCray, First Lady of New York City
- Heather McGhee, Executive Director, DEMOS
- Lawrence Mishel, President, Economic Policy Institute
- Cynthia Nixon, Actor
- Atima Omara, President, Young Democrats of America
- James Parrott, Deputy Director and Chief Economist, Fiscal Policy Institute
- Robert Reich, Chancellor's Professor of Public Policy at University of California at Berkeley & Former U.S. Secretary of Labor
- Mark Ruffalo, Actor, Director, Producer & Activist
- Jeff Sachs, Economist & Director of the Earth Institute at Columbia University
- Bill Samuels, Chairman, EffectiveNY
- Susan Sarandon, Actress, Activist
- Lee Saunders, President, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees
- Reverend Al Sharpton, Founder and President of National Action Network
- D. Taylor, President, UNITE HERE!
- Richard L. Trumka, President, AFL-CIO
- Katrina vanden Heuvel, Editor, The Nation
- Randi Weingarten, President, American Federation of Teachers
- Michael Wessel, President, The Wessel Group
- Nan Whaley, Mayor of Dayton, Ohio

- Marjorie E. Wood, PhD, Senior Associate, Global Economy Project & Managing Editor, Inequality.org
- Marian Wright Edelman, Founder and President, Children's Defense Fund

The group of supporters will include federal and local elected officials, labor officials, cultural leaders, and progressive activists.

The Progressive Agenda – a progressive alternative, of sorts, to the 1994 Republican Contract with America – will include specific proposals to lift the floor for working people, support working parents, and promote tax fairness – policies that reward work rather than just wealth.

The event stems from a summit that Mayor de Blasio convened in New York City in early April, where a group of national progressive leaders gathered to discuss ways the country could combat the crisis of our time -- income inequality.

The Progressive Agenda builds upon the work of dozens of economists, lawmakers, think tanks, and progressive activists. It is not meant to be seen as a comprehensive set of proposals to combat income inequality, but rather a bold collection of core policy proposals around which progressives can organize and mobilize.

If you cannot attend in person, we'd still urge you to sign on to the document.

To sign on, please email me back as soon as possible, preferably no later than Monday, May 4.

Thanks for your consideration, and feel free to contact me with any questions or concerns.

The Progressive Agenda To Combat Income Inequality

1. Lift the Floor for Working People

- Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.
- Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.
- Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
- Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

2. Support Working Families

- Pass national paid sick leave.
- Pass national paid family leave.
- Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
- Expand the Earned Income Tax Credit.
- Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

3. Tax Fairness

- Close the carried interest loophole.
- End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
- Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to take advantage of "performance pay" write-offs.

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: B; Walzak, Phil; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: RE: MoJo
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 2:54:43 PM

John is sending me the materials to share with them -- will make sure they have everything we are ready to make public

-----Original Message-----

From: B
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 2:41 PM
To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com'
Subject: MoJo

I assume we are sharing the TPA (the actual content) and the signatories as of weds AM with them, correct?

From: John Del Cecato
To: B; Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma; Williams, Dominic
Cc: FLONYC; [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: Latest op-ed with Warren
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 3:24:39 PM

And the typo only occurred when transferring to copy/paste from Word document

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, May 4, 2015 at 2:57 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Dominic Williams <DWilliams@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: FLONYC <FLONYC@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: Latest op-ed with Warren

Finally got to read this carefully. This is much better than the previous draft -- clearer for sure. But 2 points:

- note typo "todevelop" under research section

- note the positive construct around "fair trade" rather than the negative in the TPA re: "oppose trade deals..." Although the energy of the word "oppose" has merit as an organizing tool, it really is discordant with an otherwise affirmative agenda of what we should do -- not what we should avoid. Might want to update that language going forward -- probably better post-May 12, although I'm open to argument. Example: I think Toni M would have immediately signed on the "fair trade" formulation. Are other potential signatories raising this concern?

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Saturday, May 02, 2015 01:17 PM
To: B; Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma; Williams, Dominic
Subject: Latest op-ed with Warren

In this land of big dreams, there was never a dream bigger or more important than the one so deeply rooted in our values that it became known as the American Dream. Across generations and geography, Americans shared the belief that hard work would bring opportunity and a better life for everyone. America wasn't perfect, but we invested in our kids and put in place policies to build a strong middle class.

We don't do that anymore, and the result is clear: the rich get richer, while everyone else falls behind. The game is rigged, and the people who rigged it want it to stay that way. They claim that if we act to improve the economic well-being of hard-working Americans – whether by increasing the minimum wage, reining in law breakers on Wall Street, or practically anything else – we threaten economic growth.

They are wrong.

That thinking is backwards, and a new report from economist Joseph E. Stiglitz and the Roosevelt Institute is expected to provide more evidence of that next week. In fact, as a growing body of research shows, an increasing disparity between rich and poor, cronyism, and an economy that works only for those at the very top are bad for the middle class and bad for our economy.

When the economy works for everyone, consumers have money to spend at businesses, and when businesses have more customers they build more factories, hire more workers, and sell more products – and the economy grows. But when customers don't have money, they can't buy, and that means businesses can't grow.

For decades, our economy was built around this core understanding. We embraced the idea that we were all in this together. We made big investments in the things that would create opportunities for everyone: public schools and universities; roads and bridges and power grids; research that spurred new industries, new technologies—and new jobs—here in America. We supported strong unions that pushed for better wages and working conditions, seeing those unions improve lives both for their own members and for workers everywhere, union or not.

And it worked. From the 1930s to the late 1970s, as GDP went up, wages increased more or less across the board. In fact, 90 percent of all workers got about 70 percent of all new income growth. Sure, the richest 10 percent gobbled up more than their share, but overall, as the economic pie got bigger, pretty much everyone was getting a little more

—that was how America built a great middle class.

And then in the early 1980s, a new theory swept the country. Its disciples claimed that if government policies took care of the rich and powerful, wealth would trickle down for everyone else. In short order, trickle-down believers cut taxes sharply for those at the top and pushed for “deregulation” that hobbled the cops on Wall Street and let the most powerful corporations far too often do as they pleased.

Trickle-down economics failed disastrously. The rich and powerful have become richer and more powerful, while everyone else has been left behind. In the last 35 years, the top 10 percent got ALL the growth in income—ALL of it. The rest of America – 90 percent of Americans – got nothing. Zip. Zero.

Government policies matter and can make a difference. Strengthening the American dream is about the basics:

Make work pay by increasing the minimum wage, empowering unions to bargain collectively, ending abusive scheduling practices for hourly workers, getting people the overtime pay they deserve, ensuring equal pay for equal work, and making sure employers follow the law and respect the rights of workers.

End the squeeze on working parents by passing paid family leave and investing in childcare, after-school programs, and extended learning days. Let families with children have a chance to balance careers with quality time together.

Ensure everyone can get a great education without drowning in debt. Rein in the cost of college and allow families to refinance student loans at lower rates. Give every child in America access to full-day pre-kindergarten. Education is still the best ticket to the middle class.

Focus on research and innovation needed to develop the technologies of the future. Investments in medical and scientific research let us build whole new industries and give us the chance to create good jobs right here in America.

Invest in infrastructure – in roads, bridges, rail, water, power and broadband. Businesses—and the jobs they create—can't grow if the foundation crumbles beneath them. A 21st Century economy needs 21st Century infrastructure.

Strengthen and expand Social Security, not just for today's seniors, but for today's young people. Work is changing. A strong Social Security system will ensure that every worker, no matter the number of jobs they piece together during their careers, can count on a secure retirement.

Strengthen the rules of the marketplace. We don't build a future by turning the biggest banks loose to do whatever they want, and markets don't create value when corporations can deliberately cheat people or roll over their upstart competition.

Promote fair trade – Embrace only the trade policies that strengthen our economy, create good jobs with good wages, and establish fair rules of the road for companies around the world. Our trade agreements shouldn't help multinational companies gut environmental, health, and safety standards here and abroad under the guise of promoting commerce.

Reform the tax code: End the billions in tax breaks for corporations shipping jobs overseas and the big oil companies, and level the playing field so that millionaires and billionaires pay their fair share.

The demand for change is unmistakable. Just last month, 60,000 workers in 200 cities took to the streets to fight for a higher minimum wage.

Rebuilding our middle class won't be easy, but real change rarely is. It's time to be bold.

The American dream depends on it.

###

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma; Williams, Dominic
Cc: FLONYC; [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: Latest op-ed with Warren
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 3:25:05 PM

Unless it causes trouble in the coming days, I agree with your conclusion

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 03:24 PM
To: B; Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma; Williams, Dominic
Cc: FLONYC; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: Latest op-ed with Warren

Nobody else has raised, that I know of... Happy to rewrite/tweak AFTER May 12th

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, May 4, 2015 at 2:57 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Dominic Williams <DWilliams@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: FLONYC <FLONYC@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: Latest op-ed with Warren

Finally got to read this carefully. This is much better than the previous draft -- clearer for sure. But 2 points:

- note typo "todevelop" under research section

- note the positive construct around "fair trade" rather than the negative in the TPA re: "oppose trade deals..." Although the energy of the word "oppose" has merit as an organizing tool, it really is discordant with an otherwise affirmative agenda of what we should do -- not what we should avoid. Might want to update that language going forward -- probably better post-May 12, although I'm open to argument. Example: I think Toni M would have immediately signed on the "fair trade" formulation. Are other potential signatories raising this concern?

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Saturday, May 02, 2015 01:17 PM
To: B; Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma; Williams, Dominic
Subject: Latest op-ed with Warren

In this land of big dreams, there was never a dream bigger or more important than the one so deeply rooted in our values that it became known as the American Dream. Across generations and geography, Americans shared the belief that hard work would bring opportunity and a better life for everyone. America wasn't perfect, but we invested in our kids and put in place policies to build a strong middle class.

We don't do that anymore, and the result is clear: the rich get richer, while everyone else falls behind. The game is rigged, and the people who rigged it want it to stay that way. They claim that if we act to improve the economic well-being of hard-working Americans – whether by increasing the minimum wage, reining in law breakers on Wall Street, or practically anything else – we threaten economic growth.

They are wrong.

That thinking is backwards, and a new report from economist Joseph E. Stiglitz and the Roosevelt Institute is expected to provide more evidence of that next week. In fact, as a growing body of research shows, an increasing disparity between rich and poor, cronyism, and an economy that works only for those at the very top are bad for the middle class and bad for our economy.

When the economy works for everyone, consumers have money to spend at businesses, and when businesses have more customers they build more factories, hire more workers, and sell more products – and the economy grows. But when customers don't have money, they can't buy, and that means businesses can't grow.

For decades, our economy was built around this core understanding. We embraced the idea that we were all in this together. We made big investments in the things that would create opportunities for everyone: public schools and universities; roads and bridges and power grids; research that spurred new industries, new technologies—and new jobs—here in America. We supported strong unions that pushed for better wages and working conditions, seeing those unions improve lives both for their own members and for workers everywhere, union or not.

And it worked. From the 1930s to the late 1970s, as GDP went up, wages increased more or less across the board. In fact, 90 percent of all workers got about 70 percent of all new income growth. Sure, the richest 10 percent gobbled up more than their share, but overall, as the economic pie got bigger, pretty much everyone was getting a little more—that was how America built a great middle class.

And then in the early 1980s, a new theory swept the country. Its disciples claimed that if government policies took care of the rich and powerful, wealth would trickle down for everyone else. In short order, trickle-down believers cut taxes sharply for those at the top and pushed for “deregulation” that hobbled the cops on Wall Street and let the most powerful corporations far too often do as they pleased.

Trickle-down economics failed disastrously. The rich and powerful have become richer and more powerful, while everyone else has been left behind. In the last 35 years, the top 10 percent got ALL the growth in income—ALL of it. The rest of America – 90 percent of Americans – got nothing. Zip. Zero.

Government policies matter and can make a difference.
Strengthening the American dream is about the basics:

Make work pay by increasing the minimum wage, empowering unions to bargain collectively, ending abusive scheduling practices for hourly workers, getting people the overtime pay they deserve, ensuring equal pay for equal work, and making sure employers follow the law and respect the rights of workers.

End the squeeze on working parents by passing paid family leave and investing in childcare, after-school programs, and extended learning days. Let families with children have a chance to balance careers with quality time together.

Ensure everyone can get a great education without drowning in debt. Rein in the cost of college and allow families to refinance student loans at lower rates. Give every child in America access to full-day pre-kindergarten. Education is still the best ticket to the middle class.

Focus on research and innovation needed to develop the technologies of the future. Investments in medical and scientific research let us build whole new industries and give us the chance to create good jobs right here in America.

Invest in infrastructure – in roads, bridges, rail, water, power and broadband. Businesses—and the jobs they create—can't grow if the foundation crumbles beneath them. A 21st Century economy needs 21st Century infrastructure.

Strengthen and expand Social Security, not just for today's seniors, but for today's young people. Work is changing. A strong Social Security system will ensure that every worker, no matter the number of jobs they piece together during their careers, can count on a secure retirement.

Strengthen the rules of the marketplace. We don't build a future by turning the biggest banks loose to do whatever they want, and markets don't create value when corporations can deliberately cheat people or roll over their upstart competition.

Promote fair trade – Embrace only the trade policies that strengthen our economy, create good jobs with good wages, and establish fair rules of the road for companies around the world. Our trade agreements shouldn't help multinational companies gut environmental, health, and safety standards here and abroad under the guise of promoting commerce.

Reform the tax code: End the billions in tax breaks for corporations shipping jobs overseas and the big oil companies, and level the playing field so that millionaires and billionaires pay their fair share.

The demand for change is unmistakable. Just last month, 60,000 workers in 200 cities took to the streets to fight for a higher minimum wage.

Rebuilding our middle class won't be easy, but real change rarely is. It's time to be bold.

The American dream depends on it.

###

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Re: MoJo
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 3:30:45 PM

Excellent plan

----- Original Message -----

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 03:30 PM

To: B; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea

Subject: Re: MoJo

Plan is to leak some or all of the email to Mike Allen on Tuesday, so it will hit Playbook on Wed AM... We can embargo a copy & give to Morning Joe folks on Tuesday afternoon. Still aiming to have the op-ed hit the WashPost or WSJ on Wed.

On 5/4/15, 2:40 PM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>I assume we are sharing the TPA (the actual content) and the signatories >as of weds AM with them, correct?

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Leopold, Elana; "Jonathan@berlinrosen.com"
Subject: Re: Op-ed
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 3:33:51 PM

That's up to Phil. The only promise I made to the still somewhat Times-deferential Warren Team is that we wouldn't raise holy hell over the Warren/de Blasio oped alone. (Unlike us, they are still hoping to cultivate a relationship there the More Flies with Honey way - at least that's my guess.)

On 5/4/15, 3:30 PM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>I agree. And you have WSJ and even USA Today (??) as options after that.

>But when the smoke clears, let's figure out what on Earth the Times is >looking for and see if we can match it in the future. And do I have >permission to call Sulzberger and raise a concern re: 3 rejections and no >yesses in 16 months?

>

>

>----- Original Message -----

>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

>Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 03:28 PM

>To: B

>Cc: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Leopold, Elana

>Subject: Re: Op-ed

>

>Update is: NYT has rejected. They said it didn't contain enough

>"analysis" and was way too "campaign-y."

>

>We have moved on to WashPost. I'm not going to let the publication of the >op-ed be slowed by the naysayers at the New York Times edit board.

>

>On 5/4/15, 2:42 PM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>>

>>I promise to stop asking for status updates if you promise to alert me as >>you hear developments. And remember I need heads up re: when where it >>will be place (once confirmed) so I can alert Team Hillary

>

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Subject: Re: For TPA build-out
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 4:20:12 PM

Haha... I was just hoping for you not to spit on me!

On 5/4/15, 4:15 PM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>You did! I bow before you

>

>

>

>----- Original Message -----

>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmmedia.com>]

>Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 04:14 PM

>To: B; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>

>Subject: Re: For TPA build-out

>

>Definitely! Remember - I'm the one who pointed her out to you - rising >star!

>

>On 5/4/15, 4:11 PM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>>

>>Ayanna Pressley is one of the up and comers in Boston. Got a lot of >>acclaim for her Emily's List speech recently. We should engage her going >>forward, while making sure to always give every opportunity to Marty

>>Walsh

>>

>>

>>-----Original Message-----

>>From: Ayanna Pressley

>>To: Bill de Blasio

>>Subject: Bill,

>>Sent: Apr 30, 2015 3:06 PM

>>

>>I trust my message finds you, your brood and your city well. I've >>revisited our brief time spent together and our conversation many times.

>>Our dialogue was the affirmation and inspiration I needed, especially >>during this time of great challenge and unrest in our country on so many >>fronts. I am grateful for your leadership, and look forward to our >>connection deepening and our friendship growing. Our values align and our >>personal synergy is unquestionable. We are already partners in the >>abstract. I hope we'll be able to find something to intentionally partner >>on in the future. In addition to saying hello, I also wanted to make you >>aware of my long personal and professional relationship with Erika Soto

>>Lamb. If there is any insight I can offer, please do not hesitate to >>contact me directly or to have someone from your team do so. I am >>admittedly biased, I think she is an extraordinary woman and talent, but

>>I'll do my best to be objective. All the Best, Ayanna [REDACTED] cell

>

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: John Del Ceccato \(jfdc@akpdmedia.com\); B
Subject: TPA
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 4:43:08 PM

I have a few ideas on civil rights leaders.

NAACP Legal Defense Fund Sheralynn Ifill (spelling?)

Barbara Arnwein noted civil rights attorney (until recently the head of the Lawyers Committee for Civil Rights Under Law)

Karen Narasaki, most notable Asian American civil rights attorney/leader

MALDEF (Mexican American Legal and Defense Fund) – Thomas Saenz President

From: B
To: Snyder, Thomas; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: TPA
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 4:47:00 PM

But he has signed on, correct? And we'll use Maria Elena as his representative. Ok with you?

From: Snyder, Thomas
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 02:29 PM
To: B; John Del Ceccato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com) <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Hayley Prim
<[REDACTED]>
Subject: TPA

UNITE HERE President D Taylor cannot attend on the 12th. He has to be at a Las Vegas membership meeting about the upcoming contract. It covers 60,000 people so he really can't avoid since he is running the meeting. He sends regrets. And feels guilty!

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Leopold, Elana
Cc: Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: A few answers to possible CPC questions on "boldness"
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 4:49:02 PM

I would add that I should offer to join them in other struggles. And that this is a foundation to build on. But this is WAY ahead of where the national debate and the two parties are now, so it's a strong beginning

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 04:47 PM
To: Leopold, Elana; B
Subject: A few answers to possible CPC questions on "boldness"

1. While we want as many House members as possible, we are also trying to get a broad base of support for The Progressive Agenda - from labor leaders, thought leaders, economists, celebrities, etc. It would be VERY difficult to get a lot of those folks if we try to do everything with this document/this effort. And as you've probably seen, we already have so many great signers (see list below) - so we don't want to risk losing anyone, either. It's the classic organizing conundrum - and you guys know organizing better than anybody in politics today, so I know you appreciate it!
2. We have three goals: a) big names; b) as many big names as possible; c) as bold a document as possible. This is the broad vision, and we really think it will be the best way to demonstrate a national Show of Force that the progressive movement is alive, organized, and mobilized.
3. That said, we DEFINITELY want individual signers/participants to drill down deeper. We urge members of the Progressive Caucus to do One Minutes on the House Floor in the days following May 12th AND/OR introduce specific bills/budget frameworks during that period. For example, if you support the DeLauro-Gillibrand legislation on Paid Family Leave - please use this organizing document/event to shine a BRIGHT LIGHT on that legislation - and build support for it!
4. We know we don't have EVERYTHING that needs to be done to combat income inequality contained in this document. For my part, I will be speaking out on things I'd like to do above and beyond this, and I expect that others will as well.

====

Please join Bill de Blasio, Mayor of New York City, and declare your support for The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality on May 12, 2015 at 3:00pm at the U.S. Capitol Building's House Triangle.

More and more progressive leaders are signing on every day. So far supporters include:

<!--[if !supportLists]--> <!--[endif]-->Eileen Appelbaum, Senior Economist, Center for Economic and Policy Research

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Dean Baker, Co-Director, Center for Economic and Policy Research

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Deepak Bhargava, Executive Director, Center for Community Change

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Robert Borosage, Co-Director Campaign for America's Future

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Steve Buscemi, Actor

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Larry Cohen, President, Communication Workers of America

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Sheila Crowley, President and CEO, National Low Income Housing Coalition

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Bill de Blasio, Mayor of New York City

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Howard Dean, Former Governor of Vermont & Founder, Democracy for America

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Rosa DeLauro, U.S. Representative from Connecticut

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Abigail E. Disney, Filmmaker

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Keith Ellison, U.S. Representative from Minnesota

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Chaka Fattah, U.S. Representative from Pennsylvania

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Jeff Faux, Founder, Economic Policy Institute

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Lily Eskelsen García, President, National Education Association

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Leo Gerard, President, United Steelworkers

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Lisa Graves, Executive Director, Center for Media and Democracy/PRWatch/ALECexposed.org

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->George Gresham, President, 1199SEIU

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Raúl Grijalva, U.S. Representative from Arizona, Co-Chair Congressional Progressive Caucus

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Arshad Hasan, Executive Director, ProgressNow

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Jeannette Huevo, Executive Director, United for a Fair Economy

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Sheila Jackson Lee, U.S. Representative from Texas

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Mike Lux, Co-Founder and President, Progressive Strategies

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Chirlane McCray, First Lady of New York City

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Heather McGhee, Executive Director, DEMOS

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Lawrence Mishel, President, Economic Policy Institute

<!--[if !supportLists]--> <!--[endif]-->Cynthia Nixon, Actor
 <!--[if !supportLists]--> <!--[endif]-->Atima Omara, President, Young Democrats of America
 <!--[if !supportLists]--> <!--[endif]-->James Parrott, Deputy Director and Chief Economist, Fiscal Policy Institute
 <!--[if !supportLists]--> <!--[endif]-->Robert Reich, Chancellor's Professor of Public Policy at University of California at Berkeley & Former U.S. Secretary of Labor
 <!--[if !supportLists]--> <!--[endif]-->Mark Ruffalo, Actor, Director, Producer & Activist
 <!--[if !supportLists]--> <!--[endif]-->Jeff Sachs, Economist & Director of the Earth Institute at Columbia University
 <!--[if !supportLists]--> <!--[endif]-->Bill Samuels, Chairman, EffectiveNY
 <!--[if !supportLists]--> <!--[endif]-->Susan Sarandon, Actress, Activist
 <!--[if !supportLists]--> <!--[endif]-->Lee Saunders, President, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees
 <!--[if !supportLists]--> <!--[endif]-->Reverend Al Sharpton, Founder and President of National Action Network
 <!--[if !supportLists]--> <!--[endif]-->D. Taylor, President, UNITE HERE!
 <!--[if !supportLists]--> <!--[endif]-->Richard L. Trumka, President, AFL-CIO
 <!--[if !supportLists]--> <!--[endif]-->Katrina vanden Heuvel, Editor, The Nation
 <!--[if !supportLists]--> <!--[endif]-->Randi Weingarten, President, American Federation of Teachers
 <!--[if !supportLists]--> <!--[endif]-->Michael Wessel, President, The Wessel Group
 <!--[if !supportLists]--> <!--[endif]-->Nan Whaley, Mayor of Dayton, Ohio
 <!--[if !supportLists]--> <!--[endif]-->Marjorie E. Wood, PhD, Senior Associate, Global Economy Project & Managing Editor, Inequality.org
 <!--[if !supportLists]--> <!--[endif]-->Marian Wright Edelman, Founder and President, Children's Defense Fund

The group of supporters will include federal and local elected officials, labor officials, cultural leaders, and progressive activists.

The Progressive Agenda – a progressive alternative, of sorts, to the 1994 Republican Contract with America – will include specific proposals to lift the floor for working people, support working parents, and promote tax fairness – policies that reward work rather than just wealth.

The event stems from a summit that Mayor de Blasio convened in New York City in early April, where a group of national progressive leaders gathered to discuss ways the country could combat the crisis of our time -- income inequality.

The Progressive Agenda builds upon the work of dozens of economists, lawmakers, think tanks, and progressive activists. It is not meant to be seen as a comprehensive set of proposals to combat income inequality, but rather a bold collection of core policy proposals around which progressives can organize and mobilize.

-
If you cannot attend in person, we'd still urge you to sign on to the document.

To sign on, please email me back as soon as possible, preferably no later than Monday, May 4.

Thanks for your consideration, and feel free to contact me with any questions or concerns.

The Progressive Agenda To Combat Income Inequality

<!--[if !supportLists]-->1. <!--[endif]-->Lift the Floor for Working People
<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.
<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.
<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->2. <!--[endif]-->Support Working Families
<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Pass national paid sick leave.
<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Pass national paid family leave.
<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Expand the Earned Income Tax Credit.
<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->3. <!--[endif]-->Tax Fairness
<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Close the carried interest loophole.
<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to take advantage of "performance pay" write-offs.

###

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: [B; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; \[REDACTED\]; \[REDACTED\]; \[REDACTED\]](mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com)
Subject: RE: TPA
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 4:51:40 PM

I would just add that MALDEF and Narasaki may be more open.

From: B
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 4:50 PM
To: 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com'; Snyder, Thomas; [REDACTED]; [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: TPA

Then they can stand apart if they wish -- but that's a mistake. And Sharpton didn't see it that way. Economics is the underlying factor, as Baltimore makes plainly clear

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 04:48 PM
To: B; Snyder, Thomas; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: TPA

some early feedback from civil rights world:

nothing in here that addresses criminal justice issues and policing (especially) -- "structural racism relates to all these issues" - and that is what they are all focused on right now.

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, May 4, 2015 at 4:46 PM
To: "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Aaron PickrellEmail <[REDACTED]> John Davis <[REDACTED]> Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: TPA

All good choices, but make sure we invite the head of the larger NAACP first (the parent organization). And Tom, pls address these specific ideas to the whole TPA team, as I have here.
Thanks

From: Snyder, Thomas
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 04:43 PM
To: John Del Ceccato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com) <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; B

Subject: TPA

I have a few ideas on civil rights leaders.

NAACP Legal Defense Fund Sheralynn Ifill (spelling?)

Barbara Arnwein noted civil rights attorney (until recently the head of the Lawyers Committee for Civil Rights Under Law)

Karen Narasaki, most notable Asian American civil rights attorney/leader

MALDEF (Mexican American Legal and Defense Fund) – Thomas Saenz President

From: John Del Cecato
To: B; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Answer
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 5:13:20 PM

Yes, we will sign on - but we want them to go do things in their own districts to amplify and expand the effort!

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Re: Excellent opening!
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 5:15:27 PM

Thanks, coach!

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 05:12 PM
To: B
Subject: Excellent opening!

From: Hayley Prim
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Also
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 5:16:59 PM

We are building one now, should have it ready to go by the middle of the week.

On Mon, May 4, 2015 at 5:16 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Um, do we have a website? Or, when will we have one?

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 05:15 PM
To: B; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Also

One Minutes on the House Floor

Media appearances

Organizing on the grassroots level

Drive people to website

Apply pressure to local and national colleagues to pass this stuff now

--

Hayley Prim

c:

From: John Del Cecato
To: B; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Infrastructure
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 5:17:47 PM

You're organizing mayors on 5/13 to address just this...

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Leopold, Elana
Cc: [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: Also
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 5:23:03 PM

I like Hayley's answer better

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 05:18 PM
To: B; Leopold, Elana
Cc: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: Also

We will by 5/12!

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, May 4, 2015 at 5:16 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: Also

Um, do we have a website? Or, when will we have one?

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 05:15 PM
To: B; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Also

One Minutes on the House Floor

Media appearances

Organizing on the grassroots level

Drive people to website

Apply pressure to local and national colleagues to pass this stuff now

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Re: <no subject>
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 5:24:31 PM

Look at that -- great minds think alike!

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 05:24 PM
To: B
Subject: <no subject>

No better way to boost turnout than a bold agenda!

From: Leopold, Elana
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Re: Is someone moderating?
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 5:24:52 PM

Well that's not helpful...

Ok ill try to get him to wrap

----- Original Message -----

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 05:25 PM
To: Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Is someone moderating?

BDB is moderating

On 5/4/15, 5:23 PM, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>Need to wrap in 5 for media avail

From: John Del Cecato
To: Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Is someone moderating?
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 5:25:19 PM

can you hand him a note & tell him? I feel like we're wrapping up

On 5/4/15, 5:23 PM, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>Need to wrap in 5 for media avail

From: John Del Cecato
To: Leopold, Elana; B
Subject: <no subject>
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 5:27:21 PM

You kicked ass... Perfect... Just enough love.. And you didn't leave any room for mischief... WELL DONE...
And thank you..

And next time we'll get you a conference call line that isn't so annoying !

From: John Del Cecato
To: B: [REDACTED]
Cc: [REDACTED]; Snyder, Thomas; [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: Calls Tomorrow
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 5:33:08 PM

This Mayor's On Fire!

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, May 4, 2015 at 5:22 PM
To: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, John Davis <[REDACTED]> Aaron PickrellEmail <[REDACTED]> "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "[REDACTED]" <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: Fwd: Calls Tomorrow

I've spoken to the heads of the House Progressive Caucus and the House Hispanic Caucus. So I need to talk to the head of the Congressional Black Caucus. And the Asian Caucus if there is one. And is there a Senate Progressive Caucus?

From: Hayley Prim [[mailto:\[REDACTED\]](mailto:[REDACTED])]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 10:28 AM
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Fwd: Calls Tomorrow

George Gresham just confirmed signing and attending this morning.

On Mon, May 4, 2015 at 10:25 AM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

What's up with maria elena durazo? Is she signing on? Is she attending? And george gresham?

From: Hayley Prim [[mailto:\[REDACTED\]](mailto:[REDACTED])]
Sent: Sunday, May 03, 2015 02:37 PM
To: B
Subject: Fwd: Calls Tomorrow

----- Forwarded message -----

From: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>

Date: Friday, May 1, 2015

Subject: Calls Tomorrow

To: Michael Carey <[REDACTED]>

Cc: Elana Leopold <[REDACTED]>

These are the calls we would like him to make if possible:

Congressman John Lewis (big name)

Numbers- office: [REDACTED] cell: [REDACTED].

Raul Grijalva (to reassure him that while he knows members of CPC want this bigger and bolder, TPA is just the start – and they can and SHOULD use it to highlight their bigger and bolder stuff)

Numbers- [REDACTED] scheduler: [REDACTED] cell: [REDACTED].

Toni Morrison (to get her to write something in advance of the event – and to get her to sign on to TPA)

Home Number: [REDACTED].

Bill Moyers (big name, interesting name)

Cell: [REDACTED].

Tom Harkin (still hasn't confirmed on staff level. Wants federal govt to assume all student debt rather than refinancing)

Cell: ([REDACTED]).

Mary Kay Henry (because she's huge & we haven't gotten confirmation from her staff yet)

Numbers: cell: [REDACTED] office: [REDACTED].

Janet Murguia (La Raza is important, haven't gotten response at staff level)

Numbers: asst: [REDACTED]; cell: [REDACTED].

On Thu, Apr 30, 2015 at 4:41 PM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:

Great. Elana let me know if you want me to schedule a few calls, or just send you names and phone numbers

On Thu, Apr 30, 2015 at 4:28 PM, Michael Carey <[REDACTED]> wrote:

He has time from 9-1230, you should work with EL to see what calls he can do in the AM along with his Mayors Call.

--
Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

From: Hayley Prim
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: [REDACTED] Aaron Pickrell; John Davis; Wolfe, Emma; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: CPC call
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 6:02:45 PM
Attachments: TPAemail v9.docx

This should be updated with everyone from today!

On Mon, May 4, 2015 at 6:00 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
Yes - but don't just forward - can you clean it up a bit so I'm not on record making fun of Rangel, etc?

On May 4, 2015, at 5:59 PM, jeani murray <[REDACTED]> wrote:

Can I share this update with Brad? He is also planning on emailing them after this call & following up with staff.

On Mon, May 4, 2015 at 5:58 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

Yes - great - strike while iron is hot!

On May 4, 2015, at 5:56 PM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:

yes, was good!

I think we should follow up with them tonight. Davis, if you want reach out, then that's great. If you want split up, I am happy to help!

Those who said they were joining who haven't yet signed on are:
Lemus, Pocan, Jeffries, Waters, Rangel, Capuano, Schakowsky, Yvette Clark, Velazquez, Hahn (her COS).

I'm not positive that Jeffies, Pocan, Velazaquez and Capuano made it, since people were dialing in and not announcing themselves while the mayor was speaking but they RSVPed, so we should ping them regardless.

On Mon, May 4, 2015 at 5:33 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

MBDB was fantastic. Gave a tight opening, showed the low, allowed enough questions & answered all of them to participants' satisfaction, I believe...

Finished in 25 minutes.

A few notes:

Barbara Lee – asked about racial justice/Baltimore/how do we elevate. MBDB gave solid answer & said we can't run away from connection between racial justice and economic justice.

Shankowsky – what do you want us to do? MBDB: Organize. Elevate. (He didn't tell them to bring their fellow CPC members with them on the 12th - and I'm glad about that - because now I'm worried we may have TOO many people there in person (and not enough time to accommodate everyone). The folks who want to climb on board & be there in person will find out - I have no doubt.

Rangel – Mentioned something about trade - sorta sounded like a half-pitch on behalf of Obama on trade/half tirade on GOP hating Obama. Mentioned infrastructure investment. MBDB handled well - referenced some things that Rangel & he had discussed before. All good.

Ellison – Voter turnout needs to be a part of our agenda. BDB agrees - says a bold agenda is the best way to get people to turn out.

Raul - had a question that I missed, and then he fell off the call.

Elana might have noted something I missed, but there was nobody saying that we weren't being bold enough - just folks saying that they wanted to include other things down the line. Peace, love, and harmony.

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

Please join Bill de Blasio, Mayor of New York City, and declare your support for The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality on May 12, 2015 at 3:00pm at the U.S. Capitol Building's House Triangle.

More and more progressive leaders are signing on every day. So far supporters include:

- Eileen Appelbaum, Senior Economist, Center for Economic and Policy Research
- Dean Baker, Co-Director, Center for Economic and Policy Research
- Deepak Bhargava, Executive Director, Center for Community Change
- Robert Borosage, Co-Director Campaign for America's Future
- Steve Buscemi, Actor
- Larry Cohen, President, Communication Workers of America
- Sheila Crowley, President and CEO, National Low Income Housing Coalition
- Bill de Blasio, Mayor of New York City
- Howard Dean, Former Governor of Vermont & Founder, Democracy for America
- Rosa DeLauro, U.S. Representative from Connecticut
- Abigail E. Disney, Filmmaker
- Keith Ellison, U.S. Representative from Minnesota
- Chaka Fattah, U.S. Representative from Pennsylvania
- Jeff Faux, Founder, Economic Policy Institute
- Lily Eskelsen García, President, National Education Association
- Leo Gerard, President, United Steelworkers
- Lisa Graves, Executive Director, Center for Media and Democracy/PRWatch/ALECexposed.org
- George Gresham, President, 1199SEIU
- Raúl Grijalva, U.S. Representative from Arizona, Co-Chair Congressional Progressive Caucus
- Arshad Hasan, Executive Director, ProgressNow
- Jeannette Huelzo, Executive Director, United for a Fair Economy
- Van Jones, Co-Founder and President, Rebuild the Dream
- Barbara Lee, U.S. Representative from California
- Sheila Jackson Lee, U.S. Representative from Texas
- Mike Lux, Co-Founder and President, Progressive Strategies
- Chirlane McCray, First Lady of New York City
- Heather McGhee, Executive Director, DEMOS
- Jim McGovern, U.S. Representative from Massachusetts
- Lawrence Mishel, President, Economic Policy Institute
- Jerry Nadler, U.S. Congressman from New York
- Cynthia Nixon, Actor
- Atima Omara, President, Young Democrats of America
- James Parrott, Deputy Director and Chief Economist, Fiscal Policy Institute
- Robert Reich, Chancellor's Professor of Public Policy at University of California at Berkeley & Former U.S. Secretary of Labor

- Mark Ruffalo, Actor, Director, Producer & Activist
- Jeff Sachs, Economist & Director of the Earth Institute at Columbia University
- Bill Samuels, Chairman, EffectiveNY
- Susan Sarandon, Actress, Activist
- Lee Saunders, President, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees
- Reverend Al Sharpton, Founder and President of National Action Network
- D. Taylor, President, UNITE HERE!
- Linda Tirado, Author
- Richard L. Trumka, President, AFL-CIO
- Katrina vanden Heuvel, Editor, The Nation
- Bonnie Watson Coleman, U.S. Representative from New Jersey
- Randi Weingarten, President, American Federation of Teachers
- Michael Wessel, President, The Wessel Group
- Nan Whaley, Mayor of Dayton, Ohio
- Marjorie E. Wood, PhD, Senior Associate, Global Economy Project & Managing Editor, Inequality.org
- Marian Wright Edelman, Founder and President, Children's Defense Fund

The group of supporters will include federal and local elected officials, labor officials, cultural leaders, and progressive activists.

The Progressive Agenda – a progressive alternative, of sorts, to the 1994 Republican Contract with America – will include specific proposals to lift the floor for working people, support working parents, and promote tax fairness – policies that reward work rather than just wealth.

The event stems from a summit that Mayor de Blasio convened in New York City in early April, where a group of national progressive leaders gathered to discuss ways the country could combat the crisis of our time -- income inequality.

The Progressive Agenda builds upon the work of dozens of economists, lawmakers, think tanks, and progressive activists. It is not meant to be seen as a comprehensive set of proposals to combat income inequality, but rather a bold collection of core policy proposals around which progressives can organize and mobilize.

If you cannot attend in person, we'd still urge you to sign on to the document.

Thanks for your consideration, and feel free to contact me with any questions or concerns.

The Progressive Agenda To Combat Income Inequality

1. Lift the Floor for Working People

- Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.
- Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.
- Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
- Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

2. Support Working Families

- Pass national paid sick leave.
- Pass national paid family leave.
- Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
- Expand the Earned Income Tax Credit.
- Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

3. Tax Fairness

- Close the carried interest loophole.
- End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
- Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to take advantage of "performance pay" write-offs.

###

From: jeani murray
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: Hayley Prim; Aaron PickrellEmail; John Davis; Wolfe, Emma; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: CPC call
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 6:05:19 PM

yes!

On Mon, May 4, 2015 at 6:00 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
Yes - but don't just forward - can you clean it up a bit so I'm not on record making fun of Rangel, etc?

On May 4, 2015, at 5:59 PM, jeani murray <[REDACTED]> wrote:

Can I share this update with Brad? He is also planning on emailing them after this call & following up with staff.

On Mon, May 4, 2015 at 5:58 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
Yes - great - strike while iron is hot!

On May 4, 2015, at 5:56 PM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:

yes, was good!

I think we should follow up with them tonight. Davis, if you want reach out, then that's great. If you want split up, I am happy to help!

Those who said they were joining who haven't yet signed on are:
Lemus, Pocan, Jeffries, Waters, Rangel, Capuano, Schakowsky, Yvette Clark, Velazquez, Hahn (her COS).

I'm not positive that Jeffies, Pocan, Velazaquez and Capuano made it, since people were dialing in and not announcing themselves while the mayor was speaking but they RSVPed, so we should ping them regardless.

On Mon, May 4, 2015 at 5:33 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
MBDB was fantastic. Gave a tight opening, showed the low, allowed enough questions & answered all of them to participants' satisfaction, I believe...

Finished in 25 minutes.

A few notes:

Barbara Lee – asked about racial justice/Baltimore/how do we elevate. MBDB gave solid answer & said we can't run away from connection between racial justice and economic justice.

Shankowsky – what do you want us to do? MBDB: Organize. Elevate. (He didn't tell them to bring their fellow CPC members with them on the 12th - and I'm glad about that - because now I'm worried we may have TOO many people there in person (and not enough time to accommodate everyone). The folks who want to climb on board & be there in person will find out - I have no doubt.

Rangel – Mentioned something about trade - sorta sounded like a half-pitch on behalf of Obama on trade/half tirade on GOP hating Obama. Mentioned infrastructure investment. MBDB handled well - referenced some things that Rangel & he had discussed before. All good.

Ellison – Voter turnout needs to be a part of our agenda. BDB agrees - says a bold agenda is the best way to get people to turn out.

Raul - had a question that I missed, and then he fell off the call.

Elana might have noted something I missed, but there was nobody saying that we weren't being bold enough - just folks saying that they wanted to include other things down the line. Peace, love, and harmony.

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: B
To: [REDACTED]
Cc: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; [REDACTED]; [REDACTED] Snyder, Thomas;
Subject: Re: Fwd: Calls Tomorrow
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 6:48:16 PM

Congresswoman Yvette Clarke confirmed to me her sign-on and her attendance on may 12

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 05:27 PM
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
[REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> Snyder, Thomas; [REDACTED]
<[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: Fwd: Calls Tomorrow

No Senate Progressive Caucus, but I will set up calls or track down cells for Asian Pacific American Caucus Chair Judy Chu and Black Caucus Chair Butterfield

On Mon, May 4, 2015 at 5:22 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

I've spoken to the heads of the House Progressive Caucus and the House Hispanic Caucus. So I need to talk to the head of the Congressional Black Caucus. And the Asian Caucus if there is one. And is there a Senate Progressive Caucus?

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 10:28 AM
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
[REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Fwd: Calls Tomorrow

George Gresham just confirmed signing and attending this morning.

On Mon, May 4, 2015 at 10:25 AM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

What's up with maria elena durazo? Is she signing on? Is she attending? And george gresham?

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Sunday, May 03, 2015 02:37 PM

To: B
Subject: Fwd: Calls Tomorrow

----- Forwarded message -----

From: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Date: Friday, May 1, 2015
Subject: Calls Tomorrow
To: Michael Carey <[REDACTED]>
Cc: Elana Leopold <[REDACTED]>

These are the calls we would like him to make if possible:

Congressman John Lewis (big name)

Numbers- office: [REDACTED]; cell: [REDACTED].

Raul Grijalva (to reassure him that while he knows members of CPC want this bigger and bolder, TPA is just the start – and they can and SHOULD use it to highlight their bigger and bolder stuff)

Numbers- [REDACTED], scheduler: [REDACTED] cell: [REDACTED]

Toni Morrison (to get her to write something in advance of the event – and to get her to sign on to TPA)

Home Number: [REDACTED]

Bill Moyers (big name, interesting name)

Cell: [REDACTED]

Tom Harkin (still hasn't confirmed on staff level. Wants federal govt to assume all student debt rather than refinancing)

Cell: [REDACTED].

Mary Kay Henry (because she's huge & we haven't gotten confirmation from her staff yet)

Numbers: cell: [REDACTED]; office: [REDACTED]

Janet Murguia (La Raza is important, haven't gotten response at staff level)

Numbers: asst: [REDACTED]; cell: [REDACTED]

On Thu, Apr 30, 2015 at 4:41 PM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:
Great. Elana let me know if you want me to schedule a few calls, or just send you names and phone numbers

On Thu, Apr 30, 2015 at 4:28 PM, Michael Carey <[REDACTED]> wrote:
He has time from 9-1230, you should work with EL to see what calls he can do in the AM along with his Mayors Call.

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: John Del Cecato
To: Hayley Prim
Cc: B: [REDACTED] Snyder, Thomas; [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: Calls Tomorrow
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 6:50:03 PM

Woot woot

On May 4, 2015, at 6:50 PM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:

Great!

On Monday, May 4, 2015, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Congresswoman Yvette Clarke confirmed to me her sign-on and her attendance on may 12

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 05:27 PM
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; [REDACTED]
<[REDACTED]> <[REDACTED]>
Snyder, Thomas; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: Fwd: Calls Tomorrow

No Senate Progressive Caucus, but I will set up calls or track down cells for Asian Pacific American Caucus Chair Judy Chu and Black Caucus Chair Butterfield

On Mon, May 4, 2015 at 5:22 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

I've spoken to the heads of the House Progressive Caucus and the House Hispanic Caucus. So I need to talk to the head of the Congressional Black Caucus. And the Asian Caucus if there is one. And is there a Senate Progressive Caucus?

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 10:28 AM
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; [REDACTED]
<[REDACTED]> <[REDACTED]>
Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Fwd: Calls Tomorrow

George Gresham just confirmed signing and attending this morning.

On Mon, May 4, 2015 at 10:25 AM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

What's up with maria elena durazo? Is she signing on? Is she attending? And george gresham?

From: Hayley Prim [mailto: [REDACTED]]
Sent: Sunday, May 03, 2015 02:37 PM
To: B
Subject: Fwd: Calls Tomorrow

----- Forwarded message -----

From: Hayley Prim < [REDACTED] >
Date: Friday, May 1, 2015
Subject: Calls Tomorrow
To: Michael Carey < [REDACTED] >
Cc: Elana Leopold < [REDACTED] >

These are the calls we would like him to make if possible:

Congressman John Lewis (big name)

Numbers- office: [REDACTED] cell: [REDACTED].

Raul Grijalva (to reassure him that while he knows members of CPC want this bigger and bolder, TPA is just the start – and they can and SHOULD use it to highlight their bigger and bolder stuff)

Numbers- [REDACTED] scheduler: [REDACTED] cell: [REDACTED].

Toni Morrison (to get her to write something in advance of the event – and to get her to sign on to TPA)

Home Number: [REDACTED].

Bill Moyers (big name, interesting name)

Cell: [REDACTED]

Tom Harkin (still hasn't confirmed on staff level. Wants federal govt to assume all student debt rather than refinancing)

Cell: [REDACTED]

Mary Kay Henry (because she's huge & we haven't gotten confirmation from her staff yet)

Numbers: cell: [REDACTED]; office: [REDACTED]

Janet Murguia (La Raza is important, haven't gotten response at staff level)

Numbers: asst: [REDACTED]; cell: [REDACTED]

On Thu, Apr 30, 2015 at 4:41 PM, Hayley Prim

<[REDACTED]> wrote:

Great. Elana let me know if you want me to schedule a few calls, or just send you names and phone numbers

On Thu, Apr 30, 2015 at 4:28 PM, Michael Carey

<[REDACTED]> wrote:

He has time from 9-1230, you should work with EL to see what calls he can do in the AM along with his Mayors Call.

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: B; FLONYC
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Carey, Michael; John Del cecato; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Rolling Stone
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 7:10:47 PM

Sir,

Reminder that Rolling Stone profile piece hits newsstands tomorrow. We'll be on the lookout and will circulate when it pops.

Best,
Andrea

From: John Del Cecato
To: Snyder, Thomas
Cc: [REDACTED]; Carey, Michael; Hayley Prim; John Davis; Leopold, Elana; jeani murray
Subject: Re: Outreach
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 7:21:00 PM

Adding Jeani

On May 4, 2015, at 7:19 PM, Snyder, Thomas <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

I am going after Tom Saenz of MALDEF and Karen Narasaki; so we don't trip over ourselves...

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Cc: Snyder, Thomas; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Op Ed
Date: Monday, May 04, 2015 7:25:42 PM

Will find out

On May 4, 2015, at 7:26 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

I agree fully!! And this is great. But the moral of the story is: start earlier with op-ed placement! And don't waste time (or waste as little as possible on the nyt). Well done in getting us there! Congrats. PS -- need a little clarity re: when specifically it will go live on Weds online. Want to do my Hillaryland notifications right before. Thanks

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 07:16 PM
To: B
Cc: Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Op Ed

Good stuff. Going to go with this. Online Wed won't get it in MoJo bloodstream, but who cares. We will have other stuff for them to work from - Rolling Stone, TPA email, etc.

From Team Warren...

Hi John - The good (!) news is that WaPo is willing to print the piece. The bad news is that they couldn't get it into the print edition until Friday. However, it sounds like they would be able to get it online on Wednesday. Let us know how you'd like to proceed and thanks,

Dan

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Subject: Re: May 4 Update: 48 Signers, 24 Attendees
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 7:00:58 AM

:)

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Tuesday, May 5, 2015 at 12:36 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: May 4 Update: 48 Signers, 24 Attendees

You got me in trouble with the President of the United States today... And I thank you for it. Means we must be doing something right

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 09:31 PM
To: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Cc: B; Snyder, Thomas; Aaron Pickrell <[REDACTED]> John Davis
<[REDACTED]> jeani murray <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: May 4 Update: 48 Signers, 24 Attendees

So good. Already hit our goal for attendees. We will get to 100 signers by end of week, I am betting

On May 4, 2015, at 9:30 PM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:

Names in Bold are attending.

I am working with Stephanie to handle follow up to Mayors who you reached.

And those who are in play right now who we are working to confirm include: John Lewis, Bill Moyers, Mary Kay Henry, Tom Harkin, Janet Murguia, Tammy Baldwin, Maria Elana Durazo, Tom Steyer, Jeff Merkley, Jim Hoffa, Linda Sanchez, Tom Saenz, Karen Naraski as well as several members of the CPC who you spoke to today. (Team, let me know if there is anyone I'm missing here!)

And I am still working to set up calls for you with Chair of Black Caucus, Chair of Asian Caucus, Barney Frank, and Governor Dayton. Pelosi's office confirmed she cannot attend, we are still asking her to sign, and will put that on your next call list as well.

Campaign for America's Future	Co-Director	Robert	Borosage
	Deputy Director and

Fiscal Policy Institute	Chief Economist	James	Parrott
The Wessel Group	President	Michael	Wessel
Economic Policy Institute	Senior Economist	Eileen	Appelbaum
Center for Economic and Policy Research	Co-Director	Dean	Baker
	Actor	Steve	Buscemi
Philanthropist/ Fimmaker		Abigail	Disney
Economic Policy Institute	Founder	Jeff	Faux
	Actress	Cynthia	Nixon
University of California at Berkley	Chancellor's Professor	Robert	Reich
	Actor	Mark	Ruffalo
Columbia University	Economist/Director of Earth Institute	Jeff	Sachs
EffectiveNY	Chairman	Bill	Samuels
Actress		Susan	Sarandon
Unite Here	President	D	Taylor
Childrens Defense Fund	President/Founder	Marian	Wright Edelman
United for a Fair Economy	Executive Director	Jeannette	Huezo
Center for Media and Democracy	Executive Director	Lisa	Graves
Inequality.org	Managing Editor	Marjorie	Wood
Dream Corps Unlimited		Van	Jones
Economic Policy Institute	President	Lawrence	Mishel
New Jersey	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Bonnie	Watson Coleman
AFL-CIO	President	Richard	Trumka
The Nation	Editor	Katrina	Vanden Heuvel
Communities for Change	Executive Director	Deepak	Bhargava
New York	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Yvette	Clarke
National Low Income Housing Coalition	President	Sheila	Crowley
Former Governor/Democracy for America	Founder	Howard	Dean
Connecticut	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Rosa	DeLauro

Minnesota	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Keith	Ellison
Pennsylvania	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Chaka	Fattah
Steelworkers	President	Leo	Gerard
SEIU 1199	President	George	Gresham
Arizona	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Raul	Grijalva
Texas	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Sheila	Jackson-Lee
Progressive Strategies	Director	Mike	Lux
Demos	Executive Director	Heather	McGhee
Massachusetts	U.S. Rep, PC Member	James	McGovern
New York	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Jerry	Nadler
Young Democrats of America	President	Atima	Omara
AFSCME	President	Lee	Saunders
NAN	President	Al	Sharpton
NEA	Executive Director	John	Stocks
AFT	President	Randi	Weingarten
Dayton	Mayor	Nan	Whaley
	Author	Linda	Tirado
Progress Now	Executive Director	Arshad	Hasan
CWA	President	Larry	Cohen

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: Hayley Prim
To: B
Cc: Snyder, Thomas; [redacted] jfdc@akpdmedia.com; [redacted]
Subject: Re: May 4 Update: 48 Signers, 24 Attendees
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 7:32:04 AM

Got it. We are working with Sunshine, Sachs, Cynthia, and Hiltzik to try and identify folks who you can reach out to, and just sent them all emails asking for anyone you could connect with today.

I will also check back in with the Dreamworks connect I'm talking to who may be able to help us reach Geffen, Katzenberg, Spielberg, and Lucas.

On Tue, May 5, 2015 at 12:35 AM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Attendance still needs star power. Work with me asap to pump up. I'll make lots of calls tmrw. Let's focus on cultural figures as well

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[redacted]]
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 09:29 PM
To: B; Snyder, Thomas
Cc: Aaron Pickrell <[redacted]> John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; John Davis <[redacted]> jeani murray <[redacted]>
Subject: May 4 Update: 48 Signers, 24 Attendees

Names in Bold are attending.

I am working with Stephanie to handle follow up to Mayors who you reached.

And those who are in play right now who we are working to confirm include: John Lewis, Bill Moyers, Mary Kay Henry, Tom Harkin, Janet Murguia, Tammy Baldwin, Maria Elana Durazo, Tom Steyer, Jeff Merkley, Jim Hoffa, Linda Sanchez, Tom Saenz, Karen Naraski as well as several members of the CPC who you spoke to today. (Team, let me know if there is anyone I'm missing here!)

And I am still working to set up calls for you with Chair of Black Caucus, Chair of Asian Caucus, Barney Frank, and Governor Dayton. Pelosi's office confirmed she cannot attend, we are still asking her to sign, and will put that on your next call list as well.

Campaign for America's Future	Co-Director	Robert	Borosage
Fiscal Policy Institute	Deputy Director and Chief Economist	James	Parrott
The Wessel Group	President	Michael	Wessel
Economic Policy Institute	Senior Economist	Eileen	Appelbaum
Center for Economic and Policy Research	Co-Director	Dean	Baker
	Actor	Steve	Buscemi
Philanthropist/ Fimmaker		Abigail	Disney
Economic Policy Institute	Founder	Jeff	Faux
	Actress	Cynthia	Nixon

University of California at Berkley	Chancellor's Professor	Robert	Reich
	Actor	Mark	Ruffalo
Columbia University	Economist/Director of Earth Institute	Jeff	Sachs
EffectiveNY	Chairman	Bill	Samuels
Actress		Susan	Sarandon
Unite Here	President	D	Taylor
Childrens Defense Fund	President/Founder	Marian	Wright Edelman
United for a Fair Economy	Executive Director	Jeannette	Huezo
Center for Media and Democracy	Executive Director	Lisa	Graves
Inequality.org	Managing Editor	Marjorie	Wood
Dream Corps Unlimited		Van	Jones
Economic Policy Institute	President	Lawrence	Mishel
New Jersey	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Bonnie	Watson Coleman
AFL-CIO	President	Richard	Trumka
The Nation	Editor	Katrina	Vanden Heuvel
Communities for Change	Executive Director	Deepak	Bhargava
New York	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Yvette	Clarke
National Low Income Housing Coalition	President	Sheila	Crowley
Former Governor/Democracy for America	Founder	Howard	Dean
Connecticut	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Rosa	DeLauro
Minnesota	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Keith	Ellison
Pennsylvania	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Chaka	Fattah
Steelworkers	President	Leo	Gerard
SEIU 1199	President	George	Gresham
Arizona	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Raul	Grijalva
Texas	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Sheila	Jackson-Lee
Progressive Strategies	Director	Mike	Lux
Demos	Executive Director	Heather	McGhee
Massachusetts	U.S. Rep, PC Member	James	McGovern
New York	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Jerry	Nadler
Young Democrats of America	President	Atima	Omara
AFSCME	President	Lee	Saunders

NAN	President	Al	Sharpton
NEA	Executive Director	John	Stocks
AFT	President	Randi	Weingarten
Dayton	Mayor	Nan	Whaley
	Author	Linda	Tirado
Progress Now	Executive Director	Arshad	Hasan
CWA	President	Larry	Cohen

--
 Hayley Prim
 c: [REDACTED]

--
 Hayley Prim
 c: [REDACTED]

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Cc: [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: Steyer and Reich
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 8:10:40 AM

I pinged Ragone yesterday but haven't heard back. Will call him today.

AKPD is working on speeches for UCal and Santa Clara - adapted versions of Iowa/Neb.

Pickrell and I have been double teaming Steyer. Nothing yet.

> On May 5, 2015, at 7:58 AM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
>
>
> Who's handling construction of those events? Is Steyer available? Have we roped in Ragone?

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: Walzak, Phil; B; FLONYC
Cc: Carey, Michael; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Rolling Stone
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 8:44:47 AM

Already have request in.

From: Walzak, Phil
Sent: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 08:41 AM
To: Hagelgans, Andrea; B; FLONYC
Cc: Carey, Michael; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Rolling Stone

Can we see if we can get them adv copy? This might be fortuitous

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
Sent: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 08:39 AM
To: B; FLONYC
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Carey, Michael; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Rolling Stone

Reporter was wrong. Looks like it pops tomorrow. Will try and see what time so we can heads up morning joe

From: B
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 07:14 PM
To: Hagelgans, Andrea; FLONYC
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Carey, Michael; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Rolling Stone

Cool. Thanks

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 07:10 PM
To: B; FLONYC
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Carey, Michael; John Del cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Rolling Stone

Sir,

Reminder that Rolling Stone profile piece hits newsstands tomorrow. We'll be on the lookout and will circulate when it pops.

Best,
Andrea

From: John Del Cecato
To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; B; FLONYC
Cc: Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Rolling Stone
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 9:42:00 AM

RKK working on it

From: <Walzak>, Phil <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Tuesday, May 5, 2015 at 8:41 AM
To: "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>, FLONYC <FLONYC@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: Rolling Stone

Can we see if we can get them adv copy? This might be fortuitous

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
Sent: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 08:39 AM
To: B; FLONYC
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Carey, Michael; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Rolling Stone

Reporter was wrong. Looks like it pops tomorrow. Will try and see what time so we can heads up morning joe

From: B
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 07:14 PM
To: Hagelgans, Andrea; FLONYC
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Carey, Michael; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Rolling Stone

Cool. Thanks

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
Sent: Monday, May 04, 2015 07:10 PM
To: B; FLONYC
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Carey, Michael; John Del cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Rolling Stone

Sir,

Reminder that Rolling Stone profile piece hits newsstands tomorrow. We'll be on the lookout and will circulate when it pops.

Best,
Andrea

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: "Hayley Prim"; John Del Cecato; jeani murray; John Davis; Aaron Pickrell
Subject: RE: Game Plan Today
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 10:20:55 AM

Durazo locked in for signature and attendance. Saenz got the document last night , hope to lock down his signature today; he CANNOT be in DC on 12th. Waiting to hear back from Narasaki.

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:████████████████████]
Sent: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 10:04 AM
To: John Del Cecato; jeani murray; John Davis; Aaron Pickrell; Snyder, Thomas Subject: Game Plan Today

Let's do everything we can to lock these people in today and make the boss happy.

Davis have you reached out to the CPC folks who were on the call last night? If you haven't, I'm happy to take that on today. Let me know!

John Lewis-- Hayley

Mary Kay Henry-- Aaron
Tom Steyer-- Aaron

Janet Murguia-- Davis
Tammy Baldwin-- Davis
Linda Sanchez--Davis
Jeff Merkley-- Davis

Tom Harkin-- Jeani/Davis

Jim Hoffa-- Jeani
Bill Moyers-- Jeani

Tom Saenz-- Tom
Karen Naraski--Tom
Maria Elana Durazo-- Tom

--
Hayley Prim
c: ██████████

From: John Del Cecato
To: B; Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma
Subject: Re: Please review quickly
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 10:24:10 AM

Also - note that they will not/cannot reference Stiglitz report, as they have no way of looking into crystal ball & confirming that - and they can't take our word for what will be in Stiglitz document. Bummer, but acceptable.

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Date: Tuesday, May 5, 2015 at 10:23 AM
To: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Wolfe, Emma" <FWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Please review quickly

A few notes... The folks at the WashPost cut our references to Fight for 15... They cut a bunch of other stuff too (none of it essential). All of this was done for space considerations. The gist of the op-ed is still totally in tact.

We need sign off by noon today at the latest. I'm fine with it as is. Everybody else okay? If so, I will get the "agreement" for Phil to sign (I think it should be him & not me).

From: Dan Geldon <[REDACTED]>
Date: Tuesday, May 5, 2015 at 10:17 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Fwd: edited text

Hi John - can you review asap and fill out the agreement? We are on a tight fuse it looks like. They want to hear back by noon apparently.

Begin forwarded message:

From: "Rose, Lacey (Warren)" <Lacey_Rose@warren.senate.gov>
Date: May 5, 2015 at 9:38:01 AM EDT
To: "Myers, Mindy (Warren)" <Mindy_Myers@warren.senate.gov>, "[REDACTED]" <[REDACTED]>
Subject: FW: edited text

From: Larabee, Michael [<mailto:Michael.Larabee@washpost.com>]
Sent: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 9:26 AM
To: Rose, Lacey (Warren)

Subject: edited text

Lacey, here's text after my edit. Can you look it over and let me know if you see any problems? Length was a concern, and it needed to move more quickly into their program, so I tightened up the history section at the top. I don't think we lost anything of substance, and you can see many trims in brackets and caps. I also had to trim out the reference to the Stiglitz report -- there's just no way for us or readers to evaluate report that isn't actually out yet.

Please make any changes in all caps, and I'll send it to be copy-edited as soon as I have your reply. Would be good if we could do that by noon. Later in the day we'll run into daily copy, and it will force some of the work to tomorrow, which will delay publication.

Best,
Mike

by Elizabeth Warren and Bill de Blasio

In this land of big dreams, there was never a dream bigger or more important than the one so deeply rooted in our values that it became known as the American Dream. Across generations, [NOTES:AND GEOGRAPHY,] Americans shared the belief that hard work would bring opportunity and a better life. [NOTES:FOR EVERYONE.] America wasn't perfect, but we invested in our kids and put in place policies to build a strong middle class.

We don't do that anymore, and the result is clear: The rich get richer, while everyone else falls behind. The game is rigged, and the people who rigged it want it to stay that way. They claim that if we act to improve the economic well-being of hard-working Americans - whether by increasing the minimum wage, reining in lawbreakers on Wall Street or doing practically anything else - we will threaten economic growth.

They are wrong.

That thinking is backwards. [NOTES:; AND A NEW REPORT FROM ECONOMIST JOSEPH E. STIGLITZ AND THE ROOSEVELT INSTITUTE IS EXPECTED TO PROVIDE MORE EVIDENCE OF THAT NEXT WEEK.] [NOTES:IN FACT,] [NOTES:AS A GROWING BODY OF RESEARCH SHOWS,] An increasing disparity between rich and poor, cronyism and an economic system [NOTES:AN ECONOMY] that works only for those at the [NOTES:VERY] top are bad for the middle class and bad for our economy.

When the economy works for everyone, consumers have money to spend at businesses, and when businesses have more customers they build more factories, hire more workers and sell more products - and the economy grows. [NOTES: BUT WHEN CUSTOMERS DON'T HAVE MONEY, THEY CAN'T BUY, AND THAT MEANS BUSINESSES CAN'T GROW.] For decades, our economy was built around this core understanding. [NOTES: WE EMBRACED THE IDEA THAT WE WERE ALL IN THIS TOGETHER.] We made big investments in the things that would create opportunities for everyone: public schools and universities; roads and bridges and power grids; research that spurred new industries, [NOTES: NEW] technologies - and [NOTES: NEW] jobs - here in America. We supported strong unions that pushed for better wages and working conditions, seeing those unions improve lives both for their [NOTES: OWN] members and for workers everywhere, union or not.

And it worked. From the 1930s to the late 1970s, as GDP went up, wages increased more or less across the board. [NOTES: IN FACT, 90 PERCENT OF ALL WORKERS GOT ABOUT 70 PERCENT OF ALL NEW INCOME GROWTH. SURE, THE RICHEST 10 PERCENT GOBBLED UP MORE THAN THEIR SHARE, BUT OVERALL,] As the economic pie got bigger, pretty much everyone was getting a little more. That was how America built a great middle class.

And then in the early 1980s, a new theory swept the country. Its disciples claimed that if government policies took care of the rich and powerful, wealth would trickle down for everyone else. [NOTES: IN SHORT ORDER,] Trickle-down believers cut taxes sharply for those at the top and pushed for "deregulation" that hobbled the cops on Wall Street and let the most powerful corporations far too often do as they pleased.

Trickle-down economics failed disastrously. The rich and powerful have become richer and more powerful, while everyone else has been left behind. In the past [NOTES: LAST] 35 years, the top 10 percent got all the growth in income. [NOTES: - ALL OF IT.] The rest of America - 90 percent of Americans - got nothing. Zip. Zero.

Government policies matter and can make a difference. Strengthening the American dream is about the basics:

|

Make work pay by increasing the minimum wage, empowering unions to bargain collectively, ending abusive scheduling practices for hourly workers, getting people the overtime pay they deserve, ensuring equal pay for equal work, and making sure employers follow the law and respect the rights of workers.

|
End the squeeze on working parents by passing a paid family leave requirement and investing in child care, after-school programs and extended learning days. Let families with children have a chance to balance careers with quality time together.

|
Ensure everyone can get a great education without drowning in debt. Rein in the cost of college and allow families to refinance student loans at lower rates. Give every child [NOTES:IN AMERICA] access to full-day pre-kindergarten. Education is still the best ticket to the middle class.

|
Focus on research and innovation needed to develop the technologies of the future.
Investments in medical and scientific research let us build whole new industries and give us the chance to create good jobs right here in America.

|
Invest in infrastructure - in roads, bridges, rail, water, power and broadband. Businesses
[NOTES:-AND THE JOBS THEY CREATE-] can't grow if the foundation crumbles beneath them. A 21st-century economy needs 21st-century infrastructure.

|
Strengthen and expand Social Security, not just for today's seniors, but for today's young people. Work is changing. A strong Social Security system will ensure that every worker, no matter the number of jobs they piece together during their careers, can count on a secure retirement.

|
Strengthen the rules of the marketplace. We don't build a future by turning the biggest banks loose to do whatever they want, and markets don't create value when corporations can [NOTES:DELIBERATELY] cheat people or roll over their upstart competition.

|

Promote fair trade by embracing [NOTES: - EMBRACE] only those [NOTES:THE] trade policies that strengthen our economy, create good jobs with good wages and establish fair rules of the road for companies around the world. Our trade agreements shouldn't help multinational companies gut environmental, health and safety standards here and abroad under the guise of promoting commerce.

|

Reform the tax code by ending [NOTES:: END] the billions in tax breaks for corporations shipping jobs overseas and [NOTES:THE ] big oil companies, while [NOTES:AND] leveling [NOTES:LEVEL] the playing field so that millionaires and billionaires pay their fair share. [NOTES:THE DEMAND FOR CHANGE IS UNMISTAKABLE. JUST LAST MONTH, 60,000 WORKERS IN 200 CITIES TOOK TO
THE STREETS TO FIGHT FOR A HIGHER MINIMUM WAGE.]

Rebuilding our middle class won't be easy, but real change rarely is. It's time to be bold.

The American dream depends on it.

Elizabeth Warren (D-Mass.) is a member of the U.S. Senate. Bill de Blasio (D) is mayor of New York.

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma Subject: Re: Please review quickly
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 10:25:14 AM

Works for me. Approved

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 10:24 AM
To: B; Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma
Subject: Please review quickly

A few notes... The folks at the WashPost cut our references to Fight for 15... They cut a bunch of other stuff too (none of it essential). All of this was done for space considerations. The gist of the op-ed is still totally in tact.

We need sign off by noon today at the latest. I'm fine with it as is. Everybody else okay? If so, I will get the "agreement" for Phil to sign (I think it should be him & not me).

From: Dan Geldon <[REDACTED]>
Date: Tuesday, May 5, 2015 at 10:17 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Fwd: edited text

Hi John - can you review asap and fill out the agreement? We are on a tight fuse it looks like. They want to hear back by noon apparently.

Begin forwarded message:

From: "Rose, Lacey (Warren)" <Lacey_Rose@warren.senate.gov>
Date: May 5, 2015 at 9:38:01 AM EDT
To: "Myers, Mindy (Warren)" <Mindy_Myers@warren.senate.gov>, "[REDACTED]" <[REDACTED]>
Subject: FW: edited text

From: Larabee, Michael [<mailto:Michael.Larabee@washpost.com>]
Sent: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 9:26 AM
To: Rose, Lacey (Warren)
Subject: edited text

Lacey, here's text after my edit. Can you look it over and let me know if you see any problems? Length was a concern, and it needed to move more quickly into their program, so I tightened up the history section at the top. I don't think we lost anything of substance, and you can see may trims in brackets and caps. I also had to trim out the reference to the Stiglitz report -- there's just no way for us or readers to evaluate report that isn't actually out yet.

Please make any changes in all caps, and I'll send it to be copy-edited as soon as I have your reply. Would be good if we could do that by noon. Later in the day we'll run into daily copy, and it will force some of the work to tomorrow, which will delay publication.

Best,
Mike

by Elizabeth Warren and Bill de Blasio

In this land of big dreams, there was never a dream bigger or more important than the one so deeply rooted in our values that it became known as the American Dream. Across generations, [NOTES:AND GEOGRAPHY,] Americans shared the belief that hard work would bring opportunity and a better life. [NOTES:FOR EVERYONE.] America wasn't perfect, but we invested in our kids and put in place policies to build a strong middle class.

We don't do that anymore, and the result is clear: The rich get richer, while everyone else falls behind. The game is rigged, and the people who rigged it want it to stay that way. They claim that if we act to improve the economic well-being of hard-working Americans - whether by increasing the minimum wage, reining in lawbreakers on Wall Street or doing practically anything else - we will threaten economic growth.

They are wrong.

That thinking is backwards. [NOTES:; AND A NEW REPORT FROM ECONOMIST JOSEPH E. STIGLITZ AND THE ROOSEVELT INSTITUTE IS EXPECTED TO PROVIDE MORE EVIDENCE OF THAT NEXT WEEK.] [NOTES:IN FACT,] [NOTES:AS A GROWING BODY OF RESEARCH SHOWS,] An increasing disparity between rich and poor, cronyism and an economic system [NOTES:AN ECONOMY] that works only for those at the [NOTES:VERY] top are bad for the middle class and bad for our economy.

When the economy works for everyone, consumers have money to spend at businesses, and when businesses have more customers they build more factories, hire more workers and sell more products - and the economy grows. [NOTES: BUT WHEN CUSTOMERS DON'T HAVE MONEY, THEY CAN'T BUY, AND THAT MEANS BUSINESSES CAN'T GROW.] For decades, our economy was built around this core understanding. [NOTES: WE EMBRACED THE IDEA THAT WE WERE ALL IN THIS TOGETHER.] We made big investments in the things that would create opportunities for everyone: public schools and universities; roads and bridges and power grids; research that spurred new industries, [NOTES: NEW] technologies - and [NOTES: NEW] jobs - here in America. We supported strong unions that pushed for better wages and working conditions, seeing those unions improve lives both for their [NOTES: OWN] members and for workers everywhere, union or not.

And it worked. From the 1930s to the late 1970s, as GDP went up, wages increased more or less across the board. [NOTES: IN FACT, 90 PERCENT OF ALL WORKERS GOT ABOUT 70 PERCENT OF ALL NEW INCOME GROWTH. SURE, THE RICHEST 10 PERCENT GOBBLED UP MORE THAN THEIR SHARE, BUT OVERALL,] As the economic pie got bigger, pretty much everyone was getting a little more. That was how America built a great middle class.

And then in the early 1980s, a new theory swept the country. Its disciples claimed that if government policies took care of the rich and powerful, wealth would trickle down for everyone else. [NOTES: IN SHORT ORDER,] Trickle-down believers cut taxes sharply for those at the top and pushed for "deregulation" that hobbled the cops on Wall Street and let the most powerful corporations far too often do as they pleased.

Trickle-down economics failed disastrously. The rich and powerful have become richer and more powerful, while everyone else has been left behind. In the past [NOTES: LAST] 35 years, the top 10 percent got all the growth in income. [NOTES: - ALL OF IT.] The rest of America - 90 percent of Americans - got nothing. Zip. Zero.

Government policies matter and can make a difference. Strengthening the American dream is about the basics:

|
Make work pay by increasing the minimum wage, empowering unions to bargain collectively, ending abusive scheduling practices for hourly workers, getting people the overtime pay they deserve, ensuring equal pay for equal work, and making sure employers follow the law and respect the rights of workers.

|

End the squeeze on working parents by passing a paid family leave requirement and investing in child care, after-school programs and extended learning days. Let families with children have a chance to balance careers with quality time together.

|

Ensure everyone can get a great education without drowning in debt. Rein in the cost of college and allow families to refinance student loans at lower rates. Give every child [NOTES:IN AMERICA] access to full-day pre-kindergarten. Education is still the best ticket to the middle class.

|

Focus on research and innovation needed to develop the technologies of the future. Investments in medical and scientific research let us build whole new industries and give us the chance to create good jobs right here in America.

|

Invest in infrastructure - in roads, bridges, rail, water, power and broadband. Businesses [NOTES:-AND THE JOBS THEY CREATE-] can't grow if the foundation crumbles beneath them. A 21st-century economy needs 21st-century infrastructure.

|

Strengthen and expand Social Security, not just for today's seniors, but for today's young people. Work is changing. A strong Social Security system will ensure that every worker, no matter the number of jobs they piece together during their careers, can count on a secure retirement.

|

Strengthen the rules of the marketplace. We don't build a future by turning the biggest banks loose to do whatever they want, and markets don't create value when corporations can [NOTES:DELIBERATELY] cheat people or roll over their upstart competition.

|

Promote fair trade by embracing [NOTES: - EMBRACE] only those [NOTES:THE] trade policies that strengthen our economy, create good jobs with good wages and establish fair rules of the road for companies around the world. Our trade agreements shouldn't help multinational companies gut environmental, health and safety standards here and abroad under the guise of promoting commerce.

|

Reform the tax code by ending [NOTES:: END] the billions in tax breaks for corporations shipping jobs overseas and [NOTES:THE] big oil companies, while [NOTES:AND] leveling [NOTES:LEVEL] the playing field so that millionaires and billionaires pay their fair share. [NOTES:THE DEMAND FOR CHANGE IS UNMISTAKABLE. JUST LAST MONTH, 60,000 WORKERS IN 200 CITIES TOOK TO THE STREETS TO FIGHT FOR A HIGHER MINIMUM WAGE.]

Rebuilding our middle class won't be easy, but real change rarely is. It's time to be bold.

The American dream depends on it.

Elizabeth Warren (D-Mass.) is a member of the U.S. Senate. Bill de Blasio (D) is mayor of New York.

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: "John Del Cecato"
Subject: RE: Game Plan Today
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 11:44:45 AM

Terrific. Sign? Attend? Or both?

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 10:49 AM
To: John Davis; Hayley Prim
Cc: jeani murray; Aaron Pickrell; Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Game Plan Today

Right on... Remind them that Mary Kay Henry is now on board

From: John Davis <[REDACTED]>
Reply-To: John Davis <[REDACTED]>
Date: Tuesday, May 5, 2015 at 10:34 AM
To: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, jeani murray <[REDACTED]> Aaron PickrellEmail <[REDACTED]> "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: Game Plan Today

I think Baldwin is almost there. I had a very good conversation with her Chief who I know pretty well.

Spoke with Merkley's scheduler. TPA is in the Senator's "book" today and she will be getting back to us soon. I sent her the updated version as well.

On Tuesday, May 5, 2015 10:27 AM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:

Got it. Sorry about Janet, I thought you mentioned that you knew her on the phone last week, but I can reach out to her.

On Tue, May 5, 2015 at 10:23 AM, John Davis <[REDACTED]> wrote:
Good morning all. Below are status updates on each of these.

Davis have you reached out to the CPC folks who were on the call last night? If you haven't, I'm happy to take that on today. Let me know! Brad Bauman (former CPC ED) and I did a call this morning. He has since sent a follow up email to all CPC offices. I will call through the Members who were on the call this morning. We will pick these folks up throughout the week but it is very likely we will get several Members showing up without RSVPing.

Janet Murguia-- Davis I am happy to call but I do not have a relationship with her or anyone at La Raza. Please instruct if you still want me as lead.

Tammy Baldwin-- Davis Her Chief of Staff and I just spoke. Her team had a discussion about TPA last night and is meeting with her this afternoon. I am supposed to hear back as soon as that meeting concludes.

Linda Sanchez--Davis I have not heard back from her staff.

Jeff Merkley-- Davis I have not heard back from his staff.

Tom Harkin-- Jeani/Davis Harkin cannot attend but he and I are speaking again this afternoon. I am sure he will add his name and he would like to do something else. Should we ask him to do an op-ed?

On Tuesday, May 5, 2015 10:04 AM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:

Let's do everything we can to lock these people in today and make the boss happy.

Davis have you reached out to the CPC folks who were on the call last night? If you haven't, I'm happy to take that on today. Let me know!

John Lewis-- Hayley

Mary Kay Henry-- Aaron
Tom Steyer-- Aaron

Janet Murguia-- Davis
Tammy Baldwin-- Davis
Linda Sanchez--Davis
Jeff Merkley-- Davis

Tom Harkin-- Jeani/Davis

Jim Hoffa-- Jeani
Bill Moyers-- Jeani

Tom Saenz-- Tom
Karen Naraski--Tom
Maria Elana Durazo-- Tom

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: B
Cc: Fuleihan, Dean \(OMB\); "ifdc@akpdmmedia.com"; Walzak, Phil; Carey, Michael; Snyder, Thomas; Shorris, Anthony
Subject: Fw: VOX: Kirsten Gillibrand and Rosa DeLauro have the best parental leave proposal in Congress today
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 11:58:38 AM

From: Clips
Sent: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 11:55 AM
Subject: VOX: Kirsten Gillibrand and Rosa DeLauro have the best parental leave proposal in Congress today

Kirsten Gillibrand and Rosa DeLauro have the best parental leave proposal in Congress today

VOX - Matthew Yglesias

<http://www.vox.com/2015/5/5/8552329/gillibrand-de-lauro-family-act>

Paid parental leave is a great benefit for new parents like me, and it makes a lot of sense for employers of higher-end workers (like Vox Media!) to offer it. But plenty of Americans aren't so fortunate in their current employment arrangements, and recently lots of Democrats have talked about getting the government involved in making sure more people can take leave. I've argued in the past that trying to accomplish this purely through a regulation can be a trap that ultimately leaves part-time workers, small-business employees, independent contractors, and other classes of vulnerable workers out in the cold.

Rep. Rosa DeLauro and Senator Kirsten Gillibrand already have a bill to do it the right way, with tax dollars and public spending — it's like Social Security, but for family leave. They call it the Family and Medical Insurance Leave Act, which they assert they can turn into an acronym and call the FAMILY Act even though there's clearly no Y in the title (maybe add a "Yeah!" to the end). It's a correctly designed, properly transparent version of a universal leave program. Parental leave is associated with significant benefits in terms of early childhood education and public health, meaning this is an investment comparable to public education that rightly makes a claim on public money.

Up to 12 weeks of leave at 66 percent pay

The basic benefit established by the FAMILY Act is a right to take as many as 12 weeks of leave, with the government paying you 66 percent of your normal wages (up to a maximum of around $1,500 a week) until you go back to work. Leave would be available for the birth or adoption of a new child, but it would also be flexible enough that you could use some of your time as pregnancy leave if your pregnancy situation leaves you unable to work for some of that time.

The burden on your employer would be that you are guaranteed to get your job back on nondiscriminatory terms when you are done with your leave.

But the cost of financially supporting you during your time off would be borne by taxes rather than by a specific regulation on your employer. The upside of that is it lets Gillibrand and DeLauro posit a truly universal program. The self-employed are covered. There's no exemption for small businesses. There's no incentive for companies to duck the rules by relying on contractors or perma-temps. It's like Social Security or Medicare — a program that is truly around for everyone who needs it.

Financed by a small increase in Social Security taxes

Right now, Social Security is financed by a 12.4 percent tax on the first $118,500 in wages earned (split formally into a 6.2 percent tax paid by employees and a 6.2 percent tax paid by employers).

The FAMILY Act would raise that to 6.4 percent on each side. Gillibrand and DeLauro argue that having the program run through the existing Social Security administration means it could be done without adding much in the way of new bureaucracy or infrastructure, with the vast majority of the taxes paid going to finance new benefits.

A continued role for employers

Right now, paid parental leave is something offered by employers as a way to attract talent — it's the same as paying above the minimum wage, offering a 401(k) match or paid vacation days, or any other job perk.

In a FAMILY Act world there is still room for employer-side action if you want to go out of your way to establish yourself as an unusually family-friendly workplace. For starters, there's that other 34 percent of your usual wages. Taking FAMILY Act leave with no further assistance would still be a significant financial sacrifice, and it's likely that many families would be unable to realistically use the full 12 weeks. Generous employers could offer to put leave-taking workers on one-third pay to supplement the two-thirds FAMILY Act benefit.

There is also the matter of the cap. In order to piggyback on Social Security infrastructure, the new taxes are only levied on the first $118,500 in wages (the same as Social Security taxes), which means the FAMILY Act only brings in enough revenue to make the two-thirds match for workers who earn less than $118,500 a year. If you earn $250,000 or $2.5 million you get the same weekly benefit as someone earning right at the cap. Obviously this is not a large segment of the workforce, nor one whose welfare the public needs to spend a lot of time worrying about, but employers of highly paid workers may well want to offer supplemental leave as a job benefit.

A subsidy for parents

The political peril of the FAMILY Act is that by structuring paid leave as a transparent, universal, tax-financed program it clarifies that universal leave is a subsidy to parents paid by non-parents. This, naturally, may not sit well in some quarters. On the one hand, a healthy share of the population is determinedly child-free. More important, a very large share of the population has had children in the past but has no plans for future children.

Older Americans are more politically conservative in general and more hostile to redistributive taxation in particular. Combine that with the fact that very few older people would benefit personally from a universal leave program, and you can expect plenty of public opposition.

But a subsidy makes sense. Paid leave policies are statistically linked to lower infant mortality rates, better cognitive test scores, and fewer behavioral problems for children, as well as fewer negative labor market consequences for mothers. Which is to say that, like the existence of public schools, a paid leave program isn't just a financial benefit for new parents — it's an investment in the longer-term success of the economy and the country's ability to thrive.

For American society to continue on into the future, people need to have children, and clearly on net, even in a FAMILY Act world it would be financially savvier to be childfree.

Sounds great — any chance of this happening?

Lol, no. Congressional Republicans are not going to agree to the creation of a broad tax hike to finance a massive new job-killing entitlement program.

The only politically interesting question is whether Democrats will be willing to sign on to a proposal that takes them out of their political safe space of taxing the rich and saddling large companies with unfunded mandates. The success of Social Security and Medicare show that universal programs funded through broad taxes can be political winners, but it's a bolder move than what the party's generally been willing to endorse in recent years.

Still, Hillary Clinton will presumably want to run on some kind of policy agenda at some point, and the leave issue is an excellent fit for her interests. If she's looking for a technically sound approach to leave for which to rally support in the longer term, she could do a lot worse than this proposal (her friends at the Center for American Progress like it).

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
To: B; FLONYC
Cc: "John Del Cecato"; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma
Subject: AP: Democrats to hold 6 debates during primary contest
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 12:39:08 PM

Democrats to hold 6 debates during primary contest

May. 5, 2015 12:08 PM EDT

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic National Committee will host six presidential primary debates, giving long-shot candidates a chance to challenge front-runner Hillary Rodham Clinton.

The DNC says each of the four states that hold an early primary or caucus will host a debate: Iowa, New Hampshire, Nevada and South Carolina. The location of the other two debates was not announced.

The first debate will take place this fall.

It's unclear how many candidates will be on the stage. Clinton is seen as the clear front-runner for the Democratic nomination and looks to have few primary challengers.

Vermont Sen. Bernie Sanders announced last week that he would seek the Democratic nomination. Former Maryland Gov. Martin O'Malley is also expected to run.

--

Mahen Gunaratna

Director of Research and Media Analysis
Mayor's Press Office | City Hall
mgunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov
(212) 676-3154 (o) | (347)-268-4295 (c)

From: Hayley Prim
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com; [REDACTED]; [REDACTED]; [REDACTED] Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: <no subject>
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 1:08:10 PM

Will do. Waiting on his scheduler to get back to me with best number.

On Tue, May 5, 2015 at 12:45 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Hayley pls get me his contact info

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 12:38 PM
To: B; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
<[REDACTED]> <[REDACTED]>
[REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: <no subject>

I think a call to Franken wouldn't hurt... His team is still digesting the document - so maybe a little friendly reminder that we'd like a yes on signing/appearing would help light a spark

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Tuesday, May 5, 2015 at 12:24 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Aaron PickrellEmail <[REDACTED]>
John Davis <[REDACTED]> Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
"[REDACTED]" <[REDACTED]> "Snyder, Thomas"
<TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: <no subject>

Excellent!! Well done! And now should I call Franken, or do you guys have it under control?

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 12:02 PM
To: B
Subject: <no subject>

Senator Merkley is in - signing & attending !

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: John Del Cecato
To: Hayley Prim; Gann, Georgia
Cc: Garcia Luna, Erick
Subject: Re:
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 3:10:07 PM

Hey Erick. Nice to e-meet you. Happy to chat on email or phone - numbers below. Thanks!

John F. Del Cecato
Partner/Creative Director
AKPD Message and Media
915 Broadway, Suite 1301
New York, NY 10010
212-529-5775 (office)
212-529-0545 (fax)
917 685 4819 (mobile)

From: Hayley Prim <hprim@hilltoppublicsolutions.com>
Date: Tuesday, May 5, 2015 at 2:59 PM
To: "Gann, Georgia" <GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: "Garcia Luna, Erick" <Erick.Garcia.Luna@minneapolismn.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: RE:

Hi Erick,

I think it would actually be best for you to connect directly with John del Cecato, who is working on The Progressive Agenda with me and is copied here. He can speak more in detail on the trade piece.

Let me know if I can be helpful moving forward. Thanks!

On Tue, May 5, 2015 at 1:09 PM, Gann, Georgia <GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Erick,

Connecting you here with Haley on the team. She will be able to go into more depth on the trade piece.

Georgia B. Gann
Senior Legislative Advisor
Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist
New York City Office of Federal Affairs
1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350
Tel. \(202\) 624-5912624-5912)

Cell. \(347\) 497-1740
ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov

-----Original Message-----

From: Garcia Luna, Erick [mailto:Erick.Garcia.Luna@Minneapolismn.gov]
Sent: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 11:46 AM
To: Gann, Georgia; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: RE:

Just got to my desk, call my cell phone when you have a minute.

Thank you!

Erick Garcia Luna
Senior Policy Aide - Economic Development

City of Minneapolis - Office of Mayor Betsy Hodges
350 S. Fifth St. - Suite 331
Minneapolis, MN 55415

Office: 612-673-2465
Cell: 612-352-7858
erick.garcia.luna@minneapolismn.gov

-----Original Message-----

From: Gann, Georgia [mailto:GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov]
Sent: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 10:28 AM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie; Garcia Luna, Erick
Subject: RE: RE:

Erick - yes, I was thinking EST, too. Let me know if you want to connect in a couple, or if a later time works better for you.

I'm at my desk: \(202\) 624-5912

Let's you and I connect and I can loop steph in later!

Georgia B. Gann
Senior Legislative Advisor

Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist New York City Office of Federal Affairs
1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350
Tel. \(202\) 624-5912624-5912)
Cell. \(347\) 497-1740497-1740)
ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov

-----Original Message-----

From: Yazgi, Stephanie
Sent: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 11:06 AM
To: Garcia Luna, Erick; Gann, Georgia
Subject: RE:

Was thinking EST.
Sorry...

From: Garcia Luna, Erick [Erick.Garcia.Luna@Minneapolismn.gov]
Sent: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 11:06 AM
To: Gann, Georgia
Cc: Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: Re: RE:

Is that CST?

Sent from my iPhone

> On May 5, 2015, at 10:01 AM, Gann, Georgia <GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

> I'm hopping on a call at 11 but one of us can connect after! Does 11:30 work for you? What's the best number?

>

> Georgia B. Gann

> Senior Legislative Advisor

> Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist New York City Office of

> Federal Affairs

> 1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350

> Tel. \(202\) 624-5912624-5912)

> Cell. \(347\) 497-1740497-1740)

> ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Garcia Luna, Erick [mailto:Erick.Garcia.Luna@Minneapolismn.gov]

> Sent: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 10:28 AM

> To: Gann, Georgia

> Subject:
>
> Can we talk about the progressive agenda in a few minutes?
>
> Sent from my iPhone

--

Hayley Prim

Hilltop Public Solutions

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: "John Del Cecato"
Subject: RE: DC
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 3:11:15 PM

OK. Since you want a videographer for the 12th (correct? As opposed to a still photographer), please find one locally so we can reduce our NY footprint. And can you inform Aaron of that change or should someone else?

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 3:03 PM
To: Snyder, Thomas
Cc: Hayley Prim; Sarah Hegeman
Subject: Re: DC

Hayley (who's at Hilltop) had someone who could film in lieu of Aaron, I believe.

I don't know what the needs were for 5/13. It could be that the mayor/Stephanie Yazgi would want someone to film that day too.

Another option is AKPD's producer, Sarah Hegeman, could find someone who's local to DC to shoot for us.

So there are a lot of options!

From: <Snyder>, Thomas <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Tuesday, May 5, 2015 at 2:58 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: DC

So with Aaron Cahan, does he need to stay overnight since he is dedicated to the May 12 action only. Alternatively, could Hilltop or akpd provide a videographer for reimbursement?

From: John Del Cecato
To: B; [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: Steyer and Reich
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 3:15:05 PM

Steyer not looking good. They say they've tried moving heaven & earth, but sked doesn't permit.

On 5/5/15, 7:57 AM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>Who's handling construction of those events? Is Steyer available? Have we >roped in Ragone?

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: "Hayley Prim"; John Del Cecato
Cc: Sarah Hegeman
Subject: RE: DC
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 3:20:00 PM

Ill chase it down with andrea. 9 is too many people to send to DC. If we need a videographer for the 12th, it seems we could reimburse Hilltop or someone locally for the cost, instead of adding to mayoral retinue.

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:████████████████████]
Sent: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 3:14 PM
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: Snyder, Thomas; Sarah Hegeman
Subject: Re: DC

Andrea confirmed that it was fine for the City Hall to send the official photog and videographer down for this, so I assumed they were treating this as an official Mayoral event.

What would the reimbursements be for?

If he is not needed for the 13th, then he does not need to stay over night, but that would need confirmation from Emma/Stephanie.

On Tue, May 5, 2015 at 3:02 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
Hayley (who's at Hilltop) had someone who could film in lieu of Aaron, I believe.

I don't know what the needs were for 5/13. It could be that the mayor/Stephanie Yazgi would want someone to film that day too.

Another option is AKPD's producer, Sarah Hegeman, could find someone who's local to DC to shoot for us.

So there are a lot of options!

From: <Snyder>, Thomas <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Tuesday, May 5, 2015 at 2:58 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: DC

So with Aaron Cahan, does he need to stay overnight since he is dedicated to the May 12 action only. Alternatively, could Hilltop or akpd provide a videographer for reimbursement?

--
Hayley Prim
c: ██████████

From: Hayley Prim
To: B; Snyder, Thomas; John Del Cecato; Aaron Pickrell; John Davis; jeani murray
Subject: May 5 Update: 55 Signers, 27 Confirmed Attendees
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 4:20:41 PM

Names in bold confirmed to attend.

New signing confirmations today include: Maria Elana Durazo- Unite Here, Mary Kay Henry- SEIU, Jeff Merkley- Senator, Jan Schakowsky- CPC Member, Raven Brooks- Netroots Nation, Alan Cumming, Gabriela Lemus- Progress Congress

Still trying to confirm John Lewis, Bill Moyers, Tom Harkin, Janet Murguia, Tammy Baldwin, Tom Steyer, Jim Hoffa, Linda Sanchez, Tom Saenz, Karen Naraski as well as several members of the CPC who you spoke to yesterday.

Next outreach from you as soon as we get solid time will be Gov. Mark Dayton, Gov. Peter Shumlin, Sen. Sheldon Whitehouse, Cong. Barney Frank, as well as any cultural figures we can get movement on.

Campaign for America's Future	Co-Director	Robert	Borosage
Fiscal Policy Institute	Deputy Director and Chief Economist	James	Parrott
The Wessel Group	President	Michael	Wessel
Economic Policy Institute	Senior Economist	Eileen	Appelbaum
Center for Economic and Policy Research	Co-Director	Dean	Baker
Netroots Nation	Executive Director	Raven	Brooks
	Actor	Steve	Buscemi
	Actor	Alan	Cumming
Philanthropist/ Fimmaker		Abigail	Disney
Economic Policy Institute	Founder	Jeff	Faux
	Actress	Cynthia	Nixon
University of California at Berkley	Chancellor's Professor	Robert	Reich
	Actor	Mark	Ruffalo
Columbia University	Economist/Director of Earth Institute	Jeff	Sachs
EffectiveNY	Chairman	Bill	Samuels
Actress		Susan	Sarandon
Unite Here	President	D	Taylor
Childrens Defense Fund	President/Founder	Marian	Wright Edelman
United for a Fair Economy	Executive Director	Jeannette	Huezo
Center for Media and

Democracy	Executive Director	Lisa	Graves
Inequality.org	Managing Editor	Marjorie	Wood
Dream Corps Unlimited		Van	Jones
Economic Policy Institute	President	Lawrence	Mishel
New Jersey	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Bonnie	Watson Coleman
AFL-CIO	President	Richard	Trumka
The Nation	Editor	Katrina	Vanden Heuvel
SEIU	President	Mary Kay	Henry
Communities for Change	Executive Director	Deepak	Bhargava
New York	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Yvette	Clarke
National Low Income Housing Coalition	President	Sheila	Crowley
Former Governor/Democracy for America	Founder	Howard	Dean
Connecticut	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Rosa	DeLauro
Unite Here	Former President, LA County	Maria Elena	Durazo
Minnesota	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Keith	Ellison
Pennsylvania	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Chaka	Fattah
Steelworkers	President	Leo	Gerard
SEIU 1199	President	George	Gresham
Arizona	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Raul	Grijalva
Texas	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Sheila	Jackson-Lee
Progressive Congress	President	Gabriela	Lemus
Progressive Strategies	Director	Mike	Lux
Demos	Executive Director	Heather	McGhee
Massachusetts	U.S. Rep, PC Member	James	McGovern
Oregon	U.S. Senator	Jeff	Merkley
New York	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Jerry	Nadler
Young Democrats of America	President	Atima	Omara
AFSCME	President	Lee	Saunders
Illinois	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Jan	Schakowsky
NAN	President	Al	Sharpton
NEA	President	Lily	Garcia
AFT	President	Randi	Weingarten
Dayton	Mayor	Nan	Whaley
	Author	Linda	Tirado

Progress Now	Executive Director	Arshad	Hasan
CWA	President	Larry	Cohen

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: B; FLONYC
Cc: Walzak, Phil; John Del Cecato \(jfdc@akpdmedia.com\); Leopold, Elana
Subject: Rolling Stone profile
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 4:23:37 PM
Attachments: R1235_DEBLASIO1.pdf

Attached please find the Rolling Stone article (embargoed till tomorrow but we know Morning Joe has it). I have a printed copy for you.

Overall, I think it is strong. It makes the point clear that you are committed to engaging in a national conversation on a progressive vision/values and it also allows a bit of insight into your background and the influence your history has on your ideological positions (ex. going to Nicaragua, etc)

Since I know you will ask, the one downside is that I wish the reporter had not spent so much time on Bloomberg v. de Blasio and spent more time actually talking substantively about the programs this administration is pursuing. Pre-K, affordable housing, etc is too much of a side note. But, then again, it is Rolling Stone magazine.

It gets your message across and tomorrow we can hammer it home p.s. The First Lady is called a "radical feminist", which I LOVE!!!!

Andrea Hagelgans
Office of the Mayor
Direct – 212.341.5372
Cell – 718.679.8965
ahagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov

The Mayor

NATIONAL AMBITIONS
De Blasio is launching a progressive version of the “Contract With America.”

Bill de Blasio is trying to remake America’s biggest city – and he doesn’t plan to stop there

By Mark Binelli

ONE AFTERNOON IN early April, New York Mayor Bill de Blasio strode onto the back porch of Gracie Mansion, the Upper East Side mayoral residence, to bask in the city’s first truly warm day of spring. It had been an exacting winter, and as de Blasio folded his long frame into a wicker chair, he announced merrily, “It’s my first outdoor meeting of 2015!” When the weather suits, the mayor likes to do business out here, taking advantage of the spectacular view of the East River and the Triborough Bridge. A pair of soccer nets have been set up on the lawn, where de Blasio and his wife, Chirlane McCray, occasionally kick a ball around with their son, Dante, a high school senior.

At six feet five, de Blasio is the tallest mayor in New York’s history, and most chairs aren’t exactly built to fit his kind. Seated, he often winds up looking crouched and angular, as if he’s mentally readying himself for an especially difficult yoga pose. At political events, where he’s required to stand beside other speakers or greet constituents, he has the courteous giant’s habit of stooping slightly. His rhetorical focus can make him seem intense: His hooded eyes and hawkish features conjure a bird of prey, and his voice, despite its swallowed timbre, has a tough, prosecutorial edge. But the intensity is undercut by an ever-present air of mild distraction, and by the goofy Brooklyn-dad side of de Blasio that occasionally emerges in public settings.

’s Crusade

Earlier that afternoon, de Blasio had convened a closed-door meeting of national progressive thought leaders and elected officials. There was Sherrod Brown, the populist senator from Ohio, and Connecticut Gov. Dannel Malloy. The novelist Toni Morrison showed up, delighting de Blasio and McCray. Other attendees included Katrina vanden Heuvel, editor of The Nation; Arizona Congressman Raúl Grijalva, chair of the House Progressive Caucus; and Van Jones, a former Obama adviser. They'd all come together to begin work on a new version of the "Contract With America," only this one would be a product of the left, focusing on economic policies – a set of line-in-the-sand principles frustrated by what they saw as the thwarted hopes, tactical errors, compromises and outright betrayals of the Obama administration, the ascension of one of their own to one of the highest-profile elected offices in the country made for a momentous, potentially thrilling development. Just as past mayors had taken advantage of New York's unique status as a cultural and media capital to globalize their agendas – think of the far-reaching influence of Bloomberg-era public-health policies like the smoking ban, or the way Giuliani exploited his reputation for "cleaning up" the city by starting a lucrative international consulting firm specializing in security and policing – could de Blasio use the singular platform provided by his new position to showcase, as brightly as a Times Square billboard, the civic benefits of unfettered liberalism?

If judged on his ability to deliver on ambitious campaign promises, even de organized and spontaneous, from Wall Street to the state government in Albany. Wealthy backers of charter schools broadsided de Blasio with a brutal television advertising blitz after he attempted to slow down the expansion of a hedge-fund-backed charter operation with a mixed track record but impressively high testing scores. (The mayor blinked.) Meanwhile, New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo, a centrist Democrat, seemed to relish undermining, and at times humiliating, the mayor at every turn, killing de Blasio's proposed tax on rich New Yorkers and siding with the charter-school backers. "Historically, the relationship between mayor and governor is worse when the two are in the same party," notes Clyde Haberman, a former New York Times metro columnist who has covered city politics since the 1960s. "It's about who is the alpha male in town. And here, it's Cuomo."

And then there was the death last July of Eric Garner, an unarmed 43-year-old black man from Staten Island whose only crime was selling "loosie" cigarettes. To many observers, the video of Garner being choked to the ground by an NYPD officer looked unambiguously like state-sanctioned murder. De Blasio's refusal to denounce the protests that followed, and the subsequent assassination of two police officers in Brooklyn by a deranged Maryland man, resulted in open warfare with noxious Patrolman's Benevolent Association President Patrick Lynch (who said de Blasio had "blood on the hands") and rank insubordination by a number of NYPD officers (who turned their backs on de Blasio at the funerals of the murdered officers and later staged a work slowdown, during which the number of arrests and tickets issued plummeted).

The cumulative effect of this series of battles, large and small, has been to reduce the mayor in some ways, and certainly to distract from his administration's very real accomplishments – which de Blasio himself acknowledges. "A lot of people outside New York City understand what happened in the first year of New York City better than people in New York City," he tells me during a second Gracie Mansion interview. "But I'm convinced something very special happened here."

It's funny, in a perverse sort of way: That socialist-boogeyman version of Barack Obama the American right has spent the past eight years whispering darkly about? Fiction, of course. Our president has largely governed as a moderate consensus-builder. The executive-branch officeholder who comes closest to the caricature is actually Bill de Blasio. But for some reason, despite possessing a CV that could have been written by Sean Hannity's id – traveling to Nicaragua as a 26-year-old to support the Sandinistas, that progressives, and their candidates in 2016, could rally around. It was a surprising choice of inspiration for de Blasio, the mission's unlikely Danny Ocean: Looking to rejuvenate the Democratic Party, he'd turned not to Bill Clinton, whose strategy of triangulation the mayor openly repudiates, but Newt Gingrich.

“He’s the furthest-left mayor by far,” says one observer. “I don’t think people realized what an ideologue he was.”

"Look, the New Democrat approach, from my point of view, didn't work," de Blasio told me that afternoon. "That governing approach didn't stop the progression that led us to a thoroughly Republican House and now Senate, and a national debate that doesn't even address the real issues. The economic crisis of today – the only parallel is the Great Depression. That's just a fact. The difference is, there's no light at the end of the tunnel now."

For five terms, supposedly liberal New York had been governed by a Republican (Rudolph Giuliani) and a quasi-Republican independent (Michael Bloomberg). So when a full-throated progressive like de Blasio bounded into City Hall in 2014 with an astounding 73 percent of votes in the general election, it felt like more than simply a mandate for local change. To leftists Democrats around the country, long Blasio's sharpest critics acknowledge he's been successful. State Assemblyman Joe Borelli, a Republican who represents the most conservative district in New York, Staten Island's South Shore, admits, "The mayor has been very forthright. He campaigned on a platform of ideological values – albeit, they're not mine – but he was very honest, and he's delivering." Only 16 months into his term, de Blasio has expanded paid sick leave and won a hard-fought battle to secure free full-day universal pre-K (huge boons for working families), dialed back the NYPD's stop-and-frisk policy and effectively decriminalized possession of small amounts of marijuana (both of which had a massively disproportionate effect on young men of color), launched the largest municipal-ID-card program in the country (allowing undocumented New Yorkers to more easily open bank accounts, rent apartments and access hospitals and schools), and announced a $41 billion plan to build or preserve 200,000 units of affordable housing over the next 10 years (eclipsing Bloomberg's 12-year record of 165,000 new or preserved affordable-housing units).

Despite these considerable achievements, however, the story line of de Blasio's Year One has been consistently undercut by establishment pushback, both Contributing editor MARK BINELLI profiled George Clinton last issue.

Progressive Hope

(1) As a young activist, de Blasio volunteered in Nicaragua, coming home with "a vision... of an unfettered leftist government." (2) In 2000, he ran Clinton's Senate race. (3) With his family after winning the mayoral election in 2013. (4) As mayor, he clashed with the NYPD, with some turning their backs to him at an officer's funeral.

1 3

2

4

get my job done unless the whole country comes along; you respond to that." Shortly before de Blasio's Meet the Press appearance, Chicago Mayor Rahm Emanuel, a centrist alumnus of the Clinton and Obama administrations, had endured a surprisingly feisty primary challenge from the left. "Rahm Emanuel is a historic figure, and he got drug into a runoff by somebody who I had never heard of," Jones says. "That lets you know where that wing of the party is when it comes to the people who cast their ballot. Whatever mistakes or missteps, de Blasio is a beloved figure in this party, and Rahm is on thin ice, and that gives you a little bit of the taste of the future for this party."

Veteran political watchers like Haberman are more skeptical. "He's the furthest-left mayor that I can think of, by far," he says. "I don't think a lot of people realized what an ideologue he was. But I do wonder what he's doing running off to Iowa and Wisconsin giving speeches. I would also point out that the last elected mayor of New York to rise to a higher office was John Thompson Hoffman, who was elected governor in 1868. Not a great record of success."

Another prominent progressive, wishing to remain anonymous, also sounds a note of caution, despite sharing de Blasio's stated goals. "I say this with great sympathy, but it's going to be tough for him. The reason people love Elizabeth Warren is not because of her words – even though they are great words – but because they've seen her stand up to power. With de Blasio, we haven't really seen that fight yet. Anyone can talk about inequality. Marco Rubio can talk about inequality! But everyone's tired of just words at this point."

IN A BIOGRAPHICAL DETAIL that sounds lifted from a fable, de Blasio was born across the street from Gracie Mansion, in a now-shuttered hospital specializing in births by older mothers. It was 1961, and both of his parents were 44: They'd met at Time magazine, where his father, Warren Wilhelm, worked as a business reporter and his mother, Maria Angela de Blasio, the daughter of immigrants from a village outside of Naples, had a job as a research assistant. The name on Mayor de Blasio's birth certificate is, in fact, Warren Wilhelm Jr., which makes him sound like he should be foreclosing on a family-run bank in an old Jimmy Stewart movie. But de Blasio's parents always called him Bill, being married to a radical feminist (and once-identified lesbian) by a pair of gay ministers, honeymooning in Cuba, belonging to no particular church, creating an entire department of community organizers while serving as New York's public advocate – de Blasio has never quite joined the ranks of A-list Fox News supervillainy. On the progressive left, too, it's been the far more charismatic Massachusetts Sen. Elizabeth Warren who has captured the imagination of the grass roots and become the object of their "any-one but Hillary" fantasies.

But in recent months, de Blasio's team has aggressively moved to raise his profile. Case in point: A few hours before Hillary Clinton announced her 2016 presidential candidacy, de Blasio – her former campaign manager! – appeared on Meet the Press and said that he wasn't quite ready to endorse anybody yet. De Blasio had been one year shy of 40 when he ran Clinton's 2000 Senate campaign. Before that, his highest-profile assignment had been working for her husband's Department of Housing and Urban Development (under Andrew Cuomo). De Blasio had also just won an election of his own – on his local Brooklyn school board. He stood out as someone "motivated by a very authentic core set of beliefs," recalls Howard Wolfson, the 2000 Senate race's campaign spokesman. But it's safe to say that no one guessed he would one day be trying to make himself the head of "the Democratic wing of the Democratic Party," to borrow a phrase from Howard Dean – let alone be stepping all over his former boss's carefully scripted campaign launch in a very deliberate effort to push her, and the party she hopes to lead in 2016, as far to the left as possible.

"You've got to remember, we see Mayor de Blasio as one of us," Van Jones tells me. "We see him as a grassroots campaigner. And when somebody comes out of our movement and becomes the mayor of the capital of the world, and then says, 'I can't and his father, who had become an alcoholic after returning from World War II, where he lost part of a leg during the Battle of Okinawa, left the family when Bill was only seven years old.

PREVIOUS SPREAD: KEVIN MAZUR/GETTY IMAGES; THIS PAGE, CLOCKWISE FROM TOP LEFT: TODD HANSEL/POLARIS; MATHY WILLENS/AP IMAGES; MARK PETERSON/REDDUX; KATRINA HAJAGOS

By senior year in high school, de Blasio had changed his last name, which he made official in 1983, writing in a court application, "Due to my parents' divorce when I was eight, I was brought up essentially by my mother and her family. These individuals and their Italian heritage has been the single most important influence on my life." Four years earlier, de Blasio's father, dying of lung cancer, had committed suicide, shooting himself in the chest with a shotgun. "I had just turned 18," de Blasio told WNYC, New York's public-radio station, in the only interview in which he's spoken about his father's death. "I remember very vividly not going in to identify the body. I just didn't feel up to that. My broth-tics started early: in sixth grade, when he found himself yelling at Nixon's face on the family television. "My oldest brother, Steven, was a very active anti-war protester during Vietnam," de Blasio tells me. "It was so much the water I swam in." He did his best to draw fellow teenagers into becoming active in high school government, though the future mayor admitted to the Globe, "I get discouraged sometimes.... I don't get into yelling at people, so I have a lot of pent-up feelings, but I go jogging or listen to music, soft rock or opera."

When de Blasio moved to New York that year to attend New York University, he considered himself "sort of a junior progressive activist at that point," he says, in particular focusing on the anti-nuclear-power movement, the meltdown at Three Mile Island having just occurred. New York had also recently come close to declaring bankruptcy, and the colorful Ed Koch was mayor. "It

American politics, de Blasio took a job as a political organizer at the Quixote Center, a social-justice organization rooted in radical Catholic liberation theology, and later engaged in protests designed to raise awareness about U.S. foreign policy. "I'm a big believer in street theater," he says. At one action, de Blasio and other members of his group wore George H.W. Bush masks and "had this little skit in the middle of a subway car where we pretended to be having a board meeting. It was, 'Let's invade Central America on behalf of the wealthy and powerful! Isn't that a great idea?'" When he was 26, de Blasio took a 10-day humanitarian trip to Sandinist-era Nicaragua, where he delivered food and medicine and, according to The New York Times, "took painstaking notes on encounters with farmers, doctors and revolutionary fighters," eventually coming home with "a vision of the possibilities of an unfettered leftist government."

Not long after his Nicaragua trip, de Blasio went to work for David Dinkins, the first African-American mayor of New York – and, as it would turn out, the last liberal mayor of New York until de Blasio's own election. It was at City Hall where de Blasio met and fell in love with McCray, who was working in the press office. Give him points for persistence: McCray, a poet and activist, had been in several long-term relationships with women at that point, and early in the initially one-sided courtship, she gave him a copy of a seven-page article she'd written for Essence in 1979 titled "I Am a Lesbian" (Cover line: "BEYOND FEAR – Lesbian Speaks!"). De Blasio prevailed in this early underdog campaign, however, and the couple were married in 1994. They now have two children. (Their daughter, Chiara, is a junior at Santa Clara University in California.)

“The New Deal was a bold action addressing people’s reality. Today, there’s nothing – it’s the anti-New Deal.”

er Steven volunteered to do it.... It has to be understood against the backdrop of years and years of things just getting worse and worse. On the one hand, it was a shock. On the other hand, it wasn't a shock at all."

From his mother's family, though, de Blasio not only inherited a rich Italian heritage but also a political one. They lived in Cambridge, Massachusetts, where his parents had moved before their divorce. (The mayor of New York is a huge Red Sox fan who has bragged to The Boston Globe that he can "name you more [Sox] players than you can possibly imagine.") Because of his parents' age, de Blasio, unlike his peers, grew up hearing stories about the Depression and the New Deal. "It's almost like we skipped a generation," he says. "We would have these family gatherings, and everyone would be around the table, and it felt like there were two empty chairs for Franklin Roosevelt and [progressive New York mayor] Fiorello La Guardia. There was a reverence for them in our family. I was steeped in the notion that you take heart from a government that is trying with all its might to find a solution for you."

According to a profile of de Blasio that ran in The Boston Globe in 1979, when he was only 17 (and already working at the Massachusetts Department of Education as a student liaison), his interest in politics wasn't quite Taxi Driver, but it was really messed up," de Blasio recalls. "Washington Square Park was pleasantly zoo-ish, and entirely a drug market. Union Square felt absolutely unsafe. I personally never got mugged – maybe in this case height and size was a blessing – but you had to watch yourself all the time. And if you were dumb enough to leave your radio or a bag in your car, it would be stolen, or maybe the car would be stolen. We all felt it, and it was not a good way to live."

"The de Blasio you see today really is the de Blasio I knew 35 years ago," says Dan Katz, a labor historian who befriended de Blasio in 1980, when they were elected to represent their respective dorms in NYU's student government. They eventually co-founded the Coalition for Student Rights, which staged demonstrations to protest issues like the rising cost of tuition. De Blasio has acknowledged being a pot smoker in his bearded, shaggy-haired student days, and Katz recalls him being a huge Bob Marley fan. "In his unguarded moments, he has an unpretentious silliness," says Katz, who adds, "We differed politically. I was always to the left of the Democratic Party, but he had more faith that reform could happen from within."

After attending graduate school at Columbia University, where he studied Latin

ACCORDING TO A STORY IN The New York Times, staffers working on Clinton's 2000 Senate race found de Blasio "agonizingly inefficient in a high-pressure, ever-shifting situation," so prone to ponderous indecision and endless, inclusive-to-a-fault strategy meetings that he wound up sidelined during the final weeks of the campaign in favor of more-seasoned Clinton insiders. And yet, by the time he threw himself into the crowded field of candidates running for mayor of New York in 2013, he had spent more than a decade honing his political skills, serving two terms on the City Council and one as public advocate, and he managed to outmaneuver higher-profile opponents like Christine Quinn, the New York City Council speaker (and Mayor Bloomberg's all-but-anointed successor). De Blasio got himself noticed by hitting Bloomberg the hardest and giving voice to the millions of struggling New Yorkers who looked at the post-9/11 gilded-age excess all around them – the stratospheric rents and impossibly high cost of living, the bank branches and chain stores squeezing out local mom-and-pops, the very skyline remade by gleaming new high-rises catering to hedge-funders and Chinese and Russian billionaires – and worried it could permanently transform the greatest city in the world into an open-air luxury mall for the global super-rich. “It was clear that the zeitgeist was turning,” says Brooklyn City Councilman Jumaane Williams. “While some people hedged, he just fully and totally embraced it.”

ers were just up there reaming him.” (New York under Bloomberg was described by one pastor as a “plantation” and by incoming Public Advocate Letitia James as “a gilded age of inequality.”) “It was unbelievably graceless,” says Haberman. “Nobody was tougher than me on Bloomberg, but, my God! You would’ve thought we were driving Adolf Hitler out of City Hall.”

Since the inauguration, Bloomberg has maintained a policy of not commenting on his successor, one which extends to his former administration officials. Wolfson, who served as a spokesman for Bloomberg and is a current employee of the Bloomberg Foundation, will only say, “Mike Bloom-

De Blasio kept the bullpen, though he’d mocked it during the campaign as leaving Bloomberg “surrounded by the voices of his inner circle... unable to hear the voices of the people.” Unlike Bloomberg, who worked at his own bullpen desk, de Blasio keeps a traditional office on the floor below, where he sits at the desk originally used by his hero Fiorello La Guardia. A Mets jersey is draped over a chair, and a short stack of CDs sits next to a boombox. (This reporter, seated across the room, cannot say if the stack contains Marley’s Rastaman Vibration.)

On this April morning, de Blasio has gathered the voices of his own inner circle to talk about his new housing plan, perhaps the most difficult piece of his agenda. Under Bloomberg, in particular, developers were handed the keys to the city, resulting in rapid gentrification and a mass displacement of longtime residents.

De Blasio, in blue shirtsleeves and a red tie, ate a yogurt parfait from a takeout container as he listened to Human Resources Administration Commissioner Steve Banks describe various tenants’-rights issues. (Before his appointment, Banks was an activist lawyer who had been suing the city over its homeless and welfare policies since the mid-Eighties.) De Blasio has a proactive, community-organizer’s approach to reaching his neediest constituents. His political fixer, Emma Wolfe, New York’s 35-year-old director of Intergovernmental Affairs, sits beside him; prior to City Hall, she worked at ACORN. The mayor

Dyed in the Wool
“There was a reverence for Franklin Roosevelt and Fiorello La Guardia in our family,” the mayor says.

Longtime political consultant George Arzt, who worked as press secretary under Mayor Koch, had run de Blasio’s previous public-advocate campaign. “What I remember from that race was that Mark Green was way ahead of us – we were in single digits and Green was over 40 – and I thought, ‘Oh, boy, this is gonna be a long ride,’” Arzt recalls. “But Bill was so confident that this was not only doable but inevitable. He kept on saying, ‘No one knows us, so we’re going to rise and he’s going to fall.’ And it was true.”

Bloomberg lashed out at de Blasio during the campaign, and there are whispers that Bloomberg’s people are already thinking about possible challengers to de Blasio in the next election: Eva Moskowitz, perhaps, who runs the Success Academy charter schools, or Daniel Doctoroff, a deputy mayor under Bloomberg. “I hear different things from the Bloomberg camp,” one insider tells me. “I think they were taken aback at de Blasio’s inauguration, when Bloomberg was on the podium and speak-berg was the best mayor in the city’s history, so anytime you hear criticism, especially if it’s not accurate, it’s frustrating.” Why, then, I wonder, was de Blasio’s line of attack on Bloomberg so successful? “I like Bill,” Wolfson says. “I have nothing but good things to say about him personally. My analysis is, it was effective to win 40 percent of the vote in a Democratic primary. That’s how I would characterize it.”

A SERIES OF OIL PAINTINGS of mayors past adorns New York’s City Hall. The official painting of Bloomberg, which hangs alongside more-traditional portraits of Dinkins and Giuliani, is a telling one: The photorealist image of the mayor standing triumphantly before a sea of cubicles – Bloomberg having famously transformed the working spaces of City Hall into an open-air bullpen reminiscent of a Wall Street trading house – could have been commissioned for a cover of Fortune.

steered the meeting and asked sharp questions throughout, pausing once to answer an incoming call on an old flip phone in his shirt pocket.

There’s a larger point, of course, to de Blasio’s economic program, beyond the primary – and laudable – goal of making New York a more equitable place for all. In a sense, the mayor is attempting to unspool a stubborn myth, the one that goes: The failures of Great Society liberalism led to the chaotic, ungovernable New York of the Seventies and Eighties, and it took stern Republican daddy figures like Giuliani and Bloomberg to make things right again. It all takes us back to a hoary, but enduring, question: Can progressives govern?

In de Blasio’s case, the answer thus far is clearly yes. It’s still too early to say much about his affordable-housing plan, but the municipal-ID program has been a huge success; more than 100,000 New Yorkers have applied since its launch in January. Ditto universal pre-K, which got online last fall, after de Blasio [Cont. on 71]

MARK PETERSON/REDUX

BILL DE BLASIO

[Cont. from 59] had been in office for only eight months, servicing 53,000 preschoolers at nearly 1,700 locations, a massive undertaking that went off seamlessly (especially compared to, say, the Affordable Care Act website launch).

De Blasio, for his part, takes issue with the popular narrative of New York's resurgence. When we talk about the credit Rudy Giuliani gets for making New York safe and livable again – which de Blasio considers pure myth – I ask how much the former mayor's outsized, room-filling personality contributed to his success. "I don't 100 percent buy into that theory," he says. "I agree that he was good at selling himself, and a lot of media over-accepted his version of the story. So, yeah, do you give him credit for figuring out a way to get more credit than he deserves? Sure, if that's credit. We've proven not only was my model more electorally popular than his – by a lot – but that you can manage this place much more effectively if you're not in fact creating division through the process."

Likewise, de Blasio has problems with the notion that arose during Bloomberg's tenure that his personal fortune allowed him to sidestep the temptations of influential donors. "Part of that was hype because he still had favorites, and a clear free-market worldview," de Blasio says. "I mean, for God's sake, when there was a critical op-ed in The New York Times about Goldman Sachs, he went to Goldman and gave a pep talk to the employees! When a struggling school was having troubles in East New York, he didn't go there and give a pep talk. This theory that he traveled in no world in particular – even just the social dynamic of the people he hung around with all the time meant that it didn't matter if they gave him money or not. They were still hugely influential to him."

Under de Blasio, the nexus of power has certainly undergone a dramatic shift, from the Upper East Side to brownstone Brooklyn. Richard Buery, the deputy mayor who implemented universal pre-K, had been living in Westchester County when he was hired and so had to move his family into the city. When I asked where, he says, smiling, "Park Slope, of course. It's a requirement."

The de Blasio family didn't move into Gracie Mansion until six months after he took office. His old friend Dan Katz recalls going to a Park Slope coffee shop last summer. "And Bill's there, in shorts and a T-shirt. And I said, 'I can't believe you're here.' And he said, 'Why?' And I said, 'Because you're the mayor of New York.'"

These are superficial points of geography, of course. But also not. Park Slope represents, in its most caricatured form, a certain smug strain of contemporary New York liberalism: the land of food co-ops and yuppie toddlers wearing little Ramones T-shirts. "I've always found him very affable," says Haberman. "But as mayor, there's a sanctimony in his administration that is impossible for many people to get past." Adds someone who has worked closely with de Blasio, "He's very headstrong, and on a lot of answers, he'll say, 'Yeah, yeah, I know all that.'"

As de Blasio embarks on his national crusade, one has to wonder: Regardless of the validity of his message, is the mayor an imperfect messenger? As with President Obama, there's an unattractive, imperious side to his personality that manifests in little flashes: a conversational tendency to drift toward lecture, unconcealed impatience with lines of inquiry he disapproves of. He's also chronically tardy, a trait covered pretty much exclusively by the tabloids at first but eventually becoming pronounced enough to merit a story in the Times. (When de Blasio showed up a half-hour late for a St. Patrick's Day parade in Far Rockaway, Queens, an area hit hard by Hurricane Sandy, the right-wing New York Post dressed him up as a leprechaun for the front page under the headline ST. PUTZ.)

De Blasio may be a canny tactician, a scholar of progressive history, perhaps even a visionary. But populism also requires firing up a crowd, and it's not clear if de Blasio has that touch. Or, for that matter, if he's simply too far to the left for huge swaths of the country. The mayor "is toxic" in upstate New York, insists Rep. Borelli, the Staten Island Republican. "His message has a tough enough time resonating in outer boroughs. He got involved in several 2014 state races north of the Bronx, and they lost them nearly to a man."

ALL THAT SAID, DE BLASIO DESERVES tremendous credit for the way in which he's willing to use his bully pulpit – really, unlike few other politicians operating at his level. One morning in early March, he gave a breakfast speech to a group of business and real-estate leaders called the Association for a Better New York. The setting was the grand ballroom of the tony Pierre Hotel, overlooking Central Park, and from the back of the room, it grew quiet enough to hear the silverware clinking as the mayor, not a naturally great speaker to begin with, audaciously called on the assembled one-percenters to voluntarily raise the minimum wage in the city to $13 an hour. The applause he received was polite but restrained.

The speech was interesting for a couple of reasons – not least, because of its clear echo of a crucial moment in the campaign of candidate de Blasio. In October 2012, he gave a speech to the same group and announced his plan to raise taxes on wealthy New Yorkers to fund universal pre-K. "I happened to have a finance-committee meeting for my campaign the day before that speech, and I couldn't tell them what I was going to do because it was just too high-security," de Blasio recalls. "And I had people who happened to be wealthy call the next day and resign from the finance committee, and others who just stopped participating, and others who grudgingly participated but told me I had made a fatal error."

The minimum-wage speech, in asking the local captains of industry to voluntarily join his crusade, was also a tacit acknowledgment of the difficulty of making a major impact on the economic lives of constituents, even for an executive-branch leader with as much power as the mayor of New York. At one of his first press conferences as mayor, de Blasio described his tax on the wealthy as "the number-one proposal I put forward in an election that I won with 73 percent of the vote. I think the jury is in." But a few months later, it had been killed by Gov. Cuomo, who probably didn't want to be seen as raising taxes during an election year, though he still provided full funding for de Blasio's universal-pre-K plan. De Blasio was widely portrayed as the loser of that battle, though when I ask if those optics matter, he snaps, "That's inside baseball. The people see that they got pre-K. They don't care how it happened, and I don't blame them. There was a lot of support for a tax on the wealthy – it was clearly a majority position in this city – and if we're just talking about the will of the people, it would have happened. But in the end, we got the mission done."

Still, he learned a valuable lesson about the levers of power, and he's convinced that putting pressure on state and national political leaders is the only way to comprehensively address income inequality. He says he was "troubled by the results" of the 2014 midterms – enough to write an op-ed for the Huffington Post calling for Democrats to stop trying to run as Republican Lites. "As a progressive," he wrote, "I know my party need not search for its soul – but rather, its backbone." When I ask how much of the op-ed was directed at President Obama, de Blasio says carefully, "I would differentiate his words and actions. In terms of his words, I very much appreciated the last State of the Union, which was a very powerful road map for addressing these issues. But I certainly believe there should've been a focus on economics much earlier. I don't belittle the crisis he walked into. And one of the few things in the last decades that has tangibly addressed the income-inequality crisis has been the Affordable Care Act. But where I would be critical is that the progressive economic vision that I adhere to was not front and center in President Obama's vision. Though, by the way, let's be fair – he didn't promise it."

There have been some cynical whispers about de Blasio's refusal to endorse Hillary Clinton, given his historic closeness to both her and her husband, with some wondering if it's all political theater, a bit of pro-wrestling-style manufactured heat in which de Blasio will game- [Cont. on 72]

BILL DE BLASIO

[Cont. from 71] ly play the heel for a few months before giving Clinton his blessing, thus inoculating more troublesome pressures from the likes of Elizabeth Warren.

Progressives like former New York gubernatorial candidate Zephyr Teachout appreciate the pressure de Blasio is placing on Clinton, saying his challenge is "necessary. I'd call him, and myself, traditional Democrats. It's people like Cuomo who wandered off into trickle-down economics. We're not to the left of the Democratic Party the way the Tea Party is to the right of the Republican Party. We're the heart and soul of the party. It's the private financing of campaigns that has led Democrats to these Reaganite policies."

De Blasio's progressive alliance will sponsor a bipartisan presidential forum later this year. When I asked if he hoped to exert a leftward pull on establishment Democrats, in the same way that a progressive primary challenger might have such an effect on Clinton, he replied, "Well, I would say it differently. Having been involved in politics, I would not say it is a given to progressives that primaries are necessarily going to result in the outcomes that you want, either a better candidate or your policies being adopted. What we're doing here is a little more organic than that. It's understanding that for all of the candidates, there needs to be a real push, calling on them to address these issues."

At one point, I asked de Blasio: What had made him believe, after five terms of governance by Giuliani and Bloomberg, that New Yorkers were ready to return to progressive governance? "Well, I think I have a very different view of what happened over those five terms than many do," he says. "I was on the '93 David Dinkins reelection campaign, so I watched the beginning of the Giuliani era the hard way. Dinkins should've beaten Giuliani, but we lost touch with our own base. Dinkins lost by 50,000 votes, and there were more than 50,000 votes to be had if we had handled things differently. A lot of the people who were Dinkins voters did not feel inspired enough to vote. I've seen this pattern repeat over and over again. It is my critique of what happened to Democrats in 2014. So I never felt that Giuliani's election was a renunciation of the core vision. I also feel the same about Bloomberg's election in 2001. Yes, he had a huge amount of resources, but that was a winnable election.

"So one could argue," de Blasio continues, "we had 20 years of Republican or Republican-independent rule that were entirely avoidable." He says he never stopped believing New York was, at heart, a progressive city - that, on the contrary, there was pent-up demand. "It was amazing how many people thought you've got to be more accommodationist. And my theory of the case from the beginning was, 'Clean lines.' I felt, in my heart, if I had a clear message and a body of achievement to back it up, and we were organized on the ground, it was absolutely winnable. And it was."

Turning back to his national push, de Blasio says, "In a place like New York City, with a strong local government that has a lot of tools and resources, we can do a substantial set of things for addressing inequality. But we can't do the things the federal government can do. The federal government can make investments in infrastructure that employ a huge number of people. They could help us provide affordable housing, progressive taxation. I mean, it would be a very long list of things that the federal government could do better to address income inequality, and none of those things are happening. The New Deal was a series of bold, experimental actions to address people's reality, and they could see and touch and feel the response in their lives. Today, there's literally nothing. This is the anti-New Deal.

"A serious national debate would start with that. It goes beyond Hillary, it goes beyond the presidential campaign. We're having to restart the discussion and bring it back to the reality of people's lives." ☺

HARBOR FREIGHT
QUALITY TOOLS AT RIDICULOUSLY LOW PRICES

How Does Harbor Freight Sell GREAT QUALITY Tools at the LOWEST Prices?

We have invested millions of dollars in our own state-of-the-art quality test labs and millions more in our factories, so our tools will go toe-to-toe with the top professional brands. And we can sell them for a fraction of the price because we cut out the middle man and pass the savings on to you. It's just that simple! Come visit one of our 550 Stores Nationwide.

20% OFF
ANY SINGLE ITEM

LOT #5487
61845/61693

2.5 HP, 21 GALLON 125 PSI VERTICAL AIR COMPRESSOR CENTRALPNEUMATIC

REG. PRICE $219.99

$149.99

LOT #5487
61845/61693

FREE
WITH ANY PURCHASE

PITTSBURGH 6 PIECE SCREWDRIVER SET

LOT #4778
61313/62578/62583/62723

$4.99
VALUE

LOT #4778
61313/62578/62583/62723

WOW SUPER COUPON

SAVE $80

900 PEAK/700 RUNNING WATTS 2 HP (63 CC) 2 CYCLE GAS RECREATIONAL GENERATOR

LOT #6619
60633/60636/60631/62472

$999
REG. PRICE $1,079.99

LOT #6619
60633/60636/60631/62472

WOW SUPER COUPON

SAVE 45%

POWDER-FREE NITRILE GLOVES: PACK OF 100

HARDY

5 mil. thickness

YOUR CHOICE!

$6.49
REG. PRICE $11.99

LOT #6846
61383

LOT #6847
61386

LOT #6848
61389

X-LARGE
LOT #1835
68458

LOT #6846
61383

LOT #6847
61386

LOT #6848
61389

WOW SUPER COUPON

SAVE $60

RAPID PUMP® 1.5 TON ALUMINUM RACING JACK

3-1/2 Pumps Lifts Most Vehicles Weighs 27 lbs.

LOT #6852
60598/62180
62486/62518
68953

$59.99
REG. PRICE $119.99

LOT #6852
60598/62180
62486/62518
68953

WOW SUPER COUPON

SAVE $70

2.5 HP, 21 GALLON 125 PSI VERTICAL AIR COMPRESSOR CENTRALPNEUMATIC

LOT #5487
61845/61693

$149.99
REG. PRICE $219.99

LOT #5487
61845/61693

WOW SUPER COUPON

SAVE 40%

MOVER'S DOLLY

1000 lb. Capacity

LOT #5487
61845/61693

$89.99
REG. PRICE $119.99

LOT #5487
61845/61693

WOW SUPER COUPON

SAVE $330

26", 16 DRAWER ROLLER CABINET

1068 lb. Capacity, 14,000 cu. in. of storage

LOT #1609
67851

$319.99
REG. PRICE $649.99

LOT #1609
67851

LIMIT 3 - Good at our stores or HarborFreight.com or by calling 800-423-2567. Cannot be used with other discount or coupon or prior purchases after 30 days from original purchase with original receipt. Offer good while supplies last. Non-transferable. Original coupon must be presented. Valid through 8/8/15. Limit one coupon per customer per day.

LIMIT 5 - Good at our stores or HarborFreight.com or by calling 800-423-2567. Cannot be used with other discount or coupon or prior purchases after 30 days from original purchase with original receipt. Offer good while supplies last. Non-transferable. Original coupon must be presented. Valid through 8/8/15. Limit one coupon per customer per day.

LIMIT 8 - Good at our stores or HarborFreight.com or by calling 800-423-2567. Cannot be used with other discount or coupon or prior purchases after 30 days from original purchase with original receipt. Offer good while supplies last. Non-transferable. Original coupon must be presented. Valid through 8/8/15. Limit one coupon per customer per day.

LIMIT 4 - Good at our stores or HarborFreight.com or by calling 800-423-2567. Cannot be used with other discount or coupon or prior purchases after 30 days from original purchase with original receipt. Offer good while supplies last. Non-transferable. Original coupon must be presented. Valid through 8/8/15. Limit one coupon per customer per day.

• 100% Satisfaction Guaranteed • No Hassle Return Policy • 550 Stores Nationwide • HarborFreight.com 800-423-2567
• Over 25 Million Satisfied Customers • Lifetime Warranty On All Hand Tools

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
To: Martinez, Julien; Malegiannakis, Michael
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; "John Del Cecato"
Subject: Morning Joe
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 5:18:30 PM

Mayor is on Morning Joe tomorrow. Please send link to the segment to this chain as soon as it airs tomorrow morning.

Thanks,

Mahen

--

7:15 - 7:30 AM

LIVE ON MORNING JOE

Location: 30 Rockefeller Plaza - Studio 3A

Press Contact: Phil Walzak

Telephone:

--

Mahen Gunaratna

Director of Research and Media Analysis

Mayor's Press Office | City Hall

mgunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov

(212) 676-3154 (o) | (347)-268-4295 (c)

From: Wolfe, Emma
To: B; Walzak, Phil; FLONYC
Cc: Hagelgans, Andrea; Snyder, Thomas; Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic; "ifdc@akpdmedia.com"; "Jonathan@berlinrosen.com"
Subject: RE: WSJ/NBC/MARIST
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 6:19:13 PM

Flashback: May 2003. Quinnipiac. Job performance: 32% for MRB.

May 8, 2003

BUDGETS IN CRISIS: CITY HALL MEMO

BUDGETS IN CRISIS: CITY HALL MEMO; No Politician? The Polls Agree With the Mayor

By JENNIFER STEINHAUER

Correction Appended

The prevailing political theory at City Hall goes something like this: Politics do not matter. If Mayor Michael R. Bloomberg remains true to his convictions, resists the taint of special interest groups and makes tough choices that keep the city sound, New Yorkers will appreciate and reward him.

But that theory is being severely tested as Mr. Bloomberg finds himself in what appears to be the lowest point in his 16-month mayoralty, based on a chorus of critics and the latest Quinnipiac University poll.

Last week, the mayor was rebuffed in his months-long effort to extract a commuter tax from leaders in Albany, and was forced to impose tax increases on his own constituents in its stead.

Mr. Bloomberg's relationship with the labor unions is so tense that labor experts struggle for a comparison. The strain was underscored this week by a threat from the head of the teachers' union to withdraw support for the mayor's sweeping changes to the public education system. His reorganization of the school system is also the subject of a lawsuit filed by some state legislators who originally supported him.

Advocates for the poor, who were thrilled to have an open reception from Mr. Bloomberg after years of being snubbed by Rudolph W. Giuliani's administration, are now bitterly denouncing the current mayor for excluding them from any role in key policy decisions.

Business leaders, essentially Mr. Bloomberg's peers, are now privately grumbling that they detest the mayor's latest tax policies.

Yesterday, the cloud over City Hall darkened when the Quinnipiac poll was released showing that only 32 percent of New York City voters polled approve of the mayor's job performance.

The poll, coming in the wake of a six-month whirlwind of increases in taxes and transit fares and higher prices on regulated rental apartments, is Mr. Bloomberg's worst showing yet. The polls have fallen almost steadily since February 2002, when 65 percent of New Yorkers approved of the job he was doing.

In the insult-to-injury category, while 89 percent of polled New Yorkers said that Mr. Bloomberg is intelligent, only 40 percent would savor a dinner invitation with the mayor, a man who is feverishly social and sought out by a broad swath of New York society.

While 61 percent of those questioned said that the mayor had "strong leadership qualities," only 33 percent agreed that he "cares about the needs and problems of people like you," which may speak to Mr. Bloomberg's inability to communicate his broader mayoral goals.

Quinnipiac surveyed 757 registered voters in the city from April 29 to May 5. On May 2, the outlines of a plan to raise sales and income taxes became known. The margin of sampling error for the poll is plus or minus 4 percentage points.

If any of this ruffles the feathers of Mr. Bloomberg -- who came into office with the stated goal of "making a difference" absent any deeper political ambitions -- he seems not to show it. Yesterday, during a news conference at City Hall, he sniped at a reporter who asked about the cost of a new mobile emergency command center, but let questions about the poll roll off him like a spritz of Evian at the beach.

"You got to do what's right," Mr. Bloomberg said. "And when I go home at night I can look in the mirror and say, 'I stood up and I made the right decisions.' "

Mr. Bloomberg, who has said he intends to run for another term, added: "The public in the end will take a look and say, 'There was somebody that made the right decision, the city's better.' And whether they want to have dinner with me or not, I don't know."

Mr. Bloomberg added that he would like to break bread with Bono, whom he met at the TriBeCa Film Festival the night before, and said he assumed that the singer shared that desire.

The fact that Mr. Bloomberg grabbed for Bono's name underscores a paradox of his tenure that has haunted him since the first day he began to make budget cuts.

The mayor's vast personal fortune led him to take the ultimate leap into public service, working for a dollar a year at one of the hardest political jobs in America. By his own account, it was another leg of his broader philanthropic vision.

His billions enabled him to run successfully for mayor and even support city programs out of his own pocket. (He has contributed millions of dollars to cultural and other city institutions.)

But his wealth has also created an intractable chasm between himself and the majority of the eight million people he serves who are now sitting by as their taxes rise, their services are cut and they are given little reason to expect an economic recovery any time soon.

"I just don't feel the mayor understands poor people," said Christine Cutchin, 75, who founded the Roundtable for Seniors, a recreational center in Bushwick, Brooklyn, that is scheduled for closing in the budget cuts. When it was pointed out that every imaginable constituent was being hit in the current budget plans, she shook her head emphatically and said, "These seniors have already paid their dues."

Aides to the mayor uphold his conviction that voters will get over their angst over increased rent, property, water, cigarette and income tax bills. "He's also been at this long enough to know that polls don't measure your accomplishments," said Edward Skyler, the mayor's press secretary. "They measure moods. It's not personal because the people who are being polled don't know him."

But it is clear that some New Yorkers who have gotten to know the mayor, at least professionally, are also less than enamored with him. Union officials and their members are battling with the mayor over budget issues, and many of them are deeply offended that Mr. Bloomberg, in their view, has written them off as a costly distraction.

"There has been a real change of heart among the union leaders toward the mayor," said Randi Weingarten, who is head of the Municipal Labor Council and the teachers' union. "He trashes us and trashes the work force."

Advocates for the poor and downtrodden, who have been welcomed into City Hall, are now crying bait and switch. They say they are often left out of the loop or even duped regarding the administration's plans for homeless families, AIDS services and other policy matters.

"On a certain level the Giuliani administration had more integrity than the Bloomberg administration," said Charles King, the co-president of Housing Works, an AIDS advocacy group. "The Giuliani administration was pretty straightforward that they were going to do it their way without consultation with the community."

Mr. Skyler dismissed this talk. "We always welcome and solicit input, but ultimately the mayor is the one who needs to make the decisions," he said.

The press secretary was not terribly concerned with the fact that so few wanted to eat with the newly lithe mayor. "It's understandable," Mr. Skyler deadpanned. "Nobody likes to eat with somebody on a diet."

Photo: Mayor Michael R. Bloomberg, in Brooklyn yesterday with the police commissioner and the Brooklyn district attorney, lets criticism roll off his back. (Steve Hart for The New York Times)(pg. B6)

From: B
Sent: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 4:42 PM
To: Walzak, Phil; FLONYC
Cc: Wolfe, Emma; Hagelgans, Andrea; Snyder, Thomas; Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com'; 'Jonathan@berlinrosen.com'
Subject: Re: WSJ/NBC/MARIST

I find that weird. But it's also not a good polling outfit. And this too shall pass

From: Walzak, Phil
Sent: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 04:37 PM
To: B; FLONYC
Cc: Wolfe, Emma; Hagelgans, Andrea; Snyder, Thomas; Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic
Subject: WSJ/NBC/MARIST

Tonight at 6 pm
532 RVs
4.2% MoE

City
49 wrong track
45 right track

Job performance

44 – Excellent or good

34 – Fair
18 – Poor

Job performance in March 2014 poll. Excellent or good – 39%

Re-elect: yes, 47-42
Whites: 61 no
Blacks: 66 yes
Latino: 58 yes

Are polices historic and transformative: 53 no

Character trait battery (honest, leader, fights for me, etc : all pretty good, don't have #s)

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: "Hayley Prim"; John Del Cecato; jeani murray; Aaron Pickrell; John Davis
Subject: RE: emails needed
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 6:34:09 PM

D Taylor: dtaylor@unitehere.org
Lee Saunders: lsaunders@afscme.org
Larry Cohen: lcohen@cwa-union.org

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:████████████████████]
Sent: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 5:39 PM
To: John Del Cecato; jeani murray; Aaron Pickrell; John Davis; Snyder, Thomas
Subject: emails needed

These are the folks who I couldn't find emails for in my email
. (Apologies if you forwarded me them, but I've sent that list of names 100 times so some of these names show up in every email!)

If you have could you please forward so we can get them details on the press event? This is signers and confirmed attendees. Figure we will need to contact the "Yeses" in the future regardless.

Alternatively, you can fill in the Master Doc spreadsheet in the email column.

Thanks!

Robert
Borosage
Raven
Brooks
D
Taylor
Lisa
Graves
Lawrence
Mishel
Bonnie
Watson Coleman
Leo
Gerard
Lee
Saunders
Nan
Whaley
Linda
Tirado
Arshad
Hasan

Larry
Cohen
Al Gore

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: "John Del Cecato"; Hayley Prim
Cc: John Davis; jeani murray; Aaron Pickrell
Subject: RE: Game Plan Today
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 6:42:39 PM

Indeed. NCLR is top Latino brand in country.

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 6:37 PM
To: Hayley Prim
Cc: John Davis; jeani murray; Aaron Pickrell; Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Game Plan Today

Outstanding

On May 5, 2015, at 6:08 PM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:

Janet Murguia just confirmed she is signing on and will stop by but maybe not be able to stay for the whole event

On Tue, May 5, 2015 at 11:47 AM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

Update - Mike Lux says Merkle COS is still very interested - no hard answer yet

From: John Davis <[REDACTED]>
Reply-To: John Davis <[REDACTED]>
Date: Tuesday, May 5, 2015 at 10:23 AM
To: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, jeani murray <[REDACTED]> Aaron PickrellEmail <[REDACTED]> "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: Game Plan Today

Good morning all. Below are status updates on each of these.

Davis have you reached out to the CPC folks who were on the call last night? If you haven't, I'm happy to take that on today. Let me know!
Brad Bauman (former CPC ED) and I did a call this morning. He has since sent a follow up email to all CPC offices. I will call through the Members who were on the call this morning. We will pick these folks up throughout the week but it is very likely we will get several Members showing up without RSVPing.

Janet Murguia-- Davis I am happy to call but I do not have a relationship with her or anyone at La Raza. Please instruct if you still want me as lead.

Tammy Baldwin-- Davis Her Chief of Staff and I just spoke. Her team had a discussion about TPA last night and is meeting with her this afternoon. I am supposed to hear back as soon as that meeting concludes.

Linda Sanchez--Davis I have not heard back from her staff.

Jeff Merkley-- Davis I have not heard back from his staff.

Tom Harkin-- Jeani/Davis Harkin cannot attend but he and I are speaking again this afternoon. I am sure he will add his name and he would like to do something else. Should we ask him to do an op-ed?

On Tuesday, May 5, 2015 10:04 AM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:

Let's do everything we can to lock these people in today and make the boss happy.

Davis have you reached out to the CPC folks who were on the call last night? If you haven't, I'm happy to take that on today. Let me know!

John Lewis-- Hayley

Mary Kay Henry-- Aaron
Tom Steyer-- Aaron

Janet Murguia-- Davis
Tammy Baldwin-- Davis
Linda Sanchez--Davis
Jeff Merkley-- Davis

Tom Harkin-- Jeani/Davis

Jim Hoffa-- Jeani
Bill Moyers-- Jeani

Tom Saenz-- Tom
Karen Naraski--Tom
Maria Elana Durazo-- Tom

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: John Del Cecato
To: Klein, Monica
Subject: Re: John Lasecada is here for a 5:45 with the Mayor
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 7:36:14 PM

Hysterical...

Also, SHE meant Del Cecato... (Who the hell starts their last name with a lowercase letter??)

From: <Klein>, Monica <MKlein@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Tuesday, May 5, 2015 at 7:28 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: FW: John Lasecada is here for a 5:45 with the Mayor

Monica Klein | Deputy Press Secretary | Mayor's Press Office
o: (212) 788-2969 | c: (917) 324-3297 | twitter: @monicacklein

From: Leopold, Elana
Sent: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 5:46 PM
To: Klein, Monica
Subject: Fwd: John Lasecada is here for a 5:45 with the Mayor

They mean del Cecato...

Sent from my iPhone

Begin forwarded message:

From: Police Desk <PDesk@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: May 5, 2015 at 5:36:36 PM EDT
To: "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: John Lasecada is here for a 5:45 with the Mayor

From: Walzak, Phil
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Leopold, Elana
Cc: Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Re: Prep Tonight
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 8:00:41 PM

No doubt!

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 08:00 PM
To: Leopold, Elana
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Re: Prep Tonight

Haha.. In all seriousness, I think the following could just have clearly been a reflection on the NYC press corps as it was the NYC population write large... PW/AH?

The cumulative effect of this series of battles, large and small, has been to reduce the mayor in some ways, and certainly to distract from his administration's very real accomplishments – which de Blasio himself acknowledges. “A lot of people outside New York City understand what happened in the first year of New York City better than people in New York City,” he tells me during a second Gracie Mansion interview. “But I’m convinced something very special happened here.”

From: <Leopold>, Elana <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Tuesday, May 5, 2015 at 7:52 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: Prep Tonight

Modest maybe?

He may have skimmed through it...idk

Sent from my iPhone

On May 5, 2015, at 7:48 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

Yes, will do. I can't believe the guy had an 8-page Rolling Stone profile - which I believe is the first profile that anyone has done about him ever - and he hasn't read it yet.

From: <Leopold>, Elana <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>

Date: Tuesday, May 5, 2015 at 7:02 PM

To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>

Cc: "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>

Subject: Prep Tonight

Mayor should be free around 10 tonight.

Will keep you posted on timing.

Can you please remind him to read the Rolling Stone Piece? Also- can you give him a one pager with bullet points he can easily digest and take with him tomorrow morning? Thanks!!

From: Leopold, Elana
To: Carey, Michael
Cc: John Del Cecato; B
Subject: Re: <no subject>
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 8:22:27 PM

Please give us a list of calls tonight with contact info and ask- thank you

Sent from my iPhone

On May 5, 2015, at 8:21 PM, Carey, Michael <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

The Mayor currently has 12-2 avail for calls. Keeping in mind it is the day before the budget!

Thanks JDC.....

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmmedia.com>
Date: Tuesday, May 5, 2015 at 8:22 PM
To: Michael Carey <mpcarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Elana Leopold <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: <no subject>

I really need call time for TPA tomorrow. What can you guys give me?

From: John Del Cecato
To: Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana
Cc: B
Subject: Re: <no subject>
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 8:35:09 PM

We will take it. The Budget will take care of itself. :)

From: <Carey>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Tuesday, May 5, 2015 at 8:21 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: <no subject>

The Mayor currently has 12-2 avail for calls. Keeping in mind it is the day before the budget!

Thanks JDC.....

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Date: Tuesday, May 5, 2015 at 8:22 PM
To: Michael Carey <mpcarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Elana Leopold <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: <no subject>

I really need call time for TPA tomorrow. What can you guys give me?

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
To: B; FLONYC
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; John Del Cecato
Subject: Re: HRC in Nevada
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 8:56:44 PM

Hillary Clinton: "I know there are people who disagree with me, but I want them to have a conversation with me. Because the facts are really clear. You know, we know how much people who are working hard contribute to our economy, both in what they buy and in what they pay in taxes. In fact, in New York – which I know a little bit about because I represented it for eight years and I live there now – our undocumented workers in New York pay more in taxes than some of the biggest corporations in New York. So, I'm ready to have this discussion with anybody anywhere at any time. But let me now turn to the people who are living this story."

Sent from my iPhone

On May 5, 2015, at 7:16 PM, Gunaratna, Mahen <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

She's making news right now in Nevada on immigration and DACA, promising to go "even further" than the President. Quick summary:

- <!--[if !supportLists]-->● <!--[endif]-->Pledged to expand President Obama's Deferred Action program (DACA) to include the parents of DREAMers and others – "We should put in place an accessible way for parents of DREAMers and others to be eligible for the same deferred action as their children"
- <!--[if !supportLists]-->● <!--[endif]-->Called for more humane treatment of children at federal detention facilities, stating that "their physical and mental health are at risk" and "we shouldn't put children and vulnerable people in big detention facilities"
- <!--[if !supportLists]-->● <!--[endif]-->Called for more legal representation, especially for young immigrants – "I think that people in the immigration system should be represented"

She also made a comment about undocumented workers in New York paying more in taxes than some of the biggest New York corporations – will get exact transcript.

Thanks,

Mahen

--

Mahen Gunaratna

Director of Research and Media Analysis
Mayor's Press Office | City Hall

mgunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov

(212) 676-3154 (o) | (347)-268-4295 (c)

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: B
Cc: Walzak, Phil; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Reminder/morning joe
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 5:51:12 AM

Sir,
We prepped all of these yesterday, but just as a reminder

Additional topics you will be asked

- NYPD officer/ nypd morale/ your convos with the family
- candidates on mass incarceration
- baltimore
- HRC endorsement
- speculating on Dems in next election- what do all candidates need to do (TPA opportunity here)

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Subject: Re: Op-Ed
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 6:20:01 AM

Should hit sometime today

On 5/5/15, 9:09 PM, "John Del Cecato" <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

>

>

>>

>>

>>by Elizabeth Warren and Bill de Blasio

>>

>>In this land of big dreams, there was never a dream bigger or more >>important than the one so deeply rooted in our values that it became >>known as the American Dream. Across generations, Americans shared the >>belief that hard work would bring opportunity and a better life. America >>wasn't perfect, but we invested in our kids and put in place policies to >>build a strong middle class.

>>

>>We don't do that anymore, and the result is clear: The rich get richer, >>while everyone else falls behind. The game is rigged, and the people who >>rigged it want it to stay that way. They claim that if we act to improve >>the economic well-being of hard-working Americans - whether by increasing >>the minimum wage, reining in lawbreakers on Wall Street or doing >>practically anything else - we will threaten economic growth.

>>

>>They are wrong.

>>

>>That thinking is backward. A growing body of research – including work >>done by Nobel-prize winning economist Joseph Stiglitz and the Roosevelt >>Institute – shows clearly that an increasing disparity between rich and >>poor, cronyism and an economic system that works only for those at the >>top are bad for the middle class and bad for our economy.

>>

>>When the economy works for everyone, consumers have money to spend at >>businesses, and when businesses have more customers, they build more >>factories, hire more workers and sell more products - and the economy >>grows. For decades, our economy was built around this core understanding.
>>We made big investments in the things that would create opportunities for >>everyone: public schools and universities; roads and bridges and power >>grids; research that spurred new industries, technologies – and jobs - >>here in the United States. We supported strong unions that pushed for >>better wages and working conditions, seeing those unions improve lives >>both for their members and for workers everywhere.

>>

>>And it worked. From the 1930s to the late 1970s, as gross domestic >>product went up, wages increased more or less across the board. As the >>economic pie got bigger, pretty much everyone was getting a little more.
>>That was how the United States built >>a great middle class.

>>

>>Then in the early 1980s, a new theory swept the country. Its disciples >>claimed that if government policies took care of the rich and powerful, >>wealth would trickle down for everyone else. Trickle-down believers cut >>taxes sharply for those at the top and pushed for "deregulation" that >>hobbled the cops on Wall Street and let the most powerful corporations >>far too often do as they pleased.

>>
>>Trickle-down economics failed disastrously. The rich and powerful have >>become richer and more powerful. In the past 35 years, the top 10 percent >>got all the growth in income. The rest of America - 90 percent of >>Americans - got nothing. Zip. Zero.
>>
>>Government policies matter and can make a difference. Strengthening the >>American Dream is about the basics:
>>
>>--Make work pay by increasing the minimum wage, empowering unions to >>bargain collectively, ending abusive scheduling practices for hourly >>workers, getting people the overtime pay they deserve, ensuring equal pay >>for equal work and making sure employers follow the law and respect the >>rights of workers.
>>
>>--End the squeeze on working parents by passing a paid family leave >>requirement and investing in child care, after-school programs and >>extended learning days. Let families with children have a chance to >>balance careers with quality time together.
>>
>>
>>--Ensure everyone can get a great education without drowning in debt.
>>Rein in the cost of college and allow families to refinance student loans >>at lower rates. Give every child access to full-day pre-kindergarten.
>>Education is still the best ticket to the middle class.
>>
>>--Focus on research and innovation needed to develop the technologies of >>the future. Investments in medical and scientific research let us build >>whole new industries and give us the chance to create good jobs right >>here in America.
>>
>>--Invest in infrastructure - in roads, bridges, rail, water, power and >>broadband. Businesses can't grow if the foundation crumbles beneath them.
>>A 21st-century economy needs 21st-century infrastructure.
>>
>>--Strengthen and expand Social Security, not just for today's seniors but >>also for today's young people. Work is changing. A strong Social Security >>system will ensure that all workers, no matter the number of jobs they >>piece together during their careers, can count on a secure retirement.
>>
>>--Strengthen the rules of the marketplace. We don't build a future by >>turning the biggest banks loose to do whatever they want, and markets >>don't create value when corporations can cheat people or roll over their >>upstart competition.
>>
>>--Promote fair trade by embracing only those trade policies that >>strengthen our economy, create good jobs with good wages and establish >>fair rules of the road for companies around the world. Our trade >>agreements shouldn't help multinational companies gut environmental, >>health and safety standards here and abroad under the guise of promoting >>commerce.
>>
>>--Reform the tax code by ending the billions in tax breaks for >>corporations shipping jobs overseas and big oil companies, while leveling >>the playing field so that millionaires and billionaires pay their fair >>share.
>>
>>Rebuilding our middle class won't be easy, but real change rarely is.

>>It's time to be bold.
>>
>>The American Dream depends on it.
>>
>>
>>Elizabeth Warren, a Democrat, represents Massachusetts in the Senate.
>>Bill de Blasio, a Democrat, is mayor of New York.
>>
>

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: Walzak, Phil; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; B
Subject: Re: Good stuff
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 6:50:11 AM

Terrific! Go get 'em!

From: Walzak, Phil
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 06:48 AM
To: 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; B; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Re: Good stuff

Plan coming together...v good sequencing

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 06:46 AM
To: B; Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil
Subject: Good stuff

HEADLINE:

DEMS PLAN 6 DEBATES BEGINNING IN
FALL –DE BLASIO TO UNVEIL LEFT’S
'Contract with America' -- ANDREA MITCHELL
hits Hillary trail, becomes Sam Donaldson of rope lines -- B'DAY: David Rogers

IN BODY OF PLAYBOOK:

SIREN! FIRST LOOK – De Blasio to unveil a progressive version of the “Contract with America”: “On Tuesday, May 12, New York Mayor Bill de Blasio will convene progressive leaders from across the country at the U.S. Capitol’s ... House Triangle in support of The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality. The Progressive Agenda ... builds upon the work of dozens of economists, lawmakers, and ... activists.”

--BACKSTORY: De Blasio convened a group of a dozen national progressives at Gracie Mansion on April 2, and they discussed ideas for addressing income inequality. Then the conversation extended to others -- economists, electeds, activists.

More than 60 big names have signed on, including Sen. Jeff Merkley (D-Ore.); Reps. Keith Ellison (D-Minn.), Raúl Grijalva (D-Ariz.), and Rosa DeLauro (D-Conn.); Marian Wright Edelman and Howard Dean; national labor leaders; and actors Susan Sarandon and Steve Buscemi.

--Rolling Stone’s May 21 issue has a 7½ page spread, “The Mayor’s Crusade: Bill de Blasio is trying to remake America’s biggest city – and he doesn’t plan to stop there,” by Mark Binelli: “de Blasio convened a closed-door meeting of national thought leaders and elected officials ... to begin work on a new version of the ‘Contract With America,’ only this one would be a product of the left, focusing on economic policies ... Looking to rejuvenate the Democratic Party, he’d turned not to Bill Clinton, whose strategy of triangulation the mayor openly repudiates, but Newt Gingrich.” Not online yet

--The Mayor will be on “Morning
Joe” today at 7:20 a.m.

From: John Del Cecato
To: B; Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil
Cc: [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: Good stuff
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 7:03:33 AM

One question that you may get asked (which I can't believe I didn't think of until now):

Q: Is Elizabeth Warren signed on to TPA?

A: She won't be attending the event at the Capitol Building, but we've been working together to shine a light on many of these issues. In fact, we'll be appearing together that morning at an event hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, where Joe Stiglitz will be unveiling a comprehensive approach to rewriting the rules to build the middle class.

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 6:56 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: Rebecca Katz <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: Good stuff

Excellent! Well done, whoever did this

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 06:46 AM
To: B; Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil
Subject: Good stuff

HEADLINE:

DEMS PLAN 6 DEBATES BEGINNING IN FALL –DE BLASIO TO UNVEIL LEFT'S 'Contract with America' -- ANDREA MITCHELL hits Hillary trail, becomes Sam Donaldson of rope lines -- B'DAY: David Rogers

IN BODY OF PLAYBOOK:

SIREN! FIRST LOOK – De Blasio to unveil a progressive version of the “Contract with America”: “On Tuesday, May 12, New York Mayor Bill de Blasio will convene progressive leaders from across the country at the U.S. Capitol’s ... House Triangle in support of The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality. The Progressive Agenda ... builds upon the work of dozens of economists, lawmakers, and ... activists.”

--BACKSTORY: De Blasio convened a group of a dozen national progressives at Gracie Mansion on April 2, and they discussed ideas for addressing income inequality. Then the conversation extended to others -- economists, electeds, activists.

More than 60 big names have signed on, including Sen. Jeff Merkley (D-Ore.); Reps. Keith Ellison (D-Minn.), Raúl Grijalva (D-Ariz.), and Rosa DeLauro (D-Conn.); Marian Wright Edelman and Howard Dean; national labor leaders; and actors Susan Sarandon and Steve Buscemi.

--Rolling Stone’s May 21 issue has a 7½ page spread, “The Mayor’s Crusade: Bill de Blasio is trying to remake America’s biggest city – and he doesn't plan to stop there,” by Mark

Binelli: “de Blasio convened a closed-door meeting of national thought leaders and elected officials ... to begin work on a new version of the ‘Contract With America,’ only this one would be a product of the left, focusing on economic policies ... Looking to rejuvenate the Democratic Party, he'd turned not to Bill Clinton, whose strategy of triangulation the mayor openly repudiates, but Newt Gingrich.” Not online yet

--The Mayor will be on “Morning Joe” today at 7:20 a.m.

From: Rebecca Katz
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com; Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil
Subject: Re: Good stuff
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 7:20:27 AM

Teamwork! Also, Politico is playing it up and just popped a separate story just on this.

On Wed, May 6, 2015 at 6:56 AM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Excellent! Well done, whoever did this

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 06:46 AM
To: B; Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil
Subject: Good stuff

HEADLINE:

DEMS PLAN 6 DEBATES BEGINNING IN FALL –DE BLASIO TO UNVEIL LEFT’S ‘Contract with America’ -- ANDREA MITCHELL hits Hillary trail, becomes Sam Donaldson of rope lines -- B'DAY: David Rogers

IN BODY OF PLAYBOOK:

SIREN! FIRST LOOK – De Blasio to unveil a progressive version of the “Contract with America”: “On Tuesday, May 12, New York Mayor Bill de Blasio will convene progressive leaders from across the country at the U.S.

Capitol's ... House Triangle in support of The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality. The Progressive Agenda ... builds upon the work of dozens of economists, lawmakers, and ... activists.”

--BACKSTORY: De Blasio convened a group of a dozen national progressives at Gracie Mansion on April 2, and they discussed ideas for addressing income inequality. Then the conversation extended to others -- economists, electeds, activists.

More than 60 big names have signed on, including Sen. Jeff Merkley (D-Ore.); Reps. Keith Ellison (D-Minn.), Raúl Grijalva (D-Ariz.), and Rosa DeLauro (D-Conn.); Marian Wright Edelman and Howard Dean; national labor leaders; and actors Susan Sarandon and Steve Buscemi.

--Rolling Stone's May 21 issue has a 7½ page spread, “The Mayor's Crusade: Bill de Blasio is trying to remake America's biggest city – and he doesn't plan to stop there,” by Mark Binelli: “de Blasio convened a closed-door meeting of national thought leaders and elected officials ... to begin work on a new version of the ‘Contract With America,’ only this one would be a product of the left, focusing on economic policies ...

Looking to rejuvenate the Democratic Party, he'd turned not to Bill Clinton, whose strategy of triangulation the mayor openly repudiates, but Newt Gingrich." Not online yet

--The Mayor will be on "Morning Joe" today at 7:20 a.m.

From: Martinez Julien
To: Gunaratna Mahen; Malegiannakis Michael
Cc: Walzak Phil; Hagelgans Andrea; "John Del Cecato"
Subject: RE: Morning Joe
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 7:37:00 AM

Link: <http://mms.tveyes.com/transcript.asp?PlayClip=FALSE&DTSearch=TRUE&DateTime=05%2F06%2F2015+07%3A22%3A00&market=m1&StationID=205>

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
Sent: Tuesday, May 05, 2015 5:18 PM
To: Martinez, Julien; Malegiannakis, Michael
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; 'John Del Cecato'
Subject: Morning Joe

Mayor is on Morning Joe tomorrow. Please send link to the segment to this chain as soon as it airs tomorrow morning.

Thanks,

Mahen

--

7:15 - 7:30 AM

LIVE ON MORNING JOE

Location: 30 Rockefeller Plaza - Studio 3A

Press Contact: Phil Walzak

Telephone:

--

Mahen Gunaratna

Director of Research and Media Analysis

Mayor's Press Office | City Hall

mgunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov

(212) 676-3154 (o) | (347)-268-4295 (c)

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: B; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Walzak, Phil
Cc: [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: Good stuff
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 7:45:32 AM

Strong interview. This should inject more interest for sure!

From: B
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 06:56 AM
To: 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil
Cc: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: Good stuff

Excellent! Well done, whoever did this

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 06:46 AM
To: B; Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil
Subject: Good stuff

HEADLINE:

DEMS PLAN 6 DEBATES BEGINNING IN
FALL –DE BLASIO TO UNVEIL LEFT’S
'Contract with America' -- ANDREA MITCHELL
hits Hillary trail, becomes Sam Donaldson of
rope lines -- B'DAY: David Rogers

IN BODY OF PLAYBOOK:

SIREN! FIRST LOOK – De Blasio to unveil a progressive version of the “Contract with America”: “On Tuesday, May 12,
New York Mayor Bill de Blasio will convene progressive leaders from across the country at the U.S. Capitol's ... House Triangle in support of The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality. The Progressive Agenda ... builds upon the work of dozens of economists, lawmakers, and ... activists.”

--BACKSTORY: De Blasio convened a group of a dozen national progressives at Gracie Mansion on April 2, and they discussed ideas for addressing income inequality. Then the conversation extended to others -- economists, electeds, activists.

More than 60 big names have signed on, including Sen. Jeff Merkley (D-Ore.); Reps. Keith Ellison (D-Minn.), Raúl Grijalva (D-Ariz.), and Rosa DeLauro (D-Conn.); Marian Wright Edelman and Howard Dean; national labor leaders; and actors Susan Sarandon and Steve Buscemi.

--Rolling Stone's May 21 issue has a 7½ page spread, “The Mayor's Crusade: Bill de Blasio is trying to remake America's biggest city – and he doesn't plan to stop there,” by Mark Binelli: “de Blasio convened a closed-door meeting of national thought leaders and elected officials ... to begin work on a new version of the ‘Contract With America,’ only this one would be a product of the left, focusing on economic policies ...

Looking to rejuvenate the Democratic Party, he'd turned not to Bill Clinton, whose strategy of triangulation the mayor openly repudiates, but Newt Gingrich." Not online yet

--The Mayor will be on "Morning Joe" today at 7:20 a.m.

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: So what did you think?
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 7:48:41 AM

From: Walzak, Phil
To: B; FLONYC
Cc: "John Del Cecato"; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Politico
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 8:31:59 AM

Exclusive: Bill De Blasio plans 'Contract with America' for left

NYC's mayor will unveil his 'Progressive Agenda' next week at the U.S. Capitol.

By MIKE ALLEN

5/6/15 6:54 AM EDT

Updated 5/6/15 8:26 AM EDT

New York Mayor Bill de Blasio, using his muscular perch to try to nudge the national Democratic Party to the left, next week will unveil a 13-point progressive agenda that he hopes will be the left's answer to the Contract with America, which helped propel Newt Gingrich and the Republican revolution of 1994.

On Tuesday, de Blasio will hold a 3 p.m. news conference outside the U.S. Capitol with labor leaders, Democratic lawmakers and liberal activists to unveil his "Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality."

The manifesto includes the ideas of economist Joseph Stiglitz and dozens of other leaders and thinkers consulted by the de Blasio team.

Among the planks is a universal pre-kindergarten program, DeBlasio's signature policy since he took office on Jan. 1, 2014. Other elements are aimed at helping working people ($15 minimum wage) and working parents (paid family leave), and proposals for "tax fairness" (increasing the tax on carried interest, a huge issue for private equity).

De Blasio convened a group of a dozen national progressives at Gracie Mansion on April 2, and they discussed ideas for addressing income inequality. Among the advisers present was John Del Cecato of AKPD Message and Media, who made de Blasio's campaign commercials, including the famous "Dante" ad.

Then the conversation extended to others — economists, elected officials and activists. De Blasio advisers say that more than 60 big names have signed on, including Sen. Jeff Merkley (D-Ore.); Reps. Keith Ellison (D-Minn.), Raúl Grijalva (D-Ariz.) and Rosa DeLauro (D-Conn.); Marian Wright Edelman and Howard Dean; national labor leaders; and actors Susan Sarandon and Steve Buscemi.

Rolling Stone has a preview of de Blasio's new drive in the forthcoming May 21 issue, which has a 7½-page spread, "The Mayor's Crusade: Bill de Blasio is trying to remake America's biggest city — and he doesn't plan to stop there."

Mark Binelli writes: "De Blasio convened a closed-door meeting of national thought leaders and elected officials ... to begin work on a new version of the 'Contract With America,' only this one would be a product of the left, focusing on economic policies. ... Looking to rejuvenate the Democratic Party, he'd turned not to Bill Clinton, whose strategy of triangulation the mayor openly repudiates, but Newt Gingrich."

Earlier on Tuesday, de Blasio will appear at a Roosevelt Institute event with Stiglitz and Sen. Elizabeth Warren (D-Mass.).

Read more: <http://www.politico.com/story/2015/05/bill-de-blasio-nyc-contract-with-america-new-york-117676.html#ixzz3ZMRqm11d>

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Subject: <no subject>
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 8:39:22 AM

You kicked major ass this morning. Beautiful. That is all.

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Cc: Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re:
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 9:51:04 AM

Done

----- Original Message -----

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 09:10 AM
To: B
Subject:

Reminder to send Robby the op Ed

From: Carey, Michael
To: "John Del Cecato"; Dan Levitan; PhilWalzak [REDACTED]
Subject: RE: what time is the event in DC on Tuesday?
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 10:39:40 AM

DC to CA is paid for by One New York

Michael Paul Carey
Director of Scheduling and Advance
City Hall
New York, New York 10007
212.341.5396

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 10:40 AM
To: Dan Levitan; PhilWalzak [REDACTED] Carey, Michael
Subject: Re: what time is the event in DC on Tuesday?

Adding MPC

From: Dan Levitan <dan@berlinrosen.com>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 10:37 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Phillip Walzak <[REDACTED]>
Subject: RE: what time is the event in DC on Tuesday?

Can we answer the $ question quickly?

From sally:

this is what i'm writing unless you tell me otherwise in next 5 min:

These travels have been paid for by a combination of his political action committee, Campaign for One New York, and the organizations hosting him, while his full-time security detail is covered by taxpayers.

It was not immediately clear on Wednesday how the D.C. and California trips will be funded.

--

Dan Levitan

BerlinRosen Public Affairs

O: 646.200.5315

C: 201.674.7475

@levitandan

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 10:25 AM

To: Phillip Walzak; Dan Levitan

Subject: Re: what time is the event in DC on Tuesday?

Yes... I think we should give that out, along with the Mayors Day of Action on transportation (Stephanie Yazgi's project) on 5/13

From: Phillip Walzak <[REDACTED]>

Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 9:57 AM

To: Dan Levitan <dan@berlinrosen.com>

Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>

Subject: Re: what time is the event in DC on Tuesday?

both are public, yes?

On Wed, May 6, 2015 at 9:26 AM, Dan Levitan <dan@berlinrosen.com> wrote:

PW are you ok giving out rough timeline to Grynbaum and others who ask?

--

Dan Levitan

BerlinRosen Public Affairs

O: 646.200.5315

C: 201.674.7475

@levitandan

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 7:40 AM

To: Dan Levitan

Cc: Phil Walzak

Subject: Re: what time is the event in DC on Tuesday?

There are two events that day (Tuesday, May 12)...

First is with Roosevelt Institute/Warren/Stiglitz at National Press Club... I think MBDB speaks at 10:15?

Second (bigger) event is 3pm ET at the House Triangle (by the Capitol Building steps)

From: Dan Levitan <dan@berlinrosen.com>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 7:36 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: Phillip Walzak <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Fwd: what time is the event in DC on Tuesday?

?

- mobile -

Begin forwarded message:

From: "Grynbaum, Michael" <grynbaum@nytimes.com>
Date: May 6, 2015 at 7:31:24 AM EDT
To: Dan Levitan <Dan@berlinrosen.com>
Subject: what time is the event in DC on Tuesday?

wondering if I should travel night before or morning of.....

--

Michael M. Grynbaum
City Hall Bureau Chief
The New York Times
212.556.7047 / grynbaum@nytimes.com

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: John Del Ceccato
Subject: Fwd: POLITICO: Exclusive: Bill De Blasio plans "Contract with America" for left
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 10:47:28 AM

perfect

Sent from my iPad

Begin forwarded message:

From: Clips <Clips@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: May 6, 2015 at 9:35:02 AM EDT
Subject: POLITICO: Exclusive: Bill De Blasio plans 'Contract with America' for left

Exclusive: Bill De Blasio plans 'Contract with America' for left

POLITICO – Mike Allen

<http://www.politico.com/story/2015/05/bill-de-blasio-nyc-contract-with-america-new-york-117676.html>

New York Mayor Bill de Blasio, using his muscular perch to try to nudge the national Democratic Party to the left, next week will unveil a 13-point progressive agenda that he hopes will be the left's answer to the Contract with America, which helped propel Newt Gingrich and the Republican revolution of 1994.

On Tuesday, de Blasio will hold a 3 p.m. news conference outside the U.S. Capitol with labor leaders, Democratic lawmakers and liberal activists to unveil his "Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality."

The manifesto includes the ideas of economist Joseph Stiglitz and dozens of other leaders and thinkers consulted by the de Blasio team.

Among the planks is a universal pre-kindergarten program, DeBlasio's signature policy since he took office on Jan. 1, 2014. Other elements are aimed at helping working people ($15 minimum wage) and working parents (paid family leave), and proposals for "tax fairness" (increasing the tax on carried interest, a huge issue for private equity).

De Blasio convened a group of a dozen national progressives at Gracie Mansion on April 2, and they discussed ideas for addressing income inequality. Among the advisers present was John Del Cecato of AKPD Message and Media, who made de Blasio's campaign commercials, including the famous "Dante" ad.

Then the conversation extended to others — economists, elected officials and activists.

De Blasio advisers say that more than 60 big names have signed on, including Sen. Jeff Merkley (D-Ore.); Reps. Keith Ellison (D-Minn.), Raúl Grijalva (D-Ariz.) and Rosa DeLauro (D-Conn.); Marian Wright Edelman and Howard Dean; national labor leaders; and actors Susan Sarandon and Steve Buscemi.

Rolling Stone has a preview of de Blasio's new drive in the forthcoming May 21 issue, which has a 7½-page spread, "The Mayor's Crusade: Bill de Blasio is trying to remake America's biggest city — and he doesn't plan to stop there."

Mark Binelli writes: "De Blasio convened a closed-door meeting of national thought leaders and elected officials ... to begin work on a new version of the 'Contract With America,' only this one would be a product of the left, focusing on economic policies. ... Looking to rejuvenate the Democratic Party, he'd turned not to Bill Clinton, whose strategy of triangulation the mayor openly repudiates, but Newt Gingrich."

Earlier on Tuesday, de Blasio will appear at a Roosevelt Institute event with Stiglitz and Sen. Elizabeth Warren (D-Mass.).

From: Wolfe, Emma
To: "John Del Cecato"; B; Williams, Dominic
Subject: RE: David Simas
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 11:00:34 AM

Suggest following:

1. I'd not give him the exact document, but I'd give him a set of bullet points on the biggest pieces
2. I'd assume he's going to get his paws on whatever we've given to other folks
3. Send the op-ed shortly before it runs

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 10:47 AM
To: B; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma
Subject: Re: David Simas

Looping Emma too

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 10:34 AM
To: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Dominic Williams <DWilliams@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: David Simas

He asked me if we were referencing TPP in The Progressive Agenda. I said not specifically, but that we'd be laying out fair trade principle. Told him that we don't reference Obama at all in it.

Two questions:

1. Should I share the document with Simas? I know it's already in the hands of quite a few folks - but I don't want the WH to muck with our press strategy by leaking to the press. I believe I could ask Simas to keep it quiet & he would honor that - but wanted to run by you first.
2. Should I share the Warren-BDB op-ed with Simas? That will pop today.

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Williams, Dominic
Subject: Re: David Simas
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 11:04:58 AM

I'm fine with both, but you need to press him on honor

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 10:34 AM
To: B; Williams, Dominic
Subject: David Simas

He asked me if we were referencing TPP in The Progressive Agenda. I said not specifically, but that we'd be laying out fair trade principle. Told him that we don't reference Obama at all in it.

Two questions:

1. Should I share the document with Simas? I know it's already in the hands of quite a few folks - but I don't want the WH to muck with our press strategy by leaking to the press. I believe I could ask Simas to keep it quiet & he would honor that - but wanted to run by you first.
2. Should I share the Warren-BDB op-ed with Simas? That will pop today.

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Subject: Re: FWIW
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 11:18:00 AM

Your whole tone - upbeat, positive, earnest...

Your message - right on point...

And you're just really good in that laid back format - likable...

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 11:05 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: FWIW

What worked about it?

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 10:40 AM
To: B
Subject: FWIW

I'm getting rave reviews on your Mojo appearance from several folks...

From: Wolfe, Emma
To: "John Del Cecato"; B; Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil
Subject: RE: Just posted - WashPost
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 11:49:00 AM

Congratulations, hat tips, kudos, and so on!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 11:26 AM
To: B; Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma
Subject: Just posted - WashPost

How to revive the American Dream

| |

*Elizabeth Warren, a Democrat, represents Massachusetts in the Senate.
Bill de Blasio, a Democrat, is mayor of New York.*

In this land of big dreams, there was never a dream bigger or more important than the one so deeply rooted in our values that it became known as the American Dream. Across generations, Americans shared the belief that hard work would bring opportunity and a better life. America wasn't perfect, but we invested in our kids and put in place policies to build a strong middle class.

We don't do that anymore, and the result is clear: The rich get richer, while everyone else falls behind. The game is rigged, and the people who rigged it want it to stay that way. They claim that if we act to improve the economic well-being of hard-working Americans — whether by increasing the minimum wage, reining in lawbreakers on Wall Street or doing practically anything else — we will threaten economic growth.

They are wrong.

That thinking is backward. A growing body of research — including work

done by Nobel Prize-winning economist Joseph Stiglitz and the Roosevelt Institute — shows clearly that an increasing disparity between rich and poor, cronyism and an economic system that works only for those at the top are bad for the middle class and bad for our economy.

When the economy works for everyone, consumers have money to spend at businesses, and when businesses have more customers, they build more factories, hire more workers and sell more products — and the economy grows. For decades, our economy was built around this core understanding. We made big investments in the things that would create opportunities for everyone: public schools and universities; roads and bridges and power grids; research that spurred new industries, technologies — and jobs — here in the United States. We supported strong unions that pushed for better wages and working conditions, seeing those unions improve lives both for their members and for workers everywhere.

And it worked. From the 1930s to the late 1970s, as gross domestic product went up, wages increased more or less across the board. As the economic pie got bigger, pretty much everyone was getting a little more. That was how the United States built a great middle class.

Then in the early 1980s, a new theory swept the country. Its disciples claimed that if government policies took care of the rich and powerful, wealth would trickle down for everyone else. Trickle-down believers cut taxes sharply for those at the top and pushed for “deregulation” that hobbled the cops on Wall Street and let the most powerful corporations far too often do as they pleased.

Trickle-down economics failed disastrously. The rich and powerful have become richer and more powerful. In the past 35 years, the top 10 percent got all the growth in income. The rest of America — 90 percent of Americans — got nothing. Zip. Zero.

Government policies matter and can make a difference. Strengthening the American Dream is about the basics:

- Make work pay by increasing the minimum wage, empowering unions to bargain collectively, ending abusive scheduling practices for hourly workers, getting people the overtime pay they deserve, ensuring equal pay for equal work and making sure employers follow the law and respect the rights of workers.
- End the squeeze on working parents by passing a paid family leave requirement and investing in child care, after-school programs and extended learning days. Let families with children have a chance to balance careers with quality time together.
- Ensure everyone can get a great education without drowning in debt. Rein in the cost of college and allow families to refinance student loans at lower rates. Give every child access to full-day pre-kindergarten. Education is still the best ticket to the middle class.
- Focus on research and innovation needed to develop the technologies of the future. Investments in medical and scientific research let us build whole new industries and give us the chance to create good jobs right here in America.
- Invest in infrastructure — in roads, bridges, rail, water, power and broadband. Businesses can't grow if the foundation crumbles beneath them. A 21st-century economy needs 21st-century infrastructure.
- Strengthen and expand Social Security, not just for today's seniors but also for today's young people. Work is changing. A strong Social Security system will ensure that all workers, no matter the number of jobs they piece together during their careers, can count on a secure retirement.
- Strengthen the rules of the marketplace. We don't build a future by turning the biggest banks loose to do whatever they want, and markets don't create value when corporations can cheat people or roll over their upstart competition.

- Promote fair trade by embracing only those trade policies that strengthen our economy, create good jobs with good wages and establish fair rules of the road for companies around the world. Our trade agreements shouldn't help multinational companies gut environmental, health and safety standards here and abroad under the guise of promoting commerce.
- Reform the tax code by ending the billions in tax breaks for corporations shipping jobs overseas and big oil companies, while leveling the playing field so that millionaires and billionaires pay their fair share.

Rebuilding our middle class won't be easy, but real change rarely is. It's time to be bold.

The American Dream depends on it.

From: John Del Cecato
To: B; Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma
Subject: Re: Just posted - WashPost
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 12:02:52 PM

Phew... Credit really goes to Team Warren - Dan Geldon is awesome to work with

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 12:01 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: Just posted - WashPost

Well-navigated, John. You actually got us there!

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 11:26 AM
To: B; Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma
Subject: Just posted - WashPost

How to revive the American Dream

*Elizabeth Warren, a Democrat, represents Massachusetts in the Senate.
Bill de Blasio, a Democrat, is mayor of New York.*

In this land of big dreams, there was never a dream bigger or more important than the one so deeply rooted in our values that it became known as the American Dream. Across generations, Americans shared the belief that hard work would bring opportunity and a better life. America wasn't perfect, but we invested in our kids and put in place policies to build a strong middle class.

We don't do that anymore, and the result is clear: The rich get richer, while everyone else falls behind. The game is rigged, and the people who rigged it want it to stay that way. They claim that if we act to improve the economic well-being of hard-working Americans — whether by increasing the minimum wage, reining in lawbreakers on Wall Street or doing practically anything else — we will threaten economic growth.

They are wrong.

That thinking is backward. A growing body of research — including work done by Nobel Prize-winning economist Joseph Stiglitz and the Roosevelt Institute — shows clearly that an increasing disparity between rich and poor, cronyism and an economic system that works only for those at the top are bad for the middle class and bad for our economy.

When the economy works for everyone, consumers have money to spend at businesses, and when businesses have more customers, they build more factories, hire more workers and sell more products — and the economy grows. For decades, our economy was built around this core understanding. We made big investments in the things that would create opportunities for everyone: public schools and universities; roads and bridges and power grids; research that spurred new industries, technologies — and jobs — here in the United States. We supported strong unions that pushed for better wages and working conditions, seeing those unions improve lives both for their members and for workers everywhere.

And it worked. From the 1930s to the late 1970s, as gross domestic product went up, wages increased more or less across the board. As the economic pie got bigger, pretty much everyone was getting a little more. That was how the United States built a great middle class.

Then in the early 1980s, a new theory swept the country. Its disciples claimed that if government policies took care of the rich and powerful, wealth would trickle down for everyone else. Trickle-down believers cut taxes sharply for those at the top and pushed for “deregulation” that hobbled the cops on Wall Street and let the most powerful corporations far too often do as they pleased.

Trickle-down economics failed disastrously. The rich and powerful have become richer and more powerful . In the past 35 years, the top 10 percent got all the growth in income. The rest of America — 90 percent of Americans — got nothing. Zip. Zero.

Government policies matter and can make a difference. Strengthening the American Dream is about the basics:

- Make work pay by increasing the minimum wage, empowering unions to bargain collectively, ending abusive scheduling practices for hourly workers, getting people the overtime pay they deserve, ensuring equal pay for equal work and making sure employers follow the law and respect the rights of workers.
- End the squeeze on working parents by passing a paid family leave requirement and investing in child care, after-school programs and extended learning days. Let families with children have a chance to balance careers with quality time together.
- Ensure everyone can get a great education without drowning in debt. Rein in the cost of college and allow families to refinance student loans at lower rates. Give every child access to full-day pre-kindergarten. Education is still the best ticket to the middle class.
- Focus on research and innovation needed to develop the technologies of the future. Investments in medical and scientific research let us build whole new industries and give us the chance to create good jobs right here in America.
- Invest in infrastructure — in roads, bridges, rail, water, power and broadband. Businesses can't grow if the foundation crumbles beneath them. A 21st-century economy needs 21st-century infrastructure.
- Strengthen and expand Social Security, not just for today's seniors but also for today's young people. Work is changing. A strong Social Security system will ensure that all workers, no matter the number of jobs they piece together during their careers, can count on a secure retirement.

- Strengthen the rules of the marketplace. We don't build a future by turning the biggest banks loose to do whatever they want, and markets don't create value when corporations can cheat people or roll over their upstart competition.
- Promote fair trade by embracing only those trade policies that strengthen our economy, create good jobs with good wages and establish fair rules of the road for companies around the world. Our trade agreements shouldn't help multinational companies gut environmental, health and safety standards here and abroad under the guise of promoting commerce.
- Reform the tax code by ending the billions in tax breaks for corporations shipping jobs overseas and big oil companies, while leveling the playing field so that millionaires and billionaires pay their fair share.

Rebuilding our middle class won't be easy, but real change rarely is. It's time to be bold.

The American Dream depends on it.

From: Leopold, Elana
To: Hayley Prim
Cc: B; jfdc@akpdmedia.com
Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 12:12:57 PM

Mayor Ivm for Malloy and Sherrod Brown

Sent from my iPhone

On May 6, 2015, at 12:11 PM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:

Alright!!!

On Wed, May 6, 2015 at 12:08 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Governor Dayton signs on! Add to the list! Coordinate announcement with ms. jamie makepeace [REDACTED] or [REDACTED] (cell). He can't make May 12 but he's open to doing an event together in the near future

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 10:52 AM
To: B
Cc: Elana Leopold <[REDACTED]>
Subject: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

I will send you latest TPA email with signers in clean email in case you need to forward.

12:00PM Governor Mark Dayton (Minnesota)

DIAL: [REDACTED] FYI a Trooper will answer the phone

12:45PM Senator Sheldon Whitehouse (Rhode Island)

DIAL: [REDACTED]

Asst is Leah Siegle [REDACTED]

1:15PM Congressman GK Butterfield, Chair of the Black Caucus (North Carolina)

DIAL: Durham Office: [REDACTED]

Alternative Cell: [REDACTED]

Former Congressman Barney Frank

DIAL: Cell: [REDACTED]

 He did not have time in your available window today, but you should call his cell whenever you can and he will call you back.

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; [REDACTED]
Cc: [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 12:18:16 PM

But someone should connect with his staffer about it before they see it in the papers

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 12:18 PM
To: B; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Cc: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

Great! We will use his name in all its glory - that's a huge get!

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 12:08 PM
To: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Cc: Elana Leopold <[REDACTED]> John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

Governor Dayton signs on! Add to the list! Coordinate announcement with ms. jamie makepeace ([REDACTED] or [REDACTED] cell). He can't make May 12 but he's open to doing an event together in the near future

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 10:52 AM
To: B
Cc: Elana Leopold <[REDACTED]>
Subject: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

I will send you latest TPA email with signers in clean email in case you need to forward.

12:00PM Governor Mark Dayton (Minnesota)

DIAL: [REDACTED] - FYI a Trooper will answer the phone

12:45PM Senator Sheldon Whitehouse (Rhode Island)

DIAL: [REDACTED]

Asst is Leah Siegle [REDACTED]

1:15PM Congressman GK Butterfield, Chair of the Black Caucus (North Carolina)

DIAL: Durham Office: [REDACTED]

Alternative Cell: [REDACTED]

Former Congressman Barney Frank

DIAL: Cell: [REDACTED]

 He did not have time in your available window today, but you should call his cell whenever you can and he will call you back.

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

From: John Del Cecato
To: Gunaratna, Mahen; B; FLONYC
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Re: Washington Post: Why income inequality is no silver bullet for Democrats and Hillary Clinton
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 12:24:24 PM

This is a silly forced choice. I'm actually surprised MORE people don't choose the latter. They SHOULD have asked whether people thought the problem with our economy was: a) that the rules are rigged in favor of the super-rich, who accumulate all the wealth while everyday people struggle just to make ends meet; or b) we just don't have enough opportunity for upward mobility.

1. The income gap between the wealthiest Americans and the rest of the country
2. Middle and working class Americans not being able to get ahead financially

From: <Gunaratna>, Mahen <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 12:18 PM
To: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>, FLONYC <FLONYC@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Washington Post: Why income inequality is no silver bullet for Democrats and Hillary Clinton

Why income inequality is no silver bullet for Democrats and Hillary Clinton

By Aaron Blake May 6 at 12:05 PM

The Democratic Party has renewed its focus on income inequality, hoping to ride a populist wave to a third straight term in the White House in 2016. In fact, it was the prevailing focus of Hillary Clinton's campaign launch. She said in her announcement video that the "deck is stacked" in favor of those at the top -- echoing the tone of Sen. Elizabeth Warren (D-Mass.).

And there's good reason for this message: Poll after poll shows a huge majority of Americans are concerned about income inequality. A recent Washington Post-ABC News poll showed 83 percent of Americans say the wealth gap is a problem -- including 51 percent who call it a "major problem." Gallup just this week showed that just 31 percent of Americans think wealth is fairly distributed.

But another new poll suggests that the income inequality argument has its limits. The NBC News/Wall Street Journal poll asked Americans which concerned them more:

<!--[if !supportLists]-->1. <!--[endif]-->The income gap between the wealthiest Americans and the rest of the country

<!--[if !supportLists]-->2. <!--[endif]-->Middle and working class Americans not being able to get ahead financially

In total, 28 percent chose No. 1 -- the income inequality argument -- while 65 percent chose No. 2.

This isn't a totally new finding. A 2011 Time/Abt SRBI poll found 34 percent said it's "more important to reduce inequality in income and wealth levels in America," while 60 percent said it's "more important to ensure everyone in America has the opportunity to reach the highest echelon of income and wealth even if not everyone makes it."

But in the context of the 2016 election, it's worth exploring.

Republicans, too, have been working on getting a bite at the populist pie. Sens. Ted Cruz (R-Tex.) and Marco Rubio (R-Fla.) have used their announcements to emphasize their humble roots, while Sen. Rand Paul (R-Ky.) and former Florida governor Jeb Bush (R) have talked about the GOP reaching out to the poor.

But for the GOP, talking about income inequality is still a tough nut to crack. A party built on the free market, small government and equality of opportunity, after all, has long decried the concept of redistribution of wealth. And talking about fixing income inequality is a slippery slope toward the "R"-word or even the "S"-word (socialism).

So what does this poll say about the GOP's task?

First of all, let's emphasize that it's not too surprising that people choose upward mobility over income inequality. After all, helping "middle and working class" Americans get ahead makes inequality less of an issue in and of itself. It's like killing two birds with one stone. And Clinton's "deck is stacked" message, to our mind, could be seen as catering to both people who choose Option No. 1 and Option No. 2.

But even if the poll question is something of an imperfect or false choice, it does hint at the limits of the income inequality argument. If Republicans can effectively tailor their economic message more toward Option No. 2 -- lifting up the middle and working class -- it could certainly mitigate whatever advantage Democrats have on the income inequality front.

Of course, aspiring to that kind of message and employing it effectively are two different things. And for now, Clinton has a clearer economic focus while the GOP is still searching for its path forward as it attempts to woo lower-income voters.

But if nothing else, this poll suggests the "deck is stacked" message has its limits -- or at least, more so than that 83 percent figure suggests.

--

Mahen Gunaratna

Director of Research and Media Analysis

Mayor's Press Office | City Hall

mgunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov

(212) 676-3154 (o) | (347)-268-4295 (c)

From: John Del Cecato
To: Yazgi, Stephanie
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Gann, Georgia
Subject: Re: TPA inquiry
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 12:51:56 PM
Attachments: TPAemail v12.docx

You can send to them - just remind them that we haven't released to the press & would like to keep it closely held

From: <Yazgi>, Stephanie Yazgi <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 12:45 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Gann, Georgia" <GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: TPA inquiry

Pelosi's office and USCM and

Democratic Policy and Communications Center who lead messaging for Senate Dems chaired by Schumer

have reached out to ask for more information on the TPA plan.

How would like for us to handle this?

Please join Bill de Blasio, Mayor of New York City, and declare your support for The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality on May 12, 2015 at 3:00pm at the U.S. Capitol Building's House Triangle.

More and more progressive leaders are signing on every day. So far supporters include:

- Eileen Appelbaum, Senior Economist, Center for Economic and Policy Research
- Dean Baker, Co-Director, Center for Economic and Policy Research
- Deepak Bhargava, Executive Director, Center for Community Change
- Robert Borosage, Co-Director Campaign for America's Future
- Raven Brooks, Executive Director, Netroots Nation
- Steve Buscemi, Actor
- Yvette Clarke, U.S. Representative from New York
- Larry Cohen, President, Communication Workers of America
- Robert Creamer, Author, Partner at Democracy Partners
- Sheila Crowley, President and CEO, National Low Income Housing Coalition
- Alan Cumming, Actor
- Bill de Blasio, Mayor of New York City
- Howard Dean, Former Governor of Vermont & Founder, Democracy for America
- Rosa DeLauro, U.S. Representative from Connecticut
- Abigail E. Disney, Filmmaker
- María Elena Durazo, Vice President for Immigration, Civil Rights and Diversity, UNITE HERE! & Former President Los Angeles County Federation of Labor
- Keith Ellison, U.S. Representative from Minnesota
- Chaka Fattah, U.S. Representative from Pennsylvania
- Jeff Faux, Founder, Economic Policy Institute
- Lily Eskelsen García, President, National Education Association
- Leo Gerard, President, United Steelworkers
- Danny Glover, Actor
- Lisa Graves, Executive Director, Center for Media and Democracy/PRWatch/ALECexposed.org
- George Gresham, President, 1199SEIU
- Raúl Grijalva, U.S. Representative from Arizona, Co-Chair Congressional Progressive Caucus
- Tom Harkin, Former U.S. Senator from Iowa
- Arshad Hasan, Executive Director, ProgressNow
- Mary Kay Henry, President, Service Employees International Union
- Jeannette Huerdo, Executive Director, United for a Fair Economy
- Van Jones, Co-Founder and President, Rebuild the Dream
- Sheila Jackson Lee, U.S. Representative from Texas
- Barbara Lee, U.S. Representative from California
- Gabriela Lemus, President, Progressive Congress
- Mike Lux, Co-Founder and President, Progressive Strategies

- Chirlane McCray, First Lady of New York City
- Heather McGhee, Executive Director, DEMOS
- Jim McGovern, U.S. Representative from Massachusetts
- Jeff Merkley, U.S. Senator from Oregon
- Lawrence Mishel, President, Economic Policy Institute
- Janet Murguia, President and CEO, National Council of La Raza
- Jerry Nadler, U.S. Congressman from New York
- Cynthia Nixon, Actor
- Atima Omara, President, Young Democrats of America
- James Parrott, Deputy Director and Chief Economist, Fiscal Policy Institute
- Robert Reich, Chancellor's Professor of Public Policy at University of California at Berkeley & Former U.S. Secretary of Labor
- Mark Ruffalo, Actor, Director, Producer & Activist
- Jeff Sachs, Economist & Director of the Earth Institute at Columbia University
- Bill Samuels, Chairman, EffectiveNY
- Susan Sarandon, Actress, Activist
- Lee Saunders, President, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees
- Jan Schakowsky, U.S. Representative from Illinois
- Reverend Al Sharpton, Founder and President of National Action Network
- D. Taylor, President, UNITE HERE!
- Linda Tirado, Author
- Richard L. Trumka, President, AFL-CIO
- Katrina vanden Heuvel, Editor, The Nation
- Bonnie Watson Coleman, U.S. Representative from New Jersey
- Randi Weingarten, President, American Federation of Teachers
- Michael Wessel, President, The Wessel Group
- Nan Whaley, Mayor of Dayton, Ohio
- Marjorie E. Wood, PhD, Senior Associate, Global Economy Project & Managing Editor, Inequality.org
- Marian Wright Edelman, Founder and President, Children's Defense Fund

The group of supporters will include federal and local elected officials, labor officials, cultural leaders, and progressive activists.

The Progressive Agenda – a progressive alternative, of sorts, to the 1994 Republican Contract with America – will include specific proposals to lift the floor for working people, support working parents, and promote tax fairness – policies that reward work rather than just wealth.

The event stems from a summit that Mayor de Blasio convened in New York City in early April, where a group of national progressive leaders gathered to discuss ways the country could combat the crisis of our time -- income inequality.

The Progressive Agenda builds upon the work of dozens of economists, lawmakers, think tanks, and progressive activists. It is not meant to be seen as a comprehensive set of proposals to combat income inequality, but rather a bold collection of core policy proposals around which progressives can organize and mobilize.

If you cannot attend in person, we'd still urge you to sign on to the document.

Thanks for your consideration, and feel free to contact me with any questions or concerns.

The Progressive Agenda To Combat Income Inequality

1. Lift the Floor for Working People

- Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.
- Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.
- Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
- Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

2. Support Working Families

- Pass national paid sick leave.
- Pass national paid family leave.
- Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
- Expand the Earned Income Tax Credit.
- Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

3. Tax Fairness

- Close the carried interest loophole.
- End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
- Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to take advantage of "performance pay" write-offs.

###

From: Gann, Georgia
To: "John Del Cecato"; Yazgi, Stephanie
Cc: Walzak, Phil
Subject: RE: TPA inquiry
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 1:06:05 PM

Great, I will send to the DPCC, Pelosi, and USCM (if pressed, Steph).

Georgia B. Gann
Senior Legislative Advisor
Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist
New York City Office of Federal Affairs
1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350
Tel. (202) 624-5912
Cell. (347) 497-1740
ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 12:53 PM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Gann, Georgia
Subject: Re: TPA inquiry

You can send to them - just remind them that we haven't released to the press & would like to keep it closely held

From: <Yazgi>, Stephanie Yazgi <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 12:45 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Gann, Georgia" <GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: TPA inquiry

Pelosi's office and USCM and

Democratic Policy and Communications Center who lead messaging for Senate Dems chaired by Schumer

have reached out to ask for more information on the TPA plan.

How would like for us to handle this?

From: Walzak, Phil
To: Yazgi, Stephanie; John Del Cecato
Cc: Gann, Georgia
Subject: RE: TPA inquiry
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 1:23:55 PM

Ok good I think that makes sense in the interim
thanks

From: Yazgi, Stephanie
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 1:23 PM
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Gann, Georgia
Subject: RE: TPA inquiry

Oops!

Sorry. We just had a call and clarified that we are communicating ALL requests on TPA to John who will handle from there until further information is revealed about who we can include and will revisit with John if this becomes a problem.

Thanks!

From: John Del Cecato [jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 1:12 PM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Gann, Georgia
Subject: Re: TPA inquiry

Hayley would be good

From: <Yazgi>, Stephanie Yazgi <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 1:07 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Gann, Georgia" <GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: TPA inquiry

Should we connect them directly to you or Hayley?

From: John Del Cecato [jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 12:53 PM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Gann, Georgia
Subject: Re: TPA inquiry

You can send to them - just remind them that we haven't released to the press & would like to keep it closely held

From: <Yazgi>, Stephanie Yazgi <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 12:45 PM

To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>

Cc: "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Gann, Georgia" <GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov>

Subject: TPA inquiry

Pelosi's office and USCM and

Democratic Policy and Communications Center who lead messaging for Senate Dems chaired by Schumer

have reached out to ask for more information on the TPA plan.

How would like for us to handle this?

From: Leopold, Elana
To: [REDACTED]
Cc: John Del Cecato
Subject: Butterfield
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 1:30:29 PM

Was not free

Need to reschedule

Sent from my iPhone

From: Leopold, Elana
To: [REDACTED]
Cc: John Del Cecato
Subject: Schumer
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 1:37:59 PM

TPA- Mayor says he is kindred. He said lets take a look and maybe we can support it but we can at least work together on things we do agree on. Martin Brennan is who we should follow up w.

Sent from my iPhone

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: B; Walzak, Phil; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Re: CNN may 12 or 13 -- or before/after
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 2:12:27 PM

We were also looking at CNN for the joint interview with mayor cornett on infrastructure.

----- Original Message -----

From: B
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 02:11 PM
To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: CNN may 12 or 13 -- or before/after Pls discuss. There are several ways to do this, but I want to do something with them. I'll explain why at planning mtg

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; B
Subject: Open online sign-up for TPA???
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 2:12:28 PM

Pls discuss at planning mtg tonite

From: Yazgi, Stephanie
To: Gann, Georgia; John Del Cecato
Subject: RE: Follow up
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 2:28:15 PM

In the case of MAYOR OUTREACH, we are the conduit.

IN THE CASE OF OTHERS, we should introduce them to JOHN

call me if you do not understand GBG

From: Gann, Georgia
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 2:21 PM
To: John Del Cecato; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: FW: Follow up

Tony is the COS for Mayor Elorza (Providence, RI). Mayor de Blasio spoke with Mayor Elorza about signing onto the document remotely (he cannot participate in the presser). Tony asked for me to send for review.

Best,

Georgia B. Gann
Senior Legislative Advisor
Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist
New York City Office of Federal Affairs
1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350
Tel. (202) 624-5912
Cell. (347) 497-1740
ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov

From: Gann, Georgia
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 2:20 PM
To: tsimon@providenceri.com
Cc: John Del Cecato
Subject: Follow up

Tony,

Great to speak with you just now. I am sending over the agenda content and connecting you here to John, who should be able to answer any questions and get additional information to you. Again, we haven't released to the press so would appreciate if you keep it close hold!

Best,

Georgia B. Gann
Senior Legislative Advisor
Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist
New York City Office of Federal Affairs

1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350
Tel. (202) 624-5912
Cell. (347) 497-1740
ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov

The Progressive Agenda To Combat Income Inequality

1. Lift the Floor for Working People

- Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.
- Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.
- Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
- Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

2. Support Working Families

- Pass national paid sick leave.
- Pass national paid family leave.
- Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
- Expand the Earned Income Tax Credit.
- Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

3. Tax Fairness

- Close the carried interest loophole.
- End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
- Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to take advantage of "performance pay" write-offs.

###

From: Hayley Prim
To: Leopold, Elana
Cc: John Del Cecato
Subject: Re: Louis CK
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 3:06:50 PM

I sent to his assistant, but will reforward saying mayor just spoke to him

On Wed, May 6, 2015 at 3:00 PM, Leopold, Elana <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Mayor spoke w him

Usually doesn't sign his name to things but will consider

Have we sent him TPA doc

Sent from my iPhone

--

Hayley Prim

c:

From: Yazgi, Stephanie
To: Leopold, Elana; John Del Cecato \(jfdc@akpdmedia.com\); [REDACTED]
Cc: Schwartz, Regina
Subject: RE: Mayor's for TPA
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 3:11:21 PM
Attachments: MAYORS OUTREACH tpa 5.6.xlsx

Pls see attached.

Thank you.
stephanie

From: Leopold, Elana
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 2:37 PM
To: John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com); [REDACTED]
Cc: Yazgi, Stephanie; Schwartz, Regina
Subject: Mayor's for TPA

Our Mayor wants to know which of the following have signed on. Those who have not- he wants to call. Here we go!

- Mayor Murray
- Mayor Hales
- Mayor Lee
- Mayor Garcetti
- Mayor Adler
- Mayor Hodges
- Mayor Barrett
- Mayor Peduto
- Mayor Cranley
- Mayor Reed
- Mayor Brown
- Mayor Benjamin
- Mayor Bowser
- Mayor Nutter
- Mayor Barake
- Mayor Walsh
- Mayor Elorza
- Mayor Harp
- Mayor Segarra
- Mayor Brannan
- Upstate Mayors (Sheehan, Minor, Warren, Brown)

	ASKED	SIGN ON YET	NOTES
Mayor Murray	YES	NO
Mayor Hales	NO	NO
Mayor Lee	YES	NO
Mayor Garcetti	NO	NO
Mayor Adler	YES	NO
Mayor Hodges	YES	NO	Has concerns
Mayor Barrett	YES	NO
Mayor Peduto	YES	NO
Mayor Cranley	YES	NO
Mayor Reed	NO	NO
Mayor Brown	NO	NO
Mayor Benjamin	NO	NO
Mayor Bowser	YES	NO
Mayor Nutter	NO	NO
Mayor Baraka	YES	YES
Mayor Walsh	NO	NO
Mayor Elorza	YES	NO
Mayor Harp	NO	NO
Mayor Segarra	YES	NO
Mayor Brannan	NO	NO
Upstate Mayors (Sheehan, Miner, Warren, Brown)	NO	NO
Mayor Whaley	YES	YES
Mayor Becker	YES	NO	Has concerns
Mayor Rawlings Blake	YES	NO
Mayor Stanton	YES	NO

From: Leopold, Elana
To: [REDACTED] John Del Cecato
Subject: Gillibrand
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 3:21:12 PM

Believes in everything we're doing but doesn't sign pledges :)

Sent from my iPhone

From: Hayley Prim
To: Leopold, Elana
Cc: John Del Cecato
Subject: Re: Gillibrand
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 3:35:34 PM

ok, Emma just suggested he give Harry some love, but we will try to get it done without him

On Wed, May 6, 2015 at 3:34 PM, Leopold, Elana <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

He said he hasn't email but he thinks you guys can do without him

Sent from my iPhone

On May 6, 2015, at 3:23 PM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:

ping him on belafonte while he's focused on this!

On Wed, May 6, 2015 at 3:21 PM, Leopold, Elana <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Believes in everything we're doing but doesn't sign pledges :)

Sent from my iPhone

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: John Del Cecato
To: Yazgi, Stephanie; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 3:45:41 PM

He should re-read the wording of TPA... The language talks about increasing it & indexing to inflation, to eventually get to $15.. And it would be at the federal level... So I think he could still be for it

From: <Yazgi>, Stephanie Yazgi <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 1:42 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmmedia.com>, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: TPA

Folks:

Mayor Becker has concerns about signing on to TPA because he gave budget address yesterday calling on wages to be $10.10 so has prob with our $15 number.

Also has two other concerns. Kaye from his office told me that he would be reaching out directly to MBdB about it and I've given Elana the heads up.

You might want to let Hayley know so she can track.

Thank you,
Stephanie

From: Gann, Georgia
To: Yazgi, Stephanie; Leopold, Elana; John Del Cecato
Cc: [REDACTED] Schwartz, Regina
Subject: RE: Mayor's for TPA
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 3:52:49 PM

I spoke with Erick Garcia, Senior Policy Aide, on Mayor Hodge's staff. He and his COS requested more specific details on the trade portion of The Progressive Agenda.

The trade portion is raising a flag – she does not have a position on TPA (fast track authority for TPP) and would need to vet with members of her delegation at a minimum before engaging IF The Progressive Agenda is referencing the current trade negotiations/TPA.

Erick has been connected to the team to run through the intent of the trade piece, the connection to the current TPA conversation, and anything that would be referenced specifically about trade at the 3pm presser.

Georgia B. Gann
Senior Legislative Advisor
Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist
New York City Office of Federal Affairs
1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350
Tel. (202) 624-5912
Cell. (347) 497-1740
ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov

From: Yazgi, Stephanie
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 3:49 PM
To: Leopold, Elana; John Del Cecato
Cc: [REDACTED] Schwartz, Regina; Gann, Georgia
Subject: Re: Mayor's for TPA

Georgia

From: Leopold, Elana
Sent: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 3:48 PM
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: Yazgi, Stephanie; [REDACTED] Schwartz, Regina
Subject: Re: Mayor's for TPA

Spoke to who? Hodges staff?

What was original concern?

Sent from my iPhone

On May 6, 2015, at 3:46 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

I spoke to him... We shall see

From: <Yazgi>, Stephanie Yazgi <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>

Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 3:14 PM

To: "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>

Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>

"Schwartz, Regina" <RSchwartz@cityhall.nyc.gov>

Subject: RE: Mayor's for TPA

I've hooked up Erick with Del Cecato who can speak to it

From: Leopold, Elana

Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 3:12 PM

To: Yazgi, Stephanie

Cc: John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com); [REDACTED] Schwartz, Regina

Subject: Re: Mayor's for TPA

Thanks- what is Hodges concern?

Sent from my iPhone

On May 6, 2015, at 3:11 PM, Yazgi, Stephanie <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Pls see attached.

Thank you.
stephanie

From: Leopold, Elana

Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 2:37 PM

To: John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com); [REDACTED]

Cc: Yazgi, Stephanie; Schwartz, Regina

Subject: Mayor's for TPA

Our Mayor wants to know which of the following have signed on. Those who have not- he wants to call. Here we go!

Mayor Murray
Mayor Hales
Mayor Lee
Mayor Garcetti
Mayor Adler
Mayor Hodges
Mayor Barrett
Mayor Peduto
Mayor Cranley
Mayor Reed
Mayor Brown
Mayor Benjamin

Mayor Bowser
Mayor Nutter
Mayor Barake
Mayor Walsh
Mayor Elorza
Mayor Harp
Mayor Segarra
Mayor Brannan
Upstate Mayors (Sheehan, Minor, Warren, Brown)
<MAYORS OUTREACH tpa 5.6.xlsx>

From: John Del Cecato
To: B; [REDACTED] Snyder, Thomas; [REDACTED]
Cc: [REDACTED] Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 4:11:40 PM

Excellent!

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 4:06 PM
To: John Davis <[REDACTED]> John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "[REDACTED]" <[REDACTED]>
Cc: Aaron PickrellEmail <[REDACTED]> Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
"Leopold, Elana" <LEopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

Just spoke with Tom Harkin. He confirms that he can't make may 12 but we can add his name to our list

From: John Davis [[mailto:\[REDACTED\]](mailto:[REDACTED])]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 01:50 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; B; Snyder, Thomas; [REDACTED]
<[REDACTED]>
Cc: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> [REDACTED]
<[REDACTED]> Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

Will do.

On Wednesday, May 6, 2015 1:49 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

We'll take that... But we'd also like him there on 5/12... Davis - you want to follow up with Josh?

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 12:53 PM
To: "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "[REDACTED]" <[REDACTED]>
<[REDACTED]>
Cc: Aaron PickrellEmail <[REDACTED]> John Davis <[REDACTED]> John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> "Leopold, Elana" <LEopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

Sen whitehouse is open but hasn't studied the TPA yet. Says we should follow up with josh karedne (sp?) of his staff. Said at minimum he'll say nice things about what we're trying to do

From: Snyder, Thomas
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 12:42 PM
To: <[REDACTED]> <[REDACTED]>
Cc: B; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> [REDACTED]
<[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

The hits just keep on coming

Sent from my iPhone

On May 6, 2015, at 12:41 PM, jeani murray <[REDACTED]> wrote:

I am pretty sure it was the Politico piece they saw today. Woohoo!

On Wednesday, May 6, 2015, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Well done!

From: jeani murray [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 12:39 PM
To: B
Cc: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> [REDACTED]
<[REDACTED]> Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Fw: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

Wade Henderson, President and CEO of the Leadership Council on Civil and Human Rights - in and attending.

Wants to engage further and be a part of longer term activities.

On Wednesday, May 6, 2015, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Fyi

From: B
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 12:08 PM
To: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Cc: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com'

<jfdc@akpdmedia.com>

Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

Governor Dayton signs on! Add to the list! Coordinate announcement with ms. jamie makepeace ([REDACTED] or [REDACTED] cell). He can't make May 12 but he's open to doing an event together in the near future

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 10:52 AM
To: B
Cc: Elana Leopold <[REDACTED]>
Subject: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

I will send you latest TPA email with signers in clean email in case you need to forward.

12:00PM Governor Mark Dayton (Minnesota)

DIAL: [REDACTED] FYI a Trooper will answer the phone

12:45PM Senator Sheldon Whitehouse (Rhode Island)

DIAL: [REDACTED]

Asst is Leah Siegle [REDACTED]

1:15PM Congressman GK Butterfield, Chair of the Black Caucus (North Carolina)

DIAL: Durham Office: [REDACTED]

Alternative Cell: [REDACTED].

Former Congressman Barney Frank

DIAL: Cell: [REDACTED]

 He did not have time in your available window today, but you should call his cell whenever you can and he will call you back.

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: John Del Cecato
To: Leopold, Elana
Cc: Carey, Michael
Subject: Re: Favor to ask
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 4:45:17 PM

yeah, that's what I figured... ok - thank you!

From: <Leopold>, Elana <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 4:38 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: Favor to ask

Sometimes he decides to call Malloy on a whim..like today!

Sent from my iPhone

On May 6, 2015, at 4:37 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

HUGZ!

From: <Carey>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 4:22 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: Favor to ask

Yes we know!
Simma#
Egghausting#

Michael Paul Carey
Director of Scheduling and Advance
City Hall
New York, New York 10007
212.341.5396

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 4:24 PM
To: Leopold, Elana; Carey, Michael
Subject: Favor to ask

If you know that MBDB is going to throw a call into Gov. Malloy, can you give me a heads-up? Just helps me with my politics with his team (Malloy was a client of mine in '14)

From: John Del Cecato
To: Gann, Georgia; Yazgi, Stephanie
Cc: Walzak, Phil
Subject: Re: TPA inquiry
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 4:45:40 PM

David Simas at the White House has our stuff - but ok

From: <Gann>, Georgia <GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 4:43 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Stephanie Yazgi <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: TPA inquiry

The White House also reached out for more information. Good to connect John?

Georgia B. Gann
Senior Legislative Advisor
Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist
New York City Office of Federal Affairs
1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350
Tel. (202) 624-5912
Cell. (347) 497-1740
ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 1:12 PM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Gann, Georgia
Subject: Re: TPA inquiry

Hayley would be good

From: <Yazgi>, Stephanie Yazgi <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 1:07 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Gann, Georgia" <GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: TPA inquiry

Should we connect them directly to you or Hayley?

From: John Del Cecato [jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 12:53 PM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Gann, Georgia
Subject: Re: TPA inquiry

You can send to them - just remind them that we haven't released to the press & would like to keep it closely held

From: <Yazgi>, Stephanie Yazgi <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 12:45 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Gann, Georgia" <GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: TPA inquiry

Pelosi's office and USCM and

Democratic Policy and Communications Center who lead messaging for Senate Dems chaired by Schumer

have reached out to ask for more information on the TPA plan.

How would like for us to handle this?

From: Yazgi, Stephanie
To: Gann, Georgia; "John Del Cecato"
Cc: Walzak, Phil
Subject: Re: TPA inquiry
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 4:51:47 PM

Sure but ask him first

From: Gann, Georgia
Sent: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 4:43 PM
To: 'John Del Cecato'; Yazgi, Stephanie
Cc: Walzak, Phil
Subject: RE: TPA inquiry

The White House also reached out for more information. Good to connect John?

Georgia B. Gann
Senior Legislative Advisor
Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist
New York City Office of Federal Affairs
1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350
Tel. (202) 624-5912
Cell. (347) 497-1740
ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 1:12 PM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Gann, Georgia
Subject: Re: TPA inquiry

Hayley would be good

From: <Yazgi>, Stephanie Yazgi <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 1:07 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Gann, Georgia" <GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: TPA inquiry

Should we connect them directly to you or Hayley?

From: John Del Cecato [jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 12:53 PM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Gann, Georgia
Subject: Re: TPA inquiry

You can send to them - just remind them that we haven't released to the press & would like to keep it closely held

From: <Yazgi>, Stephanie Yazgi <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 12:45 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Gann, Georgia" <GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: TPA inquiry

Pelosi's office and USCM and

Democratic Policy and Communications Center who lead messaging for Senate Dems chaired by Schumer

have reached out to ask for more information on the TPA plan.

How would like for us to handle this?

From: Carey, Michael
To: Williams, Dominic; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; ""jfdc@akpdmedia.com" \(jfdc@akpdmedia.com\)"; "Liz Hegarty"; Wolfe, Emma; Hagelgans, Andrea; John, Roxanne; Fialkoff, Gabrielle; Darlington, Mandy \(OMB\); Griffith, Chantell; Chao, Raymond; Ko, Eunice; Leopold, Elana; Wiley, Maya; Fuleihan, Dean \(OMB\); Shorris, Anthony; ""Jonathan@berlinrosen.com" \(Jonathan@berlinrosen.com\)"; Walzak, Phil; Thornton, Demetrius; Howe, Amanda; "Baldick Nicholas"; Snyder, Thomas
Subject: RE: MBDB: Weekly Planning Meeting
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 5:30:44 PM

Hi All,

We are moving this upto 7 PM!!!!

Please note time change.

Michael Paul Carey

Director of Scheduling and Advance

City Hall

New York, New York 10007

212.341.5396

-----Original Appointment-----

From: Carey, Michael

Sent: Thursday, April 23, 2015 10:01 AM

To: Carey, Michael; Williams, Dominic; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' (jfdc@akpdmedia.com); 'Liz Hegarty'; Wolfe, Emma; Hagelgans, Andrea; John, Roxanne; Fialkoff, Gabrielle; Darlington, Mandy (OMB); Griffith, Chantell; Chao, Raymond; Ko, Eunice; Leopold, Elana; Wiley, Maya; Fuleihan, Dean (OMB); Shorris, Anthony; 'Jonathan@berlinrosen.com' (Jonathan@berlinrosen.com); Walzak, Phil; Thornton, Demetrius; Howe, Amanda; 'Baldick Nicholas'; Snyder, Thomas

Subject: MBDB: Weekly Planning Meeting

When: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 7:00 PM-8:30 PM (UTC-05:00) Eastern Time (US & Canada).

Where: Gracie Mansion, The Dining Room

From: Yazgi, Stephanie
To: Leopold, Elana; John Del Cecato \(jfdc@akpdmedia.com\); [REDACTED]
Cc: Schwartz, Regina
Subject: RE: Mayor's for TPA
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 5:53:33 PM

I believe so.

We think Bowser may as well.

I haven't connected with but have shared with folks like Cranley and Stanton who might be good to do so

Steph

From: Leopold, Elana
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 5:52 PM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie; John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com); [REDACTED]
Cc: Schwartz, Regina
Subject: RE: Mayor's for TPA

So the only Mayor's to currently sign on are Baraka and Whaley?

From: Yazgi, Stephanie
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 3:11 PM
To: Leopold, Elana; John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com); [REDACTED]
Cc: Schwartz, Regina
Subject: RE: Mayor's for TPA

Pls see attached.

Thank you.
stephanie

From: Leopold, Elana
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 2:37 PM
To: John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com); [REDACTED]
Cc: Yazgi, Stephanie; Schwartz, Regina
Subject: Mayor's for TPA

Our Mayor wants to know which of the following have signed on. Those who have not- he wants to call. Here we go!

Mayor Murray
Mayor Hales
Mayor Lee
Mayor Garcetti
Mayor Adler
Mayor Hodges
Mayor Barrett
Mayor Peduto
Mayor Cranley
Mayor Reed

Mayor Brown
Mayor Benjamin
Mayor Bowser
Mayor Nutter
Mayor Barake
Mayor Walsh
Mayor Elorza
Mayor Harp
Mayor Segarra
Mayor Brannan
Upstate Mayors (Sheehan, Minor, Warren, Brown)

From: FLONYC
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com
Subject: Re: oped is up!
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 6:07:17 PM

Y'all did an excellent job with this piece -- kudos all around!!

Sent from my iPhone

> On May 6, 2015, at 3:08 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>

> Fyi

>

> -----Original Message-----

> To: Elizabeth Warren

> Subject: Re: oped is up!

> Sent: May 6, 2015 3:09 PM

>

>

> And I love this op-ed as well!! It is a joy to be working with you and your team. Let's shake things up! :)

>

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Elizabeth Warren

> To: Bill de Blasio

> Subject: oped is up!

> Sent: May 6, 2015 1:21 PM

>

> Washington Post moved fast. We'll be in print on Friday, but we're on the website already. I love this oped.

> http://www.washingtonpost.com/opinions/how-to-revive-the-american-dream/2015/05/06/a583c94c-f323-11e4-b2f3-af5479e6bbdd_story.html?hpid=z6

From: Yazgi, Stephanie
To: Gann, Georgia; Leopold, Elana; John Del Cecato
Cc: [REDACTED] Schwartz, Regina; Viguers, Jonathan
Subject: RE: Mayor's for TPA - Hodges
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 6:16:42 PM

fyi

From: Gann, Georgia
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 6:12 PM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie; Leopold, Elana; John Del Cecato
Cc: [REDACTED] Schwartz, Regina
Subject: RE: Mayor's for TPA - Hodges

Update: Mayor Hodges would like to be at the presser at 3 pm and support the agenda, but needs clarification on the trade portion of The Progressive Agenda both in the press conference and the weight of that trade bullet in the agenda as a whole. Mayor Hodges' COS John Stiles would like to connect directly – his cell is [REDACTED] and email john.stiles@minneapolismn.gov

John called a couple of minutes ago – I let him know someone would follow up.

Georgia B. Gann
Senior Legislative Advisor
Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist
New York City Office of Federal Affairs
1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350
Tel. (202) 624-5912
Cell. (347) 497-1740
ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov

From: Gann, Georgia
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 3:53 PM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie; Leopold, Elana; John Del Cecato
Cc: [REDACTED] Schwartz, Regina
Subject: RE: Mayor's for TPA

I spoke with Erick Garcia, Senior Policy Aide, on Mayor Hodge's staff. He and his COS requested more specific details on the trade portion of The Progressive Agenda.

The trade portion is raising a flag – she does not have a position on TPA (fast track authority for TPP) and would need to vet with members of her delegation at a minimum before engaging IF The Progressive Agenda is referencing the current trade negotiations/TPA.

Erick has been connected to the team to run through the intent of the trade piece, the connection to the current TPA conversation, and anything that would be referenced specifically about trade at the 3pm presser.

Georgia B. Gann
Senior Legislative Advisor
Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist
New York City Office of Federal Affairs
1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350
Tel. (202) 624-5912
Cell. (347) 497-1740
ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov

From: Yazgi, Stephanie
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 3:49 PM
To: Leopold, Elana; John Del Cecato
Cc: [REDACTED] Schwartz, Regina; Gann, Georgia
Subject: Re: Mayor's for TPA

Georgia

From: Leopold, Elana
Sent: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 3:48 PM
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: Yazgi, Stephanie; [REDACTED] Schwartz, Regina
Subject: Re: Mayor's for TPA

Spoke to who? Hodges staff?

What was original concern?

Sent from my iPhone

On May 6, 2015, at 3:46 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

I spoke to him... We shall see

From: <Yazgi>, Stephanie Yazgi <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 3:14 PM
To: "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
"Schwartz, Regina" <RSchwartz@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: Mayor's for TPA

I've hooked up Erick with Del Cecato who can speak to it

From: Leopold, Elana
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 3:12 PM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie
Cc: John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com); [REDACTED] Schwartz, Regina
Subject: Re: Mayor's for TPA

Thanks- what is Hodges concern?

Sent from my iPhone

On May 6, 2015, at 3:11 PM, Yazgi, Stephanie <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Pls see attached.

Thank you.
stephanie

From: Leopold, Elana
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 2:37 PM
To: John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com); [REDACTED]
Cc: Yazgi, Stephanie; Schwartz, Regina
Subject: Mayor's for TPA

Our Mayor wants to know which of the following have signed on. Those who have not- he wants to call. Here we go!

Mayor Murray
Mayor Hales
Mayor Lee
Mayor Garcetti
Mayor Adler
Mayor Hodges
Mayor Barrett
Mayor Peduto
Mayor Cranley
Mayor Reed
Mayor Brown
Mayor Benjamin
Mayor Bowser
Mayor Nutter
Mayor Barake
Mayor Walsh
Mayor Elorza
Mayor Harp
Mayor Segarra
Mayor Brannan
Upstate Mayors (Sheehan, Minor, Warren, Brown)
<MAYORS OUTREACH tpa 5.6.xlsx>

From: John Del Cecato
To: Petrella, Gerry \(DPCC\); Gann, Georgia
Subject: Re: Contract - DPCC
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 6:24:40 PM

Nice to meet you Gerry!

JDC

John F. Del Cecato
Partner/Creative Director
AKPD Message and Media
915 Broadway, Suite 1301
New York, NY 10010
212-529-5775 (office)
212-529-0545 (fax)
917 685 4819 (mobile)

On 5/6/15, 1:42 PM, "Petrella, Gerry (DPCC)" <Gerry_Petrella@dpcc.senate.gov> wrote:

>thanks

>

>-----Original Message-----

>From: Gann, Georgia [<mailto:GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov>]

>Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 1:22 PM

>To: Petrella, Gerry (DPCC)

>Cc: John Del Cecato

>Subject: RE: Contract - DPCC

>

>Gerry,

>

>I am connecting you here with John - he has been very involved in this >work and will be able to go into some detail on the effort.

>

>John, if you two don't know each other already, you should! Gerry is with >the DPCC.

>

>Best,

>

>Georgia B. Gann

>Senior Legislative Advisor

>Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist New York City Office of

>Federal Affairs

>1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350

>Tel. (202) 624-5912

>Cell. (347) 497-1740

>ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov

>

>

>-----Original Message-----

>From: Petrella, Gerry (DPCC) [mailto:Gerry_Petrella@dpcc.senate.gov]

>Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 7:08 AM

>To: Gann, Georgia

>Subject: Contract

>

>Is this something you or Max can share?

>

>SIREN! FIRST LOOK - De Blasio to unveil a progressive version of the >"Contract with America": "On Tuesday, May 12, New York Mayor Bill de >Blasio will convene progressive leaders from across the country at the >U.S. Capitol's ... House Triangle in support of The Progressive Agenda to >Combat Income Inequality. The Progressive Agenda ... builds upon the work >of dozens of economists, lawmakers, and ... activists."

>

>--BACKSTORY: De Blasio convened a group of a dozen national progressives >at Gracie Mansion on April 2, and they discussed ideas for addressing >income inequality. Then the conversation extended to others -- >economists, electeds, activists.

>

>More than 60 big names have signed on, including Sen. Jeff Merkley >(D-Ore.); Reps. Keith Ellison (D-Minn.), Raúl Grijalva (D-Ariz.), and >Rosa DeLauro (D-Conn.); Marian Wright Edelman and Howard Dean; national >labor leaders; and actors Susan Sarandon and Steve Buscemi.

From: Hayley Prim
To: B; Snyder, Thomas
Cc: Aaron Pickrell; John Del Cecato; John Davis; jeani murray
Subject: May 6 Status: 62 Signers, 31 Attendees
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 6:27:17 PM

Names in Bold are attending

Fiscal Policy Institute	Deputy Director and Chief Economist	James	Parrott
Economic Policy Institute	Senior Economist	Eileen	Appelbaum
Center for Economic and Policy Research	Co-Director	Dean	Baker
Newark	Mayor	Ras	Baraka
Netroots Nation	Executive Director	Raven	Brooks
	Actor	Steve	Buscemi
	Actor	Alan	Cumming
Minnesota	Governor	Mark	Dayton
Philanthropist/ Fimmaker		Abigail	Disney
Economic Policy Institute	Founder	Jeff	Faux
		Danny	Glover
Former Senator		Tom	Harkin
United for a Fair Economy	Executive Director	Jeannette	Huezo
Dream Corps Unlimited		Van	Jones
	Actress	Cynthia	Nixon
University of California at Berkley	Chancellor's Professor	Robert	Reich
	Actor	Mark	Ruffalo
Columbia University	Economist/Director of Earth Institute	Jeff	Sachs
EffectiveNY	Chairman	Bill	Samuels
Actress		Susan	Sarandon
Unite Here	President	D	Taylor
The Wessel Group	President	Michael	Wessel
Childrens Defense Fund	President/Founder	Marian	Wright Edelman
Young Democrats of America	President	Atima	Omara
Center for Media and Democracy	Executive Director	Lisa	Graves
Inequality.org	Managing Editor	Marjorie	Wood
New Jersey	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Bonnie	Watson Coleman
AFL-CIO	President	Richard	Trumka
The Nation	Editor	Katrina	Vanden Heuvel
SEIU	President	Mary Kay	Henry

Campaign for America's Future	Co-Director	Robert	Borosage
Communities for Change	Executive Director	Deepak	Bhargava
New York	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Yvette	Clarke
Democracy Partners	Partner	Robert	Creamer
National Low Income Housing Coalition	President	Sheila	Crowley
Former Governor/Democracy for America	Founder	Howard	Dean
Connecticut	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Rosa	DeLauro
Unite Here	Former President, LA County	Maria Elena	Durazo
Minnesota	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Keith	Ellison
Pennsylvania	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Chaka	Fattah
NEA	President	Lily	Garcia
Steelworkers	President	Leo	Gerard
SEIU 1199	President	George	Gresham
Arizona	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Raul	Grijalva
Texas	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Sheila	Jackson-Lee
Progressive Congress	President	Gabriela	Lemus
Iowa	U.S. Rep, PC Member	David	Loebsack
Progressive Strategies	Director	Mike	Lux
Demos	Executive Director	Heather	McGhee
Massachusetts	U.S. Rep, PC Member	James	McGovern
Oregon	U.S. Senator	Jeff	Merkley
Economic Policy Institute	President	Lawrence	Mishel
National Council of La Raza		Janet	Murguia
New York	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Jerry	Nadler
AFSCME	President	Lee	Saunders
Illinois	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Jan	Schakowsky
NAN	President	Al	Sharpton
AFT	President	Randi	Weingarten
Dayton	Mayor	Nan	Whaley
	Author	Linda	Tirado
Progress Now	Executive Director	Arshad	Hasan
CWA	President	Larry	Cohen

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: John Del Cecato
To: Gann, Georgia; "Michael.Bloom@mail.house.gov"
Subject: Re: Democratic Leader Pelosi - Progressive Agenda
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 6:30:52 PM

Hey Michael - let me know if you have any questions!

Best,
JDC

John F. Del Cecato
Partner/Creative Director
AKPD Message and Media
915 Broadway, Suite 1301
New York, NY 10010
212-529-5775 (office)
212-529-0545 (fax)
917 685 4819 (mobile)

From: <Gann>, Georgia <GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 1:20 PM
To: "Michael.Bloom@mail.house.gov" <Michael.Bloom@mail.house.gov>
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Democratic Leader Pelosi - Progressive Agenda

Michael,

Great to speak with you just now. I am connecting you here with John – he has been very involved in this work and will be able to go into some detail on the effort.

John – Michael is with Democratic Leader Pelosi’s office.

Best,

Georgia B. Gann
Senior Legislative Advisor
Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist
New York City Office of Federal Affairs
1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350
Tel. (202) 624-5912
Cell. (347) 497-1740
ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Cc: FLONYC
Subject: Re: oped is up!
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 6:48:31 PM

beautiful

On 5/6/15, 3:08 PM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>
>Fyi
>
>-----Original Message-----
>To: Elizabeth Warren
>Subject: Re: oped is up!
>Sent: May 6, 2015 3:09 PM
>
>
>And I love this op-ed as well!! It is a joy to be working with you and >your team. Let's shake things up! :)

>
>
>
>-----Original Message-----
>From: Elizabeth Warren
>To: Bill de Blasio
>Subject: oped is up!
>Sent: May 6, 2015 1:21 PM
>
>Washington Post moved fast. We'll be in print on Friday, but we're on >the website already. I love this oped.
>http://www.washingtonpost.com/opinions/how-to-revive-the-american-dream/20
>15/05/06/a583c94c-f323-11e4-b2f3-af5479e6bbdd_story.html?hpid=z6

From: B
To: [REDACTED]
Cc: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Re:
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 7:08:26 PM

And to be clear, I'm not sure podesta and mook are encouraging, discouraging or neutral if asked. But it doesn't really matter. They understand what we're doing. Ignore skittish staff. If there is a problem with a union and we care about that union, pls have me deal with the principal

From: Aaron Pickrell [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 06:52 PM
To: B
Cc: 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re:

Great – that is what I thought. It was AFT staff. SEIU staff has been poking around too.

I assured them they weren't talking to the right folks. Just wanted to flag for you. If hear anything other chirping, will let you know

From: B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 6:48 PM
To: AARON PICKRELL <[REDACTED]>
Cc: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com" <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re:

Podesta and Mook understand exactly what we're doing. There is no need to reach out again. So who are these labor leaders who are wavering?

From: Aaron Pickrell [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 05:01 PM
To: B
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject:

Mayor - some of our labor friends have reached out to someone in Clinton world to see if Clinton land is cool with them joining our efforts. I don't know who they spoke with in HRC land, but they conveyed back to the labor folks that HRC land had not been in communication with us about TPA.

I said that you have been speaking with Robby and others throughout this process. It may be worth reaching out to Robby again. I am guessing whoever the labor people are talking to are not necessarily talking to Robby or in the loop.

Thank you sir - let me know what you think

Aaron

From: Alcantara, Elias
To: "John Del Cecato"; Gann, Georgia
Subject: RE: March 12 announcement
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 7:27:09 PM

Thanks, Georgia.

Hi John,

Great to e-meet you too. Let me know if you have some time to connect this evening or first thing in the AM.

Thanks,
Elias

Elias Alcantara
Associate Director
Office of Intergovernmental Affairs | The White House
O: 202-456-3963 C: 202-596-4137 | ealcantara@who.eop.gov

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 6:33 PM
To: Gann, Georgia; Alcantara, Elias
Subject: Re: March 12 announcement

Hey Elias. Great to e-meet.

Best,
JDC

John F. Del Cecato
Partner/Creative Director
AKPD Message and Media
915 Broadway, Suite 1301
New York, NY 10010
212-529-5775 (office)
212-529-0545 (fax)
917 685 4819 (mobile)

From: <Gann>, Georgia <GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov>

Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 4:48 PM
To: "Alcantara, Elias" <Elias_Alcantara@who.eop.gov>
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: March 12 announcement

Elias,

Connecting you here with John – he has been very involved in this work and will share more information. He has also connected with David Simas.

Best,

Georgia B. Gann
Senior Legislative Advisor
Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist
New York City Office of Federal Affairs
1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350
Tel. (202) 624-5912
Cell. (347) 497-1740
ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov

From: Stiles, John T.
To: John Del Cecato; Gann, Georgia
Subject: RE: Progressive Agenda
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 7:45:34 PM

Thanks, John – you too. Let me know when you have a few minutes to talk. I appreciate the help.

John Stiles
Chief of Staff
Office of Mayor Betsy Hodges
City of Minneapolis
(612) 673-3665 office
(612) 581-1788 mobile
john.stiles@minneapolismn.gov

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 5:39 PM
To: Gann, Georgia
Cc: Stiles, John T.
Subject: Re: Progressive Agenda

Good to meet you John

On May 6, 2015, at 6:38 PM, Gann, Georgia <GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

John,

Great speaking with you earlier. Closing the loop and connecting you here with John Del Cecato – he has been very involved in this work and he will be able to go into more detail on your and Mayor Hodges' specific questions about the trade bullet. Pardon me if you've already connected by now!

Best,

Georgia B. Gann
Senior Legislative Advisor
Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist
New York City Office of Federal Affairs
1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350
Tel. (202) 624-5912
Cell. (347) 497-1740
ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov

From: John Del Cecato
To: Leopold, Elana; Hagelgans, Andrea
Cc: Rebecca Katz \(hilltoppublicsolutions.com\)
Subject: Re: MSNBC
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 9:56:33 PM

You don't happen to know the name of Sharpton's producer do you? Do you Andrea?

From: <Leopold>, Elana <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Friday, May 1, 2015 at 9:38 AM
To: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: MSNBC

Did Mayor relay to you that Sharpton said he would help pump up May 12th with the other MSNBC peeps?

From: John Del Cecato
To: Bloom, Michael
Cc: Gann, Georgia; Hammill, Drew
Subject: Re: Democratic Leader Pelosi - Progressive Agenda
Date: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 10:06:08 PM
Attachments: TPAemail v14.docx

Here's the latest... Sorry - I thought you already had this document - but I realize that you probably didn't... Please note that we're not sharing the agenda with the press at this point - but this is the latest email, with list of signers, and the planks...

From: <Bloom>, Michael <Michael.Bloom@mail.house.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 7:12 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: "Gann, Georgia" <GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hammill, Drew" <Drew.Hammill@mail.house.gov>
Subject: Re: Democratic Leader Pelosi - Progressive Agenda

Fantastic, thanks John

Sent from my iPhone

On May 6, 2015, at 6:48 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

Will get you more info tonight

From: <Bloom>, Michael <Michael.Bloom@mail.house.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 3:57 PM
To: "Gann, Georgia" <GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Hammill, Drew" <Drew.Hammill@mail.house.gov>
Subject: RE: Democratic Leader Pelosi - Progressive Agenda

Thanks for connecting us Georgia –

Hi John – I am wondering if you have any background information on the Progressive Agenda/"Contract with America" that you might be willing to share? The story I read this morning described some of the plan, but I'm hoping you might have more comprehensive information that we could use in case the Leader asks. I've cc'd Leader Pelosi's Communications Director Drew Hammill on this email as well. Thanks in advance for your help, and I look forward to hearing from you.

Best,
Michael Bloom

Michael Tobias Bloom

Office of the Democratic Leader Honorable Nancy Pelosi
H-204 United States Capitol
Washington, D.C. 20515
p. 202-225-0100 f. 202-226-0938
www.DemocraticLeader.gov

From: Gann, Georgia [<mailto:GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov>]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 1:20 PM
To: Bloom, Michael
Cc: John Del Cecato
Subject: Democratic Leader Pelosi - Progressive Agenda

Michael,

Great to speak with you just now. I am connecting you here with John – he has been very involved in this work and will be able to go into some detail on the effort.

John – Michael is with Democratic Leader Pelosi’s office.

Best,

Georgia B. Gann
Senior Legislative Advisor
Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist
New York City Office of Federal Affairs
1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350
Tel. (202) 624-5912
Cell. (347) 497-1740
ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov

<image001.jpg>

<image002.jpg>

<image003.jpg>

<image004.jpg>

<image005.jpg>

Please join Bill de Blasio, Mayor of New York City, and declare your support for The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality on May 12, 2015 at 3:00pm at the U.S. Capitol Building's House Triangle.

More and more progressive leaders are signing on every day. So far supporters include:

- Eileen Appelbaum, Senior Economist, Center for Economic and Policy Research
- Dean Baker, Co-Director, Center for Economic and Policy Research
- Ras Baraka, Mayor of Newark, NJ
- Deepak Bhargava, Executive Director, Center for Community Change
- Robert Borosage, Co-Director Campaign for America's Future
- Raven Brooks, Executive Director, Netroots Nation
- Steve Buscemi, Actor
- Yvette Clarke, U.S. Representative from New York
- Larry Cohen, President, Communication Workers of America
- Robert Creamer, Author, Partner at Democracy Partners
- Sheila Crowley, President and CEO, National Low Income Housing Coalition
- Alan Cumming, Actor
- Bill de Blasio, Mayor of New York City
- Mark Dayton, Governor of Minnesota
- Howard Dean, Former Governor of Vermont & Founder, Democracy for America
- Rosa DeLauro, U.S. Representative from Connecticut
- Abigail E. Disney, Filmmaker
- María Elena Durazo, Vice President for Immigration, Civil Rights and Diversity, UNITE HERE! & Former President Los Angeles County Federation of Labor
- Keith Ellison, U.S. Representative from Minnesota
- Chaka Fattah, U.S. Representative from Pennsylvania
- Jeff Faux, Founder, Economic Policy Institute
- Lily Eskelsen García, President, National Education Association
- Leo Gerard, President, United Steelworkers
- Danny Glover, Actor
- Lisa Graves, Executive Director, Center for Media and Democracy/PRWatch/ALECexposed.org
- George Gresham, President, 1199SEIU
- Raúl Grijalva, U.S. Representative from Arizona, Co-Chair Congressional Progressive Caucus
- Tom Harkin, Former U.S. Senator from Iowa
- Arshad Hasan, Executive Director, ProgressNow
- Wade Henderson, President and CEO, Leadership Council on Civil and Human Rights
- Mary Kay Henry, President, Service Employees International Union
- Jeannette Huelzo, Executive Director, United for a Fair Economy
- Van Jones, Co-Founder and President, Rebuild the Dream

- Sheila Jackson Lee, U.S. Representative from Texas
- Barbara Lee, U.S. Representative from California
- Gabriela Lemus, President, Progressive Congress
- Dave Loebsack, U.S. Representative from Iowa
- Mike Lux, Co-Founder and President, Progressive Strategies
- Chirlane McCray, First Lady of New York City
- Heather McGhee, Executive Director, DEMOS
- Jim McGovern, U.S. Representative from Massachusetts
- Jeff Merkley, U.S. Senator from Oregon
- Lawrence Mishel, President, Economic Policy Institute
- Janet Murguia, President and CEO, National Council of La Raza
- Jerry Nadler, U.S. Congressman from New York
- Cynthia Nixon, Actor
- Atima Omara, President, Young Democrats of America
- James Parrott, Deputy Director and Chief Economist, Fiscal Policy Institute
- Robert Reich, Chancellor's Professor of Public Policy at University of California at Berkeley & Former U.S. Secretary of Labor
- Mark Ruffalo, Actor, Director, Producer & Activist
- Jeff Sachs, Economist & Director of the Earth Institute at Columbia University
- Bill Samuels, Chairman, EffectiveNY
- Susan Sarandon, Actress, Activist
- Lee Saunders, President, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees
- Jan Schakowsky, U.S. Representative from Illinois
- Reverend Al Sharpton, Founder and President of National Action Network
- D. Taylor, President, UNITE HERE!
- Linda Tirado, Author
- Richard L. Trumka, President, AFL-CIO
- Katrina vanden Heuvel, Editor, The Nation
- Bonnie Watson Coleman, U.S. Representative from New Jersey
- Randi Weingarten, President, American Federation of Teachers
- Michael Wessel, President, The Wessel Group
- Nan Whaley, Mayor of Dayton, Ohio
- Marjorie E. Wood, PhD, Senior Associate, Global Economy Project & Managing Editor, Inequality.org
- Marian Wright Edelman, Founder and President, Children's Defense Fund

The group of supporters will include federal and local elected officials, labor officials, cultural leaders, and progressive activists.

The Progressive Agenda – a progressive alternative, of sorts, to the 1994 Republican Contract with America – will include specific proposals to lift the floor for working people, support working parents, and promote tax fairness – policies that reward work rather than just wealth.

The event stems from a summit that Mayor de Blasio convened in New York City in early April, where a group of national progressive leaders gathered to discuss ways the country could combat the crisis of our time -- income inequality.

The Progressive Agenda builds upon the work of dozens of economists, lawmakers, think tanks, and progressive activists. It is not meant to be seen as a comprehensive set of proposals to combat income inequality, but rather a bold collection of core policy proposals around which progressives can organize and mobilize.

If you cannot attend in person, we'd still urge you to sign on to the document.

Thanks for your consideration, and feel free to contact me with any questions or concerns.

The Progressive Agenda To Combat Income Inequality

1. Lift the Floor for Working People

- Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.
- Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.
- Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
- Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

2. Support Working Families

- Pass national paid sick leave.
- Pass national paid family leave.
- Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
- Expand the Earned Income Tax Credit.
- Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

3. Tax Fairness

- Close the carried interest loophole.
- End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
- Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to take advantage of "performance pay" write-offs.

###

From: Walzak, Phil
To: Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Klein, Monica; Adams, Marti
Subject: Re: British elections
Date: Thursday, May 07, 2015 9:01:35 AM

Only if milibrand wins I think
Which seems unlikely

----- Original Message -----

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
Sent: Thursday, May 07, 2015 08:48 AM
To: Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Klein, Monica; Adams, Marti
Subject: British elections

Will we put anything out?

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: [REDACTED]; Carey, Michael; Hayley Prim; jeani murray; John Davis; John Del Ceccato \(jfdc@akpdmedia.com\); Leopold, Flana
Subject: signatures
Date: Thursday, May 07, 2015 9:42:05 AM

Karen Narasaki is no (she is in the Obama Admin now which I did not realize)
Tom Saenz of MALDEF is supposed to respond sometime today.

From: Bray, Jackie
To: Walzak, Phil; "John Del Cecato"; Hagelgans, Andrea
Cc: John, Roxanne
Subject: RE: Good morning
Date: Thursday, May 07, 2015 9:58:42 AM

I have been in touch with the LAUP folks but we haven't spoken explicitly about a joint op-ed. We last spoke when they did their big launch the first week of April – CMC amplified their launch on her social platforms.

If folks like this idea, I'm happy to re-engage with the LAUP team and push this ball forward.

Thanks.

Jackie Bray
Deputy Chief of Staff to the First Lady of NYC
Office of the Mayor, City of NY
212-341-5045 - Office
646-675-5171 – Cell
jbray@cityhall.nyc.gov

From: Walzak, Phil
Sent: Thursday, May 07, 2015 9:56 AM
To: 'John Del Cecato'; Hagelgans, Andrea
Cc: John, Roxanne; Bray, Jackie
Subject: RE: Good morning

++

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Thursday, May 07, 2015 9:56 AM
To: Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil
Subject: FW: Good morning

Do you know who's been in contact?

From: Chirlane <[REDACTED]>
Date: Thursday, May 7, 2015 at 9:54 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Fwd: Good morning

Good morning! Please see below. Who is working on this?

Begin forwarded message:

From: Janice Enright <jenright@ickesenright.com>

Date: May 7, 2015 at 9:38:54 AM EDT

To: Chirlane McCray <[REDACTED]>

Subject: Re: Good morning

Darn. Well your staff has talked about a joint Op-Ed with our CEO from LAUP (Los Angeles Universal PreK), maybe leveraging off the Mayor's message on ECE, equal pay etc on Tues? We can send a draft for consideration if you agree.

Sent from my iPhone

On May 7, 2015, at 9:18 AM, Chirlane McCray <[REDACTED]> wrote:

Hi! Thx! No, Janice, I am not. I have another engagement.

Sent from my iPhone

> On May 7, 2015, at 6:54 AM, Janice Enright <jenright@ickesenright.com> wrote:

>

> Hope you guys are doing well! Watch from afar... Are you coming down on Tues with the Mayor for the event?

>

> Sent from my iPhone

From: Gann, Georgia
To: "Simon, Tony"; John Del Cecato
Subject: RE: Follow up
Date: Thursday, May 07, 2015 10:09:07 AM
Attachments: TPAemail v14.docx

Tony,

Sending along this document that has more information about the current signers and the planks. The agenda is included there and also pasted below (sent over yesterday). Again, we're not sharing with the press at this point. Is there at time today that works for you to hop on a quick call?

Georgia B. Gann
Senior Legislative Advisor
Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist
New York City Office of Federal Affairs
1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350
Tel. (202) 624-5912
Cell. (347) 497-1740
ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov

-----Original Message-----

From: Simon, Tony [<mailto:TSimon@providenceri.com>]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 8:36 PM
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: Gann, Georgia
Subject: Re: Follow up

Hello John and Georgia-

Thanks for sending this. While Mayor Elorza might not be able to join in person in DC, we'd be happy to review any materials to potentially sign on to.

Thanks, and looking forward to hearing from you.

All best,

Tony Simon

Sent from my iPad

On May 6, 2015, at 6:32 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com<<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>>>> wrote:

Hey Tony. Good to e-meet you.

Best,
JDC

John F. Del Cecato
Partner/Creative Director
AKPD Message and Media
915 Broadway, Suite 1301
New York, NY 10010
212-529-5775 (office)
212-529-0545 (fax)

917 685 4819 (mobile)

From: <Gann>, Georgia <GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov<<mailto:GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov>>>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 2:19 PM
To: "tsimon@providenceri.com<<mailto:tsimon@providenceri.com>>"
<tsimon@providenceri.com<<mailto:tsimon@providenceri.com>>>
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com<<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>>>
Subject: Follow up

Tony,

Great to speak with you just now. I am sending over the agenda content and connecting you here to John, who should be able to answer any questions and get additional information to you. Again, we haven't released to the press so would appreciate if you keep it close hold!

Best,

Georgia B. Gann
Senior Legislative Advisor
Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist New York City Office of Federal Affairs
1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350
Tel. (202) 624-5912
Cell. (347) 497-1740
ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov<<mailto:ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov>>

The Progressive Agenda
To Combat Income Inequality

1. Lift the Floor for Working People

- Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.
- Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.
- Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
- Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

2. Support Working Families

- Pass national paid sick leave.
- Pass national paid family leave.
- Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
- Expand the Earned Income Tax Credit.
- Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

3. Tax Fairness

- Close the carried interest loophole.
- End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
- Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to take advantage of "performance pay" write-offs.

###

Please join Bill de Blasio, Mayor of New York City, and declare your support for The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality on May 12, 2015 at 3:00pm at the U.S. Capitol Building's House Triangle.

More and more progressive leaders are signing on every day. So far supporters include:

- Eileen Appelbaum, Senior Economist, Center for Economic and Policy Research
- Dean Baker, Co-Director, Center for Economic and Policy Research
- Ras Baraka, Mayor of Newark, NJ
- Deepak Bhargava, Executive Director, Center for Community Change
- Robert Borosage, Co-Director Campaign for America's Future
- Raven Brooks, Executive Director, Netroots Nation
- Steve Buscemi, Actor
- Yvette Clarke, U.S. Representative from New York
- Larry Cohen, President, Communication Workers of America
- Robert Creamer, Author, Partner at Democracy Partners
- Sheila Crowley, President and CEO, National Low Income Housing Coalition
- Alan Cumming, Actor
- Bill de Blasio, Mayor of New York City
- Mark Dayton, Governor of Minnesota
- Howard Dean, Former Governor of Vermont & Founder, Democracy for America
- Rosa DeLauro, U.S. Representative from Connecticut
- Abigail E. Disney, Filmmaker
- María Elena Durazo, Vice President for Immigration, Civil Rights and Diversity, UNITE HERE! & Former President Los Angeles County Federation of Labor
- Keith Ellison, U.S. Representative from Minnesota
- Chaka Fattah, U.S. Representative from Pennsylvania
- Jeff Faux, Founder, Economic Policy Institute
- Lily Eskelsen García, President, National Education Association
- Leo Gerard, President, United Steelworkers
- Danny Glover, Actor
- Lisa Graves, Executive Director, Center for Media and Democracy/PRWatch/ALECexposed.org
- George Gresham, President, 1199SEIU
- Raúl Grijalva, U.S. Representative from Arizona, Co-Chair Congressional Progressive Caucus
- Tom Harkin, Former U.S. Senator from Iowa
- Arshad Hasan, Executive Director, ProgressNow
- Wade Henderson, President and CEO, Leadership Council on Civil and Human Rights
- Mary Kay Henry, President, Service Employees International Union
- Jeannette Huelzo, Executive Director, United for a Fair Economy
- Van Jones, Co-Founder and President, Rebuild the Dream

- Sheila Jackson Lee, U.S. Representative from Texas
- Barbara Lee, U.S. Representative from California
- Gabriela Lemus, President, Progressive Congress
- Dave Loebsack, U.S. Representative from Iowa
- Mike Lux, Co-Founder and President, Progressive Strategies
- Chirlane McCray, First Lady of New York City
- Heather McGhee, Executive Director, DEMOS
- Jim McGovern, U.S. Representative from Massachusetts
- Jeff Merkley, U.S. Senator from Oregon
- Lawrence Mishel, President, Economic Policy Institute
- Janet Murguia, President and CEO, National Council of La Raza
- Jerry Nadler, U.S. Congressman from New York
- Cynthia Nixon, Actor
- Atima Omara, President, Young Democrats of America
- James Parrott, Deputy Director and Chief Economist, Fiscal Policy Institute
- Robert Reich, Chancellor's Professor of Public Policy at University of California at Berkeley & Former U.S. Secretary of Labor
- Mark Ruffalo, Actor, Director, Producer & Activist
- Jeff Sachs, Economist & Director of the Earth Institute at Columbia University
- Bill Samuels, Chairman, EffectiveNY
- Susan Sarandon, Actress, Activist
- Lee Saunders, President, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees
- Jan Schakowsky, U.S. Representative from Illinois
- Reverend Al Sharpton, Founder and President of National Action Network
- D. Taylor, President, UNITE HERE!
- Linda Tirado, Author
- Richard L. Trumka, President, AFL-CIO
- Katrina vanden Heuvel, Editor, The Nation
- Bonnie Watson Coleman, U.S. Representative from New Jersey
- Randi Weingarten, President, American Federation of Teachers
- Michael Wessel, President, The Wessel Group
- Nan Whaley, Mayor of Dayton, Ohio
- Marjorie E. Wood, PhD, Senior Associate, Global Economy Project & Managing Editor, Inequality.org
- Marian Wright Edelman, Founder and President, Children's Defense Fund

The group of supporters will include federal and local elected officials, labor officials, cultural leaders, and progressive activists.

The Progressive Agenda – a progressive alternative, of sorts, to the 1994 Republican Contract with America – will include specific proposals to lift the floor for working people, support working parents, and promote tax fairness – policies that reward work rather than just wealth.

The event stems from a summit that Mayor de Blasio convened in New York City in early April, where a group of national progressive leaders gathered to discuss ways the country could combat the crisis of our time -- income inequality.

The Progressive Agenda builds upon the work of dozens of economists, lawmakers, think tanks, and progressive activists. It is not meant to be seen as a comprehensive set of proposals to combat income inequality, but rather a bold collection of core policy proposals around which progressives can organize and mobilize.

If you cannot attend in person, we'd still urge you to sign on to the document.

Thanks for your consideration, and feel free to contact me with any questions or concerns.

The Progressive Agenda To Combat Income Inequality

1. Lift the Floor for Working People

- Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.
- Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.
- Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
- Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

2. Support Working Families

- Pass national paid sick leave.
- Pass national paid family leave.
- Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
- Expand the Earned Income Tax Credit.
- Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

3. Tax Fairness

- Close the carried interest loophole.
- End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
- Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to take advantage of "performance pay" write-offs.

###

From: Yazgi, Stephanie
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: Viguers, Jonathan; Gann, Georgia
Subject: RE: Hodges
Date: Thursday, May 07, 2015 11:15:32 AM

cool!
thanks for the inTel!

cc: GBG and JV for logging in our spreadsheet as well FYI

From: John Del Cecato [jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Thursday, May 07, 2015 10:35 AM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: Hodges

Is in for TPA - signing & attending.

I put her mind at ease on trade stuff. Promised that whole press conf wasn't about trade, and that she could do her one sentence on Paid Family Leave.

BTW, she's not necessarily for or against Fast Track - she just doesn't see it as in her wheelhouse.

From: Carey, Michael
To: Hagelgans, Andrea; Walzak, Phil; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com" (jfdc@akpdmedia.com)
Subject: Reich
Date: Thursday, May 07, 2015 1:37:13 PM
Attachments: de Blasio and Reich Flyer.pdf

Heads up – Reich folks put this out before I approved nor actually confirmed.

Economic Inequality and the Future of Progressivism

Thursday, May 14th | 12:00 - 1:30 p.m. | Freight and Salvage, Berkeley

Bill de Blasio
Mayor of New York City

Mayor Bill de Blasio is the 109th Mayor of New York City. From his early days as a young City Hall staffer, to serving on his local school board, to his most recent position as Public Advocate for New York City, de Blasio has spent his life fighting to ensure that every New Yorker - in every neighborhood of its five boroughs - gets a fair shot.

Professor Robert Reich has served in three national administrations, most recently as secretary of labor under President Bill Clinton. He has written numerous books and also recently released a film “Inequality for All” which is available on Netflix, iTunes and DVD.

Robert Reich
Chancellor's Professor of Public Policy

Sponsored by the Goldman School of Public Policy

This event is free & open to the public (donations requested at the door)

From: Carey, Michael
To: "John Del Cecato"
Subject: RE: Wed Group am discussion on the de Blasio Progressive Agenda? Wednesday: Example: Wallach and Johanson on Fast Track+ Geevarghese on April 15 Actions
Date: Thursday, May 07, 2015 2:03:25 PM

Nope

Michael Paul Carey
Director of Scheduling and Advance
City Hall
New York, New York 10007
212.341.5396

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Thursday, May 7, 2015 2:00 PM
To: Carey, Michael
Subject: FW: Wed Group am discussion on the de Blasio Progressive Agenda? Wednesday: Example: Wallach and Johanson on Fast Track+ Geevarghese on April 15 Actions

I said I would check to see if this worked for BDB sked - but I'm assuming no? 5/13 at 8 or 845am

From: Roger Hickey <hickey@ourfuture.org>
Date: Thursday, May 7, 2015 at 12:58 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: Robert Borosage <rborosage@ourfuture.org>
Subject: Wed Group am discussion on the de Blasio Progressive Agenda? Wednesday: Example: Wallach and Johanson on Fast Track+ Geevarghese on April 15 Actions

John, Thanks for checking whether de Blasio might join our Wed Group of progressive leaders on May 13 (8 or 8:45).

If he can't do it, is there someone else who can talk about de Blasio's progressive agenda?

Note that Wed Group discussions, while a good way to reach progressives, are off the record – so he can be relaxed an unofficial. Roger

Roger Hickey
Campaign for America's Future
office: (202) 587-1604 cell: (202) 270-0300

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Thursday, May 07, 2015 10:57 AM
To: Roger Hickey
Cc: Robert Borosage
Subject: Re: OK, no rally. Can someone speak Wed am on the de Blasio Progressive Agenda? Wednesday: Wallach and Johanson on Fast Track+ Geevarghese on April 15 Actions

BDB is actually going to be in town on Wed for a Day of Action with a bunch of mayors (R & D) to fight for transportation funding. I haven't been involved on that side of things - let me see what I can find out about his sked that day

From: Roger Hickey <hickey@ourfuture.org>
Date: Thursday, May 7, 2015 at 10:53 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: Robert Borosage <rborosage@ourfuture.org>
Subject: OK, no rally. Can someone speak Wed am on the de Blasio Progressive Agenda? Wednesday: Wallach and Johanson on Fast Track+ Geevarghese on April 15 Actions

John -- Now understood: You don't want us to promote turnout at the Hill event on Tuesday.

Question: Is de Blasio available to come speak to our Wednesday Group gathering of progressive leaders at 8 am or 8:45 am on Wed May 13 (the next morning).

We meet at the AFL-CIO every two weeks -- and this would be a great opportunity to discuss the Progressive Agenda, getting others to sign on, and have de Blasio talk about his role with mayors, progressive thinkers around the country.

If he has to go back to run the city on Tues, is there someone else involved with the Agenda who might come and talk informally?

Best, Roger

--

Roger Hickey
America's Future
office (202) 587-1604 cell: (202) 270-0300

----- Forwarded message -----

From: Wednesday Group <wednesdaygroup@ourfuture.org>
Date: Mon, Apr 13, 2015 at 12:05 PM
Subject: Wednesday: Wallach and Johanson on Fast Track+ Geevarghese on April 15 Actions
To: hickey@ourfuture.org

An off-the-record strategy briefing for present and future progressive leaders.

Wednesday, April 15 at 8 a.m.
AFL-CIO headquarters, 815 16th Street NW (Map)

Lori Wallach

DIRECTOR, PUBLIC CITIZEN'S GLOBAL TRADE WATCH

Karin Johanson

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, COALITION TO STOP FAST TRACK

How We Can Stop Fast Track and TPP – and Launch a New Era of Trade Policy That is Good for the US and the World Economy

Lori Wallach was recently called by National Journal "the trade debate's guerilla warrior" who fights for "a trade policy that respects the fundamental tenets of American democracy." Karin Johanson is a political organizer, former executive director of the DCCC and campaign manager for Tammy Baldwin's successful 2012 campaign for the US Senate. They will report from the front lines – and give us our marching orders – of the battle to stop Fast Track and TPP.

Alert: Join Monday, April 20 – With Populism2015 Sponsors: CAF, NPA, USAction, Alliance for a Just Society

Rally: APRIL 20 DON'T TRADE OUR FUTURE. Join us to STOP FAST TRACK AND BAD TRADE DEALS 11:30 AM

Assemble at AFL-CIO Headquarters, 815 16th Street NW

RALLY NOON: 600 17th Street NW at US Trade Representative

Joseph Geevarghese

DEPUTY DIRECTOR, CHANGE TO WIN

April 15 Actions: Fight for $15 an Hour and a Union

On April 15, low-wage workers and allies are holding growing demonstrations demanding $15 and a union. (Get more information and sign up here: <http://april15.org/>.) We'll discuss the success of the actions and the next stage in the drive to win decent wages and the right to organize. Over the past year, Joe Geevarghese has been supporting low-wage federal contract workers who are organizing with Good Jobs Nation to win living wages and a voice at work. Since May 2013, these workers have gone on strike eight times at landmark federal sites like the Pentagon and Smithsonian Museums to call on President Obama to use his executive powers to lift them out of poverty. At the State of the Union, the president announced that he would raise their minimum wage to $10.10 an hour. It's a good start, but the truth is that America's workers need much more than the minimum — they need good jobs and strong unions.

See you 8 a.m. Wednesday at the AFL-CIO, 815 16th Street NW.

Add to calendar » Outlook | Google | Yahoo | Outlook.com | iCalendar

This message was sent from the Campaign for America's Future. We apologize if you received this message in error. If you would like to unsubscribe from some or all of our emails, please visit our unsubscribe page.

OurFuture.org | Donate | Contact Us

Subscribe to E-Publications

| | |

| |

--

Roger Hickey

America's Future

office (202) 587-1604 cell: (202) 270-0300

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: John Del Ceccato \(jfdc@akpdmedia.com\)
Subject: May 12
Date: Thursday, May 07, 2015 2:19:20 PM

Hi John – is there a plan to discuss/brief the mayor about questions he may face about “where does the TPA plan go next?” You may already have covered this but I’m uncertain about how to answer this question other than plan to have a presidential forum later on.

From: John Del Cecato
To: Snyder, Thomas
Subject: FW: Pledge sign
Date: Thursday, May 07, 2015 2:21:40 PM
Attachments: GMS TPA pledgePanel.pdf

FYI

From: Hayley Prim <hprim@hilltoppublicsolutions.com>
Date: Thursday, May 7, 2015 at 12:12 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, John Davis <[REDACTED]> jeani murray <[REDACTED]> Aaron PickrellEmail <[REDACTED]> Rebecca Katz <rkatz@hilltoppublicsolutions.com>
Subject: Fwd: Pledge sign

This is what our enlarged agenda is going to look like. Dont have a draft of the second blow up yet where we will list all of the signers so far and leave blank space for anyone else to sign

----- Forwarded message -----

From: Laura Tamman <laura@greenlightmediastrategies.com>
Date: Thu, May 7, 2015 at 11:29 AM
Subject: Pledge sign
To: Hayley Prim <hprim@hilltoppublicsolutions.com>

see attached.

--

Hayley Prim
Hilltop Public Solutions
[REDACTED]

TO COMBAT INCOME INEQUALITY

1 Lift the Floor for Working People

- Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.
- Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.
- Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
- Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

2 Support Working Families

- Pass national paid sick leave.
- Pass national paid family leave.
- Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
- Expand the Earned Income Tax Credit.
- Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

3 Tax Fairness

- Close the carried interest loophole.
- End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
- Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to take advantage of "performance pay" write-offs.

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: "John Del Cecato"
Subject: RE: Pledge sign
Date: Thursday, May 07, 2015 2:26:02 PM

Lookin good!

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Thursday, May 07, 2015 2:23 PM
To: Snyder, Thomas
Subject: FW: Pledge sign

FYI

From: Hayley Prim <hprim@hilltoppublicsolutions.com>
Date: Thursday, May 7, 2015 at 12:12 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, John Davis <[REDACTED]>, jeani murray <[REDACTED]>, Aaron Pickrell <[REDACTED]>, Rebecca Katz <rkatz@hilltoppublicsolutions.com>
Subject: Fwd: Pledge sign

This is what our enlarged agenda is going to look like. Dont have a draft of the second blow up yet where we will list all of the signers so far and leave blank space for anyone else to sign

----- Forwarded message -----

From: Laura Tamman <laura@greenlightmediastrategies.com>
Date: Thu, May 7, 2015 at 11:29 AM
Subject: Pledge sign
To: Hayley Prim <hprim@hilltoppublicsolutions.com>

see attached.

--
Hayley Prim
Hilltop Public Solutions
[REDACTED]

From: John Del Cecato
To: Abeywardena, Penny; Slocum, Leslie
Cc: Wolfe, Emma; Wright, Jessica
Subject: Re: De Blasio
Date: Thursday, May 07, 2015 2:55:48 PM

roger

On 5/7/15, 2:28 PM, "Abeywardena, Penny" <PAbeywardena@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>Yes, pls ask Vachon to send request to my colleague Leslie, cc'd to this >email.

>

>Thanks!

>

>

>

>Penny Abeywardena

>Commissioner

>Mayor's Office for International Affairs

>

>> On May 7, 2015, at 6:57 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

>>

>> I think this is something for you, Penny?

>>

>>> On 5/7/15, 10:43 AM, "Soros, Jonathan" <jsoros@jsoros.com> wrote:

>>>

>>> Thought I would send this along your way as well. I may also come back >>> and see if I can get a few minutes w/ the Mayor in the coming days >>>about >>> the recent events in Albany. Working on some things.

>>>

>>> J

>>>

>>>

>>> _____
>>> From: Vachon, Michael

>>> Sent: Thursday, May 07, 2015 9:29 AM

>>> To: [REDACTED]; Soros, Jonathan

>>> Subject: FW: De Blasio

>>>

>>> Can we make this happen? Chrystia Freeland who is asking on behalf of >>> Kathleen Wynne is a likely candidate for Canada's foreign minister if

>>>the >>> liberals win... let me know how to proceed

>>>

>>> -----Original Message-----

>>> From: [REDACTED] [[mailto:\[REDACTED\]](mailto:[REDACTED])]

>>> Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 8:21 PM

>>> To: Vachon, Michael

>>> Subject: De Blasio

>>>

>>> Do you have good De Blasio contacts?

>>> The premier of Ontario, Canada's most populous province (10 million >>> people), is travelling to NY and DC next week.

>>> She is interesting [REDACTED] and progressive -- making >>>big >>> investments in infrastructure and education.

>>> Given De Blasio's efforts to build a broader progressive coalition, I >>> think they would be very interested in talking to one another.
>>> Can you help?
>>> (Also, hope you are well! GS was on good form in Paris!) C Sent from my >>> BlackBerry device on the Rogers Wireless Network
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> Kathleen Wynne
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> Kathleen Wynne is Ontario's 25th Premier and the first woman to serve >>>in >>> that role. She was first elected to the Ontario legislature in 2003 as >>> the MPP for Don Valley West, and she became the leader of the Ontario >>> Liberal Party in January, 2013.
>>

From: Wolfe, Emma
To: Norvell, Wiley; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Spitalnick, Amy \(OMB\); Adams, Marti; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Rebecca Katz \(hilltoppublicsolutions.com\)
Subject: Re: Jonathan Westin
Date: Thursday, May 07, 2015 4:17:17 PM

For sure
+ jdc rkk

From: Norvell, Wiley
Sent: Thursday, May 07, 2015 04:16 PM
To: Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Adams, Marti
Subject: Jonathan Westin

Going on NPR tomorrow to talk about Mayor and inequality. Looking for some bullets on our contract w/America, and some bullets of progressive things he's accomplished here in NYC. We have teed up anywhere?

Wiley Norvell
Deputy Press Secretary
Office of New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio
(212) 788-2958
(917) 428-8307 (mobile)
wnorvell@cityhall.nyc.gov
@wileynorvell

From: Yazgi, Stephanie
To: Schwartz, Regina
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com; Viguers, Jonathan
Subject: RE: TPA
Date: Thursday, May 07, 2015 4:31:00 PM

she has a mtg on 13 trust
i tried

From: Schwartz, Regina
Sent: Thursday, May 07, 2015 4:07 PM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com; Viguers, Jonathan
Subject: Re: TPA

Why not stay for the 13th?

Sent from my iPhone

On May 7, 2015, at 3:48 PM, Yazgi, Stephanie <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

We can add Mayor LIBBY SCHAFF name to the Progressive Agenda and she will be in attendance at the press conference... MAY 12th

Shereda is not traveling with her but i am listed as press conference contact.

Thanks!
Stephanie

From: B
To: Snyder, Thomas; [REDACTED]; Carey, Michael; [REDACTED]; [REDACTED]; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: New signer
Date: Thursday, May 07, 2015 4:36:02 PM

Excellent! Well done

From: Snyder, Thomas
Sent: Thursday, May 07, 2015 01:53 PM
To: B; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> Carey, Michael; Hayley Prim
<[REDACTED]> jeani murray <[REDACTED]> John Davis
<[REDACTED]> John Del Ceccato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com) <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Leopold, Elana
Subject: New signer

Thomas Saenz, President of MALDEF (Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund); cannot attend on the 12th.

From: John Del Cecato
To: Yazgi, Stephanie
Cc: Viguers, Jonathan; Schwartz, Regina
Subject: Re: TPA
Date: Thursday, May 07, 2015 4:53:10 PM

got it - thanks

From: <Yazgi>, Stephanie Yazgi <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Thursday, May 7, 2015 at 3:48 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: "Viguers, Jonathan" <JViguers@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Schwartz, Regina" <RSchwartz@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: TPA

We can add Mayor LIBBY SCHAFF name to the Progressive Agenda and she will be in attendance at the press conference... MAY 12th

Shereda is not traveling with her but i am listed as press conference contact.

Thanks!
Stephanie

From: John Del Cecato
To: Rebecca Katz \(hilltoppublicsolutions.com\); Wolfe, Emma
Cc: Norvell, Wiley; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Spitalnick, Amy \(OMB\); Adams, Marti
Subject: Re: Jonathan Westin
Date: Thursday, May 07, 2015 4:59:39 PM

yes, that's great

From: Rebecca Katz <rkatz@hilltoppublicsolutions.com>
Date: Thursday, May 7, 2015 at 4:43 PM
To: "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: "Norvell, Wiley" <WNorvell@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel" <GSchnakeMahl@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Spitalnick, Amy (OMB)" <SpitalnickA@omb.nyc.gov>, "Adams, Marti" <MAAdams@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: Jonathan Westin

I think Mahen has the list of accomplishments. Rolling Stone also has a nice quick graph on it. Feel free to add to it.

Only 16 months into his term, de Blasio has expanded paid sick leave and won a hard-fought battle to secure free full-day universal pre-K (huge boons for working families), dialed back the NYPD's stop-and-frisk policy and effectively decriminalized possession of small amounts of marijuana (both of which had a massively disproportionate effect on young men of color), launched the largest municipal-ID-card program in the country (allowing undocumented New Yorkers to more easily open bank accounts, rent apartments and access hospitals and schools), and announced a $41 billion plan to build or preserve 200,000 units of affordable housing over the next 10 years (eclipsing Bloomberg's 12-year record of 165,000 new or preserved affordable-housing units).

JDC -- You good with sharing the below?

- America faces an income inequality crisis.
- Since the Great Recession ended, Wall Street and the top one percent have not only been made whole, they've set records for wealth accumulation.
- Everyone else has seen their economic situation sit stagnant or else slip further and further behind. We MUST change that.
- People nationwide — from elected officials to progressive activists to economists — have been on organizing around ending this crisis.
- We need to rewrite the rules and rebuild the middle class by being bold and holding our leaders at every level accountable for bringing real change.
-
- So on Tuesday May 12th, progressive leaders from across the country will unite in support of The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality.

- Our goal as a coalition is to elevate the topic of income inequality and propose real, bold, tangible progressive solutions to combatting it. That means:
 - Lifting the floor for working people;
 - Supporting working parents;
 - And asking sure big corporations and the wealthy are paying their fair share

On Thu, May 7, 2015 at 4:17 PM, Wolfe, Emma <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

For sure
+ jdc rkk

From: Norvell, Wiley
Sent: Thursday, May 07, 2015 04:16 PM
To: Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Adams, Marti
Subject: Jonathan Westin

Going on NPR tomorrow to talk about Mayor and inequality. Looking for some bullets on our contract w/America, and some bullets of progressive things he's accomplished here in NYC. We have teed up anywhere?

Wiley Norvell

Deputy Press Secretary

Office of New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio

\(212\) 788-2958788-2958)

\(917\) 428-8307428-8307) (mobile)

wnorvell@cityhall.nyc.gov

@wileynorvell

--

Rebecca Kirsner Katz
\(718\) 858-7161858-7161) — work
[REDACTED] — cell
@RebeccaKatz

From: Carey, Michael
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: Aaron PickrellEmail
Subject: Re: Friday in CA
Date: Thursday, May 07, 2015 5:27:11 PM

Already working on it
Cause he told me before he called to harass u

Michael Paul Carey
City Hall
New York, New York

> On May 7, 2015, at 5:26 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
>
> Boss threw out there that Libby Schaaf - who's coming to the thing in DC on 5/12 - would be a potential drop-by, if we had time... He loves her... But not a mandate - just a thought if it makes sense

From: Walzak, Phil
To: [REDACTED] Gunaratna, Mahen
Cc: Kadushin, Peter; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Re: reuters wrote about it
Date: Thursday, May 07, 2015 5:31:31 PM

We will get back to u

From: Rebecca Katz [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Thursday, May 07, 2015 05:30 PM
To: Gunaratna, Mahen
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Kadushin, Peter; John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: reuters wrote about it

Thoughts on if worth giving?

I am still hoping he doesn't write. If we give, he'll def write.

Sent from my iPhone

On May 7, 2015, at 5:07 PM, Gunaratna, Mahen <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Mayor Bill de Blasio: I don't do grades, but I can tell you I'm very satisfied. You know, pre-K, paid sick leave, the groundwork for the municipal ID, the groundwork for the affordable housing plan. These are things I could only have dreamed of getting done all at once. And pre-K was real challenge to do on the timeline we set. And we believed, but we were also constantly looking over our shoulder because we knew it was a very high bar and, and the fact that the team met it is extraordinary to me. And obviously the labor contracts, which are transcendent. So, I feel great about the product from the first year. I don't think because of, you know, some tragedies, I don't think it was fully analyzed, which is sad for the people who did such hard work and also a little bit sad for the public discourse. I think something very important happened here. A lot of people outside New York City understand what happened in the first year in New York City better than people in New York City, but I am convinced something very special happened here.

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
Sent: Thursday, May 07, 2015 4:50 PM
To: 'Rebecca Katz'; Walzak, Phil
Cc: Kadushin, Peter
Subject: RE: Fwd: reuters wrote about it

Five minutes pls

From: Rebecca Katz [[mailto:\[REDACTED\]](mailto:[REDACTED])]
Sent: Thursday, May 07, 2015 4:46 PM
To: Walzak, Phil

Cc: Gunaratna, Mahen; Kadushin, Peter
Subject: Re: Fwd: reuters wrote about it

Sent all the audio over to you guys yesterday and gave the minute mark of the interview.

On Thu, May 7, 2015 at 4:38 PM, Walzak, Phil <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
I don't have
Don't u have the recordings?

From: Rebecca Katz [mailto:████████████████████]
Sent: Thursday, May 07, 2015 04:39 PM
To: Walzak, Phil; Gunaratna, Mahen; Kadushin, Peter
Subject: Fwd: reuters wrote about it

Thoughts here?

Do we have?

----- Forwarded message -----

From: Grynbaum, Michael <grynbaum@nytimes.com>
Date: Thu, May 7, 2015 at 4:33 PM
Subject: reuters wrote about it
To: Rebecca Kirszner Katz <████████████████████>

http://www.reuters.com/article/2015/05/07/us-usa-newyork-mayor-idUSKBN0NS25T20150507?feedType=RSS&feedName=topNews&utm_source=twitter so can you get me the full transcript?

From: B
To: "rkatz@hilltoppublicsolutions.com"; Walzak, Phil; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Wolfe, Emma; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Re: Also on Tuesday
Date: Thursday, May 07, 2015 6:54:33 PM

The more the merrier

From: Rebecca Katz [<mailto:rkatz@hilltoppublicsolutions.com>]
Sent: Thursday, May 07, 2015 06:41 PM
To: B; Walzak, Phil; John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Wolfe, Emma; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Also on Tuesday

Chris Golden (@chrisgolden)

5/7/15, 6:36 PM

Pres. Obama to speak at Georgetown on Tues w/ Robert Putnam, Arthur Brooks & E.J. Dionne on overcoming poverty

Download the Twitter app

Sent from my iPhone

From: Carey, Michael
To: John Del Cecato
Subject: Re: <no subject>
Date: Thursday, May 07, 2015 7:48:13 PM

Correct.

Michael Paul Carey
City Hall
New York, New York

> On May 7, 2015, at 7:23 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
>
> I don't have a good memory. Did you tell me Gore was not even going to sign our document?

From: John Del Cecato
To: Carey, Michael
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Re:
Date: Thursday, May 07, 2015 8:58:58 PM

Elaborate? Like something sweet for Chirlane?

> On May 7, 2015, at 8:55 PM, Carey, Michael <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

> #emmaiswickedsmaht

>

>

> Michael Paul Carey

> City Hall

> New York, New York

>

>> On May 7, 2015, at 8:51 PM, Walzak, Phil <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>>

>> That's the ticket

>>

>> Yes

>>

>>

>>

>> ----- Original Message -----

>> From: Wolfe, Emma

>> Sent: Thursday, May 07, 2015 08:45 PM

>> To: Carey, Michael; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>

>> Cc: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea

>> Subject: Re:

>>

>> A moms day thing?

>>

>>

>> ----- Original Message -----

>> From: Carey, Michael

>> Sent: Thursday, May 07, 2015 08:43 PM

>> To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>

>> Cc: Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma; Hagelgans, Andrea

>> Subject: Re:

>>

>> He has nothing planned Sunday AM :)

>>

>>

>> Michael Paul Carey

>> City Hall

>> New York, New York

>>

>>> On May 7, 2015, at 7:47 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

>>>

>>> Rolling Stone line plus subway email plus burger/lateness = no bueno.

>>>

>>> Is there any chance to get our guy to do something humble this weekend - not just officer wake, but maybe volunteering at St. Francis Xavier's soup kitchen (Union Square) on Sunday morning, unannounced to press? I could pitch him on this, if you guys don't think I'm out of my mind.

>>>
>>>
>>>

From: John Del Cecato
To: Aaron Pickrell; Hayley Prim
Cc: Snyder, Thomas; jeani murray; John Davis
Subject: Re: Status Update: 73 Signers, 42 Attendees
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 8:47:05 AM

Updated...

Gave Maria-Elena more time

Would like to keep Rosa - only because I promised her & she got on board while CPC was still mostly screwing around... Also, I love her

From: Aaron PickrellEmail <[REDACTED]>
Date: Friday, May 8, 2015 at 7:26 AM
To: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>, jeani murray <[REDACTED]> John Davis <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: Status Update: 73 Signers, 42 Attendees

Mary Kay will be there.

From: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Date: Friday, May 8, 2015 at 8:22 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>, AARON PICKRELL <[REDACTED]> jeani murray <[REDACTED]> John Davis <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: Status Update: 73 Signers, 42 Attendees

sorry yes, vanden heuval and nussbaum should have been bolded. not sure why that didn't come through.

My thoughts: is it weird that delauro is the only non CPC chair given 2 minutes? Might be better to stick her in the group with the other reps: Schakowsky, clarke, nadler, mcgovern, etc.

Since D Taylor is not attending, should Maria Elana be his proxy and get two minutes?

Also, need to confirm Mary Kay asap. Feels weird to have her and Gresham both get two minutes, esp if durazo and NYSNA are in the 2 sentence category

On Fri, May 8, 2015 at 8:12 AM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

Minus BDB

I screwed something up here because I'm only at 40 attendees - but here's a first crack - 27 get 2 sentences (30 seconds); and 13 get 2 minutes... That's 40 minutes of speaking...

Thoughts?

From: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Date: Friday, May 8, 2015 at 5:44 AM
To: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: Aaron PickrellEmail <[REDACTED]> John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, jeani murray <[REDACTED]> John Davis <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Status Update: 73 Signers, 42 Attendees

Attendees listed in Bold. Those listed in red are sending a high level rep to the press conference as they cannot attend themselves.

Fiscal Policy Institute	Deputy Director and Chief Economist	James	Parrott
Economic Policy Institute	Senior Economist	Eileen	Appelbaum
Center for Economic and Policy Research	Co-Director	Dean	Baker
Newark	Mayor	Ras	Baraka
Netroots Nation	Executive Director	Raven	Brooks
	Actor	Steve	Buscemi
	Actor	Alan	Cumming
Minnesota	Governor	Mark	Dayton
Philanthropist/ Fimmaker		Abigail	Disney
Economic Policy Institute	Founder	Jeff	Faux
		Danny	Glover
Former Senator		Tom	Harkin
United for a Fair Economy	Executive Director	Jeannette	Huezo
Dream Corps Unlimited		Van	Jones
	FLONYC	Chirlane	McCray
	Actress	Cynthia	Nixon
University of California at Berkley	Chancellor's Professor	Robert	Reich
	Actor	Mark	Ruffalo
Columbia University	Economist/Director of Earth Institute	Jeff	Sachs
EffectiveNY	Chairman	Bill	Samuels
Actress		Susan	Sarandon
Unite Here	President	D	Taylor
AFL-CIO	President	Richard	Trumka
The Wessel Group	President	Michael	Wessel
Childrens Defense Fund	President/Founder	Marian	Wright Edelman
Center for Media and Democracy	Executive Director	Lisa	Graves

Inequality.org	Managing Editor	Marjorie	Wood
New Jersey	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Bonnie	Watson Coleman
Interfaith Worker Justice	Executive Director	Rudy	Lopez
SEIU	President	Mary Kay	Henry
Communities for Change	Executive Director	Deepak	Bhargava
Campaign for America's Future	Co-Director	Robert	Borosage
New York	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Yvette	Clarke
Democracy Partners	Partner	Robert	Creamer
National Low Income Housing Coalition	President	Sheila	Crowley
		Bill	de Blasio
Former Governor/Democracy for America	Founder	Howard	Dean
Connecticut	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Rosa	DeLauro
Unite Here	Former President, LA County	Maria Elena	Durazo
Minnesota	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Keith	Ellison
Pennsylvania	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Chaka	Fattah
NEA	President	Lily	Garcia
Steelworkers	President	Leo	Gerard
SEIU 1199	President	George	Gresham
Arizona	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Raul	Grijalva
Leadership Council on Civil and Human Rights	President and CEO	Wade	Henderson
Minneapolis	Mayor	Betsy	Hodges
Texas	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Sheila	Jackson-Lee
California	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Barbara	Lee
Progressive Congress	President	Gabriela	Lemus
Iowa	U.S. Rep, PC Member	David	Loeb sack
Progressive Strategies	Director	Mike	Lux
Demos	Executive Director	Heather	McGhee
Massachusetts	U.S. Rep, PC Member	James	McGovern
Oregon	U.S. Senator	Jeff	Merkley
Economic Policy Institute	President	Lawrence	Mishel
National Council of La Raza		Janet	Murguia
New York	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Jerry	Nadler
Working America	Executive Director	Karen	Nussbaum
Young Democrats of America	President	Atima	Omara
AFSCME	President	Lee	Saunders

Illinois	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Jan	Schakowsky
NAN	President	Al	Sharpton
NYSNA	President	Judy	Sheridan- Gonzalez
The Nation	Editor	Katrina	Vanden Heuvel
Patriot Majority	President	Craig	Varoga
AFT	President	Randi	Weingarten
Dayton	Mayor	Nan	Whaley
Americans United for Change	President	Brad	Woodhouse
Oakland	Mayor	Libby	Schaaf
	Author	Linda	Tirado
Progress Now	Executive Director	Arshad	Hasan
CWA	President	Larry	Cohen

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: John Del Cecato
To: B; [REDACTED] Snyder, Thomas
Cc: [REDACTED] [REDACTED] [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: Status Update: 73 Signers, 42 Attendees
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 9:10:51 AM

I believe Boxer is a no... I threw out the prospect of Feinstein, who doesn't have anything to lose either...

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Friday, May 8, 2015 at 9:08 AM
To: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: Aaron PickrellEmail <[REDACTED]> John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>,
 "[REDACTED]" <[REDACTED]> John Davis <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: Status Update: 73 Signers, 42 Attendees

Wants us to try Boxer and Milkulski. Both very progressive and have nothing to lose. I can call unless someone can get this done quickly without me. Thanks

From: Hayley Prim [[mailto:\[REDACTED\]](mailto:[REDACTED])]
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 05:44 AM
To: B; Snyder, Thomas
Cc: Aaron Pickrell <[REDACTED]> John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; jeani murray <[REDACTED]> John Davis <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Status Update: 73 Signers, 42 Attendees

Attendees listed in Bold. Those listed in red are sending a high level rep to the press conference as they cannot attend themselves.

Fiscal Policy Institute	Deputy Director and Chief Economist	James	Parrott
Economic Policy Institute	Senior Economist	Eileen	Appelbaum
Center for Economic and Policy Research	Co-Director	Dean	Baker
Newark	Mayor	Ras	Baraka
Netroots Nation	Executive Director	Raven	Brooks
	Actor	Steve	Buscemi
	Actor	Alan	Cumming
Minnesota	Governor	Mark	Dayton
Philanthropist/ Fimmaker		Abigail	Disney
Economic Policy Institute	Founder	Jeff	Faux
		Danny	Glover
Former Senator		Tom	Harkin
United for a Fair Economy	Executive Director	Jeannette	Huezo

Dream Corps Unlimited		Van	Jones
	FLONYC	Chirlane	McCray
	Actress	Cynthia	Nixon
University of California at Berkley	Chancellor's Professor	Robert	Reich
	Actor	Mark	Ruffalo
Columbia University	Economist/Director of Earth Institute	Jeff	Sachs
EffectiveNY	Chairman	Bill	Samuels
Actress		Susan	Sarandon
Unite Here	President	D	Taylor
AFL-CIO	President	Richard	Trumka
The Wessel Group	President	Michael	Wessel
Childrens Defense Fund	President/Founder	Marian	Wright Edelman
Center for Media and Democracy	Executive Director	Lisa	Graves
Inequality.org	Managing Editor	Marjorie	Wood
New Jersey	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Bonnie	Watson Coleman
Interfaith Worker Justice	Executive Director	Rudy	Lopez
SEIU	President	Mary Kay	Henry
Communities for Change	Executive Director	Deepak	Bhargava
Campaign for America's Future	Co-Director	Robert	Borosage
New York	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Yvette	Clarke
Democracy Partners	Partner	Robert	Creamer
National Low Income Housing Coalition	President	Sheila	Crowley
		Bill	de Blasio
Former Governor/Democracy for America	Founder	Howard	Dean
Connecticut	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Rosa	DeLauro
Unite Here	Former President, LA County	Maria Elena	Durazo
Minnesota	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Keith	Ellison
Pennsylvania	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Chaka	Fattah
NEA	President	Lily	Garcia
Steelworkers	President	Leo	Gerard
SEIU 1199	President	George	Gresham
Arizona	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Raul	Grijalva
Leadership Council on Civil and Human Rights	President and CEO	Wade	Henderson
Minneapolis	Mayor	Betsy	Hodges
Texas	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Sheila	Jackson-Lee

California	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Barbara	Lee
Progressive Congress	President	Gabriela	Lemus
Iowa	U.S. Rep, PC Member	David	Loeb sack
Progressive Strategies	Director	Mike	Lux
Demos	Executive Director	Heather	McGhee
Massachusetts	U.S. Rep, PC Member	James	McGovern
Oregon	U.S. Senator	Jeff	Merkley
Economic Policy Institute	President	Lawrence	Mishel
National Council of La Raza		Janet	Murguia
New York	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Jerry	Nadler
Working America	Executive Director	Karen	Nussbaum
Young Democrats of America	President	Atima	Omara
AFSCME	President	Lee	Saunders
Illinois	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Jan	Schakowsky
NAN	President	Al	Sharpton
NYSNA	President	Judy	Sheridan- Gonzalez
The Nation	Editor	Katrina	Vanden Heuvel
Patriot Majority	President	Craig	Varoga
AFT	President	Randi	Weingarten
Dayton	Mayor	Nan	Whaley
Americans United for Change	President	Brad	Woodhouse
Oakland	Mayor	Libby	Schaaf
	Author	Linda	Tirado
Progress Now	Executive Director	Arshad	Hasan
CWA	President	Larry	Cohen

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: "Hayley Prim"; John Del Cecato
Cc: Aaron Pickrell; jeani murray; John Davis
Subject: RE: Status Update: 73 Signers, 42 Attendees
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 9:20:11 AM

On my message below many of those in RED are in fact attending not sending a rep. for example the list has de Blasio in RED. ???

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:████████████████████]
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 8:23 AM
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: Snyder, Thomas; Aaron Pickrell; jeani murray; John Davis
Subject: Re: Status Update: 73 Signers, 42 Attendees

sorry yes, vanden heuval and nussbaum should have been bolded. not sure why that didn't come through.

My thoughts: is it weird that delauro is the only non CPC chair given 2 minutes? Might be better to stick her in the group with the other reps: Schakowsky, clarke, nadler, mcgovern, etc.

Since D Taylor is not attending, should Maria Elana be his proxy and get two minutes?

Also, need to confirm Mary Kay asap. Feels weird to have her and Gresham both get two minutes, esp if durazo and NYSNA are in the 2 sentence category

On Fri, May 8, 2015 at 8:12 AM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
Minus BDB

I screwed something up here because I'm only at 40 attendees - but here's a first crack - 27 get 2 sentences (30 seconds); and 13 get 2 minutes... That's 40 minutes of speaking...

Thoughts?

From: Hayley Prim <████████████████████>
Date: Friday, May 8, 2015 at 5:44 AM
To: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: Aaron PickrellEmail <████████████████████> John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, jeani murray <████████████████████> John Davis <████████████████████>
Subject: Status Update: 73 Signers, 42 Attendees

Attendees listed in Bold. Those listed in red are sending a high level rep to the press conference as they cannot attend themselves.

Fiscal Policy Institute	Deputy Director and Chief Economist	James	Parrott
Economic Policy Institute	Senior Economist	Eileen	Appelbaum
Center for Economic and

Policy Research	Co-Director	Dean	Baker
Newark	Mayor	Ras	Baraka
Netroots Nation	Executive Director	Raven	Brooks
	Actor	Steve	Buscemi
	Actor	Alan	Cumming
Minnesota	Governor	Mark	Dayton
Philanthropist/ Fimmaker		Abigail	Disney
Economic Policy Institute	Founder	Jeff	Faux
		Danny	Glover
Former Senator		Tom	Harkin
United for a Fair Economy	Executive Director	Jeannette	Huezo
Dream Corps Unlimited		Van	Jones
	FLONYC	Chirlane	McCray
	Actress	Cynthia	Nixon
University of California at Berkley	Chancellor's Professor	Robert	Reich
	Actor	Mark	Ruffalo
Columbia University	Economist/Director of Earth Institute	Jeff	Sachs
EffectiveNY	Chairman	Bill	Samuels
Actress		Susan	Sarandon
Unite Here	President	D	Taylor
AFL-CIO	President	Richard	Trumka
The Wessel Group	President	Michael	Wessel
Childrens Defense Fund	President/Founder	Marian	Wright Edelman
Center for Media and Democracy	Executive Director	Lisa	Graves
Inequality.org	Managing Editor	Marjorie	Wood
New Jersey	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Bonnie	Watson Coleman
Interfaith Worker Justice	Executive Director	Rudy	Lopez
SEIU	President	Mary Kay	Henry
Communities for Change	Executive Director	Deepak	Bhargava
Campaign for America's Future	Co-Director	Robert	Borosage
New York	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Yvette	Clarke
Democracy Partners	Partner	Robert	Creamer
National Low Income Housing Coalition	President	Sheila	Crowley
		Bill	de Blasio
Former

Governor/Democracy for America	Founder	Howard	Dean
Connecticut	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Rosa	DeLauro
Unite Here	Former President, LA County	Maria Elena	Durazo
Minnesota	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Keith	Ellison
Pennsylvania	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Chaka	Fattah
NEA	President	Lily	Garcia
Steelworkers	President	Leo	Gerard
SEIU 1199	President	George	Gresham
Arizona	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Raul	Grijalva
Leadership Council on Civil and Human Rights	President and CEO	Wade	Henderson
Minneapolis	Mayor	Betsy	Hodges
Texas	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Sheila	Jackson-Lee
California	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Barbara	Lee
Progressive Congress	President	Gabriela	Lemus
Iowa	U.S. Rep, PC Member	David	Loeb sack
Progressive Strategies	Director	Mike	Lux
Demos	Executive Director	Heather	McGhee
Massachusetts	U.S. Rep, PC Member	James	McGovern
Oregon	U.S. Senator	Jeff	Merkley
Economic Policy Institute	President	Lawrence	Mishel
National Council of La Raza		Janet	Murguia
New York	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Jerry	Nadler
Working America	Executive Director	Karen	Nussbaum
Young Democrats of America	President	Atima	Omara
AFSCME	President	Lee	Saunders
Illinois	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Jan	Schakowsky
NAN	President	Al	Sharpton
NYSNA	President	Judy	Sheridan- Gonzalez
The Nation	Editor	Katrina	Vanden Heuvel
Patriot Majority	President	Craig	Varoga
AFT	President	Randi	Weingarten
Dayton	Mayor	Nan	Whaley
Americans United for Change	President	Brad	Woodhouse
Oakland	Mayor	Libby	Schaaf
	Author	Linda	Tirado

Progress Now	Executive Director	Arshad	Hasan
CWA	President	Larry	Cohen

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: John Del Cecato
To: Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: FW: Most up-to-date Stiglitz draft
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 9:50:58 AM
Attachments: RewritingTheRules_ExecSummary_FINAL.docx
Appendix A
RewritingTheRules_5.7

Stiglitz plan executive summary... Some of it is actually LESS bold/more vague than TPA... Some of it goes further than we would (Fin Trans Tax)...

We by no means "own" this - but wanted to give a heads-up as this is what Stiglitz will be presenting at the Roosevelt Institute event that Warren & MBDB are attending... My thought is that MBDB would focus on the things he knows best - min wage, paid sick & family leave, UPK, carried interest & Buffett Rule..

From: David Palmer <dpalmer@rooseveltinstitute.org>
Date: Friday, May 8, 2015 at 9:26 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: Aaron PickrellEmail <>
Subject: Most up-to-date Stiglitz draft

Guys, here is the latest, as promised -- not fully copy-edited and citations are still off. Gettin' close.

— — —
Dave Palmer
VP & Nat'l Director, Four Freedoms Center
Roosevelt Institute
c: 917.482.7251

Rewriting the Rules for the American Economy: An Agenda for Shared Prosperity

Executive Summary

Report by Joseph E. Stiglitz

Inequality is not inevitable: it is a choice we make with the rules we create to structure our economy. Over the last 35 years, America's policy choices have been grounded in false assumptions, and the result is a weakened economy in which most Americans struggle to achieve or maintain a middle-class lifestyle while a small percentage enjoy an increasingly large share of the nation's wealth. Though these lived experiences and personal challenges are important, they are only the tip of the iceberg that is the crisis of slow income growth and rising inequality. To fully understand the scope of the problem, we must also examine the array of laws and policies that lie beneath the surface—the rules that determine the balance of power between public and private, employers and workers, innovation and shared growth, and all the other interests that make up the modern economy.

Given the scale and interconnected nature of the issues we face, a tentative, piecemeal response will not suffice. Instead, this report lays out both a new framework for understanding the current structure of our economy and a comprehensive policy agenda that rewrites the rules to promote stronger growth and broadly shared prosperity.

The United States bills itself as the land of opportunity, a place where anyone can achieve success and a better life through hard work and determination. But in fact, the U.S. today lags behind most other developed nations in measures of inequality and economic mobility. For decades, wages have stagnated for the majority of workers while economic gains have disproportionately gone to the top 1 percent. Good jobs that provide access to the middle class are increasingly scarce, while essentials like education, housing, and health care are growing ever more expensive. Deeply rooted structural discrimination continues to hold down women and people of color, and more than one-fifth of all American children now live in poverty, meaning that these trends are on track to become even worse in the future. To solve these problems, we must better understand the causes of today's inequality, and traditional economics provides little guidance.

For decades, economists have claimed that there is a tradeoff between inequality and economic performance; in other words, that we can only promote greater equality by sacrificing growth. Further, they have argued that overarching trends including globalization and technological progress make increased inequality inevitable. Their answer, then, is not to redistribute wealth to those at the bottom but to implement policies that direct more income to those at the top—the true drivers of the economy.

Since the late 1970s, U.S. policymakers have tailored the rules to suit this old economic model. As a result, we have a tax system that raises insufficient revenue and encourages the pursuit of short-term gains over long-term investment; weak and unenforced regulation of corporations; a de facto public safety net for too-big-to-fail financial institutions; a dwindling support system for workers and families; and a reorientation of monetary and fiscal policy to promote wealth rather than full employment. Rather than strengthening the economy, these choices have led to lower growth, repeated downturns including the worst crisis since the Great Depression, the shrinking of the middle class, and increased concentration of wealth at the top. It's time for something different.

Our economy is a large and complex system, and in order to solve the problems with that system, we must aim to fix the economy as a whole. The financial crisis of 2008 and the Great Recession that followed exposed the inadequacy of the old economic models; the new research and thinking that has emerged as a result suggests that equality and economic performance are in fact complementary rather than opposing forces. No more false choices: changing course won't be easy in the current environment, but we can choose to fix the rules structuring our system. We can restore the balance between government, business, and labor to create an economy that works for everyone. Building on the innovative legacy of the New Deal, this report describes a far-reaching, two-fold agenda to tame the growth of wealth among the top 1 percent and establish rules and institutions that ensure security and opportunity for the middle class.

Highlights of this agenda include:

Taming the Top

Fix the Financial Sector:

- End “too big to fail” by imposing additional capital surcharges on systemically risky financial institutions and breaking up firms that cannot produce credible living wills.
- Regulate the shadow banking sector to increase transparency and limit abuse of emergency lending.
- Bring greater transparency to all financial markets by requiring all alternative asset managers to publicly disclose holdings, returns, and fee structures.
- Reduce credit and debit card fees through improved regulation of card providers.
- Enforce existing rules with stricter penalties for companies that break the law.
- Reform Federal Reserve governance to reduce conflicts of interest and institute more open and accountable elections.

Incentivize Long-Term Business Growth:

- Restructure CEO pay by closing the performance-pay tax loophole and increasing transparency on the size of compensation packages relative to performance and median worker pay.
- Enact a financial transaction tax to reduce short-term trading and encourage more productive long-term investment.
- Empower long-term stakeholders through the tax code, the use of so-called “loyalty shares”, and greater accountability for managers of retirement funds.

Make Markets Competitive:

- Restore balance to intellectual property rights to encourage innovation and entrepreneurship.
- Restore balance to global trade agreements to by ensuring investor protections are not prioritized above protections on the environment and labor, reducing scope for currency manipulation and increasing transparency in the negotiation process.

- Provide health care cost controls by allowing government bargaining.
- Expand chapter 11 bankruptcy to homeowners and student borrowers.

Rebalance the Tax and Transfer System:

- Raise the top marginal rate by converting all reductions to tax credits and limiting the use of credits.
- Raise taxes on capital gains and dividends.
- Encourage U.S. investment by taxing corporations on global income.
- Tax undesirable behavior such as short-term trading or polluting and eliminate expenditures that foster inefficiency and inequality.

Growing the Middle

Make Full Employment the Goal:

- Reform monetary policy to prioritize full employment.
- Reinvigorate public investment to lay the foundation for long-term economic performance and job growth.
- Invest in large-scale infrastructure renovation with a 10-year campaign to make the U.S. a world leader in innovation, manufacturing, and jobs.
- Expand public transportation to promote equal access to jobs and opportunity.

Empower Workers:

- Restore the right to bargain by easing legal barriers to unionization, imposing stricter penalties on illegal anti-union intimidation tactics, and amending laws to reflect the changing workplace.
- Have government set the standards by attaching strong pro-worker stipulations to its contracts and development subsidies.
- Increase funding for enforcement and raise penalties for violating labor standards.
- Raise the nation-wide minimum wage and increase the salary threshold for over-time pay.

Expand Access to Labor Markets and Opportunities for Advancement:

- Reform the criminal justice system to reduce incarceration rates and related financial burdens for the poor.
- Reform immigration law to provide a pathway to citizenship for undocumented workers.
- Legislate universal paid sick and family leave.
- Subsidize childcare to benefit children and improve women's workforce participation.
- Promote pay equity and eliminate legal obstacles that prevent employees from sharing salary information.
- Protect women's access to reproductive health services.

Expand Economic Security and Opportunity:

- Invest in young children through child benefits, early education, and universal pre-K.
- Increase access to higher education by reforming tuition financing, restoring protections to student loans, and adopting universal income-based repayment.
- Make health care affordable and universal by opening Medicare to all.

- Expand access to banking services through a postal savings bank.
- Create a public entity to supply housing loans.
- Expand Social Security with a supplemental public investment program modeled on private Individual Retirement Accounts, and raise the payroll cap to increase revenue.

Attachment Appendix A (226982 Bytes) cannot be converted to PDF format.

From: Carey, Michael
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: Liz Hegarty
Subject: Re: <no subject>
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 10:25:27 AM

Correct

Michael Paul Carey
City Hall
New York, New York

> On May 8, 2015, at 10:18 AM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
>
> Hey Michael. I think I will be done with my staffing of MBDB by early afternoon on Friday May 15th, right? If so, I need to get back to NYC at that time, as my sister is coming to visit her little brother...

From: Carey, Michael
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Re: CRAIN'S: De Blasio heading to Silicon Valley to tout inequality fight
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 10:38:35 AM

Yes

Michael Paul Carey
City Hall
New York, New York

On May 8, 2015, at 10:36 AM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

Do you know the answer to this?

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Friday, May 8, 2015 at 10:17 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Fw: CRAIN'S: De Blasio heading to Silicon Valley to tout inequality fight

See below. The SCU speech will be open press, correct? Thanks

From: Clips
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 08:55 AM
Subject: CRAIN'S: De Blasio heading to Silicon Valley to tout inequality fight

De Blasio heading to Silicon Valley to tout inequality fight

CRAIN'S NY – Andrew Hawkins

<http://www.crainsnewyork.com/article/20150508/BLOGS04/150509865/de-blasio-heading-to-silicon-valley-to-tout-inequality-fight>

Mayor Bill de Blasio has taken his income inequality roadshow to Iowa, Wisconsin and Nebraska. Next week he's heading to Washington, D.C. to unveil his "Progressive Agenda" meant to influence the 2016 election. And the day after he'll take a trip to Silicon Valley to speak at his daughter Chiara's school.

Santa Clara University, which bills itself as the "Jesuit in Silicon Valley," will host Mr. de Blasio, "one of the nation's foremost voices in the growing movement to address income inequality," according to an email invitation obtained by The Insider. The event is only open to the university's students, faculty and staff.

While this isn't Mr. de Blasio's first trip to California as mayor, it will be the first time in his 16 months in office that he will give a speech there. Mr. de Blasio has previously set his sights on helping New York's Silicon Alley outpace California's more famous technology sector.

During the campaign, the mayor was adept at securing big donations from some of Silicon Valley's wealthiest tech moguls.

From: John Del Cecato
To: Shorris, Anthony
Cc: Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Re: Most up-to-date Stiglitz draft
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 11:15:07 AM

Yep. We will have to have answer down on FTT too

On May 8, 2015, at 10:34 AM, Shorris, Anthony <AShorris@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

This is much broader of course but there are a number of area of overlap. BDB can indeed focus on what is common between this and the TPA, point to how many of these we are in fact doing in NYC, and focus on the hared agenda of building the middle (and maybe "taming the top")...

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 9:52 AM
To: Shorris, Anthony; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: FW: Most up-to-date Stiglitz draft

Stiglitz plan executive summary... Some of it is actually LESS bold/more vague than TPA...
Some of it goes further than we would (Fin Trans Tax)...

We by no means "own" this - but wanted to give a heads-up as this is what Stiglitz will be presenting at the Roosevelt Institute event that Warren & MBDB are attending... My thought is that MBDB would focus on the things he knows best - min wage, paid sick & family leave, UPK, carried interest & Buffett Rule..

From: David Palmer <dpalmer@rooseveltinstitute.org>
Date: Friday, May 8, 2015 at 9:26 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: Aaron PickrellEmail <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Most up-to-date Stiglitz draft

Guys, here is the latest, as promised -- not fully copy-edited and citations are still off. Gettin' close.

-- --
Dave Palmer
VP & Nat'l Director, Four Freedoms Center
Roosevelt Institute
c: 917.482.7251

From: John Del Cecato
To: Gunaratna, Mahen
Cc: B; FLONYC; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Re: Washington Post: Clinton's campaign says every student should graduate debt-free
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 11:23:47 AM

For the record, I'm calming down the people that Adam Green is stirring up over this by telling them we are planning another big event for TPA in CA for June - climate change, mass incarceration, retirement security, college debt, etc.

This very well could be a true thing (since we are in talks with Steyer on this). And almost everyone has been mollified. But Adam Green is making my life hellish.

On May 8, 2015, at 11:20 AM, Gunaratna, Mahen <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Clinton's campaign says every student should graduate debt-free

By Max Ehrenfreund May 8 at 8:23 AM

American students would be able to graduate from college without owing a dime, if Hillary Rodham Clinton and her rivals for the Democratic presidential nomination get their way.

"What voters are looking for is someone to be a champion for everyday people. For young people, that's debt-free college,"

Clinton's campaign manager, Robby Mook, said on Wednesday.

As Sahil Kapur reports for Bloomberg, that statement follows months of work by activists and endorsements of the idea by Sen. Bernie Sanders, the independent from Vermont who is challenging Clinton, and former Maryland Gov. Martin O'Malley, who many expect will join the race.

Their plan would help a relatively small group of people, though. At The Week, Ryan Cooper notes that helping college students is really about helping the upper middle class:

The most important fact about higher education is that only a minority of people go to college. Though the proportion of people with a college degree has been rising for a long time, as of 2012, only about 40 percent of the population held a two-year degree or higher. That 40 percent, of course, overwhelmingly overlaps with the upper 40 percent of America's income distribution.

The upshot here is that free college will inexorably tend to benefit the rich disproportionately, both because wealthy people are vastly more likely to go to college, and because a college degree sharply increases their earning potential.

For every student to graduate without debt, the federal government would have to help them pay their tuition one way or another, and that would be costly. That money might be better used to help people who really need it, because most graduates with student loans are basically doing OK. In any case, they're usually better off than the majority of Americans who lack a degree.

Welcome to Wonkbook. To subscribe by e-mail, click here. Send comments, criticism or ideas to Wonkbook at Washpost dot com. Follow Wonkblog on Twitter and Facebook.

--

Mahen Gunaratna

Director of Research and Media Analysis

Mayor's Press Office | City Hall

mgunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov

(212) 676-3154 (o) | (347)-268-4295 (c)

From: Gabriela Lemus
To: Yazgi, Stephanie
Cc: Sevillia, Max; Fink, Avi; Gann, Georgia; jfdc@akpdmedia.com
Subject: Re: Progressive Agenda Launch on Tuesday
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 11:28:14 AM

Have a great weekend!

On Fri, May 8, 2015 at 11:24 AM, Yazgi, Stephanie <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Absolutely! Glad to help connect!
Stephanie

From: Gabriela Lemus [glemus@progressivecongress.org]
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 11:21 AM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie
Cc: Sevillia, Max; Fink, Avi; Gann, Georgia; jfdc@akpdmedia.com
Subject: Re: Progressive Agenda Launch on Tuesday

Very good. I'll reach out to him. Thank you so much.

On Fri, May 8, 2015 at 11:18 AM, Yazgi, Stephanie <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Gabi:
John Del Cecato is point on this event.
He is cc'd here at jfdc@akpdmedia.com
Thank you.

From: Gabriela Lemus [glemus@progressivecongress.org]
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 11:09 AM
To: Sevillia, Max
Cc: Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie; Gann, Georgia
Subject: Re: Progressive Agenda Launch on Tuesday

Max, thank you for responding so quickly. I'm glad you're traveling. You always get to go to the most exotic places. The rest of us must live vicariously through you...

Hi Avi/Stephanie - I would love to chat if you have a moment regarding the Progressive Agenda event scheduled for next Tuesday if you have a moment. I can be reached at

All my best,
Gabi

Dr. Gabriela D. Lemus
President
Progressive Congress

On Fri, May 8, 2015 at 11:05 AM, Sevillia, Max <msevillia@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Gabi, great to hear from you. I'm out of the country for the next few days. Via this email, I'm introducing you to Avi Fink Stephanie Yazgi.

Best,

Max

Max Sevilla, Esq.
Director
New York City Office of Federal Affairs
1301 Pennsylvania Ave, N.W.
Suite 350
Washington, D.C. 20004
Tel. \(202\) 624-5906624-5906)
Cell. \(347\) 276-6572276-6572)
msevillia@cityhall.nyc.gov

On May 8, 2015, at 4:57 PM, Gabriela Lemus <glemus@progressivecongress.org> wrote:

Hey Max -

Espero que estes muy, muy bien...would love to sit with you to discuss how we can work together.

I wanted to reach out to you regarding some rumblings that I'm hearing from the congressional side regarding the upcoming event next Tuesday. It could be you have already heard, but there are a number of folks who really are interested in ensuring that as part of the progressive economic agenda we include the expansion of Social Security and addressing student loans.

Both are enormous components of the economic agenda, and there are a number of us from the progressive organizational camp that feel pretty strongly about it as well. I think it's all very resolvable...

Can you talk? Left you a voice mail on your cell phone. Am at [REDACTED].

Best, Gabi

Dr. Gabriela D. Lemus
President
Progressive Congress

From: John Del Cecato
To: Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Run of Show
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 1:18:20 PM
Attachments: TPA Final Speaker Logistics Final.docx
Importance: High

Hey Tom. Here's the Run of Show doc that we'd like to send out to our list. Can you get me a quick green-light on it? I leave it up to you on whether MBDB needs to see it or not. Thanks much!

THE PROGRESSIVE AGENDA

On behalf of Mayor Bill de Blasio, thank you for participating in the launch of The Progressive Agenda! We are looking forward to seeing you in Washington, DC, and we wanted to take this opportunity to provide you with final logistical details.

EVENT LOGISTICS

- WHAT: News conference announcing the launch of The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality
- WHEN: Tuesday, May 12, 3:00PM
Please arrive 10 minutes early
- WHERE: US House Triangle (East Front of the US Capitol Building)
Rain contingency: Event will be held in the Committee on Oversight and Government Reform, 2157
- FORECAST: On Tuesday, May 12 Washington, DC is expected to have a high of 93 degrees with partly cloudy skies

SCHEDULE AND DETAILS OF EVENT

IMPORTANT NOTE: We have more than 40 people who will attend and would like to speak during the program. Due to time constraints it is imperative that the majority of attendees limit their remarks to 2-3 sentences maximum.

For Example: “My name is Bill de Blasio, and I’m mayor of New York City. I support The Progressive Agenda because I believe that our economy should reward work, and not just wealth.”

- 2:50 p.m. Meet at the House Triangle, off camera, final briefing & prep, and check in with staff on site
We will line you up in order of speaking appearance and give you a sticker to wear on your lapel.
Logistical Notes:
- We are asking speakers to give very brief remarks and then sign The Progressive Agenda*
 - We will have a large blown up sign of The Progressive Agenda. After you speak, you will walk to the sign and sign your name with a black sharpie provided*
- 3:00 p.m. Mayor Bill de Blasio welcomes everyone and gives brief remarks, then signs The Progressive Agenda (2 mins)

Congressional Progressive Caucus Co- Chairs Rep. Grijalva and Rep. Ellison (2 mins)
Senator Jeff Merkley (2 mins)
Governor Howard Dean (2 mins)
Larry Cohen, President, CWA (2 mins)
Lily Eskelsen Garcia, President, NEA (2 mins)
Leo Gerard, President, Steelworkers (2mins)
Mary Kay Henry, President, SEIU (2 mins)
Lee Saunders, President AFSCME (2 mins)
Randy Weingarten, President, AFT (2 mins)
Maria Elena Durazo, Vice President for Immigration, Civil Rights and Diversity, UNITE
HERE! (2 mins)
Rep. Rosa DeLauro (2 mins)
Rev. Al Sharpton (2 mins)

All other labor representatives, Members of Congress, U.S. Mayors, Progressive
Organizational and Economic Policy Leaders (2-3 sentences)

3:40 p.m. Mayor Bill de Blasio thanks everyone, event adjourns

WAYS TO STAY INVOLVED

This is just the beginning and launch of this effort. It is the hope to have more event opportunities with you and others regarding these important issues. If you have ideas on next steps, or questions about anything listed below please contact Hayley Prim: hprim@hilltoppublicsolutions.com

Immediate opportunities:

1. Social Media- On the day of event and every day moving forward, we encourage you to tweet, retweet, and post on your Facebook pages about The Progressive Agenda using the hashtag #p2Agenda

Example Tweets:

Proud to join national progressive leaders to announce The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality. #p2Agenda

Income Inequality is a national crisis and affects working families all across America. #p2Agenda starts the conversation. RT to spread the word

Join me today in supporting #p2Agenda by signing up here: progressiveagenda.us. Promoting work over just wealth is good for all Americans.

The typical American family makes LESS today than they did 25 years ago. NOW is the time to address income inequality. #p2Agenda

2. Help build our coalition! On day 1, we will announce dozens of national leaders who have signed on to support The Progressive Agenda. Encourage your constituencies, colleagues, and friends to sign on as well by going to the website: www.ProgressiveAgenda.us

- A. Members of Congress, Senators & mayors will go back to their home states, districts, and cities to build support for TPA.

- B. Labor leaders will communicate with their members and amplify the platform.
- C. National organization leaders will reach out to their grassroots activists and urge them to speak to friends and neighbors.
- D. We will ALL fan out to do press and push everyday Americans to sign onto TPA through our website.
- E. Mayor de Blasio is heading to CA on Thursday to participate in an event with Professor Robert Reich, and will speak to students at Santa Clara University. Both conversations will be focused on income inequality and TPA.

3. Blog Posts- We encourage you to write blog posts about why you specifically support The Progressive Agenda so we can post to the website and share more broadly. Blog posts should be no more than 2-3 paragraphs and 350 words.

4. Op-Eds- This is a grassroots effort. By writing op-eds in local and national media, you can help spread the word to millions of Americans about why combating the crisis of income inequality in America is a priority as they elect their local and national leaders.

5. One Minutes- We encourage Members to do one-minutes on the House Floor next week to help amplify our message/highlight specific bills that would move our agenda forward.

KEY CONTACTS

For more information on:

The Progressive Agenda: Hayley Prim: Hprim@hilltoppublicsolutions.com

Additional events and other opportunities: Hayley Prim: Hprim@hilltoppublicsolutions.com

May 12 Logistical Information: Jeani Murray: [REDACTED]

Press Contact: Rebecca Katz: RKatz@hilltoppublicsolutions.com

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: "John Del Cecato"
Subject: RE: Run of Show
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 1:41:19 PM

I should be able to get to him as soon as he gets back from funeral around mid-afternoon. Are Stiglitz and Warren certain no-shows?

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 1:35 PM
To: Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Run of Show

Trumka not coming.

I know it's heavy on labor - but we didn't feel like we could let one or two speak, and then not let others speak.

EOD is okay - but please try to squeeze in a few minutes as soon as possible! (And thank you!)

FYI - the Daily Beast has the agenda - someone leaked it. Amazing to me that it took this long to leak - and I'm fine with it being out there.

<http://www.thedailybeast.com/articles/2015/05/08/de-blasio-s-national-contract-with-america-strategy-leaks.html>

From: <Snyder>, Thomas <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Friday, May 8, 2015 at 1:29 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: RE: Run of Show

Looks good but I will have to show it to him given sensitivities about speaking roles. I think I can get a react by end of day. Awful lot of labor heavies in the 2 minute section. Also, Trumka not coming or just being coy?

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 1:20 PM
To: Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Run of Show
Importance: High

Hey Tom. Here's the Run of Show doc that we'd like to send out to our list. Can you get me a quick green-light on it? I leave it up to you on whether MBDB needs to see it or not. Thanks much!

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
To: Walzak, Phil; "John Del Cecato"; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Daily Beast: De Blasio's National "Contract With America" Strategy Leaks
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 1:45:36 PM

PUSHING LEFT

05.08.151:08 PM ET

De Blasio's National "Contract With America" Strategy Leaks

Everyone from Susan Sarandon to Van Jones is helping draft and push de Blasio's new "Contract with America," which will push for paid sick leave and free, universal pre-K.

First New York City. Then America.

New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio is heading to Washington D.C. next week to present a progressive "Contract with America," a 13-point agenda intended to push the Democratic Party leftward.

According to a draft of the document provided to The Daily Beast by someone asked to join the effort, de Blasio will call for a number of measures for which he has already pushed in New York City, including national paid sick leave and free, universal pre-kindergarten and afterschool programs.

During the 2013 mayoral campaign, de Blasio used his support of paid sick leave to pummel the Democratic front-runner, Council Speaker Christine Quinn, sparking his come-from-behind victory. De Blasio then signed an expansive law on the topic soon after becoming mayor. Universal pre-K became de Blasio's signature accomplishment of his first year in office, even if his mechanism to pay for it—a tax on the city's upper income earners—was rejected by Democratic Gov. Andrew Cuomo.

The contract will also put de Blasio in the center of some of the debates currently roiling Washington. According to a draft of the document circulated this week, de Blasio will call for the passage of comprehensive immigration and for Democrats to “oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers’ rights, and the environment.”

President Barack Obama has called for a new Pacific trade deal that he says would open up new markets for American goods. He has received little support for that view among Democrats, however, and Hillary Clinton has declined to back the agreement.

Some of the items on de Blasio’s wish list have not yet been made a priority in his time as mayor, like universal free childcare and a $15 per hour minimum wage. The mayor has pushed for a $13 minimum wage indexed to inflation, which would not rise to $15 until 2019. The mayor’s push locally for the $13 minimum wage has likewise been rejected by Albany.

De Blasio is expected to be joined in Washington by a more than 60 members of Congress, progressive activists and labor leaders, among them Oregon Senator Jeff Merkley, Congressmen Keith Ellison and Raul Grijalva and the actor Susan Sarandon. Last month de Blasio convened a number of progressive thinkers at Gracie Mansion, including Nation editor Katrina Vanden Heuvel and civil rights activist Van Jones in order to hash out ideas about how to build a progressive agenda in 2016. De Blasio has pointedly declined to endorse Hillary Clinton’s presidential bid, even though he was the campaign manager of her 2000 Senate run in New York and even though both Bill and Hillary Clinton were on stage with de Blasio at his inauguration.

Aides to de Blasio dismiss the suggestion that this effort is designed to lift de Blasio’s profile, and say instead that it is intended to get a more progressive government into Washington D.C.—one that will be more attentive to New York City’s needs. The contract is modeled on Newt Gingrich’s Contract With America, which helped Republicans retake the House in 1994.

Many of the items that de Blasio calls for are unlikely to pass, even with a Democratic president and a Democratic congress, such as the “Buffet Rule,” which would force millionaires to pay a higher tax rate.

Among some of the other items expected to be on de Blasio’s agenda are a reform of the National Labor Relations Act “to enhance workers’ rights to organize and rebuild the middle class,” the expansion of the Earned Income Tax Credit, allowing students to refinance student loan debt, closing the carried interest loop, ending tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas, and the closing of a “CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to take advantage of ‘performance pay’ write-offs.”

--

Mahen Gunaratna

Director of Research and Media Analysis

Mayor’s Press Office | City Hall

mgunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov

(212) 676-3154 (o) | (347)-268-4295 (c)

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Cc: Carey, Michael
Subject: Re: CRAIN'S: De Blasio heading to Silicon Valley to tout inequality fight
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 1:51:28 PM

yes, open press

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Friday, May 8, 2015 at 10:17 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Fw: CRAIN'S: De Blasio heading to Silicon Valley to tout inequality fight

See below. The SCU speech will be open press, correct? Thanks

From: Clips
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 08:55 AM
Subject: CRAIN'S: De Blasio heading to Silicon Valley to tout inequality fight

De Blasio heading to Silicon Valley to tout inequality fight

CRAIN'S NY – Andrew Hawkins

<http://www.crainsnewyork.com/article/20150508/BLOGS04/150509865/de-blasio-heading-to-silicon-valley-to-tout-inequality-fight>

Mayor Bill de Blasio has taken his income inequality roadshow to Iowa, Wisconsin and Nebraska. Next week he's heading to Washington, D.C. to unveil his "Progressive Agenda" meant to influence the 2016 election. And the day after he'll take a trip to Silicon Valley to speak at his daughter Chiara's school.

Santa Clara University, which bills itself as the "Jesuit in Silicon Valley," will host Mr. de Blasio, "one of the nation's foremost voices in the growing movement to address income inequality," according to an email invitation obtained by The Insider. The event is only open to the university's students, faculty and staff.

While this isn't Mr. de Blasio's first trip to California as mayor, it will be the first time in his 16 months in office that he will give a speech there. Mr. de Blasio has previously set his sights on helping New York's Silicon Alley outpace California's more famous technology sector.

During the campaign, the mayor was adept at securing big donations from some of Silicon Valley's wealthiest tech moguls.

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: "John Del Cecato"
Subject: RE: Run of Show
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 2:08:37 PM

Gonna try and catch him between 3 - 3:30

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 2:02 PM
To: Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Run of Show

Our group thinks that we have to send to everyone (except maybe the activist types) today... They're really pressuring us for guidance

From: <Snyder>, Thomas <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Friday, May 8, 2015 at 1:48 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: RE: Run of Show

One other thing: do you think its necessary to send out today to all attendees the speaker lineup, thus telling the 2 sentence people their place in the pecking order? It may be the only way to go. Or do you think there might be a way to tell all attendees in this memo that there will be a smallish group speaking for 2 minutes and the rest get 2 sentences...details on lineup to follow. I don't have a strong opinion on this, just wondering.

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 1:35 PM
To: Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Run of Show

Trumka not coming.

I know it's heavy on labor - but we didn't feel like we could let one or two speak, and then not let others speak.

EOD is okay - but please try to squeeze in a few minutes as soon as possible! (And thank you!)

FYI - the Daily Beast has the agenda - someone leaked it. Amazing to me that it took this long to leak - and I'm fine with it being out there.

<http://www.thedailybeast.com/articles/2015/05/08/de-blasio-s-national-contract-with-america-strategy-leaks.html>

From: <Snyder>, Thomas <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Friday, May 8, 2015 at 1:29 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: RE: Run of Show

Looks good but I will have to show it to him given sensitivities about speaking roles. I think I can get a react by end of day. Awful lot of labor heavies in the 2 minute section. Also, Trumka not coming or just being coy?

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 1:20 PM
To: Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Run of Show
Importance: High

Hey Tom. Here's the Run of Show doc that we'd like to send out to our list. Can you get me a quick green-light on it? I leave it up to you on whether MBDB needs to see it or not. Thanks much!

From: FLONYC
To: B
Cc: [REDACTED] jfdc@akpdmedia.com
Subject: Re: Toni Morrison Essay for TPA
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 2:33:02 PM

I wish. I wish I could read it.

Sent from my iPhone

On May 8, 2015, at 2:27 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

That is smoking hot!! Not sure I'd change a thing. Chirlane, what do you think? And JDC/HP, how can we get the maximum bang out of this? Can we get an exclusive someone before it goes on the website? And could we have the right cultural figure read it aloud on Tues? Is that worth it?

From: Hayley Prim [[mailto:\[REDACTED\]](mailto:[REDACTED])]
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 02:17 PM
To: B
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Toni Morrison Essay for TPA

Pasted below is what Toni wrote for The Progressive Agenda. We are going to post to the TPA website, and can do something with it at press conference, but wanted to forward to you to read. She said we can edit or strengthen, but wants final version approved before we use it.

I applaud with enthusiasm this gathering of leaders, thinkers, activists, artists—each and all committed to strategies of and for social progress.

The Progressive Agenda identifies the pillars upon which healthy social structures can be built. Each pillar is designed to improve, even rescue, the lives of vulnerable populations. From financial traps, to failing schools, to jobs, to methods for strengthening families and communities—each pillar of support enhances the lives of the poor and middle class—which in turn benefits the whole society.

The solutions are not mysterious, not unknown; nor are the means by which to achieve them. We know what they are and how to apply them. There is simply, and too often, no will to organize and enact the agenda. But indifference and inaction stops here. With Mayor de Blasio's insistence and foresight along with the dedication and passion of serious progressives, vital changes in our cities and towns will surface.

Remember when we used to be called 'citizens'? There were levels of citizenship, certainly, but we were citizens none-the-less. "I am an American citizen" was our proud boast. Then, following World War Two, the prosperous decades began and we were called 'consumers.' The American consumer wants; the American consumer needs—and consume we did. Items that were once luxuries became necessities and, unlike our great grandparents, we were ashamed to have only one pair of shoes or one 'Sunday' dress. Being a consumer is not without pleasure or comfort. Yet now we are identified by a brand new label—one that floods political speech, pundit themes, and media headlines. Taxpayer. It seems that definition is all we are. The difference between understanding oneself as a citizen or as a taxpayer is not merely wide; it is antagonistic. A citizen thinks primarily about his/her community, is preoccupied with the safety of the neighborhood, the health of the elderly and disabled, the nurture and well-being of the young.

A taxpayer thinks mostly about his or herself, about who or what is taxing, that is to say 'taking', his hard-earned money to give to some undeserving body or some other distant, wasteful thing.

The Progressive Agenda seeks to return us to citizenship, the happily adult responsibility of citizens to each other: how to ensure a livable wage for all of us; how to improve schools in all our neighborhoods; how to protect working class jobs and pensions from predators who rely on exploitation and selfish behavior; how to welcome the immigrant, the "huddled masses" we ALL [except for Native Americans and slaves] once were.

This new Progressive Agenda re-imagines citizenship and is far, far more than worthy; it is crucial.

Toni Morrison

8 May 2015

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; [REDACTED]
Cc: FLONYC
Subject: Re: Toni Morrison Essay for TPA
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 2:34:58 PM

And Chirlane and I are thinking about whether Toni would agree to do a video of this? If not, Chirlane could or a celeb could

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 02:31 PM
To: B; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Cc: FLONYC
Subject: Re: Toni Morrison Essay for TPA

I'd love to get it out there before the event... Will brainstorm on how to do that...

And, as expected, it's beautifully written - and on a higher level than mere mortals could ever communicate...

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Friday, May 8, 2015 at 2:27 PM
To: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, FLONYC <FLONYC@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: Toni Morrison Essay for TPA

That is smoking hot!! Not sure I'd change a thing. Chirlane, what do you think? And JDC/HP, how can we get the maximum bang out of this? Can we get an exclusive someone before it goes on the website? And could we have the right cultural figure read it aloud on Tues? Is that worth it?

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 02:17 PM
To: B
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Toni Morrison Essay for TPA

Pasted below is what Toni wrote for The Progressive Agenda. We are going to post to the TPA website, and can do something with it at press conference, but wanted to forward to you to read. She said we can edit or strengthen, but wants final version approved before we use it.

I applaud with enthusiasm this gathering of leaders, thinkers, activists, artists—each and all committed to strategies of and for social progress.

The Progressive Agenda identifies the pillars upon which healthy social structures can be built. Each pillar is designed to improve, even rescue, the lives of vulnerable populations. From financial traps, to failing schools, to jobs, to methods for strengthening families and communities—each pillar of support enhances the lives of the poor and middle class—which in turn benefits the whole society.

The solutions are not mysterious, not unknown; nor are the means by which to achieve them. We know what they are and how to apply them. There is simply, and too often, no will to organize and enact the agenda. But indifference and inaction stops here. With Mayor de Blasio's insistence and foresight along with the dedication and passion of serious progressives, vital changes in our cities and towns will surface.

Remember when we used to be called 'citizens'? There were levels of citizenship, certainly, but we were citizens none-the-less. "I am an American citizen" was our proud boast. Then, following World War Two, the prosperous decades began and we were called 'consumers.' The American consumer wants; the American consumer needs—and consume we did. Items that were once luxuries became necessities and, unlike our great grandparents, we were ashamed to have only one pair of shoes or one 'Sunday' dress. Being a consumer is not without pleasure or comfort. Yet now we are identified by a brand new label—one that floods political speech, pundit themes, and media headlines. Taxpayer. It seems that definition is all we are. The difference between understanding oneself as a citizen or as a taxpayer is not merely wide; it is antagonistic. A citizen thinks primarily about his/her community, is preoccupied with the safety of the neighborhood, the health of the elderly and disabled, the nurture and well-being of the young.

A taxpayer thinks mostly about his or herself, about who or what is taxing, that is to say 'taking', his hard-earned money to give to some undeserving body or some other distant, wasteful thing.

The Progressive Agenda seeks to return us to citizenship, the happily adult responsibility of citizens to each other: how to ensure a livable wage for all of us; how to improve schools in all our neighborhoods;

how to protect working class jobs and pensions from predators who rely on exploitation and selfish behavior; how to welcome the immigrant, the "huddled masses" we ALL [except for Native Americans and slaves] once were.

This new Progressive Agenda re-imagines citizenship and is far, far more than worthy; it is crucial.

Toni Morrison

8 May 2015

--

Hayley Prim

c:

From: FLONYC
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: B: [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: Toni Morrison Essay for TPA
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 2:39:34 PM

Amen!

Sent from my iPhone

On May 8, 2015, at 2:38 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

I love that idea. We'll figure out a way to get to her, and if she's willing, what a fantastic thing to have on our website, to push out to our people, to tweet & FB and such!

From: FLONYC <FLONYC@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Friday, May 8, 2015 at 2:35 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: Toni Morrison Essay for TPA

Video Toni reading it. It's PERFECT.

Sent from my iPhone

On May 8, 2015, at 2:30 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

I'd love to get it out there before the event... Will brainstorm on how to do that...

And, as expected, it's beautifully written - and on a higher level than mere mortals could ever communicate...

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Friday, May 8, 2015 at 2:27 PM
To: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, FLONYC <FLONYC@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: Toni Morrison Essay for TPA

That is smoking hot!! Not sure I'd change a thing. Chirlane, what do you think? And JDC/HP, how can we get the maximum bang out of this? Can we get an exclusive someone before it goes on the website? And could we have the right cultural figure read it aloud on Tues? Is that worth it?

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:████████████████████]
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 02:17 PM
To: B
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Toni Morrison Essay for TPA

Pasted below is what Toni wrote for The Progressive Agenda. We are going to post to the TPA website, and can do something with it at press conference, but wanted to forward to you to read. She said we can edit or strengthen, but wants final version approved before we use it.

I applaud with enthusiasm this gathering of leaders, thinkers, activists, artists—each and all committed to strategies of and for social progress.

The Progressive Agenda identifies the pillars upon which healthy social structures can be built. Each pillar is designed to improve, even rescue, the lives of vulnerable populations. From financial traps, to failing schools, to jobs, to methods for strengthening families and communities—each pillar of support enhances the lives of the poor and middle class—which in turn benefits the whole society.

The solutions are not mysterious, not unknown; nor are the means by which to achieve them. We know what they are and how to apply them. There is simply, and too often, no will to organize and enact the agenda. But indifference and inaction stops here. With Mayor de Blasio's insistence and foresight along with the dedication and passion of serious progressives, vital changes in our cities and towns will surface.

Remember when we used to be called 'citizens'? There were levels of citizenship, certainly, but we were citizens none-the-less. "I am an American citizen" was our proud boast. Then, following World War Two, the prosperous decades began and we were called 'consumers.' The American consumer wants; the American consumer needs—and consume we did. Items that were once luxuries became necessities and, unlike our great grandparents, we were ashamed to have only one pair of shoes or one 'Sunday' dress. Being a consumer is not without pleasure or comfort. Yet now we are identified by a brand new label—one that floods political speech, pundit themes, and media headlines. Taxpayer. It seems that definition is all we are. The difference between understanding oneself as a citizen or as a taxpayer is not merely wide; it is antagonistic. A citizen thinks primarily about his/her community, is preoccupied with the safety of the neighborhood, the health of the elderly and disabled, the nurture and well-being of the young.

A taxpayer thinks mostly about his or herself, about who or what is taxing, that is to say 'taking', his hard-earned money to give to some undeserving body or some other distant, wasteful thing.

The Progressive Agenda seeks to return us to citizenship, the happily adult responsibility of citizens to each other: how to ensure a livable wage for all of us; how to improve schools in all our neighborhoods; how to protect working class jobs and pensions from predators who rely on exploitation and selfish behavior; how to welcome the immigrant, the "huddled masses" we ALL [except for Native Americans and slaves] once were.

This new Progressive Agenda re-imagines citizenship and is far, far more than worthy; it is crucial.

Toni Morrison

8 May 2015

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

From: Walzak, Phil
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma Subject: Re: The text of the agenda - please confirm
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 3:02:15 PM

Fine w confirmin the agenda
Defer on signers

----- Original Message -----

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 02:54 PM
To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma
Subject: FW: The text of the agenda - please confirm

Looks like Henry finally got his hands on the email... Since he already has it, you guys okay with me confirming & also including the latest list of signers (this looks like he got a very early edition - which, if we wanted to do sleuthing - we could probably narrow down who his source was - since there are new versions of this each day - but i don't really care)...

Unless there are objections, I'll confirm & get him the full list by 4pm?

On 5/8/15, 2:45 PM, "Henry Goldman (BLOOMBERG/ NEWSROOM:)" <hgoldman@bloomberg.net> wrote:

>We have been given what appears to be a text or summary of the >Progressive Agenda to be presented Tuesday. Can you please call me or >e-mail me to confirm that this is what will be discussed?
>
>Please join Bill de Blasio, Mayor of New York City, and declare your >support for The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality on May 12, >2015 at 3:00pm at the U.S. Capitol Building's House Triangle.
>
>The Progressive Agenda
>
>To Combat Income Inequality
>
>1. Lift the Floor for Working People
>
>• Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while >indexing it to inflation.
>
>• Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to >organize and rebuild the middle class.
>
>• Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect >against exploitation of low-wage workers.
>
>• Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense >of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.
>
>
>2. Support Working Families
>
>• Pass national paid sick leave.
>
>• Pass national paid family leave.
>

- >• Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
- >
- >• Expand the Earned Income Tax Credit.
- >
- >• Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of
- >lower interest rates.
- >
- >
- >
- >3. Tax Fairness
- >
- >• Close the carried interest loophole.
- >
- >• End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- >
- >• Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
- >
- >• Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to take advantage
- >of "performance pay" write-offs.
- >
- >More and more progressive leaders are signing on every day. So far
- >supporters include:
- >
- >• Eileen Appelbaum, Senior Economist, Center for Economic and Policy
- >Research
- >
- >• Dean Baker, Co-Director, Center for Economic and Policy Research
- >
- >• Deepak Bhargava, Executive Director, Center for Community Change
- >
- >• Robert Borosage, Co-Director Campaign for America's Future
- >
- >• Steve Buscemi, Actor
- >
- >• Larry Cohen, President, Communication Workers of America
- >
- >• Sheila Crowley, President and CEO, National Low Income Housing Coalition
- >
- >• Bill de Blasio, Mayor of New York City
- >
- >• Howard Dean, Former Governor of Vermont & Founder, Democracy for America
- >
- >• Rosa DeLauro, U.S. Representative from Connecticut
- >
- >• Abigail E. Disney, Filmmaker
- >
- >• Keith Ellison, U.S. Representative from Minnesota
- >
- >• Chaka Fattah, U.S. Representative from Pennsylvania
- >
- >• Jeff Faux, Founder, Economic Policy Institute
- >
- >• Lily Eskelsen García, President, National Education Association
- >
- >• Leo Gerard, President, United Steelworkers
- >
- >• Lisa Graves, Executive Director, Center for Media and
- >Democracy/PRWatch/ALECexposed.org
- >
- >• George Gresham, President, 1199SEIU

- >
- >• Raúl Grijalva, U.S. Representative from Arizona, Co-Chair Congressional >Progressive Caucus
- >
- >• Arshad Hasan, Executive Director, ProgressNow
- >
- >• Jeannette Huevo, Executive Director, United for a Fair Economy
- >
- >• Van Jones, Co-Founder and President, Rebuild the Dream
- >
- >• Barbara Lee, U.S. Representative from California
- >
- >• Sheila Jackson Lee, U.S. Representative from Texas
- >
- >• Mike Lux, Co-Founder and President, Progressive Strategies
- >
- >• Chirlane McCray, First Lady of New York City
- >
- >• Heather McGhee, Executive Director, DEMOS
- >
- >• Jim McGovern, U.S. Representative from Massachusetts
- >
- >• Lawrence Mishel, President, Economic Policy Institute
- >
- >• Jerry Nadler, U.S. Congressman from New York
- >
- >• Cynthia Nixon, Actor
- >
- >• Atima Omara, President, Young Democrats of America
- >
- >• James Parrott, Deputy Director and Chief Economist, Fiscal Policy >Institute
- >
- >• Robert Reich, Chancellor's Professor of Public Policy at University of >California at Berkeley & Former U.S. Secretary of Labor
- >
- >• Mark Ruffalo, Actor, Director, Producer & Activist
- >
- >• Jeff Sachs, Economist & Director of the Earth Institute at Columbia >University
- >
- >• Bill Samuels, Chairman, EffectiveNY
- >
- >• Susan Sarandon, Actress, Activist
- >
- >• Lee Saunders, President, American Federation of State, County and >Municipal Employees
- >
- >• Reverend Al Sharpton, Founder and President of National Action Network
- >
- >• D. Taylor, President, UNITE HERE!
- >
- >• Linda Tirado, Author
- >
- >• Richard L. Trumka, President, AFL-CIO
- >
- >• Katrina vanden Heuvel, Editor, The Nation
- >
- >• Bonnie Watson Coleman, U.S. Representative from New Jersey
- >

>• Randi Weingarten, President, American Federation of Teachers
>
>• Michael Wessel, President, The Wessel Group
>
>• Nan Whaley, Mayor of Dayton, Ohio
>
>• Marjorie E. Wood, PhD, Senior Associate, Global Economy Project &
>Managing Editor, Inequality.org
>
>• Marian Wright Edelman, Founder and President, Children’s Defense Fund
>
>
>
>The group of supporters will include federal and local elected officials, >labor officials, cultural leaders, and progressive activists.
>
>
>
>The Progressive Agenda – a progressive alternative, of sorts, to the 1994 >Republican Contract with America – will include specific proposals to >lift the floor for working people, support working parents, and promote >tax fairness – policies that reward work rather than just wealth.
>
>
>
>The event stems from a summit that Mayor de Blasio convened in New York >City in early April, where a group of national progressive leaders >gathered to discuss ways the country could combat the crisis of our time
>-- income inequality.
>
>
>
>The Progressive Agenda builds upon the work of dozens of economists, >lawmakers, think tanks, and progressive activists. It is not meant to be >seen as a comprehensive set of proposals to combat income inequality, but >rather a bold collection of core policy proposals around which >progressives can organize and mobilize.
>
>
>
>If you cannot attend in person, we’d still urge you to sign on to the >document.
>
>
>
>Thanks for your consideration, and feel free to contact me with any >questions or concerns.
>
>

From: Hayley Prim
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com
Subject: Re: Fw: Fwd: John Lewis
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 3:17:52 PM

You should. He has not gotten back to us at all. His cell is: [REDACTED]

On Fri, May 8, 2015 at 3:16 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

What's up with him? Should I call him???

-----Original Message-----

From: Janice Enright
To: Bill de Blasio
Subject: Fwd: John Lewis
Sent: May 4, 2015 11:22 AM

In case you ever need it

Sent from my iPhone
Begin forwarded message:

From: Minyon Moore <Minyon.Moore@deweysquare.com>
Date: May 4, 2015 at 8:15:46 AM PDT
To: Janice Enright <jenright@ickesenright.com>
Subject: FW: John

Total Control Panel Login

Remove this send list You received this message because the sender is on your allow list.

--

Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Cc: Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Pls send us final version of logistics memo when done
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 4:27:16 PM

Not for approval. Just so we have. And if other big names join, we'll cross that bridge... And pls call me later re: sunday shows

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Cc: Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Pls send us final version of logistics memo when done
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 4:28:55 PM
Attachments: TPA Final Speaker Logistics_JDC edits 4pm Fri.docx
[default\[12\].xml](#)
default.png

On behalf of Mayor Bill de Blasio, thank you for participating in the launch of The Progressive Agenda! We are looking forward to seeing you in Washington, DC, and we wanted to take this opportunity to provide you with final logistical details.
EVENT LOGISTICS

WHAT: News conference announcing the launch of The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality

WHEN: Tuesday, May 12, 3:00PM
Please arrive 10 minutes early

WHERE: US House Triangle (East Front of the US Capitol Building)
Rain contingency: Event will be held in the Committee on Oversight and Government Reform, 2157

FORECAST: On Tuesday, May 12 Washington, DC is expected to have a high of 93 degrees with partly cloudy skies

SCHEDULE AND DETAILS OF EVENT

IMPORTANT NOTE: We have more than 40 people who will attend and would like to speak during the program. Due to time constraints it is imperative that the majority of attendees limit their remarks to 2-3 sentences maximum.

For Example: "My name is XXX, and I'm head of XXXX. I support The Progressive Agenda because I believe that our economy should reward work, and not just wealth."

2:50 p.m. Meet at the House Triangle, off camera, final briefing

& prep, and check in with staff on site
We will line you up in order of speaking appearance and give you a sticker to wear on your lapel.

Logistical

Notes:

.

We are asking speakers to give very brief remarks and then sign The Progressive Agenda

.

We will have a large blown up sign of The Progressive Agenda. After you speak, you will walk to the sign and sign your name with a black sharpie provided

3:00 p.m. Mayor Bill de Blasio welcomes everyone and gives brief remarks, then signs The Progressive Agenda (2 mins)

Reading of a statement authored by Nobel-Prize winning novelist Toni Morrison (2 min)

Congressional Progressive Caucus Co- Chairs Rep. Gríjalva, Rep. Ellison, with Steering & Policy Committee Co-Chair Rep. DeLauro (2-3 mins) Senator

Jeff Merkley (2 mins)

Governor

Howard Dean (2 mins)

Group of 4 Mayors (2 minutes)

Rev. Al Sharpton (2 mins)

Mary

Kay Henry, President, SEIU (2 mins)

Randi

Weingarten, President, AFT (2 mins)

Lee

Saunders, President AFSCME (2 mins)

Lily

Eskelsen Garcia, President, NEA (2 mins)

Leo

Gerard, President, Steelworkers (2mins)

Larry

Cohen, President, CWA (2 mins)

Maria Elena Durazo, Vice President for Immigration, Civil Rights and Diversity, UNITE HERE! (2 mins)

All other labor representatives, Members of Congress, U.S. Mayors,
Progressive Organizational and Economic Policy Leaders (2-3 sentences)

3:40 p.m. Mayor Bill
de Blasio thanks everyone, event adjourns

WAYS TO STAY INVOLVED

This is just the beginning and launch of this effort. We are building out an aggressive national organizing plan, and we will be working with you as that takes shape.

Hayley

Prim will be your main point of contact: hprim@hilltoppublicsolutions.com.

Immediate opportunities:

1. Social Media- On the day of event and every day moving forward, we encourage you to tweet, retweet, and post on your Facebook pages about The Progressive Agenda using the hashtag #p2Agenda

Example Tweets:

Proud to join national progressive leaders to announce The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality. #p2Agenda

Income Inequality is a national crisis and affects working families all across America. #p2Agenda starts the conversation. RT to spread the word

Join me today in supporting #p2Agenda by signing up here: progressiveagenda.us. Promoting work over just wealth is good for all Americans.

The typical American family makes LESS today than they did 25 years ago. NOW is the time to address income inequality. #p2Agenda

2. Help build our coalition! On day 1, we will announce dozens of national leaders who have signed on to support The Progressive Agenda. Encourage your constituencies, colleagues, and friends to sign on as well by going to the website: www.ProgressiveAgenda.us <<http://www.ProgressiveAgenda.us>>

A.

Members of Congress, Senators & mayors will go back to their home states, districts, and cities to build support for TPA.

B.

Labor leaders will communicate with their members and amplify the platform.

C.

National organization leaders will reach out to their grassroots activists and urge them to speak to friends and neighbors.

D.

We will ALL fan out to do press and push everyday Americans to sign onto TPA through our website.

E.

Mayor de Blasio is heading to CA on Thursday to participate in an event with Professor Robert Reich at the University of California, Berkeley, and will speak to students at Santa Clara University. Both conversations will be focused on income inequality and TPA.

3. Blog Posts- We encourage you to write blog posts about why you specifically support The Progressive Agenda so we can post to the website and share more broadly. Blog posts should be no more than 2-3 paragraphs and 350 words.

4. Op-Eds- This is a grassroots effort. By writing op-eds in local and national media, you can help spread the word to millions of Americans about why combating the crisis of income inequality in America is a priority as they elect their local and national leaders.

5. One Minutes- We encourage

Members to do one-minutes on the House Floor next week to help amplify our message/highlight specific bills that would move our agenda forward.

KEY CONTACTS

For more information on:

The Progressive Agenda: Hayley

Prim: Hprim@hilltoppublicsolutions.com

Additional events and other opportunities: Hayley Prim:

Hprim@hilltoppublicsolutions.com

May 12 Logistical Information: Jeani Murray: [REDACTED]

Press Contact: Rebecca Katz: RKatz@hilltoppublicsolutions.com

On 5/8/15, 4:27 PM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>Not for approval. Just so we have. And if other big names join, we'll >cross that bridge... And pls call me later re: sunday shows

>

THE PROGRESSIVE AGENDA

On behalf of Mayor Bill de Blasio, thank you for participating in the launch of The Progressive Agenda! We are looking forward to seeing you in Washington, DC, and we wanted to take this opportunity to provide you with final logistical details.

EVENT LOGISTICS

- WHAT: News conference announcing the launch of The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality
- WHEN: Tuesday, May 12, 3:00PM
Please arrive 10 minutes early
- WHERE: US House Triangle (East Front of the US Capitol Building)
Rain contingency: Event will be held in the Committee on Oversight and Government Reform, 2157
- FORECAST: On Tuesday, May 12 Washington, DC is expected to have a high of 93 degrees with partly cloudy skies

SCHEDULE AND DETAILS OF EVENT

IMPORTANT NOTE: We have more than 40 people who will attend and would like to speak during the program. Due to time constraints it is imperative that the majority of attendees limit their remarks to 2-3 sentences maximum.

For Example: “My name is XXX, and I’m head of XXXX. I support The Progressive Agenda because I believe that our economy should reward work, and not just wealth.”

- 2:50 p.m. Meet at the House Triangle, off camera, final briefing & prep, and check in with staff on site
We will line you up in order of speaking appearance and give you a sticker to wear on your lapel.
Logistical Notes:
- We are asking speakers to give very brief remarks and then sign The Progressive Agenda
 - We will have a large blown up sign of The Progressive Agenda. After you speak, you will walk to the sign and sign your name with a black sharpie provided
- 3:00 p.m. Mayor Bill de Blasio welcomes everyone and gives brief remarks, then signs The Progressive Agenda (2 mins)

Reading of a statement authored by Nobel-Prize winning novelist Toni Morrison (2 min)
Congressional Progressive Caucus Co- Chairs Rep. Grijalva, Rep. Ellison, with Steering &
Policy Committee Co-Chair Rep. DeLauro (2-3 mins)
Senator Jeff Merkley (2 mins)
Governor Howard Dean (2 mins)
Group of 4 Mayors (2 minutes)
Rev. Al Sharpton (2 mins)
Mary Kay Henry, President, SEIU (2 mins)
Randi Weingarten, President, AFT (2 mins)
Lee Saunders, President AFSCME (2 mins)
Lily Eskelsen Garcia, President, NEA (2 mins)
Leo Gerard, President, Steelworkers (2mins)
Larry Cohen, President, CWA (2 mins)
Maria Elena Durazo, Vice President for Immigration, Civil Rights and Diversity, UNITE
HERE! (2 mins)
All other labor representatives, Members of Congress, U.S. Mayors, Progressive
Organizational and Economic Policy Leaders (2-3 sentences)

3:40 p.m. Mayor Bill de Blasio thanks everyone, event adjourns

WAYS TO STAY INVOLVED

This is just the beginning and launch of this effort. We are building out an aggressive national organizing plan, and we will be working with you as that takes shape. Hayley Prim will be your main point of contact: hprim@hilltoppublicsolutions.com.

Immediate opportunities:

1. Social Media- On the day of event and every day moving forward, we encourage you to tweet, retweet, and post on your Facebook pages about The Progressive Agenda using the hashtag #p2Agenda

Example Tweets:

Proud to join national progressive leaders to announce The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality. #p2Agenda

Income Inequality is a national crisis and affects working families all across America. #p2Agenda starts the conversation. RT to spread the word

Join me today in supporting #p2Agenda by signing up here: progressiveagenda.us. Promoting work over just wealth is good for all Americans.

The typical American family makes LESS today than they did 25 years ago. NOW is the time to address income inequality. #p2Agenda

2. Help build our coalition! On day 1, we will announce dozens of national leaders who have signed on to support The Progressive Agenda. Encourage your constituencies, colleagues, and friends to sign on as well by going to the website: www.ProgressiveAgenda.us

- A. Members of Congress, Senators & mayors will go back to their home states, districts, and cities to build support for TPA.

- B. Labor leaders will communicate with their members and amplify the platform.
- C. National organization leaders will reach out to their grassroots activists and urge them to speak to friends and neighbors.
- D. We will ALL fan out to do press and push everyday Americans to sign onto TPA through our website.
- E. Mayor de Blasio is heading to CA on Thursday to participate in an event with Professor Robert Reich at the University of California, Berkeley, and will speak to students at Santa Clara University. Both conversations will be focused on income inequality and TPA.

3. Blog Posts- We encourage you to write blog posts about why you specifically support The Progressive Agenda so we can post to the website and share more broadly. Blog posts should be no more than 2-3 paragraphs and 350 words.

4. Op-Eds- This is a grassroots effort. By writing op-eds in local and national media, you can help spread the word to millions of Americans about why combating the crisis of income inequality in America is a priority as they elect their local and national leaders.

5. One Minutes- We encourage Members to do one-minutes on the House Floor next week to help amplify our message/highlight specific bills that would move our agenda forward.

KEY CONTACTS

For more information on:

The Progressive Agenda: Hayley Prim: Hprim@hilltoppublicsolutions.com

Additional events and other opportunities: Hayley Prim: Hprim@hilltoppublicsolutions.com

May 12 Logistical Information: Jeani Murray: [REDACTED]

Press Contact: Rebecca Katz: RKatz@hilltoppublicsolutions.com

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Cc: Leopold, Elana; Carey, Michael
Subject: Re: Van Jones
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 5:14:43 PM

Cell phone is:

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Friday, May 8, 2015 at 5:12 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: "Leopold, Elana" <LEopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: Van Jones

Send me van's #. I'll call now, or tmrw AM

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 05:08 PM
To: B
Cc: Leopold, Elana; Carey, Michael
Subject: Van Jones

We played phone tag. Finally got him on the line, and he said he couldn't talk - had someone on the phone - but said he had a major problem with criminal justice reform not being a part of this document. He gave me no chance to respond.

He's going to call me back in a half hour, and I can talk him through next steps, more to come, etc - but I think this is one that you should probably handle, if you're free at 530 or 540pm

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Re: Van is free now if you have a minute
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 5:46:24 PM

Will try Van briefly

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 05:27 PM
To: B
Subject: Van is free now if you have a minute

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Cc: Leopold, Elana; Carey, Michael
Subject: Re: Keith Ellison
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 5:47:26 PM

Okay, will do.

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Friday, May 8, 2015 at 5:46 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: Keith Ellison

Will be impossible for me to make calls before tmrw. You and your team should hold the line and tell any doubter of importance that you will sched a call for them with me on sunday

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 05:15 PM
To: B
Cc: Leopold, Elana; Carey, Michael
Subject: Keith Ellison

Wouldn't hurt for you to call him, either. I returned his call but he never called back - but I've heard he's getting squishy... This will be the Adam Green problem - adding in debt-free college & expanding SS...

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Cc: Leopold, Elana; Carey, Michael
Subject: Re: Keith Ellison
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 6:11:05 PM

One thing that seemed to resonate at the staff level is when I said: "You know, we came up with The Progressive Agenda language for a reason. THIS thing on 5/12 The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality. But we can also envision building onto that The Progressive Agenda to Combat Climate Change...to Combat Retirement Insecurity...etc."

Raul & Keith just need to know that this is a living/breathing movement that we can & will continually add to.

Just two cents from the cheap seats

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Friday, May 8, 2015 at 5:46 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: Keith Ellison

Will be impossible for me to make calls before tmrw. You and your team should hold the line and tell any doubter of importance that you will sched a call for them with me on sunday

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 05:15 PM
To: B
Cc: Leopold, Elana; Carey, Michael
Subject: Keith Ellison

Wouldn't hurt for you to call him, either. I returned his call but he never called back - but I've heard he's getting squishy... This will be the Adam Green problem - adding in debt-free college & expanding SS...

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Subject: FW: Call request from Van Jones
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 6:16:52 PM

From: Nisha Anand <nisha@dreamcorps.us>
Date: Friday, May 8, 2015 at 3:25 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Call request from Van Jones

Hello Mr. Del Cecato,

I would like to set up a call with you and Van Jones as soon as possible. He has an immediate concern he would like to discuss with you or Mayor de Blasio.

He is very excited to join you on The Capitol steps this Tuesday and is quite inspired by what you put together.

Please let me know asap when you have time to speak with him. He is on air at 7pm. Other than that, he can be available.

Thanks,
Nisha

--
Nisha Anand
Director of External Relations
The Office of Van Jones, President
#YesWeCode | #cut50
510-213-0968

web | youtube | facebook | twitter

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil; Carey, Michael; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Gross, Dan; Adams, Marti
Subject: Re:
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 6:48:52 PM

What types of options do we need? Adding Dan/marti to think through ideas

----- Original Message -----

From: Wolfe, Emma
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 06:42 PM
To: Walzak, Phil; Carey, Michael; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: RE:

No go?

-----Original Message-----

From: Walzak, Phil
Sent: Thursday, May 07, 2015 8:52 PM
To: Wolfe, Emma; Carey, Michael; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com'
Cc: Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Re:

That's the ticket

Yes

----- Original Message -----

From: Wolfe, Emma
Sent: Thursday, May 07, 2015 08:45 PM
To: Carey, Michael; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Re:

A moms day thing?

----- Original Message -----

From: Carey, Michael
Sent: Thursday, May 07, 2015 08:43 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Re:

He has nothing planned Sunday AM :)

Michael Paul Carey
City Hall
New York, New York

> On May 7, 2015, at 7:47 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
>
> Rolling Stone line plus subway email plus burger/lateness = no bueno.

>

> Is there any chance to get our guy to do something humble this weekend - not just officer wake, but maybe volunteering at St. Francis Xavier's soup kitchen (Union Square) on Sunday morning, unannounced to press? I could pitch him on this, if you guys don't think I'm out of my mind.

>

>

>

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Subject: Re: Van is free now if you have a minute
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 7:12:44 PM

[REDACTED]

That said, I just had a lovely conversation with Ellison's chief of staff. Once I explained the part about The Progressive Agenda to Combat Retirement Insecurity, The Progressive Agenda to Combat College Costs, etc - her mind was put at great ease. She said the messaging made it seem like "this was the whole thing" - and asked if we could help message that it was NOT the whole thing (which we've done over and over - but press hasn't written it that way), and asked if you might say something in your remarks Tues that SS and debt-free college were also huge issues (which you said in your op-ed) - but here is the starting point, etc..

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Friday, May 8, 2015 at 7:04 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: Van is free now if you have a minute

[REDACTED]

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 05:27 PM
To: B
Subject: Van is free now if you have a minute

[REDACTED]

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Subject: Re: Test
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 8:13:27 PM

If only he knew how to spell your name.

I think you tell him that we have a plan to do The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality on 5/12 - but that CA in June will be TPA to Combat Climate Change and TPA to Combat Racial Injustice.

> On May 8, 2015, at 7:39 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
>
>
> See below
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Van Jones
> To: Bill de Blasio
> Subject: Re: Test
> Sent: May 8, 2015 6:38 PM
>
> I will work with your team to find a good time tomorrow.
> I apologize for not tracking the documents; we are putting together this Prince concert on Sunday, and I have been been consumed with that and other Baltimore-related issues.
> But I am not the only black leader who will be disappointed to see the key economic issue that is crushing our dreams omitted from a Bill DiBlasio document.
> Women's, students' and immigrants' economic issues are rightfully included. But not the economic issue that has propelled the #BlackLivesMatter onto the global stage?
> Why not include a simple bullet point on Families saying: "Invest in "schools not jails" -- and give people coming home from prison a second chance."
>
> No economic vision that fails to address the mass incarceration crisis can be called progressive. Everyone from Cory Booker to the Koch Brothers (who are also not running for higher office) is embracing this cause. Even Hillary Clinton and Rand Paul!
> You are the populist leader of the movement for economic justice. If YOU sideline or marginalize overly-incarcerated populations in YOUR economic vision, what does that say?
> Please: as the most important economic champion in America, I implore you to acknowledge the economic crisis brought about by the New Jim Crow -- in the same way you are embracing the agenda of women, immigrants and students.
> You know that I am your most passionate supporter -- because I know you are the only national leader who can credibly make the case for ALL of America's economic victims. That's who you represent in NYC.
> I told Bloomberg News: "When we had a national security crisis, a NYC mayor stepped up to help the whole country. Now we have an national economic crisis, and a NYC mayor is stepping up again. That's Bill DiBlasio."
> I believe in you, 110%. Pray about this, please. I will, too. And let's talk tomorrow. Van
>
> Sent from my iPhone (TM)
> On May 8, 2015, at 2:57 PM, "Bill de Blasio" < > wrote:
>
>
> Van, did you get this? Thanks - Bill
>

>
> Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Fw: TPA
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 8:34:07 PM

On correct email

-----Original Message-----

From: John Del Cecato
To: Bill de Blasio
Subject: Re: TPA
Sent: May 8, 2015 7:57 PM

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED]

> On May 8, 2015, at 7:40 PM, Bill de Blasio <[\[REDACTED\]](#)> wrote:

>

>

> [REDACTED]

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Patrick Gaspard
> To: Bill de Blasio
> Subject: Fwd: TPA
> Sent: Apr 28, 2015 5:49 PM

>

> Just my honest reaction to what I'm seeing and have seen.

>

>

> Begin forwarded message:

>

> From: Patrick <[\[REDACTED\]](#)>
> Date: April 28, 2015 at 11:20:07 PM GMT+2
> To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
> Subject: Re: TPA

>

> John, thanks for sharing this with me today as it's going out. I can't say that I feel in the loop in any way. I'm not sure I understand what this is and why we would invite the comparison to Contract With America, which was crafted by people who actually had the means to shape electoral outcomes six weeks after they issued it and who would have the gavel to pass the very specific legislation they detailed in the plan. Bill and his coalition have neither real details or electoral clout. I'm still not clear what the coalition is and who exactly will be the muscle behind this. And if a main goal is to push HRC definition on these issues, do we already have an analysis on how she's already positioned herself on each over time? What's the win? The politics elude me.

> On substance, this phrase gives me pause - "it is not meant to be seen as a comprehensive set of proposals to combat income inequality." Isn't that exactly what's needed right now from real leaders, instead of more comms talking points? I don't see the "bold collection of core policy proposals" described in the preamble. Where's the boldness that's going to transform life for those being crushed by the 1% ?Minimum wage hike that most dems are already organizing around in some form? The same old NLRA reform that unions have been petitioning for over decades and will never get? Vague Immigration reform which again all national dems support and won't happen for the next twenty years? Nafta/TPP rhetoric? EITC again? We're back on ending "tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas"?

> This is really the culmination of a national conversation with "dozens of economists, think tanks, etc?" It reads like something any press aid working for most Dem electeds could draw up in 15 minutes without much thought or fear of controversy. And by the way, given Bill's history and the actual economic crisis in urban America I'm stunned that there's nothing in this about the need to reform our justice system to make certain that young men aren't being perpetually denied the ability to work because of disparities in sentencing, etc. Criminalization of behavior in black and brown communities that would be ignored in white youth is his driving a tremendous amount of lifelong income inequality in these communities. But it does not a sound bite make. Actual innovative affordable housing, healthcare and manufacturing/training policy would have greater impact on the lives of working people than 90% of what's in here. Infrastructure investment policy or green jobs initiatives would help labor much more than any of their NLRA pipe dreams.

> I don't know. This is kind of hollow and bankrupt to me.

> On Apr 28, 2015, at 8:09 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

>

> Wanted to keep you in the loop on this... Here's what we're sending out to a bunch of electeds, labor leaders, etc today...

> On Tuesday, May 12 at 3:00pm, national progressive leaders will gather at the U.S. Capitol Building's House Triangle to declare their support for The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality.

>

> The group of supporters will include federal and local elected officials, labor officials, cultural leaders, and progressive activists.

>

> The Progressive Agenda – a progressive alternative, of sorts, to the 1994 Republican Contract with America – will include specific proposals to lift the floor for working people, supp

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Subject: Re: Hey there!
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 8:39:31 PM

Great !

> On May 8, 2015, at 8:35 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>

> Back on correct email!

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> To: John Del Cecato

> Subject: Re: Fwd: Hey there!

> Sent: May 8, 2015 8:34 PM

>

>

>

>

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: John Del Cecato

> To: Bill de Blasio

> Subject: Fwd: Hey there!

> Sent: May 8, 2015 8:32 PM

>

> From my former boss.

>

>

>

> Begin forwarded message:

>

> From: JPM <Jimmymac@mail.house.gov>

> Date: May 8, 2015 at 8:30:23 PM EDT

> To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>

> Subject: Re: Hey there!

>

> We are all nuts. Be tough. Too many egos. See you next week.

>

> Sent from my iPhone

> On May 8, 2015, at 8:18 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

>

> He's my man! I am trying my best on the revolution - just gotta keep the small but super squeaky wheels from making the perfect the enemy of the good. Will tell you more in person - but man, organizing progressives is HARD! This is why I should stick to ads. :)

>

>

>

> On May 8, 2015, at 7:34 PM, JPM <Jimmymac@mail.house.gov> wrote:

>

> Just saw Eric lesser. He wanted me to tell you hi. I told him you're helping with the revolution. He's a great guy.

>

> Sent from my iPhone

> On May 4, 2015, at 1:58 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

>

> Hi, Jim. It's been a while since we've talked - how the hell are you?

> I did talk to the Snake a month or so ago... So good to know that he's still the guy I remember!

> Had a question for you... Mayor de Blasio is convening a group of national progressives for an event in DC on May 12 at 3pm (at the House Triangle) to express support for what we're calling The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality (yeah - really catchy, I know...)

> First and foremost, I was wondering if you'd be willing to be an official signer to the document... (Generic mass email, with preamble & the Agenda itself, is both attached & copied below)...

> BDB is doing a call at 5pm tonight to try to persuade more members of the Congressional Progressive Caucus to join the cause... I can get you the info about that if you want - but I figured you wouldn't want to be bothered by a conf call... If you had any specific questions, either I - or de Blasio - would be happy to chat further... Rosa is already on board (as are others - although they're waiting until after the call to officially sign on)...

> What do you think? You can't miss an opportunity to be with me at the House Triangle again! &

From: B
To: "hprim@hilltoppublicsolutions.com"
Cc: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Re: Flag: Howard Dean
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 10:32:02 PM

We MUST do that. Put him first or second

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:hprim@hilltoppublicsolutions.com]
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 10:05 PM
To: B
Subject: Flag: Howard Dean

He has to leave by 3:15 on Tuesday. Might be worth considering moving him up in the lineup.

----- Forwarded message -----

From: Howard Dean <[REDACTED]>
Date: Fri, May 8, 2015 at 9:04 PM
Subject: Re: ROS Details: May 12 Press Conference with Mayor de Blasio in Washington, DC
To: Hayley Prim <hprim@hilltoppublicsolutions.com>
Cc: Amanda McKay <[REDACTED]>

Hi Hayley,

I now have a potential scheduling problem with Tuesday. I am supposed to be at a meeting which I can not miss or be late to at 3:30 which is about fifteen minutes away from the Capitol. If your time frame and my placement in the Tik Tok is accurate, this will work, but if you start late I will have to bail no later than 3:15. I apologize for this. There are a lot of things going on in my employment life including a huge merger so my schedule not as flexible as it has been. Best, Howard

Sent from my iPhone

On May 8, 2015, at 5:34 PM, Hayley Prim <hprim@hilltoppublicsolutions.com> wrote:

Governor Dean,

I am so glad you are able to join us on Tuesday next week to announce The Progressive Agenda with Mayor Bill de Blasio.

Attached you will find the Run of Show with details for the event.

Let me know if you have any questions.

Thanks,
Hayley

--

Hayley Prim
Hilltop Public Solutions
[REDACTED]

<05-12-15 ROS Progresssive Agenda .docx>

--

Hayley Prim
Hilltop Public Solutions
[REDACTED]

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: B; FLONYC; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Fw: Wapo: how growing up poor changes politicians
Date: Friday, May 08, 2015 10:39:29 PM

From: Andrea Hagelgans [mailto:████████████████████]
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 10:40 PM
To: Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Wapo: how growing up poor changes politicians

Wonkblog

How growing up poor changes politicians

Democrats from humble backgrounds more often vote for economic policies that help the lower class. For Republicans, upbringing doesn't matter.

Sent from my iPhone

By Lydia DePillis May 6

Rep. Brad Miller grew up working class, and that mattered. (Brendan Hoffman/Bloomberg News)

Former Rep. Brad Miller's father was one of eleven children born in a small, poor town in North Carolina. Neither of Miller's parents could afford to finish college. And after his father died when Miller was 12, his mother supported them on her bookkeeper's salary. Miller and his older brother were the first generation to finish college, or to travel outside the country without joining the military — to say nothing of reaching reaching Columbia Law School, the North Carolina State House and the halls of Congress.

"I recently found out that my mother had all of her teeth removed because she went decades without going to a dentist," says Miller, reflecting on how she must have shorted herself to care for her children. "She didn't tell me or anyone else what we were doing without."

That trajectory might make Miller unusual in modern America, where social mobility isn't actually as powerful as political rhetoric might suggest. But he went on to serve in a fairly predictable way, according to new research on how class backgrounds affect legislators' voting behavior: Democrats with humble upbringings tend to favor policies that help lift people out of poverty, like access to health care, welfare benefits, higher minimum wages and more funding for education.

Republicans, by contrast, don't break down at all by their financial conditions in childhood — perhaps because those who came from poverty tend to credit their rise to personal initiative, rather than social programs. That suggests that while the ability of those who came from humble backgrounds to get elected to Congress matters for the Democratic policy platform, it might not have much impact on the issues the GOP decides to emphasize.

"Don't ask me to explain Republicans," Miller says.

Democrats are already a lot more working class than Republicans. (Jacob Grumbach, University of California-Berkeley)

During his decade in Congress, Miller became one of the House's most vocal advocates of financial reform and a "darling of progressive activists," working to strengthen the Dodd-Frank law and fighting for greater relief for homeowners hit hard by the foreclosure crisis. After five terms of that, the conservative North Carolina House essentially redistricted him out of a seat. Miller says his priorities in office had a lot to do with his understanding of what life is like on the bottom of the income ladder.

"You know people who are struggling, because they're your relatives, people you knew in high school. And that kind of changes your perspective," Miller says. "I know that I'm less inclined to think that the U.S. is meritocratic, unless you think it is very meritorious to have rich parents."

The paper, which builds on previous work by Duke University's Nicholas Carnes, uses data on the professional and parental backgrounds of lawmakers serving in Congress between 1999 and 2008. Author Jacob Grumbach of the University of California-Berkeley found that Democrats born into wealth vote more conservatively, even accounting for race and gender. And it's even more true when purely pocketbook issues — as measured by scorecards issued by the AFL-CIO and Chamber of Commerce — are taken into account.

For Miller, that resonates. Until recently, Democrats marketed their progressive cred more through their positions on gay rights or the war in Iraq, regardless of their votes on bank regulation or labor protections.

"I guess a lot of the 'wine track' progressives are liberal on social issues, war and peace issues, and don't so much care about economic issues," Miller says. "It's become fashionable to talk about income inequality, but for a generation it hasn't been what defined their economic message." Over the course of that generation, some of the policies that allowed Miller to advance — like very low tuition at the University of North Carolina — have fallen by the wayside.

Of course, another standard-bearer of economic populism — Elizabeth Warren — also rose from modest means to a position of power. Miller, who worked closely with Warren to set up the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, thinks it's time to talk to voters about their balance sheets, rather than hot-button issues like abortion or gun control.

"That's been one of my frustrations with the Democratic party, that there's not been a whole lot of sympathy for Archie Bunker — for the working class, socially conservative white guy," Miller says. "A demographic I sometimes refer to as my family."

From: Hayley Prim
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com
Subject: Re: Gresham
Date: Saturday, May 09, 2015 9:31:22 AM

Ok, sounds good. We can send a revised and final version out to everyone on Monday, so should see if there is anyone else we need to discuss shifting around this weekend as well.

On Saturday, May 9, 2015, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

I understand, but there are a few other considerations here. Let's discuss. My instinct is to slot him in right after Maria Elena

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:████████████████████]
Sent: Saturday, May 09, 2015 09:17 AM
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: Gresham

He will be in DC. Our reasoning was since the 2 minutes were so labor heavy to begin with, we thought best to just feature the national and international presidents and Durazo.

And if we added him at the top, SEIU would be the only union with two featured speakers.

On Saturday, May 9, 2015, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Is he coming to DC? We need to feature him in some way if he is. Pls discuss. Perhaps after maria elena

--
Hayley Prim
c: ██████████

--
Hayley Prim
c: ██████████

From: John Del Cecato
To: Adams, Marti; Gross, Dan
Cc: Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil; Carey, Michael
Subject: Re:
Date: Saturday, May 09, 2015 9:55:08 AM

that's a great idea, Marti.. doesn't even need to bring flowers, could just come by as an OTR to visit

From: <Adams>, Marti <MAAdams@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Saturday, May 9, 2015 at 9:52 AM
To: "Gross, Dan" <DGross@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re:

Are there any shelters specifically for women and children or DV victims that he could visit? Bring flowers or something else for Mother's Day?

Sent from my iPhone

On May 8, 2015, at 19:33, Gross, Dan <DGross@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

This seems like a good hit. Happening all over the City tomorrow.

<http://www.riverkeeper.org/news-events/events/rvk-events/sweep2015/>

When:

May 9, 2015

Where:

Throughout NYC and the Hudson Valley

The 2015 Riverkeeper Sweep, our fourth annual day of service for the Hudson River, will take place on Saturday, May 9. We are counting on YOU to make it the best Sweep yet, RAIN OR SHINE. Register now for one of 100+ cleanups and plantings from NYC to Albany and see what difference we can make in a day!

Our success during the 2014 Sweep was due to the leadership of over 120 Sweep Leaders and the dedication of nearly 2,000 volunteers and hundreds of community partners.

Together we removed 31 tons of trash and recycling in 82 shoreline locations. More volunteers participated last year than in 2013, but less trash was removed overall – meaning that sites we've cleaned up in the past are not being abused as they once were. With your help we will continue to reclaim the Hudson River from the hands of polluters.

If you have questions, please contact Dana Gulley at sweep@riverkeeper.org.

Sweep Project Sites

Click to register for any of over 90 service project sites. (If you are interested in an event that is not yet linked to a registration page, please check back soon.)

MANHATTAN

Inwood's North Cove

Riverside Park 10-Mile Playground at 148th Street

Harlem River Park

Hudson River Park Gansevoort Peninsula

John V. Lindsay East River Park

Stuyvesant Cove Park

Randall's Island Kickoff Event (May 8th Sponsor Kick-off: By Invitation Only)

Randall's Island

BROOKLYN

Newtown Creek from North Brooklyn by Boat (Registration Closed)

Greenpoint Waterfront at Java Street + India Street

Greenpoint: Bushwick Inlet

Williamsburg: East River State Park

Williamsburg: Grand Ferry Park

Gowanus Canal: Thomas Greene Playground

Brooklyn Bridge Park (Registration Closed)

Red Hook: Valentino Park

QUEENS

Powell's Cove Park Coastal Wetlands

Astoria Park

Jennifer's Annual Flushing Bay Cleanup

Gantry Plaza State Park

Long Island City: Hallet's Cove at Socrates Sculpture Park

Long Island City: Newtown Creek by Land

Long Island City: Newtown Creek by Canoe

BRONX

Riverdale Park Shoreline Cleanup Take Metro-North to Riverdale

Riverdale: College of Mount Saint Vincent

- See more at: <http://www.riverkeeper.org/news-events/events/rvk-events/sweep2015/#sthash.qcDTp56u.dpuf>

On May 8, 2015, at 6:48 PM, Hagelgans, Andrea <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

What types of options do we need? Adding Dan/marti to think through ideas

----- Original Message -----

From: Wolfe, Emma

Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 06:42 PM

To: Walzak, Phil; Carey, Michael; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com'

<jfdc@akpdmedia.com>

Cc: Hagelgans, Andrea

Subject: RE:

No go?

-----Original Message-----

From: Walzak, Phil

Sent: Thursday, May 07, 2015 8:52 PM

To: Wolfe, Emma; Carey, Michael; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com'

Cc: Hagelgans, Andrea

Subject: Re:

That's the ticket

Yes

----- Original Message -----

From: Wolfe, Emma

Sent: Thursday, May 07, 2015 08:45 PM

To: Carey, Michael; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>

Cc: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea

Subject: Re:

A moms day thing?

----- Original Message -----

From: Carey, Michael

Sent: Thursday, May 07, 2015 08:43 PM

To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>

Cc: Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma; Hagelgans, Andrea

Subject: Re:

He has nothing planned Sunday AM :)

Michael Paul Carey

City Hall

New York, New York

On May 7, 2015, at 7:47 PM, John Del Cecato
<jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

Rolling Stone line plus subway email plus burger/lateness = no bueno.

Is there any chance to get our guy to do something humble this weekend - not just officer wake, but maybe volunteering at St. Francis Xavier's soup kitchen (Union Square) on Sunday morning, unannounced to press? I could pitch him on this, if you guys don't think I'm out of my mind.

From: B
To: [REDACTED]
Cc: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Re: Gresham
Date: Saturday, May 09, 2015 10:40:34 AM

Ok, let's keep the 11am call

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Saturday, May 09, 2015 09:34 AM
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: Gresham

We scheduled a call for you and Van Jones through MPC for 11am today. His cell is [REDACTED]

If that doesn't work for you any longer let me know, and I will talk to Vans team.

On Saturday, May 9, 2015, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Let's discuss tmrw. And remind me I need to connect with van jones late afternoon

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Saturday, May 09, 2015 09:17 AM
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: Gresham

He will be in DC. Our reasoning was since the 2 minutes were so labor heavy to begin with, we thought best to just feature the national and international presidents and Durazo.

And if we added him at the top, SEIU would be the only union with two featured speakers.

On Saturday, May 9, 2015, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Is he coming to DC? We need to feature him in some way if he is. Pls discuss. Perhaps after maria elena

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

|

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Subject: Fwd: I'm being told that
Date: Saturday, May 09, 2015 11:24:58 AM

Told him this was Batshit crazy for all the obvious reasons

Begin forwarded message:

From: David Simas <[REDACTED]>
Date: May 9, 2015 at 11:07:36 AM EDT
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: I'm being told that the event is being quietly pitched as an anti-trade event with DeBlasio, Warren, Trumka and Stiglitz.

Even if that's not the intention, given the fact that TPA will be considered in the Senate on the same day, I think there's zero chance that it's not covered that way.

From: Walzak, Phil
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Hagelgans, Andrea; [REDACTED] Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Fwd: So John
Date: Saturday, May 09, 2015 11:28:54 AM

Have we scrubbed it?

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Saturday, May 09, 2015 11:28 AM
To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Rebecca Katz <[REDACTED]> Leopold, Elana
Subject: Fwd: So John

Since eric isn't gonna write another book - and this was a very solid, non-haughty interview - I think we should say yes

Begin forwarded message:

From: Eric Alterman <[REDACTED]>
Date: May 9, 2015 at 10:21:33 AM EDT
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: So John

Missed you again at poker, though I keep winning so it's ok.

Given the announcement next week and all the attention that will garner, I wonder if it be ok with you if I follow up afterward--by a week or two--with an edited transcript of my interview with the mayor to run in The Nation and on the website. I think it will be a good opportunity to present an unvarnished view of how the "Contract" fits into a larger vision--a vision that might otherwise get lost in the focus on just the pros and cons of the contract and the names attached to it.

Any problem with this? I'd hate to see it go to waste

all best

ERA

--

Eric Alterman
[REDACTED]

CUNY Distinguished Professor of English and Journalism, Brooklyn College
"Liberal Media" Columnist, The Nation,
Senior Fellow, Center for American Progress, The Nation Institute
305 W.98th Street, 2 C-S, New York, New York, 10025
(917)538-9726 www.ericalterman.com

From: Brandenburg, Dusty
To: Carey, Michael; Sevillia, Max; Moe, Kari; Leopold, Elana
Cc: Darner, Michael \(CPC\); jfdc@akpdmedia.com
Subject: RE: Trying to set up call today for mayor with rep Ellison.
Date: Saturday, May 09, 2015 11:36:53 AM

Yes – can we confirm 3:00 PM ET today?

Dustin J. Brandenburg
Director of Operations
Office of Congressman Keith Ellison
Telephone: (202) 225 - 4755
Fax: (202) 225 - 4886

Congressman Keith Ellison - E-Newsletter - Twitter - Facebook - Flickr - YouTube

All scheduling requests should be emailed to ellison.scheduler@mail.house.gov

From: Carey, Michael [<mailto:MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>]
Sent: Saturday, May 09, 2015 11:34 AM
To: Sevillia, Max; Moe, Kari; Leopold, Elana
Cc: Darner, Michael (CPC); Brandenburg, Dusty; jfdc@akpdmedia.com
Subject: RE: Trying to set up call today for mayor with rep Ellison.

Hi there!

Is the Congressman free today from 3-5 at all?

Michael Paul Carey
City Hall
New York, New York

From: Sevillia, Max
Sent: Saturday, May 09, 2015 11:30 AM
To: Moe, Kari; Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana
Cc: Darner, Michael (CPC); Brandenburg, Dusty; jfdc@akpdmedia.com
Subject: Re: Trying to set up call today for mayor with rep Ellison.

Thanks for the email. Adding Michael Carey and Elana Leopold, both in the Mayor's front office.

Best,

Max

Max Sevillia, Esq.

Director
New York City Office of Federal Affairs
1301 Pennsylvania Ave, N.W.
Suite 350
Washington, D.C. 20004
Tel. \(202\) 624-5906
Cell. \(347\) 276-6572
msevillia@cityhall.nyc.gov

On May 9, 2015, at 5:12 PM, Moe, Kari <Kari.Moe@mail.house.gov> wrote:

Max and john. Hi. I am cos to rep Ellison. We r trying to set up call with mayor today. Can you help us set this up. Dusty is mr Ellison's scheduler and mike is Ed of progressive caucus. Thanks. Kari moe

Sent from my iPhone

From: John Del Cecato
To: B; [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: How/when?
Date: Saturday, May 09, 2015 1:24:23 PM

Let's do Monday

On 5/9/15, 11:51 AM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>Are we prepping for the Roosevelt Institute event? Thanks

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Cc: Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Run of Show
Date: Saturday, May 09, 2015 1:55:08 PM

Here's what we're now proposing for speaking order, based on a ton of feedback & such. And/but it's very tentative, since you may object, Mayor.

[REDACTED]

===

Mayor Bill de Blasio welcomes everyone and gives brief remarks, then signs The Progressive Agenda (2 mins)

§ Reading of a statement authored by Nobel-Prize winning novelist Toni Morrison (2 min)

§ Governor Howard Dean (2 mins)

§ Senator Jeff Merkley (2 mins)

§ Congressional Progressive Caucus Co- Chairs Rep. Grijalva, Rep. Ellison, with Steering & Policy Committee Co-Chair Rep. DeLauro (2-3 mins)

§ Larry Cohen, President, CWA (2 mins)

§ Lily Eskelsen Garcia, President, NEA (2 mins)

§ Leo Gerard, President, Steelworkers (2mins)

§ Mary Kay Henry, President, SEIU (2 mins)

§ Lee Saunders, President AFSCME (2 mins)

§ Randi Weingarten, President, AFT (2 mins)

§ Rev. Al Sharpton (2 mins)

§ Mayor Betsy Hodges, Mayor Nan Whaley, and Mayor Libby Schaaf (2 minutes)

§ George Gresham, President, 1199SEIU United Healthcare Workers East

§ Maria Elena Durazo, Vice President for Immigration, Civil Rights and

Diversity, UNITE HERE! (2 mins)

§ All other labor representatives, Members of Congress, U.S. Mayors,
Progressive Organizational and Economic Policy Leaders (2-3 sentences)

From: Gann, Georgia
To: "Simon, Tony"; "John Del Cecato"
Subject: RE: Follow up
Date: Saturday, May 09, 2015 3:03:44 PM

Tony,

Will Mayor Elorza be signing onto the Progressive Agenda? Do you or he have any other questions about the 13 points? Monday is likely the latest we can go for a sign on.

Side - I saw that Mayor Elorza signed up to come to DC with the USCM transportation advocacy event on May 13th. That's great! Will you be traveling with him?

Best,

Georgia B. Gann
Senior Legislative Advisor
Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist
New York City Office of Federal Affairs
1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350
Tel. (202) 624-5912
Cell. (347) 497-1740
ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov

-----Original Message-----

From: Gann, Georgia
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 9:37 AM
To: 'Simon, Tony'; 'John Del Cecato'
Subject: RE: Follow up

Tony,

Checking in on this again. Will Mayor Elorza be joining?

Let us know! I am around if you have any questions.

Georgia B. Gann
Senior Legislative Advisor
Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist New York City Office of Federal Affairs
1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350
Tel. (202) 624-5912
Cell. (347) 497-1740
ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov

-----Original Message-----

From: Gann, Georgia
Sent: Thursday, May 07, 2015 10:09 AM
To: 'Simon, Tony'; John Del Cecato
Subject: RE: Follow up

Tony,

Sending along this document that has more information about the current signers and the planks. The agenda is included there and also pasted below (sent over yesterday). Again, we're not sharing with the press at this point. Is there at time today that works for you to hop on a quick call?

Georgia B. Gann
Senior Legislative Advisor
Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist New York City Office of Federal Affairs
1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350
Tel. (202) 624-5912
Cell. (347) 497-1740
ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov

-----Original Message-----

From: Simon, Tony [<mailto:TSimon@providenceri.com>]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 8:36 PM
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: Gann, Georgia
Subject: Re: Follow up

Hello John and Georgia-

Thanks for sending this. While Mayor Elorza might not be able to join in person in DC, we'd be happy to review any materials to potentially sign on to.

Thanks, and looking forward to hearing from you.

All best,

Tony Simon

Sent from my iPad

On May 6, 2015, at 6:32 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com<<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>>> wrote:

Hey Tony. Good to e-meet you.

Best,
JDC

John F. Del Cecato
Partner/Creative Director
AKPD Message and Media
915 Broadway, Suite 1301
New York, NY 10010
212-529-5775 (office)
212-529-0545 (fax)
917 685 4819 (mobile)

From: <Gann>, Georgia <GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov<<mailto:GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov>>>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 2:19 PM
To: "tsimon@providenceri.com<<mailto:tsimon@providenceri.com>>"
<tsimon@providenceri.com<<mailto:tsimon@providenceri.com>>>
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com<<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>>>
Subject: Follow up

Tony,

Great to speak with you just now. I am sending over the agenda content and connecting you here to John, who should be able to answer any questions and get additional information to you. Again, we haven't released to the press so would appreciate if you keep it close hold!

Best,

Georgia B. Gann
Senior Legislative Advisor
Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist New York City Office of Federal Affairs
1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350
Tel. (202) 624-5912
Cell. (347) 497-1740
ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov <<mailto:ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov>>

The Progressive Agenda To Combat Income Inequality

1. Lift the Floor for Working People

- Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.
- Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.
- Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.
- Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

2. Support Working Families

- Pass national paid sick leave.
- Pass national paid family leave.
- Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.
- Expand the Earned Income Tax Credit.
- Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

3. Tax Fairness

- Close the carried interest loophole.
- End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.
- Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.
- Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to take advantage of "performance pay" write-offs.

###

From: John Del Cecato
To: Leopold, Elana
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: So John
Date: Saturday, May 09, 2015 3:12:33 PM

Sorry - it was Hayley

From: <Leopold>, Elana <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Saturday, May 9, 2015 at 2:13 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Rebecca Katz <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: So John

I've never communicated with Eric

Let me know what you need me to do

Sent from my iPhone

On May 9, 2015, at 1:26 PM, John Del Cecato <@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

I think we have a transcript... Elana - I think you got to Eric - or was that just the audio itself?

From: <Walzak>, Phil <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Saturday, May 9, 2015 at 11:28 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Rebecca Katz <[REDACTED]> "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: Fwd: So John

Have we scrubbed it?

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Saturday, May 09, 2015 11:28 AM
To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Rebecca Katz <[REDACTED]>
Leopold, Elana
Subject: Fwd: So John

Since eric isn't gonna write another book - and this was a very solid, non-haughty interview - I think we should say yes

Begin forwarded message:

From: Eric Alterman <[REDACTED]>
Date: May 9, 2015 at 10:21:33 AM EDT
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: So John

Missed you again at poker, though I keep winning so it's ok.

Given the announcement next week and all the attention that will garner, I wonder if it be ok with you if I follow up afterward--by a week or two--with an edited transcript of my interview with the mayor to run in The Nation and on the website. I think it will be a good opportunity to present an unvarnished view of how the "Contract" fits into a larger vision--a vision that might otherwise get lost in the focus on just the pros and cons of the contract and the names attached to it.

Any problem with this? I'd hate to see it go to waste

all best

ERA

--

Eric Alterman
[REDACTED]

CUNY Distinguished Professor of English and Journalism, Brooklyn College
"Liberal Media" Columnist, The Nation,
Senior Fellow, Center for American Progress, The Nation Institute
305 W.98th Street, 2 C-S, New York, New York, 10025
(917)538-9726 www.eralterman.com

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Re: What do you think about this?
Date: Saturday, May 09, 2015 4:28:41 PM

Will call you soon. Hold up until we talk

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Saturday, May 09, 2015 03:52 PM
To: B
Subject: What do you think about this?

I sent a version of this to Heather McGhee and Deepak, who emailed me to echo Van's concerns.

[REDACTED]

I realize I'm a little over my skis on this - but I'm just trying to make peace with the rabble-rousers ahead of Tuesday - and, as you & I discussed briefly, there are certainly other elements that we'll want to bring into a discussion that will last YEARS, if we do our job right.

Here's the email I wanted to send to Van:

I just got your voicemail - sorry I missed you. I was at an elementary school fair & it was chaotic, to say the least!

There's one really important thing that I failed to communicate to everyone.

When the mayor and his team came up with The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality - the name was super long for a reason.

The idea that he had was doing a SERIES of events, and focusing on a specific issue for each one.

So we were planning to have The Progressive Agenda to Combat Climate Change (which is something that's being planned for June in California), and we're discussing several other iterations - including The Progressive Agenda to Combat Retirement Insecurity, AND - more directly to your point - The Progressive Agenda to Combat Racial Disparities (working title only)...

The idea was that there are so many issues that needed to be a part of the movement we're building, we wouldn't want to give certain issues short-shrift.

Mass Incarceration is part of the issue of racial disparities, but so is the abuse of stop-and-frisk (obviously something we've focused on in NYC), infant mortality, HIV/AIDS, pediatric asthma, and other issues.

My thought is that corralling as many individuals on 5/12 as possible would allow us to shine a brighter light down the road, on other issues - like racial disparities - than if we just took one piece & added it to the Tuesday Document.

I haven't mentioned this part to the mayor, but I was thinking Baltimore would be a natural place for that stage of the TPA to take place.

So this is just the START. We have so much more that we're planning to focus the national conversation on.

And we're not talking about doing this for a couple of months.

The mayor wants this to be part of a two year plan AND BEYOND (which is why he spent so much time discussing the "TPA" title with us).

Sorry for the long-winded response – just trying to let you know the thought process.

From: Leopold, Elana
To: B
Cc: @EO; John Del Cecato; [REDACTED]
Subject: NVM: Tammy Baldwin
Date: Saturday, May 09, 2015 4:36:21 PM

Tammy Baldwin
[REDACTED]

Its Tammy Baldwin calling. I will be available on and off during the weekend. First of all on the May 12th roll out issues, great pre- roll out, fabulous and your interviews have been great.

I'm going to be an outside validator rather than participate and sign on. The agenda is fabulous! In talking to my staff when we are trying to roll out something that is related but different but want to make my path clear for highlighting those efforts and supporting yours.

In speaking with some colleagues also and just in terms of all of us standing for election and signing on..I um, I want to sign onto raising the minimum wage effort in the senate- which is distinct but also related

So, call me if you want to talk about anything related to that. It will be a great roll out but wanted to give you an answer. Look forward to working on almost every element of it. You have some great signatures and I will be watching.

Sent from my iPhone

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Subject: FW: The Final Document...
Date: Saturday, May 09, 2015 5:18:25 PM

I did a call with Heather and Deepak on 4/20, where a number of things were discussed - including mass incarceration - but it doesn't seem from my notes (or my memory) that they were in any way saying it HAD to be in there... Notes will follow in separate email...

The other thing to note is that on 4/28 - after she saw the Final Document - the ONLY pushback was on debt-free college (no mention of mass incarceration)... So I would say that her mentioning incarceration ONCE to me (and me not including it in the document, which seemed to satisfy her until TODAY), is a FAR CRY from me "steamrolling" her or whatever..

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 at 5:30 PM
To: Heather McGhee <hmcghee@demos.org>
Subject: Re: The Final Document...

Outstanding - thanks so much!

You're not the only one to have raised debt-free college... So while I can't make any promises, there's a chance we could get that in (don't hold me to that!)...

Let me get back to you with targets - but really appreciate quick turnaround!

From: Heather McGhee <hmcghee@demos.org>
Date: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 at 5:16 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: RE: The Final Document...

Hi John,

Glad to see some more "universal" type language in the end product. It's too bad that you eliminated "debt-free college", since the progressive community just launched a Debt-Free College Initiative last week (CPC, Schumer, Warren). If there's some strategy there, would love to hear it (though it's not urgent). I will be there in person with my colleague Lenore Palladino.

Do you have a list of targets?

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Tuesday, April 28, 2015 11:26 AM
To: Heather McGhee; Deepak Bhargava
Cc: Alissa Vladimir; jpaik@communitychange.org; Aaron Pickrell Subject: The Final Document...

So exciting, right??

Heather/Deepak - first and foremost we want you both there, of course... But if you could ALSO serve as emissaries to people in your orbit who would make good signers or attendees - we'd LOVE to take you up on that as well...

Here's the email we're sending out far & wide today... Thanks so much!

On Tuesday, May 12 at 3:00pm, national progressive leaders will gather at the U.S. Capitol Building's House Triangle to declare their support for The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality.

The group of supporters will include federal and local elected officials, labor officials, cultural leaders, and progressive activists.

The Progressive Agenda – a progressive alternative, of sorts, to the 1994 Republican Contract with America – will include specific proposals to lift the floor for working people, support working parents, and promote tax fairness – policies that reward work rather than just wealth.

The event stems from a summit that Mayor de Blasio convened in New York City in early April, where a group of national progressive leaders gathered to discuss ways the country could combat the crisis of our time -- income inequality.

The Progressive Agenda builds upon the work of dozens of economists, lawmakers, think tanks, and progressive activists. It is not meant to be seen as a comprehensive set of proposals to combat income inequality, but rather a bold collection of core policy proposals around which progressives can organize and mobilize.

You are cordially invited to join us at 3pm on May 12!

-

If you cannot attend in person, we'd still urge you to sign on to the document.

To sign on, please email me back as soon as possible, preferably no later than Monday, May 4.

Thanks for your consideration, and feel free to contact me with any questions or concerns.

The Progressive Agenda

To Combat Income Inequality

<!--[if !supportLists]-->1. <!--[endif]-->Lift the Floor for Working People

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Raise the federal minimum wage, so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Reform the National Labor Relations Act, to enhance workers' right to organize and rebuild the middle class.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Pass comprehensive immigration reform to grow the economy and protect against exploitation of low-wage workers.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Oppose trade deals that hand more power to corporations at the expense of American jobs, workers' rights, and the environment.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->2. <!--[endif]-->Support Working Families

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Pass national paid sick leave.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Pass national paid family leave.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Make Pre-K, after-school programs and childcare universal.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Expand the Earned Income Tax Credit.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Allow students to refinance student loan debt to take advantage of lower interest rates.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->3. <!--[endif]-->Tax Fairness

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Close the carried interest loophole.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->End tax breaks for companies that ship jobs overseas.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->· <!--[endif]-->Implement the "Buffett Rule" so millionaires pay their fair share.

<!--[if !supportLists]--> <!--[endif]-->Close the CEO tax loophole that allows corporations to take advantage of “performance pay” write-offs.

###

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Subject: Notes from 4/20 call - note that it was mostly about how they could help get CPC on board
Date: Saturday, May 09, 2015 5:19:41 PM

READOUT from JDC call with Heather McGhee & Deepak

Possible additions to The Progressive Contract:

1. Democracy Reform/Campaign Finance Reform.

Consistent with Stiglitz re: political inequality connection to economic inequality.

2. Target resources to the hardest-hit neighborhoods.

Neighborhoods with high-employment – particularly communities of color -- need more job opportunities, higher wages. AfAm unemployment rate is twice the white unemployment rate. Latino workers disproportionately affected by overtime abuse.

3. Criminal justice reform/immigration reform.

People need a second chance to enter labor market. These folks are often victims of wage theft, violation of labor protections, being shut out of employment altogether. Need to bring people out of the shadows. Signaling our priorities here, even obliquely, will help bring more groups into the fold, fire people up, etc.

Action items required by MBDB:

<!--[if !supportLists]-->1. <!--[endif]-->Potential call or two with some key groups, like Congressional Progressive Caucus.

A little love will go a long way in terms of participation.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->2. <!--[endif]-->Call Grijalva and Ellison to make this happen/get their buy-in?

<!--[if !supportLists]-->3. <!--[endif]-->Call Mary Kay Henry (funder of a lot of these progressive causes, and a big source of ground troops.

Done by JDC:

<!--[if !supportLists]-->1. <!--[endif]-->Sent Heather & Deepak the Iowa speech.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->2. <!--[endif]-->Explained the basic game plan for Roosevelt/de Blasio effort on 5/12.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->3. <!--[endif]-->Adding their ideas to the Progressive Contract Draft.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->4. <!--[endif]-->Looping Roosevelt organizers/press folks into the Heather/Deepak effort – forming task force/working group to move us to 5/12.

Iowa speech...

Breyer – broad economic inequality challenge...

Abuses in the low-wage labor market... Overtime abuse... Reinvesting in those communities... The coming America... Ways

Criminal justice system – second- chance to come into labor market – wage theft & labor protections... Billions of wages being stolen, people are shut out of the system...

Criminal and immigration policies keep potential workers in the shadows... Regularizing undocumented workers... Mass incarceration – Bring people out of the shadows.. criminal justice – signaling...

Get them the list of names....

Felicia, Dave, Nellie – loop them into activating/organizing...

Group call...

Little bit of courtship will go a long way...

CPC – de Blasio...

Conference call... with CPC...

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Fw: FYI
Date: Saturday, May 09, 2015 5:38:42 PM

Fyi

-----Original Message-----
To: Al Sharpton
Subject: Re: FYI
Sent: May 9, 2015 5:39 PM

Much appreciated. In the meantime, more and more people are signing onto our agenda. And I had a fairly productive talk with Van today. Let me know whenever you want to talk

-----Original Message-----
From: Al Sharpton
To: Bill de Blasio
Subject: FYI
Sent: May 9, 2015 5:25 PM

I flew to Alabama after the Saturday NAN rally to [REDACTED] When I landed I had a text from Ben Jealous asking for a call w/ Van Jones and him. I am back in NY tonight. I will be in touch.

Sent from my Verizon Wireless 4G LTE smartphone

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Subject: Fwd: Re:
Date: Saturday, May 09, 2015 5:57:44 PM

Begin forwarded message:

From: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Date: May 9, 2015 at 5:57:50 PM EDT
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re:

he was never attending, always just a signer

On Sat, May 9, 2015 at 5:56 PM, John Del Cecato
<jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

Do you know when/why Ras Baraka fell of in attending? Bdb asking

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: John Del Cecato
To: Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: Re: Mayor's for TPA
Date: Saturday, May 09, 2015 6:38:21 PM

Tx - no prob

On May 9, 2015, at 6:10 PM, Yazgi, Stephanie <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

We went back and forth a ton but he has a lot in district and they tried to move things because he is very supportive but just couldn't make it.

From: John Del Cecato [jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Saturday, May 09, 2015 5:59 PM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: Re: Mayor's for TPA

Got it to

On May 9, 2015, at 5:57 PM, Yazgi, Stephanie <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

he is signing
he is not attending

From: John Del Cecato [jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Saturday, May 09, 2015 5:56 PM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: Re: Mayor's for TPA

Any idea why Baraka fell off?

On May 9, 2015, at 5:51 PM, Yazgi, Stephanie <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

i only have 3 attendees right now and you have them
will keep you posted

From: John Del Cecato [jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 6:20 PM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: Re: Mayor's for TPA

are they also attendees?

From: <Yazgi>, Stephanie Yazgi <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 5:53 PM
To: "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Hayley Prim <>
Cc: "Schwartz, Regina" <RSchwartz@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: Mayor's for TPA

I believe so.

We think Bowser may as well.

I haven't connected with but have shared with folks like Cranley and Stanton who might be good to do so

Steph

From: Leopold, Elana
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 5:52 PM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie; John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com);
Cc: Schwartz, Regina
Subject: RE: Mayor's for TPA

So the only Mayor's to currently sign on are Baraka and Whaley?

From: Yazgi, Stephanie
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 3:11 PM
To: Leopold, Elana; John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com);
Cc: Schwartz, Regina
Subject: RE: Mayor's for TPA

Pls see attached.

Thank you.
stephanie

From: Leopold, Elana
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 2:37 PM
To: John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com);
Cc: Yazgi, Stephanie; Schwartz, Regina
Subject: Mayor's for TPA

Our Mayor wants to know which of the following have signed on. Those who have not- he wants to call. Here we go!

Mayor Murray
Mayor Hales

Mayor Lee
Mayor Garcetti
Mayor Adler
Mayor Hodges
Mayor Barrett
Mayor Peduto
Mayor Cranley
Mayor Reed
Mayor Brown
Mayor Benjamin
Mayor Bowser
Mayor Nutter
Mayor Barake
Mayor Walsh
Mayor Elorza
Mayor Harp
Mayor Segarra
Mayor Brannan
Upstate Mayors (Sheehan, Minor, Warren, Brown)

From: Carey, Michael
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: Dan Levitan
Subject: Re: Need a DC itinerary from you
Date: Saturday, May 09, 2015 6:47:42 PM

Yes

Michael Paul Carey
City Hall
New York, New York

On May 9, 2015, at 6:37 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmmedia.com> wrote:

Yes open - right MPC?

On May 9, 2015, at 6:20 PM, Dan Levitan <dan@berlinrosen.com> wrote:

Assume so?

- mobile -

Begin forwarded message:

From: "Grynbaum, Michael"
<grynbaum@nytimes.com>
Date: May 9, 2015 at 5:12:07 PM EDT
To: Dan Levitan <dan@berlinrosen.com>
Subject: Re: Need a DC itinerary from you

Nope! I just emailed them.

Is the Santa Clara speech open to the press?
wasn't totally clear from the invite.

On Sat, May 9, 2015 at 4:19 PM, Dan Levitan
<dan@berlinrosen.com> wrote:

Didn't they put out a fppo thingy?

- mobile -

> On May 9, 2015, at 1:28 PM, Michael > Grynbaum <grynbaum@nytimes.com> wrote:

>
> for photographers etc.

--

Michael M. Grynbaum
City Hall Bureau Chief
The New York Times
212.556.7047 / grynbaum@nytimes.com

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Re: Fwd: Mayor's for TPA
Date: Saturday, May 09, 2015 7:17:48 PM

Got it

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Saturday, May 09, 2015 06:40 PM
To: B
Subject: Fwd: Mayor's for TPA

Begin forwarded message:

From: "Yazgi, Stephanie" <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: May 9, 2015 at 6:08:33 PM EDT
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: RE: Mayor's for TPA

We went back and forth a ton but he has a lot in district and they tried to move things because he is very supportive but just couldn't make it.

From: John Del Cecato [jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Saturday, May 09, 2015 5:59 PM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: Re: Mayor's for TPA

Got it to

On May 9, 2015, at 5:57 PM, Yazgi, Stephanie <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

he is signing
he is not attending

From: John Del Cecato [jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Saturday, May 09, 2015 5:56 PM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: Re: Mayor's for TPA

Any idea why Baraka fell off?

On May 9, 2015, at 5:51 PM, Yazgi, Stephanie <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

i only have 3 attendees right now and you have them
will keep you posted

From: John Del Cecato [jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 6:20 PM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: Re: Mayor's for TPA

are they also attendees?

From: <Yazgi>, Stephanie Yazgi <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 5:53 PM
To: "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del
Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Hayley Prim
<>
Cc: "Schwartz, Regina" <RSchwartz@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: Mayor's for TPA

I believe so.

We think Bowser may as well.

I haven't connected with but have shared with folks like Cranley and Stanton who might be good to do so

Steph

From: Leopold, Elana
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 5:52 PM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie; John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com);

Cc: Schwartz, Regina
Subject: RE: Mayor's for TPA

So the only Mayor's to currently sign on are Baraka and Whaley?

From: Yazgi, Stephanie
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 3:11 PM
To: Leopold, Elana; John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com);

Cc: Schwartz, Regina
Subject: RE: Mayor's for TPA

Pls see attached.

Thank you.

stephanie

From: Leopold, Elana
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 2:37 PM
To: John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com);
[REDACTED]
Cc: Yazgi, Stephanie; Schwartz, Regina
Subject: Mayor's for TPA

Our Mayor wants to know which of the following have signed on. Those who have not- he wants to call. Here we go!

Mayor Murray
Mayor Hales
Mayor Lee
Mayor Garcetti
Mayor Adler
Mayor Hodges
Mayor Barrett
Mayor Peduto
Mayor Cranley
Mayor Reed
Mayor Brown
Mayor Benjamin
Mayor Bowser
Mayor Nutter
Mayor Barake
Mayor Walsh
Mayor Elorza
Mayor Harp
Mayor Segarra
Mayor Brannan
Upstate Mayors (Sheehan, Minor, Warren, Brown)

From: Hayley Prim
To: B
Cc: FLONYC; jfdc@akpdmedia.com
Subject: Re: Toni Morrison Essay for TPA
Date: Saturday, May 09, 2015 7:52:48 PM

Unfortunately she said no having her photo used next to it as well.. not sure why. But Chirlane, I think it would be wonderful to record you reading it.

On Sat, May 9, 2015 at 7:01 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

I LOVE that idea!!

From: FLONYC
Sent: Saturday, May 09, 2015 06:48 PM
To: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; B
Subject: Re: Toni Morrison Essay for TPA

You can still use a visual of Toni, a photo (or photos) perhaps, while the audio plays. Her words are powerful, but do not underestimate the added power of having a visual of her. And, of course, I would be honored to record the audio.

Sent from my iPhone

On May 8, 2015, at 6:24 PM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:

Unfortunately Toni said she is not up for filming a video of her reading the essay. But we will put our heads together on how best to use this aside from reading aloud at the Presser and on the website.

Thanks,
Hayley

On Fri, May 8, 2015 at 2:39 PM, FLONYC <FLONYC@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Amen!

Sent from my iPhone

On May 8, 2015, at 2:38 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

I love that idea. We'll figure out a way to get to her, and if she's willing, what a fantastic thing to have on our website, to push out to our people, to tweet & FB and such!

From: FLONYC <FLONYC@cityhall.nyc.gov>

Date: Friday, May 8, 2015 at 2:35 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Hayley Prim
<[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: Toni Morrison Essay for TPA

Video Toni reading it. It's PERFECT.

Sent from my iPhone

On May 8, 2015, at 2:30 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

I'd love to get it out there before the event... Will brainstorm on how to do that...

And, as expected, it's beautifully written - and on a higher level than mere mortals could ever communicate...

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Friday, May 8, 2015 at 2:27 PM
To: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, FLONYC <FLONYC@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: Toni Morrison Essay for TPA

That is smoking hot!! Not sure I'd change a thing. Chirlane, what do you think? And JDC/HP, how can we get the maximum bang out of this? Can we get an exclusive someone before it goes on the website? And could we have the right cultural figure read it aloud on Tues? Is that worth it?

From: Hayley Prim [[mailto:\[REDACTED\]](mailto:[REDACTED])]
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 02:17 PM
To: B
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Toni Morrison Essay for TPA

Pasted below is what Toni wrote for The Progressive Agenda. We are going to post to the TPA website, and can do something with it at press conference, but wanted to forward to you to read. She said we can edit or strengthen, but wants final version approved before we use it.

I applaud with enthusiasm this gathering of leaders, thinkers, activists, artists—each and all committed to strategies of and for social progress.

The Progressive Agenda identifies the pillars upon which healthy social structures can be built. Each pillar is designed to improve, even rescue, the lives of vulnerable populations. From financial traps, to failing schools, to jobs, to methods for strengthening families and communities—each pillar of support enhances the lives of the poor and middle class—which in turn benefits the whole society.

The solutions are not mysterious, not unknown; nor are the means by which to achieve them. We know what they are and how to apply them. There is simply, and too often, no will to organize and enact the agenda. But indifference and inaction stops here. With Mayor de Blasio's insistence and foresight along with the dedication and passion of serious progressives, vital changes in our cities and towns will surface.

Remember when we used to be called 'citizens'? There were levels of citizenship, certainly, but we were citizens none-the-less. "I am an American citizen" was our proud boast. Then, following World War Two, the prosperous decades began and we were called 'consumers.' The American consumer wants; the American consumer needs —and consume we did. Items that were once luxuries became necessities and, unlike our great grandparents, we were ashamed to have only one pair of shoes or one 'Sunday' dress. Being a consumer is not without pleasure or comfort. Yet now we are identified by a brand new label—one that floods political speech, pundit themes, and media headlines. Taxpayer. It seems that definition is all we are. The difference between understanding oneself as a citizen or as a taxpayer is not merely wide; it is antagonistic. A citizen thinks primarily about his/her community, is preoccupied with the safety of the neighborhood, the health of the elderly and disabled, the nurture and well-being of the young.

A taxpayer thinks mostly about his or herself, about who or what is taxing, that is to say 'taking', his hard-earned money to give to some undeserving body or some other distant, wasteful thing.

The Progressive Agenda seeks to return us to citizenship, the happily adult responsibility of citizens to each other: how to ensure a livable wage for all of us; how to improve schools in all our neighborhoods; how to protect working class jobs and pensions from predators who rely on exploitation and selfish behavior; how to welcome the immigrant, the "huddled masses" we ALL [except for Native Americans and slaves] once were.

This new Progressive Agenda re-imagines citizenship and is far, far more than worthy; it is crucial.

Toni Morrison

8 May 2015

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Subject: Re: Labor leaders
Date: Sunday, May 10, 2015 10:56:22 AM

Cool. I'm free today except for a quick appt at 5 so call whenever is good for you

> On May 10, 2015, at 10:56 AM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>

>

>

>

>

> ----- Original Message -----

> From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

> Sent: Sunday, May 10, 2015 10:49 AM

> To: B

> Subject: Re: Labor leaders

>

> Good point. I think that's wise all around.

>

>

>

>> On May 10, 2015, at 10:37 AM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>>

>>

>> Want to follow up with you re: Randi's call to me yesterday. She wants to make sure labor leaders don't personalize their anti-TPP message as an attack on obama, which I think is smart. We should get this point across too. Need to figure out how, particularly with larry cohen. And we should prep for how to keep the Q and A not to be fixated on obama when we deal with the media

From: B
To: Williams, Dominic
Cc: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: TPP
Date: Sunday, May 10, 2015 11:03:34 AM

I'll need briefing by tmrw night for my mtg with POTUS. A la debate prep, I'll need to know how he'll come at me and how to respond. Dom, write something brief up and then we'll discuss tmrw night. But first focus on Mother's Day! Thanks

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Subject: Re: For the record
Date: Sunday, May 10, 2015 11:06:07 AM

Yeah, kinda bs

> On May 10, 2015, at 11:03 AM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
>
>
> Not cool that sherrod and malloy aren't returning my calls. And I get the distinct sense kamala is ducking. Why not just have the decency to say no

From: John Davis
To: Hayley Prim
Cc: B; jfdc@akpdmedia.com; Snyder, Thomas; [REDACTED] Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM
Date: Sunday, May 10, 2015 11:29:38 AM

I have not heard back. This should be very appealing to her in my opinion.

John

On May 10, 2015, at 11:28 AM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:

I'm not sure. Davis, do you have any feedback?

On Sunday, May 10, 2015, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

How has Donna Edwards responded? Should I call her?

From: John Davis [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 01:50 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; B; Snyder, Thomas; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Cc: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

Will do.

On Wednesday, May 6, 2015 1:49 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

We'll take that... But we'd also like him there on 5/12... Davis - you want to follow up with Josh?

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 12:53 PM
To: "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "[REDACTED]" <[REDACTED]>
Cc: Aaron PickrellEmail <[REDACTED]> John Davis <[REDACTED]> John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

Sen whitehouse is open but hasn't studied the TPA yet. Says we should follow up with josh karedne (sp?) of his staff. Said at minimum he'll say nice things about what we're trying to do

From: Snyder, Thomas
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 12:42 PM
To: <[REDACTED]> <[REDACTED]>
Cc: B; <[REDACTED]> <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

The hits just keep on coming

Sent from my iPhone

On May 6, 2015, at 12:41 PM, jeani murray <[REDACTED]> wrote:

I am pretty sure it was the Politico piece they saw today.
Woohoo!

On Wednesday, May 6, 2015, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Well done!

From: jeani murray [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 12:39 PM
To: B
Cc: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
[REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Fw: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

Wade Henderson, President and CEO of the Leadership Council on Civil and Human Rights - in and attending.

Wants to engage further and be a part of longer term activities.

On Wednesday, May 6, 2015, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Fyi

From: B
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 12:08 PM
To: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Cc: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

Governor Dayton signs on! Add to the list! Coordinate announcement with ms. jamie makepeace ([REDACTED] or [REDACTED] cell). He can't make May 12 but he's open to doing an event together in the near future

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 10:52 AM
To: B
Cc: Elana Leopold <[REDACTED]>
Subject: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

I will send you latest TPA email with signers in clean email in case you need to forward.

12:00PM Governor Mark Dayton (Minnesota)

DIAL: [REDACTED] FYI a Trooper will answer the phone

12:45PM Senator Sheldon Whitehouse (Rhode Island)

DIAL: [REDACTED]

Asst is Leah Siegle [REDACTED]

1:15PM Congressman GK Butterfield, Chair of the Black Caucus (North Carolina)

DIAL: Durham Office: [REDACTED]

Alternative Cell: [REDACTED]

Former Congressman Barney Frank

DIAL: Cell: [REDACTED]

 He did not have time in your available window today, but you should call his cell whenever you can and he will call you back.

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Cc: FLONYC; Walzak, Phil; Gunaratna, Mahen; Hagelgans, Andrea; Williams, Dominic
Subject: Fw: Yahoo! News: Why Obama is happy to fight Elizabeth Warren on the trade deal
Date: Sunday, May 10, 2015 11:57:51 AM

On govt email now, as this should be. JDC and Dom, what do you make of this?

-----Original Message-----

From: Mahen Gunaratna
To: Bill de Blasio
To: Chirlane McCray
Cc: John Del Cecato
Cc: Phil Walzak
Cc: Andrea Hagelgans
Cc: Emma Wolfe
Subject: Yahoo! News: Why Obama is happy to fight Elizabeth Warren on the trade deal
Sent: May 10, 2015 11:36 AM

Why Obama is happy to fight Elizabeth Warren on the trade deal
Matt Bai
National Political Columnist
May 9, 2015

"She's absolutely wrong," Barack Obama said, before I could even get the question out of my mouth. He was talking about Elizabeth Warren, the Massachusetts senator and populist crusader whom Obama helped elevate to national prominence. Warren generally reserves her more acid critiques for Republicans and Wall Street, but in recent weeks she's been leading a vocal coalition of leftist groups and lawmakers who oppose the president's free-trade pact with 12 Asian countries. This past week, as I had just reminded Obama, Warren launched her heaviest torpedo yet against the trade deal, alleging that some future president might use it as an excuse to undo the reregulation of Wall Street that Obama signed into law in 2010. In fact, as the White House quickly pointed out, language in the pact would expressly prevent that unless Congress voted to allow it. Three days after that broadside, when we sat down at Nike's headquarters outside Portland, Ore., Obama still seemed unusually irritated. "Think about the logic of that, right?" he went on. "The notion that I had this massive fight with Wall Street to make sure that we don't repeat what happened in 2007, 2008. And then I sign a provision that would unravel it? "I'd have to be pretty stupid," Obama said, laughing. "This is pure speculation. She and I both taught law school, and you know, one of the things you do as a law professor is you spin out hypotheticals. And this is all hypothetical, speculative." Obama wasn't through. He wanted me to know, in pointed terms, that for all the talk about her populist convictions, Warren had a personal brand she was trying to promote, too. "The truth of the matter is that Elizabeth is, you know, a politician like everybody else," he said. "And you know, she's got a voice that she wants to get out there. And I understand that. And on most issues, she and I deeply agree. On this one, though, her arguments don't stand the test of fact and scrutiny." This is remarkable stuff for Obama. All presidents are forged, in a sense, by the moments at which they come to public life. Obama entered politics during Bill Clinton's presidency, when urban liberals were growing disgusted with the president's strategy of "triangulation," popularly interpreted as the idea that you can win broad support by picking fights with the ideologues in your own party. Obama has always been reflexively averse to anything that might be construed as him pushing back against his friends to score political points with everyone else. Throughout his presidency, Obama has mostly avoided public feuds with what his first press secretary, Robert Gibbs, liked to call the "professional left" — even when it's meant sidestepping important disagreements on policy. Democratic politicians and interest groups, in turn, have been cautious in their criticism, offering only muted resistance when Obama stepped up the war in Afghanistan, or when he nearly negotiated a deal that would have restructured entitlements.

But like a marriage in which the spouses pretend to be happier than they really are, Obama's polite alliance with the populist left appears to be suddenly crumbling under the weight of free trade. The more Warren and Senate colleagues like Bernie Sanders and Sherrod Brown attack the proposed Trans-Pacific Partnership, joined by big unions and environmental groups, the more liberated Obama seems to feel in portraying them as reckless and backward-looking, much as Clinton might have done. He evidences none of the self-doubt or conflicted loyalty that seemed plain when they criticized him for being too cautious on Wall Street reform or health care.

That he came to Nike's sparkling, resortlike campus Friday was telling in itself. Since at least the 1990s, labor activists have pointed to Nike as a company that exploited cheap foreign labor in order to increase the bottom line on sneakers and tennis shirts. (Sanders, citing a European study, charges that more than 300,000 workers in Vietnam work in Nike factories for something like 56 cents an hour.) It's hard to imagine Obama, on some other issue or in some other stage of his presidency, choosing a setting quite so offensive to his base.

And yet here he was, sitting with me near a wall depicting marketable athletes (all the buildings at Nike are named for the sports heroes who made its logo synonymous with product endorsement), just after announcing that Nike intended to create 10,000 new jobs in domestic, high-tech manufacturing if the trade pact were approved. This time, rather than choosing his words carefully to preserve party unity, Obama was pressing his advantage.

"I had a conversation with all the labor leaders before this started," he told me. "I've had a conversation with some of the more progressive members of Congress before. And I've listened to their arguments. And, as I said before, generally speaking, their arguments are based on fears. Or they're fighting NAFTA, the trade deal that was passed 25 years ago, or 20 years ago.

"I understand the emotions behind it," he told me. "But when you break down the logic of their arguments, I've got to say that there's not much there there."

For decades after the Second World War, free trade, like so much else at that time, was mostly a proxy for Cold War strategy. If you were a country that wanted access to American markets, all you had to do was take our side over the Soviets'. Practically speaking, America had little to lose in this proposition, since no one else could make the kind of inexpensive cars or clothing that might threaten domestic manufacturers. When American business did well, so too did its workers — that was the axiom, and it was true.

By the 1970s, though, Europe and Japan, now 25 years past the war that leveled them, were starting to export Saabs and Datsuns and anything else you could make on a modern assembly line. And American manufacturers were starting to look beyond oceans for cheaper labor.

Rob Shapiro, a Clinton administration economist and free-trade advocate who has studied these trends, pointed out to me, when I told him I'd be visiting Nike's headquarters, that in the 1960s virtually all the shoes on American shelves were made in American mill towns. Nike was one of the first manufacturers to start stitching them in Asia instead, at a fraction of the cost; today, of course, odds are not a single pair of shoes in your closet is American-made.

In this changed environment, free trade took on new importance — and new peril. American retailers wanted access to cheaper, foreign-made goods (Walmart, as Shapiro puts it, is "built on trade liberalization"), and American manufacturers wanted access to the emerging middle classes in Asia. But all of that put pressure on American companies to make their goods overseas, so they could reduce labor costs and stay competitive. Suddenly, and years before most Americans really grasped what was happening, the interests of companies and workers diverged; what was good for businesses and shareholders was often ruinous for the labor they had employed.

NAFTA — the North American Free Trade Agreement — was essentially the first unilateral agreement between the United States and a developing country, in this case Mexico. (Technically speaking, Canada was also a party, but that's not really where the action was.) Next came the so-called Uruguay Round in 1995, which established the World Trade Organization. Then China joined the WTO in 1999.

Most economists, according to Shapiro, would attribute roughly 10 to 15 percent of America's economic unwinding — that is, the loss of jobs and the stagnation of wages — to this proliferation of free trade. But trade policies, and NAFTA in particular, have become a powerful symbol of political callousness to those Americans on both ends of the political spectrum who have lived through deindustrialization. And that symbolism is what's most central in the fight Obama has taken on.

Warren and other critics of the Asian trade pact have seized on a series of complaints in their efforts to stop Congress from giving Obama so-called fast-track authority, which would enable him to put the final deal before Congress on an up-or-down vote, without endless amendments. (Obama, by the way, would be the first president in decades to be denied that authority — and by lawmakers in his own party, no less.) Some of these complaints are more persuasive than others.

Opponents have charged that the deal is being negotiated secretly and without their input. (Obama points out that anyone with access to the Internet will have 60 days to scrutinize the deal before he even signs it and sends it on to Congress, which would then begin its own period of evaluation, so it's not like anyone is going to wake up and find that Congress just sold the Lincoln Memorial to Taiwan.) They see the deal as too protective of multinational corporations, like the way it extends patents for pharmaceutical companies, or the way it allows corporations with complaints to bring their disputes to special arbitrators, rather than to the courts. (Obama makes the point that America is party to 50 such agreements already and has never been successfully sued.) They're furious that the deal would do nothing to end China's currency manipulation, which contributes to America's hurtful trade imbalance. (Obama argues that including the currency issue in this trade pact, rather than pursuing it separately, might expose our own Federal Reserve to lawsuits from other countries.)

To claims that more free trade means, inevitably, more job losses, Obama has vowed — about twice every hour, it seems — that the Trans-Pacific Partnership will have the most stringent labor and environmental standards of any trade deal in history. He says it will generate an extra $123 billion in American exports annually, along with $77 billion more in economic growth.

What's mostly going on here, though, is that frustrated liberals see in the Asian trade deal an opportunity to draw the line on globalization, period. No one thinks this deal is going to be the ruin of American workers, when all is said and done. What they think is that there has to be a moment when industry loses and the country finally turns its attention to the things you can do for workers, like raising the minimum wage (a more than reasonable suggestion) and relaxing rules that make organizing more difficult.

Taking a stand against the trade pact is really just a way of taking a stand against 30-plus years of policies that favored business over everyone else.

And this is what so frustrates Obama, to the point where he would come to make his stand at the headquarters of a company reviled by labor, almost as a provocation. Obama, as his detractors have often pointed out, is a study in cool-blooded analysis and professorial debate; whatever his gift of oratory, his real passion is for the triumph of reason over histrionics.

So you can see how it would annoy Obama no end that no matter how many mitigating facts and figures he throws at the opponents in his own party, their determination to sink the deal only intensifies. What they really want, it seems to him, isn't a better trade deal, but rather a time machine that can transport us all back to the moment before globalization began.

Obama assured me that he's right there with his party when it comes to making the case for a higher minimum wage or limiting the compensation of corporate executives — all part of the national conversation about inequality and how to address it. "We are going to have to concentrate on getting our own act together to make sure that workers are getting a bigger share of corporate profits," he said. "But I'm not going to shrink the overall economic pie just because we're mad about some things that have happened in the past."

I mentioned to Obama that I had just watched his speech to Nike Nation, and I was struck by how much fun he seemed to be having. Many in his party have often called him a reluctant campaigner for their causes, and yet there was nothing reluctant in his demeanor as he mocked his opponents' arguments and trumpeted the prospects for Oregon wine and beef in foreign markets. He seemed oddly energized.

"First of all," Obama responded, "I'd say, Matt, that if I'm a reluctant campaigner, I've done pretty good at it." Fair enough.

But then he added, "When I believe strongly in something, then I enjoy fighting for it. And I believe in this."

Obama went through some of the other things he believed in and for which he'd campaigned more than perfunctorily, including equal pay for women and paid sick leave for workers. "I think that what's different and why this is getting more attention," he said, "is that there are allies of mine who are opposed, so that makes it interesting. And I think what's also attracting attention is the fact that we might actually get this done."

That last part struck me as most significant in understanding why Obama is willing to risk long-standing alliances for a trade deal that probably seems tangential to most Americans. Although he would never put it this way, his second term has mostly been an exercise in futility. He announced 16 months ago that he had essentially given up on trying to legislate and would try to govern around the margins instead, using executive actions that stretch the boundaries of presidential power and probably won't stand up over time.

His prospects for passing any kind of larger agenda went from slim to nearly nonexistent last November, when he got a brand-new Republican Senate to go along with an obstreperous Republican House. And with a chaotic presidential campaign about to start in earnest, any real governing from here on out will be purely accidental.

The trade deal, though, represents a rare and probably final opportunity for Obama to accomplish something big, and something in which he's deeply invested. A lot of Republican free traders will actually support it, no matter how distasteful they find the idea of standing on the same side as the president. Some Democrats will, too — the question is how many.

If Obama can't get fast-track authority through Congress, he won't have much chance at negotiating a final deal. But if he can, then he might well be able to claim one last, major legislative victory — and the only one in his presidency with broad, bipartisan support. And not only that, but a victory that gets back to the promise inherent in his first presidential campaign — the promise to adapt American liberalism to the economic realities of the 21st century, without simply bowing before capital or raging against it.

To a president eyeing his legacy, that kind of victory is worth a lot, even if it costs him some friends.

From: Williams, Dominic
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com; FLONYC; Walzak, Phil; Gunaratna, Mahen; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Re: Yahoo! News: Why Obama is happy to fight Elizabeth Warren on the trade deal
Date: Sunday, May 10, 2015 12:20:12 PM

This below excerpt feels like the most correct. This is a good deal for companies, purports to have some elements that mitigate harm to employees, and has a better than snowball's chance in hell of happening. It's really important to the President because it is achievable, and it's really important to organized progressives because nothing else is achievable federally. I don't think there's substantial new information in this article or in the debate:

What's mostly going on here, though, is that frustrated liberals see in the Asian trade deal an opportunity to draw the line on globalization, period. No one thinks this deal is going to be the ruin of American workers, when all is said and done. What they think is that there has to be a moment when industry loses and the country finally turns its attention to the things you can do for workers, like raising the minimum wage (a more than reasonable suggestion) and relaxing rules that make organizing more difficult. Taking a stand against the trade pact is really just a way of taking a stand against 30-plus years of policies that favored business over everyone else.

And this is what so frustrates Obama, to the point where he would come to make his stand at the headquarters of a company reviled by labor, almost as a provocation. Obama, as his detractors have often pointed out, is a study in cool-blooded analysis and professorial debate; whatever his gift of oratory, his real passion is for the triumph of reason over histrionics. So you can see how it would annoy Obama no end that no matter how many mitigating facts and figures he throws at the opponents in his own party, their determination to sink the deal only intensifies. What they really want, it seems to him, isn't a better trade deal, but rather a time machine that can transport us all back to the moment before globalization began.

All of that, is in a context where, unlike congressional folks, we don't have full knowledge of the text of the deal, and don't have an ability to assess the quality of deal provisions, except secondhand. Some real part of Obama's charge against Warren and other MOCs is that they actually know everything about the deal, so they are being disingenuous.

Sent from my iPad

On May 10, 2015, at 11:57 AM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

What's mostly going on here, though, is that frustrated liberals see in the Asian trade deal an opportunity to draw the line on globalization, period. No one thinks this deal is going to be the ruin of American workers, when all is said and done. What they think is that there has to be a moment when industry loses and the country finally turns its attention to the things you can do for workers, like raising the minimum wage (a more than reasonable suggestion) and relaxing rules that make organizing more difficult.

Taking a stand against the trade pact is really just a way of taking a stand against 30-plus years of policies that favored business over everyone else.

And this is what so frustrates Obama, to the point where he would come to make his stand at the headquarters of a company reviled by labor, almost as a provocation. Obama, as his detractors have often pointed out, is a study in cool-blooded analysis and professorial debate; whatever his gift of oratory, his real passion is for the triumph of reason over histrionics.

So you can see how it would annoy Obama no end that no matter how many mitigating facts and figures he throws at the opponents in his own party, their determination to sink the deal only intensifies. What they really want, it seems to him, isn't a better trade deal, but rather a time machine that can transport us all back to the moment before globalization began.

From: John Del Cecato
To: Williams, Dominic; B
Cc: FLONYC; Walzak, Phil; Gunaratna, Mahen; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Re: Yahoo! News: Why Obama is happy to fight Elizabeth Warren on the trade deal
Date: Sunday, May 10, 2015 2:42:27 PM

My two cents....

Obama has never, in his bones, been a fervent "fair trade" guy. And he's never been a natural populist.

It's true that he got his start working as a community organizer in the shadow of South Chicago's abandoned steel mills.

But if memory serves me correctly, many of those steel jobs went to Indiana, not overseas. And some were no doubt lost to automation/globalization - not to any specific trade deal.

So Obama was working to keep people from falling through the cracks of a shredded social safety net (remember - this was the Reagan era).

During the NAFTA years, Obama was working as a civil rights lawyer. I'm sure he followed the NAFTA debate, but I doubt that immersed himself in it.

And he's always tried to find a way to bring everybody - even corporations - to the table. When he talked about health care in the 2008 race, he used to say "the insurance industry can have a seat at the table; they just can't buy every seat." People like John Edwards, on both trade & health care, were far more pointed and aggressive in calling out the excesses of corporate power.

That's all to say that Obama probably holds out hope that he'll fashion a trade deal that will be good for jobs, workers' rights, and the environment. He wants a big accomplishment for his legacy. And there's no question that he'll fight for a better deal than any Republican president would have.

But these global trade deals aren't the same as domestic legislation. Multi-national corporations have far more at stake (profit-wise) than they would, say, in the effort to craft national health care legislation. And they will act accordingly.

From: <Williams>, Dominic Williams <DWilliams@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Sunday, May 10, 2015 at 12:20 PM
To: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>

Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, FLONYC <FLONYC@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Gunaratna, Mahen" <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>

Subject: Re: Yahoo! News: Why Obama is happy to fight Elizabeth Warren on the trade deal

This below excerpt feels like the most correct. This is a good deal for companies, purports to have some elements that mitigate harm to employees, and has a better than snowball's chance in hell of happening. It's really important to the President because it is achievable, and it's really important to organized progressives because nothing else is achievable federally. I don't think there's substantial new information in this article or in the debate:

What's mostly going on here, though, is that frustrated liberals see in the Asian trade deal an opportunity to draw the line on globalization, period. No one thinks this deal is going to be the ruin of American workers, when all is said and done. What they think is that there has to be a moment when industry loses and the country finally turns its attention to the things you can do for workers, like raising the minimum wage (a more than reasonable suggestion) and relaxing rules that make organizing more difficult. Taking a stand against the trade pact is really just a way of taking a stand against 30-plus years of policies that favored business over everyone else.

And this is what so frustrates Obama, to the point where he would come to make his stand at the headquarters of a company reviled by labor, almost as a provocation. Obama, as his detractors have often pointed out, is a study in cool-blooded analysis and professorial debate; whatever his gift of oratory, his real passion is for the triumph of reason over histrionics. So you can see how it would annoy Obama no end that no matter how many mitigating facts and figures he throws at the opponents in his own party, their determination to sink the deal only intensifies. What they really want, it seems to him, isn't a better trade deal, but rather a time machine that can transport us all back to the moment before globalization began.

All of that, is in a context where, unlike congressional folks, we don't have full knowledge of the text of the deal, and don't have an ability to assess the quality of deal provisions, except secondhand. Some real part of Obama's charge against Warren and other MOCs is that they actually know everything about the deal, so they are being disingenuous.

Sent from my iPad

On May 10, 2015, at 11:57 AM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

What's mostly going on here, though, is that frustrated liberals see in the Asian trade deal an opportunity to draw the line on globalization, period. No one thinks this deal is going to be the ruin of American workers, when all is said and done. What they think is that there has to be a moment when industry loses and the country finally turns its attention to the things you can do for workers, like raising the minimum wage (a more than reasonable suggestion) and relaxing rules that make organizing more difficult.

Taking a stand against the trade pact is really just a way of taking a stand against 30-plus years of policies that favored business over everyone else.

And this is what so frustrates Obama, to the point where he would come to make his stand at the headquarters of a company reviled by labor, almost as a provocation. Obama, as his detractors have often pointed out, is a study in cool-blooded analysis and professorial debate; whatever his gift of oratory, his real passion is for the triumph of reason over histrionics.

So you can see how it would annoy Obama no end that no matter how many mitigating facts and figures he throws at the opponents in his own party, their determination to sink the deal only intensifies. What they really want, it seems to him, isn't a better trade deal, but rather a time machine that can transport us all back to the moment before globalization began.

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Re: Fw:
Date: Sunday, May 10, 2015 3:55:06 PM

I couldn't agree more. And pelosi and israel are hardly ones to talk about effective, sharp message given 2014. We are still living in Reagan's shadow... Time to break out

----- Original Message -----

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Sunday, May 10, 2015 01:22 PM
To: B
Subject: Re: Fw:

Yeah - it's just like we talked about. There is always better language. I don't doubt that the words "income inequality" are less resonant among most voters writ large than "expanding opportunity" or "building a more durable economy for the middle class."

But here's the rub. If you say "gun safety" (like all of my fellow press secretaries and I were instructed to do in 1997) and not "gun control" - a higher percentage of people will say you're okay by them. But most folks won't know what the hell you're taking about. Some will think you want more NRA-backed gun training for young future hunters - instead of what you really want (fewer guns on the street).

It's like Tale of Two Cities. It's "so offensive" and "divisive" - except it's not at all. The people get what you're saying. And they're either with you or they aren't.

> On May 10, 2015, at 12:58 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>

> I'm more than dubious, but I'll call him out of respect

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> To: Steve Israel
> To: Emma Wolfe
> Subject: Re:
> Sent: May 10, 2015 12:57 PM

>

>

> Will call to discuss. Thanks

>

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Steve Israel
> To: Bill de Blasio
> To: Emma Wolfe
> Subject:
> Sent: May 10, 2015 12:44 PM

>

> NP called me last nite and today about your using Capitol steps this week. I have tons of research that cuts across all ideologies and demographics showing the way to persuade people on income inequality is NOT to call it income inequality. I'm happy to brief you. We all want the same thing and data by progressive and moderate organizations is totally in synch on this.

>

> REP. STEVE ISRAEL
>

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: John Del Cecato
Subject: Re: Tuesday
Date: Sunday, May 10, 2015 4:16:13 PM

And plan is for them to meet outside? Would a room be better if close enough? Just so everyone can feel the love? Sorry to pester

Sent from my iPhone

> On May 10, 2015, at 4:11 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
>
> I think so/hope so?!
>
>> On 5/10/15, 4:07 PM, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
>>
>> Is the 2:50 gather time for TPA participants enough? 10 minutes is all u >> need?
>>
>> Sent from my iPhone
>

From: Hayley Prim
To: B
Cc: [redacted] jfdc@akpdmedia.com; Snyder, Thomas; [redacted]
Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM
Date: Sunday, May 10, 2015 4:21:36 PM

And this is Eric Garcetti: [redacted].

On Sun, May 10, 2015 at 4:15 PM, Hayley Prim <[redacted]> wrote:
Great, re: Adler!

These are the cells I have listed below. Tracking down Garcetti now.

Marty Walsh [redacted]
Ed Lee [redacted]
Ed Murray [redacted]

On Sun, May 10, 2015 at 4:07 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Mayor Steve Adler of Austin, TX just signed. Can't be there but wants his name on the list and wants to work with us. And we really need to push ed murray and marty walsh and ed lee again. Also garcetti. Make me do a final blitz

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[redacted]]
Sent: Sunday, May 10, 2015 11:28 AM
To: B
Cc: [redacted] <[redacted]> jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>;
Snyder, Thomas; [redacted] <[redacted]>
<[redacted]> Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

I'm not sure. Davis, do you have any feedback?

On Sunday, May 10, 2015, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

How has Donna Edwards responded? Should I call her?

From: John Davis [mailto:[redacted]]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 01:50 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; B; Snyder, Thomas; [redacted]
<[redacted]>
Cc: [redacted] <[redacted]>
<[redacted]> Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

Will do.

On Wednesday, May 6, 2015 1:49 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

We'll take that... But we'd also like him there on 5/12... Davis - you want to follow up with Josh?

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>

Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 12:53 PM

To: "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "[REDACTED]" <[REDACTED]>

Cc: Aaron Pickrell <[REDACTED]>, John Davis <[REDACTED]>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>

Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

Sen whitehouse is open but hasn't studied the TPA yet. Says we should follow up with josh karedne (sp?) of his staff. Said at minimum he'll say nice things about what we're trying to do

From: Snyder, Thomas

Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 12:42 PM

To: <[REDACTED]>, <[REDACTED]>

Cc: B; <[REDACTED]>, <[REDACTED]>

Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

The hits just keep on coming

Sent from my iPhone

On May 6, 2015, at 12:41 PM, jeani murray <[REDACTED]> wrote:

I am pretty sure it was the Politico piece they saw today. Woohoo!

On Wednesday, May 6, 2015, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Well done!

From: jeani murray [mailto:[REDACTED]]

Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 12:39 PM

To: B

Cc: [redacted] <[redacted]>
[redacted] <[redacted]> Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Fw: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

Wade Henderson, President and CEO of the Leadership Council on Civil and Human Rights - in and attending.

Wants to engage further and be a part of longer term activities.

On Wednesday, May 6, 2015, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Fyi

From: B
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 12:08 PM
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Cc: [redacted] <[redacted]>
'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

Governor Dayton signs on! Add to the list! Coordinate announcement with ms. jamie makepeace [redacted] or [redacted] [redacted] cell). He can't make May 12 but he's open to doing an event together in the near future

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[redacted]]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 10:52 AM
To: B
Cc: Elana Leopold <[redacted]>
Subject: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

I will send you latest TPA email with signers in clean email in case you need to forward.

12:00PM Governor Mark Dayton (Minnesota)

DIAL: [redacted] FYI a Trooper will answer the phone

12:45PM Senator Sheldon Whitehouse (Rhode Island)

DIAL: [redacted]

Asst is Leah Siegle [redacted]

1:15PM Congressman GK Butterfield, Chair of the Black Caucus

(North Carolina)

DIAL: Durham Office: [REDACTED]

Alternative Cell: [REDACTED]

Former Congressman Barney Frank

DIAL: Cell: [REDACTED]

 He did not have time in your available window today, but you should call his cell whenever you can and he will call you back.

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: John Del Cecato
To: Snyder, Thomas
Cc: Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA
Date: Sunday, May 10, 2015 5:16:23 PM

Yep - on it - will have tonight

- > On May 10, 2015, at 5:07 PM, Snyder, Thomas <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
- >
- > John - Mayor wants the following by sometime tomorrow morning:
- > 1. Roosevelt Institute remarks and a brief on set up, speakers etc.
- > 2. A list of Media Questions that may come up at the TPA event; if you can add answers that's fine too but definitely the Questions - also by tomorrow morning sometime.
- >
- > I think Michael and Elana may have some other stuff to take up with you about his travels this week.
- >
- > Sent from my iPad

From: John Del Cecato
To: Snyder, Thomas; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Gunaratna, Mahen
Cc: Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA
Date: Sunday, May 10, 2015 10:11:05 PM
Attachments: BriefingMemo-RooseveltEvent.docx
DRAFT REMARKS.docx
QandA - JDC edits.docx
TPA BACKGROUNDER .docx

Four attachments.

1. Briefing memo on Roosevelt event.
2. Draft remarks for Roosevelt.
3. Draft Q&A for TPA event at 3pm at Capitol.
4. A backgrounder on some of the issues in TPA. May need to be updated.

Just as FYI - if we have all the speakers planned actually speak, and it's actually 93 degrees, these questions won't be coming in a formal way (from the podium), but rather as a break-off situation - where some reporters ask some questions of MBDB, other reporters focus on other participants.

On 5/10/15, 5:05 PM, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>John - Mayor wants the following by sometime tomorrow morning:
>1. Roosevelt Institute remarks and a brief on set up, speakers etc.
>2. A list of Media Questions that may come up at the TPA event; if you >can add answers that's fine too but definitely the Questions - also by >tomorrow morning sometime.
>
>I think Michael and Elana may have some other stuff to take up with you >about his travels this week.
>
>Sent from my iPad

BRIEFING MEMO

WHAT: Roosevelt Institute event with Sen. Warren, Prof. Stiglitz
WHEN: Tuesday, May 12th – from 830am to 11am (MBDB at 1035AM)

STIGLITZ MESSAGE:

- Dominant economic frameworks over the past 35 years – like "trickle-down" economics, and the idea that markets work perfectly on their own – paved the way for an onslaught of policies that decimated America's middle class. This paper presents an evidence-backed alternative framework:
- Markets are shaped by laws, regulations and institutions. Rules matter.
- The rules determine how fast the economy grows, and who shares in the benefits of that prosperity.
- Concentrated wealth can hurt economic performance. Under the right rules, shared prosperity and strong economic performance reinforce each other. There is no trade-off.
- A tentative, piecemeal policy response to help the neediest will not suffice. We must rewrite the rules of the economy with a focus on restoring a balance of power between the competing interests that make up the modern economy.

RUN OF SHOW:

NOTE: No holding room. Reserved seats in the front row for Senator Warren and MBDB.

8:30 AM	Breakfast Starts - National Press Club - 529 14th Street, NW; 13 th Floor
9:00	Program begins. RI CEO Felicia Wong remarks & introduces Joseph Stiglitz
9:03-9:15	Stiglitz Remarks

9:15	Wong Intros Rana F.
9:17-10:15	Panel
10:15	Wong introduces Senator Warren
10:17-10:33	Senator Warren Speaks
10:33	Wong Introduces Mayor de Blasio
10:35-10:50	Mayor de Blasio speaks
10:50	Wong Closes

###

DRAFT REMARKS
Roosevelt Institute event
Tuesday, May 12th
10:35 AM – 10:50 AM (15 minutes)

- Thank you to Felicia Wong for that very kind introduction, and for your tremendous leadership as CEO and President of the Roosevelt Institute.
- As you may know, Dr. Wong received her PhD from the University of California at Berkeley, where I'll be visiting this Thursday to discuss income inequality. And I was told this morning that if when I'm on campus, if I just mention Felicia's name, I automatically receive an honorary degree from U-Cal Berkeley. THAT is how much power her name packs.
- I also want to thank Dr. Joseph Stiglitz, not only for producing this incredibly important, through-provoking analysis for rewriting the rules of our modern economy, but also for his advice and support as we have gotten to know each other these past few months. I know of no one who has thought more deeply and advocated more passionately for big, bold, sweeping changes to rebuild the American middle class and restore the principles that will make our country a place of opportunity for everyone. And I'm told that if I'm ever in STOCKHOLM and mention the name Joe Stiglitz, the immediate response will be "Yes, we gave him the Nobel Prize. Now what the hell are you doing here, Mr. de Blasio?"
- I also want to thank Senator Elizabeth Warren for her tireless advocacy on behalf of middle-class people – not just in her time as Senator, but for three DECADES – as an academic, as a regulator, as a policy expert and advisor. Like many of you, I'm inspired by her brilliance, her passion, and her lifelong dedication to challenging the most powerful interests on behalf of those whose voices too often go unheard. I was honored to co-author an op-ed with Senator Warren last week, and I'm humbled to be with her in person here today.
- I also want to applaud the Roosevelt Institute for the invaluable contribution that they make to the public discourse, particularly on the matter that's been discussed today – thinking big and bold about what it takes to fundamentally change the way our economy works...to ensure that we are creating a more just society...a place where EVERYONE gets a shot at a better life.
- I'm so proud to serve 8.4 million people as mayor of the greatest city on Earth.
- I ran for mayor in 2013 with a promise to tackle what I believed then – and still believe today – is the crisis of our times – and that is income inequality.

- I often spoke of the Tale of Two Cities that New York had become, particularly since the Great Recession had ended. We're home to Wall Street, which has come roaring back – breaking record after record. At the same time, 46 percent of our population was living at or near the poverty line.
- I said that needed to change – not just because this vast inequality posed a threat to those who were struggling...not simply because those in the middle class felt more and more anxious about staying IN the middle class...but because living in a Gilded City was a threat to EVERY New Yorker...a threat to what made New York so great for so many generations prior.
- So we set out to do something about it, and we achieved some real successes – universal, full-day Pre-K...for every single child who wants it. We more that DOUBLED the number of young people with access to after-school programs.
- We secured paid sick leave for 500,000 additional New Yorkers. We extended the living wage to thousands more. We've had over 100,000 New Yorkers apply for a municipal ID. We're fighting to increase the minimum wage.
- And this year, we're pushing the most ambitious municipal affordable housing plan in U.S. history – committing ourselves to building or preserving 200,000 units of affordable housing, and requiring – for the first time ever – that developers include affordable housing as a CONDITION of building in New York.
- We've got a very long way to go, but we're tackling inequality every way we know how – with every tool at our disposal.
- I'm here today because the fight to lift up struggling New Yorkers, and to help rebuild New York's middle class, doesn't end at the borders of my city. What happens in Washington – or doesn't happen – makes an enormous difference to my 8.4 million constituents back home.
- When Franklin Roosevelt created the New Deal, he relied upon many policies first developed in states and cities across America. Governors, Mayors, city and state legislatures – we all have the opportunity to incubate ideas at the local level, and create momentum for real, progressive national change.
- Today, the economic moment -- and the political momentum -- have converged. And NOW is the time for our country to enact bold structural changes to rebuild our middle class -- like many of the steps that Dr. Stiglitz is proposing today.

- In a word, we need an economy that rewards WORK and not just wealth.
- That means lifting the floor for working people – raising the minimum wage, strengthening the rights of workers to organize, and cracking down on wage theft.
- It means supporting working parents and their families – with paid sick and paid family leave; providing Pre-K and after-school programs and child care; and helping students graduate from college without a mountain of debt hanging over their heads.
- And yes, it means REAL, BOLD efforts to make our tax system more fair – closing tax loopholes that big corporations and the wealthy use to take their massive profits and wealth...and simply pile up greater profits and wealth for themselves.
- Just one example – the carried interest loophole, which you’ve all heard about – a loophole that allows billionaire hedge fund managers to pay a lower overall tax rate than the hardworking men and women who clean their summer homes, or pilot their private jets.
- Now you’ve heard why this sort of thing is possible. It’s because the system is rigged to benefit those at the top – and to leave everybody else behind.
- We want to rewrite those rules – not to punish success, but to create more success stories.
- We want every child to grow up in a society that says: “if you’re willing to work hard, you’ve got a chance to live your dreams.”
- For generations, that was the promise of my city of New York. It was the definition of the American dream. But for too many, that promise...that dream...has steadily slipped away.
- And that’s why we have to stand together. Progressive economists, academics, elected officials, and everyday Americans in all fifty states.
- And you know what? The American people are already there. Just look at the Fight for 15 – a massive movement in 200 cities, with 60,000 people taking to the streets to fight for a minimum wage.
- It’s time for those of us in elected office to hear THEIR voices...and to follow THEIR lead.
- It was Franklin Roosevelt himself who said QUOTE: “Let us not be afraid to help each other. Let us never forget that government is ourselves and not an alien power over us. The ultimate rulers of our democracy are not a President and Senators and Congressmen and government officials but the voters of this country. END QUOTE.

- So as one government official – let me say this. The crisis of income inequality is massive. But it is well within our power to take it head on, and a make a real difference.
- And we won't do it from the top-down. We'll do it as a progressive force...city by city, neighborhood by neighborhood...listening to the people who sent us to make the change for which they hunger.
- And we'll do it...together.
- Thank you.

###

Q: Why are you doing this?

A: Progressives see the national conversation moving more and more to income inequality – something that was only happening in small circles a year ago. Now is the time to not only recognize the problem, but commit to real solutions for combatting it.

Q: Is Elizabeth Warren signed on to TPA?

A: She won't be attending the event at the Capitol Building, but we've been working together to shine a light on many of these issues – as we did with our op-ed recently. In fact, we'll be appearing together that morning at an event hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, where Joe Stiglitz will be unveiling a comprehensive approach to rewriting the rules of the economy to rebuild the middle class.

Q: Officials who were at the Gracie event, including Sen. Brown and Gov. Strickland said they will not sign on to the agenda or be at the May 12 event, although they sympathize with the Mayor's goals. Do you have any concerns that attendees of the April 2 Gracie Mansion meeting not signing on?

A: Some folks have a policy against signing pledges, and that's fine. Both Senator Brown and Governor Strickland have been strong champions in this effort to combat income inequality, particularly on proposals to lift the floor for working people.

Q: Is this a rebuke of Hillary?

A: No, this isn't about an individual. We're here to send a message to ALL elected officials and candidates for every office, up and down the ballot, in both parties: to tackle income inequality, we must implement bold progressive policies.

Q: What does Hillary have to do for you to back her?

A: I think what progressives want to see from her – and from elected officials and candidates at every level – is a vision...an economic framework...that really tackles income inequality.

Q: Some people here have already backed Hillary. You, notably, have not.

A: We are here to say that anyone hoping to lead the American people – up and down the ballot – must have a plan to combat income inequality that's based on progressive principles.

Q: What are your next steps?

A: There are a host of ways of engaging progressive leaders, and the progressive Americans they speak to, or speak for. The leadership of organized labor will be speaking to their members and building support for the cause. The heads of progressive organizations will be channeling the support of everyday Americans who are eager to spread the word within their communities. Elected officials will go back to their states and districts and cities to build support among their constituents. And we will ALL be fanning out and speaking out, driving people from across the country to our website – asking them to sign on, to offer comments and suggestions, and to hold elected officials and candidates accountable for results.

Q: What happens if a candidate or elected official doesn't endorse The Progressive Agenda? Will you all campaign against them?

A: We're asking them to commit to these principles because they are three things: 1) real solutions to income inequality; 2) feasible ideas; 3) resonant with millions of Americans who are desperate for leadership on these economic matters. We're looking to elevate these issues into the national dialogue in a positive, proactive way.

Q: Grover Norquist makes conservative candidates and elected officials sign a no-tax pledge – and he strongly backs those who do, while punishing those who do not. Is that what you're trying to replicate?

A: It's not about the backing or non-backing from folks up here. It's about the people we represent – progressives across the country. And to motivate those Americans – to get them on their feet, activated, and encouraged to support a candidate or elected official – they need to know that the candidate or elected official is with them on these core issues.

Q: Even if you continue to have a Democratic White House, you'll likely have a Republican Congress. How can any of this get done?

A: This isn't just about the White House and Congress. BUT, I will say this. There are those who see divided government & believe that nothing but the most watered-down measures can get support. I don't believe that. If you push hard enough, organize aggressively enough, and make it front-and-center in the national conversation, politicians who might ordinarily be afraid to be bold will suddenly see that it's not just "okay" to have a backbone. It's an existential requirement.

Q: The NYS GOP Chair said YOU would beat HRC in a primary.

A: As much as I enjoy getting political advice from the GOP Chair – let me be clear: I'm not running for president. That's my Sherman-esque answer. We just want these policies to be implemented.

Q: Should Elizabeth Warren run?

A: I think she has already made her intentions clear, and I'll make my message clear: this isn't about personalities; it's about policies.

Q: Could you see yourself supporting Martin O'Malley? He agrees with you on a lot of this stuff.

A: Policies. Not Personalities.

Q: Some of the things you've mentioned, like the TPP, are being supported by President Obama. Are you prepared to go to war with the White House on Fast Track?

A: It's not about war with the White House, or the GOP Congress. It's about standing up for what's right – no matter where the chips fall. I believe that Fast Track is a bad deal for American workers.

Q: Why isn't Sen. Warren here?

A: I've been working with Senator Warren on these issues. We just published a joint op-ed that touched on many of these topics, and several others, as well. I was with her at the Roosevelt Institute event with Joe Stiglitz this morning. The group assembled here is clearly not an exhaustive list of those who support our agenda. But the folks here represent a diverse group of progressive groups and constituents who are hungry for economic policy aimed at combatting income inequality.

Q: Aren't you concerned that candidates or elected officials will look at all the taxes you're proposing here & say "Geez, I don't want an attack ad run by the Koch Brothers saying I support trillions in higher taxes."

A: Here's the hard truth. If you're going to reduce the income gap, you need two things: 1) more investment in programs and policies that lift the floor for working people; and 2) more revenue from those at the very top – millionaires, billionaires, and wealthy corporations. There's no secret pot of money. And if you're going to be serious about investing in programs that help the 99 Percent, then the One Percent has to be willing to help foot the bill. The Koch Brothers have a different point of view – give more tax breaks to big oil companies and fellow billionaires, at the expense of everybody else. I welcome that debate.

Q: How does this help the people of New York City? Are you getting outside the realm of your Day Job?

A: The fact is, we are doing many of these things at the city level. We're trying to do some at the state level. Others only make sense at the federal level. We shouldn't silo government into city or state or federal. People don't look at their government like that. They know that the people they put into public office have to work together, at all levels of government, to achieve real change. And there's so much more that we can do to lift the lives of working people here in NYC if we have support from the federal government, and from people of good conscience from across the country.

Q: You specifically mention closing the carried interest loophole. That would be a big hit to a lot of the private equity, hedge fund, and real estate folks in New York City. Are you declaring war on them – and do you worry that doing so could derail your efforts on education or affordable housing here at home?

A: No one is declaring war. We are shining a bright light on the defining issue of our times – the fact that since the Recession ended, the One Percent has seen their real income grow by 35%. The 99 Percent have seen theirs grow 0.8%. Put another way, the One Percent captured 91% of the real income gains since 2009.

Now, there's no legitimate reason that a hedge fund manager should pay a lower effective tax rate than the woman who cleans his beach house or the guy who pilots his private plane. That makes zero sense.

Rewarding work, and not just wealth, isn't just morally right. It's smart economics. Consumers need money in their pockets to spend on necessities. In turn, that money goes into the economy and lifts it for everyone.

Q: When you say that the income gap has favored the One Percent over the 99 Percent since 2009 – isn't that a direct indictment of President Obama? Should he have done more to help the non-rich?

A: President Obama has made great efforts to close the income gap. Some have called ObamaCare one of the greatest social programs aimed at reducing income inequality since the New Deal. I agree. There was the stimulus, which greatly expanded the EITC. And there was his success in raising the top marginal tax rate to where it was when Bill Clinton left office. What the income inequality statistics tell us is this: we need to be even more aggressive lifting the floor for working people, and that has to include a greater contribution by those at the very top.

Q: Some of the folks who were at the original Gracie Confab have criticized you for not including mass incarceration as part of TPA. Why do you not think that's important enough to be part of TPA?

A: Mass incarceration is a huge problem – and one that we've set out to address in New York City. We've ended the overuse of stop-and-frisk – from around 700,000 a few years before I took office, to less than 50,000 last year. Since we implemented our new marijuana policy, arrests are down 65 percent. We've launched a plan to shrink the population at New York City jails by 25 percent in 10 years.

And this is an important issue across the country – one that progressives will be addressing in the national context in the months to come. This is just the start – not the final chapter – in how we hope to elevate solutions to core issues of economic and social justice.

Q: What about expanding Social Security? Or debt-free college? There are reports that many of the original "signers" to your agenda have dropped out – reportedly furious that you refused to include those issues.

A: Everyone has to make their own decision about whether to support or not support The Progressive Agenda that we've unveiled today. But I've made my support for the issues you've mentioned clear. In fact, I wrote an op-ed with Elizabeth Warren that mentioned them specifically!

This is the result of a long and collaborative process. Just because something doesn't appear as a plank on this agenda doesn't mean it's not important. It doesn't mean it won't be part of our efforts in the months to come. Again, this is the floor – not the ceiling. Stay tuned for more to come!

Q: Have you thought about what all of this stuff costs? How are you going to pay for all of this? Things like child care and paid family leave are really expensive.

A: This isn't meant to be a budget blueprint. This is a document designed to highlight some real, bold, progressive policies that can help combat income inequality. It's an organizing tool, and a way to elevate the discussion on some really important issues.

Q: If these things are so important to you, why have you done them in New York? The city doesn't offer paid family leave, for example.

A: In New York City, we've tackled a number of issues on this list – but no, we haven't tackled them all. Many of these issues are best dealt with at the national level – some because of the price tag, and some for reasons of competition between states and cities. National policy puts everyone on a level playing field.

Q: With so many wealthy New Yorkers, are you concerned that this agenda will soak your constituents, while giving Congress the power to use the money generated for programs in other states?

A: We do have some very wealthy residents in New York. And they need to pay their fair share in taxes. We also have a massive number of residents who are struggling, and who could benefit from a host of initiatives presented here. And we believe that we can make an effective case that when New York City is contributing more in federal taxes, then we deserve more help in rebuilding our bruised and battered middle class, and more help in lifting up those in poverty.

Reforming Labor Law

Background: When workers try to organize unions they are often harassed, intimidated or fired, taking away their bargaining power and harming their access to adequate wages and quality healthcare. Workers in unions earn 30 percent higher wages and are 63 percent more likely to have employer-provided health insurance.

Possible Solution: The Employee Free Choice Act: A Congressional bill that would make it easier for workers to join unions, make it easier for newly unionized workers to reach contracts with their employers, and strengthen penalties for those that violate labor law to seek to prevent workers from using their right to organize. The legislation removes the power of employers to demand an additional and separate ballot if a majority of employee signatures were collected. It also assigns the organizing union as the official collective bargaining representative if a majority of employee signatures are collected. The legislation also requires employers and their unions to enter binding arbitration to produce a collective agreement if one cannot be met 90 days after the unionization of employees, and after 30 days of mediation time (120 days total). The arbitration agreement would be binding for a period of two years. Lastly, the legislation increases penalties on employers who discriminate against workers for union involvement.

Immigration Reform and Wage Theft

Immigrant workers are even more vulnerable because they can be threatened with deportation. In 2002, the Supreme Court ruled that undocumented workers cannot seek basic labor protections because they are not legally allowed to work. Therefore, employers can subject undocumented immigrants to abuse and dangerous working conditions for little pay, without worrying about legal action.

<http://thinkprogress.org/immigration/2013/07/10/2276121/dc-undocumented-immigrant-wage-theft/>

Student Loan Refinancing

Background: Some with outstanding loans pay interest rates of 7% or higher for undergraduate loans, while students taking out new undergraduate loans pay 3.86% under the Bipartisan Student Loan Certainty Act passed by Congress in summer 2013. Outstanding student loans now total more than $1.2 trillion, surpassing total credit card debt. One in seven borrowers defaults on federal student loans within three years of beginning repayment.

Possible Solutions: S. 2432 – Bank on Students Emergency Loan Refinancing Act: Would allow more than 25 million people with outstanding student loan debt to refinance their federal student loans or private loans at the lower interest rates currently offered to new borrowers, while maintaining full borrower protections of federal student loans (rather than forcing borrowers refinance with private banks). The loss of federal revenue from the lower loan interest income would require additional DOE direct spending (via its Direct Loan Program), according to the CBO, but would be offset in full by the “Buffet Rule” – a minimum 30% income tax payment from people who earn between $1 and $2 million.

Paid Family Leave

The United States is the only advanced economy without a national paid-leave law. Only three states -- California, New Jersey and Rhode Island -- offer this critical support for working men and women. Even Human Rights Watch has noticed, citing America for failing its families in a scathing report a few years back. In the latest edition of Expecting Better, a report card issued annually by the National Partnership for Women and Families, not a single state merited an "A." California took home an A-minus, New Jersey, a B-plus, and New York, a lackluster B-minus.

<http://www.huffingtonpost.com/susan-ochshorn/new-yorks-real-wealth-pro b 6950998.html>

Tax Breaks for Shipping Jobs Overseas/Deferral/Inversion/Repatriation

SMALLER ONE (NOT AFFECTED BY REPATRIATION):

“Firms can generally deduct business expenses,” said Kimberly Clausing, the Thormund A. Miller and Walter Mintz Professor of Economics at Reed College. “Thus, of course, if firms incurred expenses in moving abroad, they would be able to deduct those expenses.”

BIGGER ONE (AFFECTED BY REPATRIATION):

We’ve also written before on several occasions that the tax code has long allowed U.S. corporations doing business abroad to defer paying taxes on any of their “unrepatriated income.” That is to say that the revenue earned by the company’s foreign subsidiary remains untaxed by the IRS until that money is brought back to the parent company in the U.S.

Sometimes politicians also refer to this as a “tax break for shipping jobs overseas.” And Clausing told us that this part of tax law could motivate companies to move business abroad.

“This can provide a huge incentive for locating jobs and income abroad, since many tax haven countries have tax rates that are very low, even approaching zero, and thus the money can grow abroad ‘tax free’ until it is repatriated,” she said.

<http://www.factcheck.org/2012/10/talking-tax-breaks-for-offshoring/>

From: de Alwis, Ronalie
To: John Del Cecato; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA
Date: Sunday, May 10, 2015 10:16:24 PM

Thanks so much!!
Sent from my iPhone

> On May 10, 2015, at 10:15 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
>
>
>
>> On 5/10/15, 10:12 PM, "John Del Cecato" <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
>>
>> Four attachments.
>>
>> 1. Briefing memo on Roosevelt event.
>> 2. Draft remarks for Roosevelt.
>> 3. Draft Q&A for TPA event at 3pm at Capitol.
>> 4. A backgrounder on some of the issues in TPA. May need to be updated.
>>
>> Just as FYI - if we have all the speakers planned actually speak, and it's >> actually 93 degrees, these questions won't be coming in a formal way (from >> the podium), but rather as a break-off situation - where some reporters >> ask some questions of MBDB, other reporters focus on other participants.
>>
>>
>>
>>> On 5/10/15, 5:05 PM, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
>>>
>>> John - Mayor wants the following by sometime tomorrow morning:
>>> 1. Roosevelt Institute remarks and a brief on set up, speakers etc.
>>> 2. A list of Media Questions that may come up at the TPA event; if you >>> can add answers that's fine too but definitely the Questions - also by >>> tomorrow morning sometime.
>>>
>>> I think Michael and Elana may have some other stuff to take up with you >>> about his travels this week.
>>>
>>> Sent from my iPad
>
> <BriefingMemo-RooseveltEvent.docx>
> <DRAFT REMARKS.docx>
> <QandA - JDC edits.docx>
> <TPA BACKGROUNDER .docx>

From: de Alwis, Ronalie
To: de Alwis, Ronalie
Cc: [REDACTED] jfdc@akpdmedia.com; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA and mayors
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 8:04:08 AM
Attachments: image1.jpeg

Haley,

This was a list of calls he did with me on Thursday I have Stephanie but o guess I should give you too

Sent from my iPhone

On May 11, 2015, at 7:35 AM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

No, got tied up. So let's blitz today

From: Hayley Prim [[mailto:\[REDACTED\]](mailto:[REDACTED])]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 07:35 AM
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Leopold, Elana; de Alwis, Ronalie
Subject: Re: TPA and mayors

Will do. Did you reach out to Walsh, lee, Murray, and Garcetti yesterday?

On Monday, May 11, 2015, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

I've reached out to a number of mayors and haven't heard back. I need a final push today to get them by staff, and I'll try to make some calls as well. Hayley, pls create one unified list of outstanding mayors. My hope is to pick up 3-5 more as sign-ons before the day is out.
Thanks

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

TPA MAYORS

	ASKED	SIGN ON YET	ATTENDING	NOT
Mayor Hales need cell #	NO	NO
(W) Mayor Garcetti email	NO	NO
Mayor Reed	NO	NO
Mayor Brown	NO	NO
Mayor Benjamin need #	NO	NO
Mayor Nutter email	NO	NO
(L) Mayor Walsh email	NO	NO
Mayor Harp	NO	NO
Mayor Brennan
Upstate Mayors (Sheehan, Miner, Warren, Brown)	NO	NO
Mayor Murray email	YES	NO
Mayor Lee email	YES	NO
(L) Mayor Adler	YES	NO
(PW) Mayor Barrett - Phil W. (follow up)	YES	NO
Mayor Peduto No weekend	YES	NO
Mayor Cranley	YES	NO
Mayor Bowser	YES	NO
Mayor Elorza → May 13th possible	YES	NO
Mayor Segarra LVM	YES	NO
Mayor Becker	YES	NO
Mayor Rawlings Blake	YES	NO
Mayor Stanton overpass	YES	NO
Mayor Baraka	YES	YES	NO- CAN'T
Mayor Hodges	YES	YES	YES
Mayor Whaley	YES	YES	YES
* Mayor Schaaf	YES	YES	YES

↑ Added by Steph

LVM - Segarra

From: Carey, Michael
To: John Del Cecato
Subject: Re: <no subject>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 8:05:58 AM

Just sent via text
It is big
Let me know

Michael Paul Carey
City Hall
New York, New York

> On May 11, 2015, at 7:52 AM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
>
> I don't suppose you audio recorded the mayor's remarks from the ProgressIowa rally by any chance, did you? I failed to do so - and Josh Robin is claiming MBDB "bellowed 'tax the rich!'"
>
> I don't remember that at all...

From: Aaron Pickrell
To: B
Cc: Hayley Prim; John Del Cecato
Subject: labor calls
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 8:56:54 AM

Good morning Mayor - wanted to check in and suggest a few labor calls today to just check in if you have time. I think there would be value to call a few of the Presidents to thank them, emphasize the goals of the event, see if they are concerned about some of the churn from allies and generally just show some love.

I would suggest

Weingarten
Saunders
Mary Kay Henry

Thank you sir

Aaron

From: Williams, Dominic
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Re: TPP: Nomination for you to deliberate, discuss, or decide on
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 9:13:25 AM

That's about right. I don't think he'll hold mayor to the warren standard. Mayor actually hasn't seen the deal.

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 09:11 AM
To: Williams, Dominic
Subject: Re: TPP: Nomination for you to deliberate, discuss, or decide on

Yes, I think that's good. The Yahoo News story has most of the President's playbook on this.

And as you know, I don't think POTUS will be looking to embarrass MBDB or "school" him. POTUS takes this issue personally, but he's not a jerk. He'll probably just say "look - this is the best chance progressives have to get a trade deal that works for them. Otherwise you're gonna be stuck with the same system that's been screwing workers for a long time." something like that.

I could also ask Simas what he thinks POTUS will say, if you want me to reach out. David is a honest broker

From: <Williams>, Dominic Williams <DWilliams@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 8:53 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: FW: TPP: Nomination for you to deliberate, discuss, or decide on

How much more or less do you think is needed in terms of background here?

I was going to do the following:

1. Do a quick breakdown of what Obama said at Nike
2. Some Q and A specific to TPP on the basis of the recent Obama speech and other interviews.

Cool?

From: <Williams>, OOM <dwilliams@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, April 22, 2015 at 3:43 PM
To: Bill De Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: TPP: Nomination for you to deliberate, discuss, or decide on

Following Up On TPP:

The nomination is that you come out against Fast Track for TPP, and against the TPP as we know it now. Your speech this weekend would be the proposed point to make this public. We will have planning meeting later today, where we can process or discuss further. Background, timeline, and draft message frame recommendation all are attached and below:

===

The Trans-Pacific Partnership

Issues and Areas of Concern for New York City

The Trans-Pacific Partnership is a regulatory and investment treaty being negotiated by the Obama administration covering major economies of the Pacific Rim currently excluding China. It includes 12 nations consisting of nearly 40% of the world's economy: United States, Australia, Brunei Darussalam, Chile, Canada, Japan, Malaysia, Mexico, New Zealand, Peru, Singapore, Vietnam. New York State exports approximately $23 billion per year in goods to TPP economies. Overall, exports in goods support approximately 280,000 jobs.

The treaty includes reciprocal tariff reductions, akin to a traditional free trade agreement, but also includes chapters on other non-tariff regulatory issues, including intellectual property, labor, financial services, and the environment. Relative tariff levels between the United States and the other participating nations are already relatively low, so there has been intense focus on the non-tariff aspects of the deal.

FACTS ABOUT PROCESS

The agreement is being negotiated in secret: The text of the agreement has not been made public, limiting the ability for citizens or many advocacy groups to form opinions of the direction of the agreement. Instead, advocacy groups have needed to rely on leaked drafts of some chapters, which have been criticized by the Obama administration as being incomplete and partial. Members of Congress and stakeholder groups convened by the administration, including labor, environmental, and consumer advocacy representatives have seen confidential draft language.

The President is seeking “fast-track” authority over opposition and skepticism from Congressional Democrats, labor unions, and prominent environmental groups: The Administration is seeking Trade Promotion Authority (colloquially known as “fast track”) which allows the Administration to submit a negotiated agreement in total to be voted up or down by Congress with no opportunity for amendments and limited debate. This is the process that was used for NAFTA, WTO, and other high-profile trade agreements. Without an “up or down” vote, the administration argues that the deal would collapse under the weight of amendments. Harry Reid and Nancy Pelosi have opposed granting the President fast-track authority, but some Democrats and many Congressional Republicans are open to the idea.

BENEFITS OF A DEAL AS WE KNOW IT

While we do not know the final text, there are a number of key benefits that seem like likely outcomes of a successfully approved deal:

The agreement could increase opportunities for increased exports and domestic job creation, while expanding profit-making opportunities for U.S. companies abroad and potentially shift jobs or expand operations overseas. The White House has stated that approving this agreement would increase exports from the United States by approximately $120 billion per year, largely benefiting those companies and employees in export-oriented industries, and increase real incomes, in the form of lower prices and increased competition, by $77 billion per year. They point to increased opportunities for small and medium sized export-oriented U.S. businesses, reduced tariffs for goods and services from U.S. firms (including “financial services”), uniform regulations, and increased protections for the intellectual property from U.S. tech, medical, and media firms.

Would benefit large corporate entities with major footprints in New York City: The benefits of additional corporate investment opportunities in the Pacific Rim created by TPP skews towards some categories of companies who have major presence in New York City: particularly companies who own valuable IP in tech, media, and pharmaceuticals, and companies that are positioned to increase “trade in services” – particularly financial institutions, law firms, and consulting companies.

This agreement would set the pattern for other future trade deals, including with China and other nations across the world: The TPP is seen as an opportunity for the United States to take the lead in setting minimum standards for trade among major economic partners in the Pacific Rim, in an attempt to create “rules of the game” that these nations will play on American terms, rather than on the terms of Chinese interest, which may include less protection for labor, the environment, American security interests, and the interests of American corporations and workers. It is also seen as an important tool to knit together countries in the region to provide an economic counterweight to the rise of China. Roger Altman, former Treasury official, and Richard Haas of the Council on Foreign Relations, wrote that a failure of the TPP, “would leave the country poorer and the world less stable.”

CONCERNS ABOUT PROCEEDING WITH THE PENDING DEAL:

While we do not know the final text, there are a number of substantive concerns being raised by labor, environmental, and consumer protection advocates:

Treaty may include hortatory but toothless clauses on environmental protection and labor rights and could expand fossil fuel exports, exacerbating climate change and reinforcing dependence on fossil fuels. The White House is planning on including broad protections against illegal trade in protected species, overfishing, and deforestation, but a leaked draft revealed a framework that lacked meaningful enforcement mechanisms and has drawn the skepticism of major environmental groups. In addition, while the White House insists they are looking to include protections for labor rights, including rights to collective bargaining, limits on child labor, and acceptable working conditions (safe work environments and maximum hours limitations), there are parallel concerns that these clauses will not be adequately enforceable. There is also no chapter on currency manipulation, which is concerning to domestic labor unions as member countries can use artificial currency depreciation to undercut U.S. manufacturing companies.

The agreement would likely expand expansive controversial U.S. intellectual property laws internationally: A leaked version of the Intellectual Property rights chapter includes provisions that would expand U.S. intellectual property protections, including 80-year copyright protections and increased protections for patented brand-name pharmaceuticals. This would improve profit prospects for pharmaceutical companies, but may yield higher drug prices.

The agreement would likely expand the use of “Investor-State Dispute Settlement” giving investors and international corporations a trans-national forum to seek damages from governments for regulations that expropriate property: The White House has identified these tribunals as vital protection from expropriation for U.S. companies doing business abroad, but Elizabeth Warren and other critics criticize them as potentially allowing global corporations to receive damages, paid for by U.S. taxpayers, from regulations designed to protect consumers but which the company will argue unfairly restrict profits. It is important to note, however, that most companies will continue to challenge rules in U.S. courts in order to overturn the laws all together. ISDS tribunals are only able to award damages, and have never done so in any of the thirteen cases that went to judgment against the United States.

“Buy America” provisions could be challenged: The White House insists that there will be no change to current law, and that states and localities’ ability to impose local purchasing requirements will not be disrupted. , but the AFL-CIO has claimed that this deal would undermine the ability of the United States to impose “Buy America” provisions.

Draft Recommended Position [Wisconsin Democratic Party Speech]: Skeptical of TPP, Against Fast Track

We can’t really comment on the TPP itself because we haven’t seen it - which is a BIG PART OF THE PROBLEM. It’s been negotiated in secret, and that’s not acceptable. We need to see what’s in it.

We all saw what a disaster NAFTA was for America - 700K jobs lost, according to the Economic Policy Institute. We look with GREAT skepticism on a new trade deal that could lead to even more jobs being shipped away. From the few details that have emerged from the shadow of secrecy, this looks like another bad deal for American workers, and we cannot accept it.

I oppose Fast Track because the American people should have a say in the process - through their elected representatives. If our Members of Congress are forced to vote YES OR NO on a massive trade deal without the power to offer amendments, we’re putting all the power on the side of the giant multinational corporations and Wall Street banks, and their armies of lobbyists.

We need trade deals that protect American jobs, workers’ rights, human rights, consumers, and our environment. We should not allow corporations even more power to subvert American laws designed to protect workers, consumers, and families.

Without the proper protections for the Little Guy, these massive trade deals can lead to a global rush the bottom. That flies in the face of our effort to combat income inequality in the United States - handing more power to those at the top, and letting them write the rules to further enrich themselves at the expense of our struggling middle class, working class, and poor.

Appendix:

TPP LEGISLATIVE TIMELINE [From Federal Affairs]

The timeline below includes information re a two prong process on trade: (1) Congress is engaged now in passing a TPA bill that gives the President fast-track authority and sets up some negotiating objectives for international trade pacts; and (2) the President is currently negotiating the TPP Agreement, and if it is signed, then it may be disapproved by Congress under the TPA rules.

YESTERDAY - The Senate Finance Committee met yesterday to resume discussion on TPA bipartisan legislation, which has been officially introduced.

TODAY - The Senate Finance Committee will also hold a markup today of the TPA bill. Amendments that would require the United States to incorporate enforceable currency provisions in the TPP are expected. Today’s markup may have significant consequences to our delegation’s position as well as the timing of trade efforts moving forward.

THURSDAY - The House Ways and Means Committee is expected to hold a markup for TPA legislation Thursday.

EARLY-MAY - Senate floor action is planned for the next couple of weeks. House on similar schedule. They are then likely to have a quick conference.

EARLY JUNE - If they have the votes, the TPA bill is expected to be on the President's desk by the first week of June.

FALL - A TPP agreement is expected by this Fall. If it is reached, the TPA bill would call for the trade agreement to be made public at least 60 days before Obama signs any agreement. A super-majority could decide to remove fast-track authority after they see the final terms of the partnership.

When Will Legislators Make Decisions:

We should expect to see more members of the House and Senate come out in favor of or against the Trade Promotion Authority legislation as the markup process solidifies what the final authority and protections will look like.

Members of Congress will have multiple bites at the apple:

- <!--[if !supportLists]--> · <!--[endif]-->One in the next few days as Trade Promotion Authority is refined and debated
- <!--[if !supportLists]--> · <!--[endif]-->One in early May, as Congress votes on the final bill
- <!--[if !supportLists]--> · <!--[endif]-->One in the fall as Congress votes on the actual Trade Deal, as opposed to the fast-track authority that led to it.

From: John Del Cecato
To: Snyder, Thomas; Aaron PickrellEmail; jeani murray; Hayley Prim; Rebecca Katz; John Davis; Wolfe, Emma
Subject: Re: Heather McGhee
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 9:47:04 AM

Just talked to Peter Colavito. Very reasonable guy - but he said Heather talked to Mary Kay & Heather/Deepak apparently carry a great deal of weight with her.

Peter is trying to avoid a call between Mary Kay & MBDB - thinks it will just be Mary Kay saying she's out. He's trying to work on language that would satisfy Heather & Van Jones. Said he'd get back to me in an hour.

From: <Snyder>, Thomas <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 9:42 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Aaron PickrellEmail <[REDACTED]>
jeani murray <[REDACTED]> Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> Rebecca Katz <[REDACTED]> John Davis <[REDACTED]> "Wolfe, Emma"
<EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: Heather McGhee

I would agree that MKH is a big deal but not a deal breaker. Who are you dealing with at SEIU? I do think if there is even a hint she is bailing a call is in order.

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 9:31 AM
To: Aaron PickrellEmail; jeani murray; Hayley Prim; Rebecca Katz; John Davis; Wolfe, Emma; Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Heather McGhee

Talked to Heather this morning. She says she can't be on board with TPA now because of mass incarceration. She says she wished she'd seen how big of an issue this was going to be & sounded the alarm earlier, but now that Roland Martin & Tom Joyner have apparently weighed in on this, she can't be on the "wrong side" of them. She claims Deepak will be with her.

That in & of itself wouldn't be enough for me to sound the alarm, but now she's saying that she is talking to Mary Kay Henry & warning her about this. I've played phone tag with Mary Kay's person - so I don't know if she's bailing or not.

Tom/Emma - I'm thinking Mary Kay is a big enough deal that we'd want the mayor to follow up with her today to make sure she's not getting weak on this.

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Re: <no subject>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 9:52:12 AM

Will do

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 09:50 AM
To: B
Subject: <no subject>

Please give me a shout when you have a minute to chat Van Jones/Heather/and now Mary Kay

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: "John Del Cecato"; Aaron PickrellEmail; John Davis; jeani murray; Hayley Prim; Wolfe, Emma
Subject: RE: Media tomorrow... Re: John, this is a serious problem...
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 10:32:59 AM

Strongly recommend a straight-forward call through to all attendees to reconfirm.

-----Original Message-----

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 10:33 AM
To: Snyder, Thomas; Aaron PickrellEmail; John Davis; jeani murray; Hayley Prim; Wolfe, Emma
Subject: Re: Media tomorrow... Re: John, this is a serious problem...

Adding others for that.

On 5/11/15, 10:25 AM, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>Is there any kind of top to bottom reconfirmation of attendance for >tomorrow? If so, when do you think we will have read on any slippage?

>

>-----Original Message-----

>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
>Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 10:17 AM
>To: Snyder, Thomas; Aaron PickrellEmail; John Davis; jeani murray;
>Hayley Prim
>Subject: FW: Media tomorrow... Re: John, this is a serious problem...

>

>Weert weert. Looks like he wasn't going to be there anyway.

>

>On 5/11/15, 10:01 AM, "Deepak Bhargava" <dbhargava@communitychange.org>
>wrote:

>

>>Hi John,

>>

>>I'm where Heather is on this. I think the Mayor is among the very >>most important leaders we have in the progressive movement. But I'm >>also going to need to not have my name associated with the events >>tomorrow (I can't make it in any case due to a conflict). I'm glad to >>help think through how to repair this on the other side of the event.
>>I don't doubt your intentions or the Mayor's intentions, and I'm sure >>there's a path back.

>>

>>deepak

>>

>>

>

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Fw:
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 10:43:28 AM

Fyi

-----Original Message-----

To: Van Jones
Subject: Re:
Sent: May 11, 2015 10:44 AM

Will work out a time to call, Van. A very busy day, but I will call you -- most likely between 2-3pm. Will confirm in advance

-----Original Message-----

From: Van Jones
Cc: Invalidaddress
Subject:
Sent: May 11, 2015 9:56 AM

Mr. Mayor:

Sorry to be out of touch this Mother's Day weekend.

I am happy to report that we had a successful concert in Baltimore last night with Prince and other celebrities. That city deserved a moment of peace and healing, and Prince delivered.

With our #YesWeCode, #cut50 and Green For All initiatives, we at the Dream Corps are working around the clock in many cities to avoid the kinds of explosions that rocked Ferguson and Baltimore. It is both demanding and exhausting, but it is the work of our time.

I would like to speak with you today, so that we can resolve the outstanding issues before tomorrow. On the eve of such an important day, I know your time is precious. But given that my name is already so publicly associated with this initiative, I hope you will make room for me. So I am thanking you, in advance.

What time works best for you? Van [REDACTED]

Sent from my iPhone (TM)

On May 8, 2015, at 6:38 PM, Van Jones <vanjones68@dreamcorps.us> wrote:

I will work with your team to find a good time tomorrow.

I apologize for not tracking the documents; we are putting together this Prince concert on Sunday, and I have been been consumed with that and other Baltimore-related issues.

But I am not the only black leader who will be disappointed to see the key economic issue that is crushing our dreams omitted from a Bill DiBlasio document.

Women's, students' and immigrants' economic issues are rightfully included. But not the economic issue that has propelled the #BlackLivesMatter onto the global stage?

Why not include a simple bullet point on Families saying: "Invest in "schools not jails" -- and give people coming home from prison a second chance."

No economic vision that fails to address the mass incarceration crisis can be called progressive.

Everyone from Cory Booker to the Koch Brothers (who are also not running for higher office) is embracing this cause. Even Hillary Clinton and Rand Paul!

You are the populist leader of the movement for economic justice. If YOU sideline or marginalize overly-incarcerated pop

From: John Del Cecato
To: Williams, Dominic
Subject: FW: WaPo: TPP/Warren/Obama
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 10:58:23 AM

This is the worst-case line of questioning that POTUS could throw at MBDB - but I don't think he will

From: <Walzak>, Phil <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 9:16 AM
To: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Rebecca Katz (hilltoppublicsolutions.com)" <rkatz@hilltoppublicsolutions.com>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: WaPo: TPP/Warren/Obama

Elizabeth Warren fires back at Obama: Here's what they're really fighting about

In an interview with Yahoo News that ran over the weekend, President Obama intensified his push-back against Elizabeth Warren and other critics of the massive Trans-Pacific Partnership trade deal, flatly declaring that Warren is “absolutely wrong.” That came after a speech Obama delivered at Nike headquarters, in which he continued making an expansive case for the deal as a plus for American workers — and not the massive giveaway to huge international corporations that critics fear.

This week, the Senate will vote on whether to grant Obama “fast track” authority to negotiate the TPP agreement, which involves a dozen countries around the Pacific and could impact 40 percent of U.S. trade.

If the “fast track” framework passes, Congress would hold only an up-or-down vote on the TPP once it is finalized, without amendments. But Congress could also repeal that fast track authority if the TPP is not to its liking, and try to push changes to it, before any final vote.

Warren has previously claimed that the TPP's controversial Investor-State Dispute Settlement provision, or ISDS, could undermine or chill public interest regulations in the U.S. and other participating countries, and could even undercut Dodd Frank financial reform, one of Obama's signature achievements. The ISDS is designed to create a neutral international arbitration mechanism that creates a stable legal environment, facilitating investments in countries where investors might fear unfair legal treatment by foreign governments. Obama has strongly rejected Warren's arguments in the interview with Yahoo and elsewhere.

I spoke to Senator Warren about their disagreements. A lightly edited and condensed transcript follows.

THE PLUM LINE: What's your response to the latest from President Obama?

SENATOR WARREN: The president said in his Nike speech that he's confident that when people read the agreement for themselves, that they'll see it's a great deal. But the president won't actually let people read the agreement for themselves. It's classified.

PLUM LINE: But don't you get 60 days to review it after the deal is finalized, with the authority to revoke fast track?

WARREN: The president has committed only to letting the public see this deal after Congress votes to authorize fast track. At that point it will be impossible for us to amend the agreement or to block any part of it without tanking the whole TPP. The TPP is basically done. If the president is so confident it's a good deal, he should declassify the text and let people see it before asking Congress to tie its hands on fixing it.

PLUM LINE: Doesn't the current framework allow for the revocation of fast track authority?

WARREN: The whole point about fast track is to grease the skids so that 51 votes will get it through...it takes a majority to get rid of [fast track].

PLUM LINE: The push-back from the administration is that the ISDS will be written in such a way that there is no authority to override Congressional [and other countries'] regulations.

WARREN: If the president has changed ISDS to solve the problem, then the text should be released so that legal experts can look at it.

PLUM LINE: Is there a scenario under which ISDS could be written the way he says it is being written?

WARREN: I've sat with many legal scholars to talk about this issue, and I have not seen a draft that would do what the president says he has already accomplished....Hillary Clinton in her book raised concerns about precisely this issue. Just last week, some of the top legal and economic minds in this country, including the president's mentor from Harvard, Laurence Tribe, and Nobel-prize-winning economist Joe Stiglitz, raised exactly this concern.

PLUM LINE: Is it theoretically possible to write ISDS in a way that precludes it from overriding regulation?

WARREN: It doesn't directly tell countries to repeal regulations. It imposes a financial penalty, which has caused countries to change their regulations...[ISDS mechanisms] never had the authority to override regulations. What they had was the authority to impose a monetary penalty directly against the government and its taxpayers. That's the point at which governments have backed up and said, "we can't afford this, we'll just change the law."

PLUM LINE: You can't envision even in theory a way to structure ISDS that would assuage your concerns?

WARREN: Once a group of independent arbiters, whose decisions cannot be appealed, can issue a money judgment of any size, then the ISDS problem arises....Here's what you could do. If corporations had to go through the same procedures that anyone else has to go through to get the trade deal enforced, then the problem wouldn't exist.

Now, if a labor union says, 'Vietnam promised not to work people for a couple of dollars a day, and to raise working conditions, and then failed to do it,' they have to get the U.S. government, through the trade rules, to go to Vietnam and prosecute the case. If corporations had to do the same thing, then it would be a level playing field...ISDS gives a special break to giant corporations, a break that nobody else gets.

PLUM LINE: What you're arguing is that six years of fast track, plus ISDS, could ultimately result in the weakening of financial regulations? You're not saying ISDS itself would do that?

WARREN: Absolutely right...six years means that whatever the Obama administration has committed to won't bind the next president. If that president wants to negotiate a trade deal that undercuts Dodd Frank, it will be very hard to stop it.

PLUM LINE: Couldn't a Republican president simply go straight at Dodd Frank? Would this be any easier than that?

WARREN: Absolutely. Because trade will be fast tracked for six years....A direct run at Dodd Frank potentially takes 60 votes in the U.S. Senate. But doing it through trade authority needs to be done with 51 votes.

PLUM LINE: But wouldn't that require a direct change to U.S. legislation?

WARREN: It's possible to punch holes in Dodd Frank without directly repealing it. For example, harmonization of the capital standards and leverage ratios could be adjusted to help the big banks without ever directly contradicting Dodd Frank. But the effects of Dodd Frank would be severely undercut.

PLUM LINE: Is there no scenario under which you ultimately support TPP?

WARREN: Trade deals matter...I am worried about key parts of this trade agreement. I would like to see changes. I believe in trade.

I understand that we want to be a nation that trades, that trade creates many benefits for us. But only if done on terms that strengthen the American economy and American worker. I should say the American family, because that's what this is really about.

From: Hayley Prim
To: Nisha Anand
Cc: John Del Cecato; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Van <--> BDB call
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 11:06:07 AM

+ Elana who can help.

On Mon, May 11, 2015 at 11:02 AM, Nisha Anand <nisha@dreamcorps.us> wrote:
Quick update:

Van reached out to the Mayor directly via email and he said he would most likely be able to call Van between 2-3pm.

Can you put me in touch with the right person to confirm the call?

Thanks,
Nisha

On Mon, May 11, 2015 at 7:44 AM, Nisha Anand <nisha@dreamcorps.us> wrote:

Hi Team,

Van needs to speak with the Mayor again today. How can I make this happen?

Van has to be on air for 15 minutes at 11:45 and again at 7pm. Other than that he is pretty flexible.

Thanks again for making the call happen over the weekend. Also, feel free to put me in touch with his schedulers.

Thanks,
Nisha

On May 8, 2015 4:45 PM, "Nisha Anand" <nisha@dreamcorps.us> wrote:

Thanks Hayley,

I just spoke with Van. Saturday is the only day that is going to work for him!!! I wasn't aware of the full Prince schedule yet.

Let me know what we can do. I know the call is very important to Van.

Thanks,

Nisha

On Fri, May 8, 2015 at 4:22 PM, Hayley Prim <hprim@hilltoppublicsolutions.com> wrote:

Let me check-- will be back in touch.

On Friday, May 8, 2015, Nisha Anand <nisha@dreamcorps.us> wrote:
He is in Baltimore for Prince's benefit concert on Sunday. But we have a few options:

Are there any times on Saturday that might be possible? He can really carve out any time before his red eye flight. Tomorrow would be our preference, certainly.

On Sunday, he could get on a call between 9am-1pm ET. What does the Mayor's schedule look like then?

Thanks for such a quick response.

Nisha

On Fri, May 8, 2015 at 4:12 PM, Hayley Prim
<hprim@hilltoppublicsolutions.com> wrote:

Tomorrow morning might be tough, but I think we could get this scheduled on Sunday. Do you know what his availability is then?

On Friday, May 8, 2015, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
Hayley, can you help make that happen?

From: Nisha Anand <nisha@dreamcorps.us>
Date: Friday, May 8, 2015 at 7:06 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Hayley Prim
<hprim@hilltoppublicsolutions.com>
Subject: Van <--> BDB call

Hi John,

Van asked me to set up a call with him and Mayor De Blasio for tomorrow morning. Who from your team can I work with to get this set up?

We are on West Coast time - early our time would work for Van.

Thanks,
Nisha

--

Nisha Anand
Director of External Relations
The Office of Van Jones, President
#YesWeCode | #cut50
510-213-0968

web | youtube | facebook | twitter

--
Hayley Prim
Hilltop Public Solutions
[REDACTED]

--
Nisha Anand
Director of External Relations
The Office of Van Jones, President
#YesWeCode | #cut50
510-213-0968

web | youtube | facebook | twitter

--
Hayley Prim
Hilltop Public Solutions
[REDACTED]

--
Nisha Anand
Director of External Relations
The Office of Van Jones, President
#YesWeCode | #cut50
510-213-0968

web | youtube | facebook | twitter

--
Nisha Anand
Director of External Relations
The Office of Van Jones, President
#YesWeCode | #cut50
510-213-0968

web | youtube | facebook | twitter

--
Hayley Prim

From: Leopold, Elana
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: [REDACTED]
Subject: Need Stieglitz exec summary
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 11:20:33 AM

And full report please

Sent from my iPhone

From: John Del Cecato
To: Leopold, Elana
Cc: Hayley Prim; Aaron PickrellEmail
Subject: FW: FINAL Rewriting the Rules
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 11:34:01 AM
Attachments: Rewriting the Rules Report Final.pdf

Hot off the presses! Unfort you're going to have to print it out for him

From: David Palmer <dpalmer@rooseveltinstitute.org>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 11:04 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Aaron PickrellEmail <>
Subject: FINAL Rewriting the Rules

John & Aaron,

Final attached. EMBARGOED until 9am Tuesday. Thanks.

Are you guys coming down for this?

Thanks again for everyhing.

Best,

Dave

— — —
Dave Palmer
VP & Nat'l Director, Four Freedoms Center
Roosevelt Institute
c: 917.482.7251

REWRITING THE RULES OF THE AMERICAN ECONOMY

AN AGENDA FOR GROWTH AND SHARED PROSPERITY

A REPORT BY JOSEPH E. STIGLITZ
CHIEF ECONOMIST, ROOSEVELT INSTITUTE

Until economic and social rules work for all Americans, they're not working. Inspired by the legacy of Franklin and Eleanor, the Roosevelt Institute reimagines the rules to create a nation where everyone enjoys a fair share of our collective prosperity.

We are a 21st century think tank bringing together multiple generations of thinkers and leaders to help drive key economic and social debates and have local and national impact.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY 7

INTRODUCTION 11

THE CURRENT RULES 23

MORE MARKET POWER, LESS COMPETITION	24
THE GROWTH OF THE FINANCIAL SECTOR	28
THE 'SHAREHOLDER REVOLUTION,' THE RISE OF CEO PAY, AND THE SQUEEZING OF WORKERS	33
LOWER TAXES FOR THE WEALTHY	36
THE END OF FULL-Employment Monetary Policy	40
THE STIFLING OF WORKER VOICE	43
THE SINKING FLOOR OF LABOR STANDARDS	46
RACIAL DISCRIMINATION	49

REWRITING THE RULES 57

MAKE MARKETS COMPETITIVE	58
FIX THE FINANCIAL SECTOR	62
INCENTIVIZE LONG-TERM BUSINESS GROWTH	68
REBALANCE THE TAX AND TRANSFER SYSTEM	70
MAKE FULL EMPLOYMENT THE GOAL	73
EMPOWER WORKERS	77
EXPAND ACCESS TO LABOR MARKETS AND OPPORTUNITIES FOR ADVANCEMENT	80
EXPAND ECONOMIC SECURITY AND OPPORTUNITY	84

APPENDIX:
OVERVIEW OF RECENT INEQUALITY TRENDS 93

ENDNOTES 100

This paper is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial 4.0 International License.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This report was authored by

Joseph E. St g tz,
Chief Economist & Senior Fellow,
Roosevelt Institute

with coauthors (in alphabetical order)

- » Ne Abernathy, Roosevelt Institute
- » Adam Hersh, Roosevelt Institute
- » Susan Homberg, Roosevelt Institute
- » Mike Koncza, Roosevelt Institute and research assistant

- » Eric Harr s Bernste n, Roosevelt Institute and with contributions from (in alphabetical order)

- » Caro B nder, University of California Berkeley
- » Andrea F ynn, Roosevelt Institute
- » Vo etta Kuzmova, Columbia University
- » T m Pr ce, Roosevelt Institute
- » Mark Ste zner, University of Massachusetts Amherst
- » Anastas a W son, University of Massachusetts Amherst

Joseph Stiglitz and the Roosevelt Institute would like to acknowledge the following people (in alphabetical order) for their input and/or participation in convenings that helped to inform this work. This is not a list of endorsers, and mistakes are the authors' alone.

Organizations are listed for affiliation purposes only.

- » Axe Aubrun, Topos Partnership
- » Dean Baker, Center for Economic Policy and Research
- » Mark Barenberg, Columbia University School of Law
- » Craig Becker, AFL-CIO
- » Suzanne Berger, MIT
- » Jared Bernstein, Center on Budget and Policy Priorities
- » Josh B vens, Economic Policy Institute
- » Kate B ack, American Women
- » Raphael Bost c, University of Southern California Price School
- » Heather Boushey, Washington Center for Equitable Growth
- » Beth Ann Bov no, Standard & Poor's
- » Ju a Bow ng, Brennan Center for Justice
- » E en Bravo, Family Values @ Work Consortium
- » Dav d Card, University of California Berkeley
- » Frank C emente, Americans for Tax Fairness
- » M chae Cragg, The Brattle Group
- » She don Danz ger, Russell Sage Foundation
- » M ke Darner, Congressional Progressive Caucus
- » Xaver de Souza Br ggs, Ford Foundation
- » Brad DeLong, University of California Berkeley
- » Dav d desJard ns, Consultant and Investor
- » Geert Dhondt, John Jay College of Criminal Justice
- » L sa Donner, Americans for Financial Reform
- » Steven Fazzar , Washington University in St. Louis
- » Amanda F scher, Office of Representative Maxine Waters
- » Sarah F esch F nk, National Partnership for Women and Families
- » Nancy Fob re, University of Massachusetts Amherst
- » Dan e Ge don, Consultant

- » R chard G bert, University of California Berkeley
- » M che e Ho der, John Jay College of Criminal Justice
- » O ver Govannon , Bard College
- » Stanley Greenberg, Greenberg Quinlan Rosner Research
- » Robert Greenste n, Center on Budget and Policy Priorities
- » Mart n Guzman, Columbia University
- » Jody Heymann, University of California Los Angeles
- » Bart Hob jn, Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco
- » Matt Ho amby, Wyss Foundation
- » Chye-Ch ng Huang, Center on Budget and Policy Priorities
- » Tay or Jo senberg, Roosevelt Institute
- » Arun vatury, SEIU
- » E zabeth Jacobs, Washington Center for Equitable Growth
- » S mon Johnson, MIT Sloan School
- » anna Kachor s, MacArthur Foundation
- » Ju e Kasher, Make it Work Campaign
- » Stephan e Ke ton, U.S. Senate Budget Committee
- » R chard K rsch, Roosevelt Institute
- » Anna Lefer Kuhn, Arca Foundation
- » Mark Lev nson, SEIU
- » Tara Magner, MacArthur Foundation
- » Brad M er, Roosevelt Institute
- » Larry M she , Economic Policy Institute
- » Markos Zún ga Mou tsas, DailyKos
- » Marcus Mrowka, Roosevelt Institute
- » Jess ca Gordon Nembhard, John Jay College of Criminal Justice
- » Dave Pa mer, Roosevelt Institute
- » Manue Pastor, University of Southern California
- » Aaron P ckre , Remington Road Group, on behalf of NYC Mayor Bill de Blasio
- » Ka en Pruss, Office of Martin O'Malley
- » Robert Re ch, University of California Berkeley
- » Rashad Rob nson, Color of Change
- » Chr st na Romer, University of California

- » Berkeley Emmaneu Saez, University of California
- » A mee Santos-Lyons, Western States Center
- » Steve Savner, Center for Community Change
- » John Schm tt, Center for Economic and Policy Research
- » Dan Schwer n, Office of Hillary Rodham Clinton
- » Adr anne Shropsh re, Black Civic Engagement Fund
- » Zach S k, Silk Strategic
- » Damon S vers, AFL-CIO
- » Graham Steee, U.S. Senate Banking Committee
- » Lynn Stout, Cornell University Law School
- » Dor an Warren, Roosevelt Institute
- » Fe ca Wong, Roosevelt Institute
- » Dav d Woo ner, Roosevelt Institute

Special thanks to Roosevelt staff, initiative for Policy Dialogue staff, and consultants for their support and contributions: Hannah Assad , Aman Banerj , Johanna Bonew tz, Lyd a Bowers, Brenna Conway, Samantha Dz, Renée F dz, Joe e Gamb e, Kathryn Greenberg, Laur e gmac o, J am ng Ju, Eamon K rcher-A en, Gabr e Matthews, Joe McManus, Came a Ph ps, Marybeth Se tz-Brown, L z Ssson, A an Sm th, Kev n Stump, A exandra Tempus, and Patr ck Watson.

This report was made possible with generous support from the Ford Foundation, the MacArthur Foundation, and Bernard L. Schwartz.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Inequality is not inevitable: it is a choice we make with the rules we create to structure our economy. Over the last 35 years, America's policy choices have been grounded in false assumptions, and the result is a weakened economy in which most Americans struggle to achieve or maintain a middle-class lifestyle while a small percentage enjoy an increasingly large share of the nation's wealth. Though these lived experiences and personal challenges are important, they are only the tip of the iceberg that is the crisis of slow income growth and rising inequality. To fully understand the scope of the problem, we must also examine the array of laws and policies that lie beneath the surface—the rules that determine the balance of power between public and private, employers and workers, innovation and shared growth, and all the other interests that make up the modern economy.

Given the scale and interconnected nature of the issues we face, a tentative, piecemeal response will not suffice. Instead, this report lays out both a new framework for understanding the current structure of our economy and a comprehensive policy agenda that rewrites the rules to promote stronger growth and broadly shared prosperity.

The United States bills itself as the land of opportunity, a place where anyone can achieve success and a better life through hard work and determination. But in fact, the U.S. today lags behind most other developed nations in measures of inequality and economic mobility. For decades, wages have stagnated for the majority of workers while economic gains have disproportionately gone to the top 1 percent. Good jobs that provide access to the middle class are increasingly scarce, while essentials like education, housing, and health care are growing ever more expensive. Deeply rooted structural discrimination continues to hold down women and people of color, and more than one-fifth of all American children now live in poverty, meaning that these trends are on track to become even worse in the future. To solve these problems, we must better understand the causes of today's

Dominant economic frameworks over the past 35 years—like “trickle-down” economics, and the idea that markets work perfectly on their own—paved the way for an onslaught of policies that decimated America's middle class. This paper presents an evidence-backed alternative framework:

- ▶ Markets are shaped by laws, regulations, and institutions. Rules matter.
- ▶ The rules determine how fast the economy grows, and who shares in the benefits of that prosperity.
- ▶ Concentrated wealth can hurt economic performance. Under the right rules, shared prosperity and strong economic performance reinforce each other. There is no trade-off.
- ▶ A tentative, piecemeal policy response to help the neediest will not suffice. We must rewrite the rules of the economy with a focus on restoring a balance of power between the competing interests that make up the modern economy.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

inequality, and traditional economics provides little guidance.

For decades, economists have claimed that there is a tradeoff between inequality and economic performance; in other words, that we can only promote greater equality by sacrificing growth. Further, they have argued that overarching trends including globalization and technological progress make increased inequality inevitable. Their answer, then, is not to redistribute wealth to those at the bottom but to implement policies that direct more income to those at the top—the true drivers of the economy.

Since the late 1970s, U.S. policymakers have tailored the rules to suit this old economic model. As a result, we have a tax system that raises insufficient revenue and encourages the pursuit of short term gains over long term investment; weak and unenforced regulation of corporations; a de facto public safety net for too big to fail financial institutions; a dwindling support system for workers and families; and a reorientation of monetary and fiscal policy to promote wealth rather than full employment. Rather than strengthening the economy, these choices have led to lower growth, repeated downturns including the worst crisis since the Great Depression, the shrinking of the middle class, and increased concentration of wealth at the top. It's time for something different.

Our economy is a large and complex system, and in order to solve the problems with that system, we must aim to fix the economy as a whole. The financial crisis of 2008 and the Great Recession that followed exposed the inadequacy of the old economic models; the new research and thinking that has emerged as a result suggests that equality and economic performance are in fact complementary rather than opposing forces. No more false choices: changing course won't be easy in the current environment, but we can choose to fix the rules structuring our system. By doing so, we can restore the balance between government, business, and labor to create an economy that works for everyone. Building on the innovative legacy of the New Deal, this report describes a far reaching, two fold agenda to tame the growth of wealth among the top 1 percent and establish rules and institutions that ensure security and opportunity for the middle class. Highlights of this agenda include:

TAMING THE TOP

FIX THE FINANCIAL SECTOR

- ▶ End “too big to fail” by imposing additional capital surcharges on systemically risky financial institutions and breaking up firms that cannot produce credible living wills.
- ▶ Better regulate the shadow banking sector. Bring greater transparency to all financial markets by requiring all alternative asset managers to publicly disclose holdings, returns, and fee structures.
- ▶ Reduce credit and debit card fees through improved regulation of card providers and enhanced competition.
- ▶ Enforce existing rules with stricter penalties for companies and corporate officials that break the law.
- ▶ Reform Federal Reserve governance to reduce conflicts of interest and institute more open and accountable elections.

INCENTIVIZE LONG-TERM BUSINESS GROWTH

- ▶ Restructure CEO pay by closing the performance pay tax loophole and increasing transparency on the size of compensation packages relative to performance and median worker pay and on the dilution as a result of grants of stock options.
- ▶ Enact a financial transaction tax to reduce short term trading and encourage more productive long term investment.
- ▶ Empower long term stakeholders through the tax code, the use of so called “loyalty shares,” and greater accountability for managers of retirement funds.

MAKE MARKETS COMPETITIVE

- ▶ Restore balance to intellectual property rights to encourage innovation and entrepreneurship.

- ▶ Restore balance to global trade agreements by ensuring investor protections are not prioritized above protections on the environment and labor, and increasing transparency in the negotiation process.
- ▶ Provide health care cost controls by allowing government bargaining.
- ▶ Expand a variant of chapter 11 bankruptcy to homeowners and student borrowers.

REBALANCE THE TAX AND TRANSFER SYSTEM

- ▶ Raise the top marginal rate by converting all reductions to tax credits and limiting the use of credits.
- ▶ Raise taxes on capital gains and dividends. Encourage U.S. investment by taxing corporations on global income.
- ▶ Tax undesirable behavior such as short term trading or polluting and eliminate corporate welfare and other tax expenditures that foster inefficiency and inequality.

GROWING THE MIDDLE

MAKE FULL EMPLOYMENT THE GOAL

- ▶ Reform monetary policy to give higher priority to full employment.
- ▶ Reinvalidate public investment to lay the foundation for long term economic performance and job growth, including by investing in large scale infrastructure renovation: a 10 year campaign to make the U.S. a world leader in innovation, manufacturing, and obs.
- ▶ Invest in large scale infrastructure renovation with a 10 year campaign to make the U.S. a world infrastructure innovation, manufacturing, and obs leader.
- ▶ Expand public transportation to promote equal access to obs and opportunity.

EMPOWER WORKERS

- ▶ Strengthen the right to bargain by easing legal barriers to unionization, imposing stricter

- penalties on illegal anti union intimidation tactics, and amending laws to reflect the changing workplace.
- ▶ Have government set the standards by attaching strong pro worker stipulations to its contracts and development subsidies.
- ▶ Increase funding for enforcement and raise penalties for violating labor standards.
- ▶ Raise the nationwide minimum wage and increase the salary threshold for overtime pay.

EXPAND ACCESS TO LABOR MARKETS AND OPPORTUNITIES FOR ADVANCEMENT

- ▶ Reform the criminal justice system to reduce incarceration rates and related financial burdens for the poor.
- ▶ Reform immigration law to provide a pathway to citizenship for undocumented workers.
- ▶ Legislate universal paid sick and family leave.
- ▶ Subsidize child care to benefit children and improve women's workforce participation.
- ▶ Promote pay equity and eliminate legal obstacles that prevent employees from sharing salary information.
- ▶ Protect women's access to reproductive health services.

EXPAND ECONOMIC SECURITY AND OPPORTUNITY

- ▶ Invest in young children through child benefits, early education, and universal pre K.
- ▶ Increase access to higher education by reforming tuition financing, restoring protections to student loans, and adopting universal income based repayment.
- ▶ Make health care affordable and universal by opening Medicare to all.
- ▶ Expand access to banking services through a postal savings bank.
- ▶ Create a public option for the supply of mortgages.
- ▶ Expand Social Security with a supplemental public investment program modeled on private Individual Retirement Accounts, and raise the payroll cap to increase revenue.

INTRODUCTION

The American economy no longer works for most Americans. We pride ourselves on being the land of opportunity and creating the first middle-class society, yet profound and largely overlooked changes have put the middle-class life increasingly out of reach for the majority of Americans. At the same time, we have enabled a small percentage of the population to take home the lion's share of economic gains.

The rapidly rising inequality in the United States over the past generation disturbs and baffles economists and politicians because it is unlike anything our economic models predict or our experience of the mid-20th century led us to expect.

What is causing this dysfunction? Economists have gone back to textbook models and examined reams of data to try to understand what is happening. Some point to technological change or globalization. Some posit that government has shackled the free enterprise system and hobbled business. Some say that our economy is simply rewarding the risk takers and job creators who have earned the riches coming their way. None of these arguments gets it right. This report, which sets out a new framework for understanding and addressing current economic trends, makes the following points:

- ▶ Skyrocketing incomes for the 1 percent and stagnating wages for everyone else are not independent phenomena, but rather two symptoms of an impaired economy that rewards gaming the system more than it does hard work and investment.
- ▶ As America has created more inequality than other advanced countries, opportunity has also been undermined. The American dream increasingly appears to be a myth, and this should not come as a surprise: economies with high levels of income inequality and wealth inequality tend to have low levels of equality of opportunity.
- ▶ The roots of this dysfunction lie deep in the rules and power dynamics that have prioritized corporate power and short-term gains at the expense of long-term innovation and growth.

- ▶ The outcomes shaped by these rules and power dynamics do not make the economy stronger; indeed, many make it weaker.
- ▶ A minimalist agenda that treats only the worst consequences of inequality will not rewrite the rules and restructure the power dynamics that are driving stagnating wages and sputtering growth.
- ▶ We can rewrite the rules that shape our economy to improve prospects for more Americans while also enhancing economic performance.
- ▶ The effects of the growth of inequality over the past third of a century won't be undone overnight, and there are no silver bullets. However, there are policies that can once again put the sought-after but increasingly unattainable middle-class lifestyle within the grasp of most Americans.

With these points in mind, we need to think through what the government does and does not do, with a renewed focus on how each affects inequality. Instead of taking a minimalist approach, we have to tackle the rules and power dynamics that shape our daily lives.

We must understand that reducing inequality is not just a matter of redistribution. Economic policies affect the distribution of income both before and after taxes and transfers. The tax system, for instance, may encourage some inequality-generating activities at the expense of others. As we shall see, this is not just a theoretical possibility; it describes what has happened in the United States.

Rules are the regulatory and legal frameworks that make up the economy. Like those affecting property ownership, corporate format, labor law, copyright, trust, monetary, tax, and expenditure policy, and other economic structures. They also include the institutions that perpetuate the system, including structural discrimination—an entire system of rules, regulations, expenditure policies, and normative practices that exclude populations from the economy and economic opportunity.¹ Unequal socio-economic outcomes for women and people of color are rooted in this kind of structural discrimination, in addition to other forms of bias.

In traditional analyses based on models of perfect markets, we often assume away the rules of the game. It is as if markets existed in a vacuum, structured by some natural law, and all that the economist needs to do to understand changes in the economy is to study the shapes of the demand and supply curves and the forces determining their shifts over time.

But few markets are perfectly competitive; therefore outcomes depend in part on market power, and rules affect this power. Bargaining power, for instance, determines who benefits the most from labor negotiations, and that power is affected by the strength of unions, the legal and economic environment, and how globalization is structured. In markets with imperfect competition, firms have their own form of market power: the power to set prices. Likewise, the political power of various groups determines their ability to have the rules of the market written and enforced in their favor.

Our challenge, then, is to rewrite the rules to work for everyone. To do so, we must relearn what we thought we knew about how modern economies work. We must also devise new policies to eliminate the distortions that pervade our financial sector, our corporate rules, our macroeconomic, monetary, tax, expenditure, and competition policies, our labor relations, and our political structures. It is important to engage all of these challenges simultaneously, since our economy is a system and these elements interact. This will not be easy; we must push to achieve these fundamental changes at a time when the American people have lost faith in their government's ability to act in service of the common good.

The problems we face today are in large part the result of economic decisions we made or failed to make beginning in the late 1970s. The changes occurring in our economy, politics, and society have been dramatic, and there is a corresponding sense of urgency in this report. We cannot afford to go forward with minor tweaks and hope that they do the trick. We know the answer: they will not, and the suffering that will occur in the meantime is unconscionable. And, as we explain, this is not just about the present, but the future. The policies of today are “baking in” the America of 2050: unless we change course, we will be a country with slower growth, ever more inequality, and ever less equality of opportunity.

Inequality has been a choice, and it is within our power to reverse it.

WHAT THE OLD MODELS GOT WRONG

The economic experiences of the last 35 years have pulled the rug out from under many of our traditional conceptions of economic theory and the trajectory of economic growth. When President Kennedy said that “a rising tide lifts all boats,” he gave voice to a theory of progress that had guided thinking in economics and policy for years.² In the 1950s Nobel laureate Simon Kuznets suggested that, while inequality would increase in the initial stages of any economy's development, it would eventually decrease as an economy became more advanced.³ While Kuznets' observation accurately described the dramatic decrease in inequality for several decades after the start of World War II, history since the 1970s contradicts his hypothesis.⁴ During the last few decades, the benefits of economic growth have disproportionately gone to the top 20 percent of the population while the share of national income going to the bottom 99 percent has fallen.⁴ Incomes, especially for men, have stagnated during this time.⁵ More urgently, between 2010 and 2013, even as the economy was supposed to be in a recovery, median wages fell further.⁶ We now know that developed economies can rise without lifting all boats.

1 Over the longer run, there could, of course, be either increases or decreases in the distribution of income as changes in the savings rate, population growth rate, and technology affect whether there is capital deepening, an increase in the ratio of capital to effective labor. However, as we argue, it is difficult for these factors to explain observed changes in inequality.

MARKET POWER

noun

1. The ability to set both the terms of market exchange and the rules that govern them.

Our economic world has been rocked as well by new understandings of the relationship between inequality and economic performance. In the past, this was typically viewed as a tradeoff: we could only have more equality at the cost of a reduction in economic performance. Arthur Okun, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under President Lyndon Johnson, once described the apparent inverse relationship between efficiency and equality as the “big tradeoff.”⁷ At that time the focus on achieving greater equality was redistribution (more progressive taxes and transfers). These, it was thought, would adversely affect incentives, and this would undermine economic performance. Thus, one could lessen the degree of inequality primarily Inequality has been a choice, and it is within our power to reverse it.

by sacrificing economic performance.⁸ But new evidence shows that nations can successfully combat inequality without harming, and perhaps even while promoting, economic performance.⁹

Since the late '70s, we have seen a decline in our growth rate, four significant economic downturns including the worst since the Great Depression and an increasing share of the limited growth that has occurred going to the top, with stagnant incomes for many and a hollowing out of the middle class. Evidently, trickle down economics increasing incomes at the top in the hope that everyone will benefit has not worked. The new view is that trickle up economics building out the economy from the middle is more likely to bring success; in other words, equality and economic performance are complements, not substitutes.

The demise of these tenets of conventional wisdom has profound consequences. It tells us that we cannot take shared growth for granted, and that we do not need to circumscribe our efforts to promote shared growth simply out of fear that such efforts will necessarily damage economic performance. Recent research has identified the many channels through which greater inequality hurts economic performance, and why it is that higher GDP growth does not necessarily benefit large swaths of the population.¹⁰

This new view emphasizes that policies that focus only on the symptoms of our dysfunctional economy for instance, on remedying the worst extremes of inequality will not change the way today's economy is structured nor tackle the reasons that our economy seems to generate more inequality than the economies of any other advanced countries. The experience of the last 35 years, across many nations, suggests that rules of finance, corporate governance, and international trade all can be rewritten to promote growth and shared prosperity rather than channel more wealth and opportunity toward those who already have the most.

Textbook models trying to explain inequality focus on a simple theory: each individual receives returns commensurate with his or her social contributions. Differences in individuals' incomes are then related to differences in productivity, skills, and effort, and changes in the distribution are attributed, for instance, to changes in technology and to investments in human and physical capital. Therefore, some of the wage inequality that emerged in the latter part of the 20th century was attributed to "skill biased" technological change, the fact that changes in technology put a greater premium on certain skills, and that individuals with those skills did better than the rest. This explanation meant that there was a mismatch between the needs of the new technologies and our labor force. These were important insights, and certain policies followed: providing a larger proportion of the population with these skills would reduce inequality.

But there are serious deficiencies in these theories, as we will explain in an appendix. Skill biased technological change, for example, cannot explain why the premium to higher education has flattened over the past decade, or why highly skilled workers have had to move into lower skilled obs. Nor can it explain the magnitude of the rise of pay at the top including CEOs and those in the financial sector or the yawning gap between the growth in productivity of workers as a whole and average wages. Normally, wages and productivity growth move in tandem. But for the last third of a century this has not been true.

Of course, inequality and unequal growth are complex phenomena caused by a number of factors. Technology, globalization, shifting demographics, and other macro forces are important, and parsing out the relative contributions of different factors is not simple. But these forces are largely global in nature. If they are the primary drivers, all advanced countries should be similarly affected. But among OECD countries, the U.S. has higher levels of inequality than all but Mexico, Chile, and Turkey, so the explanation for the outcomes we see cannot lie solely in global factors. Moreover, not even the effects of global forces are out of our control. Their impact can be changed significantly by the policy decisions we make. Given the failings of the older models, we have an alternative explanation for the extreme inequality we see today.

AN EMERGING APPROACH: THE IMPORTANCE OF INSTITUTIONS AND CORRECTING STRUCTURAL IMBALANCE

Our institutional approach is based on two simple economic observations: rules matter and power matters. This approach began with a set of academic observations. Over the past four decades, economists have increasingly drawn attention to the many ways that the standard model, which assumes perfect information, perfect competition, perfect risk markets, and perfect rationality, fails to provide an adequate description of various markets in our economy. Researchers including myself, George Akerlof, Michael Spence, Jean Tirole, and others have won Nobel prizes for work on information asymmetries and imperfections, bargaining theory and imperfections of competition, behavioral economics, and institutional analysis. These works provide a whole new perspective on the functioning of labor, product, and financial markets, and essentially show that institutions and rules are required to force markets to behave competitively, for the benefit of all. And even when markets are competitive, there can be "market failures," important instances which government intervention is required to ensure efficient and socially desirable outcomes.

That theory has been substantiated by a number of real life events. The economic crisis of 2008 and the Great Recession that followed demonstrated that the promise of a deregulated market economy was empty. Only through concerted government action, in the form of an $800 billion bailout, were the banks and the market sustained.¹¹ Further, saving the financial system did not trickle down to ordinary mortgage holders or average workers, who lost over 4 million homes and whose real median income declined nearly 8 percent between 2007 and 2013.¹²

Our institutional approach is based on two simple economic observations: rules matter and power matters.

INTRODUCTION

In sum, while both the traditional and institutionalist economic approaches explain some of what has been going on, the latter theory, which focuses on structural factors, is increasingly compelling.

WEALTH AND INEQUALITY

Economists are developing a new set of theories in an effort to explain the profound imbalance we see in today's economy, in particular the rise in wealth relative to income. In Capital in the 21st Century, Thomas Piketty argues that $r > g$ meaning the return to capital is greater than the growth rate of the overall economy and that wealth grows faster than income as a result. This means that, if the return to capital does not decline (and he argues that it has not), increasing inequality is the inevitable consequence of capitalism's historical evolution. Piketty's contributions to the debate, and the data he amasses, are important. But we believe that $r > g$ is not quite the right explanation, or at least not the full explanation, for the runaway growth in wealth and income inequality at the top that Piketty so thoroughly documents.

One cannot either theoretically or empirically explain the growing gap between wealth and income as the result of steady accumulation of capital goods through savings out of ordinary income. Moreover, if an increase in the amount of productive capital were responsible for the increase in wealth, we should also have seen an increase in average wages and a decline in the return to capital. Neither of these has been observed.

Much of the increase in wealth is attributable to the increase in the value of fixed assets and not the reflection of an increase in productive value. The most obvious and widespread example is the massive rise in real estate values. If the value of real estate increases thanks only to the rising price of the property it sits upon and not to physical improvements, this does not lead to a more productive economy; no workers have been hired, no wages paid, no investments made. In economic terms this gain is simply a "land rent." Some of this increase in the property value is a natural consequence of urbanization, but much is due to the financialization of the economy, including the increased supply of credit that typically goes to those that already have wealth. Land rents are the most obvious source of rents in the economy, but economists have identified many others, including drug pricing, copyrights, and other forms of intellectual property.

The capitalized value of rents gives rise to wealth, and so if rents increase, so will wealth. If monopoly power increases, monopoly profits will increase, and so too will the value of the monopolies the measured wealth of the economy. But the productivity of the economy will decrease, and so too will the value of wages adjusted for inflation. Inequality will also increase.

Forthcoming theoretical work to be released by

FINANCIALIZATION

noun

1. The growth of the financial sector, its increased power over the real economy, the expansion of concentrated wealth, and the ways the values and practices of the financial sector have shaped the rest of society.

RENT-SEEKING

noun

1. The practice of obtaining wealth not through economic activity but by extracting it from others. For example, a monopoly overcharging for its products.

The Roosevelt Institute points out that there are many other examples of such "exploitation" rents, and that changes in the rules that structure the economy can lead and plausibly have led to an increase in these rents and their capitalized value. For instance, if the concentration of the banking system increases such that more banks are "too big to fail," the value of banks will increase, not because they will become more efficient, but because their monopoly power and the expected present discounted value of a government bailout will increase. In this analysis, we make a distinction between capital and wealth. Only an increase in the former necessarily encourages growth; therefore, the productive capacity of the economy may not be increasing in tandem with measured wealth. In fact, productive capacity may be falling even as wealth is increasing.⁴

To right the economic imbalance, to reduce inequality and promote healthy growth in the real economy, we must attack the sources of those rents.

This is not about the politics of envy. The evidence of the last 35 years and the lessons of stagnation and low wage recovery since the 2008 financial crisis show that we cannot prosper if our economic system does not create shared prosperity. This report is about how we can make our economy, our democracy, and our society work better for all Americans.

HOW WE GOT HERE

In the last 30 years, sometimes under the radar, our economy, politics, and society have shifted. Where there was once a balance of powers between the private sector, labor institutions, and government, we now have forces pulling us in the direction of greater inequality. This means weak demand and reduced growth. It also means less long term investment in education and research and development, and thus less innovation.

These forces ultimately undermine the American Dream, the belief that if you work hard and play by the rules you will succeed. Today, the life prospects of young Americans are determined largely by the income or education of their parents. We once stood out as a country that provided the greatest opportunity to succeed; now we stand out as one of the advanced economies that provide the least mobility.

This failure to provide a fair start and a good life for our children is of particular concern. The fact that in America today 22 percent of all children live in poverty including 39 percent of African American children and 32 percent of Latino children is not only a moral issue but an economic one.⁵ If we do not invest in our children, our workers, and our nation today, we will stay on track for slower growth, higher inequality, and less opportunity in the future.

Our economy was more balanced in the decades prior to 1980 and functioned remarkably well during the middle of the 20th century. Faced with the disaster of the Great Depression, Franklin D. Roosevelt put into place a series of macro policy changes to counteract the overwhelming and harmful effects of unregulated banks and stock markets. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation ensured the safety of bank deposits; the Glass-Steagall Act separated deposit-taking from investment activities, so that banks couldn't use federally insured money for high-risk speculation; the Securities and Exchange Commission enforced market and securities laws; and the National Labor Relations Act gave workers the right to bargain collectively. The combination created what John Kenneth Galbraith called "countervailing power" and enabled the country to avoid financial crisis for half a century.⁵ In this golden age of capitalism the country's economy grew faster than in any other era, and while incomes grew at the top, middle, and bottom, those at the bottom saw their incomes grow faster than those at the top.

Franklin D. Roosevelt signing the Glass-Steagall Act of 1933.

Of course, even in the golden age of capitalism, markets and the economy were not perfect. Systematic discrimination against women and people of color meant that large groups of Americans were shuttled into low-wage jobs, like domestic or janitorial work, that were not protected by unionization. African-Americans were excluded from higher education and home loan programs designed to provide opportunity to middle-income Americans.

Deprivations faced in one generation had consequences for later generations. Beginning in the 1950s, the civil rights movement fought for and made progress on desegregation, anti-discrimination, and voting access. Mobility increased during that generation, but these steps forward have not been enough. Progress has been met by obstacles, and mobility has stalled. In the 1980s, driven by supply-side economic theories developed during the previous decade, American policymakers began to deregulate.¹⁷ They also lowered taxes on top earners and capital gains, allegedly to encourage more work and savings. The premise was that lowering taxes would increase growth, tax revenues would increase, and all would benefit. The results were disappointing: the hoped-for supply side responses were not forthcoming, tax revenues fell, and we experienced lower growth and more instability in the subsequent decades.

The 1990s and 2000s brought other sweeping changes. In these years, the deregulated finance sector incentivized short-termism among corporations. Much of the growth we saw in the 1990s turned out to be unstable, built on asset bubbles—first the tech bubble, then the housing bubble. The "great moderation" turned out to be a phantasm: instead of new economic insights (for instance concerning the conduct of monetary policy) leading to a better-managed economy, we had more instability, slower growth, and more inequality.

At the same time, there were changes in technology and globalization, the closer integration of the countries of the world. These advances were supposed to increase standards of living, not pose a threat to middle-class life, and they might have done that had we managed them well. But the widely accepted premise was that unfettered markets would automatically make all of us better off, and that premise turned out to be woefully wrong. While globalization and technology brought

SHORT-TERMISM

noun

1. The post-1980s model of corporate governance that focuses on short-term profits and returns to shareholders as opposed to investment in long-term sustainability, innovation, and growth.

more interdependence to world markets, the lack of safeguards against a race to the bottom in labor costs meant significant job losses in the American economy and downward pressure on wages. Together with the increased financialization of the U.S. economy, these forces also contributed to the decline of the vertically integrated manufacturing or product-oriented firm.⁸ The result of all these factors is today's high-rent, high-exploitation, low-wage American economy.

Today many seeds of hope lie in the innovative revolutions of the 1990s and 2000s: the distributed technologies enabled by the Internet, the promises of nanotechnology, and the profound possibilities of biotechnology and personalized medicine. To date, we have seen growth in some fields, the makings of strong companies, and real fortunes built on the power of the Internet. But the most important economic question is whether these technologies can help us distribute more growth, opportunity, and well-being to more people. Can the Internet and its yet-untapped innovative potential become the 21st century equivalent of the 20th century's manufacturing sector for Americans across income levels? Or will it add to the high-rent economy we currently face? We have seen many benefits from web technology, but we haven't yet seen it drive broadly shared prosperity. Indeed, some new technologies may tend to lead to more concentration of income, wealth, and power.

This is our challenge: For the promise of innovation to be realized, we must first solve the legacy of problems left to us by 35 years of supply-side thinking and the corresponding set of rules that has reshaped all aspects of our economy and society.

OUR STORY OF TODAY'S ECONOMY

We have developed a 21st century American economy defined by low wages and high rents. Yet the rules and power dynamics embedded in today's economy are not always visible. Think of slow income growth and rising inequality as an iceberg:

- ▶ The visible tip of the iceberg is everyone's daily experience of inequality: small paychecks, insufficient benefits, and insecure futures.
- ▶ Just underneath the surface are the drivers of this lived experience. These are hard to see but vitally important: the laws and policies that structure the economy and create inequality. These include a tax system that raises insufficient revenue, discourages long-term investment, and rewards speculation and short-term gains; lax regulation and enforcement of rules to make corporations accountable; and the demise of rules and policies that support children and workers. At the base are the large global forces that underlie all modern economies—drivers like technology, globalization, and demographics. These are forces to be reckoned with, but even the biggest global trends, while clearly shapers of the economy, can be shaped and pushed toward better outcomes.

The tip of the iceberg is what we see and experience. It is the most important thing to voters and politicians; it is our daily lives. But it is carried along by a mass of market-structuring forces that determine the economic and political balance of power and create winners and losers. Just as the part of the iceberg that is below the surface sinks ships, this mass of rules is what is sinking the American middle class.

INTRODUCTION

Often policymakers, advocates, and the public focus only on interventions against the visible tip of the iceberg. In our political system, grand proposals to redistribute income to the most vulnerable and to curb the influence of the most powerful are reduced to modest policies like an earned income tax credit or transparency around executive pay. Further, some policymakers decry the value of any interventions, suggesting that the forces at the base of the iceberg are too momentous and overwhelming to control—that globalization and prejudice, climate change and technology are exogenous forces that policy cannot address. Had we curbed excesses in housing finance, this thinking goes, the financial sector would have found some other way of creating a bubble. If we curb one form of executive pay, companies will find more sophisticated routes to reward their CEOs.

This defeatist mentality concludes that the underlying forces of our economy can't be tackled. We disagree.

This defeatist mentality concludes the underlying forces of our economy can't be tackled. We disagree. There is little we can do if we don't take the laws, rules, and global forces head on. The premise of this report is that we can reshape the middle of the iceberg—the intermediating structures that determine how global forces manifest themselves.

This means that we cannot improve economic security and opportunity without tackling the technocratic realms of labor law, corporate governance, financial regulation, trade agreements, codified discrimination, monetary policy, and taxation.

The focus here on the rules of the economy and the power to set them isn't a call for the government to get out of the way. There is rarely an "out of the way" for the government.

THE TIP OF THE ICEBERG

DAILY EXPERIENCE OF INEQUALITY

- Jobs that don't pay enough to live on
- High living costs
- Deep anxiety

RULES THAT STRUCTURE OUR ECONOMY

- Financial regulation and corporate governance
- Tax structure
- International trade and finance agreements
- Macroeconomic policy
- Labor law and labor market access
- Structural discrimination

LARGE GLOBAL FORCES

- TECHNOLOGY
- GLOBALIZATION

Rules and institutions are the backdrop of the economy, and the ways we set these rules, and keep them up to date and enforce them, have consequences for everyone.

THE STRUCTURE OF THIS REPORT

If the economy is not functioning as it should or could, then we have available to us a much broader range of policy solutions than we typically tap. The increase in inequality and the decrease in equality of opportunity have reached the point at which individual fixes that target what we can see—fixes like modest increases in the minimum wage and reforms to education and educational opportunity—will not suffice. While important, they should be seen more as short-term palliatives, providing symptomatic relief. We need a far more comprehensive approach that results in improving the market distribution of income and true opportunity across generations. An essential part of this entails dealing with the outsized growth of the financial system and its effects on private-sector behavior and decision-making throughout the economy.

In this report we cover what we consider to be the essential drivers of inequality. In the following section, "The Current Rules," we describe how public policy decisions are at the root of rising inequality and increasing insecurity. The massive overhaul of the rules of the financial sector, corporate governance, and labor law in the 1980s and 1990s has resulted in poor outcomes. Changes to the goals of monetary and fiscal policy have prioritized wealth. Meanwhile, efforts to make good on the American promise of inclusion have stalled, and we have failed to dismantle structures of discrimination. All of the above are the result of deliberate policy choices made with the promise that they would enhance growth, but they have ultimately resulted in an economy that is more unequal and much weaker.

Growing inequality has reached a near-crisis level. This crisis, though, is different from the financial crisis of 2008, where the alternative to action appeared to be an immediate collapse in the economy. This is a subtler crisis, but the decisions we make now will determine the nature of our economy and our society for years to come. If we take the wrong path, we are locking in greater inequality and poorer economic performance. If we take the right path, we can not only produce immediate benefits—helping preserve the middle-class life to which so many Americans aspire—but also build toward a future economy with broadly shared growth. In the final section, "Rewriting the Rules," we discuss the policy solutions that are necessary for responding to this crisis, the reforms that are needed to our underlying economic structures, and the programs that could enable more Americans to live the life they have worked so hard to achieve.

Rules and institutions are the backdrop of the economy, and the ways we set these rules, and keep them up to date and enforce them, have consequences for everyone.

THE CURRENT RULES

Inequality has been a choice. Beginning in the 1970s, a wave of deliberate ideological, institutional, and legal changes began to reconfigure the marketplace. At the vanguard was deregulation, which, according to adherents, would loosen the constraints on the economy and free it to thrive. Next were much lower tax rates on top incomes so that money could flow to private savings and investment instead of the government. Third were cuts in spending on social welfare, to spur people to work. Get government out of the way and the creativity of the marketplace—and the ingenuity of the financial sector—would revitalize society.

Things didn't work out that way. First, tax revenues plummeted and deficits soared. Then we saw glimmers of the instability that would lie ahead—the financial crisis of 1989, which led to the economic recession in the early 1990s. Today, we can look back and see the toll of these “reforms”: the worst economic crisis in 80 years, slower growth than in the preceding 30 years, and an unbridled increase in inequality. We also now know that “deregulation” is, in fact, “reregulation”—that is, a new set of rules for governing the economy that favor a specific set of actors.

Understanding the trends of the past few decades has absorbed economists' attention in recent years. Today, labor force participation sits at a 37-year low.² While households had been saving, on average, less than 3 percent of income before the Great Recession, savings have increased following the recession—averaging 4.4 percent for the past two years—though not enough to offset lost wealth or to make much of a dent in household indebtedness.³ Investment has been weak.⁴ American corporations are sitting on trillions of dollars of cash, eschewing investment even though the effective corporate tax rate—the rate they actually pay on average—has fallen.⁵ All of this helps explain why the promised growth did not occur: the promised supply-side effects weren't real. The economic model was wrong.

In the years since the 1970s the rules of the game changed in ways that destroyed the balance of economic power achieved in the three decades after World War II. In this section we examine the turns that have taken us down this sad road, and we consider them in the light of a few lessons learned along the way:

- ▶ Fundamental changes in the rules of the economy have led to greater inequality, with the economy's overall performance being no better, and perhaps worse, as a result.
- ▶ In the private sector, finance has gone from serving the whole economy to serving itself. Corporations have gone from serving all of their stakeholders—workers, shareholders, and management—to serving only top management under the guise of enhancing “shareholder value.” And increasing the market power of a few firms in key sectors has meant that competition has less sway. The result: shortsighted behavior, underinvestment in jobs and the future, low growth, higher prices, and greater inequality.
- ▶ Our tax system encourages speculation rather than work, distorts the economy, and serves the interest of the 1 percent.
- ▶ In monetary and fiscal policy, focusing excessively on some threats—budget deficits and inflation—while ignoring the real threats to economic prosperity—growing inequality and underinvestment—has resulted in higher

- ▶ unemployment, more instability, and lower growth.
- ▶ Changes in labor market institutions, laws, regulations, and norms have weakened worker power and made it difficult for workers to countervail the excesses of corporate and market power. The result has been a growing gap between productivity and wages, perhaps the most striking aspect of American economic life in the past third of a century.
- ▶ These problems are exacerbated for those who suffer from discrimination and disadvantage. The market perpetuates the transmission of advantage across generations, but discrimination has precluded large populations from developing their own human capital and accumulating wealth.

This is a stark picture of a world gone wrong. But these have all been choices, meaning we can choose to do things differently. We will point toward a path forward in our final section.

“Deregulation” is, in fact, “reregulation”—that is, a new set of rules for governing the economy that favor a specific set of actors.

MORE MARKET POWER, LESS COMPETITION

- ▶ Competition is an essential feature of a successful economy, driving firms to be efficient and driving down prices. Competition is the power of market actors to tip economic and political outcomes in their favor.
- ▶ Significant parts of the U.S. economy have strayed far from this competitive idea, and market power is playing a larger role in areas vital to people's well-being and to the overall economy's performance.
- ▶ Changes in technology and globalization have played a role in this increase in market power. But so too have explicit policy choices made by government. In many cases, the government has chosen not to keep market power in check.
- ▶ Because such activities can decrease economic efficiency, reducing market power will support a more dynamic U.S. economy, not just a more equitable one.

Textbook economics posits a world in which no firm has power in the marketplace. With many firms competing, no single one has the power to raise prices and its own profits because customers can buy from any number of competitors. But in the real world market power relationships are an essential feature of our economy and are evident in numerous ways, in relationships between businesses and their customers, businesses and workers, and businesses and government.

The ability to wield power in the market is related to the degree to which markets operate in an open, transparent, competitive fashion versus the degree to which they are dominated by one or a small number of actors; how open or closed an industry is to entry by other firms; and the degree to which the same information is shared among all participants in the market. These characteristics of a market define a spectrum of situations along which an empowered party can exercise power to varying degrees over others—even when people exchange seemingly with free will.⁶ Power in the marketplace spans from the traditional “natural monopolies” we teach in Econ 101—energy, for example—to the more complicated cases where business scale and scope give a single firm, like Wal Mart, the power to set prices throughout the supply chain; or where a surplus of available workers in a community gives an employer the power to set wages. For shorthand, we take “monopoly” to mean the scope of such varied power relationships in the marketplace.

Why free markets have rules

Regulation to ensure the competitiveness of markets in the United States has a long history dating back to the Interstate Commerce Commission, created in 1887 as the first national industrial regulatory body, and the Sherman Antitrust Act of 1890, which prohibited certain mergers and anticompetitive business practices. The Sherman Act, together with the Federal Trade Commission Act and the Clayton Act, both passed in 1914, form the core of federal antitrust law. They describe unlawful business practices in fairly general terms, leaving it to the courts to decide which specific acts are illegal on a case-by-case basis.

Over time, the U.S. built a number of institutions to monitor anticompetitive practices and weigh challenges to monopoly behavior. But beginning in the 1970s, economic ideas in the field of competition and property rights law emerged from free market scholars who viewed antitrust regulation as antiquated and counterproductive in its effect on competition.⁷ Many key industries, including airlines, railroads, telecommunications, natural gas, and trucking, were deregulated from the 1970s through the 1990s. Legal interpretations in regulatory rulemaking and an accumulating body of case law further limited regulatory scope and opened the domain for market power to grow unchecked.⁸

Meanwhile, the government itself can vest businesses with market power, both by setting the rules of the marketplace and creating temporary intellectual property monopolies. Perhaps the most clear cut example of the way that policies can create market power is intellectual property rights, or IPRs—the government enforced monopoly on the right to profit from an innovation. Well being generated by innovation relies on two points: first, innovators need appropriate incentives and resources; second, innovations should be distributed widely throughout the population so that people benefit from technological advances. IPRs—patents and copyrights in theory provide incentives for innovators by offering monopoly returns from their innovations for a limited period of time. However, in the words of economists Michele Boldrin and David K. Levine, “there is no empirical evidence that [IPRs] serve to increase innovation and productivity.”⁹ Other research by Petra Moser examining the long run economic history of IPRs and innovation draws a similar conclusion.¹⁰ Part of the reason for this is that it is not just financial incentives that matter to innovators. Among the most important discoveries are those that are part of the advancement of science, from the discovery of DNA to the mathematical insights that led to the computer (the Turing machine), rather than those made for primarily financial gain. Strong IPRs, perversely, can actually impede innovation in the economy by limiting the spillover of knowledge critical to fueling additional innovations.

An innovation economy requires a balanced and differentiated intellectual property regime—combined with strong direct public support, especially for basic science and technology.

Though IPRs might not have much positive impact on innovation, they do have the effect of raising the prices paid to owners of intellectual properties (who often may not be the same people as those doing the innovating). Such IPRs effectively redistribute money from consumers to IPR owners not because the latter are any more innovative or productive, but because government affords them greater legal protection against market competition. Artificially raising prices has the effect of shutting some people out from enjoying the benefits of innovation. This is particularly disturbing in the case of medicines, where our poorly designed IPR system, combined with a poorly designed health care system, have condemned large numbers of people to unnecessary deaths and morbidities.²

An innovation economy requires a balanced and differentiated intellectual property regime combined with strong direct public support, especially for basic science and technology.

Over the years, our system has lost that balance.

Government policies also vest companies with market power through the ways in which the government buys goods and services from and sells public assets, such as mineral rights, to the private market. Procurement in the defense industry, especially under sole source contracting (as in the case of the multi billion dollar Halliburton contract at the beginning of the Iraq War) is a notorious system for giveaways to government contractors.³ Another is a provision in Medicare Part D expansion to cover part of the cost of outpatient prescription medicine, which prevented the government from using its bulk purchasing power to negotiate lower costs of medicines for senior citizens and people under 65 with certain disabilities.⁴ The restriction ensured that seniors would hand more of their fixed incomes to pharmaceutical and health insurance companies and raised the cost to taxpayers.

These new technologies are not the only sources of market power. There is a large literature on natural and artificially created barriers to entry and competition. In a fast moving, changing economy, there are likely to be information asymmetries, and these asymmetries can lead to less competitive markets. And markets can actually act in ways that increase these information asymmetries. As we will see below, the financial market, through its lack of transparency and complexity, has excelled at this.

New technologies mean new sources of market power

New technologies of information and interconnectivity transform not only the way we work and live, but also the power relationships between people throughout the supply chain.

Network externalities arise when an individual's benefit from using or doing something depends in part on the number of other people doing the same thing. For example, the value of joining a social networking application increases with the number of others choosing the same platform. Once these patterns are established, it becomes costly to join a different network, thus vesting the first to move into a space and attract a critical mass of joiners with substantial market powers.⁵

New economy technologies often combine network externalities with complementing economic characteristics of increasing returns to scale. This means that as production increases, the cost of producing additional units decreases, and in many such cases can reach a point of essentially zero cost for producing more. In other words, it costs essentially nothing for Google or Facebook to supply one additional advertisement to users or for Apple to supply one additional iTunes download. In such situations, competition will not be viable. Market power and monopoly profits may be especially large.

We also can see how companies like Uber, Air BnB, and Lending Club are innovating and disrupting the way that respectively labor, land, and capital markets have worked in the past. These innovations of network connectivity are in each case putting to work idle economic resources. As these and other companies engage currently monopolistic enterprises in new wave competition, this will certainly lead to greater overall welfare. But it will also raise more questions about how the gains will be distributed and how the rules that ensure fairness and conditions of work will be applied.

Globalization tilts the balance of power

Just as IPRs must balance the interests of innovators with the need for broadly dispersed innovation, so too must trade agreements balance the needs of an increasingly interconnected economy with the protection of communities, worker standards, and the environment. Our rules have not successfully balanced these forces. Our globalized world can bring new opportunities for gains for all, but also provides opportunities for large corporations to dominate sectors of the international market or to seek lowest common denominator labor, environmental, or tax laws.

We live in an increasingly globalized world where rules of trade and finance are important. The problem is that these rules are typically set in processes that are not transparent and democratic with those in the industry having greater say than consumers, workers, and other citizens who are also affected. It is easy to see how such rules can increase corporate profits at the expense of workers and the environment.

Rules that make it easier for goods produced abroad to enter the U.S., that make it safer for corporations to invest abroad, that provide tax advantages for investments abroad, that do not impose environmental and labor standards on goods made abroad—all of these tilt the balance against workers. They make a threat by a firm to move its production abroad if workers don't accept lower wages or poorer working conditions more credible.

When the interests of all parties are considered, rules can redress these imbalances—rules barring imports of products using child or prison labor, barring the use of wood from endangered forests, or barring goods produced with processes that violate other global social and environmental agreements. But we have not chosen to adopt these sorts of rules. Further, in some cases, the threat of globalization has been used as a basis for a race to the bottom. Before the 2008 crisis, the threat of globalization was used to argue for financial deregulation if we didn't deregulate, business would move elsewhere. We now know that we lost doubly in giving in to such threats: the economic damage caused by the deregulation in the crisis has been enormous, far greater than the short term gains of the few obs created here. And as we have seen, the changes foisted on us in this manner have undermined the long run performance of the economy and contributed greatly to our inequality.

We could have used our position as the largest economy in the world to set rules that helped all parties, in the U.S. and the rest of the world.

Consequences of market power for equity and efficiency

An increase in the market power of a firm shifts wealth from customers to the owners of those firms with market power. The decrease in the wealth of customers is not recorded in accountings of the economy's capital stock, while the increase of the value of firms is. The ranks of Forbes World's Billionaires are peppered with people who attained that position thanks to their monopoly power in finance, extractive industries, real estate, and privatized telecommunications.⁶

The market distortion associated with the exercise of market power diminishes social welfare. Besides creating inequalities, market rents have other distortionary effects on the economy and on the political system. First, rents directly decrease production from what it would be if the economy were organized optimally and such rents did not exist.⁷ Second, rents create incentives for allocating resources to unproductive rent seeking activities like excessive marketing and sales expenditures and lobbying; the bigger the rent, the greater the incentives for such activities.⁸ For example, in 2010 the health care industry spent $102.4 million lobbying against the Affordable Care Act, while the finance and real estate industries have spent billions lobbying against passage and implementation of the Dodd Frank financial reform law.⁹ Lastly, to the degree that firms engage in lobbying or some other political activity in order to create or preserve rents, it impacts our political system and the number of adverse outcomes in the economy and in other spheres of society. The original antitrust laws were motivated by the distortions to our political system as much as to our economic system.

But in order to see this impact play out, we need to look to specific markets. And one of the most dramatic examples is the growth of the financial sector, which we turn to next.

THE GROWTH OF THE FINANCIAL SECTOR

- ▶ The finance industry has shifted away from its essential function of allocating capital to productive uses and has moved toward predatory rent-seeking activities. In addition to catalyzing the 2008 financial crisis, these activities have slowed growth, increased the risk of future crises, and moved income from the bottom and middle to the top, increasing inequality.
- ▶ Widespread deregulation and market regulatory neglect, beginning in the 1970s and continuing through the early 2000s, enabled reckless growth and malfeasance in America's financial sector.
- ▶ Rising incomes of the top 1 percent arose from the enormous, unwarranted profits and bonuses collected in the financial sector and derived, in no small part, from wasteful and expensive activities.

As the rules of the U.S. financial system changed over the past generation, the financial sector grew to play a larger, more dominant role in the U.S. economy. The rise of finance twisted incentives within both finance and the nonfinancial economy and pulled more of the economy's rewards from the real economy into finance and from working families up to the executive suites. Specifically, financial profits and financial salaries have increasingly come at the expense of the income and savings of everyone else. The inequities have been exacerbated by open and hidden subsidies: not just massive bailouts (of which the 2008 bailout was only the biggest and most recent) but by provisions hidden in the tax system and bankruptcy code that enrich those in the financial sector at the expense of the public.

Finance's failure to self-regulate

A growing economy requires a well functioning financial system. The financial sector is essential not just for tasks like running the payment systems, ensuring a flow of funds from savers to investors, including small and medium sized enterprises, and creating information and opportunities for investment. The financial sector is also necessary for diversifying investments, managing risk, and providing liquidity and other resources necessary for growth.

However, finance needs rules, and the 2008 financial crisis revealed once again that financial markets cannot regulate themselves. Certain features of financial markets make them more subject to failure than most other kinds of markets. First, activities people undertake in the financial industry create large externalities, both positive and negative. Financial instability, in particular contagious runs and self fulfilling panics, can impose massive costs on the economy.²⁰ Economists at the Dallas Federal Reserve estimate that the costs of the 2008 financial crisis amounted to 40-90 percent of one year's GDP.² Since the beginning of financial deregulation in the United States and around the world, financial crises have been increasing in frequency and severity.²²

Second, financial markets are plagued with asymmetries of information situations where one party knows more than the other. The existence of such asymmetries is inevitable, of course, but their magnitude is not, nor is the right to exploit others by taking advantage of these asymmetries. Third, financial markets are lacking in industry competition. In particular, since the 1970s, the concentration, scale, and scope of the largest banks have grown significantly and rapidly, with the share of industry assets held by the top five banks growing from 17 percent to 52 percent.²³

Starting in the late 1970s, the financial industry lobbied for and policymakers largely delivered a rollback of regulation with the promise that the financial sector would self regulate.²⁴ Changes to the rules of finance, many of which were in place since financial collapse sparked the Great Depression, removed the separation of commercial and investment banking, ceilings

Since the 1970s, the concentration, scale, and scope of the largest banks have grown significantly and rapidly, with the share of industry assets held by the top five banks growing from 17 percent to 52 percent.

on deposit rates, and prohibitions on usury—the charging of loan-shark level interest rates. The changes didn't update the rules for new instruments like derivatives, but they let the financial markets write their own rules as they expanded into securities that packaged mortgages. Enforcement became an issue, with federal regulators appointed who didn't believe in regulation. They overruled state-level regulations and enforced less than vigorously the limited regulations that remained.²⁵

The growth of finance and inequality

Changes to these rules are one of the major drivers of inequality. First, finance has become huge and profitable relative to the rest of the economy. Financial services comprised 7.6 percent of GDP before the crisis, then fell back slightly to 6.6 percent in 2012 before returning to 7.3 percent in 2014. By way of comparison, in the 1950s, when the U.S. economy was growing rapidly, more rapidly than in recent years, financial services constituted 2.8 percent of GDP. Between 1950 and 1980 the financial sector generated between 10 and 20 percent of total corporate profits; after 1980 it generated between 20 and 30 percent, and the share remains high—well over 20 percent of corporate profits—today.²⁶

This is mirrored in the skyrocketing salaries in the financial sector, which have been a major driver of the top 1 percent. Wages in the financial sector rose more than in similar fields, with the increase closely following the trend of deregulation.²⁷ Between 1979 and 2005, finance professionals increased their presence among the top 1 percent by 80 percent (from 7.7 to 13.9 percent).²⁸ They have also increased their presence amongst the top 0.1 percent, from 11 percent in 1979 to 18 percent by 2005, and have accounted for 70 percent of the growth in the 0.1 percent's share of national income.²⁹ No other sector shows this kind of growth during this period. Figure 1 reproduces data from economist Thomas Phillipon showing wages in the financial sector relative to those in the rest of the nonfinancial, nonfarm economy. Financial sector wages follow a similar U-shaped pattern as overall inequality, having fallen from the Great Depression until 1980 and rising since 1980; those wages rise statistically with

COMPENSATION IN FINANCE PULLED AWAY FROM THE REST AFTER 1980

Financial Sector Wages Relative to Nonfinancial Wages, 1909-2006

Figure 1
Source: Phillipon, Thomas and Ariell Reshef. 2012. "Wages and Human Capital in the U.S. Financial Industry 1909-2006." Quarterly Journal of Economics.

deregulation.³⁰ While in 1980 wages in the financial sector were basically on par with wages in the rest of the economy, by 2006 the average wage in finance was 72 percent higher than the average nonfinancial wage. These wages can't be explained solely by skills; research argues that rents account for 30–50 percent of these higher wages, especially since the late 1990s.³¹

Weaker financial rules create a weaker economy

The last 35 years of deregulation have had profound consequences for average Americans and the country's overall economic performance. Rent-seeking fees on investment activity have bloated the financial sector, while a dangerous form of banking and lending ultimately drove the economy to collapse.

Financial market regulation aims to minimize discrimination and exploitation, but in the deregulated system we've seen significant evidence of systemic predatory lending and fraudulent documentation. The predatory lending that came to dominate the system most often targets lower-income borrowers.³² Borrowers with low financial literacy are more likely to have costly mortgages and not to understand or remember the terms of their mortgage contracts.³³

In addition, the opaqueness and complexity of the financial sector and the weak enforcement of the rules that remained encouraged widespread fraud and manipulation. A recent target of market manipulation has been the LIBOR rate, which determines how much millions of homeowners pay for their mortgages.³⁴ Foreign exchange markets have also been manipulated.³⁵ Lack of competition in many parts of the financial system—including in the credit and debit card systems, asset management, and derivatives markets—has meant higher profits.

Indeed, a key source of growth comes from asset management activities, which include both the management of 401(k)s and mutual funds, as well as alternative investment vehicles like private equity and hedge funds. The growth in asset management income accounts for roughly 35 percent of the growth of the financial sector as a percent of GDP, driven by the opaque fee structures, especially when it comes to alternative investment vehicles.³⁶ There is little evidence of any advantages, for instance in better long-run performance, when it comes to higher management fees.³⁷

The other core growth business for finance has been shadow banking, or the moving of traditional commercial banking functions to the financial markets. Shadow banking shares many of the same features of traditional banking—connecting savers with borrowers. However, the long chains in the provision of credit are complex and nontransparent, creating leverage and counterparty risks, and more vulnerability to fraud and other misbehavior. This is especially true for mortgages, where originators, investment banks, the credit-rating agencies, and mortgage insurers were all on the scene, imbued with fraud to an unconscionable degree. It should have been apparent that shadow banking was

SHADOW BANKS

noun

1. The array of institutions that provide financial services but operate outside of the laws and regulations in place to ensure oversight and accountability of traditional lending banks.

vulnerable to runs the moment the value of the collateral was questioned, as was the case when the 2008 failure of Lehman Brothers caused panic and contagion across the economy.³⁶

When this system crashed, its complicated securitization structure meant that conflicts of interest arose involving those meant to mediate and adjudicate bad debts. Many of the debt servicers tasked to handle bad loans instead profited from making those mortgages worse from the perspective of both lenders and homeowners. Studies have also shown that troubled mortgages were significantly less likely to receive a modification if they were made through this shadow banking system rather than through traditional banks.³⁹

A growing and healthy financial system is essential to growth. But what if financial markets become too large? It would be one thing if the increased incomes of the financial sector had resulted in the economy growing faster or in a more stable way. In fact, just the opposite has occurred. Figure 2 shows estimates, again by economist Thomas Philippon, of the average cost of the U.S. financial sector of supplying one dollar of financial intermediation—connecting savers with borrowers—from 1884 to 2011. Incredibly, the data show that the U.S. financial sector is less efficient now at supplying credit to the economy. The average cost was 2.4 cents on the dollar in 2011, compared to 1.6 cents at the end of World War II.⁴⁰

It is remarkable that for all the growth in income, profits, and size of the financial sector, we cannot see any improvement in the performance of the economy. The sector may have demonstrated innovation, but the technological advances chased a greater ability to exploit others rather than improving economic performance. And many are concerned that the financial sector has grown too large, drawing talented people and energy away from more productive enterprises.⁴

The Dodd-Frank Act, passed by Congress in 2010, began the process of restructuring the financial sector. But even as passed, it was a compromise, and its rule-writing and enforcement hasn't done enough to tackle the shadow banking system, the complexity of the financial system, and the problem of too-big-to-fail banks. But the remarkable aspect of this reform was that it was all about preventing the financial sector from doing harm to the rest of the economy, taking advantage of the unwary, and engaging in reckless risk taking. It was not directed at ensuring that the financial sector actually does what it is supposed to do: make money available for productive uses.⁴² This still remains an essential task, one that can't be examined without

U.S. FINANCIAL INDUSTRY EVEN LESS EFFICIENT AFTER MORE THAN A CENTURY
Cost of supplying $1 of financing, 1884-2011

Figure 2
Source: Philippon, Thomas, 2014. "Has the US Finance Industry Become Less Efficient?" American Economic Review.

understanding the massive changes in corporate governance taking place at this time as well.

THE 'SHAREHOLDER REVOLUTION,' THE RISE OF CEO PAY, AND THE SQUEEZING OF WORKERS

Corporations are a social construct, providing limited liability, an important component of modern capitalism. But they often fail to serve the public interest, and instead enrich those who are entrusted with their care while neglecting the corporation's own long-term interests.

The shareholder revolution transformed the incentives faced by CEOs, prodding them to generate ever-higher share prices by tying executive compensation to those share prices.

The emphasis on short-term stock prices has not only reduced investment that leads to healthy innovation and long-term prosperity, but also has driven up executive compensation and encouraged managers to treat employees as short-term liabilities rather than as long-term assets.

The job tenure of the average CEO also shortened, allowing them to maximize their personal benefit at the expense of long-term stakeholders.

A number of clear changes to tax, pension, and securities law have encouraged these destructive short-term corporate behaviors.

The idea that corporations exist solely to maximize shareholder value and that all other goals, such as innovating, serving consumers, and investing in employees, are secondary reversed decades of management theory that prioritized firm longevity and saw corporations as more broadly advancing societal interests. This "shareholder revolution" has meant significant changes for the economy. The new emphasis on maximizing shareholder value was a key step toward short-termism on Wall Street and in corporate boardrooms, and it has had profound effects for corporate performance and economic productivity.

Even John Maynard Keynes, who worried about the effects of short-term speculation on the economy 80 years ago, would probably be surprised at the extent of short-termism today. While the average stock was held for around seven years in 1940 and two years in 1987, by 2007 the average share was traded every seven months.⁴³ With the average shareholder interested only in short-term performance, shareholder value maximization translates into short-termism: focusing on quarterly returns, and even on accounting tricks to massage quarterly earnings. Where the goal of finance should be to provide needed cash to the productive economy, the shareholder revolution transformed corporations into sources of cash for financiers. This trend toward short-termism is seen in rising executive pay, increasing payouts to stockholders, frequent corporate restructurings, massive mergers, and reduced capital investment. These trends increase economic inequity and threaten long-term economic performance.

The rules give rise to shareholder primacy

The rise of shareholder primacy has been aided and abetted by the practices of financial markets and the theories of conservative

The shareholder revolution was a change in the rules of the market—specifically in securities law and federal income tax law—that combined to give more power to institutional investors and tie executive pay to short-term returns.

economists. But above all it was a change in the rules of the market—specifically in securities law and federal income tax law—that combined to give more power to institutional investors and tie executive pay to short-term returns.⁴⁴ The first wave of this revolution was conducted through leveraged buyouts, in which investors aimed to take over large companies, “unlock” hidden value (usually by downsizing), and sell quickly. The ability to conduct leveraged buyouts this way was the result of changes in U.S. regulations—including exemptions for leveraged buyout funds from the Investment Company Act. In the 1982 case Edgar v. MITE, the Supreme Court struck down Illinois’s antitakeover law and thereby overturned similar laws in other states.⁴⁵ The Reagan administration also relaxed antitrust regulations, distinguishing between mergers that would create greater efficiency and those that had a “significant probability” of increasing consumer prices.⁴⁶

In the 1980s, half of all U.S. corporations were the objects of takeover bids. In many years, over 10 percent of total stock market capitalization was purchased in acquisitions.⁴⁷ After the 1980s, institutional investors started taking larger stakes in corporations and using them to pressure management into policies that were viewed as more shareholder-friendly, including increasing dividends and buyouts and pushing for seats on boards. The new generation of CEOs increasingly aligned its management style with short-term investor interests.

These changes too were aided by the rules. In the 1980s, the Securities and Exchange Commission weakened insider trading rules that effectively treated company stock

Sources: http://rooseveltinstitute.org/sites/all/files/Laznick_Executive_Pay_White_Paper_Roosevelt_Institute.pdf; <http://www.gpi.org/publication/ceo-pay-continues-to-rise/> buybacks as per se insider trading. In the early 1990s, the SEC eliminated complicated disclosure requirements for communications between shareholders.⁴⁸ In 1993, Congress changed the tax code to incentivize companies to tie executive pay to performance by tilting compensation toward stock options. These changes added to the momentum underway toward shorter holding periods in the capital markets that dated back to the elimination of fixed brokerage commissions in the 1970s.

Rule changes make executive pay soar

While these changes have not led to a better-performing economy, they have had the effect that many of the executive advocates of this “revolution” had hoped: incomes at the top have increased enormously. Executives of nonfinancial companies make up over 30 percent of the top 1 percent, and their incomes have grown significantly since the 1970s.⁴⁹ While average CEO pay remained relatively constant at around $1 million from the mid-1930s to the mid-1970s, in 2012 average compensation for the 500 highest-paid CEOs was $30.3 million, of which only 6.3 percent was salaries and bonuses.⁵⁰ The rest is largely driven by gains from exercising stock options, the vesting of stock awards, and long-term grants. These, in turn, are driven by stock prices. CEO pay has skyrocketed far above the rate of employee pay. In 1965, the ratio of the average annual income of CEOs to workers was 20-to-1. By 2013, it was 295-to-1.⁵¹

CEO pay packages lead to weaker investment

For all these massive changes, the broader effects of this shareholder revolution were markedly different from those that had been anticipated. First, shareholder value maximization often turned into CEO income maximization. In practice, the interests of senior management took precedence over the interests of performance. Compensation goes up when firm performance goes up, but it also goes up when performance goes down. CEOs are often compensated simply for luck, such as when oil company executives get paid more when global oil prices increase. The effect is stronger in more weakly governed firms.⁵⁵ Current economic theories seeking to justify high CEO pay, such as those that link CEO pay to an increase in firm size, cannot explain trends in CEO compensation between the 1940s and 1970s. Somewhere in the 1980s, CEO pay changed.⁵⁶ Finally, increasing shareholder value in the short run is different from serving the interests of shareholders in the long run. Empirical studies have shown that stock market prices have difficulty incorporating information more than five years out.⁵⁷

BUSINESSES USED TO BORROW TO MAKE INVESTMENTS. NOW?

Correlation coefficient between firm borrowing and firm investment

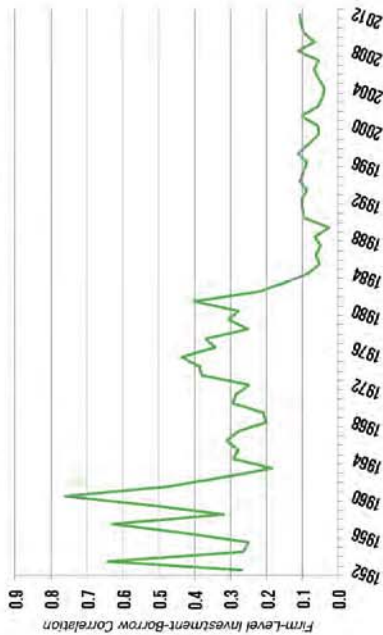

Figure 3 Source: Mason, J. W. 2015. “Disgorge the Cash: The Disconnect Between Corporate Borrowing and Investment.” The Roosevelt Institute.

Beyond questionable behavior from CEOs, the second worrying consequence of the shareholder revolution is a bias against real investments. Research has found that short term pressures can distort the individual investment decisions managers make. New proprietary data show that public firms invest substantially less and are less responsive to changes in investment opportunities compared to similar private firms. This result is amplified for firms with stock prices most sensitive to earnings news. This tells us that rather than pushing CEOs to overinvest, pay incentives are now tipped toward underinvestment.⁵⁸

Research has shown a dramatic shift in the relationship between borrowing and investment, as shown in Figure 3. Before the 1980s, a firm that borrowed a dollar would, on average, invest 40 cents more. Since the 1980s this relationship has collapsed. Instead, today the strong relationship is between shareholder payouts and borrowing, with shareholder payouts nearly doubling since the 1980s. Corporate profits are at record highs, with no increase in investment. Where before finance was a mechanism for getting money into firms, now it functions to get money out of them.⁵⁹

This problem is not going away. Even after the financial crisis, buybacks and dividends continue to be significantly higher than at any previous point.⁶⁰ Executives at nonfinancial corporations in the U.S. spent 70 percent of pre tax corporate profits paying shareholders in the form of stock buybacks and dividends in 2014; in the four quarters before the September 2008 financial collapse, corporations spent on average 107 percent of profits buying their own shares and paying dividends. In the postwar period before the shareholder revolution, nonfinancial corporations only dedicated an average 18 percent of profits for such activities.⁶¹ As Laurence D. Fink, the CEO of the large asset management firm BlackRock, recently wrote, “the effects of the short termism phenomenon are troubling both to those seeking to save for long term goals such as retirement and for our broader economy,” because they are at the expense of “innovation, skilled work forces, or essential capital expenditures necessary to sustain long term growth.”⁶²

LOWER TAXES FOR THE WEALTHY

- ▶ The reduced progressivity of the U.S. tax code has given more post-tax and post-transfer advantages to those at the top of the wealth and income distribution.
- ▶ Current incentives allow and encourage rent-seeking, channeling government revenue away from productive resources.
- ▶ There is no evidence that a lower tax rate for the wealthy has encouraged investment or growth.

Myriad changes in the tax and transfer system over the past 35 years have reduced the progressivity of the tax code to the point where, in some respects, the overall system is now regressive. Shrinking capital gains and corporate rates, growth in the payroll tax, and growing tax expenditures have decreased the progressivity of effective rates and shrunk the tax base.⁶³ This has blunted the ability of taxes and transfers to push against increasing inequality.⁶⁴ Additionally, these changes have distorted incentives by increasing the returns to rent seeking, thus compounding inequalities built into the tax code.⁶⁵ To make matters worse, there is no evidence that lower tax rates have led to increased growth.

A tax revolution for those at the top

The rules of tax policy underwent a revolution over the past 40 years, one designed to radically lower the top marginal tax rates and decrease the progressivity of the tax code. The result was that those at the top paid less, leaving the rest to pay more tax or receive lower levels of public

Where before finance was a mechanism for getting money into firms, now it functions to get money out of them.

TAX EXPENDITURES

noun

1. Incentives such as tax breaks and tax credits used in place of direct government spending to promote certain activities or outcomes. For example, tax credits provided to companies that create jobs as opposed to direct government job creation programs.

service. During the 1980s, for example, the top marginal tax rate was reduced from 70 percent to 28 percent, and has stayed below 40 percent ever since.⁶⁶

In addition to low marginal income tax rates, two stipulations of capital gains taxation reduce the effective capital gains tax rate. First, capital gains are not taxed until they are realized, meaning that a 20 year investment say buying and holding a stock generates no tax liability until the owner sells his shares. Second, the step up in basis at death, under which an heir can avoid capital gains taxation on inherited assets, effectively forever, eliminates capital gains entirely for many of the very wealthiest families, lowering federal revenue by an estimated $644 billion between 2013 and 2023.⁶⁷ An astonishingly low number of people in America are wealthy enough to pay estate taxes in 2011, just 0.1 percent of inheritors paid any estate tax but popular pressure is strong to eliminate them. In 2013, 65 percent of all inherited capital gains tax forgone accrued to the top 20 percent; the top 1 percent alone accounted for 21 percent.⁶⁸

Beyond capital gains, tax expenditures money the government spends to incentivize certain

ACROSS THE WORLD, CUTTING TOP MARGINAL TAX RATES INCREASED INEQUALITY

Change in Top Marginal Tax Rate (Percentage Points)

Figure 4
Source: Piketty, Thomas, Emmanuel Saez, and Stefanie Stantcheva. 2014. "Optimal Taxation of Top Labor Incomes: A Tale of Three Elasticities." American Economic Journal: Economic Policy, 6(1): 230-71

Capital gains income accrues disproportionately to the richest Americans; therefore, a low capital gains rate has direct implications for inequality.⁷³ Capital income makes up about 40 percent of annual gross income for Americans earning over $1 million a year, compared to less than 4 percent for people earning below $200,000.⁷⁴ The impact on distribution is clear: between 1996 and 2006, changes in capital gains and dividend income were the largest contributor to the increase in overall after-tax-and-transfer income inequality.⁷⁵

Because capital gains income is concentrated at the top, and because a low capital tax has not delivered trickle-down economic performance, the benefit of the low capital gains rate is concentrated at the top. According to the CBO, 68 percent of the $161 billion annual capital gains tax expenditure goes to the top 1 percent, while only 7 percent goes to the bottom four-fifths of Americans.⁷⁶ This concentration among the wealthy gets even starker the higher up the income distribution you go. In 2009, the top 400 taxpayers—the wealthiest 0.003 percent—claimed a full 12 percent of the benefits of reduced capital gains tax rates.⁷⁷

What is more interesting is the effect of lowering top tax rates on the highest earners.

As shown in Figure 4, economists Thomas Piketty, Emmanuel Saez, and Stefanie Stantcheva find that countries that cut their highest marginal tax rates the most had the largest increases in pre-tax inequality, and these tax cuts played no role in boosting growth in per capita income. These increases are impossible to explain with a standard supply-side model, especially as the authors find no relationship between top rates and growth.⁷⁸

The authors find that the tax rule influences the behavior of top income earners to seek out more of the economic pie.⁷⁹ At higher marginal behaviors by offering tax deductions—and transfers have shifted from favoring low-income households to favoring the wealthy, decreasing overall progressivity. The expansion of expenditures like 401(k) retirement plans and mortgage interest deductibility has led to a decrease in effective rates at the top as more and more wealthy families take advantage of various tax breaks.⁶⁹ According to an analysis by the Congressional Budget Office, more than half of the $900 billion paid in individual income tax expenditures and 80 percent of the tax deductions in 2013 accrued to households in the top 20 percent.⁷⁰ According to the CBO, "In 1979, households in the bottom quintile received more than 50 percent of transfer payments. In 2007, similar households received about 35 percent of transfers."⁷¹

Unbalanced tax cuts increase inequality

The reduction in high-end taxes has had two effects on inequality. The first has been to reduce the ability of taxes and transfers to lessen inequality. But the second, more surprising effect is that it has massively increased pre-tax income for those at the top, far beyond what could be understood from people simply working harder. It is this new incentive to rent-seek that is a more worrying effect of the changing of the tax rules.

The combined impact of rate cuts, shifting income distribution, and growing expenditures has been to increase after-tax-and-transfer inequality both in nominal terms and relative to pre-tax-and-transfer inequality. A 2011 study by the Congressional Budget Office found that "the equalizing effect of transfers and taxes on household income was smaller in 2007 than it had been in 1979."⁷² Over this time, changes to the U.S. tax structure reduced "the extent to which taxes lessened the dispersion of household income."⁷³

Lower rates have done nothing for growth

According to advocates of cuts to top marginal tax rates, the reduction was supposed to encourage more work among top earners and increase the size of the pie. But there is no evidence that this has happened.

As a Congressional Research Service report found, there exists "no conclusive evidence... to substantiate a clear relationship between the 65-year reduction in the top statutory tax rates and economic growth." Cutting top tax rates did, however, "appear to be associated with the tax rates, CEOs and other executives in the top 1 percent have less of an incentive to either bargain aggressively or seek opportunities for extracting rents. Similarly, other stakeholders in the firm, including shareholders and board members, also will be reluctant to pay out superstar salaries if a large portion of that income is going to the government through taxes. This can be seen in the way pre-tax income inequality for working-age people in the United States exceeds that of other advanced economies.⁸⁰ increasing concentration of income at the top of the income distribution.⁷⁸ This accords precisely with the results shown in Figure 4. If high marginal tax rates act as a deterrent to rent seeking, strongly progressive taxation can help enhance performance of the overall economy by deterring socially unproductive activities and directing more resources into real investment.⁸²

Rather than showing economic benefits from lower tax rates at the top, the evidence shows rather that progressivity can have a net economic benefit. Economist Jonathan Ostry and co authors at the International Monetary Fund tested how the degree of progressivity of tax and transfers affects long run economic growth when accounting for a range of other explanatory factors commonly seen as associated with economic growth.⁸³ Their results find that, across countries, redistribution, outside of some extremes, has no relationship with economic growth. If anything, a number of redistributive policies can lower net inequality and drive more durable growth.

Similarly, evidence from the 2003 dividend tax cut shows that supply side tax cuts did not lead to rising wages or investment. Indeed, there were good reasons to suspect that companies would take advantage of the low taxes to pay out large dividends, impairing their ability to invest.⁸⁴ Not surprisingly, comparing corporations that benefitted from this cut with those that did not reveals that the dividend tax cut did not result in any real investment or wage growth. The only effect was to increase dividend payments, causing more money to leave the firm rather than being invested.⁸⁵

Recent research has shown that taxes on capital income are welfare enhancing.⁸⁶ Low tax rates on the return to capital create an enormous incentive for income shifting, through which corporations and individuals redefine labor income as capital income and drive down their effective rates. This leads to lost revenue and, by inordinately benefiting wealthier taxpayers who have more tax avoidance savvy and resources, a significant decrease in the progressivity of the tax structure.⁸⁷

What the tax rate should be depends, of course, on how sensitive labor supply and savings are to tax rates. But using the best available evidence, it appears that there is significant room to increase tax rates above current levels.⁸⁸

THE END OF FULL-EMPLOYMENT MONETARY POLICY

- ▲ The Federal Reserve's focus on controlling inflation rather than achieving full employment and managing systemic financial risk has raised unemployment and lowered wages over the past 35 years.
- ▲ The Fed's failure to ensure prudent competition in banking and financial markets has meant that the benefits of lower interest rates have often accrued more to the banks than to borrowers and that certain market segments have lacked access to credit.
- ▲ Low- and middle-income households bear a disproportionate amount of the burden of prolonged recessions, financial crises, and underperforming economy. Unemployment affects those in the bottom half of the income distribution more than those in the top half, and its effects compound over the course of people's lifetimes.

The Federal Reserve's monetary policy usually fails beyond the scope of traditional policy debates, especially those focusing on inequality. But monetary policy set by the nation's "independent" central bank can have profound distributional consequences, contributing substantially to the rise of income and wealth of those at the top and the increasing financial stress and stagnant wages faced by most working families.

The Fed's inflation preoccupation

In 1978, the Full Employment and Balanced Growth Act, also known as the Humphrey-Hawkins Act, established price stability and full employment as the dual objectives of national economic policy. Both of these objectives are part of the Federal Reserve's "dual mandate," the goals that Congress sets in delegating the conduct of monetary policy authority to the Fed.⁸⁹

At the time, the country faced high inflation. Under Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker, inflation fell from double digits in 1979 to just 4 percent in 1984, and the ability of monetary policy to control inflation was widely heralded.⁹⁰ To be sure, there were significant costs: the U.S. experienced what was then its deepest recession since the Great Depression in spite of a highly stimulative tax cut.⁹¹ Nonetheless, many countries, beginning with New Zealand in 1990, made price stability so called "inflation targeting" the sole or primary goal of monetary policy.⁹² The Federal Reserve, maintaining its dual mandate, did not formally adopt this framework, but it did adopt an apparent preference for targeting low, stable inflation over maximum employment.⁹³ Thus, although the Fed maintains discretion as it considers tradeoffs between price stability and employment, in practice it tends to give considerable priority to pursuing low inflation.

Economic theory, based on simplistic models of the economy, reinforces these views. Some bodies of economic theory argue that unemployment can be decreased by monetary policy only to a point; if unemployment is pushed below its natural level, inflation will accelerate, and eventually the government will have to raise interest rates a great deal, resulting in higher unemployment.⁹⁴ These theoretical ideas have been largely discredited. The idea of hysteresis posits that there are serious long term effects of unemployment because those who become unemployed might end up outside the labor market and find it more difficult to find jobs later.⁹⁵ Deflationary pressures can raise the real value of debt, which can create self fulfilling prophecies of low demand.⁹⁶ Low inflation, rather than something to be valued, can limit the options central bankers have in a crisis.

Central banks can't ignore inflation, but neither should they make it their main preoccupation. As the Great Recession made clear, the focus on inflation did not ensure high growth or economic stability. The choice to focus on inflation or full employment is not technocratic, but rather a choice to prioritize one set of economic outcomes and interest groups over another. In the early stages of business cycle recoveries, fearful of impending inflation, monetary policymakers have tightened money prematurely, precluding a return to full employment and ensuring that workers can't make up for the losses they suffered in the downturn. The three most recent recessions have been followed by recoveries in which labor markets were too slack to allow workers to share in the benefits of economic growth, partly because policymakers were too worried about inflation and believed it would set in at relatively low levels of unemployment.⁹⁷

Central banks can't ignore inflation, but neither should they make it their main preoccupation.

Consequences of deprioritizing the full employment mandate

While economists debate the effects of inflation on inequality, the effects of employment are clear: Sustained periods of full employment are essential to a well functioning economy and prosperity for low and middle income families, while high unemployment, because of its long term consequences, has serious repercussions for the economy as a whole.

Estimates show that for every additional percentage point of unemployment, income declines by 2.2 percent for families at the 20th percentile of the distribution, by 1.4 percent for median income families, and by just 0.7 percent for families at the 95th percentile; these different levels of exposure to unemployment risk are a product of increasing inequality.⁹⁸ Furthermore, unemployment rates for low skilled and minority workers rise most strongly in response to contractionary monetary policy.⁹⁹ Compared to higher income workers, whose working hours are relatively stable, lower income

⁹⁷ Unanticipated inflation hurts bondholders—who are predominantly wealthy. However, wages of workers often lag behind increases in prices, so they too suffer from inflation. Econometric studies looking across countries at the effects of inflation, which typically show an association between inflation and inequality) can, however, be misleading. The major episodes of inflation were associated with increases in oil prices, and with governments that seemed unable to respond effectively.

workers see larger cuts in hours worked when the unemployment rate is high.¹⁰⁰

Full employment is fundamental for well distributed economic prosperity. When the economy is at full employment and labor markets are tight, workers have greater bargaining power, since employers are forced to raise compensation to attract and retain employees. As a result, and as experience shows, the only times we see broadly shared benefits of economic growth are when the economy nears full employment. When labor markets are slack, especially in an era of reduced private sector collective bargaining, worker bargaining power is low, and low and middle wages stagnate. Economist Alan Blinder has found that inequality rarely declines when unemployment is above 6 percent.¹⁰¹

Moreover, episodes of below full employment do lasting damage to productivity, equity, and opportunity. New workers, such as recent graduates, who enter the labor market during a recession face weak earnings potential even a decade later.¹⁰² Wage erosion in a recession will not necessarily be offset by wage growth in an expansion. An unemployed worker will find it harder to subsequently find employment and may even drop out of the labor force. In bad times, lower income households may underinvest in education and human capital formation.

The only times we see broadly shared benefits of economic growth are when the economy nears full employment.

The Fed's excessive focus on inflation detracts from its responsibility for maintaining economic stability. The recent financial crisis and Great Recession demonstrate how middle class households bear a disproportionate burden from financial crashes and a volatile and underperforming economy.

Even now, many look to prioritize concerns about inflation over those of full employment. The good news is that there is now a growing recognition that the unemployment rate is not the only measure of labor market slack. In the past five years, the labor market has been weaker than the unemployment rate would appear to indicate because discouraged job seekers have dropped out of the labor force and many people are working part time but would prefer to work full time. Alternative indicators of underemployment help explain rising inequality and wage stagnation.¹⁰³ It appears that the Fed is looking at these numbers.¹⁰⁴

This monetary aspect of economic policy, one that has been largely viewed as a technocratic debate not relevant to the average American, has large and persistent effects on inequality. Historically, we have recognized this. The election of 1896 was contested on the issue of monetary policy whether to move to a bimetallic standard (gold and silver). The debate then was about inflation versus growth, and about inequality the conflict between low and middle income Americans, then overwhelmingly farmers, and the financial sector. Somehow, in the 120 years that have elapsed since, we have made very little progress.¹⁰⁵ Monetary policy hewing to a rule that prioritizes low inflation at the expense of low unemployment has weakened the position of people who work for their living and strengthened those who make their money from investing.

THE STIFLING OF WORKER VOICE

- ▶ A sustained political attack, dating back to the late 1970s, has weakened unions and workers' rights, while labor policies have not kept up with changes in the modern workplace.
- ▶ Decreased bargaining power has given corporations the upper hand in the labor market, weakening wages, benefits, and working conditions, and leaving managers and owners with a larger share of profits.
- ▶ Unions provide a countervailing force to corporate interests; weak unions upset the country's political balance of power as well as the economic balance of power, allowing corporate interests to act unchecked.

The right to freely associate and bargain collectively is universally recognized as a basic human right, but in the United States the ability of workers to organize has been greatly diminished by a decades long campaign to erect barriers to unionization, place restrictions on union activity, and weaken labor laws across the board.¹⁰⁶ It is not just the migration of manufacturing from the more unionized North, first to the American South and then offshore, that led to deunionization. Organizing efforts have been stymied in nonmanufacturing industries, too, as well as in resurgent manufacturing bases.¹⁰⁷ Consequently, union participation in the United States fell from over 30 percent in 1960 to 20 percent in 1984 and 11.1 percent in 2014.¹⁰⁸

The decoupling of labor productivity and hourly compensation is perhaps the clearest sign that something has gone wrong. Over the 40 years between 1973 and 2013, productivity grew 161 percent while compensation rose only 19 percent.⁹ The dissolving strength, number, and effectiveness of unions has perpetuated inequality as a diminished role for unions leads to a system in which corporate interests drown out the voice of labor, forcing workers to accept weak wage growth and an eroding standard of living.

Increased corporate influence at the cost of workers' rights

The overall decline of collective bargaining was not inevitable. Despite facing similar evolutions in technology and globalization, other developed countries have recorded far less union decline. In Canada, for example, unionization rates are not much changed from their 1960s level.¹⁰ Among all OECD countries, an average of 54 percent of the workforce is covered by union collective bargaining agreements, 4.5 times more than in the U.S.

While the decline of the U.S. manufacturing industry has contributed to the decline of collective bargaining, a host of legislative, judicial, and regulatory policies have combined to make America a hostile environment for worker organizing. For example, weaknesses in the National Labor Rights Act make it difficult for workers to place employers under sufficient stress through demonstrations and strikes to elicit a conciliatory response. Additionally, workers receive minimal protection under NLRA law. For example, though they cannot be fired for participating in a legal strike, they can be replaced indefinitely and reinstated only at the employer's discretion—a strike deterrent equivalent to direct retribution.¹¹ These weaknesses are the result of deliberate political campaigns aimed at weakening workers' rights. Increasing corporate political influence intensified union political struggles. Following a series of legislative and judicial defeats, corporations amplified their lobbying efforts between the late 1960s and early 1980s. The number of corporate political action committees quadrupled, while the number of firms with registered lobbyists leapt from 175 to 2,445.¹² The impact of this mobilization on labor interests was manifest in the defeat of the Labor Reform Act of 1977, which was intended to address some of the inadequacies of the NLRA that still plague unions today.

Since the sharp decline of union membership in the 1980s, union weakness has been exacerbated by poor enforcement of the limited protections afforded by labor laws. A 2009 study found violations in roughly half of 1,000 private sector union certification attempts. Coercive tactics, including threatening to cut wages, close plants, and fire workers, cut at the heart of workers' ability and right to organize and undermine even the facade of worker protection in the United States.¹³

In the face of such intimidation it would be impossible to say that new unions face a level playing field, even given the manufacturing decline. Countries facing similar declines in manufacturing have not seen comparable declines in unionization. There is something different about the U.S., and it is our legal and regulatory framework.

Today, thanks to outsourcing and franchising, the conventional wage employment relationship has become rarer. Many workers are often only contractually related to the corporations that effectively control their wages and working conditions. But legislators have failed to adapt the NLRA to these new employer-employee relationships and, by barring certain strategies,¹⁴

ii. Such actions include secondary action, which are strikes or protests undertaken in solidarity by employees of one firm, aimed at effecting change in a separate but related firm, and multi-employer bargaining, which is the unionization of workers across employer boundaries—a particularly effective strategy in today's fissured workplace

There is something different about the U.S., and it is our legal and regulatory framework.

the act prevents workers from organizing across supply chains or franchises, effectively preempting workers' rights to organize.¹⁵

More recently, the Supreme Court's ruling in Harris v. Quinn allowed workers to opt out of union dues, thereby making it more difficult for unions to collect contributions for representing worker interests, and recent campaigns to expand "right to work" laws to Wisconsin, Michigan, and Indiana have sought to remove labor as a political force against conservative economic agendas in these states.¹⁶ If this pattern continues, both U.S. workers and the American economy will suffer enormous costs.

Decline of unions threatens wages and benefits

Declining unionization has taken a toll on working families in the middle of the income distribution. Cross country studies show that deunionization has driven a significant part of male wage inequality.¹⁷ More recent estimates find that deunionization accounted for 20 percent of the rise in wage inequality from 1973 through 2007.¹⁸ This deterioration is felt beyond unions themselves. Where unions pass an industry strength threshold they contribute to pulling up standards and wages for all workers, even those in nonunion obs.¹⁹ As unions fade, so too does their ability to raise wages in the broader economy.

The disappearance of unions threatens the health and security of a number of society's most vulnerable groups and has had a significant impact on inequality. For example, in one analysis of 15 low wage occupations, CEPR found that unionized workers were 25 percent more likely to have health insurance and pension coverage than their non union counterparts.²⁰

The diminished political power of workers

Beyond fighting for fair working conditions, strong labor unions once functioned as a powerful conduit through which the voice of workers could be channeled into political action that checked managerial excess. This countervailing force helped ensure that the desires of the powerful few did not come to outweigh the needs of the many. Without that conduit, American workers will be left essentially voiceless.

Food service workers at AT&T Park strike

Weakened labor organization emboldens corporations, further weakening labor organization and lowering wages and labor standards. Meaningful labor reform will have to address the laws that have long suppressed worker voices in the United States.

THE SINKING FLOOR OF LABOR STANDARDS

- ▲ Stagnating workplace protections and weak enforcement have undermined middle-class workers and imperiled vulnerable low-wage workers.
- ▲ Trapped at the bottom of the income distribution, an increasing number of people are working full time but not earning enough to provide even a basic standard of living.
- ▲ Poor labor standards and enforcement have left millions of workers in poverty, generating large public social welfare costs and slowing demand.

While unionization serves as a platform on which workers can stand to push for better wages and conditions, legally mandated minimum labor standards serve as the floor on which that platform can be built. By guaranteeing minimum protections and compensation, fair labor standards help ensure the reasonable safety and financial health of America's workforce. But after years of neglect and sabotage, America's labor floor fails even to guarantee a survivable standard of living, leaving millions of U.S. workers to suffer from poverty and economic insecurity.

Beyond direct beneficiaries, improved labor standards bolster wages and conditions across the low-wage sector as a whole and lead to a host of broader economic benefits.

Weakening standards for American workers

The structural cause of the falling labor floor is threefold. First, America's baseline standards set a very low bar for compensation and benefits relative to similar advanced-economy countries or to a baseline of basic needs. Second, the standards we do possess have failed to keep up with inflation and changes in the economy; some have been slashed. Finally, in many cases government agencies fail to enforce standards, leaving workers open to discrimination and other forms of abuse.

Our labor standards do not include health and retirement benefits, and as a result barely a third of the bottom quartile of workers receive paid sick days and only 41 percent have access to retirement benefits of any kind.² With no public health care option and no mandate for employers to provide it, the United States has the lowest health care coverage rate of all OECD nations.²²

Despite possessing the power to strengthen overtime pay, for 40 years the executive branch has allowed these protections to erode. A lack of inflation adjustment, along with President George W. Bush's lowering of the mandated threshold—the salary level at which employers are required to pay overtime—combined to lower the fraction of salaried workers receiving overtime benefits from 65 percent in 1975 to 11 percent in 2013.²³

Inflation has taken its toll on the minimum wage, too. The inflation-adjusted value of the federal minimum wage has fallen from $9.54 per hour in 1968 to $7.25 in 2014—a loss of nearly a quarter of its value.²⁴ And as the real value of the minimum declined, wages earned by those working at the bottom fell farther away from those earning a middle-class standard of living. As z shows, in 2014, the minimum wage earned just 35 percent of the average U.S. wage, compared to 54 percent of the average hourly wage in the late 1960s.²⁵

In other instances, labor standards have been actively weakened. Under the Bush administration, millions of employees were reclassified as independent contractors and accordingly exempted from minimum wage and overtime protections and excluded from coverage under workers' compensation laws, Social Security, unemployment insurance, Occupational Safety and Health Administration regulations, and the National Labor Relations Act.²⁶

Beyond the fact that nominal standards are too low, failure to enforce those standards has added another layer of vulnerability to the lives of low-wage workers. Between 1980 and 2007, despite more than a 50 percent increase in the workforce, the United States cut the number of minimum wage and overtime inspectors by 31 percent. A 2008 survey of 4,000 low-wage workers in three cities found that 26 percent received less than the federal minimum wage and 76 percent did not receive overtime pay to which they were legally entitled.²⁷ The $1 billion of stolen wages recovered by various U.S. government agencies in 2012 suggests a widespread problem of significant magnitude, since the vast majority of wage theft goes

Failure to enforce those standards has added another layer of vulnerability to the lives of low-wage workers.

MINIMUM WAGE EARNERS FALLING FARTHER BEHIND THE AVERAGE WORKER

Federal minimum wage as a share of average hourly earnings of production workers

Figure 5

Sources: Cooper, David, Lawrence Mishel, and John Schmitt. 2015. "We Can Afford a $12.00 Federal Minimum Wage in 2020." Economic Policy Institute Briefing Paper.

unreported. Researchers estimated an average loss per low wage worker of $2,634 per year with a national total of up to $50 billion per year.²⁸

The roughly 8 million undocumented workers in the U.S. economy suffer disproportionately from labor law violations. Providing a pathway to citizenship for the 11 million undocumented immigrants in America will bring them out of the shadows and into formal employment protections, raising their wages along with the wages of competing naturalized citizens.²⁹

Increased poverty at the low end of the labor market

Growing poverty and declining wages at the lower end of the labor market highlight how the falling labor floor contributes to inequality. In both the current and previous business cycle expansion, the poverty rate actually increased, an unprecedented outcome in a growth period, which suggests labor protections are perilously low and are failing to link economic growth with widespread prosperity.³⁰

Beyond minimum wage earners themselves, the minimum wage appears to set the wage structure for other workers at the low end of the wage distribution. Econometric evidence indicates that changes to the minimum wage can push up or drag down wages for those just above the bottom, particularly those in the bottom 10 percent of wage earners.³ The minimum wage also reduces poverty, with one estimate showing that a 10 percent increase in the minimum wage would reduce poverty by 2.4 percent.³²

The minimum wage is one of the main determinants of inequality between those at the bottom of the distribution and those in the middle, often measured as the ratio of those at the 50th percentile to those at the 10th. Because the level of the minimum wage is set slightly higher up the wage scale, the weakening minimum wage is one of the major reasons that inequality at the bottom has deepened in the past several decades, particularly for women and people of color.³³ Researchers at the University of California, Berkeley Labor Center estimate that, because the wages of workers at the bottom do not pay enough to meet a basic needs budget, the federal government along with taxpayers spent nearly $153 billion per year from 2009 to 2011 on Medicaid, the Children's Health Insurance Program, food stamps, and Temporary Assistance for Needy Families.³⁴

Basic labor rules and standards should ensure that employers pay workers enough to provide their families at least the essentials. However, today a full time work schedule at the minimum wage falls short of the federal poverty level for a family of two a number that may already be greatly underestimated. Of all those receiving Medicaid, food stamps, TANF, or the Earned Income Tax Credit, 73 percent earn a market wage and still cannot secure a basic standard of living through labor income.³⁵ Beyond low wages, though, working families are suffering from uncertain work schedules and a lack of health care and retirement benefits, all of which lead to perpetuated cycles of inequality.³⁶

Even within the already vulnerable category of low wage workers, poor labor standards hurt some groups more than others. Immigrants, women, and racial minorities are disproportionately represented among low wage workers and precarious part time, temporary, and informal employees. They are also the frequent target of labor standards violations.³⁷

In the case of undocumented workers, research shows potential to generate growth while improving conditions. In 2013, economist

Robert Lynch and immigration expert Patrick Oakford estimated that delivering comprehensive immigration reform would boost undocumented workers' wages by 15.25 percent and U.S. economic output by $832 billion to $1.4 trillion over a 10 year period.³⁸

RACIAL DISCRIMINATION

- ▲ Income and wealth outcomes are poor for people of color relative to whites; the disparity has grown since the financial crisis.
- ▲ Residential and educational segregation leads to less opportunity, and employment discrimination means that getting a job is more difficult for people of color.
- ▲ This structural discrimination creates large wealth gaps between whites and other populations—inequalities that transmit down through generations from parents to children. This especially troubling given that people of color make up a majority of America's future workforce.

Racial discrimination through legalized segregation in the 19th and first half of the 20th century and through the de facto segregation and discrimination that persist today is a clear driver of economic inequality in the United States.

Living in concentrated poverty perpetuates intergenerational cycles of wealth disparity. Radically unequal access to education, housing, and other wealth building assets ultimately weakens the employment opportunities for African Americans and Latinos in the United States. This inequality has an institutional basis and is not just the result of some people's personal biases. As the U.S. population becomes majority minority by 2050, the systematic exclusion of a large swath of the population from economic opportunity will further threaten efforts to promote both equality and economic performance of the United States in an increasingly globally competitive world.³⁹

A history of exclusion through rules

During the middle of the 20th century, the United States made huge public investments in education, social services, and infrastructure that laid the foundation for growth. The GI Bill, perhaps the most famous example, devoted $95 billion to help 16 million veterans returning from World War II get a college education, get job training, and purchase a home. But the benefits of such investments in the building of the middle class were never fully extended to include communities of color, and in fact they excluded African Americans in staggering ways. To cite just one example, "by October 1, 1946, 6,500 former soldiers had been placed in nonfarm jobs by the employment service in Mississippi; 86 percent of the skilled and semiskilled jobs were filled by whites, 92 percent of the unskilled ones by blacks."⁴⁰

Similarly, the New Deal was laden with policies that were shaped by and reinforced race and gender discrimination. For example, the projects of the Federal Housing Administration buttressed the boundaries of segregation during the Jim Crow era.⁴ Agricultural and domestic workers, who were overwhelmingly African American, were originally excluded from the Social Security program.⁴² The results of decades of discrimination reverberate today.

Sign on a restaurant taken in Lancaster, Ohio, 1938.

This extends to the housing and labor markets. Recent research has shown that across the income spectrum African-Americans, Latinos, and Asians live in higher-poverty neighborhoods than whites with similar incomes. Disparities between whites and people of color are worst at the lowest income levels. Living in neighborhoods of concentrated poverty is a phenomenon relatively common for African-Americans, Latinos, and low- and moderate-income Asians, but almost unknown for whites.⁴³

This also continues today in policing policy. Currently 2.3 million Americans overall are behind bars, more than 1 percent of all adults, a rate that has tripled in recent decades and is higher in absolute terms than even China's prison population.⁴⁴ Mass incarceration, which falls most heavily on populations of color, has serious consequences for economic equality. This extends to schools, where African-American students are three times as likely as whites to be suspended from school, putting them at risk for the school-to-prison pipeline.⁴⁵

The lack of a path to citizenship for 11.2 million undocumented Americans relegates more than 5 percent of the workforce to the shadows, vulnerable to exploitation beyond the reach of labor laws.⁴⁶ Of these, approximately 85 percent are from Mexico or other parts of Central or Latin America.⁴⁷ Undocumented status reduces bargaining power and the mobility of workers, and they are more likely to be paid lower wages for the same work and experience wage theft and labor violations because they have no enforcement mechanisms to which to turn. Undocumented workers pay taxes, though they receive a proportionally lower share of the benefits from public services, but studies show that normalizing their legal status in the workplace would raise tax revenues as well as incomes for them and other low-wage workers.⁴⁸

Unequal outcomes for people of color

The outcomes resulting from limited access to education and jobs—structural discrimination—compound income inequality. Since the 1980s, the unemployment rate for African-Americans has averaged more than twice that for whites. While white unemployment peaked at 8.7 percent in 2010, African-American unemployment reached 16 percent. At the recession's height, white unemployment remained well below where African-American unemployment has hovered since 1980.⁴⁹

But the problem is not unemployment alone. Even for those who do have jobs, workplace segregation persists.⁵⁰ As our economy creates increasing numbers of low-wage jobs, primarily in retail, food service, and home health care, workers of color and especially women are concentrated disproportionately in those sectors.⁵ Research suggests discriminatory hiring practices are in part to blame.⁵² In a recent field test, researchers sent white, African-American, and Latino applicants with experimentally varied resumes to apply for entry-level, low-wage jobs in New York City. Not only were African-American applicants half as likely as equally qualified whites to get a callback or job offer, but also whites with recent prison records actually fared as well as African-American and Latino applicants with clean backgrounds and similar credentials.⁵³

The outcomes are stark. Thirty percent of African-American children, 28 percent of Native American children, and 23 percent of Latino children live in high-poverty areas—compared to just 4 percent of white children.⁵⁴ African-Americans make up 42.5 percent of students in high-poverty elementary and secondary schools, despite accounting for less than 16 percent of the overall student population. Latino students make up nearly 31 percent of students in high-poverty schools while accounting for just 23.7 percent of the student population.⁵⁵

The combination of residential and educational segregation, hiring and workplace discrimination, and undocumented status means that people of color are far more likely to end up in poverty. Poverty rates are more than double for Native Americans, African-Americans, and Latinos than they are for whites (27, 25.8, and 23.2 percent respectively, versus 11.6 percent) and the numbers are even worse for children: almost 40 percent of African-American children and more than 30 percent of Latino children live in poverty, compared to 12 percent of white children.⁵⁶

The culmination of these structural factors keeps people of color from getting ahead in the economy. Figure 6 shows the likelihood of upward economic mobility for children born to parents in the bottom 25 percent of the income distribution. For whites born into the lowest group, 14 percent of children reached the top quarter of the income distribution as adults while 32 percent remained at the bottom. African-American children born to parents at the bottom of the income distribution were twice as likely as whites to end up there as adults; only 4 percent of African-American children from the bottom climbed to the top as adults.⁵⁷

Institutional practices have also made it difficult for people of color to build wealth. After its founding in 1934, the Federal Housing Administration often refused to insure mortgages in neighborhoods with more than a few African-American residents. This practice, called redlining, denied African-Americans opportunities to own property and build wealth that could be passed down to their children.⁵⁸ This wealth gap becomes self-perpetuating: a lack of wealth makes it harder to purchase housing and build equity. A lack of wealth also makes it harder

PEOPLE OF COLOR FACE A YAWNING WEALTH GAP

Net worth of the median household, real 2013 dollars

Figure 6

Source: Rakesh Kochhar and Richard Fry, 2014, "Wealth Inequality Has Widened along Racial, Ethnic Lines since end of Great Recession," Pew Research.

to mitigate poverty, which in turn puts people further behind in the labor market.

According to analysis of Federal Reserve data by the Pew Research Center, shown in Figure 7, the wealth gap between the median white household and the median African-American and Latino household is substantial and widening. Although median net worth over all groups decreased with the recession beginning in 2007, the decline left people of color relatively even worse off. In 2013 the median white household had a net worth 13 times that of the median African-American household and 10 times that of the median Latino household; for both groups median net worth fell farther behind the median white household since the Great Recession.⁵⁸ Research shows that the largest drivers of the wealth gap are years of homeownership, household income, employment, education, and preexisting family wealth.⁶⁰ Because of the lack of inherited wealth in African-American communities,

African-Americans purchase homes when they are relatively older, and thus take longer to build home equity, so they have a smaller cushion during hard financial times.⁶ When the 2008 financial crisis hit, African-Americans—already economically vulnerable—were hit disproportionately hard.⁶²

Because incarceration or formerly incarcerated status affects employment, earnings, and economic mobility, it increases poverty for individuals and families, but disproportionately for people of color: 2.3 percent of African-Americans and 0.7 percent of Latinos are incarcerated, compared to 0.4 percent of whites.⁶³ According to a 2010 Pew Charitable Trust report, incarceration “reduces hourly wages for men by approximately 11 percent, annual employment by 9 weeks, and annual earnings by 40 percent.”⁶⁴

The effects of incarceration transcend an inmate’s time within the correctional system and have lifelong, even intergenerational impacts on economic productivity. Indeed, many scholars, including Michelle Alexander, view the prevalence of criminal records as a modern “Jim Crow,” banishing African-Americans to second-class status over multiple generations.⁶⁵

Those with a criminal record have significant difficulty finding a job for any number of reasons, including laws that prevent them from working in certain occupations and potential legal liabilities pertaining to employers, plus they are denied access to important social safety nets like education and housing.⁶⁶ The American Bar Association uncovered 38,000 statutes with a collateral consequence for a conviction; 84 percent of these are related to employment, and 82 percent of them have no end date. The ABA notes that “a crime committed at age 18 can ostensibly deny a former offender the ability to be a licensed barber or stylist when he or she is 65 years old.”⁶⁷

UPWARD MOBILITY OF CHILDREN BORN IN THE BOTTOM INCOME QUARTILE

Figure 7
Source: Hertz, Tom. 2006. “Understanding Mobility in America.”
Center for American Progress.

The economic consequences of structural discrimination

Taking into account both the increasingly punitive nature of the criminal justice system and higher unemployment rates from the Great Recession, most African-American men are in no better of a position relative to white men than they were in the late 1960s.⁶⁸

In addition to the cost of discrimination for individuals and their communities, structural discrimination serves as a drag on national economic performance. There are many estimates of the costs of discrimination for African-Americans, including the aggregate loss of not using existing and potential education and skills. Chris Benner and Manuel Pastor examined factors that could explain “growth spells” for the 184 biggest U.S. regions from 1990 to 2011, and they found that the duration of these growth spells was strongly connected to income and race. “The punch line of this work is that regions that are more equal and more integrated—across income, race, and place—are better able to sustain growth over time.”⁶⁹

In sum, a combination of historical exclusion, segregation, and discrimination has led to markedly worse economic outcomes for people of color relative to whites. And children disproportionately bear the brunt, which is not only morally reprehensible but also economically unsound and bad for growth. But this is a call to action rather than despair: even the most pernicious effects of race and class discrimination can be battled with better policy decisions.

GENDER DISCRIMINATION

- ▲ Labor institutions and government policy create obstacles to women joining the workforce.
- ▲ Women face structural discrimination that increases inequality.
- ▲ Discrimination in wages and access to work reduces aggregate demand and hampers growth.

The entrance of women into the workforce since the 1970s has had profound effects on economic performance. Between 1950 and 1999, the workforce participation rate for women 15 and over rose from less than 40 percent to 60 percent. Women’s entrance into the workforce in the 1970s and 1980s drove nearly a fifth of real GDP growth.⁷⁰

However, U.S. labor market institutions designed to support the two-parent, one-income households of the 1950s have failed to adapt to the new reality. Gender discrimination at the workplace, as well as factors such as a lack of paid sick and family leave and the unavailability of affordable childcare, have dampened women’s incentives to participate in the labor force. Women’s workforce participation is well below its potential, particularly in the U.S. Indeed, over the past 15 years, women’s participation in the U.S. labor force has declined from 60 percent to 57 percent, while it increased in most other OECD countries.⁷

The rules fail to accommodate working women

Lack of pregnancy and maternity protections often drive women out of the workforce. Among working mothers without paid leave who lost their jobs after staying home with a newborn, less than half found jobs again within a year. By contrast, 87.4 percent of mothers with paid family leave returned to work within a year.⁷²

Women who participate in the workforce face significant hurdles. They comprise two-thirds of the nearly 20 million low-wage workers in the country, even though they represent less than half of all workers. Half of the women working in low-wage jobs are women of color. Mothers make up 3.5 times as large a share of the low-wage workforce as do fathers (21 percent vs. 6 percent).⁷³

Meanwhile, occupations considered predominately female—namely nursing, home health care, and educational services—remain undercompensated.⁷⁴ Recent studies reveal that regardless of gender or skill level, workers in these female-dominated fields earn less than their equivalents employed outside the “caring economy.”⁷⁵

A lack of family-friendly policies keeps many women out of the workforce and makes it harder for those who are working to balance the demands of juggling work, family, and social responsibilities. A mere 13 percent of U.S. workers have employer-based paid family leave, nearly two-in-five private-sector workers (roughly 40 million people) lack even a single paid sick day, and fewer than 40 percent have access to personal medical leave through employer-provided short-term disability insurance.⁷⁶

Ninety-five percent of part-time and low-wage workers have no access to paid family leave.⁷⁷ A 2013 Oxfam survey found that 14 percent of low-wage workers had lost a job in the previous four years due to their own or a family member’s illness.⁷⁸

The impact of paid leave policy can be seen in the differences in women’s labor force participation across a selection of advanced-economy countries (Figure 8). In the United States, with no paid leave policy, 74 percent of working-age women participated in the labor force in 2013—the same rate as in 1990. Contrast this with other peer countries, where paid leave benefits start at 26 weeks and often extend to both parents, and where smart policies have empowered women to balance work and family life, enabling more to participate in work and contributing to the overall economy.⁷⁹ Reproductive health care is a matter of economic security. In one study that asked women why they use birth control, the majority reported that doing so allowed them to take better care of themselves or their families, support themselves financially, get or keep a job, or complete their education.⁸⁰ Research has shown that women’s ability to plan and space their pregnancies (through access to birth control) improves educational attainment and lifetime earnings.⁸

PAID LEAVE OPENS WORK TO MORE WOMEN

Figure 8
Source: Authors’ analysis; “Online OECD Employment Database.” Organization for Economic Development.

Other studies have shown the multigenerational impacts of family planning access: When mothers have access to birth control, their children are more likely to have higher family incomes and college completion rates.⁸² Even though the Affordable Care Act has dramatically improved the standard of care guaranteed to women who have insurance coverage, recent restrictions on abortion and family planning have made it more difficult for all women to access comprehensive health care.⁸³ These restrictions lead not only to a series of devastating health consequences, but contribute to the economic insecurity of women and their entire families and communities.

The enduring gender pay gap

The wages of U.S. women continue to lag behind those of their male counterparts of equal age, education, and professional experience. More than 50 years ago President John F. Kennedy signed the Equal Pay Act, which prohibits discrimination “on account of sex in the payment of wages by employers.” At that time, women were paid 59 cents for every dollar paid to their male counterparts. A half-century has passed and that gap has shrunk by less than 20 cents; women today make approximately 78 cents for every dollar paid to their male counterparts. African-American and Latina women are paid only 64 and 56 cents, respectively, for every dollar paid to white men, equivalent to an annual loss of nearly $19,000 for African-American women and $23,279 for Latinas.⁸⁴

Economic benefits of gender equality

Addressing these economic and health inequities is not only a moral necessity, but would also have significant economic benefits, both for families and for the economy more broadly. Implementing equal pay would mean an income increase for nearly 60 percent of U.S. women. Two-thirds of single mothers would get a raise of 17 percent (equal to more than $6,000 a year), and the poverty rate among these families would drop from 28.7 percent to 15 percent. Pay equity would reduce poverty among working women by half and would therefore reduce the need for the safety net programs many working families rely on to make ends meet. The total increase in women’s earnings as a result of pay equity would be 14 times greater than combined federal and state expenditures on Temporary Assistance for Needy Families.⁸⁵

Continued discrimination against women in the workforce increases economic inequality, but also reduces aggregate demand and thereby stymies economic performance. Raising women’s labor force participation rate to that of men’s is a huge boon to economic performance across nations and would increase U.S. GDP by 5 percent.⁸⁶ Paying women the same wage as men for equal work would increase U.S. GDP by 3–4 percentage points, according to recent estimates.⁸⁷ Considering that the incentive of equal pay would further increase women’s workforce participation, the stimulus impact gets even bigger.

WHAT IF WOMEN EARNED EQUAL PAY?

- Nearly 60% of women would earn more if paid the same as men of the same age with similar education and hours of work.
- The poverty rate for all working women would be cut in half, falling from 8.1% to 3.9%.
- U.S. economy would generate additional income of $450 BILLION (= 2.9% of GDP).
- 6.9 million single mothers would earn 17% more annually. Poverty rate among these families would drop from 28.7% to 15%.

Source: Institute for Women’s Policy Research; <https://bit.ly/wpreqpay>

REWRITING THE RULES

To fix the economy for average Americans, we need to tackle the rules and institutions that have generated low investment, sluggish growth, and runaway incomes and wealth accumulation at the top and created a steeper hill for the rest to climb. It would be easier, politically, to push for one or two policies on which we have consensus, but that approach would be insufficient to match the severity of the problems posed by rising inequality. This set of proposals aims to reduce inequality and improve economic performance by restructuring the rules shaping the economy. As we discussed in the previous section, we cannot alter the dynamics of our distorted economy without broad, bold, and comprehensive measures to put the United States back on track.

The agenda we offer pulls apart the web of privileges and incentives business lobbyists and their politicians have woven into the rules of the economy and our society—and which have led businesses away from the kind of productive investments that would lead to robust and broadly shared economic performance. The policy reforms we envision would restructure how businesses, employees, and the public sector work together to ensure that work delivers a good standard of living and that we make the investments needed for the U.S. economy to thrive and face the challenges of a globally competitive world.

The approach is two-fold. The first move is to tame rent-seeking behaviors that unduly reward those at the top while raising costs for the rest and reducing the efficiency and stability of the U.S. economy. As long as the growth of the economy is predicated on rent-seeking and financial bubbles, we will not see the investment in companies, people, and infrastructure needed for sustainable growth. We begin by looking at the markets where firms have outsized power—both to make rules and to extract rents—and aim to reset the rules so that these markets will function more productively. Next, we examine the financial sector, which for years has had the power to regulate itself and evade public scrutiny, and we seek to ensure that it fulfills its societal missions without imposing excess costs on the rest of society. We also seek to address rampant short-termism, which has supplanted productive long-term corporate health. Finally, we outline tax reform that would reduce rent-seeking incentives and raise revenue for public investment.

The second part of our agenda seeks to restore the rules and institutions that ensure security and opportunity for the middle class. The steps along this path are straightforward: Restore full employment and invest in public infrastructure. Update and enforce the rules that protect workers to ensure wages keep pace with productivity. Reduce obstacles to labor market participation for all workers, particularly women, people of color, and immigrants. Finally, provide affordable and quality public education, health care, child care, and financial services, as well as retirement security, to enable families and individuals—all Americans—to pursue the American dream through work. To compete globally in the 21st Century, the U.S. economy needs to have every cylinder firing.

Some of these ideas are new and some are familiar, but they all build on renewing the promise of security, opportunity, and freedom from want that America made 75 years ago as it emerged from the Great Depression and established itself as the world's preeminent power. The New Deal created a baseline of innovative policies committed to economic growth, opportunity for all, and protection of those less able to fend for themselves. President Franklin Roosevelt developed institutions to balance government and the private sector in pursuit of both growth and the common good. The New Deal set the standard for large reductions in inequality and huge economic gains for several generations that followed.

The inequality we are experiencing is a choice, and we have the opportunity to make a better choice. Generations still to come will be grateful if we can deliver on President Roosevelt's commitment.

A New Deal Program Poster. Between 1935 and 1943, the WPA provided almost 6 million jobs

President Franklin Roosevelt developed institutions to balance government and the private sector in pursuit of both growth and the common good.

power to raise prices. There is not ust market power, in the sense that the term is usually understood. There is also political power the ability of corporations to secure legislation and regulations that enable them to charge more to consumers and to pay less to suppliers and workers, to get more from the government while contributing less to the public good. President Theodore Roosevelt used antitrust laws to curb both the economic and political power of the large corporations. The economy has evolved, but antitrust has not always kept up. It has failed to attack monopoly and monopsony power in all the manifestations that have become endemic in the 21st century.

We need a 21st century competition law that recognizes that we have moved from a manufacturing to a service and knowledge economy, where different principles of competition are relevant. Below we propose interventions to restore balance in a few key areas: intellectual property rights, global trade agreements, health care prices, and consumer finance protections. However, many of the proposals outlined in later sections from the financial sector and labor law to monetary policy to the management of globalization also aim to rebalance a network of rules and institutions that have increasingly exacerbated the imbalances of political and economic power in the country.

TAMING THE TOP

The growth of the top 1 percent was enabled by specific policy decisions. It occurred when we removed safeguards that protected consumers and taxpayers from excesses in the financial industry and failed to update other common sense regulations. It occurred when corporations cast aside their own long term interests in favor of short term stock gains for shareholders and distortionary CEO pay packages. It occurred when we restructured the tax code in ways that led to more leverage and higher executive pay, as opposed to more investment in productive assets. Addressing these issues doesn't ust address inequality; doing so will also build a solid foundation for the economy of the 21st century. To secure the investments needed for future growth and shared prosperity, we must circumscribe market power, fix the financial sector, incentivize long term corporate management, and rebalance the tax code. An agenda to do so is outlined below.

MAKE MARKETS COMPETITIVE

Inequality is exacerbated by power deviations of the market economy from the competitive paradigm. In many sectors, firms have had the

Restore balance to intellectual property rights

Intellectual property rights, or IPRs, provide a clear example of how markets cannot be separated from the human made rules that shape them. A legal framework and supporting institutions must provide appropriate incentives for innovation and encourage investment. But incentives must be balanced with the imperative for innovations and the associated knowledge to be widely dispersed and accessible in the interest of fair competition. IPRs can be written to achieve this balance, but our intellectual property regime has lost its sense of balance, with consequences that can be dramatic.

Today in the U.S., IPRs often shield intellectual property owners from competition in the same way high tariffs protect domestic industries. They raise prices paid by consumers, with the additional payments generating monopoly profits. In one example, the grant to the company Myriad of the patents to BRCA genes the genes that affect the likelihood of getting breast cancer impeded access to life saving tests and the development of cheaper and more effective tests. After the Supreme Court in a pathbreaking ruling invalidated the patent protection, far better and cheaper tests emerged. But the legacy of Myriad's market power, created by its patent, lives on: it still has the lion's share of the market.

In trade agreements like the Trans Pacific Partnership, the United States pushes strong IPRs without balance, which advances the interests of the pharmaceutical, software, and entertainment industries but does not yield the most economic benefits or the evidence shows provide meaningful incentives for innovators. Insistence on including excessively stringent IPR protections would mean that life saving medicines, renewable energy technologies, and other innovations would be put further out of reach both in the United States and in trading partner countries, deterring more research and development.

We need a 21st century competition law that recognizes that we have moved from a manufacturing to a service and knowledge economy.

Better balance is possible. For instance, in the United States, we balanced the need for innovation and access to life saving drugs with the Hatch Waxman Act of 1984, which by 2012 meant that 78 percent of all drugs dispensed in pharmacies and health care facilities were lower cost generics. Without competition from generics, drug prices would be even higher than they are today.

► Restore balance to global trade agreements

While it is essential that the United States work with global partners to establish rules for international trade and investment, the kinds of rules that we've been making through trade agreements increasingly set the terms of trade in favor of businesses and against workers and the public interest in both the United States and among our economic partners. These rules determine who will benefit from an increasingly globalized world, but trade agreements written behind closed doors, with the active participation of firms but no other stakeholders are failing to deliver the rules we need for managing globalization.

One set of provisions that increasingly balances the odds against ordinary Americans is the protections for foreign investors that U.S. negotiators insist other countries must adopt in the so called investor state dispute settlement mechanisms. These provisions create private international arbitration panels in which investors can sue governments, and parties have no recourse to legal review and appeal. While investors should be protected against rogue governments seizing their assets or formulating policies that discriminate against specific firms, this is not what these provisions are about; investors can already buy insurance against such outcomes from the World Bank's Multilateral Investment Guarantee Agency as well as some U.S. government programs for insuring investment. Rather, the real intent of these provisions is to impede health, environmental, consumer safety, and even financial regulations meant to protect the public interest from egregious business practices. That's why U.S. negotiators insisted on including such investor protections in an agreement with the European Union where the rule of law and protections against expropriation are already on par with the United States. By limiting the scope for policy in the public interest, investor protections actually make it harder for trading partner countries to raise their own standards and make it easier for companies to move production offshore or extract wage concessions with such threats.

The kinds of rules that we've been making through trade agreements increasingly set the terms of trade in favor of businesses and against workers.

Trade agreements with true high road standards for the global economy be they in labor rights or environmental, consumer, and public health protections would have rules where the benefits of an agreement are only made available contingent on certified compliance with standards. In other words, businesses wishing to trade with businesses in the United States under the terms of an agreement should be audited and certified by a credible, independent third party such as the International Labor Organization; certification then buys the company a right to trade under the preferential treatment of a trade agreement. This requirement has been shown to work to raise standards for example, among Cambodian garment exporters in contrast to the enforcement model of other U.S. agreements covering trade from Bahrain to Bogota on which the Trans Pacific Partnership is based.²

Getting the rules right on trade begins by not exporting to other countries the economic rules that have led to skyrocketing inequality in income, wealth, and political influence. While much of the "trade policy" agenda focuses on technical legal aspects of international economics, we also know that international agreements don't create trade, people do. Policies outlined elsewhere in this report aiming to establish true equality of opportunity and to tame the excesses of market power for a more open and broadly beneficial market competition will also be key to ensuring that people in the U.S. economy can seize on and create the opportunities made possible by a world with deepening globalization.

► Provide health care cost controls by allowing government bargaining

Firms across the health care industry, from hospitals to insurance companies to drug makers, have been allowed to consolidate and expand, reducing competition and thus raising prices. Additionally, government has legally circumscripted our own ability to negotiate costs. Indeed, U.S. health care costs are the highest in the world we spend more (both absolutely and as a percentage of GDP) than any other country, and yet outcomes are disappointing, far poorer than many countries that spend significantly less.³ By bargaining with drug companies for bulk purchases, the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs pays 40 percent lower prices for prescription drugs than typical market prices.⁴ In contrast, the 2003 Medicare Part D expansion explicitly prohibited negotiating for lower drug prices, meaning senior citizens and taxpayers pay significantly more for drugs.⁵ The federal government should establish a national prescription drug formulary, establishing the cost effectiveness for all prescription purchases covered under all public health insurance plans, not just those for veterans. Competition to be one of the recommended medicines on the formulary with a high benefit cost ratio will drive down prices.

► Rebalance the rules for bankruptcy by expanding coverage to homeowners and students

When individuals or corporations can't repay what is owed, a bargaining process usually follows. The legal backdoor what happens if the parties can't reach an agreement determines the relative bargaining power of the different creditors and the debtor, and shapes the outcome of the bargaining process. Changing the rules to favor creditors as we did in the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 provides a clear example of how the legal and institutional framework shapes the economy and increases inequality. While we did not circumscribe practices like predatory lending or usurious interest rates that ultimately led to situations where large numbers of Americans became overindebted, we did strengthen the bargaining power of banks.

Similarly, current bankruptcy laws favor certain sets of debtors and lenders over others. We changed the bankruptcy laws to prioritize repayment on derivatives the financial products from which the banks make so much money over repayment of debts to workers. At the same time we made student debt more difficult to discharge than loans taken to buy a yacht.

Simply reversing these changes would be a start in restoring balance. Removing the special protections for derivatives in bankruptcy, a feature that benefits Wall Street but actually makes firms more risky as they rely more on these exotic instruments, is essential in reducing the excessive financialization of the economy. Removing some of the most burdensome elements designed to make filing harder will help individuals move on from the misfortunes that can happen throughout life. Of course, a large fraction of personal bankruptcies in recent years has been a result of a medical emergency, an extended period of unemployment, and especially a combination of the two.⁶ The health care reforms already enacted and the reforms in macroeconomic policy discussed below combined with curbing the predatory and exploitive activities of the financial sector and should make the occurrence of bankruptcy and financial hardship more rare.

But there is more we can do. A homeowners' chapter 11, analogous to corporate chapter 11, would keep families in homes and give a fresh start to families overburdened with debt.

FIX THE FINANCIAL SECTOR

A recurrent theme of this report is that the financial sector has not been performing the tasks that it is supposed to: managing risk, allocating capital efficiently, intermediating between savers and investors, providing funds for investments and job creation, and running an efficient 21st century payments mechanism.

Rather, it has mismanaged risk, misallocated capital, prioritized exploitation and market manipulation, and created an extraordinarily expensive payments mechanism, out of tune with the advances afforded by modern technology. A well functioning economy needs to have a well functioning financial market. Financial markets are important. Unfortunately, our financial market, while not performing the critical tasks of providing capital to worthy endeavors, has given rise to enormous inequalities and has resulted in poorer economic performance lower growth and more instability.

As a result, the economy is weaker and more prone to bubbles and panics. The Dodd Frank Act was an excellent start, but the legislation did not change the structure of the dysfunctional system. Further reform can and should reduce the risks of the financial sector to the economy as a whole, increase transparency, combat short term time horizons, enhance competition, reduce the scope for rent seeking, and make sure that banks fulfill their primary social responsibility of providing the financing that firms need to invest and innovate.

The goal of the financial sector reforms we propose are two fold. First, we aim to prevent the sector from imposing harm on the rest of society, either on individuals (as evidenced in predatory lending and market manipulation) or on the economy as a whole (through the systemic effects cascading from individually reckless financial behaviors).

Second, we aim to develop a financial system that actually serves our society for instance by helping to effectively finance small business, education, and housing. If the middle class life is to be attainable for all, we will have to have financial products and a financial system that supports its flourishing. It is regrettable that almost all of the discussions of reforming the financial sector have focused on the first goal simply preventing harm. Taking away opportunities for high profits from anti social activities holds out the promise that the sector might refocus its attention on what it is supposed to be doing. But there is more that can be done, and in later sections, we provide examples.

A well-functioning economy needs to have a well-functioning financial market.

In this section we focus on the first goal: curbing the current system's risks to the overall economy and curtailing practices that directly cost consumers. We propose an agenda that ends "too big to fail," reduces the risks in "shadow banking," increases financial market transparency, makes a more efficient payments mechanism by limiting credit and debit card fees and enhancing competition, enforces rules with stricter penalties, and reforms Federal Reserve governance. Later in the report we will outline plans to improve financing of essential elements of a successful life, like paying for a college education or buying a home.

► End 'too big to fail'

We have yet to undertake the reforms needed to end too big to fail and thus reduce the potential for failure of large financial institutions to damage the broader economy. Banks that are backed by the government and are so big that their failure will cause the entire economy to contract don't need to internalize the costs of their failures and can reap huge benefits from risky bets. They have a perverse incentive to take on excess risk, knowing that should a problem arise they will be bailed out, with losses being borne by others. This, of course, is exactly what occurred in the 2008 financial crisis, the impacts of which still reverberate throughout the economy.

Despite recent experience, banks are still not only too big to fail, but also too big to manage evidenced by repeated failures like the "London Whale."⁷ And even when they are not too big to fail, they can be too interconnected, too interlinked to fail: with excessive linkages (e.g., those associated with CDs and derivatives), the failure of one institution can lead to a cascade of other failures stoppable only with a government bailout. That is why interlinkages need to be transparent and regulated.

The Financial Stability Oversight Council should assess large, systemically risky financial firms with an additional capital surcharge above what regulators currently assess under the Basel Accords in order to make failure less likely and more manageable. Moreover, being too big to fail (or too interconnected to fail) gives banks an advantage: they don't have to account for the costs their failure poses to the system as a whole, and get a subsidy as a result. The surcharge corrects for a market distortion that otherwise would favor such banks, even if they are not more efficient than smaller ones.

A surcharge would force banks to internalize the true cost of their risks and improve economic

⁷ The so-called "London Whale" refers to a trader or a group of traders at the JP Morgan London office who lost more than $6 billion for the bank in a series of risky derivatives bets over the course of 2012. The incident high-lighted lacking oversight both internally and on the part of regulators efficiency, while insulating taxpayers from the costs of failed institutions. And, to avoid the unproductive debate over how to exactly quantify “systemically important financial institutions,” the requirements should be graduated rather than set to a specific level.

An Occupy Wall Street protester outside of Bank of America in 2011

Further, if firms are incapable of producing “living wills” that the Federal Reserve and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation believe show how they can unwind in bankruptcy without causing massive costs to the rest of the economy, then these institutions need to be broken up along business lines and by size so that potential failures can be better managed. In addition, living wills and their analyses should be made public. The wills have to be designed to work not just in normal times but also in the abnormal times associated with a financial crisis.

► Regulate the shadow banking sector and end offshore banking

Among the too big to fail financial institutions are shadow banks, which are nonbank financial institutions that engage in lending. They include money market funds, insurance companies like AIG, and even automakers. Even though these nonbank financial institutions were integral to the causes of the financial crisis, with many of them having to be bailed out, post crisis reform hasn’t done enough to address the enormous risks inherent in the sector’s opaque activities and non arms length lending.

The shadow banking sector continues to grow while remaining insufficiently regulated.⁷ In fact, much of the activity in the shadow banking system is motivated not by its greater efficiency but simply to circumvent regulations designed to ensure the stability and efficiency of the financial system. We must not only address the regulatory defects that have allowed this sector to grow too fast. The crisis revealed that our regulatory structure was not up to the task ; it hadn’t adapted to the new ways that credit was provided within the shadow banking system. But by general consensus, in the aftermath of the crisis, the shadow banking system continues to be inadequately regulated. It is a matter of choice that we have failed.

Banks are still not only too big to fail, but also too big to manage.

For instance, regulation should improve transparency in the entities considered shadow banks. As an example of how to increase transparency, the Securities and Exchange Commission should reevaluate and expand on its recent ruling on money market mutual funds, whose vulnerabilities in the financial crisis sparked a panic. Requiring all money market mutual funds to have a floating net asset value would help to shore up money market risks.⁸

We also need to clarify the government’s role as a lender to these nonbank financial institutions. The current ambiguity increases overall risk. During the 2008 financial crisis, the Federal Reserve radically expanded its ability to function as a lender of last resort and provided liquidity services to the shadow banking sector, thus expanding the too big to fail subsidy to an even broader set of institutions. Emergency lending is crucial in a crisis, and one of the powers the federal government has to help mitigate the risk of a financial panic. But without clear rules, guidelines, and limits, these powers can become subject to serious abuse. As a result, Congress, under the Dodd Frank Act, requires the Federal Reserve to only establish an “emergency lending program or facility [that] is for the purpose of providing liquidity to the financial system, and not to aid a failing financial company” in a crisis. The Fed was required to establish clear procedures to meet that goal but has dragged its feet, writing a weak rule that insufficiently clarifies its role.⁹ The Federal Reserve must write clear rules outlining the government’s role in back stopping the shadow banks. It must ensure the regulatory framework is sufficiently strong that such back stopping is truly a rare event; and it must impose charges on the shadow banking system for the costs imposed on society. Congress should take action if the Federal Reserve makes no progress in writing these rules. Most importantly, there needs to be a re examination of the extent to which shadow banks and offshore financial centers are used to end run the regulations designed to ensure a safe and sound financial system. It is hard to understand what true economic advantages other than regulatory circumvention Cayman Islands or other offshore banking centers have over those located onshore. The U.S. has the requisite financial expertise indeed, much of the management of the offshore accounts is actually done in the U.S.¹⁰

► Bring transparency to all financial markets

Opaque activities in finance are not limited to credit intermediation. The uncompetitive and often undisclosed fees associated with asset management, particularly those from alternative management vehicles like private equity funds and hedge funds, are a driving source of financial sector growth, profits in that sector, and the income share of the top 1 percent. Furthermore, most investors in IRAs and other financial products don’t understand the rules under which they operate that the managers of such funds are not even held to a fiduciary standard and can be conflicted. Of course, any excess fee is simply a transfer of wealth from regular investors in these pension funds or savings vehicles to those in the financial sector.

Already, thanks to a provision of Dodd Frank that requires private equity to register with the SEC, significant amounts of fraud or substandard behavior have been disclosed. As the director of the SEC’s Office of Compliance Inspections and Examinations put it after investigating a sample of 150 newly registered private equity advisers: “we have identified what we believe are violations of law or material weaknesses in controls over 50 percent of the time.”¹²

Congress should expand the SEC's mission, and require private equity and hedge funds to disclose holdings, returns, and fee structures. The SEC should provide additional regulatory scrutiny and investor advice on these deals. This will formalize their regulation, making it similar to mutual fund regulations; the competition that will follow from this price transparency will help reduce financial rents. (Later, we discuss further reforms to help protect those saving for retirement.)

▶ Reduce credit and debit card fees

High consumer fees on credit and debit card transactions are one clear symptom of abuse of market power in the financial sector. Modern technology should enable the transfer of money from an individual's bank account to that of the merchant from whom he or she is making a purchase to cost but a fraction of cent. Instead, the fees credit and debit card companies charge merchants—often 1–3 percent or more of the cost of the transaction—do not reflect the value of services provided but rather a monopoly rent on what is essentially a public good of networked payments infrastructure. Ironically, financial institutions often lobby against taxes that increase transaction costs at far lower rates by arguing that the added fee will hurt business.

The Durbin amendment to the Dodd-Frank bill was supposed to bring down the excessive fees that the debit card companies impose on merchants (and which are passed along to consumers in the form of higher prices). Increased prices from monopoly power, as we noted, are just as important in lowering standards of living for ordinary Americans as decreased nominal wages. But Dodd-Frank delegated responsibility for the implementation of the regulation to the Federal Reserve, which has not sufficiently reduced the fees. Further, the Durbin amendment was limited to debit cards, leaving the even more important credit card market open to unrestrained monopoly power. Recent court decisions hold open the promise that the market will be more competitive in the future, but we should not rely on this. We need to make sure that the market acts competitively, and that the financial sector does not exploit its market power over the payments mechanism.

▶ Enforce rules with stricter penalties

The enforcement of the rules is just as important as the rules themselves. And in the past decade there's been a shift away from strict criminal enforcement of financial regulation. Fewer, if any, cases go to court. Instead the SEC and the Justice Department settle with favorable conditions, such as deferred prosecution agreements. Under these agreements, the parties regularly don't admit to any wrongdoing, or even pay penalties commensurate to their benefits. No individual is held directly accountable. The fines that are paid come from shareholders and are tax deductible; the perpetrators of the offenses aren't necessarily punished or made to give back their compensation.³ Enforcement has swung toward these favorable deals instead of serious consequences and convictions for wrongdoing.

The firms promise not to engage in the proscribed activity (which they have not admitted doing), but then they are repeatedly hauled up for engaging in similar activities. It is clear that the kind of enforcement we have is not acting as a sufficient deterrent.

The SEC and other regulatory agencies should instead focus on more strict enforcement, and Congress should hold the agencies accountable if no progress is made. No company should be able to enter into a deal like a deferred prosecution agreement if it is already operating under such an agreement. These agreements should face stricter judicial review and scrutiny. And compensation schemes should be designed so that perpetrators face significant consequences—for instance, a clawback of bonuses and a reduction in retirement benefits.

▶ Reform Federal Reserve governance

The mindset of who enforces these rules also matters. Many of the regulations in the financial sector are enforced by the Federal Reserve. And the leadership at the Federal Reserve is too often influenced by the largest financial interests rather than by small lenders and borrowers. Reforms to the governance structure of the Fed should focus on reducing the conflicts of interest that seem so apparent and reforming the process by which officials are chosen.

Concern about the Fed's behavior has focused mostly on its conduct of monetary policy and the management of the 2008 bailout.

The enforcement of the rules is just as important as the rules themselves.

On the right, many argue for a rules-based system—monetarism, under the influence of Milton Friedman, called for the money supply to increase at a fixed rate. But the evolving structure of the economy largely discredited the applicability of such theories. On the left, there was a concern that the Federal Reserve reflected more the interests of financial markets, with their focus on inflation, than the economy as a whole, or workers in particular, who were more concerned with unemployment. Even officials who did not come from Wall Street appeared to be “cognitively captured.” These issues received heightened attention in the aftermath of the 2008 crisis, when the Federal Reserve appeared unwilling to disclose many details of what it, together with the Treasury, had done. Among the beneficiaries of the largesse were the institutions whose executives had served on the committees selecting the head of the New York Fed. And numerous reports raised questions about the appropriateness of Fed actions, many of which reflected de facto subsidies, of enormous proportions, to certain institutions. The Fed is a public institution; it has been given public responsibilities in the macro-management of the economy, the conduct of bailouts, and the regulation of the financial system.

A 2011 study by the Government Accountability Office found significant scope for improvement in management of conflict of interest.⁴ Employees and members of all the regional boards of the Fed should be required to disclose all potential conflicts of interest (defining that very broadly); individuals with any significant conflict of interest should be precluded from employment or membership in the board of any regional Fed; members should be required to recuse themselves from decision making in cases with any possible conflict of interest; and members should be held to a revolving door agreement that prevents working for the financial industry for some time after their term of service. On top of this, the way in which boards and officers of regional Federal Reserve banks are chosen should be subject to transparent and accountable elections.

INCENTIVIZE LONG-TERM BUSINESS GROWTH

Short termism is not just a problem for our corporations; it's a problem for the economy overall. Previously, we explained how the rules governing corporations and taxes on capital and top incomes have changed to favor short term shareholders and CEOs that chase short term stock price gains above all else. Not only have the resulting changes in behavior led to greater inequality, but the short termism undermines real investments that create the potential for long term economic growth. Short termism distorts our economy, leading to lower investment, including in our workers, and weak job creation.

We propose an agenda that will incentivize corporate investment in capital equipment, research and development, and workforce development, thereby increasing economic dynamism and innovation. To do so we must realign CEO pay incentives, enact a financial transaction tax to curb short term trading, and empower longer term stakeholders.

► Restructure CEO pay

Earlier, we explained how executive pay does not provide the desirable incentives that its advocates claim, but that stock options actually distort incentives including the distortions so evident in "creative accounting" that contribute to the misallocation of capital.⁵ It also has a crucial effect on inequality in the economy as a whole. When CEO pay is sky high, it then creates social norms that drive up the salaries of executives at non profits and other institutions, exacerbating inequality further.

The easiest way to begin addressing executive pay is to ad ust the tax code, which privileges compensation of executives through equity heavy compensation, particularly stock options. Eliminating or curtailing the performance pay loophole (by which excessive CEO pay receives favorable treatment) not only would help address executive pay, it would also discourage CEOs from behaving like financial speculators. Congress should maintain the current $1 million cap on the deductibility of executive compensation reform and eliminate the exception for so called performance pay; this deductibility should also be expanded to the highest paid executives in a company overall.⁶

There are other steps that government can and should take. There needs to be more transparency. The SEC should finally implement the Dodd Frank rule that requires companies to disclose the ratio of executive pay to the of median employee salary. There should be strong disclosure requirements concerning the dilution of shareholder value as a result of stock options. And there needs to be better, more transparent reporting of the full value of executive compensation for each corporation. Current reporting of compensation packages is often

ⁱⁱ Changes to deductibility of performance pay should also be expanded out from public companies to all companies that have quarterly filing with the SEC opaque with the complete value buried in the complexities of stock option issuance. The SEC should require corporations to state the value of compensation in simple, easy to understand language.

Shareholders should have a say in the pay that the companies they supposedly "own" give to their executives. There should be mandatory shareholder votes on executive compensation on an annual basis.ⁱⁱⁱ With so many boards of directors stacked with friends of the management and often with CEOs from other companies, who know their pay will go up if that of other firms increases the boards cannot be expected to provide a check against exorbitant compensation. A further proposal would peg corporate tax rates to the ratio of CEO pay to median worker pay (or even to the minimum pay). Of course, this would depend on the SEC finally implementing the CEO to worker pay ratio disclosure rule.

► Enact a financial transactions tax

Short term financial transactions can contribute to economic volatility without providing any larger benefit to the economy as a whole. These transactions also point the financial markets toward a short term focus over the interests of longer term shareholders and stakeholders. A financial transaction tax would penalize short term traders and incentivize longer holding periods, thus reducing instability and encouraging longer term productive investment. Further, a financial transaction tax even at very low rates would raise considerable revenue.

Before 1975 the financial sector charged a fixed brokerage commission on trades that, ⁱⁱⁱ Our current Say-on-Pay rule is non-binding for consumers, functioned like a tax. There is little evidence that the elimination of this fee improved financial markets, and financial transaction taxes are currently employed without negative consequence in vibrant financial centers like London and Hong Kong, so there is little reason to believe that a tax on transactions would present a major disruption.⁷ Further, in the U.S. many brokerage houses and investment firms charge high transaction costs to consumers and have fought regulations that would reduce these costs for example on managing retirement accounts. The difference, of course, is to whom the cost accrues. For the average investor in a 401(k), a financial transaction tax would present a minimal expense.⁸ Congress should pass a financial transaction tax designed to encourage productive investment.⁹

► Empower long-term stakeholders

The current tax code plays a role in incentivizing short term behavior. Now, taxpayers can get the tax benefit of so called long term capital gains if the asset is held for just one year a period too short to provide a meaningful positive economic impact. While the benefits of the preferential tax treatment for capital gains are ambiguous, there are clear costs of short term speculation and the myopic short termism to which it gives rise. There should be a surtax on short term capital gains given the negative externality of the trading behavior incentivized.

Indeed, in their recent work Patrick Bolton and Frederic Samama propose that corporations themselves provide incentives to long term investors through "loyalty shares."¹⁰ The firm would require shareholders to hold stock for a set time period before rewarding additional returns. There is no silver bullet here, but by adjusting the rules surrounding corporate governance we can make a significant difference in our economy.

For an additional strategy to improve long-term management of corporations, we suggest that workers must have a say in corporate governance, specifically by including a representative of employees on the corporate board. Further, those managing retirement accounts of any kind should lead the way in acting in the long run interests of the holders of the account. They should be obligated to avoid all conflicts of interest and, especially in the case of worker pensions, ensure the corporations in which they invest act in a responsible way, with good corporate governance and an eye to long-term value, good labor policies, and sound environmental policies.

REBALANCE THE TAX AND TRANSFER SYSTEM

Changes to the U.S. tax structure hold enormous potential for reducing inequality and improving the equality of opportunity for Americans—in no small part because the United States ranks among the least redistributive countries in the OECD.² Taxes are not only an important way to raise revenue for critical public services and growth-enhancing investments, but they can also improve incentives for economic behavior. Snowballing changes to the tax code under supply-side rationale over the past 35 years, however, have prioritized tax cuts and subsidies focused on those at the top, placing a greater tax burden on the rest and causing neglect of critical public investments.

We propose an agenda that would use the tax code to structure incentives that reward work, not rent-seeking or speculation. By eliminating the special provisions that distort the economy and increase inequality, we can raise substantial amounts of revenue that can be used for public investments, like education, infrastructure, and technology, that would create a stronger economy, reduce inequalities, and increase opportunity. The most clear-cut changes require raising the top marginal income tax rate, ending preferential treatment of capital gains, cutting the step-up basis at death, and improving enforcement.

► Raise the top marginal rate

As we saw in our analysis of the current rules, lower marginal tax rates at the top not only reduce public revenue, but also can distort the economy by actively encouraging rent-seeking. Cuts to the highest marginal tax rate not only increase post-tax and transfer inequality, but also raise the incentive to bargain for more income at the higher end of the income distribution and evade taxes by disguising labor income as capital income.²² Improving the incentives thus not only raises more revenue, but will improve the equity of pre-tax incomes.

Further, at the highest incomes, many pay much less than the nominal tax rate due to provisions of the tax code that favor the rich. The current tax policy gives favorable treatment to the forms of income received by the wealthiest Americans. Other taxes like sales and payroll taxes are regressive. Finally, many tax deductions, like the mortgage deduction on second or third homes, favor the rich.

Increasing the marginal tax rate at the top, converting all deductions into tax credits, and limiting the ability to use tax credits would go a long way to restoring progressivity. A 5 percent increase on the top 1 percent's current income tax rate would raise between $1 trillion and $1.5 trillion of additional revenue over 10 years.²³ To put this in perspective: for an extra $50,000 taxed on every $1 million of a wealthy individual's income, the United States could make all public college education free and fund universal pre-K.²⁴

► Enact a Fair Tax

The preferential treatment of capital gains and dividends—income received almost entirely by the richest Americans—is one of the most important reasons that those at the top pay less than ordinary taxpayers. Warren Buffett is famous for pointing out that he pays a lower tax rate than his own secretary. The concentration of capital income is even more extreme than that for labor income. America's wealthiest 0.1 percent pay a lower rate than the next wealthiest 0.9 percent.²⁵ Meanwhile, most Americans earn negligible capital income outside already tax-sheltered retirement savings accounts or on home sales—for which a periodic exemption exists, but which a periodic exemption exists, but pay full federal tax rates on their labor income.

A "Fair Tax" is the widely discussed proposal to tax all forms of income at the same rate, which would not only promote fairness but would also reduce the economic inefficiencies caused by the enormous efforts spent by individuals attempting to convert income into forms that are tax-preferred.

At the highest incomes, many pay much less than the nominal tax rate due to provisions of the tax code that favor the rich.

We now know that the argument put forward by advocates for capital tax breaks—that they spur investment—is wrong.²⁶ Rather, cuts in capital gains rates have served to reward speculation as opposed to work. This policy is costly: in 2013 the U.S. government lost $161 billion in revenue as a result of low capital gains tax rates. Further, the CBO estimated that 90 percent of the benefits of this provision went to the wealthiest 20 percent of Americans and 70 percent to the top 1 percent.²⁷

The United States should tax capital gains income at the same rate as labor income. To discourage volatile short investments and the associated short termism that is so widespread today and which undermines long term investment, short term capital gains should be taxed at an even higher rate. Targeted tax breaks can be used to incentivize specific forms of productive investment. Because under the current tax regime capital gains are taxed only upon realization giving owners of capital the opportunity to postpone their taxes the U.S. should create a “constructive realization” regime, under which capital gains are taxed as they are accrued.

There is one more important change: the provision for step up in basis at death needs to be eliminated. This provision allows all of the capital gains earned during an individual’s life to escape capital gains taxation when the asset is bequeathed, meaning a small number of the wealthiest families pass on wealth tax free in perpetuity.

► Encourage U.S. investment by taxing corporations on global income

The current U.S. tax code allows corporations to defer paying U.S. taxes on profits earned abroad until the profits are repatriated. The provision has the perverse effect of encouraging the corporations to keep profits abroad as opposed to using the funds for U.S. investment. Those who argue the U.S. should tax corporations only on activities that occur within the U.S. are in fact arguing to exacerbate this problem. What many multi nationalists really want is a race to the bottom: for the U.S. to compete with other countries to get investment by offering the lowest corporate tax possible.

One option is to replace the transfer price system with a formulaic approach that would tax firms on their global income in a fair and comprehensive way. Individual states in the U.S. solved the problem of taxing corporations fairly among the states by establishing a formula that assesses the fraction of company sales, employees, and capital within each state, and taxing the firm accordingly.

The U.S. could also establish a complementary minimum tax on all global income for example, requiring U.S. corporations to pay 10-15 percent on global profits, with a tax credit for taxes paid to other jurisdictions. The resulting tax structure would virtually eliminate incentives to move production abroad for tax purposes.

► Enact pro-growth, pro-equality tax policies

Beyond the proposals specifically outlined above, there is a range of pro growth and pro equality tax reforms that can both raise revenue and rebalance misaligned incentives.²⁸ One general principle of taxation known as the Henry George principle is that we should tax things that have an inelastic supply, like land, oil, or other natural resources. The 19th century progressive Henry George argued that because land does not disappear when taxed, it can be taxed at high levels without negatively distorting the economy; there is effectively no supply response.²⁹ Even better, we can tax factors or behavior that do harm the economy.

Just as a financial transaction tax would help to curb short term trading behavior that imposes negative externalities on the broad economy, we should tax pollution (including carbon emissions), a move that can raise revenue while improving economic efficiency.

Eliminating expenditures that accrue to the top is an obvious choice for improving efficiency and reducing inequality. Agriculture subsidies, where most of the money goes to a relatively small number of rich farms or passes through to a relatively small number of monopoly agribusiness processing companies, are one example. But there are many other instances of corporate welfare. Noncompetitive bidding processes for the sale or lease of government owned natural resources or for the purchase of armaments or prescription drugs under public programs are examples of policies that distort markets and take money away from better uses, even as they enrich those at the top.

GROWING THE MIDDLE

The above recommendations aim to reward productive investment and work, reducing damaging “rents” and maximizing the social benefits of resources and assets. As part of rebalancing, it is equally critical to grow the economy for everyone. We propose four major approaches to spur widespread growth:

- Bring us to full employment, in part by increasing investments in our future.
- Reform the labor market to ensure that everyone benefits from an economy that is working at full steam.
- Reduce the obstacles that exclude working families from accessing opportunities for employment or career growth.
- Provide genuine economic security and opportunity for all Americans by expanding access to the essential services of middle class life.

Eliminating expenditures that accrue to the top is an obvious choice for improving efficiency and reducing inequality.

We note that this is also an investment agenda. We are investing in our economy, in our workers, and in our people. Whether it’s full employment or access to education, these investments are a crucial role that the government must carry out. In that vein, these policies are simultaneously pro equality and pro growth. These are ideas that benefit the economy overall, by making people more productive and giving them more opportunities. And they also make sure workers can get their fair share, while ensuring that every American has access to the necessary goods to lead a full and rich life.

MAKE FULL EMPLOYMENT THE GOAL

Eight years after the Great Recession started, the economy is still not running at full capacity. Labor force participation rates remain significantly below their 2000 levels in fact, lower than they have been since 1978.³⁰ There remains a sizable gap between what we could be producing and what we are actually producing. Indeed, we are some 15 percent below where we would have been if the trend growth between 1980 and 2008 had been maintained. A weak labor market is one of the reasons that wages have stagnated. More rapid growth accompanied by higher employment would reduce inequality and increase future growth potential. Indeed, with excess capacity and low interest rates real interest rates at which the government can borrow are actually negative — this is an ideal time to make the investments that would help restore full employment and promote long term growth.

The federal government can use key macroeconomic tools to prioritize full employment and tighten labor markets. We propose that the Fed emphasize full employment as the goal of monetary policy and that Congress enact a large infrastructure investment to stimulate growth.

► Reform monetary policy to prioritize full employment

In recoveries from recent recessions, the Federal Reserve has raised interest rates prematurely, before labor markets have gained sufficient strength to restore bargaining power to workers. Despite its founding in response to crisis the Panic of 1907 the Fed has overemphasized low and stable inflation at the expense of full employment and stable output, or even financial stability. This prioritization of price stability is one reason that over the past four decades labor markets have remained slack, wages have grown more slowly than productivity, and workers' share of economic output has declined. As outlined in the previous section, contractionary monetary policy has much stronger unemployment effects for low wage and often minority workers than for the highest earners.³

The Fed should place a greater priority on full employment. In particular, the Fed should resist raising interest rates until wage growth makes up for the lost ground of the Great Recession, even if this means allowing inflation to temporarily overshoot the Fed's 2 percent target. There is no significant risk to the economy from inflation that is far higher than 2 percent. Rather, there is growing consensus that a higher inflation rate will lead to better economic performance, facilitating adjustments in our highly dynamic and ever changing economy. The costs of slightly higher inflation are minimal compared to the devastation that comes from prolonged recessions that occur when interest rates remain at or near the zero lower bound.³²

The Fed must not only rebalance its objectives but also broaden its instruments. It has done this, but only to a limited extent. It used to focus just on short term interest rates. But we now recognize that there are many instruments that affect macroeconomic performance, including economic stability. Had it taken stronger actions against predatory lending, some of the excesses of the pre crisis period might have been avoided. It should undertake macroprudential policies to help stabilize the economy. Congress gave it authority to regulate the mortgage market in 1994, and its failure to do so adequately is clearly one of the reasons for the crisis. Regulating margins better might have dampened the tech bubble.

The federal government can use key macroeconomic tools to prioritize full employment and tighten labor markets.

Ensuring that the credit system is actually working and is competitive and not exploitative should be viewed as one of the Fed's responsibilities and doing so would actually increase the effectiveness of monetary policy. It would make it more likely that a lowering of interest rates would be transmitted to borrowers in the form of lower lending rates thus stimulating the economy in the way intended. The Fed also has instruments to expand credit availability, which would stimulate the economy even when interest rates are at the zero lower bound.

We should recognize too that putting an excessive burden for macroeconomic stability on monetary policy has been a big mistake. This is especially so in the extreme situation that we have been in since 2007. Monetary policy has been able to stimulate the economy only to a limited extent, and in ways that have actually increased wealth inequality, contributed to a obless recovery, and increased the risk of future instability. Given the absence of adequate stimulus from fiscal policy, the stance of the Fed is understandable. But we have to be cognizant of the risks.

► Reinvigorate public investment

While we have emphasized the importance of rules and regulations and the governance of public institutions like the Federal Reserve in shaping the economy, this is partly because these sub acts have been given short shrift. How government spends money also is critical.

Among the many benefits of public investment, one is the ability to use fiscal policy along with monetary policy as a lever to achieve full employment. Indeed, as Federal Reserve Chair Janet Yellen noted, "discretionary fiscal policy hasn't been much of a tailwind during this recovery."³³ Further, critical public investments today lay the foundation for long term economic performance and ob growth.

As the country faced competition from abroad, and as advances in technology meant that employment in manufacturing would inevitably go down, we didn't have to face the kind of urban devastation that we have seen, in Baltimore, Gary, and Detroit. Government could have helped in the economic transformation to the new economy as governments in other countries have done, and as our own government did in other eras. We could have faced up better to the legacy of the inequality of the past, and tried to overcome it with high quality preschool programs that in other countries have proven to be effective.

We know that public investments in education, technology, and infrastructure are complements to private investment, raising returns and thus "crowding in" such investments. Thus, by making strategic investments, especially in a period when the country faced negative real interest rates, we could have grown the economy, now and in the future, and grown the economy in ways in which there would have been more shared prosperity.

► Invest in large-scale infrastructure renovation

America's infrastructure is falling further behind that of other countries.³⁴ From roads and airports to energy and telecommunication systems, America's failure to even keep up what infrastructure it has makes it more costly to do business and for people to go about their daily lives, and leads to more wasted time and more environmental degradation.³⁵ Public transit, discussed later in this report, and broadband play a particularly crucial role in connecting all Americans, regardless of income level, with the 21st century local and global job market. Not only are our infrastructure systems crumbling, but they are unequally distributed, leaving distinct areas and communities segregated from the rest of society and without the opportunities that connecting affords.

Critical public investments today lay the foundation for long-term economic performance and job growth.

Our proposal imagines not just restoring America's infrastructure, but a 10 year campaign to make America once again a world leader in job creating innovation, in part by building a cutting edge 21st century infrastructure. A comprehensive plan would provide investments in air, rail, and road transportation; public transit; ports and inland waterways; water and energy; and telecommunications and the Internet. Some estimates put the cost of such a project on the order of $4 trillion well beyond the small sums currently debated but within our means.³⁶ The investment would yield dividends in the form of more productive businesses, millions of new jobs, and sustainable management of our energy and environmental resources.

Public infrastructure banks have been successful in other countries internationally at financing large infrastructure projects and could prove particularly useful for financing regional projects that cross state lines. The truly costly choice is continuing on the path we are on: doing minimal maintenance to the already deteriorated 20th century infrastructure we now have while other countries upgrade and expand their investments in 21st century infrastructure. Failing to act puts future private investment and employment in the United States at risk; both are at a competitive disadvantage.

► Expand access to public transportation

A crumbling public transit system is a clear outgrowth of the decision to use fiscal policy to reward the richest Americans rather than stimulate investment and growth. Decades of disinvestment in U.S. infrastructure have resulted in high commuting costs that fall disproportionately on low and middle income families and decrease access to jobs.

Our existing public transit system is hugely inadequate. Only a little over 50 percent of Americans have any access to public transit at all.³⁷ Investing in public transit is a matter of equal access to jobs and opportunity, and also a driver of economic performance. If more people can get more access to jobs with which they can live up to their potential, and if they can waste less of their time commuting, then productivity will increase and lives will improve.

According to a Federal Highway Administration report, the total necessary investment in mass transit tops out at $24.5 billion over the next 10 years.³⁸ This includes the cost of meeting the capital backlog, as well as rehabilitating and expanding transit fleets, facilities, and mass transit rail networks to support projected growth in demand. We should prioritize investment in communities that most require improved access to business centers and job opportunities.

EMPOWER WORKERS

The goal is not only to create jobs, but also to ensure that workers have a fair say in the workplace. Legal and institutional frameworks have played a far more important role in weakening the wages of American workers than forces such as globalization and technological change. It is within America's power to reinvestigate worker voice and restore balance in the workplace.

Here we propose new rules, designed to strengthen the bargaining power of workers going forward. Our goal is not just a one time wage increase, but aiding workers in building long term power to balance the power that corporations have to determine wages, schedules, and employment conditions. We can reinvestigate worker voice, restore balance to the workplace, and give workers a fairer share of the rewards of work and a better chance to contribute to a high performing workplace.

What follows are policies to expand bargaining power for workers and to set higher standards for all workers through targeted government contracting policies, improved legal enforcement, and a higher minimum wage.

► Strengthen the right to bargain

As American citizens, workers by definition possess the right to assemble and petition, yet in many instances, those basic rights have been eviscerated by weaknesses in our national labor policies and legally questionable or downright illegal attacks by employers. Flaws in the National Labor Relations Act place undue burdens and restrictions on workers attempting to organize, while employer aggression is met with inconsistent, insufficient, and untimely penalties.³⁹ Strategic amendments to the NLRA could protect workers and restore their right to organize.

One flaw in the statute has allowed employers to delay workers' votes to unionize by litigating each step of the process. Recent rule changes issued by the National Labor Relations Board have attempted to rebalance some of the power, and they provide a positive example of how the statutes can be updated to reflect current challenges.

In addition to easing the legal barriers to unionization, stricter penalties are needed to deter illegal intimidation tactics by anti union employers. Companies seeking to prevent unionization can retaliate by firing workers; if an NLRA violation is found, the employer merely has to reinstate the worker and pay back wages. As if this sanction is not small enough, it is made even more insignificant by the fact that a ruling like this can take more than three years.

Further, the legal framework should be amended to adapt to the changing nature of the workplace. Today, few employers

The truly costly choice is continuing on the path we are on.

We can reinvigorate worker voice, restore balance to the workplace, and give workers a fairer share of the rewards.

resemble the large manufacturers the creators of the NLRA had in mind. Rather, corporations like Wal Mart employ a host of personnel through outsourcing and subcontracting, thus bearing little responsibility for the employment relationship. Legal scholars have envisioned new models for defining the employer-employee relationship that would establish clear lines of responsibility within the modern fissured workplace. Specific proposals would redefine the concepts of bargaining unit, employer, secondary action, and the gamut of terms last defined by the federal government in an economy no longer recognizable. Some localities have accomplished this. For example, a case in California established Wal Mart as the employer of record for employees all along the supply chain and required Wal Mart to account for wages stolen by subcontractors from subcontracted employees.⁴⁰

► Have government set the standards

Laws intended to reverse trends in wages and working conditions are difficult to pass and enforce, but through use of their valuable contracts and licenses, government agencies especially within more agile city governments can exert strong influence over private sector conditions. By attaching strong pro worker stipulations to their contracts and taxpayer funded development subsidies, government agencies can raise wages, improve labor standards, and reduce discrimination both within partner entities and in the private sector more broadly.

Following in the footsteps of Los Angeles, federal, state, local, and municipal governments should grant public contracts only to corporations that meet high labor standards and possess strong antidiscrimination/pro-inclusionary hiring practices. Under this practice, contracting agencies would be required to provide a living wage, safe working conditions, the enormity of the problem and the enormous worker income that could be recovered with proper oversight.⁴³ Congress should increase the agency's budget to reflect growth of the labor market, the low wage workforce in particular, and recent evidence of systemic wage theft.

But penalties for minimum wage and overtime infractions are insufficient to deter bad behavior. Given the unlikelihood of workers reporting violations and the lax enforcement when they do, employers can be cavalier about labor law. But overt minimum wage and overtime violation convictions should pose an existential threat to businesses so managers and owners will think twice before engaging in such behavior.

► Raise the minimum wage

The minimum wage has been allowed to lose too much of its value. Recent research shows that raising the minimum wage within the range normally discussed has virtually no impact on obs. Indeed, given the present weakness in aggregate demand, higher incomes might even stimulate the economy. Not only has the government failed to keep the minimum wage near its 1968 value at half the median wage, Governments should grant public contracts only to corporations that meet high labor standards.

but family breadwinners have fallen under the purview of its inadequate protection. An increase in the minimum wage could help reduce working poverty and particularly improve prospects for women, their families, and other disadvantaged groups that are disproportionately represented among minimum wage earners.⁴⁴

We support proposals to raise the national minimum wage immediately and to push toward the kinds of ambitious measures that bring the value much higher.⁴⁵ Also, the pitifully low minimum for tipped workers should be set at the same floor. States and cities should look at raising the minimum wage to reflect local conditions; many cities and metro areas can easily justify a minimum wage of $15 an hour.

► Raise the income threshold for mandatory overtime

The New Deal's Fair Labor Standards Act requires that workers who work more than 40 hours a week get overtime pay, at a rate of 150 percent of their regular hourly wage. However, the act exempts some employers, executives, administrators, and traveling salespeople, among others. To provide a base level of coverage, the Department of Labor has periodically issued a rule that establishes an income threshold under which any employee must be paid for overtime.

The current threshold of $455 a week, or $23,660 a year, was last updated in 2004, and covers just 11 percent of the salaried workforce.⁴⁵ In 1975, 65 percent of salaried workers were covered by overtime rules; if the 1975 threshold had kept pace with inflation, 47 percent of workers in 2013, rather than just 11 percent, would have received overtime.⁴⁶ To restore this pillar of middle class income, the

iv. A recent proposal from the Economic Policy Institute calls for a $12.00 minimum wage by 2020

Department of Labor should raise the threshold to ensure that once again the majority of salaried workers are covered.

EXPAND ACCESS TO LABOR MARKETS AND OPPORTUNITIES FOR ADVANCEMENT

The challenges faced by women and people of color in the workforce go well beyond individual racism or implicit bias. Indeed, structural racism enforced through an uncountable network of rules including poor public investment in minority communities, aggressive policing, and historical exclusion prevent people of color from accessing opportunities for work and economic success. A similar web of power and rules prevents women from achieving full equality in the workforce.

We require an agenda that creates opportunity to succeed and advance for the 21st century workforce, a workforce that predominantly consists of women and people of color. Here we propose a few priority policies that will go some distance toward rooting out labor force discrimination and improve prospects for America's workers. We must dismantle legal structures that explicitly prevent people of color from equally competing in the workforce, including an egregious system of incarceration and a broken immigration system. In addition, we must expand the structures that support working women and families overall. Tackling these barriers to employment will increase opportunity for millions and expand overall productivity.

► Reform the criminal justice system to reduce incarceration rates

The United States incarcerates a higher percentage of its population than any other nation in the world at a huge cost to individuals and families as well as to economic performance. The overall societal and human impacts of mass incarceration, in terms of effects on children, families, and particularly people of color, warrant and have received their own political agenda and movement. Much of that work is beyond the scope of this report. Here we focus specifically on the clear economic consequences of incarcerating 2.3 million people, more than 1 percent of all adults in the United States (and 2.3 percent of all African Americans).⁴⁷ We recommend specific reforms to expunge the records, reduce mandatory minimum sentences, improve legal representation, and curtail unjust levies.

In addition to the high price of running the world's largest prison system, mass incarceration reduces employment opportunities, reduces employment and wages, and increases dependency on government assistance for a large share of the population. A study by the Vera Institute for Justice found that the social cost of incarceration was more than $31,000 per inmate in 2010. Having been incarcerated leads to reduced hourly wages, annual employment, and annual earnings, a burden that falls particularly on men of color.⁴⁸

One key driver of underemployment is the employment penalty for felons. One study estimates that prison records and felony convictions reduced male unemployment by 1.5 to 1.7 percentage points in 2008 alone.⁴⁹ Congress should move to reduce the burden ex felons face when searching for jobs by expunging certain records after a set amount of time.

Further, mandatory minimum sentencing particularly targets people of color. A U.S. Sentencing Commission report to Congress found that African Americans and Latinos accounted for 69.8 percent of mandatory minimum sentences in 2010;⁵⁰ tackling this issue will effectively reduce part of the inequality inherent in the nation's sentencing rules. Congress also should immediately allow judges the ability to waive mandatory minimums. The Department of Justice should focus on encouraging alternatives to incarceration, investigating possible best practices that can be adopted at the federal and state levels.

The inaccessibility of quality legal representation results in disproportionately harsh sentencing for the poorest. According to a report from the Brennan Center of Justice, a concerted effort to reclassify non-alienable offenses, increase public defense funding, and improve effectiveness through regular attorney and social worker training would ensure equitable access to representation.⁵¹

Similarly, onerous fees at every level of the criminal justice system generate severe financial burdens for the poor and create further points of entry back into the incarceration system. A society-wide effort is needed here, including debt collection efforts targeted at ability to pay, eliminating public defender fees, and eliminating escalation of fees for those who cannot pay the first time.

► Reform immigration law by providing a pathway to citizenship

Estimates indicate more than 11 million undocumented immigrants live and work in the shadows of the U.S. economy, in every corner of the country and every sector of work.⁵² Self-deportation and mass deportation clearly are not credible solutions, nor are they desirable. Not only does America's broken immigration system inhumanely tear families apart, it is also costly to businesses facing risks of an uncertain labor supply and communities where exploitation of undocumented immigrants drives down wages and working conditions throughout the labor market. Employment practices targeting those demanding decent treatment and payment of back wages have resulted in retaliatory actions against U.S. citizens and immigrant workers alike, with no recourse or remedy for the workers.⁵³

To bring these people out of the shadows and fully vest their contributions from working, starting businesses, and paying taxes in the United States, the federal government must provide a pathway to citizenship for those already here and simplify the process by which new migrants can continue to come and contribute to America's economic success. Nothing short of this path will solve the problem of exploitation of immigrant workers, but there are steps to take now to improve the situation of those undocumented immigrants already here and integrated into our economy and society.

The first step is to cease the deportation and interment of all but violent criminals and to normalize the legal status of families working, learning, and serving in America.

The second is to better coordinate the efforts of different parts of government to enforce immigration laws in ways that don't undermine the conditions for people working here. This means that U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement, or ICE, should take a back seat to the Department of Labor to ensure that unscrupulous employers cannot easily threaten workers with the prospect of deportation by calling in worksite raids.⁵⁴ Third, Congress should act to ensure that all labor laws extend to all people working in America, irrespective of their documentation status. No one who works an honest day in America should be afforded fewer protections at work just because they don't have a piece of paper.

► Legislate paid sick leave

Today nearly 40 percent of the workforce doesn't have access to paid sick days. For at least 43 million private sector workers, taking a day off to care for themselves or for loved ones means risking their job. States and localities across the country have been implementing paid sick leave policies. In Connecticut, the first state to pass paid sick leave, a recent survey of employers found that three quarters now support the policy; a survey in San Francisco found two thirds in support, and one in Seattle came in at 70 percent.⁵⁵ Federal legislation should aim toward universal coverage.

► Legislate paid family leave

The United States is one of the only countries in the world without nationwide legislation in place to support paid parental leave for new parents. Many OECD countries guarantee up to 52 weeks of paid parental leave, with guarantees in place for both mothers and fathers.⁵⁶ The U.S. failure to provide paid parental leave continues to limit economic opportunities for women in particular, but makes it more difficult for both men and women to take time off to care for their children.

Plenty of evidence documents the benefits of these human capital investment policies for child development.⁵⁷ Further, reducing the penalty for working women who give birth could increase the female labor force participation rate, which in turn would boost U.S. productivity.⁵⁸ An OECD study suggests that just 15 weeks of paid maternity leave would have a measurable impact on productivity growth.⁵⁹ In addition, normalizing paternity leave not only increases men's participation in family life but also begins to transform the workplace.

The United States should craft federal family leave policies like the ones that have been successful internationally. First, family leave should be universally available to workers. Second, parents of both sexes should be covered. To truly achieve equity in the workplace and in the home, men and women must be offered the same protections for care giving. Third, family leave policies must include job protection for pregnant workers.

One effective model would create an independent trust fund within the Social Security Administration to collect fees and provide benefits to employees. The benefits would be available to every individual regardless of employer size or employment type, and would allow workers to take paid leave for their own health concerns, including pregnancy and childbirth recovery; birth and adoption; the serious health condition of children, parents, spouses, or domestic partners; and military caregiving and leave purposes.⁶⁰

The federal government must provide a pathway to citizenship for those already here.

► Subsidize child care

Just as U.S. family leave lags other advanced nations, U.S. provisions for child care lag those of other advanced countries. Expanding access and quality would benefit children and increase women's workforce participation.

A robust and effective child care regime would provide a menu of supports to families all along the income spectrum, from birth to kindergarten. For lower income families, early childhood learning, whether it's home visiting or Head Start, helps close the achievement gap for children and improve maternal earnings. For middle class families, broad access to child care would help boost women's workforce participation and provide much needed relief for families that face high child care costs without the benefits of government subsidies.

With the long term goal of providing affordable child care to all American families, Congress should start by expanding the most effective existing state and federal programs. Scaling up the current child care policies and programs would give parents needed supports in raising their children, and would also allow them to get and hang on to their jobs, benefitting their families and the economy more broadly.

► Promote pay equity

Despite passage of the Equal Pay Act half a century ago, women continue to earn less than men across occupations. As of 2014, women earned slightly more than 82 cents in weekly wages for every dollar earned by a man. The burden of unequal pay falls doubly hard on women of color. While white women earn an average of 78 percent of what white men earn, African American and Latina women earn an average of just 64 percent and 56 percent of white male wages.⁶ According to 2014 findings from the Institute for Women's Policy Research, securing equal pay for all women not only would greatly reduce poverty but also would have generated nearly $450 billion in additional income equivalent to almost 3 percent of 2012 GDP according to 2010-2012 data.⁶²

The structural obstacles to closing the wage gap are manifold and include those listed above: access to child care and family leave, along with a host of other dynamics. One clear obstacle to wage equity, however, is that almost half of all U.S. workers are either strongly discouraged or under contract not to share their salaries with colleagues. The Institute for Women's Policy Research finds that transparency reduces pay inequality; for federal government workers, whose salaries are highly transparent, the wage gap falls to 11 percent.⁶³

► Protect women's access to reproductive health services

Without the ability to make informed decisions about their health and access affordable quality care when they need it, plan the timing and size of their families, and have healthy pregnancies and births, women will never be able to take full advantage of the economic opportunities available to them. For example, the only federal program dedicated to providing affordable family planning services has been underfunded for decades. The return on investment is extraordinary: in 2010 every dollar invested in Title X saved $7.09 in taxpayer dollars.⁶⁴ At a minimum, we should ensure that all women can access needed family planning and reproductive health services.

EXPAND ECONOMIC SECURITY AND OPPORTUNITY

Much of the insecurity felt by Americans today stems from the fact that the essentials to a middle class life are increasingly out of reach. The price of a good life one that allows a family to educate its children, provide a stable home, save something in case of emergency, and retire at a reasonable age is more than most can afford.

We propose an agenda to ease the financial strain for America's families. We seek to expand access to early education and higher education. By bringing down the costs of health care, we aim to help families avoid financial catastrophe. We call for reforms to ensure Americans have reliable access to finance, as well as an expansion to Social Security. Finally, we propose voting reforms to ensure more Americans have a say in our democratic system.

▶ Invest in early childhood through child benefits, home visiting, and pre-K

Investments in early childhood learning are among the most critical for human development and the most effective in terms of productivity. A true investment agenda would prioritize funding for evidence based programs that provide children from birth to age 5 with the opportunity to succeed in life.

A priority should be investing in those most at risk: the 22 percent of U.S. children living in poverty, including 39 percent of African American children and 32 percent of Latino children.⁶⁵ Recent research has confirmed what most already know: childhood poverty has debilitating life long effects, but interventions are capable of breaking the cycle of intergenerational poverty. As our society grows richer, it is essential we make the long term investments in children.

Broad access to child care would help boost women's workforce participation.

Programs focused on child health and education are critical long term investments. Countless evidence based randomized control trials have shown the state run Maternal, Infant, and Early Childhood Home Visiting Program to be one of the most effective investments of taxpayer dollars.⁶⁶ By supporting new mothers in good parenting habits like speaking frequently to their babies or breast feeding long term, home visiting programs help reduce the growing gap in outcomes between children born into poor homes and rich homes. Research of high quality programs shows improved impacts for participating mothers, who are more likely than their counterparts to re-join the workforce; reduced needs for government assistance; and improved life outcomes.⁶⁷ The children also have improved school readiness.⁶⁸

One proposal that should be considered is a universal child benefit, a monthly tax free stipend paid to families with children under 18 to help offset part of the cost of raising kids. In this we can follow several peer nations that have successfully reduced child poverty to a large degree through such programs. The U.K., for instance, recently cut its child poverty by more than half through a package of anti poverty measures, including a universal child benefit.⁶⁹

Children from families at all income levels would benefit from an expansion of the kinds of quality universal pre school programs already implemented in a number of states and localities through a variety of providers and funding mechanisms. At the federal level, Congress could immediately expand funding to provide pre K child care subsidies to all currently eligible children. This would expand access to 12 million children at a cost of $66.5 billion.⁷⁰

▶ Increase access to higher education through more public financing, restructuring student loans, and increasing scrutiny of for-profit schools

Higher education is one of the building blocks of our economy. However, reduced public support, plus the increasing presence of inadequately regulated for profit institutions willing and able to exploit some of America's disadvantaged, has undermined our ability to educate the workforce. We propose increasing public funding for higher education, restructuring student lending by providing income based repayment plans and reforming bankruptcy laws, and bringing for profit schools under greater scrutiny.

Even when emerging from World War II and saddled with a debt ratio larger than Greece's in 2010, the U.S. committed itself to providing a free education to returning soldiers.⁷¹ The G.I. Bill helped create the middle class society that we had aspired to the first such society in the world. Yet, some say that today, though we are so much richer, we can't afford even more modest programs. This is wrong. We should realize that we cannot afford not to ensure that all young Americans get the best education for which they are qualified so they can live up to their potential.

For too long, we've been trying to increase educational access through tax credits for middle class families and grants for the poor. This approach has not achieved the desired results. We should build on the president's recent free community college plan but go well beyond it. We should recognize that our major research universities educate our young people and produce research that fuels innovations that drive business and change the way we live. These are natural complementary goods, and joining these two activities together is one of the reasons for the world leading excellence of our university system. But research is a national public good (or indeed a global public good) and should be nationally funded. And with the increased mobility of educated people, even ensuring that we have a talented pool of highly skilled workers has become a national public good. Our education policy should reflect these changes.

Meanwhile, $1 trillion is outstanding in student loans.⁷² It is already having an impact in reduced life prospects, from having to forgo work at obs dedicated to the public good simply because they don't pay enough, to forcing our young people to postpone building families. Going forward, the government should look to follow the lead of Australia and adopt universal income based repayment, in which universal income consists of a set percentage of future income. Students could then repay their student debts more easily at much lower transactions costs through withholding.

An important step here is to restore the protections available to those with student loans. Studies have shown that removing bankruptcy protection for those with student loans, particularly in the 2005 policy change under the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act, has done nothing to reduce bankruptcy filings resulting in costly defaults.⁷³ It has, however, increased stress enormously, and extracted money from poor students that goes into the coffers of the banks. The government should restore those protections.

Affordability is not the only concern. We must ensure that students are receiving the kind of high quality education that will prepare them to be engaged citizens in the 21st century. One immediate way to improve outcomes for graduates is to increase scrutiny of for-profit schools, which receive a large share of government funded loans or government guaranteed loans while often failing to provide students with a quality education. Eighty seven percent of revenues at for-profits come from federal or state sources, including student loans and Pell grants. Though they teach around 10 percent of students, they account for about 25 percent of total Department of Education student aid program funds. Studies show that those at for-profit schools do poorly compared to those at community colleges. Completion rates are poor, as is success in getting a job.⁷⁴ Under the current administration, the Department of Education has reviewed outcomes

Research is a national public good (or indeed a global public good) and should be nationally funded.

Higher education is one of the building blocks of our economy.

for graduates from for-profit institutions and found them lacking. Proposed regulations would establish a set of requirements for all institutions receiving federally funded or backed loans a strong step in the right direction.⁷⁵

► Make health care affordable and universal

Market forces have not worked well at controlling costs in our health care system and delivering broadly available quality care. The health care system is rife with the kinds of market failures that economists have studied extensively, including information asymmetries and imperfections in competition.

Hospitals, physician networks, and health care insurers increasingly operate in conditions approaching monopolies.⁷⁶ Patients largely have neither the medical expertise to perform the cost benefit analyses necessary for making optimizing choices about the care they need, nor the access to price information for comparison shopping, leaving providers to determine both the demand and supply of health care. The result of our market driven health care system is that people in the United States pay higher prices for virtually every aspect of health care than those in other advanced economies, and even with the big steps forward in the Affordable Care Act, 12 percent of Americans are still left without health coverage.⁷⁷ In spite of our high expenditures, health outcomes are poorer.

We propose building on health care system changes already underway to control overall health care spending in the United States, while increasing the quality of care and reducing overall inequality.

Medicare, with its superior record of controlling health care costs and delivering higher quality outcomes than private insurers, is an exceptionally popular and successful public policy. And Medicare achieves these outcomes while insuring the highest risk and most expensive patients: senior citizens.

Opening Medicare to all would yield three significant improvements in addition to providing more people access to a high quality, low cost health insurance plan. First, competition from Medicare's entry into the insurance exchange would lower premiums for everyone; one study found increased competition on exchanges could lower fees by an estimated 11 percent.⁷⁸ Second, Medicare's wider acceptance by providers than many private insurers would provide an alternative to the lower premium "skinny network" plans offered that limit choices to a highly restricted set of doctors and hospitals in many markets. Third, introducing Medicare as viable competition will also drive employer provided health plans purchased from ACA exchanges toward the higher efficiency and standards offered by Medicare.

Making Medicare open to all would, of course, require several adjustments to the program, including integrating its doctor, hospital, and prescription coverage and adding coverage for providers serving needs beyond the population of senior citizens.

In spite of our high expenditures, health outcomes are poorer.

► Expand access to banking services through a postal savings bank

Nearly 93 million Americans about 28 percent are unbanked or underbanked, and that number is unlikely to budge.⁷⁹ Having access to the payment system is a necessary condition of living and working in the modern economy, and far too many people can only access it on the most predatory terms. They simply don't know whether hidden somewhere in the complicated contracts will be terms to their detriment. These worries are well justified, given the rash of abusive practices exposed in the aftermath of the financial crisis.

The Postal Service should be authorized to create a "post card" debit card available with minimum fees and high protections for consumers. Its scale and size would significantly allow both access and efficiency to help citizens build wealth, and it would force banks and payday lenders to actually compete on price and services rather than confusion and predation. The overwhelming success of the Direct Express card for Social Security benefits can serve as a model.

Merchants too would benefit, as the new card would charge just enough to cover costs not enough to generate the tens of billions of dollars made by the credit and debit card companies. And the lower costs faced by merchants would be passed on to ordinary consumers through lower prices. So, while this is a reform that seems targeted at America's unbanked, there would be trickle up benefits throughout the entire economy.

► Create a public option for housing finance

The housing finance market remains broken seven years after the financial crisis. While private label securitization provided over 50 percent of the mortgage backed securities in 2006, since the crisis that number has been less than 5 percent.⁸⁰ It shows no sign of changing; public sector institutions still underwrite the vast majority of all conventional mortgages. Private market securitization remains flat, accounting for a very small fraction of total housing financing. Efforts to create a public private hybrid system in Congress have stalled, given reasonable concerns about future bailouts and the inability to properly regulate such a system. And America's banks have resisted demands that if they originate mortgages, they should have "skin in the game," i.e., bear the consequences for the bad mortgages they originate. The suits that emerged after the financial crisis exposed fraud, incompetence, and negligence beyond the imagination of even the sector's critics. Wall Street has been unable to police itself, with no systematic reforms coming from the industry itself to try and rebuild its mortgage system.

Many in the private sector want to resurrect a version of the old system that worked so well for them, with government guarantees backstopping their lending practices. Rather than trying to nudge the private mortgage system with federal backstops, subsidies, and implicit bailout guarantees, lawmakers should create an explicitly public mechanism in the housing market. While the private sector excelled in exploiting ordinary Americans, it fell short in designing financial products that would help ordinary Americans manage the risks associated with home ownership. A broken housing finance system keeps people from building assets by making the most significant investment of their life, exposes people to higher costs of rental housing, and forces them to forgo the social capital built when people invest in building a home, not just a house.

The key information needed for issuing good mortgages already lies in the public domain of IRS records and property registries: an individual's income history and the prices of similar houses. We know too that new technologies mean that in the 21st century, the cost of processing this information should have become negligible. All of this points to the creation of a 21st century housing finance system including a government homeownership agency using modern technology and the lessons learned from around the world on financial products that are best suited to the management of risk for ordinary individuals. This would lead to low transactions costs and efficient risk products so different from what has been happening in the U.S., where the financial sector has looked for products that maximize fees (transactions costs) and that fine tune the ability to exploit different groups. This new arrangement should be able not only to deliver better financial products, but lower costs to use a little more than the interest rates the government pays on the money it borrows.

This new entity would supply housing loans in ways that provide explicit benefits to borrowers a far better way of supporting ordinary Americans than the trickle down approach based on supplying government subsidies to private developers. Properly structured, this public option can easily provide the 21st century mortgage financing system that our struggling economy and America's struggling families need. And it would provide the kind of competition that might incentivize the private financial sector to better perform the functions that it is supposed to perform.

► Increase retirement security by reducing transactions costs and the exploitation of retirees, and expanding Social Security

Our system of private retirement savings remains weak and inefficient. The fact that more people in America will face retirement with inadequate savings poses problems not just for the retirees, but for the overall economy as their consumption will contract with inadequate retirement income, or they will divert consumption from others in their families or rely more heavily on social transfers.

We need to strengthen our retirement system by reducing transactions costs and the exploitation of retirees. Expanding the Social Security system to include a "public option" for additional annuity benefits would enhance competition, driving down costs and increasing services.

The transfer of retirement accounts from large pension pools to individual accounts has increased overall administration fees. Research shows that the average 401(k) participant could lose up to a third of future savings in fees.⁸¹ Meanwhile, asset management fees have been a top driver of Wall Street's output in the last two decades years.⁸² A simple change in the rules, requiring fund managers to adhere to a fiduciary standard, would be an important move in the right direction.

All of this points to the creation of a 21st century housing finance system—including a government homeownership agency—using modern technology and the lessons learned from around the world on financial products that are best suited to the management of risk for ordinary individuals.

But, again, we could do more. We could require, for instance, that any pension or retirement account eligible for preferential tax treatment not have excessive transactions costs. Fees on any account could not exceed those on the best performing indexed funds, unless there were demonstrably higher risk adjusted returns. (Any excess fees would be held in an escrow account until the higher performance over, for example, a 10 year period were demonstrated). This reform would simultaneously reduce the exploitation of savers that results in significant reductions in their retirement income, reduce inequality, and reduce the short termism prevalent in the economy.

Our system of public retirement savings, in the form of Social Security, remains strong and effective. Administrative costs are but a fraction of those in the private sector, and recipients of Social Security are protected against fluctuations in stock prices and inflation. The main concern with our public Social Security program is budgetary: there is a worry that it is not self sustaining. Whether it is or is not depends on a large number of variables that will inevitably change over the relevant time horizon the next half century. What is clear is that we may need to make adjustments as time goes on. And there are many ways that we can make such adjustments.

For example, we should remove the payroll cap that limits the amount of revenue Social Security raises. In addition, the government should expand retirement security by providing a voluntary public retirement program above Social Security to further supplement retirement security. The plan could be modeled on private individual retirement accounts (IRA), but the public would have many additional benefits. Lower transaction costs and reduced opportunities for exploitation are immediate advantages. But the government could also match savings for the worse off the opposite of our current system for encouraging savings, which overwhelmingly subsidizes the rich.^v Such a program, what might be thought of as a public option for retirement, would be unsubsidized, but would provide competition and standards for the private sector. In the end, all would benefit from this greater true competition in financial services.

▶ Reform political inequality

Enacting the bold reforms we outline in this report, as well as other measures to address wealth and income inequality, is as much about political will as it is about economics. The concentration of wealth in our economy has created a concentration of power in our democracy. The result is that policies favored by the wealthy receive attention, while policy preferences of poor and middle income Americans are ignored.⁶³

Today, we have inequality in our democracy: people with higher incomes vote more frequently than those with lower incomes and election campaign finance is dominated by a relatively small number of large donors who wield outside influence.⁶⁴ While there a number of reforms needed to build a more inclusive democracy, two in particular stand out as having the most potential to create equality of voice in our democracy.

The first is making voting easy. Our current system of voting discourages full participation, leaving rules to the states, many of which have erected unnecessary barriers such as burdensome voter registration practices, in person voting, voting on a weekday, long wait times, and onerous voter identification. We should establish a federal system of universal voting that includes: (1) automatic voter registration, accepted throughout the country without the need to reregister and without burdensome voter identification requirements; (2) the ability to vote by mail or early in person on multiple days; (3) the establishment of weekend Election Days or a national election holiday; and (4) online voting when cyber security concerns are met.

Second, it is critical that we create a campaign finance system less dominated by large contributions. A constitutional amendment could go a long way toward allowing Congress greater leeway to reform campaign finance laws to increase political equality. Yet even within today's legal framework, it is both possible and imperative to enact a system of public funding to match small donor political contributions. Under this system, candidates can raise enough money to compete for elected office by raising small dollar contributions and relying much less on wealthy donors.

There are still other reforms, like requiring shareholders to vote in support of any political contributions. This report has emphasized the economic reforms that are needed to restore the

We can restore the balance between government, business, and labor to create an economy that works for everyone.

American economic dream. But our democratic ideals too are an important part of the American dream. Inequalities created by the rules and institutions that govern our political process need to change, too.

CONCLUSION

Our economy is a large and complex system, and in order to solve the problems with that system, we must aim to fix the economy as a whole. The financial crisis of 2008 and the Great Recession that followed exposed the inadequacy of the old economic models; the new research and thinking that has emerged as a result suggests that equality and economic performance are in fact complementary rather than opposing forces. No more false choices: changing course won't be easy in the current environment, but we can choose to fix the rules structuring our system. We can restore the balance between government, business, and labor to create an economy that works for everyone. Building on the innovative legacy of the New Deal, we must tame the growth of wealth among the top 1 percent and establish rules and institutions that ensure security and opportunity for the middle class.

^v This can be partially paid for by capping the deductibility of 401(k) savings among the rich.

APPENDIX: OVERVIEW OF RECENT INEQUALITY TRENDS

Most Americans remain preoccupied with the increasingly difficult task of managing their own household economic situation, rather than worrying about how a small sliver of the population managed to amass such extreme fortunes over the past several decades. This report advances the view that these two trends are inextricably linked—both the result of changes in the rules, laws, and policies that structure how our economy functions.

The American economy no longer works for most people in the United States. We know this from a raft of economic data showing the trends: a small percentage of the population takes home the lion's share of economic gains while most of the population face stagnant wages and increasing financial stress as they attempt to secure the traditional staples of a middle-class life.

But in fact, the rise of inequality in the United States is still much worse than most realize—in economics, politics, or the general public—or the most often cited statistics indicate. Not only has inequality risen to alarming levels unparalleled in other advanced economy countries, but the American dream of the prospects for individual economic advancement also increasingly appears to be a myth: high levels of inequality and wealth are associated with low levels of opportunity for upward economic mobility. More people are working hard, but not getting ahead—a fact we see across a range of indicators beyond the standard view of stagnant wages.

Hourly wages for most workers increased a mere 0.1 percent per year on average since 1980 after adjusting for inflation; between 2000 and 2013 the median family income actually decreased by 7 percent.

Although the federal poverty line provides an imperfect measure of basic needs, an estimated 2.8 million people worked full-time year round and still fell below the poverty line.² Inadequate incomes are not due to a lack of effort—the average middle class family worked an additional 1.4 full-time weeks per year in 2007, before the Great Recession impacted employment levels, compared to 1979.³

These income pressures are worse for some people at certain times of life. Families needing child care, attempting to send a child to college, or facing a health emergency have few additional funds and sharply rising costs—and so are under acute financial stress. And problems of adequate income pose disproportionate problems to women and people of color who have yet to shake the structural exclusion from certain occupations and discrimination in pay relative to men and whites in the workplace.

Wages and incomes for the majority of U.S. workers are no longer connected to how productive they are on the job. Conventional economic theory suggests that, in an efficient economy, workers should be paid based upon what they contribute to production.⁴ However, what workers are paid has, for the past generation, lagged far beyond their productivity. Historically these two indicators grew in tandem, but in the 40 years between 1973 and 2013, the relationship between worker output per hour, or labor productivity, and compensation began to break down. Labor productivity, or average output per hour of work, increased 161 percent while compensation paid to workers—including wages and other non-wage benefits—rose only 19 percent after adjusting for inflation.⁴ (While employers paid slightly more in total compensation, this largely reflected an increase in costs of health care benefits paid by employers. In other words workers didn't see any increase in their standards of living.)

¹ Economic theory says that wages should move with marginal productivity, but historically, average and marginal productivity have moved together, so much so that a standard model used by macroeconomists assumes that the two are proportional. There is no evidence that a significant wedge has opened up in movements in marginal and average productivities. Hence, we must look elsewhere for an explanation of relative wage stagnation.

In addition to low wages, getting a decent job remains a challenge for many Americans. Even as the national unemployment rate fell to 5.4 percent as of April 2015, most American families know the labor market remains weak.⁵ The overall share of the U.S. population at work—a broader measure of labor market activity than the unemployment rate—remains at around 59 percent. This is well below pre-recession levels and far below the peak of the nearly 65 percent employment-to-population ratio reached at the tail end of the 1990s economic boom.⁶ Even among those counted as employed, 6.7 million people are working part time because they can't find full time work, a 54 percent increase from 10 years ago.⁷

These declining prospects for work are a direct result of the structural factors discussed at length in the section of this report entitled "The Current Rules." For example, the Federal Reserve has chosen to prioritize price stability over full-employment, and thus failed to keep labor markets tight. The federal government has used fiscal (tax) policy to reward high-income earners rather than to make critical public investments that boost growth and compensation. Regulatory and legal changes have incentivized the private sector to prioritize short-term gains rather than the long-term investments in capital, research, or training that increase productivity.

FALLING LABOR SHARE OF INCOME MOST PRONOUNCED IN BOTTOM 99 PERCENT

Figure A1

Source: Giovannoni, Olivier, 2014, "What Do We Know About the Labor Share and the Profit Share? Part III: Measures and Structural Factors." Levy Economics Institute working paper no. 805, cross posted as UTIP working paper no. 66.

Additionally, we have seen a comprehensive campaign attacking existing labor standards and obstructing efforts to adopt new ones. Finally, our legal and institutional structures have made remarkably little progress in reducing the obstacles to good jobs faced by women and people of color.

If the income gains from more productive work did not go to U.S. workers, where did it go? The answer can be seen in Figure A1, which shows income from labor as a share of total income in the United States from 1980 to 2011. The dashed line indicates that the share of income paid to labor fell to 78.5 percent in 2011 from 85.3 percent as investors and wealth holders took a commensurately larger share of national income. But capital income is not the only thing to increase for the economically best-off during this time. The labor income—meaning salaries—of the top 1 percent (largely corporate executives and financial sector professionals) skyrocketed as well. Lumped in with all labor income, even national statistics showing an overall decline in labor share of income give a false impression of the share paid to workers.⁸ Disaggregating helps us see the problem more closely. Economist Olivier Giovannoni analyzed the data to see what the labor share of income would look like, excluding income of the top 1 percent, and showing a much more precipitous decline: falling to 63 percent from 78.5 percent.⁹

Rising inequality over this period put the United States among the most unequal of high income countries: only two countries within the OECD showed higher levels market income inequality, and, once the effect of progressive taxes and public transfer payments are taken into account, no advanced country is more unequal than the United States.¹⁰ The United States is much less generous in redistributing income than other countries, which is even starker when researchers focus solely on working-age populations under 60, as most people retire at a younger age outside the United States.

A political focus on the fact that top incomes have risen enormously while the majority of the population faces economic stress does not imply envy—the trends at the top are inextricably linked to the trends across the rest of the income distribution. Rising inequality undermines the opportunity for upward economic mobility. Research across OECD countries shows that the United States ranked poorly among advanced economy countries on the extent of its economic mobility.² Reports from the Economic Policy Institute and the Urban Institute illustrate just how immobile the United States is. These studies explored the likelihood that a person starting out in either the top or bottom quintile in 1994 would move to a different income quintile by 2004. More than 93 percent of people starting out at the bottom did not rise to more than the middle-income group over 10 years. In comparison, 80 percent of those starting in the top income group remained in the top or second to top after 10 years.³

Beyond affecting the functioning of our economy, the way that rising inequality at the top restrains economic mobility concerns the nature of our society and democracy. Economists now know that there is a strong association between the level of inequality in society and the degree of economic mobility.⁴ This is true not only when we look across countries, but even across regions in the US. Not surprisingly, the greater inequality experienced in the US since 1980 seems to have decreased opportunity. What little progress the United States had experienced with improving income mobility has stopped and the country has become more socially rigid. Economist Nathaniel Hilger found sizable improvements in intergenerational mobility in cohorts born between 1940 and 1980—a period of significant gains for social justice, including the expansion of education and important civil rights victories. This is also the period that saw the strongest declines in inequality.⁵ Since then, the rate of mobility has flattened, showing a significant stalling of mobility and the promise of opportunity that doesn't improve upon entrance into the labor market.⁶ As inequality grows, the consequences of stalled intergenerational mobility become more severe. Using the familiar ladder analogy, we observe that, even if the chances of climbing remain constant, the growing distance between rungs greatly increases the difficulty of the climb, amplifying the value of the "birth lottery."⁷

There are two reasons to worry: First, given recent increases in inequality of income, it would be a surprise if inequality of opportunity did not worsen in the future. Second, to get ahead in a modern economy, one needs a good education. But the quality of education one receives is closely tied to the socioeconomic status and education of parents (particularly fathers).⁸

Evidence of inequality by economic status, race, and gender pervade our education and health systems.⁹ But the development that occurs during the early stage of life is much more unequal and has lifelong consequences for an individual's cognitive development and economic success. Where a family sits on the income and wealth scales affects how much they have access to and can benefit from human capital expenditures and investments from the quality of pre natal and maternal care, to the quality of child care and the early development environment, to whether the parent's job affords family and sick leave.

Inequality at the starting gate begins long before a child reaches formal education systems. And it follows children, compounding throughout their academic and professional careers.²⁰ The quality of one's early environment matters tremendously. Nobel laureate James Heckman studied extensively how intensive pre education pilot programs affect low income children through schooling and into adulthood.² Heckman found that children receiving access to these programs performed better in school, were more likely to graduate and go to college, and were less likely to smoke, use drugs, become teenage mothers, or go on welfare.

An overwhelming body of research in this area shows that quality early child care is the most consistent predictor of a young child's behavioral and developmental outcomes including language, interpersonal communication, and cognitive abilities.²² Already, by the time children enter kindergarten, studies find significant impacts of early learning and environment. In one study, kindergartners from low income families exhibited weaker academic and attention skills.²³ Children contending with hunger and inadequate nutrition also show impaired learning in school.²⁴

Unequal access to affordable, quality childcare and early learning opportunities are compounded by the increasing time strains placed on working parents.²⁵ The secular trend over the past generation toward greater labor force participation by women and longer hours worked by everyone, especially single parents, leave little time or material resources left to invest in children's human capital development. The problem is further compounded for people residing in segregated areas, which are traditionally underserved by public transportation and other services. People in segregated areas also disproportionately have precarious, uncertain schedules and must also spend long hours commuting and running errands instead of, for example, helping their children with their homework.²⁶

Unlike early childhood and postsecondary education that families must pay for, kindergarten through 12th grade education is ostensibly free in the United States. But of course educational quality and resources vary tremendously depending on locale and positional competition to live in high quality school districts prices many out of the market.²⁷

Although America has long canonized the rags to riches narrative, the likelihood of that story becoming a reality has greatly decreased. As inequality rises, the political system becomes increasingly over run by corporate interests, and the public policies required to provide real equality of opportunity become harder and harder to enact.

THE ROLE OF TECHNOLOGY AND GLOBALIZATION

Many experts now agree that inequality is a significant challenge that must be addressed, but disagree on the causes and commensurate solutions to tackling the problems. Traditional arguments focus on technology or globalization as inequality's root causes. But the United States is not different from others who also face increasing computerization and automation in the workplace, as well as increasing competition from international trade and investment. But we do stand out in the excesses of our inequality.

This report focuses on the rules of our economy and the multiple policies that determine how it functions. But to understand why we focus on those structural policy elements, it is important to discuss other explanations for the particular type inequality we are seeing today in the U.S. Many experts agree that inequality is a significant challenge that must be addressed. But, following traditional economic arguments, they argue that rising inequality has little to do with the rules of the economy and much more to do with the rise of globalization and increasingly sophisticated technology. These stories are either unconvincing, in the case of technology, or insufficient, in the case of globalization.

There are three high level reasons to find the technology and globalization stories, as explanations for job loss and wage slowdown, at best only part of the story. First, as we have already mentioned, other countries around the world face the same global changes with respect to technology and international trade, yet have experienced nowhere near the rise of inequality seen in the United States. Many of these other countries have managed to shape their economies in ways that have produced more shared prosperity, with equivalent economic growth performance. With common exposure to technology and globalization, logic dictates some other variables must be the cause of America's uniquely extreme level of inequality.

Second, these technology and globalization stories are really primarily about supply and demand for labor as the sole determinant of wages. They seek to interpret changes in inequality simply as the outcome of shifts in demand and supply curves, explained in turn by changes in technology and globalization. But institutions matter as well. One of the important advances in economic theory over the past several decades, which was recently awarded the Nobel Prize, is search theory, a large body of work modeling how people find and accept job offers. Search theory argues that supply and demand do not fully determine market wages. Instead, supply and demand for labor set bounds on wages. A host of factors determine where wages fall within those bounds: bargaining power, labor market institutions (including the strength of unions), and social conventions. So, search theory suggests that even explanations that make technology and globalization dominant must acknowledge that the rules matter.²⁸ The third reason is that technology and globalization don't simply happen randomly, falling out of the sky like manna from heaven. Technology and globalization themselves are also shaped by the rules. Let's look at each in turn.

Technology and Skills

Many economists argue that technological changes, such as the use of computers in the workplace, have shifted employers' demand for workers with different levels of technological skills, thereby driving a wedge between the wages of those at the lower end of the U.S. income scale and those at the upper end and contributing to the rise of inequality.²⁹ Though a popular idea, the argument that technology and skills can explain current patterns of inequality is becoming more difficult to justify.

There were early signs of problems with the technology explanation even as the theory became popular. The difference in wages paid to high and low skill workers expanded most rapidly during the 1980s and remained relatively stable and large in the 1990s and 2000s, the era when information and computing technology really took off.³⁰ The technology argument also can't predict movements in the race and gender wage gaps.³ Nor can the rising incomes of those in the top 1 percent be explained as a matter of technology; these are driven by CEOs and finance, and would be unlikely to be affected by any skill gaps.³²

More recent research has shown that the skills gap argument, however true it may have been in the past, has now lost much validity. The higher education premium has stalled; it has not increased over the past 10 years.³³ Highly skilled workers are taking over less skilled occupations and face weakening career trajectories.

Productivity growth remains historically slow, indicating that a massive wave of technology isn't disrupting normal business practices in much of the economy. There are also powerful arguments that a weak labor market can in some cases even deter technological change: if wages are not rising, there is less incentive to invest in labor saving capital and technologies.³⁴

This is not to say technology has had no impact on inequality, or that it won't in the future. Technological advances can provide employers with powerful new means to monitor workers and more precisely specify work tasks and set work schedules, shifting the distribution of income within businesses.³⁵ Technology can contribute to top income growth by creating opportunities from blue ocean innovation, but tech can also create opportunities for businesses to exploit network effects, endowing firms with market power, able to extract high levels of rents. Whether businesses introduce labor complementing or labor substituting technologies in the future will depend not just on the laws of technology, but on the rules of the economy that determine how the gains from technology are distributed. Moreover, if the government chooses to impose carbon prices, more of our scarce research talent will be directed toward saving the planet, rather than saving labor.

Globalization

In the past several decades, the scale, scope, and nature of international trade in the U.S. economy have been changing, with commensurate changes wrought on businesses and workers. But this rise of globalization has also been determined and carried out through rules that we have set, and rules that we have played an important role in setting internationally, and these rules have had major consequences for how globalization has played out.

There is no doubt that this deepening of global economic linkages presents tremendous opportunity for efficiencies—obtaining things we couldn't have without trade and producing things where specialization made for economic gains innovations, and increases in general welfare. But it is also true that globalization has had significant costs, particularly in the context of the weak labor market that the United States has been experiencing. Daron Acemoglu and co authors found that trade competition from China alone displaced a conservatively estimated 2.4 million U.S. jobs between 1999 and 2011.³⁶ David Autor and co authors similarly found that Chinese import penetration of the U.S. market explained 25 percent of lost manufacturing jobs in the 1990s and 2000s, with those jobs lost much faster than they were replaced. This meant significant consequences for wage losses, extended spells of unemployment, and greater strains on public budgets for unemployment and disability insurance, early retirement, and health care costs.³⁷ Other researchers found that the labor share of income fell farthest in U.S. industries most exposed to import competition.³⁸

Note that even in the best of circumstances, the economic argument that suggested the freeing of trade would lead to enhanced general welfare also said that, in the absence of active government policies, it would also lead to greater inequality within the U.S., as unskilled wages fell as a result of the indirect competition from the more abundant unskilled labor abroad.³⁹ In effect, American unskilled workers would be forced to compete with unskilled workers from emerging markets and developing countries across a range of goods and services, and this would drive down wages.⁴⁰ Even though the United States is relatively abundant in high skill workers compared to many trading partner countries, more than 62 percent of the U.S. labor force still has less than a college degree, meaning we should expect trade to make a majority of Americans worse off.⁴ Standard theory at best argued that the gainers could compensate the losers, but it never said that they would. While other countries recognized the risks of globalization and took offsetting actions, the United States did not.

In addition to these costs, globalization has also created opportunities for businesses to earn big rents from the restructuring and fragmentation of production chains across geographic regions and multiple business entities. This is also motivated by pressures from financial markets. Globalization allows firms to take advantage of differences not only in labor costs arising from wage differences, but also in costs arising from differences regulatory standards and taxation.

This is especially important in the era of free trade agreements, which in reality are managed trade agreements. These agreements are less about trade and more about the regulatory environment corporations face investing and doing business overseas. Providing stronger guarantees for American corporations abroad—for instance, by allowing them to sue for damages from government regulations using secretive international “investor state dispute settlements” rather than local democratic institutions—has made it even more attractive to trade internationally. One important example showing that globalization is more about rewriting the rules of the economy than about trade: trade agreements have weakened competition from generic drugs in global pharmaceutical markets drugs, which has helped drive up global pharmaceutical prices.

We see this directly with intellectual property rights, which are part of the U.S.'s system for incentivizing innovation. Poorly designed intellectual property rights regimes can not only increase monopoly power, thereby raising prices and pricing some out of the market, but can even impede innovation. The most important input in the production of research and innovation is prior and complementary knowledge.⁴² Researchers and the academic community have expressed real concerns that the U.S. intellectual property regime has become unbalanced, and with trade agreements the U.S. is trying to export this system to the rest of the world.

So globalization, too, is not only about an abstract and exogenous set of forces, but also about the rules we set to manage the effect of increasing global connectedness on our economic lives. And no country plays a more important role than the U.S. in setting the international rules. If we want to get the rules right on trade, we should not export parts of our economic rules that have led to rapid rises of inequality in income, wealth, and political influence at home. Most importantly for the United States, we should not expand protections that tip the balance in favor of those already winning from trade, either by creating excessively stringent intellectual property rights or by establishing a legal regime that grants investors new rights to challenge public decision making.

INTRODUCTION

1. Ture, Kwame and Charles V. Ham ton. 1967. Black Power: The Politics of Liberation in America. New York: Vintage Books.
2. Pogue, Thomas W. 2008. World Poverty and Human Rights: Cosmopolitan Responsibilities and Reforms. Cambridge: Polity.
3. John F. Kennedy Library. N.d. "JFK on the Economy and Taxes." Retrieved May 5, 2015 (<http://www.jfklibrary.org/JFK/JFK-n-H-story/JFK-on-the-Economy-and-Taxes.aspx>).
4. Kuznets, Simon. 1955. "Economic Growth and Income Inequality." The American Economic Review 45(1):2-28. Some thought is observed on so important that they dubbed it "Kuznets's Law." There were some theories that reason to expect this pattern: in early stages of development, some parts of the country were more able to take advantage of the new opportunities and put ahead of others. Eventually the laggards catch up.
5. Kelly, Thomas and Emmanuel Saez. 2003. "Income Inequality in the United States." The Quarterly Journal of Economics 68(1):1-39. Retrieved May 5, 2015 (http://em.berke.edu/~saez/p_kellykuz.pdf).
6. Congress on a Budget Office. 2011. Trends in the Distribution of Household Income Between 1979 and 2007: A CBO Study. Publication on No. 4043. Retrieved May 5, 2015 (http://www.cbo.gov/ftpdocs/105xx/doc10543/HouseholdIncome_0.pdf).
7. Greenstone, Michael and Adam Looney. 2011. "Trends: Reduced Earnings for Men in America." Brookings, July 2011 Edition. Retrieved May 5, 2015 (<http://www.brookings.edu/research/papers/2011/07/men-earnings-greenstone-looney>).
8. Brocker, Jesse, L. sa. J. Dietrich, A. ce Henriques, Joanne W. Hill, Kevin B. Moore, John Sabo, Isaac, Jeffrey Thompson and Richard A. Windle. 2014. Changes in U.S. Family Finances from 2010 to 2013: Evidence from the Survey of Consumer Finances. Federal Reserve Bulletin 100(4). Retrieved May 5, 2015 (<http://www.federalreserve.gov/pubs/bulletin/2014/04/pdf/scf14.pdf>).
9. Okun, Arthur. 1979. Equality and Efficiency: The Big Tradeoff. Washington, DC: Brookings Institution Press.
10. The Internet on Commission on the Measurement of Economic Performance and Social Progress reported that GDP did not provide a good measure of economic performance. See Stiglitz, Joseph E., Amartya Sen, and Jean-Paul Fitoussi. 2008. "Report by the Commission on the Measurement of Economic Performance and Social Progress." Presented at the preparatory meeting of the Commission on the Measurement of Economic Performance and Social Progress, April 22-23, Paris, France. The IMF and other studies note, however, that even in the standard metrics of GDP growth and stability, economic growth more nequely perform more poor.
11. OECD. 2014. "Focus on Inequality and Growth." Organ sat on for Economic Cooperation and Development. Retrieved May 5, 2015 (<http://www.oecd.org/els/focus-focus-inequality-and-growth-2014.pdf>).
12. Ibid.
13. OECD. N.d. "Income Distribution and Poverty: By Country." Organ sat on for Economic Cooperation and Development. Retrieved May 4, 2015 (<http://stats.oecd.org/index.aspx?query=46189>).
14. Andrews, Edmund L. 2008. "U.S. Debt is $800 B." The New York Times, November 25, 2008. Retrieved May 5, 2015 (<http://www.nytimes.com/2008/11/26/business/economy/26fed.html?pagewanted=all>).
15. Cynamon, Barry and Steven Fazzari. 2014. "Inequality, the Great Recession, and Slow Recovery." New York, NY: The Institute for New Economic Thinking. Retrieved May 4, 2015 (<http://niee.com/resources/workingpapers/inequalityandthegreatrecession.pdf>).
16. Biondi, Darren. 2012. "2012 Foreclosure Market Outlook for CMAA." Presented at the California Mortgage Association Winter Seminar, February 2, Unversity City, CA. Retrieved May 4, 2015 (<http://www.sfdshare.net/RealEstate/2012-foreclosure-market-outlook-for-cmaa>).
17. Federal Reserve of St. Louis. "Real Median Household Income in the United States." FRED Economic Data. Retrieved May 4, 2015 (<http://research.stlouisfed.org/fred2/series/MEHOUSAL672N>).
18. Stiglitz, Joseph. 2015. "Origins of Inequality and Poverty." Forthcoming paper for National Tax Journal in June 2015, 68(2).
19. Jang, Jung, Mercedes Ekono, and Curt S. Skemer. 2015. "Basics Facts About Low-Income Children Under 18 Years, 2013." New York, NY: Nat on Center for Children in Poverty. Retrieved May 5, 2015 (http://www.nccp.org/publications/pdf/text_1100.pdf).
20. Galbraith, John Kenneth. 1952. American Capitalism: The Concept of Countervailing Power. Boston, MA: Houghton Mifflin. The first financial crisis after 1929 was the S & L Crisis of 1989, the result of the deregulation of the 1980s.
21. Sherman, Matthew. 2009. "A Short History of Financial Deregulation in the United States." Washington, DC: Center for Economic and Policy Research. Retrieved May 5, 2015 (<http://www.csepr.net/documents/publications/deregulation-2009-07.pdf>).
22. Some aspects of deregulation, such as in derivatives, actually began a little earlier. As deregulation did not bring about the kind of competitive market for which the deregulators had hoped, and therefore derailed the theory of contestability underlying deregulation, but the real adverse effects of deregulation began with the deregulation of the financial system.
23. Berger, Suzanne. 2014. "How Finance Gunned Manufacturing." The Boston Review, April 1, 2014. Retrieved May 4, 2015 (<http://bostonreview.net/forum/suzanne-berger-how-finance-gunned-manufacturing>).

THE CURRENT RULES

1. Bureau of Economic Analysis s. 2015. National Income and Product Accounts Tables 1.1.6. Washington, DC: U.S. Department of Commerce. Retrieved May 5, 2015 (<https://www.bea.gov/national/tables/tables>).
2. Bureau of Labor Statistics. 2015. "Labor Force Statistics from the Current Population Survey." Washington, DC: U.S. Department of Labor. Retrieved May 8, 2015 (<http://data.bls.gov/iif/oshwc/lurns/l33000000>).
3. Bureau of Economic Analysis s. 2015. "Monthly Personal Income, DPI, PCE and Personal Savings: Level and Percent Change." Washington, DC: U.S. Department of Commerce. Retrieved May 8, 2015 (<http://www.bea.gov/newsreleases/national/ina/p/2015/pdp/0315.html>).

4. Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. 2014. "Financial Accounts of the United States: Flow of Funds, Balance Sheets, and Integrated Macroeconomic Accounts." Washington, DC: U.S. Federal Reserve. Retrieved May 8, 2015 (<http://www.federalreserve.gov/easesz/ci/current/z1.pdf>).
5. Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. 2014. "Financial Accounts of the United States: Flow of Funds, Balance Sheets, and Integrated Macroeconomic Accounts." Washington, DC: U.S. Federal Reserve. Retrieved May 8, 2015 (<http://www.federalreserve.gov/easesz/ci/current/z1.pdf>).
6. Washington, DC: U.S. Government Accountability Office. 2013. "Corporate Income Tax: Effective Tax Rates Can Differ Significantly from Statutory Rate." Washington, DC: U.S. Government Accountability Office. Retrieved May 8, 2015 (<http://gao.gov/assets/660/654957.pdf>).
7. UMass Amherst Economics Department. Retrieved May 8, 2015 (<http://tuva.usamaine.edu/~bowes/PaperWP.pdf>).
8. Posner, Richard A. 1979. "The Chicago School of Antitrust Analysis." University of Pennsylvania Law Review 127(4):925-948.
9. Stiglitz, Joseph E. 2001. "Information and the Change in the Paradigm in Economics." Nobel Prize Lecture. Retrieved April 15, 2015 (http://www.nobelprize.org/nobel_prize/economics/laureates/2001/stiglitz-lecture.pdf).
10. Yeung, Dan and Joseph Stan saw. 2002. The Commanding Heights: The Battle for the World Economy. Chicago, IL: Free Press.
11. Bodin, Michele and David K. Levy. 2013. "The Case Against Patents." Journal of Economic Perspectives 27(1):3-22.
12. Moser, Petra. 2012. "Patents and Innovation: An Evolutionary Perspective." Stanford Law and Economics Olin Working Paper No 437. Retrieved May 8, 2015 (<http://dx.doi.org/10.2139/ssrn.2180847>).
13. Stiglitz, Joseph E. 2014. "Inequality, Property Rights, the Pool of Knowledge, and Innovation." NBER Working Paper No. 20014. The National Bureau of Economic Research. Retrieved May 4, 2015 (<http://nber.org/papers/w20014>).
14. Ibid.
15. Stiglitz, Joseph E. 2008. The Three Trillion Dollar War. New York: W.W. Norton.
16. SIGAR's Office of Special Projects. 2015. "Department of Defense Spending on Afghanistan Reconstructed: Contradictions Compared $21 Billion on Afghanistan." Retrieved May 8, 2015 (<https://www.sigar.mil/pdf/specia%20projects/SIGAR-15-40-SP.pdf>).
17. O'Neil, Thomas R., Ph. R. Lee, and Heerle L. Pilon. 2004. "A Political History of Medication and Prescription Drug Coverage." The Milbank Quarterly 82(2):283-354. Retrieved May 8, 2015 (<http://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc/articles/PMC2690175/>).
18. Hayward, Tamara. 2011. "Spending Patterns for Prescription Drugs Under Medicare Part D." Washington, DC: U.S. Congress on Budget and Fiscal Policy.
19. Shapiro, Carl and Ha Varian. 1989. Information Rules: A Strategic Guide to the Network Economy. Boston, MA: Harvard Business School Press.
20. Cabrera, Luis M.B., David J. S. ant, G. em A. Woroch. 1999. "Monopoly pricing with network externalities." International Journal of Industrial Organization 17(2):199-214.
21. Kio, Lu and Kerry A. Doan. 2015. "The World's Billionaires." New York, NY: Forbes Magazine. Retrieved May 8, 2015 (<http://www.forbes.com/billionaires/>).
22. Stiglitz, Joseph E. 2013. The Price of Inequality: How Today's Divided Society Endangers Our Future. New York, NY: W.W. Norton & Company. pp. 28-52.
23. Ibid. pp. 39-43.
24. Iza, D. E. 2012. "Excuses vs. AHP: Gave More Than $100 Million to Chamber's Efforts to Dera Health Care Reform." National Journal, June 13, 2012. Retrieved May 8, 2015 (<http://www.nationaljournal.com/ops/infuencea/2012/06/excuses-vs-ahp-gave-more-than-100-million-to-chambers-efforts-to-dera-health-care-reform-13/>).
25. Bond, Michael, Barry E. Chengreen, Dana K. ngbe, Maria Soledad Mart nez-Per and Andrew K. Rose. 2001. "Is the Crisis Problem Growing More Severe? Economic Policy 16(32):53-82. Retrieved May 9, 2015 (<http://www.nber.org/papers/w8716.pdf>).
26. Luitre, David, Tyler Akenson, and Harvey Rosenblum. 2013. "Assessing the Costs and Consequences of the 2007-09 Financial Crisis and Its Aftermath." Dallas Fed 8(7):1-4. Retrieved May 8, 2015 (<http://www.dallasfed.org/assets/documents/research/lec/2013/le1307.pdf>).
27. Grossman, Sanford J. and Joseph E. Stiglitz. 1980. "On the Impacts of Financial Markets." The American Economic Review 70(3):393-408. Retrieved May 8, 2015 (<https://www.aeaweb.org/aer/top20/70.3.393-408.pdf>).
28. Stiglitz, Joseph E. and Bruce Greenwald. 2003. Towards a New Paradigm in Monetary Economics. Cambridge, UK: Cambridge University Press.
29. Rosenblum, Harvey. 2011. "Choosing the Road to Prosperity: Why We Must End Too Big To Fail." Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas Annual Report May 3, 2015 (<http://www.dallasfed.org/assets/documents/led/annual/2011/ar11.pdf>).
30. Johnson, Simon and James Kwak. 2011. 13 Bankers: The Wall Street Takeover and the Next Financial Meltdown. New York, NY: Vintage.
31. Ibid.
32. Authors' calculations of FRED Economic Data. Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis s. 2014. "Value Added by Private Industries: Finance, Insurance, Real Estate, Rental, and Leasing: Finance and Insurance as a Percentage of GDP." St. Louis, MO: Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis. Retrieved May 8, 2015 (<https://research.stlouisfed.org/fred2/series/VAPGDPPI>).
33. Phillon, Thomas and Ar e Reshet. 2009. "Wages and Human Capital in the U.S. Financial Industry: 1909 - 2006." The Quarterly Journal of Economics 127(4):1651-1609. Retrieved May 8, 2015 (<http://qje.oxfordjournals.org/content/127/4/1651>).
34. Bakija, Jon, Adam Coe, and Bradley T. He m. 2012. "Jobs and Income Growth of Top Earners and the Causes of Changing Income Inequality: Evidence from U.S. Tax Return Data." W am s College and U.S. Department of the Treasury Office of Tax Analysis s. Retrieved May 4, 2015 (<http://web.w am.s.edu/Economics/cswp/BakijaCoeHehmJobsIncomeGrowthTopEarners.pdf>).
35. Ibid.

Bertrand and Lawrence M. Shee. 2013. "The Pay of Corporate Executives and Financial Profits: Evidence from the Top 1 Percent Income Tax Returns." Journal of Economic Perspectives 27(3):57-78.

Op. cit. Philippon "Wages and Human Capital..."

30. Demyanyk, Yu. ya. 2006. "Time for Predatory Lend ng Laws." The Regional Economist October, 2006:10-11. Retr ed May 9, 2015. (https://www.stlouisfed.org/media/ef/efPDFSPub.caf?assetId=20061006&id=nequa-1y.pdf)

31. Lillard, and Anamara. 2008. "F nance: An Essential Tool for Informed Consumer Choice?" Dartmouth College, Harvard Business School, and Nat ona Bureau of Econom c Research. Retr ed May 8, 2015 (http://www.dartmouth.edu/~a.usaid/Papers/Lusard_Informed_Consumer.pdf)

32. Grnd, K rsten. 2012. "What L bor Means for You." The Wall Street Journal Weekend Investor, August 3, 2012. Retr ed May 8, 2015 (http://www.wsj.com/art c/es/SB10000872399390435450457565120728037852)

33. Bray, Chad, Jenny Anderson, and Ben Prosser. 2014. "Big Banks Are F ned $4.25 B on n Inquiry Into Currency-R gg ng." The New York Times DealBook, November 12, 2014. Retr ed May 8, 2015 (http://dealbook.nytimes.com/2014/11/12/bt r t sh-and-u-s-regulators-fine-b-g-banks-3-16-b on-n-for-gn-exchange-scandals/)

34. Greenwood, Rob n, and Dav d Scharfste n. 2013. "The Growth of Finance." Journal of Economic Perspectives 27(2):3-28. Retr ed May 8, 2015 (http://www.people.hbs.edu/dscharfste n/growth_of_modern_finance.pdf)

35. Fama, Eugene F., and Kenneth R. French. 2010. "Luck versus Skill n the Cross-Section of Mutual Fund Returns." The Journal of Finance 65(6):1915-1947.

36. 35 percent figure: "Thus, asset management explain 2.2 percentage points of the 6.1 percentage point increase in finance output as a share of GDP, or 36% of the growth in the ratio of financial sector output to GDP."

37. Gordon, Gary and Andrew Met ck. 2010. "Regulating the Shadow Bank ng System." Wash ngton, DC: Brook ngns Inst tute on. Retr ed May 4, 2015 (http://www.brookngs.edu/~medialproje/abspesla-r-20102010b_tpea_gordon.pdf)

38. Diamond, Doug as W., and Ph. P. H. Dybv g. 1983. "Bank Runs, Deposit Insurance, and Liqu d ty." The Journal of Political Economy 91(3):401-419.

39. Levin, Adam J., and Tara Twomey. 2011. "Mortgage Serv c ng." Yale Journal on Regulation 28(1). Retr ed May 8, 2015 (http://papers.ssrn.com/sol3/papers.cfm?abstract_d=1324023)

40. Ph pson, Thomas. 2014. "Has the U.S. Finance Industry Become Less Effic ent? On the Theory and Measurement of Finance Efficiency." Journal of Finance 69(1):1-20. Retr ed May 5, 2015 (http://pages.stern.nyu.edu/~tph_pppapers/Finance_Efficiency.pdf)

41. Cecchetti, Stephen G., and Enesse Kharroub. 2012. Reassessing the Impact of Finance on Growth. BIS Working Paper No. 381. Retr ed May 8, 2015 (http://www.bis.org/pub/work/381.pdf)

42. Cecchetti, Stephen G., and Enesse Kharroub. 2015. Why does financial sector growth crowd out real economic growth? BIS Working Paper No. 490. Retr ed May 8, 2015 (http://www.bis.org/pub/work/490.pdf)

43. Konczka, Mike and Marcus Stan ey. 2013. "An Unl nshed Mess on Wall Street Work for Us." New York, NY: The Roosevelt Inst tute. Retr ed May 8, 2015 (http://rooseveltinsttute.org/s/tesla_files/unl nshed_mess_on_2013.pdf)

44. Cecchetti, Stephen G., and Enesse Kharroub. "Why does financial sector growth..."

45. Stout, Lynn. 2012. The Shareholder Value Myth: How Putting Shareholders First Harms Investors, Corporations, and the Public. San Francisco, CA: Berrett-Koehler Pub shers.

46. Su van, E. Thomas. 1988. "The Antitrust Dilemma as a Regulatory Agency: An Enforcement Policy n Transac on." Pp. 106-141 n Public Policy toward Corporate Takeovers, ed by Murray L. Weidenbaum and Kenneth C. Ton, Edson, NJ: Transaction Pub shers.

47. Hoström, Bengt and Steven N. Kap an. 2001. "Corporate Governance and Merger Act v ty n the United States: Making Sense of the 1980s and 1990s." Journal of Economic Perspectives 15(2):121-144.

48. Hoström, Bengt and Steven N. Kap an. 2003. "The State of U.S. Corporate Governance: What's Right and What's Wrong?" Unvers ty of Chicago Booth School of Business and the Nat ona Bureau of Econom c Research. Retr ed May 8, 2015 (http://www.chicagobooth.edu/assets/s/g er/185.pdf)

49. Op. cit. Bakija, Jon, Adam Cole, and Bradley T. Heim.

50. Lazon ck W. am. 2014. "Tak ng Stock: Why Execut ve Pay Results n an Unstable and Inequ tabe Economy." New York, NY: The Roosevelt Inst tute. Retr ed May 8, 2015 (http://rooseveltinsttute.org/s/tesla_files/lazon ck_Execut ve_Pay_Why_Paper_Roosevelt_Institute.pdf)

51. Dav s, A yssa and Lawrence M she. 2014. "CEO Pay Cont racts to Rise as Typ cal Workers Are Paid Less." Wash ngton, DC: Economic Policy Institute. Retr ed May 8, 2015 (http://www.epi.org/pub.caf/on/ceo-pay-contracs-to-rise)

52. Ho mberg, Susan and M chael Umbrecht. 2014. "Understanding the CEO Pay Debate: A Primer on America's Ongoing C-Suite Conversation." New York, NY: The Roosevelt Inst tute. Retr ed May 8, 2015 (http://rooseveltinsttute.org/s/tesla_files/Susan_Ho mberg_M chael_Umbrecht_Understanding_the_CEO_Pay_Debate_Web.pdf)

53. A me da, He tor, Vyacheslav Fos and Math as Kron und. 2014. "The Real Effects of Share Repurchases." Unvers ty of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. Retr ed May 8, 2015 (http://papers.ssrn.com/sol3/papers.cfm?abstract_d=2276156)

54. Lazon ck W. am. 2014. "Profits Without Prosper ty." Boston, MA: Harvard Business Review. Retr ed May 8, 2015 (https://hbr.org/2014/09/profits-without-prosper ty)

55. Bertrand, Mar anne and Sendhu M u. a nathan. 2001. "Are CEOs Rewarded for Luck? The Ones Who Put Pr nc ples Are." The Quarterly Journal of Economics August 2001: 901-932. Retr ed May 9, 2015 (http://web.stanford.edu/group/scsp/med sl/pdf/Reference%20Medal Bertrand%20and%20Mu a nathan 2001 E tes.pdf)

56. Frydman, Caro and Raven E. Saks. 2010. "Execut ve Compensation: A New View from a Long-Term Perspective, 1936-2005." The Review of Financial Studies 23(5):2099-2138.

57. De al'igna, Stefano and Joshua M. Po. et. 2007. "Demographic s and Industry Returns." American Economic Review, 97(5): 1667-1702. Retr ed May 9, 2015 (http://em.berkeley.edu/~sde al'igna/papers/07-08-23AER.pdf)

58. Asker, John, Juan Fra nco-Mensa, and Alexander Ljungqv st. 2015. "Corporate Investment and Stock Market L s ng: A Puzzle?" Review of Financial Studies 28(2):342-390.

59. Institute. Retr ed May 8, 2015 (http://rooseveltinsttute.org/s/tesla_files/Mason_Dsorge_the_Cash.pdf)

60. This change also has serous consequences for monetary policy, as t means that aggregate investment n ght have ess responsiveness to changes n debt financ ng; see Mason 2015 "Dsorge the Cash," http://rooseveltinsttute.org/s/tesla_files/Mason_Dsorge_the_Cash.pdf.)

61. She n, Kara M. 2015. "Toward Healthy Companies and a Stronger Economy: Remarks to the U.S. Treasury Department's Corporate Women n Finance Symposium." U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission. Retr ed May 8, 2015 (http://www.sec.gov/news/speech/ste n-toward-healthy-compan es.htm)

62. Op. cit. Mason, J.W. Authors' analysis of Federal Reserve Flow of Funds Database

63. For further deta see Mason 2015 "Dsorge the Cash," http://rooseveltinsttute.org/s/tesla_files/Mason_Dsorge_the_Cash.pdf

64. Business Insider Apr. 14, 2015. "BackRock CEO Larry F nk te s the world's biggest bus ness leaders to stop worry ng about short-term results." Business Insider, Apr. 14, 2015. (http://www.businessinsider.com/any-link-eter-to-ceos-2015-4# zzz3ZbDKKE4o)

65. Internat onal Revenue Serv ce. 2010. Individual Income Tax Rates and Shares. 2010. (IRS Statistics of Income Bu et n, Winter 2013) U.S. Department of the Treasury. Retr ed May 9, 2015 (http://www.irs.gov/pub/irs-soi/13win/bu et n/esshare.pdf)

66. Internat onal Revenue Serv ce. Statistics of Income: Individual Income Tax Rates and Shares, Table 6. U.S. Department of the Treasury. Retr ed May 9, 2015 (http://www.irs.gov/pub/irs-soi/13win/bu et n/esshare.pdf)

67. Congress on a Budget Office. 2011. Trends n the Distribution of Household Income Between 1979 and 2007. Congress on a Budget Office. Retr ed May 8, 2015 (https://www.cbo.gov/sites/default/files/10-25-Household_Income_D.pdf)

68. P kety, Thomas, Emmanue Saez, and Stelan e Stanchcheva. 2014. "Opt ma Taxat on of Top Labor Incomes: A Tale of Three East c tes." American Economic Journal: Economic Policy 2014(6(1)): 230-271.

69. Tax Po cy Center. 2015. "U.S. Ind vidual Income Tax: Persona Exemptions and Lowest and Highest Tax Bracket Tax Rates and Tax Base for Regu ar Tax." Tax Years 1913-2015." Urban Inst tute Tax Po cy Center. Retr ed May 8, 2015 (http://www.taxpo cycenter.org/facts/Content/PDF/hstor ca_parameters.pdf)

70. Congress on a Budget Office. 2013. The Distribution of Major Tax Expenditures n the Individual Income Tax System. Congress on a Budget Office. Retr ed May 8, 2015 (https://www.cbo.gov/sites/default/files/43768.pdf)

71. Ibid.

72. Op. cit. IRS "Individual Income Tax Rates, Table 6"

73. A ready the second largest tax expenditure n 2011, mortgage interest deduct b ty—73 and 15 percent of wh ch goes to the top quart e and top one percent, respect vely—s expected to cont nue grow ng slowly over the next severa years.

74. Op. cit. Congressional Budget Office "The Distribution of Major Tax Expenditures..."

75. Ibid.

76. Op. cit. Congressional Budget Office "Trends n the Distribution of Household Income..."

77. Ibid.

78. Op. cit. Congressional Budget Office "The Distribution of Major Tax Expenditures..."

79. Toder, Eric. 2008. "Who Pays Cap ta ns Tax?" The Urban Inst tute Tax Po cy Center. Retr ed May 8, 2015 (http://www.taxpo cycenter.org/UploadedPDF/10012011_Cap ta ns_tax.pdf)

80. Hungerford, Thomas L. 2011. Changes n the Distribution of Income Among Tax Filers Between 1996 and 2006: The Role of Labor Income, Capital Income, and Tax Policy. Congress on a Research Serv ce. Retr ed May 8, 2015 (http://taxprof.typepad.com/files/crs-1.pdf)

81. Op. cit. Congressional Budget Office "The Distribution of Major Tax Expenditures..."

82. Internat onal Revenue Serv ce. 2012. The 400 Individual Income Tax Returns Reporting the Largest Adjusted Gross Incomes Each Year, 1992-2012, Table 1. U.S. Department of the Treasury. Retr ed May 8, 2015 (http://www.irs.gov/pub/irs-so/12ntop400.pdf)

83. P kety, Thomas, Emmanue Saez, and Stelan e Stanchcheva. 2014. "Opt ma Taxat on of Top Labor Incomes: A Tale of Three East c tes." American Economic Journal: Economic Policy 6(1):230-71.

84. Ibid.

85. Gorn ck, Janet C., and Branko M anov c. 2015. "Income Inequality n the United States n Cross-Nat ona Perspective: Red str but on Revisited." LIS/US Center Research Brief. Retr ed May 8, 2015 (http://www.gu.cuny.edu/CUNY_GC/med a/CUNY-Graduate-Center/PDF/Centers/LIS/US-Center-Research-Brief-2-2015.pdf?rate=pdf)

86. Hungerford, Thomas L. 2015. Taxes and the Economy: An Economic Analysis of the Top Tax Rates Since 1945 (Updated). Congress on a Research Serv ce. Retr ed May 8, 2015 (https://taxs.org/sgr/crsm/socR42Z2s.pdf)

87. Ronsch d, Casey and F. or an Scheuer. 2011. "Opt ma Taxat on with Rent-Seek ng." NBER Working Paper No. 17035. Retr ed May 8, 2015 (http://www.nber.org/papers/w17035.pdf)

88. Lockwood, Benjamin B., and Charles G. Nathanson. Pending. "Taxat on and the Allocation of Talent Under review on at the request of the Journal of Po t ca Economy as of June 2014.

89. Osty, Jonathan D., Andrew Berg, and Chara ambos G. Tsangarides. 2014. "Red str but on, Inequality, and Growth." Internat ona Monetary Fund. Retr ed May 8, 2015 (https://www.imf.org/external/pubs/ft/sdn/2014/sdn1402.pdf)

90. Kor nek, Anton and Joseph E. St g tz. 2008. "D vident Taxat on and Intertempora Tax Arbitrage." NBER Working Paper No. 13858. Retr ed

85. May 8, 2015 (<http://www.nber.org/papers/w13658.pdf>).

86. Yagan, Danny. 2015. "Cap in Reform and the Real Economy: the Effects of the 2003 Dividend Tax Cut." NBER Working Paper No. 21003. Retrieved May 6, 2015 (<http://www.nber.org/papers/w21003>).

87. Conesa, Juan Carlos, Sagr? K.iao, and D. R. Krueger. 2008. "Tax on Cap in? Not a Bad Idea After All." Unversity of Pennsylvania. Retrieved May 8, 2015 (<http://econ.com.cs.ssu.upenn.edu/~drueger/research/Rev%20on%20Cap%20in%20Taxation.pdf>).

88. Re, S. Catarina. 2011. "Entrepreneurship and Capital Taxation." Macroeconomic Dynamics 15(3):326-335. Retrieved Apr. 8, 2015 (https://deas.repec.org/papers/nv192011/03p326-335_00.htm).

89. Chir? atsen, V. dar and Matt? Tuoma. 2008. "On tax on capital income with income shifting." International Tax and Public Finance 15(4):527-545. Retrieved May 8, 2015 (<http://em.berkeley.edu/~saez/course/chir?atsen-tuoma/ITAF%2008cap%20income%20shifting.pdf>).

90. Diamond, Peter, and Emmanuel Saez. 2011. "The Case for a Progressive Tax: From Basic Research to Policy Recommendations." Journal of Economic Perspectives 25(4):165-90. Retrieved Apr. 1, 2015 (<http://econ.com.cs.mtu.edu/papers/11jpe165.pdf>).

91. Fu, Employment and Basic Growth Act of 1978. Pub. L. Law 95-523. 92 Stat. 1887.

92. The Federal Reserve's statutory object was for monetary policy, as stated in the Federal Reserve Act of 1913, are maximum employment, stable prices, and moderate long-term interest rates, but the statute's common language referred to as the "dual mandate".

93. Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis. FRED Economic Data. "Interest rates, Discount Rate for United States." Retrieved May 5, 2015 (<http://research.stlouisfed.org/fred2/series/INTDSRUM13Q3>).

94. Orszag, Peter. 2001. "How the Bush Tax Cut Compares." Center on Budget and Policy Priorities. Retrieved May 8, 2015 (<http://www.cbpp.org/archives/2-5-01tax2.htm>).

95. Bernanke, Ben S., and Frederic S. Mishkin. 1997. "Inflation Targeting: A New Framework for Monetary Policy?" American Economic Association 11(2):97-116. Retrieved Apr. 10, 2015 (<http://web.unc.edu/econ/kn/benankem/askn97.pdf>).

96. Batini, Nicola, Kenneth Kuttner, and Douglas Laxton. 2005. "Does Inflation Targeting Work in Emerging Markets?" International Monetary Fund. Retrieved May 3, 2015 (<http://www.im.org/xmedia/pubs/ftwec/200502/p02ra1paper4.pdf>).

97. Bernanke, Ben S. 2003. "A Perspective on Inflation Targeting." Pub. C Address at the Annual Meeting of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis. Retrieved May 1, 2015 (<http://www.federalreserve.gov/BoardsDocs/speeches/2003/03030325defaul.htm>).

98. "The Federal Reserve, though rejecting the inflation-targeting rule, has greatly increased its credibility for maintaining low and stable inflation, and has become more proactive in heading off inflationary pressures, and has worked hard to improve the transparency of its policymaking process—a hallmark of the inflation-targeting approach."

99. Friedman, Milton. 1976. "Inflation and Unemployment." Noble Memorial Lecture. The University of Chicago. Retrieved May 8, 2015 (<http://sojio.ama.edu/p/sojio/userfiles/40/fr-edman-ecture.pdf>).

100. Ba, Laurence and N. Gregory Mankiw. 2002. "The NAIURU in Theory and Practice." Journal of Economic Perspectives 16(4):115-136. Retrieved May 8, 2015 (http://www.scho.harvard.edu/files/mankiw/files/ep_ba_mankiw.pdf).

101. Storm, Servaas and C. W. M. Naastepad. 2013. "How Milton Friedman's NAIURU Has Increased Inequality, Damaged Innovation and Growth." Institute for New Economic Thinking. Retrieved May 1, 2015 (<http://necocom.cs.org/bog/nst-tute/how-milton-friedman-s-nau-has-increased-inequality-damaged-innovation-and-growth>).

102. Krueger, Alan B., Judd Cranmer, and Day d. Cho. 2014. "Are the Long-Term Unemployed on the Margins of the Labor Market?" Brookings Papers on Economic Activity. The Brookings Institute. Retrieved May 1, 2015 (http://www.brookings.edu/~med/Projects/BPEA/Spring%202014/2014a_krueger.pdf).

103. Fraser, st. Louis. 1933. "Getting Back to Work." Retrieved May 4, 2015 (<http://www.fred.stlouisfed.org/fred2/series/fraser/1933>).

104. Baker, Dean and Jared Bernstein. 2013. "Getting Back to Work: Employment: A Better Baigan for Working People." Washington, DC: Center for Economic and Policy Research. Retrieved May 4, 2015 (http://www.cepr.net/documents/getting-back-to-work-employment_20131118.pdf).

105. Ibid.

106. Carpenter, Seth B. and William M. Rodgers III. 2004. "The Divergent Labor Market Impacts of Monetary Policy." Journal of Policy Analysis and Management 23(4):813-830.

107. Furman, Jason and Joseph E. Stiglitz. 1998. "Economic Consequences of Income Inequality." Presented at the Income Inequality Issues and Policy Options Symposium, August 27-29, Jackson Hole, WY. Retrieved May 4, 2015 (http://www.kc.frb.org/pub/cats/sympos/1998/S98stg_tz.pdf).

108. Miller, A. An. 2014. "Peer-Reviewed Psychology." Washington Monthly. Retrieved March 30, 2015 (http://www.washingtonmonthly.com/magazine/novemberdecember_2014/features/peer-reviewed-psychology/52713.php?page=1).

109. Oreopoulos, Ph. p. T. von Wachter and Andrew Heisz. 2006. "The Short- and Long-Term Career Effects of Graduating in a Recession: Hysteresis and Heterogeneity in the Market for College Graduates." National Bureau of Economic Research Working Paper No. 12159. Retrieved May 4, 2015 (<http://www.nber.org/papers/w12159>).

110. Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis. 2015. "Employment Leave - Part 1: The Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis." Retrieved May 4, 2015 (http://www.washingtonmonthly.com/magazine/novemberdecember_2014/features/peer-reviewed-psychology/52713.php?page=1).

111. Moriath, E. C. 2015. "Broadest Unemployment Measure Less Rosy." The Wall Street Journal. March 15, 2015. Retrieved March 20, 2015 (<http://www.wsj.com/artices/broadest-unemployment-measure-less-rosy-1426461694>).

112. Markham, Jerry W. 2002. A Financial History of the United States: From Christopher Columbus to the Robber Barons (1492-1900). Ammonk, N.Y.: M.E. Sharpe.

113. Kirsch, Richard. 2015. "The Future of Work in America: Policies to Empower American Workers and Secure Prosperity for All." The Roosevelt Institute. Retrieved May 4, 2015 (<http://rooseveltinstitute.org/wp-content/uploads/2015/05/26share-of-unauthorized-zed-mm-grant-pastor-manue-just-n-scoggins-vanessa-carter-and-jared-sanchaz-2014-10-21-zenith-p-matters-how-children-of-immigrants-will-sway-the-future-of-us.pdf>).

114. Greenhouse, Steven. 2013. "VW and Its Workers Explore a Union at a Tennessee Plant." The New York Times. Retrieved May 1, 2015. (http://www.nytimes.com/2013/09/07/business/aw-and-auto-workers-explore-union-at-tennessee-plant.html?_r=0).

115. Bureau of Labor Statistics. 2014. Union Members -- 2014. Union Membership Annual News Release. Retrieved May 4, 2015 (<http://www.bls.gov/bulletins/uea/ann02.htm>).

116. The State of Working Men. 2012. "Cumulative change in total economy productivity and real hourly compensation of production/nonagriculture four-changes-bla-economy)."

117. Authors' Analysis: Data are for production and non-supervisory workers, accounting for roughly 80 percent of all employees in the U.S. Godard, John. 2003. "Do Labor Laws Matter? The Bents by Decade and Convergence Thesis Revisited." Industrial Relations, 42:458-492. Retrieved May 4, 2015 (http://papers.ssrn.com/sol3/papers.cfm?abstract_id=416152).

118. Labour Program, Government of Canada. 2014. "Unemployment in Canada, 2013." Retrieved May 4, 2015 (<http://www.about.gc.ca/en/resources/nlo/pub/cats/on/un/coverage.shtm>).

119. OECD. 2014. "Economic Policy Reforms 2014: Going for Growth Interim Report." Organized for Economic Co-operation and Development. Retrieved May 4, 2015. (http://www.keepeek.com/Digital-Asset-Management/oecd/economy/economic-policy-reforms-2014_growth-2014-en.pdf).

120. Op. cit. Kirsch, Richard.

121. Hacker, Jacob S. and Paul Pierson. 2011. Winner-Take-All Politics. New York, NY: Simon & Schuster. Retrieved Apr. 3, 2015 (<http://po.soc.uscd.edu/p126a/docs/HackerPierson2010.pdf>).

122. Bernhardt, Annette, Ruth M. Kman, N.K. Theodore, Doug as Heckathorn, M. raba Auer, James Defina, Ana Luz Gonzalez, Victor Nario, Jason Parrishevin, Dana P. Soson, and Michael Sp. 2009. "Broken Laws, Unprotected Workers: Violations of Employment and Labor Laws in America's Cities." New York, NY: National Employment Law Project. Retrieved May 5, 2015 (<http://nepl.org/content/uploads/2015/03/BrokenLawsReport2009.pdf>).

123. Barenberg, Mark. 2015. "Uncovering the Scope of Worker Organizing: Legal Reforms to Facilitate Multi-Employer Organizing." Baigan, and Striking. New York, NY: Roosevelt Institute, forthcoming.

124. Harris, E. T. Quinn, Governor of Illinois. 2003. "Unions and the Wage Inequality: A Comparative Study of the U.S., the U.K., and Canada." The National Bureau of Economic Research Working Paper No. 9473. Retrieved May 8, 2015 (<http://www.nber.org/papers/w9473>).

125. Western, Bruce and Jake Rosenthal. 2011. "Unions, Norms, and the Rise in U.S. Wage Inequality." American Sociological Review, 76(4):513-537.

126. G. tman, Maury and Brooks Pierce. 2007. "New Estimates of Unions on Wage Effects in the U.S." Economics Letters 95(2):198-202. Retrieved May 5, 2015 (http://econpapers.repec.org/arc/leeeceee/ew/3a92007_3a_3a2_3a3a_3a198-202.htm).

127. Buchmeier, G., Thomas C. John D. Nardo and Robert G. Va. 2012. "Unions on Effects on Health Insurance Provisions and Coverage in the United States." Industrial and Labor Relations Review 55(4):610-627. Retrieved May 5, 2015 (<http://www-persona.umich.edu/~jdward/pubs/UnitedStates/>).

128. Schmitt, John, Margy Waer, Shawn Friedman and Ben Zepner. 2007. "Unions and Upward Mobility for Low-Wage Workers." Washington, DC: Center for Economic and Policy Research. Retrieved May 8, 2015 (<http://www.cepr.net/documents/pubs/cats/on/unions-ov-wage-2007-08.pdf>).

129. The State of Working Men. 2012. "Share of workers with paid leave, by wage group, 2011." Economic Policy Institute. Retrieved May 5, 2015 (<http://www.stateofworkingmen.com/wage-tab-e-4-12-share-workers-paid>).

130. Bureau of Labor Statistics. 2010. "Table 32. Defined Benefit Plans: Summer of Plan Provisions." Private Industry Workers, National Compensation Survey, 2010." Washington, DC: U.S. Department of Labor. Retrieved May 5, 2015 (<http://www.bls.gov/nics/ebs/defebpovs/2010/02m01nsh/p/private/leaves32a.pdf>).

131. OECD. 2014. "Coverage for Health Care." Society at a Glance 2014: OECD Social Indicators, pp. 130-131. Retrieved May 5, 2015 (<http://www.oecd-ilibrary.org/docserver/download.cad?ref=1313171ec26>).

132. Duke, Brendan V. 2014. "America's Inequality: The Striking Over the Rights Need an Update." Washington, DC: Center for American Progress. Retrieved May 5, 2015 (<https://cdn.americanprogress.org/wp-content/uploads/2014/06/OvertmeRightsNeedUpdate.pdf>).

133. Cooper, Day d. 2015. "Given the Economy's Growth, the Federal Minimum Wage Could Be a Significant Uplift." Washington, DC: Economic Policy Institute. Retrieved May 9, 2015 (<http://www.epi.org/pub/cats/ov/en-the-economy-s-growth-the-federal-minimum-wage-could-be-significant-uplift/>).

134. Cooper, Day d. Lawrence Mashe, and John Schmitt. 2015. "The Can Afford a $12.00 Federal Minimum Wage in 2020." Economic Policy Institute Briefing Paper #998. Retrieved May 9, 2015 (<http://www.epi.org/pub/cats/ov/en-can-afford-a-12-00-federal-minimum-wage-in-2020>).

135. We, J. David. 2014. The Fissured Workplace. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press.

136. Op. cit. Bernhardt, Annette, et al.

137. Meix, Brady and Ross E. Senberry. 2014. "An Epidemic of Wage Theft: Costing Workers Hundreds of Millions of Dollars a Year." Washington, DC: Economic Policy Institute. Retrieved May 9, 2015 (<http://www.epi.org/pub/cats/ov/en-dem-come-their-costing-workers-hundreds/>).

138. Passe, Jeffrey S. and D. Vera Cohn. 2015. "Share of Unauthorized Immigrant Workers in Production, Construction, Jobs Fa s Since 2007." Washington, DC: Pew Research Center. Retrieved May 9, 2015 (<http://www.pewspan.org/2015/03/26/share-of-unauthorized-zed-mm-grant-workers-n-product-on-construct-on-jobs-fa-s-since-2007/>).

139. Pastor, Manue, Just n Scoggins, Vanessa Carter, and Jared Sanchaz. 2014. "Citizenship Matters: How Children of Immigrants Will Sway the Future of U.S." Washington, DC: Center for American Progress. Retrieved May 8, 2015 (<https://cdn.americanprogress.org/wp-content/>).

129. Ture, Kwame and Char es V. Ham ton, 1967. Black Power: The Politics of Liberation in America. New York: V niversity Books.

130. Pogge, Thomas W., 2008. World Poverty and Human Rights: Cosmopolitan Responsibilities and Reforms. Cambridge, MA: Po Ly.

131. Pader, Devah, Bruce Western and Bart Bonkowski, 2009. "Dscrmination in a Low-Wage Labor Market: A F ed Experiment." American Sociological Review 74(5):777-799.

132. The Alm e E Casey Foundation, 2014. "k ds Count: Data Book State Trends in Ch d Wlve-Beng." Retr ev ed May 5, 2015 (<http://www.aecd.org/initialresources/aecd2014kdscountdatabook2014.pdf>).

133. Data First. "What's the Poverty Level of Our School(s)?" Center for Pub c Educat on. Retr ev ed May 5, 2015 (<http://www.data-first.org/data/what-s-the-poverty-level-of-our-school-s/>).

134. Op. cit. United States Census Bureau Historical Poverty Tables - People.

135. Macartney, Suzanne, Aemayshu Bshaw, and Kay a Fontenot. 2013 Poverty Rates for Selected Detailed Race and Hispanic Groups by State and Place: 2007-2011. Amer can Community Survey Br els, Wash ngton, DC: Un ted States Department of Commerce. Retr ev ed May 9, 2015 (<http://www.census.gov/prod/2013pubs/cacsbr11-17.pdf>).

136. CLASP, 2013. "Ch d Poverty in the U.S.: CLASP, Wash ngton, DC. Retr ev ed May 9, 2015 (http://www.csp.org/resources-and-pub cat ons/pub cat on-18-18-13-CensusPovertyData_FactSheet.pdf).

137. Kochhar, Rakesh and R chard Fry, 2014. "Wealth Inequa ty Has W dened A ong Race a, Elm c h Lines S nce End of Great Recess on." Wash ngton, DC: Pew Research Center. Retr ev ed May 5, 2015 (<http://www.pewresearch.org/fact-tank/2014/11/21/race-a-wealth-gaps-great-recess-on/>).

138. Shapiro, Thomas M, and Me v n L O ver, 2006. Black Wealth/White Wealth (2nd ed.). New York, NY: Taylor & Francis.

139. Op. cit. Kochhar, Rakesh and Richard Fry.

140. Shapiro, Thomas, Tejiana Meschede and Sam Osoro, 2013. "The Roots of the W denng Race a Wealth Gap: Exp on ng the Back-White Econom c D v de." Watham, MA: Institute on Assets & Soc a Po cy, Brande s Unvers ty. Retr ev ed May 5, 2015 (<http://aspi.brande s.edu/pdfs/Autumn13-roto-thomas-mrca-a-wealthgapfor.pdf>).

141. Op. cit. Shapiro, Thomas and Me v n L O ver.

142. Op. cit. Kochhar, Rakesh and Richard Fry.

143. Mauer, Marc and Ryan S. King, 2007. "Uneven Justice: State Rates of Incarceration By Race and Ethn c ty." Wash ngton, DC: The Sentenc ng Project. Retr ev ed May 5, 2015 (http://www.sentenc ngproject.org/doc/pub cat ons/frd_slaterratesofincarceration.htm.c ty.pdf).

144. The Pew Charitable Trusts, 2010. "Co atera Crisis: Incarceration's Effect on Econom c Mob ty." Wash ngton, DC: The Pew Char tab e Trusts. Retr ev ed May 4, 2015 (http://www.pewtrusts.org/~media/legacy/upoadeaf/esjpcs_assets/2010/Co atera Coals1.pdf.pdf).

145. Op. cit. Alexander, Michelle

146. Op. cit. DeWitt.

147. Op. cit. The Pew Charitable Trusts.

148. Nea, Derek and Am n R ck, 2013. "The Prson Boom & the Lack of Back Progress after Sm th & We ch." Ch cago, IL: Un vers ty of Ch cago Becker F edman Institute. Retr ev ed May 5, 2015 (<https://ecomresearch.uchicago.edu/files/es/Prson%20Boom.pdf>).

149. Benner, Chrs and Manue Pastr, 2014. "Brother, Can You Spare Some T me?" Sustan ng Prosper ty and Soc a Incls on n Amer cas Metroppo lan Regons." Urban Studies September 5, 2014 Ed ton. Retr ev ed May 10, 2015 (<http://usj.sagepub.com/content/51/9/2014/09/03/0042098014549127.abstract>).

150. Council of Econom c Adv sors, 2014. Nine Facts about American Families and Work. Wash ngton, DC: Execut ve Office of the Pres dent. Retr ev ed May 10, 2015 (https://www.whitehouse.gov/sites/default/files/docs/in-ne facts_about_fam y_and_work_rea_ina.pdf).

151. Federal Reserve Bank of St. Lou s, 2015. "Cv an Labor Force Part cpat on Rate - Women." FRED Econom c Database. Retr ev ed May 8 2015 (<http://research.stouisfed.org/fred2/series/LNS1H300002>).

152. OECD, 2013. "Fema e Part cpat on Rate n OECD Regons." Organ zat on for Econom c Cooperation and Deve opment. Retr ev ed May 1, 2015 (<http://rag.oecd.org/mtd/astor/es/data/Gener.pdf>).

153. Gynn, Sarah Jane, 2012. "Fact Sheet: Pa of Fam y and Med cal Leave: Updated Labor Standards Could Help U.S. Workers Make Ends Meet." Wash ngton, DC: Center for Amer can Progress. Retr ev ed Apr 2, 2015 (<http://www.amer canprogress.org/issues/abor/news/2012/08/16/11980/fact-sheet-pa-of-fam-y-and-med-cal-leave>).

154. U.S. Department of Labor, 2010. "Women in the Labor Force n 2010." Retr ev ed May 9, 2015 (<http://www.dol.gov/wb/factsheets/Qf-aborforce-10.htm>).

155. Wash ngton, DC: Nat onal Women's Law Center, 2014. "Unde pad & Over oaded: Women n Low-Wage Jobs." Retr ev ed May 9, 2015 (http://www.nwlc.org/sites/default/files/pdfs/ina_nwlc_owwageproj2014.pdf).

156. Warren, Doran T, 2015. "Put ng Fam es F rst: Good Jobs For A." Center for Commun ty Change. Retr ev ed, Apr 30, 2014 (<http://www.goodjobsfirst.org/wp-content/uploads/2015/05/PFA-GJFA-Launch-Report.pdf>).

157. Institute for Women's Po cy Research, 2014. "Occupat on Segregation and the Gender Wage Gap: A Job Has f Done." Wash ngton, DC: Institute for Women's Po cy Research. Retr ev ed May 8, 2014 (http://www.wpr.org/pub cat ons/pubs/occupat on-a-segregat on-and-the-gender-wage-gap-a-job-has-f-done/at_downoad/file).

158. ibid. Warren, Doran T.

159. Nat onal Partnership for Women & Fam es, 2011. "Everyone Gets S ck. Not Everyone Has T me to Get Better: A Briefng Book on Estab sh ng a Pa d S ck Days Standard." Wash ngton DC: Nat onal Partnership for Women & Fam es. Retr ev ed May 5, 2015 (http://www.gonationalpartnership.org/sites/default/files/PSD_Briefng_Book.pdf?docId=9121).

160. Ben-Isha, Lz, 2015. "The Serous Consequences of Lack of Pa d Leave." Wash ngton, DC: CLASP. Retr ev ed May 5, 2015 (<http://www.casp.org/resources-and-pub cat ons/pub cat on-12/15-02-03-FMLA-Ann-versary-Br ef.pdf>).

161. Oxfam Amer ca & Hart Research Associates, 2013. "Hard Work, Hard Lives: Survey Exposes Harsh Real tes Faced by Low-Wage Workers n

- Economics and Statistics* 90(2):300-323. Retrieved May 9, 2015 (<http://econcom.cs.mt.edu/FILES/580>).
- Autor, David H., Lawrence F. Katz, and A. B. Krueger. 1998. "Computing Inequality: Have Computers Changed the Labor Market?" The Quarterly Journal of Economics 113(4):1169-1213. Retrieved May 9, 2015 (<http://econcom.cs.mt.edu/FILES/563>).
30. Autor, David H., Lawrence F. Katz, and Meesa S. Kearney. 2006. "Measuring and Interpreting Trends in Economic Inequality." AEA Papers and Proceedings 96(2):189-194. Retrieved May 9, 2015 (<http://econcom.cs.mt.edu/FILES/584>).
- Card, David and John E. D. Nardo. 2002. "Skill-Biased Technological Change and Rising Wage Inequality: Some Problems and Puzzles." Journal of Labor Economics 23(4):733-783. Retrieved May 9, 2015 (<http://em.berkeley.edu/~card/papers/sk.tech-change.pdf>).
31. Op. cit. Card, David and John E. D. Nardo.
32. Op. cit. Bivens, Josh and Lawrence Mishel.
33. Mishel, Lawrence, Josh Bivens, E. Scott Gossard and Heidi Shehroz. 2012. "Appendices." The State of Working America, 12th Edition. Retrieved May 9, 2015 (<http://stateofworkngamerica.org/files/book/Appendices.pdf>).
34. Acemoglu, Daron. 2009. "When Does Labor Scarcity Encourage Innovation?" National Bureau of Economic Research Working Paper No. 14809. Retrieved May 9, 2015 (<http://www.nber.org/papers/w14809.pdf>).
35. Scott, Peter and Frederick Guy. 2007. "A Mode of Power-Based Technological Change." Economics Letters 95(1):124-131. Retrieved May 9, 2015 (<http://www.sciencedirect.com/science/article/pii/S0165176506003363>).
36. Acemoglu, Daron, David Autor, David Dom and Gordon H. Hanson. 2014. "Import Competition and the Great U.S. Employment Sag of the 2000s." National Bureau of Economic Research Working Paper No. 20395. Retrieved May 9, 2015 (<http://econcom.cs.mt.edu/FILES/9811>).
37. Autor, David H., David Dom and Gordon H. Hanson. 2013. "The China Syndrome: Local Labor Market Effects of Import Competition in the United States." American Economic Review 103(6):2121-2168. Retrieved May 9, 2015 (<http://econcom.cs.mt.edu/FILES/6613>).
38. White, Roger. 2011. "Employment Effects of Increased Import Competition." Retrieved May 9, 2015 (<http://citeseerx.istpsu.edu/viewdoc/download?docId=10.1.1.198.4904&rep=rep1&type=pdf>).
39. Stolper, W. F. and Paul A. Samuelson. 1941. "Protection and Real Wages." Review of Economic Studies 9(1):58-73.
40. Lipponen, Douglas, et al. Policy Priorities for International Trade and Jobs. International Labor Office. Retrieved May 9, 2015 (<http://www.oecd.org/dataoecd/5/2/5286917.pdf>).
41. Feenstra, Robert C., and Gordon H. Hanson. 1996. "Globalization, Outsourcing, and Wage Inequality." The American Economic Review 86(2):240-245. Retrieved May 9, 2015 (<https://deas.repec.org/a/aea/aerev/v86/y1996/p240-45.htm>).
- Elsby, Michael W.L., Bard Hübner, and Aysegu Sahin. 2010. "The Labor Market in the Great Recession." Brookings Papers on Economic Activity, Spring 2010. Retrieved May 9, 2015 (http://www.brookings.edu/~media/Projects/BPEA/Spring%202010/2010a_elsby_sahin.pdf).
- PDF). Bivens, A. and S. 2006. "Offshoring: The Next Industrial Revolution?" Foreign Affairs, March/Apr 2006 Issue. Retrieved May 9, 2015 (<http://www.foreaffairs.com/articles/61514/an-s-bivens-offshoring-the-next-industrial-revolution>).
42. Author's analysis of FED cv labor force data.
- Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis. 2015. "Civilian Labor Force Participation Rate." FRED Economic Data. Retrieved May 8, 2015 (<http://research.stlouisfed.org/fred2/series/CIVPART>).
43. Stolper, Joseph E. 2014. "Inequality, Property Rights, the Pool of Knowledge, and Innovation." National Bureau of Economic Research Working Paper No. 20014. Retrieved May 9, 2015 (<http://www.nber.org/papers/w20014>).

#REWRITETHERULES

ROOSEVELT
INSTITUTE

570 Lexington Avenue, 5th Floor
New York, NY 10022

REWRITETHERULES.ORG

3898

From: John Del Cecato
To: Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Mayor says kill the jokes
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 11:39:46 AM

Okay, will do

On 5/11/15, 11:19 AM, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>In the Roosevelt institute speech

>

>Sent from my iPhone

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Subject: Re: Labor leaders
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 11:51:33 AM

I think this is something you whisper to Larry right before the event starts.

On 5/10/15, 10:35 AM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>Want to follow up with you re: Randi's call to me yesterday. She wants to >make sure labor leaders don't personalize their anti-TPP message as an >attack on obama, which I think is smart. We should get this point across >too. Need to figure out how, particularly with larry cohen. And we should >prep for how to keep the Q and A not to be fixated on obama when we deal >with the media

From: Walzak, Phil
To: Gunaratna, Mahen; "John Del Cecato"; Klein, Monica; Hagelgans, Andrea
Cc: Leopold, Elana; de Alwis, Ronalie
Subject: RE: Washington Post Op-Ed - Print Edition
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 11:56:33 AM

Cool, thanks

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 11:56 AM
To: 'John Del Cecato'; Klein, Monica; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea
Cc: Leopold, Elana; de Alwis, Ronalie
Subject: Washington Post Op-Ed - Print Edition

Figured out the problem. The op-ed ran in Thursday's print edition, not Friday's paper.

I got a few copies overnighted and am sending them over to the Mayor's Front Office right now.

Thanks,

Mahen

--

Mahen Gunaratna

Director of Research and Media Analysis
Mayor's Press Office | City Hall
mgunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov
(212) 676-3154 (o) | (347)-268-4295 (c)

From: John Del Cecato
To: Snyder, Thomas; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Gunaratna, Mahen; Ronalie; Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 12:01:19 PM
Attachments: BriefingMemo-RooseveltEvent.docx
MBDBremarksRoosevelt.docx
TPA Q&A.docx
TPA BACKGROUNDER .docx

Here's an updated version, reflecting Tom's changes & adding Q/A on FTT.

Also cut the jokes in the Roosevelt speech, per MBDB

On 5/11/15, 9:39 AM, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>John - on the Q&A piece addressing the idea that the Mayor is out of his >"realm" on all this national stuff and neglecting NYC. I think we can be >more forthright without being defensive by saying upfront:
>"It helps New Yorkers when we push the federal and state governments to >raise the minimum wage. It helps New Yorkers when we push the federal >government to pass paid family leave. It helps New Yorkers when we push >the federal government to reward work not wealth by reforming tax >policy." Then I think the other points you use on this question follow >fine. He's starting to take on a lot of hits for his travel so my gut >tells me we need a sharper affirmation of why it is in the direct >self-interest of New Yorkers to have a Mayor pushing for state and >national reforms. If you agree can you send back a revised Q&A. Others >should weigh in.

>

>-----Original Message-----

>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmmedia.com>]

>Sent: Sunday, May 10, 2015 10:12 PM

>To: Snyder, Thomas; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil;

>Hagelgans, Andrea; Gunaratna, Mahen

>Cc: Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana

>Subject: Re: TPA

>

>Four attachments.

>

>1. Briefing memo on Roosevelt event.

>2. Draft remarks for Roosevelt.

>3. Draft Q&A for TPA event at 3pm at Capitol.

>4. A backgrounder on some of the issues in TPA. May need to be updated.

>

>Just as FYI - if we have all the speakers planned actually speak, and >it's actually 93 degrees, these questions won't be coming in a formal way >(from the podium), but rather as a break-off situation - where some >reporters ask some questions of MBDB, other reporters focus on other >participants.

>

>

>

>On 5/10/15, 5:05 PM, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>>John - Mayor wants the following by sometime tomorrow morning:

>>1. Roosevelt Institute remarks and a brief on set up, speakers etc.
>>2. A list of Media Questions that may come up at the TPA event; if you >>can add answers that's fine too but definitely the Questions - also by >>tomorrow morning sometime.
>>
>>I think Michael and Elana may have some other stuff to take up with you >>about his travels this week.
>>
>>Sent from my iPad
>

BRIEFING MEMO

WHAT: Roosevelt Institute event with Sen. Warren, Prof. Stiglitz
WHEN: Tuesday, May 12th – from 830am to 11am (MBDB at 1035AM)

STIGLITZ MESSAGE:

- Dominant economic frameworks over the past 35 years – like "trickle-down" economics, and the idea that markets work perfectly on their own – paved the way for an onslaught of policies that decimated America's middle class. This paper presents an evidence-backed alternative framework:
- Markets are shaped by laws, regulations and institutions. Rules matter.
- The rules determine how fast the economy grows, and who shares in the benefits of that prosperity.
- Concentrated wealth can hurt economic performance. Under the right rules, shared prosperity and strong economic performance reinforce each other. There is no trade-off.
- A tentative, piecemeal policy response to help the neediest will not suffice. We must rewrite the rules of the economy with a focus on restoring a balance of power between the competing interests that make up the modern economy.

RUN OF SHOW:

NOTE: No holding room. Reserved seats in the front row for Senator Warren and MBDB.

8:30 AM	Breakfast Starts - National Press Club - 529 14th Street, NW; 13 th Floor
9:00	Program begins. RI CEO Felicia Wong remarks & introduces Joseph Stiglitz
9:03-9:15	Stiglitz Remarks

9:15	Wong Intros Rana F.
9:17-10:15	Panel
10:15	Wong introduces Senator Warren
10:17-10:33	Senator Warren Speaks
10:33	Wong Introduces Mayor de Blasio
10:35-10:50	Mayor de Blasio speaks
10:50	Wong Closes

###

DRAFT REMARKS 2
Roosevelt Institute event
Tuesday, May 12th
10:35 AM – 10:50 AM (15 minutes)

- Thank you to Felicia Wong for that very kind introduction, and for your tremendous leadership as CEO and President of the Roosevelt Institute.
- I also want to thank Dr. Joseph Stiglitz, not only for producing this incredibly important, through-provoking analysis for rewriting the rules of our modern economy, but also for his advice and support as we have gotten to know each other these past few months. I know of no one who has thought more deeply and advocated more passionately for big, bold, sweeping changes to rebuild the American middle class and restore the principles that will make our country a place of opportunity for everyone.
- I also want to thank Senator Elizabeth Warren for her tireless advocacy on behalf of middle-class people – not just in her time as Senator, but for three DECADES – as an academic, as a regulator, as a policy expert and advisor. Like many of you, I’m inspired by her brilliance, her passion, and her lifelong dedication to challenging the most powerful interests on behalf of those whose voices too often go unheard. I was honored to co-author an op-ed with Senator Warren last week, and I’m humbled to be with her in person here today.
- I also want to applaud the Roosevelt Institute for the invaluable contribution that they make to the public discourse, particularly on the matter that’s been discussed today – thinking big and bold about what it takes to fundamentally change the way our economy works...to ensure that we are creating a more just society...a place where EVERYONE gets a shot at a better life.
- I’m so proud to serve 8.4 million people as mayor of the greatest city on Earth.
- I ran for mayor in 2013 with a promise to tackle what I believed then – and still believe today – is the crisis of our times – and that is income inequality.
- I often spoke of the Tale of Two Cities that New York had become, particularly since the Great Recession had ended. We’re home to Wall Street, which has come roaring back – breaking record after record. At the same time, 46 percent of our population was living at or near the poverty line.
- I said that needed to change – not just because this vast inequality posed a threat to those who were struggling...not simply because those in the middle class felt more and more anxious about staying IN the middle class...but because living in a Gilded City was a threat to EVERY New Yorker...a threat to what made New York so great for so many generations prior.

- So we set out to do something about it, and we achieved some real successes – universal, full-day Pre-K...for every single child who wants it. We more that DOUBLED the number of young people with access to after-school programs.
- We secured paid sick leave for 500,000 additional New Yorkers. We extended the living wage to thousands more. We've had over 100,000 New Yorkers apply for a municipal ID. We're fighting to increase the minimum wage.
- And this year, we're pushing the most ambitious municipal affordable housing plan in U.S. history – committing ourselves to building or preserving 200,000 units of affordable housing, and requiring – for the first time ever – that developers include affordable housing as a CONDITION of building in New York.
- We've got a very long way to go, but we're tackling inequality every way we know how – with every tool at our disposal.
- I'm here today because the fight to lift up struggling New Yorkers, and to help rebuild New York's middle class, doesn't end at the borders of my city. What happens in Washington – or doesn't happen – makes an enormous difference to my 8.4 million constituents back home.
- When Franklin Roosevelt created the New Deal, he relied upon many policies first developed in states and cities across America. Governors, Mayors, city and state legislatures – we all have the opportunity to incubate ideas at the local level, and create momentum for real, progressive national change.
- Today, the economic moment -- and the political momentum -- have converged. And NOW is the time for our country to enact bold structural changes to rebuild our middle class -- like many of the steps that Dr. Stiglitz is proposing today.
- In a word, we need an economy that rewards WORK and not just wealth.
- That means lifting the floor for working people – raising the minimum wage, strengthening the rights of workers to organize, and cracking down on wage theft.
- It means supporting working parents and their families – with paid sick and paid family leave; providing Pre-K and after-school programs and child care;

and helping students graduate from college without a mountain of debt hanging over their heads.

- And yes, it means REAL, BOLD efforts to make our tax system more fair – closing tax loopholes that big corporations and the wealthy use to take their massive profits and wealth...and simply pile up greater profits and wealth for themselves.
- Just one example – the carried interest loophole, which you’ve all heard about – a loophole that allows billionaire hedge fund managers to pay a lower overall tax rate than the hardworking men and women who clean their summer homes, or pilot their private jets.
- Now you’ve heard why this sort of thing is possible. It’s because the system is rigged to benefit those at the top – and to leave everybody else behind.
- We want to rewrite those rules – not to punish success, but to create more success stories.
- We want every child to grow up in a society that says: “if you’re willing to work hard, you’ve got a chance to live your dreams.”
- For generations, that was the promise of my city of New York. It was the definition of the American dream. But for too many, that promise...that dream...has steadily slipped away.
- And that’s why we have to stand together. Progressive economists, academics, elected officials, and everyday Americans in all fifty states.
- And you know what? The American people are already there. Just look at the Fight for 15 – a massive movement in 200 cities, with 60,000 people taking to the streets to fight for a minimum wage.
- It’s time for those of us in elected office to hear THEIR voices...and to follow THEIR lead.
- It was Franklin Roosevelt himself who said QUOTE: “Let us not be afraid to help each other. Let us never forget that government is ourselves and not an alien power over us. The ultimate rulers of our democracy are not a President and Senators and Congressmen and government officials but the voters of this country. END QUOTE.
- So as one government official – let me say this. The crisis of economic inequality is massive. But it is well within our power to take it head on, and a make a real difference.

- And we won't do it from the top-down. We'll do it as a progressive force...city by city, neighborhood by neighborhood...listening to the people who sent us to make the change for which they hunger.
- And we'll do it...together.
- Thank you.

###

TPA Questions and Answers

Q: Why are you doing this?

A: Progressives see the national conversation moving more and more to income inequality – something that was only happening in small circles a year ago. Now is the time to not only recognize the problem, but commit to real solutions for combatting it.

Q: Is Elizabeth Warren signed on to TPA?

A: She won't be attending the event at the Capitol Building, but we've been working together to shine a light on many of these issues – as we did with our op-ed recently. In fact, we'll be appearing together that morning at an event hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, where Joe Stiglitz will be unveiling a comprehensive approach to rewriting the rules of the economy to rebuild the middle class.

Q: Officials who were at the Gracie event, including Sen. Brown and Gov. Strickland said they will not sign on to the agenda or be at the May 12 event, although they sympathize with the Mayor's goals. Do you have any concerns that attendees of the April 2 Gracie Mansion meeting not signing on?

A: Some folks have a policy against signing pledges, and that's fine. Both Senator Brown and Governor Strickland have been strong champions in this effort to combat income inequality, particularly on proposals to lift the floor for working people.

Q: Is this a rebuke of Hillary?

A: No, this isn't about an individual. We're here to send a message to ALL elected officials and candidates for every office, up and down the ballot, in both parties: to tackle income inequality, we must implement bold progressive policies.

Q: What does Hillary have to do for you to back her?

A: I think what progressives want to see from her – and from elected officials and candidates at every level – is a vision...an economic framework...that really tackles income inequality.

Q: Some people here have already backed Hillary. You, notably, have not.

A: We are here to say that anyone hoping to lead the American people – up and down the ballot – must have a plan to combat income inequality that's based on progressive principles.

Q: What are your next steps?

A: There are a host of ways of engaging progressive leaders, and the progressive Americans they speak to, or speak for. The leadership of organized labor will be speaking to their members and building support for the cause. The heads of progressive organizations will be channeling the support of everyday Americans who are eager to spread the word within their communities. Elected officials will go back to their states and districts and cities to build support among their constituents. And we will ALL be fanning out and speaking out, driving people from across the country to our website – asking them to sign on, to offer comments and suggestions, and to hold elected officials and candidates accountable for results.

Q: What happens if a candidate or elected official doesn't endorse The Progressive Agenda? Will you all campaign against them?

A: We're asking them to commit to these principles because they are three things: 1) real solutions to income inequality; 2) feasible ideas; 3) resonant with millions of Americans who are desperate for leadership on these economic matters. We're looking to elevate these issues into the national dialogue in a positive, pro-active way.

Q: Grover Norquist makes conservative candidates and elected officials sign a no-tax pledge – and he strongly backs those who do, while punishing those who do not. Is that what you're trying to replicate?

A: It's not about the backing or non-backing from folks up here. It's about the people we represent – progressives across the country. And to motivate those Americans – to get them on their feet, activated, and encouraged to support a candidate or elected official – they need to know that the candidate or elected official is with them on these core issues.

Q: Even if you continue to have a Democratic White House, you'll likely have a Republican Congress. How can any of this get done?

A: This isn't just about the White House and Congress. BUT, I will say this. There are those who see divided government & believe that nothing but the most watered-down measures can get support. I don't believe that. If you push hard enough, organize aggressively enough, and make it front-and-center in the national conversation, politicians who might ordinarily be afraid to be bold will suddenly see that it's not just "okay" to have a backbone. It's an existential requirement.

Q: The NYS GOP Chair said YOU would beat HRC in a primary.

A: As much as I enjoy getting political advice from the GOP Chair – let me be clear: I'm not running for president. That's my Sherman-esque answer. We just want these policies to be implemented.

Q: Should Elizabeth Warren run?

A: I think she has already made her intentions clear, and I'll make my message clear: this isn't about personalities; it's about policies.

Q: Could you see yourself supporting Martin O'Malley? He agrees with you on a lot of this stuff.

A: Policies. Not Personalities.

Q: Some of the things you've mentioned, like the TPP, are being supported by President Obama. Are you prepared to go to war with the White House on Fast

Track?

A: It's not about war with the White House, or the GOP Congress. It's about standing up for what's right – no matter where the chips fall. I believe that Fast Track is a bad deal for American workers.

Q: Why isn't Sen. Warren here?

A: I've been working with Senator Warren on these issues. We just published a joint op-ed that touched on many of these topics, and several others, as well. I was with her at the Roosevelt Institute event with Joe Stiglitz this morning. The group assembled here is clearly not an exhaustive list of those who support our agenda. But the folks here represent a diverse group of progressive groups and constituents who are hungry for economic policy aimed at combatting income inequality.

Q: Aren't you concerned that candidates or elected officials will look at all the taxes you're proposing here & say "Geez, I don't want an attack ad run by the Koch Brothers saying I support trillions in higher taxes."

A: Here's the hard truth. If you're going to reduce the income gap, you need two things: 1) more investment in programs and policies that lift the floor for working people; and 2) more revenue from those at the very top – millionaires, billionaires, and wealthy corporations. There's no secret pot of money. And if you're going to be serious about investing in programs that help the 99 Percent, then the One Percent has to be willing to help foot the bill. The Koch Brothers have a different point of view – give more tax breaks to big oil companies and fellow billionaires, at the expense of everybody else. I welcome that debate.

Q: How does this help the people of New York City? Are you getting outside the realm of your Day Job?

A: It helps New Yorkers when we push the federal and state governments to raise the minimum wage. It helps New Yorkers when we push the federal government to pass paid family leave. It helps New Yorkers when we push the federal government to reward work not wealth by reforming tax policy.

And the fact is, we are doing many of these things at the city level. We're trying to do some at the state level. Others only make sense at the federal level.

We shouldn't silo government into city or state or federal. People don't look at their government like that. They know that the people they put into public office have to work together, at all levels of government, to achieve real change. And there's so much more that we can do to lift the lives of working people here in NYC if we have support from the federal government, and from people of good conscience from across the country.

Q: You specifically mention closing the carried interest loophole. That would be a big hit to a lot of the private equity, hedge fund, and real estate folks in New York City. Are you declaring war on them – and do you worry that doing so could derail your efforts on education or affordable housing here at home?

A: No one is declaring war. We are shining a bright light on the defining issue of our times – the fact that since the Recession ended, the One Percent has seen their real income grow by 35%. The 99 Percent have seen theirs grow 0.8%. Put another way, the One Percent captured 91% of the real income gains since 2009.

Now, there's no legitimate reason that a hedge fund manager should pay a lower effective tax rate than the woman who cleans his beach house or the guy who pilots his private plane. That makes zero sense.

Rewarding work, and not just wealth, isn't just morally right. It's smart economics. Consumers need money in their pockets to spend on necessities. In turn, that money goes into the economy and lifts it for everyone.

Q: When you say that the income gap has favored the One Percent over the 99 Percent since 2009 – isn't that a direct indictment of President Obama? Should he have done more to help the non-rich?

A: President Obama has made great efforts to close the income gap. Some have called ObamaCare one of the greatest social programs aimed at reducing income inequality since the New Deal. I agree. There was the stimulus, which greatly expanded the EITC. And there was his success in raising the top marginal tax rate to where it was when Bill Clinton left office. What the income inequality statistics tell us is this: we need to be even more aggressive lifting the floor for working people, and that has to include a greater contribution by those at the very top.

Q: Some of the folks who were at the original Gracie Confab have criticized you for not including mass incarceration as part of TPA. Why do you not think that's important enough to be part of TPA?

A: Mass incarceration is a huge problem – and one that we've set out to address in New York City. We've ended the overuse of stop-and-frisk – from around 700,000 a few years before I took office, to less than 50,000 last year. Since we implemented our new marijuana policy, arrests are down 65 percent. We've launched a plan to shrink the population at New York City jails by 25 percent in 10 years.

And this is an important issue across the country – one that progressives will be addressing in the national context in the months to come. This is just the start – not the final chapter – in how we hope to elevate solutions to core issues of economic and social justice.

Q: What about expanding Social Security? Or debt-free college? There are reports that many of the original “signers” to your agenda have dropped out – reportedly furious that you refused to include those issues.

A: Everyone has to make their own decision about whether to support or not support The Progressive Agenda that we've unveiled today. But I've made my support for the issues you've mentioned clear. In fact, I wrote an op-ed with Elizabeth Warren that mentioned them specifically!

This is the result of a long and collaborative process. Just because something doesn't appear as a plank on this agenda doesn't mean it's not important. It doesn't mean it won't be part of our efforts in the months to come. Again, this is the floor – not the ceiling. Stay tuned for more to come!

Q: Have you thought about what all of this stuff costs? How are you going to pay for all of this? Things like child care and paid family leave are really expensive.

A: This isn't meant to be a budget blueprint. This is a document designed to highlight some real, bold, progressive policies that can help combat income inequality. It's an organizing tool, and a way to elevate the discussion on some really important issues.

Q: If these things are so important to you, why have you done them in New York? The city doesn't offer paid family leave, for example.

A: In New York City, we've tackled a number of issues on this list – but no, we haven't tackled them all. Many of these issues are best dealt with at the national level – some because of the price tag, and some for reasons of competition between states and cities. National policy puts everyone on a level playing field.

Q: With so many wealthy New Yorkers, are you concerned that this agenda will soak your constituents, while giving Congress the power to use the money generated for programs in other states?

A: We do have some very wealthy residents in New York. And they need to pay their fair share in taxes. We also have a massive number of residents who are struggling, and who could benefit from a host of initiatives presented here. And we believe that we can make an effective case that when New York City is contributing more in federal taxes, then we deserve more help in rebuilding our bruised and battered middle class, and more help in lifting up those in poverty.

Q: I notice that the Financial Transactions Tax isn't on this list. Why is that? Too much pressure from Wall Street?

A: You can't have everything in one document. This is the beginning, not the end. This is one of those issues that, on its face, could be a valuable addition. But I would need to dive more deeply into the details of that policy, and discuss it with the coalition we're building before commenting further.

Reforming Labor Law

Background: When workers try to organize unions they are often harassed, intimidated or fired, taking away their bargaining power and harming their access to adequate wages and quality healthcare. Workers in unions earn 30 percent higher wages and are 63 percent more likely to have employer-provided health insurance.

Possible Solution: The Employee Free Choice Act: A Congressional bill that would make it easier for workers to join unions, make it easier for newly unionized workers to reach contracts with their employers, and strengthen penalties for those that violate labor law to seek to prevent workers from using their right to organize. The legislation removes the power of employers to demand an additional and separate ballot if a majority of employee signatures were collected. It also assigns the organizing union as the official collective bargaining representative if a majority of employee signatures are collected. The legislation also requires employers and their unions to enter binding arbitration to produce a collective agreement if one cannot be met 90 days after the unionization of employees, and after 30 days of mediation time (120 days total). The arbitration agreement would be binding for a period of two years. Lastly, the legislation increases penalties on employers who discriminate against workers for union involvement.

Immigration Reform and Wage Theft

Immigrant workers are even more vulnerable because they can be threatened with deportation. In 2002, the Supreme Court ruled that undocumented workers cannot seek basic labor protections because they are not legally allowed to work. Therefore, employers can subject undocumented immigrants to abuse and dangerous working conditions for little pay, without worrying about legal action.

<http://thinkprogress.org/immigration/2013/07/10/2276121/dc-undocumented-immigrant-wage-theft/>

Student Loan Refinancing

Background: Some with outstanding loans pay interest rates of 7% or higher for undergraduate loans, while students taking out new undergraduate loans pay 3.86% under the Bipartisan Student Loan Certainty Act passed by Congress in summer 2013. Outstanding student loans now total more than $1.2 trillion, surpassing total credit card debt. One in seven borrowers defaults on federal student loans within three years of beginning repayment.

Possible Solutions: S. 2432 – Bank on Students Emergency Loan Refinancing Act: Would allow more than 25 million people with outstanding student loan debt to refinance their federal student loans or private loans at the lower interest rates currently offered to new borrowers, while maintaining full borrower protections of federal student loans (rather than forcing borrowers refinance with private banks). The loss of federal revenue from the lower loan interest income would require additional DOE direct spending (via its Direct Loan Program), according to the CBO, but would be offset in full by the “Buffet Rule” – a minimum 30% income tax payment from people who earn between $1 and $2 million.

Paid Family Leave

The United States is the only advanced economy without a national paid-leave law. Only three states -- California, New Jersey and Rhode Island -- offer this critical support for working men and women. Even Human Rights Watch has noticed, citing America for failing its families in a scathing report a few years back. In the latest edition of Expecting Better, a report card issued annually by the National Partnership for Women and Families, not a single state merited an "A." California took home an A-minus, New Jersey, a B-plus, and New York, a lackluster B-minus.

<http://www.huffingtonpost.com/susan-ochshorn/new-yorks-real-wealth-pro b 6950998.html>

Tax Breaks for Shipping Jobs Overseas/Deferral/Inversion/Repatriation

SMALLER ONE (NOT AFFECTED BY REPATRIATION):

“Firms can generally deduct business expenses,” said Kimberly Clausing, the Thormund A. Miller and Walter Mintz Professor of Economics at Reed College. “Thus, of course, if firms incurred expenses in moving abroad, they would be able to deduct those expenses.”

BIGGER ONE (AFFECTED BY REPATRIATION):

We’ve also written before on several occasions that the tax code has long allowed U.S. corporations doing business abroad to defer paying taxes on any of their “unrepatriated income.” That is to say that the revenue earned by the company’s foreign subsidiary remains untaxed by the IRS until that money is brought back to the parent company in the U.S.

Sometimes politicians also refer to this as a “tax break for shipping jobs overseas.” And Clausing told us that this part of tax law could motivate companies to move business abroad.

“This can provide a huge incentive for locating jobs and income abroad, since many tax haven countries have tax rates that are very low, even approaching zero, and thus the money can grow abroad ‘tax free’ until it is repatriated,” she said.

<http://www.factcheck.org/2012/10/talking-tax-breaks-for-offshoring/>

From: John Del Cecato
To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma; Williams, Dominic
Cc: John Davis; Aaron PickrellEmail; Hayley Prim; jeani murray; Jon Fromowitz
Subject: Draft op-ed for Harkin & MBDB
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 12:11:39 PM
Attachments: DSMOpEdJDCredits.docx

Thanks to Fromo for writing.

Take a quick look, and Davis can run by Harkin's people. Goal would be to roll out later this week in the Des Moines Register.

The Progressive Agenda

Former U.S. Senator Tom Harkin and New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio

By some measures, 2014 was a tough year for hedge funds. For many investors, returns were modest. But the compensation for managers of funds was anything but: it was recently reported that that a group of 25 hedge fund managers made $11.62 billion dollars last year.

To put that in perspective, here's that number fully written out: $11,620,000,000 -- for 25 people. And it is likely that they paid a lower tax rate on that income than the people who answer clean their homes and pilot their private jets.

What's more, last year Wall Street's bonus pool accounted for roughly twice as much money as was earned by every single American making the federal minimum wage.

America is experiencing an inequality crisis. That's not melodrama, nor buzzwords; it's an economic reality that is hurting millions by eroding the foundation of middle class security.

America's middle class has always been this country's engine of economic success. But as American workers' productivity has been steadily increasing for decades, the middle class' share of income has consistently declined. And between 2009 and 2012 – when times were so tough for so many working families – the top 1% of earners captured 91% of all income gains.

There's something deeply un-American about an economy that rewards wealth over work. That feeling of working harder and harder but falling farther and farther behind is the antithesis of the American Dream.

If we as a country are to overcome this crisis, we must act boldly. This week in Washington, a large and diverse group of leaders from around the country came together around ideas that would do just that.

The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality is a set of proposals that builds upon the work of dozens of economists, lawmakers and progressive activists, with the aim of addressing the income inequality crisis.

It's a 13-point plan grounded in concrete proposals, but it is guided by three simple principles:

1. Lift the Floor for Working People. That means taking steps like increasing the minimum wage so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation, and strengthening the right of workers to unionize and bargain collectively.

2. Support Working Families. That means passing measures to ensure paid sick and family leave, and making pre-k and afterschool programs available for every child.
3. Tax Fairness – by doing things like ending the “carried interest loophole” which allows hedge fund managers escape paying their fair share, and instituting the “Buffett Rule” so that millionaire investors don’t pay a lower rate in taxes than people who work 9-5.

The Progressive Agenda is not meant to be an exhaustive list of solutions to the inequality crisis. Rather, it is a response to the demands of people nationwide – from Brooklyn, NY to Brooklyn, IA – that this crisis be addressed with real, bold proposals that will make a significant difference in their lives.

The rampant inequality we face today has been decades in the making and it won’t be solved overnight. But together, we’re taking an important step to ensure that it will be addressed. And we urge Iowans, and Americans from all walks of life, to join us on this mission.

From: jeani murray
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma; Williams, Dominic; John Davis; Aaron PickrellEmail; Hayley Prim; Jon Fromowitz
Subject: Re: Draft op-ed for Harkin & MBDB
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 12:45:16 PM

I like. I'd reorder a bit.

America is experiencing an inequality crisis. That's not melodrama, nor buzzwords; it's an economic reality that is hurting millions by eroding the foundation of middle class security.

America's middle class has always been this country's engine of economic success. But as American workers' productivity has been steadily increasing for decades, the middle class' share of income has consistently declined. And between 2009 and 2012 – when times were so tough for so many working families – the top 1% of earners captured 91% of all income gains.

There's something deeply un-American about an economy that rewards wealth over work. That feeling of working harder and harder but falling farther and farther behind is the antithesis of the American Dream.

For many investors, 2014 returns were modest, while compensation for managers of funds was anything but: it was recently reported that a group of 25 hedge fund managers made $11.62 billion dollars last year.

To put that in perspective, here's that number fully written out: $11,620,000,000 -- for 25 people. And it is likely that they paid a lower tax rate on that income than the people who answer clean their homes and pilot their private jets.

What's more, last year Wall Street's bonus pool accounted for roughly twice as much money as was earned by every single American making the federal minimum wage. This widening of the income gap is bigger than at any time in our history. (Is this true??)

If we as a country are to overcome this crisis, we must act boldly. This week in Washington, a large and diverse group of leaders from around the country came together around ideas that would do just that.

The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality is a set of proposals that builds upon the work of dozens of economists, lawmakers and progressive activists, with the aim of addressing the income inequality crisis.

It's a 13-point plan grounded in concrete proposals, but it is guided by three simple principles:

- 1. Lift the Floor for Working People. That means taking steps like increasing the minimum wage so that it reaches $15/hour, while indexing it to inflation, and strengthening the right of workers to unionize and bargain collectively.
- 2. Support Working Families. That means passing measures to ensure paid sick and family leave, and making pre-k and afterschool programs available for every child.
- 3. Tax Fairness – by doing things like ending the “carried interest loophole” which allows hedge fund managers escape paying their fair share, and instituting the “Buffett Rule” so that millionaire investors don't pay a lower rate in taxes than people who work 9-5.

The Progressive Agenda is not meant to be an exhaustive list of solutions to the inequality crisis. Rather, it is a response to the demands of people nationwide – from Brooklyn, NY to Brooklyn, IA – that this crisis be addressed with real, bold proposals that will make a significant difference in their lives.

The rampant inequality we face today has been decades in the making and it won't be solved overnight. But together, we're taking an important step to ensure that it will be addressed. And we urge Iowans, and Americans from all walks of life, to join us on this mission.

On Monday, May 11, 2015, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

Thanks to Fromo for writing.

Take a quick look, and Davis can run by Harkin's people. Goal would be to roll out later this week in the Des Moines Register.

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
To: "John Del Cecato"
Subject: RE: TPA
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 1:01:56 PM

FYI, on the "why doesn't NYC offer paid family leave" question, Bob Linn points out the following:

I would also add that leave and health benefits must be collectively bargained and we have and will engage city unions on these important issues.

-----Original Message-----

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 12:03 PM
To: Snyder, Thomas; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Gunaratna, Mahen; Ronalie; Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA

Here's an updated version, reflecting Tom's changes & adding Q/A on FTT.

Also cut the jokes in the Roosevelt speech, per MBDB

On 5/11/15, 9:39 AM, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>John - on the Q&A piece addressing the idea that the Mayor is out of >his "realm" on all this national stuff and neglecting NYC. I think we >can be more forthright without being defensive by saying upfront:
>"It helps New Yorkers when we push the federal and state governments to >raise the minimum wage. It helps New Yorkers when we push the federal >government to pass paid family leave. It helps New Yorkers when we push
>the federal government to reward work not wealth by reforming tax >policy." Then I think the other points you use on this question follow >fine. He's starting to take on a lot of hits for his travel so my gut >tells me we need a sharper affirmation of why it is in the direct >self-interest of New Yorkers to have a Mayor pushing for state and >national reforms. If you agree can you send back a revised Q&A. Others >should weigh in.

>

>-----Original Message-----

>From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
>Sent: Sunday, May 10, 2015 10:12 PM
>To: Snyder, Thomas; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil;
>Hagelgans, Andrea; Gunaratna, Mahen
>Cc: Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana

>Subject: Re: TPA

>

>Four attachments.

>

>1. Briefing memo on Roosevelt event.

>2. Draft remarks for Roosevelt.

>3. Draft Q&A for TPA event at 3pm at Capitol.

>4. A backgrounder on some of the issues in TPA. May need to be updated.

>

>Just as FYI - if we have all the speakers planned actually speak, and

>it's actually 93 degrees, these questions won't be coming in a formal

>way (from the podium), but rather as a break-off situation - where some

>reporters ask some questions of MBDB, other reporters focus on other >participants.

>

>

>

>On 5/10/15, 5:05 PM, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>>John - Mayor wants the following by sometime tomorrow morning:

>>1. Roosevelt Institute remarks and a brief on set up, speakers etc.

>>2. A list of Media Questions that may come up at the TPA event; if you >>can add answers that's fine too but definitely the Questions - also by >>tomorrow morning sometime.

>>

>>I think Michael and Elana may have some other stuff to take up with >>you about his travels this week.

>>

>>Sent from my iPad

>

From: Walzak, Phil
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Spitalnick, Amy \(OMB\)
Cc: Wolfe, Emma; Rebecca Katz \(hilltoppublicsolutions.com\); Williams, Dominic; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Re: paid family leave
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 1:40:11 PM

Yeah looks good

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 01:40 PM
To: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB)
Cc: Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil; Rebecca Katz (hilltoppublicsolutions.com); Williams, Dominic; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Re: paid family leave

I like

On May 11, 2015, at 1:28 PM, Spitalnick, Amy (OMB) <SpitalnickA@omb.nyc.gov> wrote:

Here's what I suggest.

Emma/Dom - Albany line factually ok?

"The Mayor has proposed paid family leave for New York City employees and we're studying how best to accomplish that. However, comprehensive action would require legislation in Albany. That's why a national policy is the most comprehensive and workable way to achieve this, putting every city and state on a level playing field."

On background:

The City allows employees to use accrued leave for this. Leave and health benefits must also be collectively bargained, so we have and will continue to work with the municipal unions on these issues

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 1:03 PM
To: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); 'Wolfe, Emma'; Phillip Walzak; Rebecca Katz (hilltoppublicsolutions.com)
Subject: Re: paid family leave

Ah, good call Emma. I'm good.

From: <Spitalnick>, "Amy (OMB)" <SpitalnickA@omb.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 12:58 PM
To: "'Wolfe, Emma'" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Phillip Walzak <pwalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Rebecca Katz (hilltoppublicsolutions.com)" <rkatz@hilltoppublicsolutions.com>

Subject: RE: paid family leave

I can work something up based on this – everyone comfortable with the frame of us having proposed this but it requiring Albany legislation?

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE: August 23, 2013

CONTACT: DAN LEVITAN dan@berlinrosen.com, 646-200-5315

DE BLASIO PROPOSES PAID FAMILY LEAVE FOR NEW YORK CITY

New York, NY - Bill de Blasio today proposed making New York City the first city in the United States to provide paid family leave for new mothers and fathers, as well as people caring for a serious or terminally ill or injured spouse, parent, or child.

“If you want to spend quality time with a new child, or if you or a loved one faces a major medical emergency, your job or paychecks shouldn't be in jeopardy. This is good public policy that will help all families in this city,” said Bill de Blasio.

Based on successful programs in New Jersey and California, De Blasio's plan would expand the eligibility of disability coverage with a small surcharge on existing disability insurance premiums. The benefit would pay 50% of a New Yorker's average weekly salary for up to 12 weeks, up to a maximum of $340/week (double the current benefit levels for temporary disability).

The United States is the only high-income country in the world not to offer paid family leave.[1] These programs are successful, humane, and popular. After the introduction of a similar program in California, more than 90% of employers reported either “no noticeable effect” or a “positive effect” on productivity, profitability, turnover, and morale.[2]

De Blasio has also called for full, comprehensive paid sick day leave for New York City workers. Speaker Quinn blocked that legislation in the City Council for three years to placate business interests, and then later under intense political pressure passed a watered-down version of the bill that excluded more than 300,000 New Yorkers.

De Blasio's plan would:

- Cover every New York City worker currently covered by the State's disability insurance system.
- Would cover mothers or fathers seeking to bond with a new baby within 12 months of birth or adoption.
- Would cover caregivers with proof of a very serious or terminal illness afflicting a child, spouse, or parent.
- Pay 50% of a New Yorker's average weekly salary for up to 12 weeks, up to a maximum of $340/week (double the current benefit levels for temporary disability).
- Be financed through a small increase in worker's temporary disability insurance premium determined by an actuary each year. In New Jersey, a similar program, covering 2/3 of participating employees salary for six weeks up to a maximum of $524/week cost just 60 cents per worker per week in 2013.[3]

This proposal would require legislation in Albany.

From: Wolfe, Emma [<mailto:EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 12:56 PM
To: 'John Del Cecato'; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Phillip Walzak; Rebecca Katz (hilltoppublicsolutions.com)
Subject: RE: paid family leave

I don't know why we would specify Klein of all folks right now
Should just say our past positions on PFL – we did a presser on this in august 2013

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 12:54 PM
To: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Walzak, Phil; Rebecca Katz (hilltoppublicsolutions.com); Wolfe, Emma
Subject: Re: paid family leave

I think that's right.

If City Hall is okay with this, I'd like to say we're still studying how to address on city level, and we support Klein's state paid family leave legislation - but we believe the most comprehensive and workable way to accomplish this is through federal legislation.

From: <Spitalnick>, "Amy (OMB)" <SpitalnickA@omb.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 12:43 PM
To: Phillip Walzak <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Rebecca Katz (hilltoppublicsolutions.com)" <rkatz@hilltoppublicsolutions.com>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: paid family leave

I am but I think the issue is that we haven't done anything on this.

From: Walzak, Phil
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 12:33 PM
To: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Rebecca Katz (hilltoppublicsolutions.com); 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com'
Subject: Re: paid family leave

Amy pls check w CH on policy

From: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB) [<mailto:SpitalnickA@omb.nyc.gov>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 12:32 PM
To: Walzak, Phil; Rebecca Katz (hilltoppublicsolutions.com); John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Fw: paid family leave

From: Wilson, Reid <Reid.Wilson@washpost.com>
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 12:30 PM
To: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB)
Subject: paid family leave

Hi, Amy –

Thought I'd drop another line to check in on something: Mayor de Blasio supports paid family leave, but New York City employees don't get paid family leave – or birth control, or post-natal coverage for supplies – under the city's health care plan, which was grandfathered in under the ACA. Does he plan to push to give those employees the same benefits? Is there any legislation in the works?

Let me know, I'm writing this up in advance of tomorrow's announcement. And thanks for the time.

Reid

--

Reid Wilson
The Washington Post
W (202) 334-9893
C (202) 384-3196
@PostReid

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
To: Spitalnick, Amy \(OMB\); "John Del Cecato"
Subject: RE: Audio - Tues through Thurs events
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 1:53:26 PM

What's the plan for Cali?

From: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB) [mailto:SpitalnickA@omb.nyc.gov]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 1:51 PM
To: Gunaratna, Mahen; 'John Del Cecato'
Subject: RE: Audio - Tues through Thurs events

NYC TV is going to DC.

From: Gunaratna, Mahen [mailto:MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 1:41 PM
To: 'John Del Cecato'; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB)
Subject: Audio - Tues through Thurs events

Can you guys capture audio of all his public events from Tues to Thurs?

If you're not able or are tied up with other tasks, who might be able to do so?

--

Mahen Gunaratna

Director of Research and Media Analysis
Mayor's Press Office | City Hall
mgunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov
(212) 676-3154 (o) | (347)-268-4295 (c)

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
To: Spitalnick, Amy \(OMB\); "John Del Cecato"
Subject: RE: Audio - Tues through Thurs events
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 1:54:54 PM

Need more quickly though even if NYC-TV is there in DC, so audio from one of your phones would be helpful as well.

NYC-TV sometimes take a few hours to send along because they need to extract the audio from the video footage.

From: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB) [<mailto:SpitalnickA@omb.nyc.gov>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 1:51 PM
To: Gunaratna, Mahen; 'John Del Cecato'
Subject: RE: Audio - Tues through Thurs events

NYC TV is going to DC.

From: Gunaratna, Mahen [<mailto:MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 1:41 PM
To: 'John Del Cecato'; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB)
Subject: Audio - Tues through Thurs events

Can you guys capture audio of all his public events from Tues to Thurs?

If you're not able or are tied up with other tasks, who might be able to do so?

--

Mahen Gunaratna

Director of Research and Media Analysis
Mayor's Press Office | City Hall
mgunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov
(212) 676-3154 (o) | (347)-268-4295 (c)

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
To: "John Del Cecato"
Cc: Spitalnick, Amy \(OMB\)
Subject: RE: Audio - Tues through Thurs events
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 2:00:31 PM

Thanks!

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 2:01 PM
To: Gunaratna, Mahen
Cc: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB)
Subject: Re: Audio - Tues through Thurs events

I will make sure someone captures Tues and Thurs, Fri

On May 11, 2015, at 1:42 PM, Gunaratna, Mahen <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Can you guys capture audio of all his public events from Tues to Thurs?

If you're not able or are tied up with other tasks, who might be able to do so?

--

Mahen Gunaratna

Director of Research and Media Analysis
Mayor's Press Office | City Hall
mgunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov
(212) 676-3154 (o) | (347)-268-4295 (c)

From: John Del Cecato
To: Gunaratna, Mahen; Snyder, Thomas; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Ronalie; Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 2:10:03 PM

Thanks will do

From: <Gunaratna>, "Gunaratna, Mahen" <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 2:03 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Dominic Williams <DWilliams@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Ronalie <[REDACTED]>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: TPA

Few minor fact-check edits:

1. Re: Stiglitz, it says that they've "gotten to know each other these past few months". Can we change to "past few years"? Recall BdB and Stiglitz chatting during the campaign and [REDACTED] in 2013.
2. For Elizabeth Warren, we say she's been fighting for the middle class as an academic, etc. for "three decades". Should we change to "nearly four decades"? She started as a professor in 1977.
3. Could we change "with 60,000 people" to "with over 60,000 people"?

Looks good otherwise!

Mahen

-----Original Message-----

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 12:03 PM
To: Snyder, Thomas; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Gunaratna, Mahen; Ronalie; Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA

Here's an updated version, reflecting Tom's changes & adding Q/A on FTT.

Also cut the jokes in the Roosevelt speech, per MBDB

On 5/11/15, 9:39 AM, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>John - on the Q&A piece addressing the idea that the Mayor is out of >his "realm" on all this national stuff and neglecting NYC. I think we >can be more forthright without being defensive by saying upfront:
>"It helps New Yorkers when we push the federal and state governments to >raise the minimum wage. It helps New Yorkers when we push the federal >government to pass paid family leave. It helps New Yorkers when we push
>the federal government to reward work not wealth by reforming tax >policy." Then I think the other points you use on this question follow >fine. He's starting to take on a lot of hits for his travel so my gut >tells me we need a sharper affirmation of why it is in the direct >self-interest of New Yorkers to have a Mayor pushing for state and >national reforms. If you agree can you send back a revised Q&A. Others >should weigh in.

>

>-----Original Message-----

>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

>Sent: Sunday, May 10, 2015 10:12 PM

>To: Snyder, Thomas; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil;

>Hagelgans, Andrea; Gunaratna, Mahen

>Cc: Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana

>Subject: Re: TPA

>

>Four attachments.

>

- >1. Briefing memo on Roosevelt event.
- >2. Draft remarks for Roosevelt.
- >3. Draft Q&A for TPA event at 3pm at Capitol.
- >4. A backgrounder on some of the issues in TPA. May need to be updated.

>

>Just as FYI - if we have all the speakers planned actually speak, and
>it's actually 93 degrees, these questions won't be coming in a formal
>way (from the podium), but rather as a break-off situation - where some >reporters ask some questions of MBDB, other reporters focus on other >participants.

>

>

>

>On 5/10/15, 5:05 PM, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>>John - Mayor wants the following by sometime tomorrow morning:

- >>1. Roosevelt Institute remarks and a brief on set up, speakers etc.
- >>2. A list of Media Questions that may come up at the TPA event; if you >>can add answers that's fine too but definitely the Questions - also by >>tomorrow morning sometime.

>>

>>I think Michael and Elana may have some other stuff to take up with
>>you about his travels this week.
>>
>>Sent from my iPad
>

From: John Del Cecato
To: Gunaratna, Mahen; Snyder, Thomas; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Ronalie; Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 2:35:52 PM
Attachments: MBDBremarksRoosevelt.docx

Revised

From: <Gunaratna>, "Gunaratna, Mahen" <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 2:03 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Dominic Williams <DWilliams@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Wolfe, Emma" <FWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Ronalie <[REDACTED]>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: TPA

Few minor fact-check edits:

1. Re: Stiglitz, it says that they've "gotten to know each other these past few months". Can we change to "past few years"? Recall BdB and Stiglitz chatting during the campaign and [REDACTED] in 2013.
2. For Elizabeth Warren, we say she's been fighting for the middle class as an academic, etc. for "three decades". Should we change to "nearly four decades"? She started as a professor in 1977.
3. Could we change "with 60,000 people" to "with over 60,000 people"?

Looks good otherwise!

Mahen

-----Original Message-----

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 12:03 PM
To: Snyder, Thomas; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Gunaratna, Mahen; Ronalie; Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA

Here's an updated version, reflecting Tom's changes & adding Q/A on FTT.

Also cut the jokes in the Roosevelt speech, per MBDB

On 5/11/15, 9:39 AM, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>John - on the Q&A piece addressing the idea that the Mayor is out of >his "realm" on all this national stuff and neglecting NYC. I think we >can be more forthright without being defensive by saying upfront:
>"It helps New Yorkers when we push the federal and state governments to >raise the minimum wage. It helps New Yorkers when we push the federal >government to pass paid family leave. It helps New Yorkers when we push
>the federal government to reward work not wealth by reforming tax >policy." Then I think the other points you use on this question follow >fine. He's starting to take on a lot of hits for his travel so my gut >tells me we need a sharper affirmation of why it is in the direct >self-interest of New Yorkers to have a Mayor pushing for state and >national reforms. If you agree can you send back a revised Q&A. Others >should weigh in.

>

>-----Original Message-----

>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

>Sent: Sunday, May 10, 2015 10:12 PM

>To: Snyder, Thomas; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil;

>Hagelgans, Andrea; Gunaratna, Mahen

>Cc: Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana

>Subject: Re: TPA

>

>Four attachments.

>

>1. Briefing memo on Roosevelt event.

>2. Draft remarks for Roosevelt.

>3. Draft Q&A for TPA event at 3pm at Capitol.

>4. A backgrounder on some of the issues in TPA. May need to be updated.

>

>Just as FYI - if we have all the speakers planned actually speak, and
>it's actually 93 degrees, these questions won't be coming in a formal
>way (from the podium), but rather as a break-off situation - where some >reporters ask some questions of MBDB, other reporters focus on other >participants.

>

>

>

>On 5/10/15, 5:05 PM, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>>John - Mayor wants the following by sometime tomorrow morning:

>>1. Roosevelt Institute remarks and a brief on set up, speakers etc.

>>2. A list of Media Questions that may come up at the TPA event; if you >>can add answers that's fine too but definitely the Questions - also by >>tomorrow morning sometime.

>>

>>I think Michael and Elana may have some other stuff to take up with
>>you about his travels this week.

>>

>>Sent from my iPad

>

DRAFT REMARKS 3
Roosevelt Institute event
Tuesday, May 12th
10:35 AM – 10:50 AM (15 minutes)

- Thank you to Felicia Wong for that very kind introduction, and for your tremendous leadership as CEO and President of the Roosevelt Institute.
- I also want to thank Dr. Joseph Stiglitz, not only for producing this incredibly important, through-provoking analysis for rewriting the rules of our modern economy, but also for his advice and support as we have gotten to know each other these past few years. I know of no one who has thought more deeply and advocated more passionately for big, bold, sweeping changes to rebuild the American middle class and restore the principles that will make our country a place of opportunity for everyone.
- I also want to thank Senator Elizabeth Warren for her tireless advocacy on behalf of middle-class people – not just in her time as Senator, but for nearly four DECADES – as an academic, as a regulator, as a policy expert and advisor. Like many of you, I’m inspired by her brilliance, her passion, and her lifelong dedication to challenging the most powerful interests on behalf of those whose voices too often go unheard. I was honored to co-author an op-ed with Senator Warren last week, and I’m humbled to be with her in person here today.
- I also want to applaud the Roosevelt Institute for the invaluable contribution that they make to the public discourse, particularly on the matter that’s been discussed today – thinking big and bold about what it takes to fundamentally change the way our economy works...to ensure that we are creating a more just society...a place where EVERYONE gets a shot at a better life.
- I’m so proud to serve 8.4 million people as mayor of the greatest city on Earth.
- I ran for mayor in 2013 with a promise to tackle what I believed then – and still believe today – is the crisis of our times – and that is income inequality.
- I often spoke of the Tale of Two Cities that New York had become, particularly since the Great Recession had ended. We’re home to Wall Street, which has come roaring back – breaking record after record. At the same time, 46 percent of our population was living at or near the poverty line.
- I said that needed to change – not just because this vast inequality posed a threat to those who were struggling...not simply because those in the middle class felt more and more anxious about staying IN the middle class...but because living in a Gilded City was a threat to EVERY New Yorker...a threat to what made New York so great for so many generations prior.

- So we set out to do something about it, and we achieved some real successes – universal, full-day Pre-K...for every single child who wants it. We more that DOUBLED the number of young people with access to after-school programs.
- We secured paid sick leave for 500,000 additional New Yorkers. We extended the living wage to thousands more. We've had over 100,000 New Yorkers apply for a municipal ID. We're fighting to increase the minimum wage.
- And this year, we're pushing the most ambitious municipal affordable housing plan in U.S. history – committing ourselves to building or preserving 200,000 units of affordable housing, and requiring – for the first time ever – that developers include affordable housing as a CONDITION of building in New York.
- We've got a very long way to go, but we're tackling inequality every way we know how – with every tool at our disposal.
- I'm here today because the fight to lift up struggling New Yorkers, and to help rebuild New York's middle class, doesn't end at the borders of my city. What happens in Washington – or doesn't happen – makes an enormous difference to my 8.4 million constituents back home.
- When Franklin Roosevelt created the New Deal, he relied upon many policies first developed in states and cities across America. Governors, Mayors, city and state legislatures – we all have the opportunity to incubate ideas at the local level, and create momentum for real, progressive national change.
- Today, the economic moment -- and the political momentum -- have converged. And NOW is the time for our country to enact bold structural changes to rebuild our middle class -- like many of the steps that Dr. Stiglitz is proposing today.
- In a word, we need an economy that rewards WORK and not just wealth.
- That means lifting the floor for working people – raising the minimum wage, strengthening the rights of workers to organize, and cracking down on wage theft.
- It means supporting working parents and their families – with paid sick and paid family leave; providing Pre-K and after-school programs and child care;

and helping students graduate from college without a mountain of debt hanging over their heads.

- And yes, it means REAL, BOLD efforts to make our tax system more fair – closing tax loopholes that big corporations and the wealthy use to take their massive profits and wealth...and simply pile up greater profits and wealth for themselves.
- Just one example – the carried interest loophole, which you’ve all heard about – a loophole that allows billionaire hedge fund managers to pay a lower overall tax rate than the hardworking men and women who clean their summer homes, or pilot their private jets.
- Now you’ve heard why this sort of thing is possible. It’s because the system is rigged to benefit those at the top – and to leave everybody else behind.
- We want to rewrite those rules – not to punish success, but to create more success stories.
- We want every child to grow up in a society that says: “if you’re willing to work hard, you’ve got a chance to live your dreams.”
- For generations, that was the promise of my city of New York. It was the definition of the American dream. But for too many, that promise...that dream...has steadily slipped away.
- And that’s why we have to stand together. Progressive economists, academics, elected officials, and everyday Americans in all fifty states.
- And you know what? The American people are already there. Just look at the Fight for 15 – a massive movement in 200 cities, with more than 60,000 people taking to the streets to fight for a minimum wage.
- It’s time for those of us in elected office to hear THEIR voices...and to follow THEIR lead.
- It was Franklin Roosevelt himself who said QUOTE: “Let us not be afraid to help each other. Let us never forget that government is ourselves and not an alien power over us. The ultimate rulers of our democracy are not a President and Senators and Congressmen and government officials but the voters of this country. END QUOTE.
- So as one government official – let me say this. The crisis of economic inequality is massive. But it is well within our power to take it head on, and a make a real difference.

- And we won't do it from the top-down. We'll do it as a progressive force...city by city, neighborhood by neighborhood...listening to the people who sent us to make the change for which they hunger.
- And we'll do it...together.
- Thank you.

###

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Fw: Politico: Wall Street warns Hillary Clinton: Don't be like Ed Miliband
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 2:36:28 PM

Fyi

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 02:34 PM
To: B; FLONYC
Cc: 'John Del Cecato' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma Subject: Politico: Wall Street warns Hillary Clinton: Don't be like Ed Miliband

Wall Street warns Hillary Clinton: Don't be like Ed Miliband

In British election, bashing bonuses and hedge funds didn't work for Labour leader.

By Ben White

5/11/15 1:57 PM EDT

Updated 5/11/15 2:17 PM EDT

NEW YORK — Wall Street has a message for bank-bashing U.S. populist politicians: Put down the pitchforks or you could wind up like Ed Miliband.

Senior financial executives say the Labour leader's anti-bank, soak the rich rhetoric helped sink his party in the U.K. elections and assured a surprisingly big reelection win for Prime Minister David Cameron and his Conservative party last week. Miliband resigned as Labour leader following the loss.

These bankers and their ideological supporters say if likely Democratic presidential nominee Hillary Clinton keeps tacking to the left on Wall Street issues — as Massachusetts Sen. Elizabeth Warren, other progressive Democrats and Vermont Sen. Bernie Sanders are demanding — she could wind up facing the same fate.

“Cameron embraced the role of the financial sector in growing the U.K. economy and creating jobs, never once criticizing hedge funds, banks or the wealthy,” said a top executive at one of Wall Street's largest firms. “Miliband ran against hedge funds and bankers, promising bonus and mansion taxes and lost big. Is that a lesson for Hillary as well?”

This executive, like several others who cited the U.K. election result as a warning to populists, declined to be identified by name or by firm for fear of eliciting a heavy backlash.

Another executive said Miliband's adoption of Warren's approach to the financial sector and banking regulation failed even though U.K. voters trust banks even less than U.S. voters, according to opinion surveys.

“Seems like there might be some political lessons for the U.S. out of the U.K. election — with Miliband’s Warren style, anti-business, anti-bank rhetoric clearly falling flat with the general public even as the press ate it up,” this executive from another of Wall Street’s largest firms said. “And the Edelman trust barometer actually shows that British voters are more distrustful and wary of the banks than here in the U.S.”

The financial executives cited Miliband’s attacks on Cameron and the Conservatives as the “party of hedge funds” and his calls for higher taxes on the industry as failing to captivate U.K. voters. And they noted that despite polls showing a very tight race, Cameron and his party won 51 percent of the vote and 331 seats in Parliament to just 36 percent and 232 seats for Miliband and his Labour party.

Conservative analysts also said U.S. politicians including Clinton should take note of the U.K. result.

“There are two lessons here,” said Douglas Holtz-Eakin of the American Action Forum. “One is the Miliband lesson. The U.S. has now seen that people in the U.K. don’t really like this focus on inequality and redistribution. It’s not where people are. And the second is that conservatives were very effective in saying they were for working people but keeping the focus on work not excessive government intervention and benefits.”

Financial reform advocates in the U.S. say these executives and analysts are delusional and reading things into the U.K. results that are not really there.

“Backwards logic like this almost makes you understand why Wall Street executives are deluded enough to believe they shouldn’t be held responsible for blowing up the economy in 2008 and fighting common sense legislation designed to prevent them from doing it again,” said Neil Sroka, communications director for progressive group Democracy for America. “If these guys actually believe that Cameron won because he bear-hugged billionaire bankers or think that Democrats will do better in 2016 if they continue treating a thief on Wall Street differently than a thief on Main Street, I’ve got an tranche of decade-old, toxic mortgages I know they’ll want to get in on.”

Dennis Kelleher, head of financial reform group Better Markets, said many other factors were at play in the U.K.

“Claiming the five-week sprint known as the U.K. election — and the Scottish freedom campaign — means anything for the US is nothing more than wishful thinking by Wall Street’s spinners,” he said. “Secretary Clinton will be spelling out pro-growth agendas that also protect the American people from Wall Street’s dangerous too big to fail banks. It’s not either/or. It’s both.”

The comments from Wall Street executives and conservative analysts come as some in the industry fear that Clinton will continue to move left on financial reform issues as her campaign progresses.

Clinton used her first trip to Iowa as an announced candidate last month to issue a fresh assault. “There’s something wrong,” she told Iowans, when “hedge fund managers pay lower taxes than nurses or the truckers I saw on I-80 when I was driving here over the last two days.”

In a fundraising note last month, Clinton wrote that “families have fought their way back from tough economic times. But it’s not enough — not when the average CEO makes 300 times what the average worker makes.”

Wall Street mostly shrugged off those comments, confident that Clinton, who has enjoyed heavy financial support from the industry, would ultimately govern as a pro-business pragmatist not inclined to bust up big banks or support higher taxes on financial transactions or new controls on executive pay.

But as the “Draft Warren” for president movement continues to gain steam and coalitions of left wing and right wing populists in Congress flirt with the idea of breaking up the biggest banks, Wall Street is getting a bit more nervous. And they are pointing to the U.K. results and Republican gains in 2014 in the U.S. as evidence that Clinton should focus on other issues or face a possible loss in 2016.

“I would say that this is the second major election in a row where bank bashing no longer seems to move voters,” said a lobbyist for the banking industry. “Even where voters may continue to have anger about banks, other issues seem to be driving their votes. We saw that last year in the U.S., and now we seem to be seeing an echo in the U.K.”

--

Mahen Gunaratna

Director of Research and Media Analysis

Mayor’s Press Office | City Hall

mgunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov

(212) 676-3154 (o) | (347)-268-4295 (c)

From: Leopold, Elana
To: B
Cc: @EO; [REDACTED] John Del Cecato
Subject: NVM: Rep Grijalva
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 2:39:22 PM

Rep. Raúl Grijalva

[REDACTED]

Thank you for the accommodations you are making so that peace in the valley can prevail in here in DC. Want to talk to you before the event about emphasis and agenda. If you can't reach me ask for Amy and she can find me.

Sent from my iPhone

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: Gunaratna, Mahen; B; FLONYC
Cc: "John Del Cecato"; Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma
Subject: RE: Politico: Wall Street warns Hillary Clinton: Don't be like Ed Miliband
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 2:40:26 PM

Miliband is becoming the comparison du jour--- first Newt , now WSJ

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 2:35 PM
To: B; FLONYC
Cc: 'John Del Cecato'; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma
Subject: Politico: Wall Street warns Hillary Clinton: Don't be like Ed Miliband

Wall Street warns Hillary Clinton: Don't be like Ed Miliband

In British election, bashing bonuses and hedge funds didn't work for Labour leader.

By Ben White

5/11/15 1:57 PM EDT

Updated 5/11/15 2:17 PM EDT

NEW YORK — Wall Street has a message for bank-bashing U.S. populist politicians: Put down the pitchforks or you could wind up like Ed Miliband.

Senior financial executives say the Labour leader's anti-bank, soak the rich rhetoric helped sink his party in the U.K. elections and assured a surprisingly big reelection win for Prime Minister David Cameron and his Conservative party last week. Miliband resigned as Labour leader following the loss.

These bankers and their ideological supporters say if likely Democratic presidential nominee Hillary Clinton keeps tacking to the left on Wall Street issues — as Massachusetts Sen. Elizabeth Warren, other progressive Democrats and Vermont Sen. Bernie Sanders are demanding — she could wind up facing the same fate.

“Cameron embraced the role of the financial sector in growing the U.K. economy and creating jobs, never once criticizing hedge funds, banks or the wealthy,” said a top executive at one of Wall Street's largest firms. “Miliband ran against hedge funds and bankers, promising bonus and mansion taxes and lost big. Is that a lesson for Hillary as well?”

This executive, like several others who cited the U.K. election result as a warning to populists, declined to be identified by name or by firm for fear of eliciting a heavy backlash.

Another executive said Miliband's adoption of Warren's approach to the financial sector and banking regulation failed even though U.K. voters trust banks even less than U.S. voters, according to opinion surveys.

“Seems like there might be some political lessons for the U.S. out of the U.K. election — with Miliband’s Warren style, anti-business, anti-bank rhetoric clearly falling flat with the general public even as the press ate it up,” this executive from another of Wall Street’s largest firms said. “And the Edelman trust barometer actually shows that British voters are more distrustful and wary of the banks than here in the U.S.”

The financial executives cited Miliband’s attacks on Cameron and the Conservatives as the “party of hedge funds” and his calls for higher taxes on the industry as failing to captivate U.K. voters. And they noted that despite polls showing a very tight race, Cameron and his party won 51 percent of the vote and 331 seats in Parliament to just 36 percent and 232 seats for Miliband and his Labour party.

Conservative analysts also said U.S. politicians including Clinton should take note of the U.K. result.

“There are two lessons here,” said Douglas Holtz-Eakin of the American Action Forum. “One is the Miliband lesson. The U.S. has now seen that people in the U.K. don’t really like this focus on inequality and redistribution. It’s not where people are. And the second is that conservatives were very effective in saying they were for working people but keeping the focus on work not excessive government intervention and benefits.”

Financial reform advocates in the U.S. say these executives and analysts are delusional and reading things into the U.K. results that are not really there.

“Backwards logic like this almost makes you understand why Wall Street executives are deluded enough to believe they shouldn’t be held responsible for blowing up the economy in 2008 and fighting common sense legislation designed to prevent them from doing it again,” said Neil Sroka, communications director for progressive group Democracy for America. “If these guys actually believe that Cameron won because he bear-hugged billionaire bankers or think that Democrats will do better in 2016 if they continue treating a thief on Wall Street differently than a thief on Main Street, I’ve got an tranche of decade-old, toxic mortgages I know they’ll want to get in on.”

Dennis Kelleher, head of financial reform group Better Markets, said many other factors were at play in the U.K.

“Claiming the five-week sprint known as the U.K. election — and the Scottish freedom campaign — means anything for the US is nothing more than wishful thinking by Wall Street’s spinners,” he said. “Secretary Clinton will be spelling out pro-growth agendas that also protect the American people from Wall Street’s dangerous too big to fail banks. It’s not either/or. It’s both.”

The comments from Wall Street executives and conservative analysts come as some in the industry fear that Clinton will continue to move left on financial reform issues as her campaign progresses.

Clinton used her first trip to Iowa as an announced candidate last month to issue a fresh assault. “There’s something wrong,” she told Iowans, when “hedge fund managers pay lower taxes than nurses or the truckers I saw on I-80 when I was driving here over the last two days.”

In a fundraising note last month, Clinton wrote that “families have fought their way back from tough economic times. But it’s not enough — not when the average CEO makes 300 times what the average worker makes.”

Wall Street mostly shrugged off those comments, confident that Clinton, who has enjoyed heavy financial support from the industry, would ultimately govern as a pro-business pragmatist not inclined to bust up big banks or support higher taxes on financial transactions or new controls on executive pay.

But as the “Draft Warren” for president movement continues to gain steam and coalitions of left wing and right wing populists in Congress flirt with the idea of breaking up the biggest banks, Wall Street is getting a bit more nervous. And they are pointing to the U.K. results and Republican gains in 2014 in the U.S. as evidence that Clinton should focus on other issues or face a possible loss in 2016.

“I would say that this is the second major election in a row where bank bashing no longer seems to move voters,” said a lobbyist for the banking industry. “Even where voters may continue to have anger about banks, other issues seem to be driving their votes. We saw that last year in the U.S., and now we seem to be seeing an echo in the U.K.”

--

Mahen Gunaratna

Director of Research and Media Analysis

Mayor’s Press Office | City Hall

mgunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov

(212) 676-3154 (o) | (347)-268-4295 (c)

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
To: "John Del Cecato"; Snyder, Thomas; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Ronalie; Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana
Subject: RE: TPA
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 2:48:35 PM

The line "We've had over 100,000 New Yorkers apply for a municipal ID" is a bit outdated (our last public pronouncement was 170k).

The NYCID team recommends instead stating that we have over 190,000 New Yorkers who now have their IDs in hand – and rapidly growing.

The number is actually over 200k as of today, but team wants to temper his remarks for tomorrow and instead do a presser once we hit the 250k mark at a later date.

Andrea has signed off on this language/strategy.

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 2:37 PM
To: Gunaratna, Mahen; Snyder, Thomas; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Ronalie; Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA

Revised

From: <Gunaratna>, "Gunaratna, Mahen" <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 2:03 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Dominic Williams <DWilliams@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Ronalie <[REDACTED]>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: TPA

Few minor fact-check edits:

1. Re: Stiglitz, it says that they've "gotten to know each other these past few months". Can we change to "past few years"? Recall BdB and Stiglitz chatting during the campaign and [REDACTED] in 2013.
2. For Elizabeth Warren, we say she's been fighting for the middle class as an academic, etc. for "three decades". Should we change to "nearly four decades"? She started as a professor in 1977.
3. Could we change "with 60,000 people" to "with over 60,000 people"?

Looks good otherwise!

Mahen

-----Original Message-----

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 12:03 PM

To: Snyder, Thomas; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Gunaratna, Mahen; Ronalie; Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana

Subject: Re: TPA

Here's an updated version, reflecting Tom's changes & adding Q/A on FTT.

Also cut the jokes in the Roosevelt speech, per MBDB

On 5/11/15, 9:39 AM, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>John - on the Q&A piece addressing the idea that the Mayor is out of >his "realm" on all this national stuff and neglecting NYC. I think we >can be more forthright without being defensive by saying upfront:
>"It helps New Yorkers when we push the federal and state governments to >raise the minimum wage. It helps New Yorkers when we push the federal >government to pass paid family leave. It helps New Yorkers when we push
>the federal government to reward work not wealth by reforming tax >policy." Then I think the other points you use on this question follow >fine. He's starting to take on a lot of hits for his travel so my gut >tells me we need a sharper affirmation of why it is in the direct >self-interest of New Yorkers to have a Mayor pushing for state and >national reforms. If you agree can you send back a revised Q&A. Others >should weigh in.

>

>-----Original Message-----

>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

>Sent: Sunday, May 10, 2015 10:12 PM

>To: Snyder, Thomas; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil;

>Hagelgans, Andrea; Gunaratna, Mahen

>Cc: Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana

>Subject: Re: TPA

>

>Four attachments.

>

>1. Briefing memo on Roosevelt event.

>2. Draft remarks for Roosevelt.

>3. Draft Q&A for TPA event at 3pm at Capitol.

>4. A backgrounder on some of the issues in TPA. May need to be updated.

>

>Just as FYI - if we have all the speakers planned actually speak, and
>it's actually 93 degrees, these questions won't be coming in a formal
>way (from the podium), but rather as a break-off situation - where some >reporters ask some questions of MBDB, other reporters focus on other >participants.

>

>

>

>On 5/10/15, 5:05 PM, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>>John - Mayor wants the following by sometime tomorrow morning:

>>1. Roosevelt Institute remarks and a brief on set up, speakers etc.

>>2. A list of Media Questions that may come up at the TPA event; if you >>can add answers that's fine too but definitely the Questions - also by >>tomorrow morning sometime.

>>

>>I think Michael and Elana may have some other stuff to take up with >>you about his travels this week.

>>

>>Sent from my iPad

>

From: Carey, Michael
To: "John Del Cecato"
Subject: RE: California
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 2:53:27 PM

All I have open now is Friday AM 9-1130

Michael Paul Carey
Director of Scheduling and Advance
City Hall
New York, New York 10007
212.341.5396

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 2:53 PM
To: Carey, Michael
Subject: California

Peter Ragone is helping to get times with Mark Z. Barabak of the LA Times & Carla Maranucci with Chronicle .. Do you know what time slots available?

From: John Del Cecato
To: Gunaratna, Mahen; Snyder, Thomas; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Ronalie; Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 2:56:36 PM
Attachments: MBDBremarksRoosevelt.docx

One more revised

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 2:37 PM
To: "Gunaratna, Mahen" <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Dominic Williams <DWilliams@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Ronalie <[REDACTED]> "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <LEopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: TPA

Revised

From: <Gunaratna>, "Gunaratna, Mahen" <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 2:03 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Dominic Williams <DWilliams@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Ronalie <[REDACTED]> "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <LEopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: TPA

Few minor fact-check edits:

1. Re: Stiglitz, it says that they've "gotten to know each other these past few months". Can we change to "past few years"? Recall BdB and Stiglitz chatting during the campaign and [REDACTED] in 2013.
2. For Elizabeth Warren, we say she's been fighting for the middle class as an academic, etc. for "three decades". Should we change to "nearly four decades"? She started as a professor in 1977.
3. Could we change "with 60,000 people" to "with over 60,000 people"?

Looks good otherwise!

Mahen

-----Original Message-----

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 12:03 PM
To: Snyder, Thomas; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Gunaratna, Mahen; Ronalie; Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana

Subject: Re: TPA

Here's an updated version, reflecting Tom's changes & adding Q/A on FTT.

Also cut the jokes in the Roosevelt speech, per MBDB

On 5/11/15, 9:39 AM, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>John - on the Q&A piece addressing the idea that the Mayor is out of >his "realm" on all this national stuff and neglecting NYC. I think we >can be more forthright without being defensive by saying upfront:
>"It helps New Yorkers when we push the federal and state governments to >raise the minimum wage. It helps New Yorkers when we push the federal >government to pass paid family leave. It helps New Yorkers when we push
>the federal government to reward work not wealth by reforming tax >policy." Then I think the other points you use on this question follow >fine. He's starting to take on a lot of hits for his travel so my gut >tells me we need a sharper affirmation of why it is in the direct >self-interest of New Yorkers to have a Mayor pushing for state and >national reforms. If you agree can you send back a revised Q&A. Others >should weigh in.

>

>-----Original Message-----

>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

>Sent: Sunday, May 10, 2015 10:12 PM

>To: Snyder, Thomas; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil;

>Hagelgans, Andrea; Gunaratna, Mahen

>Cc: Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana

>Subject: Re: TPA

>

>Four attachments.

>

- >1. Briefing memo on Roosevelt event.
- >2. Draft remarks for Roosevelt.
- >3. Draft Q&A for TPA event at 3pm at Capitol.
- >4. A backgrounder on some of the issues in TPA. May need to be updated.

>

>Just as FYI - if we have all the speakers planned actually speak, and
>it's actually 93 degrees, these questions won't be coming in a formal
>way (from the podium), but rather as a break-off situation - where some >reporters ask some questions of MBDB, other reporters focus on other >participants.

>

>

>

>On 5/10/15, 5:05 PM, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>>John - Mayor wants the following by sometime tomorrow morning:

>>1. Roosevelt Institute remarks and a brief on set up, speakers etc.

>>2. A list of Media Questions that may come up at the TPA event; if you >>can add answers that's fine too but definitely the Questions - also by >>tomorrow morning sometime.

>>

>>I think Michael and Elana may have some other stuff to take up with >>you about his travels this week.

>>

>>Sent from my iPad

>

DRAFT REMARKS 4
Roosevelt Institute event
Tuesday, May 12th
10:35 AM – 10:50 AM (15 minutes)

- Thank you to Felicia Wong for that very kind introduction, and for your tremendous leadership as CEO and President of the Roosevelt Institute.
- I also want to thank Dr. Joseph Stiglitz, not only for producing this incredibly important, through-provoking analysis for rewriting the rules of our modern economy, but also for his advice and support as we have gotten to know each other these past few years. I know of no one who has thought more deeply and advocated more passionately for big, bold, sweeping changes to rebuild the American middle class and restore the principles that will make our country a place of opportunity for everyone.
- I also want to thank Senator Elizabeth Warren for her tireless advocacy on behalf of middle-class people – not just in her time as Senator, but for nearly four DECADES – as an academic, as a regulator, as a policy expert and advisor. Like many of you, I’m inspired by her brilliance, her passion, and her lifelong dedication to challenging the most powerful interests on behalf of those whose voices too often go unheard. I was honored to co-author an op-ed with Senator Warren last week, and I’m humbled to be with her in person here today.
- I also want to applaud the Roosevelt Institute for the invaluable contribution that they make to the public discourse, particularly on the matter that’s been discussed today – thinking big and bold about what it takes to fundamentally change the way our economy works...to ensure that we are creating a more just society...a place where EVERYONE gets a shot at a better life.
- I’m so proud to serve 8.4 million people as mayor of the greatest city on Earth.
- I ran for mayor in 2013 with a promise to tackle what I believed then – and still believe today – is the crisis of our times – and that is income inequality.
- I often spoke of the Tale of Two Cities that New York had become, particularly since the Great Recession had ended. We’re home to Wall Street, which has come roaring back – breaking record after record. At the same time, 46 percent of our population was living at or near the poverty line.
- I said that needed to change – not just because this vast inequality posed a threat to those who were struggling...not simply because those in the middle class felt more and more anxious about staying IN the middle class...but because living in a Gilded City was a threat to EVERY New Yorker...a threat to what made New York so great for so many generations prior.

- So we set out to do something about it, and we achieved some real successes – universal, full-day Pre-K...for every single child who wants it. We more than DOUBLED the number of young people with access to after-school programs.
- We secured paid sick leave for 500,000 additional New Yorkers. We extended the living wage to thousands more. We've had over 100,000 New Yorkers apply for a municipal ID. We're fighting to increase the minimum wage.
- And this year, we're pushing the most ambitious municipal affordable housing plan in U.S. history – committing ourselves to building or preserving 200,000 units of affordable housing, and requiring – for the first time ever – that developers include affordable housing as a CONDITION of building in New York.
- We've got a very long way to go, but we're tackling inequality every way we know how – with every tool at our disposal.
- I'm here today because the fight to lift up struggling New Yorkers, and to help rebuild New York's middle class, doesn't end at the borders of my city. What happens in Washington – or doesn't happen – makes an enormous difference to my 8.4 million constituents back home.
- When Franklin Roosevelt created the New Deal, he relied upon many policies first developed in states and cities across America. Governors, Mayors, city and state legislatures – we all have the opportunity to incubate ideas at the local level, and create momentum for real, progressive national change.
- Today, the economic moment -- and the political momentum -- have converged. And NOW is the time for our country to enact bold structural changes to rebuild our middle class -- like many of the steps that Dr. Stiglitz is proposing today.
- In a word, we need an economy that rewards WORK and not just wealth.
- That means lifting the floor for working people – raising the minimum wage, strengthening the rights of workers to organize, and cracking down on wage theft.
- It means supporting working parents and their families – with paid sick and paid family leave; providing Pre-K and after-school programs and child care;

and helping students graduate from college without a mountain of debt hanging over their heads.

- And yes, it means REAL, BOLD efforts to make our tax system more fair – closing tax loopholes that big corporations and the wealthy use to take their massive profits and wealth...and simply pile up greater profits and wealth for themselves.
- Just one example – the carried interest loophole, which you’ve all heard about – a loophole that allows billionaire hedge fund managers to pay a lower overall tax rate than the hardworking men and women who clean their summer homes, or pilot their private jets.
- Now you’ve heard why this sort of thing is possible. It’s because the system is rigged to benefit those at the top – and to leave everybody else behind.
- We want to rewrite those rules – not to punish success, but to create more success stories.
- We want every child to grow up in a society that says: “if you’re willing to work hard, you’ve got a chance to live your dreams.”
- For generations, that was the promise of my city of New York. It was the definition of the American dream. But for too many, that promise...that dream...has steadily slipped away.
- And that’s why we have to stand together. Progressive economists, academics, elected officials, and everyday Americans in all fifty states.
- And you know what? The American people are already there. Just look at the Fight for 15 – a massive movement in 200 cities, with more than 60,000 people taking to the streets to fight for a minimum wage.
- It’s time for those of us in elected office to hear THEIR voices...and to follow THEIR lead.
- It was Franklin Roosevelt himself who said QUOTE: “Let us not be afraid to help each other. Let us never forget that government is ourselves and not an alien power over us. The ultimate rulers of our democracy are not a President and Senators and Congressmen and government officials but the voters of this country. END QUOTE.
- So as one government official – let me say this. The crisis of economic inequality is massive. But it is well within our power to take it head on, and a make a real difference.

- And we won't do it from the top-down. We'll do it as a progressive force...city by city, neighborhood by neighborhood...listening to the people who sent us to make the change for which they hunger.
- And we'll do it...together.
- Thank you.

###

From: John Del Cecato
To: Gunaratna, Mahen; Snyder, Thomas; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Ronalie; Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 2:59:08 PM
Attachments: MBDBremarksRoosevelt.docx

Another revised (MUNI ID #)

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 2:57 PM
To: "Gunaratna, Mahen" <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Dominic Williams <DWilliams@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Ronalie <[REDACTED]> "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <LEopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: TPA

One more revised

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 2:37 PM
To: "Gunaratna, Mahen" <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Dominic Williams <DWilliams@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Ronalie <[REDACTED]> "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <LEopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: TPA

Revised

From: <Gunaratna>, "Gunaratna, Mahen" <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 2:03 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Dominic Williams <DWilliams@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Ronalie <[REDACTED]> "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <LEopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: TPA

Few minor fact-check edits:

1. Re: Stiglitz, it says that they've "gotten to know each other these past few months". Can we change to "past few years"? Recall BdB and Stiglitz chatting during the campaign and [REDACTED] in 2013.
2. For Elizabeth Warren, we say she's been fighting for the middle class as an academic, etc. for “three decades”. Should we change to “nearly four decades”? She started as a professor in 1977.

3. Could we change “with 60,000 people” to “with over 60,000 people”?

Looks good otherwise!

Mahen

-----Original Message-----

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 12:03 PM

To: Snyder, Thomas; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Gunaratna, Mahen; Ronalie; Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana

Subject: Re: TPA

Here's an updated version, reflecting Tom's changes & adding Q/A on FTT.

Also cut the jokes in the Roosevelt speech, per MBDB

On 5/11/15, 9:39 AM, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>John - on the Q&A piece addressing the idea that the Mayor is out of >his "realm" on all this national stuff and neglecting NYC. I think we >can be more forthright without being defensive by saying upfront:
>"It helps New Yorkers when we push the federal and state governments to >raise the minimum wage. It helps New Yorkers when we push the federal >government to pass paid family leave. It helps New Yorkers when we push
>the federal government to reward work not wealth by reforming tax >policy." Then I think the other points you use on this question follow >fine. He's starting to take on a lot of hits for his travel so my gut >tells me we need a sharper affirmation of why it is in the direct >self-interest of New Yorkers to have a Mayor pushing for state and >national reforms. If you agree can you send back a revised Q&A. Others >should weigh in.

>

>-----Original Message-----

>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

>Sent: Sunday, May 10, 2015 10:12 PM

>To: Snyder, Thomas; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil;

>Hagelgans, Andrea; Gunaratna, Mahen

>Cc: Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana

>Subject: Re: TPA

>

>Four attachments.

>

>1. Briefing memo on Roosevelt event.

>2. Draft remarks for Roosevelt.

>3. Draft Q&A for TPA event at 3pm at Capitol.

>4. A backgrounder on some of the issues in TPA. May need to be updated.

>

>Just as FYI - if we have all the speakers planned actually speak, and

>it's actually 93 degrees, these questions won't be coming in a formal

>way (from the podium), but rather as a break-off situation - where some

>reporters ask some questions of MBDB, other reporters focus on other >participants.

>

>

>

>On 5/10/15, 5:05 PM, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>>John - Mayor wants the following by sometime tomorrow morning:

>>1. Roosevelt Institute remarks and a brief on set up, speakers etc.

>>2. A list of Media Questions that may come up at the TPA event; if you >>can add answers that's fine too but definitely the Questions - also by >>tomorrow morning sometime.

>>

>>I think Michael and Elana may have some other stuff to take up with >>you about his travels this week.

>>

>>Sent from my iPad

>

DRAFT REMARKS 5
Roosevelt Institute event
Tuesday, May 12th
10:35 AM – 10:50 AM (15 minutes)

- Thank you to Felicia Wong for that very kind introduction, and for your tremendous leadership as CEO and President of the Roosevelt Institute.
- I also want to thank Dr. Joseph Stiglitz, not only for producing this incredibly important, through-provoking analysis for rewriting the rules of our modern economy, but also for his advice and support as we have gotten to know each other these past few years. I know of no one who has thought more deeply and advocated more passionately for big, bold, sweeping changes to rebuild the American middle class and restore the principles that will make our country a place of opportunity for everyone.
- I also want to thank Senator Elizabeth Warren for her tireless advocacy on behalf of middle-class people – not just in her time as Senator, but for nearly four DECADES – as an academic, as a regulator, as a policy expert and advisor. Like many of you, I’m inspired by her brilliance, her passion, and her lifelong dedication to challenging the most powerful interests on behalf of those whose voices too often go unheard. I was honored to co-author an op-ed with Senator Warren last week, and I’m humbled to be with her in person here today.
- I also want to applaud the Roosevelt Institute for the invaluable contribution that they make to the public discourse, particularly on the matter that’s been discussed today – thinking big and bold about what it takes to fundamentally change the way our economy works...to ensure that we are creating a more just society...a place where EVERYONE gets a shot at a better life.
- I’m so proud to serve 8.4 million people as mayor of the greatest city on Earth.
- I ran for mayor in 2013 with a promise to tackle what I believed then – and still believe today – is the crisis of our times – and that is income inequality.
- I often spoke of the Tale of Two Cities that New York had become, particularly since the Great Recession had ended. We’re home to Wall Street, which has come roaring back – breaking record after record. At the same time, 46 percent of our population was living at or near the poverty line.
- I said that needed to change – not just because this vast inequality posed a threat to those who were struggling...not simply because those in the middle class felt more and more anxious about staying IN the middle class...but because living in a Gilded City was a threat to EVERY New Yorker...a threat to what made New York so great for so many generations prior.

- So we set out to do something about it, and we achieved some real successes – universal, full-day Pre-K...for every single child who wants it. We more than DOUBLED the number of young people with access to after-school programs.
- We secured paid sick leave for 500,000 additional New Yorkers. We extended the living wage to thousands more. More than 190,000 New Yorkers now have a municipal ID – that number is rapidly growing. We're fighting to increase the minimum wage.
- And this year, we're pushing the most ambitious municipal affordable housing plan in U.S. history – committing ourselves to building or preserving 200,000 units of affordable housing, and requiring – for the first time ever – that developers include affordable housing as a CONDITION of building in New York.
- We've got a very long way to go, but we're tackling inequality every way we know how – with every tool at our disposal.
- I'm here today because the fight to lift up struggling New Yorkers, and to help rebuild New York's middle class, doesn't end at the borders of my city. What happens in Washington – or doesn't happen – makes an enormous difference to my 8.4 million constituents back home.
- When Franklin Roosevelt created the New Deal, he relied upon many policies first developed in states and cities across America. Governors, Mayors, city and state legislatures – we all have the opportunity to incubate ideas at the local level, and create momentum for real, progressive national change.
- Today, the economic moment -- and the political momentum -- have converged. And NOW is the time for our country to enact bold structural changes to rebuild our middle class -- like many of the steps that Dr. Stiglitz is proposing today.
- In a word, we need an economy that rewards WORK and not just wealth.
- That means lifting the floor for working people – raising the minimum wage, strengthening the rights of workers to organize, and cracking down on wage theft.
- It means supporting working parents and their families – with paid sick and paid family leave; providing Pre-K and after-school programs and child care;

and helping students graduate from college without a mountain of debt hanging over their heads.

- And yes, it means REAL, BOLD efforts to make our tax system more fair – closing tax loopholes that big corporations and the wealthy use to take their massive profits and wealth...and simply pile up greater profits and wealth for themselves.
- Just one example – the carried interest loophole, which you’ve all heard about – a loophole that allows billionaire hedge fund managers to pay a lower overall tax rate than the hardworking men and women who clean their summer homes, or pilot their private jets.
- Now you’ve heard why this sort of thing is possible. It’s because the system is rigged to benefit those at the top – and to leave everybody else behind.
- We want to rewrite those rules – not to punish success, but to create more success stories.
- We want every child to grow up in a society that says: “if you’re willing to work hard, you’ve got a chance to live your dreams.”
- For generations, that was the promise of my city of New York. It was the definition of the American dream. But for too many, that promise...that dream...has steadily slipped away.
- And that’s why we have to stand together. Progressive economists, academics, elected officials, and everyday Americans in all fifty states.
- And you know what? The American people are already there. Just look at the Fight for 15 – a massive movement in 200 cities, with more than 60,000 people taking to the streets to fight for a minimum wage.
- It’s time for those of us in elected office to hear THEIR voices...and to follow THEIR lead.
- It was Franklin Roosevelt himself who said QUOTE: “Let us not be afraid to help each other. Let us never forget that government is ourselves and not an alien power over us. The ultimate rulers of our democracy are not a President and Senators and Congressmen and government officials but the voters of this country. END QUOTE.
- So as one government official – let me say this. The crisis of economic inequality is massive. But it is well within our power to take it head on, and a make a real difference.

- And we won't do it from the top-down. We'll do it as a progressive force...city by city, neighborhood by neighborhood...listening to the people who sent us to make the change for which they hunger.
- And we'll do it...together.
- Thank you.

###

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Subject: Re: thanks for update
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 3:00:01 PM

[REDACTED]

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 2:52 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: thanks for update

[REDACTED]

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 12:07 PM
To: B
Cc: Aaron PickrellEmail <[REDACTED]> John Davis <[REDACTED]> Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Subject: FW: thanks for update

Should be good here... Fingers crossed

From: <Moe>, Kari <Kari.Moe@mail.house.gov>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 12:04 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: thanks for update

John: Thanks very much for your note and for working with us on tomorrow's event. Very pleased that debt free college and SSexpansion will be included in the Mayor's remarks. We are excited about the potential of the progressive coalition that you have organized for the launch. Look forward to working with you as we move forward.

Kari Moe
Chief of Staff
Congressman Keith Ellison

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 11:52 AM
To: Moe, Kari
Subject: <no subject>

Hey Kari. Spoke to MBDB - and he wanted me to be sure to let you know that he'll be speaking to expanding Social Security and debt-free college in his opening remarks for tomorrow... Thanks for everything - we're really excited to have Cong. Ellison there!!

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
To: "John Del Cecato"; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Heather Boushey
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 3:03:21 PM

Saw that she'll be at the Roosevelt Institute event tomorrow. Just making sure that you and MBdB know that she's one of HRC's advisors.

He asked for a compilation of all of HRC's policy advisors a while back (think before the Iowa trip) and I put together a quick briefing with their photos/backgrounds. She was included.

--

Mahen Gunaratna

Director of Research and Media Analysis
Mayor's Press Office | City Hall
mgunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov
(212) 676-3154 (o) | (347)-268-4295 (c)

From: John Del Cecato
To: Gunaratna, Mahen; Snyder, Thomas; Williams, Dominic; Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Ronaldie; Carey, Michael; Leopold, Eiana
Subject: Clean, updated packet
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 3:20:52 PM
Attachments: MBDBremarksRoosevelt.docx
TPA Q&A.docx
TPA BACKGROUNDER .docx
BriefingMemo-RooseveltEvent.docx

DRAFT REMARKS 5
Roosevelt Institute event
Tuesday, May 12th
10:35 AM – 10:50 AM (15 minutes)

- Thank you to Felicia Wong for that very kind introduction, and for your tremendous leadership as CEO and President of the Roosevelt Institute.
- I also want to thank Dr. Joseph Stiglitz, not only for producing this incredibly important, through-provoking analysis for rewriting the rules of our modern economy, but also for his advice and support as we have gotten to know each other these past few years. I know of no one who has thought more deeply and advocated more passionately for big, bold, sweeping changes to rebuild the American middle class and restore the principles that will make our country a place of opportunity for everyone.
- I also want to thank Senator Elizabeth Warren for her tireless advocacy on behalf of middle-class people – not just in her time as Senator, but for nearly four DECADES – as an academic, as a regulator, as a policy expert and advisor. Like many of you, I’m inspired by her brilliance, her passion, and her lifelong dedication to challenging the most powerful interests on behalf of those whose voices too often go unheard. I was honored to co-author an op-ed with Senator Warren last week, and I’m humbled to be with her in person here today.
- I also want to applaud the Roosevelt Institute for the invaluable contribution that they make to the public discourse, particularly on the matter that’s been discussed today – thinking big and bold about what it takes to fundamentally change the way our economy works...to ensure that we are creating a more just society...a place where EVERYONE gets a shot at a better life.
- I’m so proud to serve 8.4 million people as mayor of the greatest city on Earth.
- I ran for mayor in 2013 with a promise to tackle what I believed then – and still believe today – is the crisis of our times – and that is income inequality.
- I often spoke of the Tale of Two Cities that New York had become, particularly since the Great Recession had ended. We’re home to Wall Street, which has come roaring back – breaking record after record. At the same time, 46 percent of our population was living at or near the poverty line.
- I said that needed to change – not just because this vast inequality posed a threat to those who were struggling...not simply because those in the middle class felt more and more anxious about staying IN the middle class...but because living in a Gilded City was a threat to EVERY New Yorker...a threat to what made New York so great for so many generations prior.

- So we set out to do something about it, and we achieved some real successes – universal, full-day Pre-K...for every single child who wants it. We more than DOUBLED the number of young people with access to after-school programs.
- We secured paid sick leave for 500,000 additional New Yorkers. We extended the living wage to thousands more. More than 190,000 New Yorkers now have a municipal ID – that number is rapidly growing. We're fighting to increase the minimum wage.
- And this year, we're pushing the most ambitious municipal affordable housing plan in U.S. history – committing ourselves to building or preserving 200,000 units of affordable housing, and requiring – for the first time ever – that developers include affordable housing as a CONDITION of building in New York.
- We've got a very long way to go, but we're tackling inequality every way we know how – with every tool at our disposal.
- I'm here today because the fight to lift up struggling New Yorkers, and to help rebuild New York's middle class, doesn't end at the borders of my city. What happens in Washington – or doesn't happen – makes an enormous difference to my 8.4 million constituents back home.
- When Franklin Roosevelt created the New Deal, he relied upon many policies first developed in states and cities across America. Governors, Mayors, city and state legislatures – we all have the opportunity to incubate ideas at the local level, and create momentum for real, progressive national change.
- Today, the economic moment -- and the political momentum -- have converged. And NOW is the time for our country to enact bold structural changes to rebuild our middle class -- like many of the steps that Dr. Stiglitz is proposing today.
- In a word, we need an economy that rewards WORK and not just wealth.
- That means lifting the floor for working people – raising the minimum wage, strengthening the rights of workers to organize, and cracking down on wage theft.
- It means supporting working parents and their families – with paid sick and paid family leave; providing Pre-K and after-school programs and child care;

and helping students graduate from college without a mountain of debt hanging over their heads.

- And yes, it means REAL, BOLD efforts to make our tax system more fair – closing tax loopholes that big corporations and the wealthy use to take their massive profits and wealth...and simply pile up greater profits and wealth for themselves.
- Just one example – the carried interest loophole, which you’ve all heard about – a loophole that allows billionaire hedge fund managers to pay a lower overall tax rate than the hardworking men and women who clean their summer homes, or pilot their private jets.
- Now you’ve heard why this sort of thing is possible. It’s because the system is rigged to benefit those at the top – and to leave everybody else behind.
- We want to rewrite those rules – not to punish success, but to create more success stories.
- We want every child to grow up in a society that says: “if you’re willing to work hard, you’ve got a chance to live your dreams.”
- For generations, that was the promise of my city of New York. It was the definition of the American dream. But for too many, that promise...that dream...has steadily slipped away.
- And that’s why we have to stand together. Progressive economists, academics, elected officials, and everyday Americans in all fifty states.
- And you know what? The American people are already there. Just look at the Fight for 15 – a massive movement in 200 cities, with more than 60,000 people taking to the streets to fight for a minimum wage.
- It’s time for those of us in elected office to hear THEIR voices...and to follow THEIR lead.
- It was Franklin Roosevelt himself who said QUOTE: “Let us not be afraid to help each other. Let us never forget that government is ourselves and not an alien power over us. The ultimate rulers of our democracy are not a President and Senators and Congressmen and government officials but the voters of this country. END QUOTE.
- So as one government official – let me say this. The crisis of economic inequality is massive. But it is well within our power to take it head on, and a make a real difference.

- And we won't do it from the top-down. We'll do it as a progressive force...city by city, neighborhood by neighborhood...listening to the people who sent us to make the change for which they hunger.
- And we'll do it...together.
- Thank you.

###

TPA Questions and Answers

Q: Why are you doing this?

A: Progressives see the national conversation moving more and more to income inequality – something that was only happening in small circles a year ago. Now is the time to not only recognize the problem, but commit to real solutions for combatting it.

Q: Is Elizabeth Warren signed on to TPA?

A: She won't be attending the event at the Capitol Building, but we've been working together to shine a light on many of these issues – as we did with our op-ed recently. In fact, we'll be appearing together that morning at an event hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, where Joe Stiglitz will be unveiling a comprehensive approach to rewriting the rules of the economy to rebuild the middle class.

Q: Officials who were at the Gracie event, including Sen. Brown and Gov. Strickland said they will not sign on to the agenda or be at the May 12 event, although they sympathize with the Mayor's goals. Do you have any concerns that attendees of the April 2 Gracie Mansion meeting not signing on?

A: Some folks have a policy against signing pledges, and that's fine. Both Senator Brown and Governor Strickland have been strong champions in this effort to combat income inequality, particularly on proposals to lift the floor for working people.

Q: Is this a rebuke of Hillary?

A: No, this isn't about an individual. We're here to send a message to ALL elected officials and candidates for every office, up and down the ballot, in both parties: to tackle income inequality, we must implement bold progressive policies.

Q: What does Hillary have to do for you to back her?

A: I think what progressives want to see from her – and from elected officials and candidates at every level – is a vision...an economic framework...that really tackles income inequality.

Q: Some people here have already backed Hillary. You, notably, have not.

A: We are here to say that anyone hoping to lead the American people – up and down the ballot – must have a plan to combat income inequality that's based on progressive principles.

Q: What are your next steps?

A: There are a host of ways of engaging progressive leaders, and the progressive Americans they speak to, or speak for. The leadership of organized labor will be speaking to their members and building support for the cause. The heads of progressive organizations will be channeling the support of everyday Americans who are eager to spread the word within their communities. Elected officials will go back to their states and districts and cities to build support among their constituents. And we will ALL be fanning out and speaking out, driving people from across the country to our website – asking them to sign on, to offer comments and suggestions, and to hold elected officials and candidates accountable for results.

Q: What happens if a candidate or elected official doesn't endorse The Progressive Agenda? Will you all campaign against them?

A: We're asking them to commit to these principles because they are three things: 1) real solutions to income inequality; 2) feasible ideas; 3) resonant with millions of Americans who are desperate for leadership on these economic matters. We're looking to elevate these issues into the national dialogue in a positive, pro-active way.

Q: Grover Norquist makes conservative candidates and elected officials sign a no-tax pledge – and he strongly backs those who do, while punishing those who do not. Is that what you're trying to replicate?

A: It's not about the backing or non-backing from folks up here. It's about the people we represent – progressives across the country. And to motivate those Americans – to get them on their feet, activated, and encouraged to support a candidate or elected official – they need to know that the candidate or elected official is with them on these core issues.

Q: Even if you continue to have a Democratic White House, you'll likely have a Republican Congress. How can any of this get done?

A: This isn't just about the White House and Congress. BUT, I will say this. There are those who see divided government & believe that nothing but the most watered-down measures can get support. I don't believe that. If you push hard enough, organize aggressively enough, and make it front-and-center in the national conversation, politicians who might ordinarily be afraid to be bold will suddenly see that it's not just "okay" to have a backbone. It's an existential requirement.

Q: The NYS GOP Chair said YOU would beat HRC in a primary.

A: As much as I enjoy getting political advice from the GOP Chair – let me be clear: I'm not running for president. That's my Sherman-esque answer. We just want these policies to be implemented.

Q: Should Elizabeth Warren run?

A: I think she has already made her intentions clear, and I'll make my message clear: this isn't about personalities; it's about policies.

Q: Could you see yourself supporting Martin O'Malley? He agrees with you on a lot of this stuff.

A: Policies. Not Personalities.

Q: Some of the things you've mentioned, like the TPP, are being supported by President Obama. Are you prepared to go to war with the White House on Fast

Track?

A: It's not about war with the White House, or the GOP Congress. It's about standing up for what's right – no matter where the chips fall. I believe that Fast Track is a bad deal for American workers.

Q: Why isn't Sen. Warren here?

A: I've been working with Senator Warren on these issues. We just published a joint op-ed that touched on many of these topics, and several others, as well. I was with her at the Roosevelt Institute event with Joe Stiglitz this morning. The group assembled here is clearly not an exhaustive list of those who support our agenda. But the folks here represent a diverse group of progressive groups and constituents who are hungry for economic policy aimed at combatting income inequality.

Q: Aren't you concerned that candidates or elected officials will look at all the taxes you're proposing here & say "Geez, I don't want an attack ad run by the Koch Brothers saying I support trillions in higher taxes."

A: Here's the hard truth. If you're going to reduce the income gap, you need two things: 1) more investment in programs and policies that lift the floor for working people; and 2) more revenue from those at the very top – millionaires, billionaires, and wealthy corporations. There's no secret pot of money. And if you're going to be serious about investing in programs that help the 99 Percent, then the One Percent has to be willing to help foot the bill. The Koch Brothers have a different point of view – give more tax breaks to big oil companies and fellow billionaires, at the expense of everybody else. I welcome that debate.

Q: How does this help the people of New York City? Are you getting outside the realm of your Day Job?

A: It helps New Yorkers when we push the federal and state governments to raise the minimum wage. It helps New Yorkers when we push the federal government to pass paid family leave. It helps New Yorkers when we push the federal government to reward work not wealth by reforming tax policy.

And the fact is, we are doing many of these things at the city level. We're trying to do some at the state level. Others only make sense at the federal level.

We shouldn't silo government into city or state or federal. People don't look at their government like that. They know that the people they put into public office have to work together, at all levels of government, to achieve real change. And there's so much more that we can do to lift the lives of working people here in NYC if we have support from the federal government, and from people of good conscience from across the country.

Q: You specifically mention closing the carried interest loophole. That would be a big hit to a lot of the private equity, hedge fund, and real estate folks in New York City. Are you declaring war on them – and do you worry that doing so could derail your efforts on education or affordable housing here at home?

A: No one is declaring war. We are shining a bright light on the defining issue of our times – the fact that since the Recession ended, the One Percent has seen their real income grow by 35%. The 99 Percent have seen theirs grow 0.8%. Put another way, the One Percent captured 91% of the real income gains since 2009.

Now, there's no legitimate reason that a hedge fund manager should pay a lower effective tax rate than the woman who cleans his beach house or the guy who pilots his private plane. That makes zero sense.

Rewarding work, and not just wealth, isn't just morally right. It's smart economics. Consumers need money in their pockets to spend on necessities. In turn, that money goes into the economy and lifts it for everyone.

Q: When you say that the income gap has favored the One Percent over the 99 Percent since 2009 – isn't that a direct indictment of President Obama? Should he have done more to help the non-rich?

A: President Obama has made great efforts to close the income gap. Some have called ObamaCare one of the greatest social programs aimed at reducing income inequality since the New Deal. I agree. There was the stimulus, which greatly expanded the EITC. And there was his success in raising the top marginal tax rate to where it was when Bill Clinton left office. What the income inequality statistics tell us is this: we need to be even more aggressive lifting the floor for working people, and that has to include a greater contribution by those at the very top.

Q: Some of the folks who were at the original Gracie Confab have criticized you for not including mass incarceration as part of TPA. Why do you not think that's important enough to be part of TPA?

A: Mass incarceration is a huge problem – and one that we've set out to address in New York City. We've ended the overuse of stop-and-frisk – from around 700,000 a few years before I took office, to less than 50,000 last year. Since we implemented our new marijuana policy, arrests are down 65 percent. We've launched a plan to shrink the population at New York City jails by 25 percent in 10 years.

And this is an important issue across the country – one that progressives will be addressing in the national context in the months to come. This is just the start – not the final chapter – in how we hope to elevate solutions to core issues of economic and social justice.

Q: What about expanding Social Security? Or debt-free college? There are reports that many of the original “signers” to your agenda have dropped out – reportedly furious that you refused to include those issues.

A: Everyone has to make their own decision about whether to support or not support The Progressive Agenda that we've unveiled today. But I've made my support for the issues you've mentioned clear. In fact, I wrote an op-ed with Elizabeth Warren that mentioned them specifically!

This is the result of a long and collaborative process. Just because something doesn't appear as a plank on this agenda doesn't mean it's not important. It doesn't mean it won't be part of our efforts in the months to come. Again, this is the floor – not the ceiling. Stay tuned for more to come!

Q: Have you thought about what all of this stuff costs? How are you going to pay for all of this? Things like child care and paid family leave are really expensive.

A: This isn't meant to be a budget blueprint. This is a document designed to highlight some real, bold, progressive policies that can help combat income inequality. It's an organizing tool, and a way to elevate the discussion on some really important issues.

Q: If these things are so important to you, why have you done them in New York? The city doesn't offer paid family leave, for example.

A: In New York City, we've tackled a number of issues on this list – but no, we haven't tackled them all. Many of these issues are best dealt with at the national level – some because of the price tag, and some for reasons of competition between states and cities. National policy puts everyone on a level playing field.

Q: With so many wealthy New Yorkers, are you concerned that this agenda will soak your constituents, while giving Congress the power to use the money generated for programs in other states?

A: We do have some very wealthy residents in New York. And they need to pay their fair share in taxes. We also have a massive number of residents who are struggling, and who could benefit from a host of initiatives presented here. And we believe that we can make an effective case that when New York City is contributing more in federal taxes, then we deserve more help in rebuilding our bruised and battered middle class, and more help in lifting up those in poverty.

Q: I notice that the Financial Transactions Tax isn't on this list. Why is that? Too much pressure from Wall Street?

A: You can't have everything in one document. This is the beginning, not the end. This is one of those issues that, on its face, could be a valuable addition. But I would need to dive more deeply into the details of that policy, and discuss it with the coalition we're building before commenting further.

Q: In 2009, you opposed taxing Wall Street bonuses. Doesn't that make these current tax hike proposals ring kind of hollow?

A: That was a totally different matter. The bonus issue was a symbolic effort, not something meant to truly close the income gap. Closing the carried interest loophole would get right to the heart of a current tax provision that lets billionaires on Wall Street pay a lower tax rate than average working people. And the Buffett Rule would generate a half-trillion dollars over 10 years, by having millionaires and billionaires pay their fair share. That's real money that we can use to invest in child care, Pre-K, and expanding the Earned Income Tax Credit.

Reforming Labor Law

Background: When workers try to organize unions they are often harassed, intimidated or fired, taking away their bargaining power and harming their access to adequate wages and quality healthcare. Workers in unions earn 30 percent higher wages and are 63 percent more likely to have employer-provided health insurance.

Possible Solution: The Employee Free Choice Act: A Congressional bill that would make it easier for workers to join unions, make it easier for newly unionized workers to reach contracts with their employers, and strengthen penalties for those that violate labor law to seek to prevent workers from using their right to organize. The legislation removes the power of employers to demand an additional and separate ballot if a majority of employee signatures were collected. It also assigns the organizing union as the official collective bargaining representative if a majority of employee signatures are collected. The legislation also requires employers and their unions to enter binding arbitration to produce a collective agreement if one cannot be met 90 days after the unionization of employees, and after 30 days of mediation time (120 days total). The arbitration agreement would be binding for a period of two years. Lastly, the legislation increases penalties on employers who discriminate against workers for union involvement.

Immigration Reform and Wage Theft

Immigrant workers are even more vulnerable because they can be threatened with deportation. In 2002, the Supreme Court ruled that undocumented workers cannot seek basic labor protections because they are not legally allowed to work. Therefore, employers can subject undocumented immigrants to abuse and dangerous working conditions for little pay, without worrying about legal action.

<http://thinkprogress.org/immigration/2013/07/10/2276121/dc-undocumented-immigrant-wage-theft/>

Student Loan Refinancing

Background: Some with outstanding loans pay interest rates of 7% or higher for undergraduate loans, while students taking out new undergraduate loans pay 3.86% under the Bipartisan Student Loan Certainty Act passed by Congress in summer 2013. Outstanding student loans now total more than $1.2 trillion, surpassing total credit card debt. One in seven borrowers defaults on federal student loans within three years of beginning repayment.

Possible Solutions: S. 2432 – Bank on Students Emergency Loan Refinancing Act: Would allow more than 25 million people with outstanding student loan debt to refinance their federal student loans or private loans at the lower interest rates currently offered to new borrowers, while maintaining full borrower protections of federal student loans (rather than forcing borrowers refinance with private banks). The loss of federal revenue from the lower loan interest income would require additional DOE direct spending (via its Direct Loan Program), according to the CBO, but would be offset in full by the “Buffet Rule” – a minimum 30% income tax payment from people who earn between $1 and $2 million.

Paid Family Leave

The United States is the only advanced economy without a national paid-leave law. Only three states -- California, New Jersey and Rhode Island -- offer this critical support for working men and women. Even Human Rights Watch has noticed, citing America for failing its families in a scathing report a few years back. In the latest edition of Expecting Better, a report card issued annually by the National Partnership for Women and Families, not a single state merited an "A." California took home an A-minus, New Jersey, a B-plus, and New York, a lackluster B-minus.

<http://www.huffingtonpost.com/susan-ochshorn/new-yorks-real-wealth-pro b 6950998.html>

Tax Breaks for Shipping Jobs Overseas/Deferral/Inversion/Repatriation

SMALLER ONE (NOT AFFECTED BY REPATRIATION):

“Firms can generally deduct business expenses,” said Kimberly Clausing, the Thormund A. Miller and Walter Mintz Professor of Economics at Reed College. “Thus, of course, if firms incurred expenses in moving abroad, they would be able to deduct those expenses.”

BIGGER ONE (AFFECTED BY REPATRIATION):

We’ve also written before on several occasions that the tax code has long allowed U.S. corporations doing business abroad to defer paying taxes on any of their “unrepatriated income.” That is to say that the revenue earned by the company’s foreign subsidiary remains untaxed by the IRS until that money is brought back to the parent company in the U.S.

Sometimes politicians also refer to this as a “tax break for shipping jobs overseas.” And Clausing told us that this part of tax law could motivate companies to move business abroad.

“This can provide a huge incentive for locating jobs and income abroad, since many tax haven countries have tax rates that are very low, even approaching zero, and thus the money can grow abroad ‘tax free’ until it is repatriated,” she said.

<http://www.factcheck.org/2012/10/talking-tax-breaks-for-offshoring/>

BRIEFING MEMO

WHAT: Roosevelt Institute event with Sen. Warren, Prof. Stiglitz
WHEN: Tuesday, May 12th – from 830am to 11am (MBDB at 1035AM)

STIGLITZ MESSAGE:

- Dominant economic frameworks over the past 35 years – like "trickle-down" economics, and the idea that markets work perfectly on their own – paved the way for an onslaught of policies that decimated America's middle class. This paper presents an evidence-backed alternative framework:
- Markets are shaped by laws, regulations and institutions. Rules matter.
- The rules determine how fast the economy grows, and who shares in the benefits of that prosperity.
- Concentrated wealth can hurt economic performance. Under the right rules, shared prosperity and strong economic performance reinforce each other. There is no trade-off.
- A tentative, piecemeal policy response to help the neediest will not suffice. We must rewrite the rules of the economy with a focus on restoring a balance of power between the competing interests that make up the modern economy.

RUN OF SHOW:

NOTE: No holding room. Reserved seats in the front row for Senator Warren and MBDB.

8:30 AM	Breakfast Starts - National Press Club - 529 14th Street, NW; 13 th Floor
9:00	Program begins. RI CEO Felicia Wong remarks & introduces Joseph Stiglitz
9:03-9:15	Stiglitz Remarks

9:15	Wong Intros Rana F.
9:17-10:15	Panel
10:15	Wong introduces Senator Warren
10:17-10:33	Senator Warren Speaks
10:33	Wong Introduces Mayor de Blasio
10:35-10:50	Mayor de Blasio speaks
10:50	Wong Closes

###

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
To: "John Del Cecato"; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: MSNBC: Pres. Obama to address income inequality at poverty summit
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 3:26:49 PM

<http://www.msnbc.com/the-briefing/watch/pres.-obama-to-speak-at-poverty-summit-443256387724>

FYI, this will take place tomorrow at 11:00 a.m., so after Roosevelt Institute but before TPA.

JDC/AH, I will make sure you both have the President's remarks so you can brief MBdB according before his afternoon event.

--

Mahen Gunaratna

Director of Research and Media Analysis

Mayor's Press Office | City Hall

mgunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov

(212) 676-3154 (o) | (347)-268-4295 (c)

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Cc: Snyder, Thomas
Subject: FW: Any Update?
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 4:45:33 PM

I can confirm this - yes? I think Van may be taking a FEW liberties with saying "end of the week" - as it may take a bit longer than that - but is this okay with you?

On 5/11/15, 4:34 PM, "Heather McGhee" <hmcghee@demos.org> wrote:

>I talked to Van and he said that BDB said that he would announce that SS >expansion, debt-free college and mass incarceration would be added to the >document by the end of the week.

>

>If you can confirm that, John, I am deeply relieved and will get back on >the train both literally and figuratively to stand by the Mayor in DC >tomorrow.

>

>Also, if the only thing pushing it back to the end of the week as opposed >to tomorrow when the press is going to be generated is exact language and >sign-off, I'm happy to help you with organizing there as much as I can.

>

>This has been a difficult process, but we are probably the stronger for >it.

>

>Thanks,
>Heather

>

>

>

>> On May 11, 2015, at 3:20 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

>>

>> MBDB was scheduled to talk to Van at 230 - let me see if I can get a >> readout...

>>

>>> On 5/11/15, 3:09 PM, "Heather McGhee" <hmcghee@demos.org> wrote:

>>>

>>> Thanks!

>>

From: John Del Cecato
To: Gann, Georgia; Yazgi, Stephanie; Leopold, Elana
Cc: [REDACTED] Schwartz, Regina
Subject: Re: Mayor's for TPA - Elorza
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 4:52:59 PM

Roger

From: <Gann>, Georgia <GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 4:52 PM
To: Stephanie Yazgi <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmmedia.com>
Cc: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> "Schwartz, Regina" <RSchwartz@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: Mayor's for TPA - Elorza

Mayor Elorza is holding off on signing the Progressive Agenda. Two flags: the trade piece and national labor relations act. Tony Simon, his COS is happy to talk further about either of those and the Mayor may sign on after Tuesday.

John-you're connected with Tony already.

Georgia B. Gann
Senior Legislative Advisor
Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist
New York City Office of Federal Affairs
1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350
Tel. (202) 624-5912
Cell. (347) 497-1740
ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov

From: Gann, Georgia
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 6:13 PM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie; Leopold, Elana; John Del Cecato
Cc: [REDACTED] Schwartz, Regina
Subject: RE: Mayor's for TPA - Hodges

Update: Mayor Hodges would like to be at the presser at 3 pm and support the agenda, but needs clarification on the trade portion of The Progressive Agenda both in the press conference and the weight of that trade bullet in the agenda as a whole. Mayor Hodges' COS John Stiles would like to connect directly – his cell is [REDACTED] and email john.stiles@minneapolismn.gov

John called a couple of minutes ago – I let him know someone would follow up.

Georgia B. Gann
Senior Legislative Advisor
Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist

New York City Office of Federal Affairs
1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350
Tel. (202) 624-5912
Cell. (347) 497-1740
ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov

From: Gann, Georgia
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 3:53 PM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie; Leopold, Elana; John Del Cecato
Cc: [REDACTED] Schwartz, Regina
Subject: RE: Mayor's for TPA

I spoke with Erick Garcia, Senior Policy Aide, on Mayor Hodge's staff. He and his COS requested more specific details on the trade portion of The Progressive Agenda.

The trade portion is raising a flag – she does not have a position on TPA (fast track authority for TPP) and would need to vet with members of her delegation at a minimum before engaging IF The Progressive Agenda is referencing the current trade negotiations/TPA.

Erick has been connected to the team to run through the intent of the trade piece, the connection to the current TPA conversation, and anything that would be referenced specifically about trade at the 3pm presser.

Georgia B. Gann
Senior Legislative Advisor
Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist
New York City Office of Federal Affairs
1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350
Tel. (202) 624-5912
Cell. (347) 497-1740
ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov

From: Yazgi, Stephanie
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 3:49 PM
To: Leopold, Elana; John Del Cecato
Cc: [REDACTED] Schwartz, Regina; Gann, Georgia
Subject: Re: Mayor's for TPA

Georgia

From: Leopold, Elana
Sent: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 3:48 PM
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: Yazgi, Stephanie; [REDACTED] Schwartz, Regina
Subject: Re: Mayor's for TPA

Spoke to who? Hodges staff?

What was original concern?

Sent from my iPhone

On May 6, 2015, at 3:46 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

I spoke to him... We shall see

From: <Yazgi>, Stephanie Yazgi <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 3:14 PM
To: "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
"Schwartz, Regina" <RSchwartz@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: Mayor's for TPA

I've hooked up Erick with Del Cecato who can speak to it

From: Leopold, Elana
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 3:12 PM
To: Yazgi, Stephanie
Cc: John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com); [REDACTED] Schwartz, Regina
Subject: Re: Mayor's for TPA

Thanks- what is Hodges concern?

Sent from my iPhone

On May 6, 2015, at 3:11 PM, Yazgi, Stephanie <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Pls see attached.

Thank you.
stephanie

From: Leopold, Elana
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 2:37 PM
To: John Del Cecato (jfdc@akpdmedia.com); [REDACTED]
Cc: Yazgi, Stephanie; Schwartz, Regina
Subject: Mayor's for TPA

Our Mayor wants to know which of the following have signed on. Those who have not- he wants to call. Here we go!

Mayor Murray
Mayor Hales
Mayor Lee
Mayor Garcetti
Mayor Adler
Mayor Hodges

Mayor Barrett
Mayor Peduto
Mayor Cranley
Mayor Reed
Mayor Brown
Mayor Benjamin
Mayor Bowser
Mayor Nutter
Mayor Barake
Mayor Walsh
Mayor Elorza
Mayor Harp
Mayor Segarra
Mayor Brannan
Upstate Mayors (Sheehan, Minor, Warren, Brown)
<MAYORS OUTREACH tpa 5.6.xlsx>

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Cc: [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: Dean
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:15:01 PM

YES! Hayley - sorry to put this all on you - but One New York can/should pay for that, just as a backup

On 5/11/15, 5:00 PM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

>Let us pray: he's coming up from Florida in the AM by plane and for some >reason flying to Newark Airport, then switching to an Acela train to DC, >arriving 1:52pm. IF the plane is relatively on time, this plan works. If >not, would could be screwed. Do we want to arrange a private car to back >him up and if need be drive him from Newark to DC??

>

From: Spitalnick, Amy \(OMB\)
To: Grybauskas, Natalie; "John Del Cecato"; Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 6:31:56 PM
Attachments: image001.png

Yes, it's open press. On-topic Q&A.

From: Grybauskas, Natalie [mailto:NGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 6:31 PM
To: 'John Del Cecato'; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Phillip Walzak; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Can someone clarify that the 3 pm event is open press and whether there will be q&a?

THE CITY OF NEW YORK
OFFICE OF THE MAYOR
NEW YORK, NY 10007

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

CONTACT: pressoffice@cityhall.nyc.gov, (212) 788-2958

PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12,
2015 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13, 2015

On Tuesday, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Washington, D.C.

In the morning, the Mayor will deliver remarks at the National Press Club. This event, hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, will also feature Nobel Prize winning economist and professor Joseph Stiglitz and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren. This event is open press, and there will be no Q-and-A. Members of the media interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org.

*Later, the Mayor will be joined by dozens of national progressive leaders to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality at the House Triangle near the U.S. Capitol Building steps. This event is open press.

Press Schedule

Approximately 10:30 AM – Delivers Remarks at National Press Club

National Press Club

13, National Press Building Leasing

529 14th Street Northwest

Washington, D.C. 20045

Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org. The event begins at 9 a.m. and will be livestreamed online at <http://www.rooseveltinstitute.org/videos>. Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayorsoffice shortly following the event.

3:00 PM – Unveils The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality

House Triangle – East Front

Washington, D.C. 20016

Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayorsoffice shortly following the event.

Guidance for Wednesday, May 13, 2015

On Wednesday, the Mayor will be joined by a bipartisan coalition of mayors from around the country for meetings with Congressional leadership to call for a six-year transportation authorization that significantly increases federal transportation investments.

Wednesday afternoon, the mayors will hold a press conference at the U.S. Capitol. Additional details regarding Mayor de Blasio's schedule while in Washington will be released as they become available.

Later, Mayor de Blasio will travel to California.

###

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 6:22 PM

To: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Grybauskas, Natalie; Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie

Subject: Re: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

I don't think there will be a "feed" per se, but we're filming it with our own TPA camera

From: <Spitalnick>, "Amy (OMB)" <SpitalnickA@omb.nyc.gov>

Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 6:03 PM

To: NGrybauskas <NGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Boeglin, Rosemary" <RBoeglin@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Adams, Marti" <MAdams@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Blumm, Kate" <KBlumm@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Chao, Raymond" <rchao@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Coney, Javon" <JConey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "de Alwis, Ronalie" <rdealwis@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Grybauskas, Stefan" <SGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Klein, Monica" <MKlein@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Norvell, Wiley" <WNorvell@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Ozernoy, Ilana" <iozernoy@moia.nyc.gov>, Ishanee Parikh <iparikh@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Richardson, Jerika" <JLRichardson@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel" <GSchnakeMahl@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Phillip Walzak <pwalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Fink, Avi" <AFink@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Stephanie Yazgi <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>

Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Looks good to me, but still need PW sign off.

JDC – we've also been getting inquiries on whether there will be a feed of any sort. NYC TV won't be there. Assuming nothing we can provide for the 3pm?

From: Grybauskas, Natalie [<mailto:NGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:53 PM
To: Carey, Michael; John Del Cecato; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Phillip Walzak; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

thanks MPC.
AS, you good with JDC's edits as reflected below?

From: Carey, Michael
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:52 PM
To: Grybauskas, Natalie; John Del Cecato; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

yes

Michael Paul Carey
Director of Scheduling and Advance
City Hall
New York, New York 10007
212.341.5396

From: Grybauskas, Natalie
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:51 PM
To: John Del Cecato; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Boeglin, Rosemary; Carey, Michael; Adams, Marti; Blumm,

Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Thanks. Draft below w/ JDC's edits and some other minor grammatical edits.

Don't think we need "there will be two events" anymore.

Any other edits to language?

If not, MPC ok?

PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

On Tuesday, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Washington, D.C.

In the morning, the Mayor will deliver remarks at the National Press Club. This event, hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, will also feature Nobel Prize winning economist and professor Joseph Stiglitz and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren. This event is open press and there will be no Q-and-A. Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org.

Later, the Mayor will be joined by dozens of national progressive leaders to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality at the House Triangle near the U.S. Capitol Building steps.

Press Schedule

Approximately 10:30 AM – Delivers Remarks at National Press Club

National Press Club
13, National Press Building Leasing

529 14th Street Northwest
Washington, D.C. 20045

Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org. The event begins at 9 a.m. and will be livestreamed online at <http://www.rooseveltinstitute.org/videos>. Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

3:00 PM – Unveils The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality

House Triangle – East Front
Washington, D.C. 20016

Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

Guidance for Wednesday, May 13

On Wednesday, the Mayor will be joined by a bipartisan coalition of mayors from around the country for meetings with Congressional leadership to call for a six-year transportation authorization that significantly increases federal transportation investments.

Wednesday afternoon, the mayors will hold a press conference at the U.S. Capitol. Additional details regarding Mayor de Blasio's schedule while in Washington will be released as they become available.

Later, Mayor de Blasio will travel to California.

###

From: John Del Cecato [jfdc@akpdmmedia.com]

Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:48 PM

To: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Boeglin, Rosemary; Carey, Michael; Grybauskas, Natalie; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie

Subject: Re: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Yes, I would rework like this:

PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

On Tuesday, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Washington, D.C. to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality. There will be two events.

In the morning, the Mayor will deliver remarks at the National Press Club. This event, hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, will also feature Nobel Prize winning economist and professor Joseph Stiglitz and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren. This event is open press and there will be no Q-and-A. Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org.

In the afternoon, the Mayor will make an announcement gather with dozens of national progressive leaders to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality at the House Triangle near the U.S. Capitol Building steps.

Press Schedule

Approximately 10:30 AM – Delivers Remarks at National Press Club

National Press Club

13, National Press Building Leasing

529 14th Street Northwest

Washington, D.C. 20045

Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org. The event begins at 9 a.m. and will be livestreamed online at <http://www.rooseveltinstitute.org/videos>. Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

3:00 PM – Unveiling of The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality

House Triangle (East Front)

Washington, D.C. 20016

Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

From: <Spitalnick>, "Amy (OMB)" <SpitalnickA@omb.nyc.gov>

Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 5:43 PM

To: "Boeglin, Rosemary" <RBoeglin@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, NGrybauskas <NGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Adams, Marti" <MAdams@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Blumm, Kate" <KBlumm@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Chao, Raymond" <rchao@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Coney, Javon" <JConey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "de Alwis, Ronalie" <rdealwis@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Grybauskas, Stefan" <SGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Klein, Monica" <MKlein@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <LEopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Norvell, Wiley" <WNorvell@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Ozernoy, Ilana" <iozernoy@moia.nyc.gov>, "Ishanee Parikh" <iparikh@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Richardson, Jerika" <JLRichardson@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel" <GSchnakeMahl@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Phillip Walzak <pwalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Fink, Avi" <AFink@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Stephanie Yazgi <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>

Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

+JDC

There's been some confusion over the difference between the two events. For the second, I would suggest saying explicitly that he'll be unveiling the contract (rather than "makes an announcement").

Wednesday guidance still good.

From: Boeglin, Rosemary [<mailto:RBoeglin@cityhall.nyc.gov>]

Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:34 PM

To: Carey, Michael; NGrybauskas; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Phillip Walzak; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie

Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND

GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Edited per MPC.

MPC – you good?

THE CITY OF NEW YORK
OFFICE OF THE MAYOR
NEW YORK, NY 10007

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

CONTACT: pressoffice@cityhall.nyc.gov, (212) 788-2958

PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12
AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

On Tuesday, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Washington, D.C. to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality. There will be two events.

In the morning, the Mayor will deliver remarks at the National Press Club. This event, hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, will also feature Nobel Prize winning economist and professor Joseph Stiglitz and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren. This event is open press and there will be no Q-and-A. Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org.

In the afternoon, the Mayor will make an announcement at the House Triangle near the U.S. Capitol Building steps.

Press Schedule

Approximately 10:30 AM – Delivers Remarks at National Press Club

National Press Club
13, National Press Building Leasing
529 14th Street Northwest
Washington, D.C. 20045

Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org. The event begins at 9 a.m. and will be livestreamed online at <http://www.rooseveltinstitute.org/videos>. Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

3:00 PM – Makes an Announcement

House Triangle (East Front)
Washington, D.C. 20016

Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

Guidance for Wednesday, May 13

On Wednesday, the Mayor will be joined by a bipartisan coalition of mayors from around the country for meetings with Congressional leadership to call for a six-year transportation authorization that significantly increases federal transportation investments.

Wednesday afternoon, the mayors will hold a press conference at the U.S. Capitol. Additional details regarding Mayor de Blasio's schedule while in Washington will be released as they become available.

Later, Mayor de Blasio will travel to California.

###

From: Carey, Michael
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:33 PM
To: Boeglin, Rosemary; Grybauskas, Natalie; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Can we say he travels to California and not Santa Clara

Michael Paul Carey
Director of Scheduling and Advance
City Hall
New York, New York 10007
212.341.5396

From: Boeglin, Rosemary
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:32 PM
To: Grybauskas, Natalie; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Carey, Michael; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

MPC – pls confirm all public events are included below

MPC/EL – timing ok?

THE CITY OF NEW YORK
OFFICE OF THE MAYOR
NEW YORK, NY 10007

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

CONTACT: pressoffice@cityhall.nyc.gov, (212) 788-2958

PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12
AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

On Tuesday, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Washington, D.C. to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality. There will be two events.

In the morning, the Mayor will deliver remarks at the National Press Club. This event, hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, will also feature Nobel Prize winning economist and professor Joseph Stiglitz and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren. This event is open press and there will be no Q-and-A. Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org.

In the afternoon, the Mayor will make an announcement at the House Triangle near the U.S. Capitol Building steps.

Press Schedule

Approximately 10:30 AM – Delivers Remarks at National Press Club

National Press Club
13, National Press Building Leasing
529 14th Street Northwest
Washington, D.C. 20045

Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org. The event begins at 9 a.m. and will be livestreamed online at <http://www.rooseveltinstitute.org/videos>. Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayorsoffice shortly following the event.

3:00 PM – Makes an Announcement

House Triangle (East Front)
Washington, D.C. 20016

Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayorsoffice shortly following the event.

Guidance for Wednesday, May 13

On Wednesday, the Mayor will be joined by a bipartisan coalition of mayors from around the country for meetings with Congressional leadership to call for a six-year transportation authorization that significantly increases federal transportation investments.

Wednesday afternoon, the mayors will hold a press conference at the U.S. Capitol. Additional details regarding Mayor de Blasio's schedule while in Washington will be released as they become available.

Later, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Santa Clara, California.

###

From: John Del Cecato
To: Grybauskas, Natalie; Spitalnick, Amy \(OMB\); Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: Re: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 6:37:04 PM
Attachments: image001.png

Ha! DEFINITELY open press. That is the thing we REALLY want press to come to!

Q&A - well... After the cavalcade of speakers finishes, we'll have been in 90 degree heat for 80 minutes, and a lot of the participants and reporters will have peeled off - but MBDB will stick around, as will a number of Members of Congress - so I'm planning to kind of usher reporters to their TPA'er of choice while the event is still going on for little stand-ups... It's a terrible plan, I know - but this is what we've got...

Short answer - yes - brief Q&A

From: <Grybauskas>, Natalie <NGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 6:30 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Spitalnick, Amy (OMB)" <SpitalnickA@omb.nyc.gov>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Boeglin, Rosemary" <RBoeglin@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Adams, Marti" <MAdams@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Blumm, Kate" <KBlumm@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Chao, Raymond" <rcho@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Coney, Javon" <JConey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "de Alwis, Ronalie" <rdealwis@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Grybauskas, Stefan" <SGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Klein, Monica" <MKlein@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Norvell, Wiley" <WNorvell@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Ozernoy, Ilana" <iozernoy@moia.nyc.gov>, "Ishanee Parikh" <iparikh@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Richardson, Jerika" <JLRichardson@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel" <GSchnakeMahl@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Fink, Avi" <AFink@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Stephanie Yazgi <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Can someone clarify that the 3 pm event is open press and whether there will be q&a?

THE CITY OF NEW YORK
OFFICE OF THE MAYOR
NEW YORK, NY 10007

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

CONTACT: pressoffice@cityhall.nyc.gov, (212) 788-2958

PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12, 2015 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13, 2015

On Tuesday, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Washington, D.C.

In the morning, the Mayor will deliver remarks at the National Press Club. This event, hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, will also feature Nobel Prize winning economist and professor Joseph Stiglitz and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren. This event is open press, and there will be no Q-and-A. Members of the media interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org.

*Later, the Mayor will be joined by dozens of national progressive leaders to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality at the House Triangle near the U.S. Capitol Building steps. This event is open press.

Press Schedule

Approximately 10:30 AM – Delivers Remarks at National Press Club

National Press Club
13, National Press Building Leasing
529 14th Street Northwest
Washington, D.C. 20045

Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org. The event begins at 9 a.m. and will be livestreamed online at <http://www.rooseveltinstitute.org/videos>. Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

3:00 PM – Unveils The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality

House Triangle – East Front
Washington, D.C. 20016

Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

Guidance for Wednesday, May 13, 2015

On Wednesday, the Mayor will be joined by a bipartisan coalition of mayors from around the country for meetings with Congressional leadership to call for a six-year transportation authorization that significantly increases federal transportation investments.

Wednesday afternoon, the mayors will hold a press conference at the U.S. Capitol. Additional details regarding Mayor de Blasio's schedule while in Washington will be released as they become available.

Later, Mayor de Blasio will travel to California.

###

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmmedia.com>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 6:22 PM
To: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Grybauskas, Natalie; Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: Re: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

I don't think there will be a "feed" per se, but we're filming it with our own TPA camera

From: <Spitalnick>, "Amy (OMB)" <SpitalnickA@omb.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 6:03 PM
To: NGrybauskas <NGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmmedia.com>, "Boeglin, Rosemary" <RBoeglin@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Adams, Marti" <MAAdams@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Blumm, Kate" <KBlumm@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Chao, Raymond" <rchao@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Coney, Javon" <JConey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "de Alwis, Ronalie" <rdealwis@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Grybauskas, Stefan" <SGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Klein, Monica" <MKlein@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <LEopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Norvell, Wiley" <WNorvell@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Ozernoy, Ilana" <iozernoy@moia.nyc.gov>, Ishanee Parikh <iparikh@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Richardson, Jerika" <JLRichardson@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel" <GSchnakeMahl@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Phillip Walzak <pwalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Fink, Avi" <AFink@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Stephanie Yazgi <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Looks good to me, but still need PW sign off.

JDC – we've also been getting inquiries on whether there will be a feed of any sort. NYC TV won't be there. Assuming nothing we can provide for the 3pm?

From: Grybauskas, Natalie [<mailto:NGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:53 PM
To: Carey, Michael; John Del Cecato; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Phillip Walzak; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

thanks MPC.
AS, you good with JDC's edits as reflected below?

From: Carey, Michael
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:52 PM
To: Grybauskas, Natalie; John Del Cecato; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND

GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

yes

Michael Paul Carey
Director of Scheduling and Advance
City Hall
New York, New York 10007
212.341.5396

From: Grybauskas, Natalie
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:51 PM
To: John Del Cecato; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Boeglin, Rosemary; Carey, Michael; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Thanks. Draft below w/ JDC's edits and some other minor grammatical edits.

Don't think we need "there will be two events" anymore.

Any other edits to language?

If not, MPC ok?

PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

On Tuesday, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Washington, D.C.

In the morning, the Mayor will deliver remarks at the National Press Club. This event, hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, will also feature Nobel Prize winning economist and professor Joseph Stiglitz and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren. This event is open press and there will be no Q-and-A. Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org.

Later, the Mayor will be joined by dozens of national progressive leaders to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality at the House Triangle near the U.S. Capitol Building steps.

Press Schedule

Approximately 10:30 AM – Delivers Remarks at National Press Club

National Press Club
13, National Press Building Leasing

529 14th Street Northwest
Washington, D.C. 20045

Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org. The event begins at 9 a.m. and will be livestreamed online at <http://www.rooseveltinstitute.org/videos>. Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

3:00 PM – Unveils The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality

House Triangle – East Front
Washington, D.C. 20016

Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

Guidance for Wednesday, May 13

On Wednesday, the Mayor will be joined by a bipartisan coalition of mayors from around the country for meetings with Congressional leadership to call for a six-year transportation authorization that significantly increases federal transportation investments.

Wednesday afternoon, the mayors will hold a press conference at the U.S. Capitol. Additional details regarding Mayor de Blasio's schedule while in Washington will be released as they become available.

Later, Mayor de Blasio will travel to California.

###

From: John Del Cecato [jfdc@akpdmedia.com]

Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:48 PM

To: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Boeglin, Rosemary; Carey, Michael; Grybauskas, Natalie; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie

Subject: Re: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Yes, I would rework like this:

PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR

WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

On Tuesday, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Washington, D.C. to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality. There will be two events.

In the morning, the Mayor will deliver remarks at the National Press Club. This event, hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, will also feature Nobel Prize winning economist and professor Joseph Stiglitz and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren. This event is open press and there will be no Q-and-A. Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org.

In the afternoon, the Mayor will make an announcement gather with dozens of national progressive leaders to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality at the House Triangle near the U.S. Capitol Building steps.

Press Schedule

Approximately 10:30 AM – Delivers Remarks at National Press Club

National Press Club
13, National Press Building Leasing

529 14th Street Northwest
Washington, D.C. 20045

Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org. The event begins at 9 a.m. and will be livestreamed online at <http://www.rooseveltinstitute.org/videos>. Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

3:00 PM – Unveiling of The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality

House Triangle (East Front)
Washington, D.C. 20016

Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

From: <Spitalnick>, "Amy (OMB)" <SpitalnickA@omb.nyc.gov>

Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 5:43 PM

To: "'Boeglin, Rosemary'" <RBoeglin@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, NGrybauskas <NGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Adams, Marti" <MAadams@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Blumm, Kate" <KBlumm@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Chao, Raymond" <rchao@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Coney, Javon" <JConey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "de Alwis, Ronalie" <rdealwis@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Grybauskas, Stefan" <SGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Klein, Monica" <MKlein@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Norvell, Wiley" <WNorvell@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Ozernoy, Ilana" <iozernoy@moia.nyc.gov>, "Ishanee Parikh" <iparikh@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Richardson, Jerika" <JLRichardson@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel" <GSchnakeMahl@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Phillip Walzak <pwalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Fink, Avi" <AFink@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Stephanie Yazgi <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmmedia.com>

Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND

GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

+JDC

There's been some confusion over the difference between the two events. For the second, I would suggest saying explicitly that he'll be unveiling the contract (rather than "makes an announcement").

Wednesday guidance still good.

From: Boeglin, Rosemary [<mailto:RBoeglin@cityhall.nyc.gov>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:34 PM
To: Carey, Michael; NGrybauskas; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Phillip Walzak; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Edited per MPC.

MPC – you good?

THE CITY OF NEW YORK
OFFICE OF THE MAYOR
NEW YORK, NY 10007

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

CONTACT: pressoffice@cityhall.nyc.gov, (212) 788-2958

PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12
AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

On Tuesday, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Washington, D.C. to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality. There will be two events.

In the morning, the Mayor will deliver remarks at the National Press Club. This event, hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, will also feature Nobel Prize winning economist and professor Joseph Stiglitz and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren. This event is open press and there will be no Q-and-A. Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org.

In the afternoon, the Mayor will make an announcement at the House Triangle near the U.S. Capitol Building steps.

Press Schedule

Approximately 10:30 AM – Delivers Remarks at National Press Club

National Press Club
13, National Press Building Leasing
529 14th Street Northwest
Washington, D.C. 20045

Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org. The event begins at 9 a.m. and will be livestreamed online at <http://www.rooseveltinstitute.org/videos>. Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

3:00 PM – Makes an Announcement

House Triangle (East Front)
Washington, D.C. 20016

Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

Guidance for Wednesday, May 13

On Wednesday, the Mayor will be joined by a bipartisan coalition of mayors from around the country for meetings with Congressional leadership to call for a six-year transportation authorization that significantly increases federal transportation investments.

Wednesday afternoon, the mayors will hold a press conference at the U.S. Capitol. Additional details regarding Mayor de Blasio's schedule while in Washington will be released as they become available.

Later, Mayor de Blasio will travel to California.

###

From: Carey, Michael
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:33 PM
To: Boeglin, Rosemary; Grybauskas, Natalie; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Can we say he travels to California and not Santa Clara

Michael Paul Carey

Director of Scheduling and Advance
City Hall
New York, New York 10007
212.341.5396

From: Boeglin, Rosemary
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:32 PM
To: Grybauskas, Natalie; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Carey, Michael; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

MPC – pls confirm all public events are included below

MPC/EL – timing ok?

THE CITY OF NEW YORK
OFFICE OF THE MAYOR
NEW YORK, NY 10007

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

CONTACT: pressoffice@cityhall.nyc.gov, (212) 788-2958

PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12
AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

On Tuesday, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Washington, D.C. to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality. There will be two events.

In the morning, the Mayor will deliver remarks at the National Press Club. This event, hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, will also feature Nobel Prize winning economist and professor Joseph Stiglitz and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren. This event is open press and there will be no Q-and-A. Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org.

In the afternoon, the Mayor will make an announcement at the House Triangle near the U.S. Capitol Building steps.

Press Schedule

Approximately 10:30 AM – Delivers Remarks at National Press Club
National Press Club
13, National Press Building Leasing

529 14th Street Northwest
Washington, D.C. 20045

Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org. The event begins at 9 a.m. and will be livestreamed online at <http://www.rooseveltinstitute.org/videos>. Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

3:00 PM – Makes an Announcement

House Triangle (East Front)
Washington, D.C. 20016

Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

Guidance for Wednesday, May 13

On Wednesday, the Mayor will be joined by a bipartisan coalition of mayors from around the country for meetings with Congressional leadership to call for a six-year transportation authorization that significantly increases federal transportation investments.

Wednesday afternoon, the mayors will hold a press conference at the U.S. Capitol. Additional details regarding Mayor de Blasio's schedule while in Washington will be released as they become available.

Later, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Santa Clara, California.

###

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: B; Gunaratna, Mahen; FLONYC
Cc: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma
Subject: Re: Politico: Wall Street warns Hillary Clinton: Don't be like Ed Miliband
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 6:45:23 PM

Newt Gingrich blasts de Blasio and his 'Liberal Contract with America'

By Newt Gingrich

May 9, 2015 | 5:00pm

New York Mayor de Blasio plans to release a "Liberal Contract with America." He said he was inspired by the 1994 Contract with America, of which I was the lead architect, and which led to the first House Republican majority in 40 years.

I'm flattered, Mr. Mayor. But allow me to offer a few cautionary thoughts.

De Blasio is clearly trying to pressure the Democrats to move to the left. But that is the exact opposite of the Contract with America model. The purpose of the Contract was not to pick a fight within the Republican Party. It was to define a center-right majority with a platform that commanded the broad support of the American people.

Before he writes his Contract with America from the Left, Mayor de Blasio should call Ed Miliband, who resigned as leader of the British Labour Party after the party was wiped out in elections last week.

The stunning and totally unexpected victory for Prime Minister David Cameron and the Conservatives holds lessons for both Democrats and Republicans.

The historic collapse of the Labour Party and its dramatic underperformance is a warning for those who believe a "true" left-wing agenda is the key to electoral victory.

THE HISTORIC COLLAPSE OF THE LABOUR PARTY ... IS A WARNING FOR THOSE WHO BELIEVE A 'TRUE' LEFT-WING AGENDA IS THE KEY TO ELECTORAL VICTORY.

From Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's first victory in 1979, the Conservatives dominated British politics for 18 years until Tony Blair deliberately and methodically moved the Labour Party to the center and won the election in 1997. Blair was so decisive in remodeling the formerly hard-left party that historian Paul Johnson called him Thatcher's adopted son and said he understood her policies better than her Conservative successor John Major.

The Labour Party governed from the center under Blair and was amazingly popular. After a decade in office, Blair was succeeded by Gordon Brown in 2007, who moved the party back toward the left. Hammered by the economic crisis in 2010, the Labour Party suffered its biggest loss in 79 years and Brown resigned.

Yet the lesson Labour learned from this defeat was the de Blasio lesson. Ed Miliband became leader and moved Labour toward its militant left, redistributionist, big-government base.

The result is that Conservative Prime Minister David Cameron has governed a center-right coalition that the British people decisively reaffirmed this week.

Mayor de Blasio has to come to grips with some powerful realities that will increasingly dominate American politics and government. None of them come from the left.

British Conservatives emphasized their concerns for “working Britons.” In the United States, Maine Gov. Paul LePage, a Republican, won reelection last year on similar themes.

Before Mayor de Blasio writes his Contract, he should call Ed Miliband, who resigned as leader of the British Labour Party after the party was wiped out in elections last week.

Maryland Gov. Larry Hogan won big in a blue state by emphasizing high taxes and the needs of working Marylanders.

Mayor de Blasio wants higher taxes and bigger governments.

Polls indicate Americans want more take-home pay and smaller government.

Mayor de Blasio wants to blame the rest of America for the Baltimore disaster. Most Americans know that the Baltimore mayor telling the police to let people have “space to destroy” is the real disaster.

Mayor de Blasio wants government to take more from some Americans to give it to others.

Most Americans want government to quit killing jobs and opportunity. They want to join in creating wealth, not in redistributing it.

It’s impossible for Mayor de Blasio to create a document in the mold of the Contract with America — ideas supported by large majorities of Americans — if it is based on far-left ideas.

In addition, the 1994 Contract with America was a very specific document committing to specific steps we promised to take.

House Republicans had already written implementing legislation for every pledge.

As President Obama taught us with the stimulus and ObamaCare, the Left can’t write its bills out in the open because the American people would repudiate them as soon as they understand them.

I look forward to Mayor de Blasio’s effort to practice the self-destruction and self-delusion of the British Labour Party, and I would be delighted to debate the merits of our conservative Contract with America compared to his Contract from the Left.

Perhaps we could charge admission for the debate and give the money to our favorite charity or nonprofit. My charity would be the American Museum of Natural History in New York — so Mayor de Blasio could help raise money for his own city by accepting the challenge.

Newt Gingrich is a former speaker of the US House of Representatives and a CNN contributor.

From: B
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 06:39 PM
To: Hagelgans, Andrea; Gunaratna, Mahen; FLONYC
Cc: 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma Subject: Re: Politico: Wall Street warns Hillary Clinton: Don't be like Ed Miliband

Pls send what Newt sent

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 02:40 PM
To: Gunaratna, Mahen; B; FLONYC
Cc: 'John Del Cecato' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma Subject: RE: Politico: Wall Street warns Hillary Clinton: Don't be like Ed Miliband

Miliband is becoming the comparison du jour--- first Newt , now WSJ

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 2:35 PM
To: B; FLONYC
Cc: 'John Del Cecato'; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma
Subject: Politico: Wall Street warns Hillary Clinton: Don't be like Ed Miliband

Wall Street warns Hillary Clinton: Don't be like Ed Miliband

In British election, bashing bonuses and hedge funds didn't work for Labour leader.

By Ben White

5/11/15 1:57 PM EDT

Updated 5/11/15 2:17 PM EDT

NEW YORK — Wall Street has a message for bank-bashing U.S. populist politicians: Put down the pitchforks or you could wind up like Ed Miliband.

Senior financial executives say the Labour leader's anti-bank, soak the rich rhetoric helped sink his party in the U.K. elections and assured a surprisingly big reelection win for Prime Minister David Cameron and his Conservative party last week. Miliband resigned as Labour leader following the loss.

These bankers and their ideological supporters say if likely Democratic presidential nominee Hillary Clinton keeps tacking to the left on Wall Street issues — as Massachusetts Sen. Elizabeth Warren, other progressive Democrats and Vermont Sen. Bernie Sanders are demanding — she could wind up facing the same fate.

“Cameron embraced the role of the financial sector in growing the U.K. economy and creating jobs, never once criticizing hedge funds, banks or the wealthy,” said a top executive at one of Wall Street’s largest firms. “Milliband ran against hedge funds and bankers, promising bonus and mansion taxes and lost big. Is that a lesson for Hillary as well?”

This executive, like several others who cited the U.K. election result as a warning to populists, declined to be identified by name or by firm for fear of eliciting a heavy backlash.

Another executive said Milliband’s adoption of Warren’s approach to the financial sector and banking regulation failed even though U.K. voters trust banks even less than U.S. voters, according to opinion surveys.

“Seems like there might be some political lessons for the U.S. out of the U.K. election — with Milliband’s Warren style, anti-business, anti-bank rhetoric clearly falling flat with the general public even as the press ate it up,” this executive from another of Wall Street’s largest firms said. “And the Edelman trust barometer actually shows that British voters are more distrustful and wary of the banks than here in the U.S.”

The financial executives cited Miliband’s attacks on Cameron and the Conservatives as the “party of hedge funds” and his calls for higher taxes on the industry as failing to captivate U.K. voters. And they noted that despite polls showing a very tight race, Cameron and his party won 51 percent of the vote and 331 seats in Parliament to just 36 percent and 232 seats for Miliband and his Labour party.

Conservative analysts also said U.S. politicians including Clinton should take note of the U.K. result.

“There are two lessons here,” said Douglas Holtz-Eakin of the American Action Forum. “One is the Miliband lesson. The U.S. has now seen that people in the U.K. don’t really like this focus on inequality and redistribution. It’s not where people are. And the second is that conservatives were very effective in saying they were for working people but keeping the focus on work not excessive government intervention and benefits.”

Financial reform advocates in the U.S. say these executives and analysts are delusional and reading things into the U.K. results that are not really there.

“Backwards logic like this almost makes you understand why Wall Street executives are deluded enough to believe they shouldn’t be held responsible for blowing up the economy in 2008 and fighting common sense legislation designed to prevent them from doing it again,” said Neil Sroka, communications director for progressive group Democracy for America. “If these guys actually believe that Cameron won because he bear-hugged billionaire bankers or think that Democrats will do better in 2016 if they continue treating a thief on Wall Street differently than a thief on Main Street, I’ve got an tranche of decade-old, toxic mortgages I know they’ll want to get in on.”

Dennis Kelleher, head of financial reform group Better Markets, said many other factors were at play in the U.K.

“Claiming the five-week sprint known as the U.K. election — and the Scottish freedom campaign — means anything for the US is nothing more than wishful thinking by Wall

Street’s spinners,” he said. “Secretary Clinton will be spelling out pro-growth agendas that also protect the American people from Wall Street’s dangerous too big to fail banks. It’s not either/or. It’s both.”

The comments from Wall Street executives and conservative analysts come as some in the industry fear that Clinton will continue to move left on financial reform issues as her campaign progresses.

Clinton used her first trip to Iowa as an announced candidate last month to issue a fresh assault. “There’s something wrong,” she told Iowans, when “hedge fund managers pay lower taxes than nurses or the truckers I saw on I-80 when I was driving here over the last two days.”

In a fundraising note last month, Clinton wrote that “families have fought their way back from tough economic times. But it’s not enough — not when the average CEO makes 300 times what the average worker makes.”

Wall Street mostly shrugged off those comments, confident that Clinton, who has enjoyed heavy financial support from the industry, would ultimately govern as a pro-business pragmatist not inclined to bust up big banks or support higher taxes on financial transactions or new controls on executive pay.

But as the “Draft Warren” for president movement continues to gain steam and coalitions of left wing and right wing populists in Congress flirt with the idea of breaking up the biggest banks, Wall Street is getting a bit more nervous. And they are pointing to the U.K. results and Republican gains in 2014 in the U.S. as evidence that Clinton should focus on other issues or face a possible loss in 2016.

“I would say that this is the second major election in a row where bank bashing no longer seems to move voters,” said a lobbyist for the banking industry. “Even where voters may continue to have anger about banks, other issues seem to be driving their votes. We saw that last year in the U.S., and now we seem to be seeing an echo in the U.K.”

--

Mahen Gunaratna

Director of Research and Media Analysis

Mayor’s Press Office | City Hall

mgunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov

(212) 676-3154 (o) | (347)-268-4295 (c)

From: Stiles, John T.
To: Gann, Georgia
Cc: John Del Cecato; Goodrich, Grace H.
Subject: RE: Progressive Agenda
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 7:31:56 PM

John and Georgia,

I'm sorry that we're not going to be able to make the Progressive Agenda press conference work on Mayor Hodges' schedule tomorrow afternoon. Please feel free to use her name as a supporter of the agenda, and please let us know about other opportunities to engage with it: there's great stuff on here and she'd like to help move it forward, even if she can't make the press conference. I know she'll connect with Mayor De Blasio at the dinner tomorrow evening regardless.

I really appreciate the work you've put into this. Thanks for including us.

Best,
John

John Stiles
Chief of Staff
Office of Mayor Betsy Hodges
City of Minneapolis
(612) 673-3665 office
(612) 581-1788 mobile
john.stiles@minneapolismn.gov

From: Gann, Georgia [<mailto:GGann@cityhall.nyc.gov>]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 5:37 PM
To: Stiles, John T.
Cc: John Del Cecato
Subject: Progressive Agenda

John,

Great speaking with you earlier. Closing the loop and connecting you here with John Del Cecato – he has been very involved in this work and he will be able to go into more detail on your and Mayor Hodges' specific questions about the trade bullet. Pardon me if you've already connected by now!

Best,

Georgia B. Gann
Senior Legislative Advisor
Transportation and Infrastructure Specialist
New York City Office of Federal Affairs
1301 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Suite 350

Tel. (202) 624-5912

Cell. (347) 497-1740

ggann@cityhall.nyc.gov

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: jeani murray; Rebecca Katz \(hilltoppublicsolutions.com\); John Davis; Hayley Prim; Aaron Pickrell
Subject: Re: Any Update?
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 7:43:44 PM

Its a beautiful thing

Sent from my iPhone

On May 11, 2015, at 7:38 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

Peace officially brokered

Begin forwarded message:

From: Peter Colavito <peter.colavito@seiu.org>
Date: May 11, 2015 at 6:48:01 PM EDT
To: Heather McGhee <hmcghee@demos.org>
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Deepak Bhargava <dbhargava@communitychange.org>
Subject: Re: Any Update?

Mary Kay will be there. Let us know how we can help too.
Thanks for making this work.

Sent from my iPhone

On May 11, 2015, at 6:13 PM, Heather McGhee <hmcghee@demos.org> wrote:

Hi John,

Glad to see the progress here, and to help as I can this week. Any way that you can include the 3 issues in press statements announcing the event?

See you tomorrow at the presser.

-Heather

-----Original Message-----

From: John Del Cecato
[<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:18 PM

To: Heather McGhee

Cc: Deepak Bhargava; Peter Colavito

Subject: Re: Any Update?

Yes!

Good conversation. MBDB just filled me in.

Here's what will happen.

1. MBDB will announce during his kick-off remarks that the document we have represents the first step - but that we spoken to members of our coalition in recent days about a few other key issues - from expanding Social Security, to debt-free college, to tackling mass incarceration.

2. We're committed to those issues as well, and will be working to add those topics to the agenda going forward.

3. The document you see here is the work of weeks of conversations, discussions, etc - it's a basis from which we're starting.

4. Starting Tuesday night, I need your help in crafting the best possible language (big and bold - but also language that we can connect to a specific policy) on each of these matters.

5. Assuming we get that done pretty quickly (and I think we will), on Wednesday, we will send out to the full coalition (including a bunch of new signers - this thing keeps growing and growing - good news!)

6. Our HOPE is that everyone will sign on in relatively short order. But we DO have to have a process here - MBDB was clear about that. We cannot appear to be just foisting them on this. I don't FORESEE any issues - but if there are holdouts, I'm going to need you guys to help me get them on board as soon as possible. We really don't want to lose folks, if at all possible.

7. I'm hopeful that we can get answers quickly - but some of these organizations take some time, have to run by their boards, etc. So that's why I hesitate saying it will be totally done by Friday - but MBDB thought if we all buckled down & pushed hard (but politely), we could get a lot of responses very quickly - so let's make Friday our GOAL.

Does that make sense?

And thanks for your help here!

On 5/11/15, 4:34 PM, "Heather McGhee" <hmcghee@demos.org> wrote:

I talked to Van and he said that BDB said that he would announce that

SS expansion, debt-free college and mass incarceration would be added to the document by the end of the week.

If you can confirm that, John, I am deeply relieved and will get back on the train both literally and figuratively to stand by the Mayor in DC tomorrow.

Also, if the only thing pushing it back to the end of the week as opposed to tomorrow when the press is going to be generated is exact language and sign-off, I'm happy to help you with organizing there as much as I can.

This has been a difficult process, but we are probably the stronger for it.

Thanks,

Heather

On May 11, 2015, at 3:20 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

MBDB was scheduled to talk to Van at 230 - let me see if I can get a readout...

On 5/11/15, 3:09
PM, "Heather McGhee" <hmcghee@demos.org
> wrote:

Thanks!

From: B
To: [REDACTED]
Cc: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Leopold, Elana; de Alwis, Ronalie
Subject: Re: TPA and mayors
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 7:46:21 PM

Mayor Pedro Segarra of Hartford formally signs onto the TPA. Use his name for tmrw

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 09:54 AM
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Leopold, Elana; de Alwis, Ronalie
Subject: Re: TPA and mayors

This is our list of Mayors calls for you to make today, and staff is tackling another 6-10 as well. If you think you won't be able to reach these guys today, staff can lob in calls as well.

Marty Walsh (Boston) cell: [REDACTED]

Steve Benjamin (Columbia, SC) cell: [REDACTED]

Ed Murray (Seattle) cell: [REDACTED]

Eric Garcetti (Los Angeles) cell: [REDACTED]

Ed Lee (San Francisco) cell: [REDACTED]

Charlie Hales (Portland) cell: [REDACTED]

On Mon, May 11, 2015 at 7:35 AM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

No, got tied up. So let's blitz today

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 07:35 AM
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Leopold, Elana; de Alwis, Ronalie
Subject: Re: TPA and mayors

Will do. Did you reach out to Walsh, lee, Murray, and Garcetti yesterday?

On Monday, May 11, 2015, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

I've reached out to a number of mayors and haven't heard back. I need a final push today to get them by staff, and I'll try to make some calls as well. Hayley, pls create one unified list of outstanding mayors. My hope is to pick up 3-5 more as sign-ons before the day is out. Thanks

--

Hayley Prim

c:

--

Hayley Prim

c:

From: Spitalnick, Amy \(OMB\)
To: Grybauskas, Natalie
Cc: Walzak, Phil; John Del Cecato; Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: Re: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 8:03:27 PM
Attachments: image001.png
image001.png

Not sure we should do area 10 in guidance until cap police confirm. Just time.

On May 11, 2015, at 8:02 PM, Grybauskas, Natalie <NGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Added time and location to guidance for weds

Fine like this?

<image001.png>
THE CITY OF NEW YORK
OFFICE OF THE MAYOR
NEW YORK, NY 10007

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

CONTACT: pressoffice@cityhall.nyc.gov, (212) 788-2958

PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY,
MAY 12, 2015 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13, 2015

On Tuesday, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Washington, D.C.

In the morning, the Mayor will deliver remarks at the National Press Club. This event, hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, will also feature Nobel Prize winning economist and professor Joseph Stiglitz and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren. This event is open press, and there will be no Q-and-A. Members of the media interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org.

Later, the Mayor will be joined by dozens of national progressive leaders to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality at the House Triangle near the U.S. Capitol Building steps. This event is open press, and there will be on-topic Q-and-A.

Press Schedule

Approximately 10:30 AM – Delivers Remarks at National Press Club
National Press Club

13, National Press Building Leasing
529 14th Street Northwest
Washington, D.C. 20045

Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org. The event begins at 9 a.m. and will be livestreamed online at <http://www.rooseveltinstitute.org/videos>. Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayorsoffice shortly following the event.

3:00 PM – Unveils The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality

House Triangle – East Front
Washington, D.C. 20016

Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayorsoffice shortly following the event.

Guidance for Wednesday, May 13, 2015

On Wednesday, the Mayor will be joined by a bipartisan coalition of mayors from around the country for meetings with Congressional leadership to call for a six-year transportation authorization that significantly increases federal transportation investments.

Wednesday afternoon, the mayors will hold a press conference at the U.S. Capitol. Additional details regarding Mayor de Blasio's schedule while in Washington will be released as they become available.

Later, Mayor de Blasio will travel to California.

Press Schedule for Wednesday, May 13

1:00 PM – Hosts Press Conference with Coalition of Mayors

U.S. Capitol - Area 10
Corner of First Street N.E. & Independence Ave. S.E.
Washington, D.C. 20004

Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayorsoffice shortly following the event.

###

From: Walzak, Phil
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 8:00 PM
To: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB)
Cc: Grybauskas, Natalie; John Del Cecato; Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Lets put that in guidance

From: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB) [<mailto:SpitalnickA@omb.nyc.gov>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 8:02 PM
To: Walzak, Phil
Cc: Grybauskas, Natalie; John Del Cecato; Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: Re: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

1pm on Wed.

On May 11, 2015, at 7:55 PM, Walzak, Phil <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Time for wed? I think that's all for now then good

From: Grybauskas, Natalie
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 7:54 PM
To: Walzak, Phil; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); 'John Del Cecato'; Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

do you want me to add to tonight's sked or advise weds' events tomorrow?

From: Walzak, Phil
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 7:47 PM
To: Grybauskas, Natalie; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); 'John Del Cecato'; Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

When are we providing times and locations for Wed?

From: Grybauskas, Natalie
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 7:11 PM
To: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); 'John Del Cecato'; Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica;

Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

PW, ok?

From: Grybauskas, Natalie
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 6:37 PM
To: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); 'John Del Cecato'; Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Thanks. PW, all good?

<image001.png>
THE CITY OF NEW YORK
OFFICE OF THE MAYOR
NEW YORK, NY 10007

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

CONTACT: pressoffice@cityhall.nyc.gov, (212) 788-2958

PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12, 2015 AND GUIDANCE FOR
WEDNESDAY, MAY 13, 2015

On Tuesday, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Washington, D.C.

In the morning, the Mayor will deliver remarks at the National Press Club. This event, hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, will also feature Nobel Prize winning economist and professor Joseph Stiglitz and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren. This event is open press, and there will be no Q-and-A. Members of the media interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org.

Later, the Mayor will be joined by dozens of national progressive leaders to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality at the House Triangle near the U.S. Capitol Building steps. This event is open press, and there will be on-topic Q-and-A.

Press Schedule

Approximately 10:30 AM – Delivers Remarks at National Press Club

National Press Club
13, National Press Building Leasing
529 14th Street Northwest

Washington, D.C. 20045

Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org. The event begins at 9 am and will be livestreamed online at <http://www.rooseveltinstitute.org/videos>. Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

3:00 PM – Unveils The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality

House Triangle – East Front

Washington, D.C. 20016

Official photos will be available

at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

Guidance for Wednesday, May 13, 2015

On Wednesday, the Mayor will be joined by a bipartisan coalition of mayors from around the country for meetings with Congressional leadership to call for a six-year transportation authorization that significantly increases federal transportation investments.

Wednesday afternoon, the mayors will hold a press conference at the U.S. Capitol. Additional details regarding Mayor de Blasio's schedule while in Washington will be released as they become available.

Later, Mayor de Blasio will travel to California.

###

From: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB) [<mailto:SpitalnickA@omb.nyc.gov>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 6:33 PM
To: Grybauskas, Natalie; 'John Del Cecato'; Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Yes, it's open press. On-topic Q&A.

From: Grybauskas, Natalie [<mailto:NGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 6:31 PM
To: 'John Del Cecato'; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Carey, Michael; Boeglin,

Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Phillip Walzak; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Can someone clarify that the 3 pm event is open press and whether there will be q&a?

<image001.png>
THE CITY OF NEW YORK
OFFICE OF THE MAYOR
NEW YORK, NY 10007

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

CONTACT: pressoffice@cityhall.nyc.gov, (212) 788-2958

PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12, 2015 AND GUIDANCE FOR
WEDNESDAY, MAY 13, 2015

On Tuesday, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Washington, D.C.

In the morning, the Mayor will deliver remarks at the National Press Club. This event, hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, will also feature Nobel Prize winning economist and professor Joseph Stiglitz and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren. This event is open press, and there will be no Q-and-A. Members of the media interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org.

*Later, the Mayor will be joined by dozens of national progressive leaders to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality at the House Triangle near the U.S. Capitol Building steps. This event is open press.

Press Schedule

Approximately 10:30 AM – Delivers Remarks at National Press Club

National Press Club
13, National Press Building Leasing
529 14th Street Northwest
Washington, D.C. 20045

Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org. The event begins at 9 a.m. and will be livestreamed online at <http://www.rooseveltinstitute.org/videos>. Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayorsoffice shortly following the event.

3:00 PM – Unveils The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality

House Triangle – East Front
Washington, D.C. 20016

Official photos will be available

at flickr.com/nycmayorsoffice shortly following the event.

Guidance for Wednesday, May 13, 2015

On Wednesday, the Mayor will be joined by a bipartisan coalition of mayors from around the country for meetings with Congressional leadership to call for a six-year transportation authorization that significantly increases federal transportation investments.

Wednesday afternoon, the mayors will hold a press conference at the U.S. Capitol. Additional details regarding Mayor de Blasio's schedule while in Washington will be released as they become available.

Later, Mayor de Blasio will travel to California.

###

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 6:22 PM

To: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Grybauskas, Natalie; Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: Re: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

I don't think there will be a "feed" per se, but we're filming it with our own TPA camera

From: <Spitalnick>, "Amy (OMB)" <SpitalnickA@omb.nyc.gov>

Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 6:03 PM

To: NGrybauskas <NGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Boeglin, Rosemary" <RBoeglin@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Adams, Marti" <MAdams@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Blumm, Kate" <KBlumm@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Chao, Raymond" <rchao@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Coney, Javon" <JConey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "de Alwis, Ronalie" <rdealwis@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Grybauskas, Stefan" <SGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Klein, Monica"

<MKlein@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana"
<ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Norvell, Wiley"
<WNorvell@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Ozernoy, Ilana"
<iozernoy@moia.nyc.gov>, Ishanee Parikh <iparikh@cityhall.nyc.gov>,
"Richardson, Jerika" <JLRichardson@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Schnake-Mahl,
Gabriel" <GSchnakeMahl@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Phillip Walzak
<pwalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Fink, Avi" <AFink@cityhall.nyc.gov>,
Stephanie Yazgi <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR
TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Looks good to me, but still need PW sign off.

JDC – we've also been getting inquiries on whether there will be a feed of any sort. NYC TV won't be there. Assuming nothing we can provide for the 3pm?

From: Grybauskas, Natalie [<mailto:NGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:53 PM
To: Carey, Michael; John Del Cecato; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de
Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica;
Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Phillip Walzak; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

thanks MPC.
AS, you good with JDC's edits as reflected below?

From: Carey, Michael
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:52 PM
To: Grybauskas, Natalie; John Del Cecato; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de
Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica;
Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson,
Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

yes

Michael Paul Carey
Director of Scheduling and Advance
City Hall
New York, New York 10007
212.341.5396

From: Grybauskas, Natalie
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:51 PM
To: John Del Cecato; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Boeglin, Rosemary; Carey, Michael; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Thanks. Draft below w/ JDC's edits and some other minor grammatical edits.

Don't think we need "there will be two events" anymore.

Any other edits to language?

If not, MPC ok?

PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12
AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

On Tuesday, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Washington, D.C.

In the morning, the Mayor will deliver remarks at the National Press Club. This event, hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, will also feature Nobel Prize winning economist and professor Joseph Stiglitz and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren. This event is open press and there will be no Q-and-A. Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org.

Later, the Mayor will be joined by dozens of national progressive leaders to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality at the House Triangle near the U.S. Capitol Building steps.

Press Schedule

Approximately 10:30 AM – Delivers Remarks at National Press Club

National Press Club
13, National Press Building Leasing

529 14th Street Northwest
Washington, D.C. 20045

Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org. The event begins at 9 a.m. and will be livestreamed online at <http://www.rooseveltinstitute.org/videos>. Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

3:00 PM – Unveils The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality

House Triangle – East Front
Washington, D.C. 20016
Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

Guidance for Wednesday, May 13

On Wednesday, the Mayor will be joined by a bipartisan coalition of mayors from around the country for meetings with Congressional leadership to call for a six-year transportation authorization that significantly increases federal transportation investments.

*Wednesday afternoon, the mayors will hold a press conference at the U.S.
Capitol. Additional details regarding Mayor de Blasio's schedule while in Washington will be released as they become available.*

Later, Mayor de Blasio will travel to California.

###

From: John Del Cecato [jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:48 PM
To: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Boeglin, Rosemary; Carey, Michael; Grybauskas, Natalie; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de
Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica;
Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson,
Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie Subject: Re: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Yes, I would rework like this:

PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12
AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

On Tuesday, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Washington, D.C. to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality. There will be two events.

In the morning, the Mayor will deliver remarks at the National Press Club. This event, hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, will also feature Nobel Prize winning economist and professor Joseph Stiglitz and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren. This event is open press and there will be no Q-and-A. Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org.

In the afternoon, the Mayor will make an announcement gather with dozens of national progressive leaders to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality at the House Triangle near the U.S. Capitol Building steps.

Press Schedule

Approximately 10:30 AM – Delivers Remarks at National Press Club

National Press Club
13, National Press Building Leasing

529 14th Street Northwest
Washington, D.C. 20045

Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org. The event begins at 9 a.m. and will be livestreamed online at <http://www.rooseveltinstitute.org/videos>. Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

3:00 PM – Unveiling of The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality

House Triangle (East Front)
Washington, D.C. 20016
Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

From: <Spitalnick>, "Amy (OMB)" <SpitalnickA@omb.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 5:43 PM
To: "Boeglin, Rosemary" <RBoeglin@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, NGrybauskas <NGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Adams, Marti" <MAAdams@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Blumm, Kate" <KBlumm@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Chao, Raymond" <rchao@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Coney, Javon" <JConey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "de Alwis, Ronalie" <rdealwis@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Grybauskas, Stefan" <SGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea"

<AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Klein, Monica"
<MKlein@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana"
<ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Norvell, Wiley"
<WNorvell@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Ozernoy, Ilana"
<iozernoy@moia.nyc.gov>, Ishanee Parikh <iparikh@cityhall.nyc.gov>,
"Richardson, Jerika" <JLRichardson@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Schnake-Mahl,
Gabriel" <GSchnakeMahl@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Phillip Walzak
<pwalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Fink, Avi" <AFink@cityhall.nyc.gov>,
Stephanie Yazgi <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato
<jfdc@akpdmmedia.com>

Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

+JDC

There's been some confusion over the difference between the two events. For the second, I would suggest saying explicitly that he'll be unveiling the contract (rather than "makes an announcement").

Wednesday guidance still good.

From: Boeglin, Rosemary [<mailto:RBoeglin@cityhall.nyc.gov>]

Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:34 PM

To: Carey, Michael; NGrybauskas; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Phillip Walzak; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie

Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Edited per MPC.

MPC – you good?

<image001.png>
THE CITY OF NEW YORK
OFFICE OF THE MAYOR
NEW YORK, NY 10007

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

CONTACT: pressoffice@cityhall.nyc.gov, (212) 788-2958

PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY,
MAY 13

On Tuesday, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Washington, D.C. to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality. There will be two events.

In the morning, the Mayor will deliver remarks at the National Press Club. This event, hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, will also feature Nobel Prize winning economist and professor Joseph Stiglitz and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren. This event is open press and there will be no Q-and-A. Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org.

In the afternoon, the Mayor will make an announcement at the House Triangle near the U.S. Capitol Building steps.

Press Schedule

Approximately 10:30 AM – Delivers Remarks at National Press Club

National Press Club
13, National Press Building Leasing
529 14th Street Northwest
Washington, D.C. 20045

Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org. The event begins at 9 a.m. and will be livestreamed online at <http://www.rooseveltinstitute.org/videos>. Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayorsoffice shortly following the event.

3:00 PM – Makes an Announcement

House Triangle (East Front)
Washington, D.C. 20016

Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayorsoffice shortly following the event.

Guidance for Wednesday, May 13

On Wednesday, the Mayor will be joined by a bipartisan coalition of mayors from around the country for meetings with Congressional leadership to call for a six-year transportation authorization that significantly increases federal transportation investments.

Wednesday afternoon, the mayors will hold a press conference at the U.S. Capitol. Additional details regarding Mayor de Blasio's schedule while in Washington will be released as they become available.

Later, Mayor de Blasio will travel to California.

###

From: Carey, Michael
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:33 PM
To: Boeglin, Rosemary; Grybauskas, Natalie; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Can we say he travels to California and not Santa Clara

Michael Paul Carey
Director of Scheduling and Advance
City Hall
New York, New York 10007
212.341.5396

From: Boeglin, Rosemary
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:32 PM
To: Grybauskas, Natalie; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Carey, Michael; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

MPC – pls confirm all public events are included below

MPC/EL – timing ok?

<image001.png>
THE CITY OF NEW YORK
OFFICE OF THE MAYOR
NEW YORK, NY 10007

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
CONTACT: pressoffice@cityhall.nyc.gov, (212) 788-2958

PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY,
MAY 13

On Tuesday, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Washington, D.C. to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality. There will be two events.

In the morning, the Mayor will deliver remarks at the National Press Club. This event, hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, will also feature Nobel Prize winning economist and professor Joseph Stiglitz and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren. This event is open press and there will be no Q-and-A. Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org.

In the afternoon, the Mayor will make an announcement at the House Triangle near the U.S. Capitol Building steps.

Press Schedule

Approximately 10:30 AM – Delivers Remarks at National Press Club

National Press Club
13, National Press Building Leasing
529 14th Street Northwest
Washington, D.C. 20045

Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org. The event begins at 9 a.m. and will be livestreamed online at <http://www.rooseveltinstitute.org/videos>. Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayorsoffice shortly following the event.

3:00 PM – Makes an Announcement

House Triangle (East Front)
Washington, D.C. 20016

Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayorsoffice shortly following the event.

Guidance for Wednesday, May 13

On Wednesday, the Mayor will be joined by a bipartisan coalition of mayors from around the country for meetings with Congressional leadership to call for a six-year transportation authorization that significantly increases federal transportation investments.

Wednesday afternoon, the mayors will hold a press conference at the U.S. Capitol. Additional details regarding Mayor de Blasio's schedule while in Washington will be released as they become available.

Later, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Santa Clara, California.

###

From: Hayley Prim
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com
Subject: Re: Status Update: 73 Signers, 42 Attendees
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 8:04:24 PM

We have 80 signers and 42 attendees, names in bold are attending:

Fiscal Policy Institute	Deputy Director and Chief Economist	James	Parrott
Economic Policy Institute	Senior Economist	Eileen	Appelbaum
Austin	Mayor	Steve	Adler
Center for Economic and Policy Research	Co-Director	Dean	Baker
Newark	Mayor	Ras	Baraka
Portland, ME	Mayor	Michael	Brennan
Netroots Nation	Executive Director	Raven	Brooks
	Actor	Steve	Buscemi
	Actor	Alan	Cumming
Minnesota	Governor	Mark	Dayton
Philanthropist/ Fimmaker		Abigail	Disney
Economic Policy Institute	Founder	Jeff	Faux
		Danny	Glover
Center for Media and Democracy	Executive Director	Lisa	Graves
Jobs with Justice	Executive Director	Sarita	Gupta
Former Senator		Tom	Harkin
VoteVets.org	Veteran Outreach Coordinator	Rick	Hegdahl
United for a Fair Economy	Executive Director	Jeannette	Huezo
Interfaith Worker Justice	Executive Director	Rudy	Lopez
Progressive Strategies	Director	Mike	Lux
	FLONYC	Chirlane	McCray
	Actress	Cynthia	Nixon
University of California at Berkley	Chancellor's Professor	Robert	Reich
	Actor	Mark	Ruffalo
Columbia University	Economist/Director of Earth Institute	Jeff	Sachs
EffectiveNY	Chairman	Bill	Samuels
Actress		Susan	Sarandon
Hartford	Mayor	Pedro	Segarra
Unite Here	President	D	Taylor

AFL-CIO	President	Richard	Trumka
The Nation	Editor	Katrina	Vanden Heuvel
The Wessel Group	President	Michael	Wessel
Americans United for Change	President	Brad	Woodhouse
Childrens Defense Fund	President/Founder	Marian	Wright Edelman
Inequality.org	Managing Editor	Marjorie	Wood
New Jersey	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Bonnie	Watson Coleman
Campaign for America's Future	Co-Director	Robert	Borosage
New York	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Yvette	Clarke
Michigan	U.S. Rep, PC Member	John	Conyers
Democracy Partners	Partner	Robert	Creamer
National Low Income Housing Coalition	President	Sheila	Crowley
		Bill	de Blasio
Former Governor/Democracy for America	Founder	Howard	Dean
Connecticut	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Rosa	DeLauro
Unite Here	Former President, LA County	Maria Elena	Durazo
Minnesota	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Keith	Ellison
Pennsylvania	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Chaka	Fattah
NEA	President	Lily	Garcia
Steelworkers	President	Leo	Gerard
SEIU 1199	President	George	Gresham
Arizona	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Raul	Grijalva
Leadership Council on Civil and Human Rights	President and CEO	Wade	Henderson
SEIU	President	Mary Kay	Henry
Minneapolis	Mayor	Betsy	Hodges
Texas	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Sheila	Jackson-Lee
Dream Corps Unlimited		Van	Jones
California	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Barbara	Lee
Progressive Congress	President	Gabriela	Lemus
Iowa	U.S. Rep, PC Member	David	Loeb sack
Massachusetts	U.S. Rep, PC Member	James	McGovern
Oregon	U.S. Senator	Jeff	Merkley
Economic Policy Institute	President	Lawrence	Mishel
National Council of La Raza		Janet	Murguia
New York	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Jerry	Nadler

Working America	Executive Director	Karen	Nussbaum
Young Democrats of America	President	Atima	Omara
National Nurses United	Co-President	Jean	Ross
AFSCME	President	Lee	Saunders
Oakland	Mayor	Libby	Schaaf
Illinois	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Jan	Schakowsky
NAN	President	Al	Sharpton
NYSNA	President	Judy	Sheridan- Gonzalez
Bend the Arc Jewish Action	Director	Hadar	Susskind
Patriot Majority	President	Craig	Varoga
AFT	President	Randi	Weingarten
Dayton	Mayor	Nan	Whaley
Progress Now	Executive Director	Arshad	Hasan
	Author	Linda	Tirado
CWA	President	Larry	Cohen

On Mon, May 11, 2015 at 7:50 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Am I crazy or have you not sent a status update since Friday?? Pls send one asap

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:████████████████████]
Sent: Friday, May 08, 2015 05:44 AM
To: B; Snyder, Thomas
Cc: Aaron Pickrell <████████████████████> John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmmedia.com>; jeani murray <████████████████████> John Davis <████████████████████>
Subject: Status Update: 73 Signers, 42 Attendees

Attendees listed in Bold. Those listed in red are sending a high level rep to the press conference as they cannot attend themselves.

Fiscal Policy Institute	Deputy Director and Chief Economist	James	Parrott
Economic Policy Institute	Senior Economist	Eileen	Appelbaum
Center for Economic and Policy Research	Co-Director	Dean	Baker
Newark	Mayor	Ras	Baraka
Netroots Nation	Executive Director	Raven	Brooks
	Actor	Steve	Buscemi
	Actor	Alan	Cumming
Minnesota	Governor	Mark	Dayton
Philanthropist/ Fimmaker		Abigail	Disney

Economic Policy Institute	Founder	Jeff	Faux
		Danny	Glover
Former Senator		Tom	Harkin
United for a Fair Economy	Executive Director	Jeannette	Huezo
Dream Corps Unlimited		Van	Jones
	FLONYC	Chirlane	McCray
	Actress	Cynthia	Nixon
University of California at Berkley	Chancellor's Professor	Robert	Reich
	Actor	Mark	Ruffalo
Columbia University	Economist/Director of Earth Institute	Jeff	Sachs
EffectiveNY	Chairman	Bill	Samuels
Actress		Susan	Sarandon
Unite Here	President	D	Taylor
AFL-CIO	President	Richard	Trumka
The Wessel Group	President	Michael	Wessel
Childrens Defense Fund	President/Founder	Marian	Wright Edelman
Center for Media and Democracy	Executive Director	Lisa	Graves
Inequality.org	Managing Editor	Marjorie	Wood
New Jersey	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Bonnie	Watson Coleman
Interfaith Worker Justice	Executive Director	Rudy	Lopez
SEIU	President	Mary Kay	Henry
Communities for Change	Executive Director	Deepak	Bhargava
Campaign for America's Future	Co-Director	Robert	Borosage
New York	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Yvette	Clarke
Democracy Partners	Partner	Robert	Creamer
National Low Income Housing Coalition	President	Sheila	Crowley
		Bill	de Blasio
Former Governor/Democracy for America	Founder	Howard	Dean
Connecticut	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Rosa	DeLauro
Unite Here	Former President, LA County	Maria Elena	Durazo
Minnesota	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Keith	Ellison
Pennsylvania	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Chaka	Fattah
NEA	President	Lily	Garcia
Steelworkers	President	Leo	Gerard
SEIU 1199	President	George	Gresham

Arizona	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Raul	Grijalva
Leadership Council on Civil and Human Rights	President and CEO	Wade	Henderson
Minneapolis	Mayor	Betsy	Hodges
Texas	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Sheila	Jackson-Lee
California	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Barbara	Lee
Progressive Congress	President	Gabriela	Lemus
Iowa	U.S. Rep, PC Member	David	Loeb sack
Progressive Strategies	Director	Mike	Lux
Demos	Executive Director	Heather	McGhee
Massachusetts	U.S. Rep, PC Member	James	McGovern
Oregon	U.S. Senator	Jeff	Merkley
Economic Policy Institute	President	Lawrence	Mishel
National Council of La Raza		Janet	Murguia
New York	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Jerry	Nadler
Working America	Executive Director	Karen	Nussbaum
Young Democrats of America	President	Atima	Omara
AFSCME	President	Lee	Saunders
Illinois	U.S. Rep, PC Member	Jan	Schakowsky
NAN	President	Al	Sharpton
NYSNA	President	Judy	Sheridan- Gonzalez
The Nation	Editor	Katrina	Vanden Heuvel
Patriot Majority	President	Craig	Varoga
AFT	President	Randi	Weingarten
Dayton	Mayor	Nan	Whaley
Americans United for Change	President	Brad	Woodhouse
Oakland	Mayor	Libby	Schaaf
	Author	Linda	Tirado
Progress Now	Executive Director	Arshad	Hasan
CWA	President	Larry	Cohen

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: Grybauskas, Natalie
To: Walzak, Phil; Spitalnick, Amy \(OMB\)
Cc: John Del Cecato; Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 8:07:09 PM

K thx

Sending now as below

From: Walzak, Phil
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 8:05 PM
To: Grybauskas, Natalie; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB)
Cc: John Del Cecato; Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

ok

From: Grybauskas, Natalie
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 8:05 PM
To: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB)
Cc: Walzak, Phil; John Del Cecato; Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

got it. fixed below. pw good?

ce@cityhall.nyc.gov, (212) 788-2958

PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12, 2015 AND
GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13, 2015

On Tuesday, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Washington, D.C.

In the morning, the Mayor will deliver remarks at the National Press Club. This event, hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, will also feature Nobel Prize winning economist and professor Joseph Stiglitz and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren. This event is open press, and there will be no Q-and-A. Members of the media interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org.

Later, the Mayor will be joined by dozens of national progressive leaders to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality at the House Triangle near the U.S. Capitol Building steps. This event is open press, and there will be on-topic Q-and-A.

Press Schedule

Approximately 10:30 AM – Delivers Remarks at National Press Club

National Press Club
13, National Press Building Leasing

529 14th Street Northwest
Washington, D.C. 20045

Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org. The event begins at 9 a.m. and will be livestreamed online at <http://www.rooseveltinstitute.org/videos>. Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

3:00 PM – Unveils The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality

House Triangle – East Front
Washington, D.C. 20016

Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

Guidance for Wednesday, May 13, 2015

On Wednesday, the Mayor will be joined by a bipartisan coalition of mayors from around the country for meetings with Congressional leadership to call for a six-year transportation authorization that significantly increases federal transportation investments.

Wednesday afternoon, the mayors will hold a press conference at the U.S. Capitol at 1:00 pm. Additional details regarding Mayor de Blasio's schedule while in Washington will be released as they become available.

Later, Mayor de Blasio will travel to California.

###

From: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB) [SpitalnickA@omb.nyc.gov]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 8:05 PM
To: Grybauskas, Natalie
Cc: Walzak, Phil; John Del Cecato; Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: Re: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Not sure we should do area 10 in guidance until cap police confirm. Just time.

On May 11, 2015, at 8:02 PM, Grybauskas, Natalie <NGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Added time and location to guidance for weds

Fine like this?

<image001.png>
THE CITY OF NEW YORK
OFFICE OF THE MAYOR
NEW YORK, NY 10007

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

CONTACT: pressoffice@cityhall.nyc.gov, (212) 788-2958

PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY,
MAY 12, 2015 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13, 2015

On Tuesday, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Washington, D.C.

In the morning, the Mayor will deliver remarks at the National Press Club. This event, hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, will also feature Nobel Prize winning economist and professor Joseph Stiglitz and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren. This event is open press, and there will be no Q-and-A. Members of the media interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org.

Later, the Mayor will be joined by dozens of national progressive leaders to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality at the House Triangle near the U.S. Capitol Building steps. This event is open press, and there will be on-topic Q-and-A.

Press Schedule

Approximately 10:30 AM – Delivers Remarks at National Press Club

National Press Club
13, National Press Building Leasing
529 14th Street Northwest

Washington, D.C. 20045

Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org. The event begins at 9 a.m. and will be livestreamed online at <http://www.rooseveltinstitute.org/videos>. Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayorsoffice shortly following the event.

3:00 PM – Unveils The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality

House Triangle – East Front

Washington, D.C. 20016

Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayorsoffice shortly following the event.

Guidance for Wednesday, May 13, 2015

On Wednesday, the Mayor will be joined by a bipartisan coalition of mayors from around the country for meetings with Congressional leadership to call for a six-year transportation authorization that significantly increases federal transportation investments.

Wednesday afternoon, the mayors will hold a press conference at the U.S. Capitol. Additional details regarding Mayor de Blasio's schedule while in Washington will be released as they become available.

Later, Mayor de Blasio will travel to California.

###

From: Walzak, Phil
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 8:00 PM
To: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB)
Cc: Grybauskas, Natalie; John Del Cecato; Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Lets put that in guidance

From: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB) [<mailto:SpitalnickA@omb.nyc.gov>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 8:02 PM
To: Walzak, Phil
Cc: Grybauskas, Natalie; John Del Cecato; Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie

Subject: Re: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

1pm on Wed.

On May 11, 2015, at 7:55 PM, Walzak, Phil <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Time for wed? I think that's all for now then good

From: Grybauskas, Natalie
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 7:54 PM
To: Walzak, Phil; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); 'John Del Cecato'; Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

do you want me to add to tonight's sked or advise weds' events tomorrow?

From: Walzak, Phil
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 7:47 PM
To: Grybauskas, Natalie; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); 'John Del Cecato'; Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

When are we providing times and locations for Wed?

From: Grybauskas, Natalie
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 7:11 PM
To: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); 'John Del Cecato'; Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

PW, ok?

From: Grybauskas, Natalie
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 6:37 PM
To: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); 'John Del Cecato'; Carey, Michael; Boeglin,

Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Thanks. PW, all good?

<image001.png>
THE CITY OF NEW YORK
OFFICE OF THE MAYOR
NEW YORK, NY 10007

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

CONTACT: pressoffice@cityhall.nyc.gov, (212) 788-2958

PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12, 2015 AND GUIDANCE FOR
WEDNESDAY, MAY 13, 2015

On Tuesday, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Washington, D.C.

In the morning, the Mayor will deliver remarks at the National Press Club. This event, hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, will also feature Nobel Prize winning economist and professor Joseph Stiglitz and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren. This event is open press, and there will be no Q-and-A. Members of the media interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org.

Later, the Mayor will be joined by dozens of national progressive leaders to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality at the House Triangle near the U.S. Capitol Building steps. This event is open press, and there will be on-topic Q-and-A.

Press Schedule

Approximately 10:30 AM – Delivers Remarks at National Press Club

National Press Club
13, National Press Building Leasing
529 14th Street Northwest
Washington, D.C. 20045

Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org. The event begins at 9 am and will be livestreamed online at <http://www.rooseveltinstitute.org/videos>. Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayorsoffice shortly following the event.

3:00 PM – Unveils The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality

House Triangle – East Front
Washington, D.C. 20016
*Official photos will be available
at flickr.com/nycmayorsoffice shortly following the event.*

Guidance for Wednesday, May 13, 2015

On Wednesday, the Mayor will be joined by a bipartisan coalition of mayors from around the country for meetings with Congressional leadership to call for a six-year transportation authorization that significantly increases federal transportation investments.

Wednesday afternoon, the mayors will hold a press conference at the U.S. Capitol. Additional details regarding Mayor de Blasio's schedule while in Washington will be released as they become available.

Later, Mayor de Blasio will travel to California.

###

From: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB) [<mailto:SpitalnickA@omb.nyc.gov>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 6:33 PM
To: Grybauskas, Natalie; 'John Del Cecato'; Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Yes, it's open press. On-topic Q&A.

From: Grybauskas, Natalie [<mailto:NGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 6:31 PM
To: 'John Del Cecato'; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Phillip Walzak; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Can someone clarify that the 3 pm event is open press and whether there will be q&a?

<image001.png>
THE CITY OF NEW YORK
OFFICE OF THE MAYOR
NEW YORK, NY 10007

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

CONTACT: pressoffice@cityhall.nyc.gov, (212) 788-2958

PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12, 2015 AND GUIDANCE FOR
WEDNESDAY, MAY 13, 2015

On Tuesday, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Washington, D.C.

In the morning, the Mayor will deliver remarks at the National Press Club. This event, hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, will also feature Nobel Prize winning economist and professor Joseph Stiglitz and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren. This event is open press, and there will be no Q-and-A. Members of the media interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org.

*Later, the Mayor will be joined by dozens of national progressive leaders to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality at the House Triangle near the U.S. Capitol Building steps. This event is open press.

Press Schedule

Approximately 10:30 AM – Delivers Remarks at National Press Club

National Press Club
13, National Press Building Leasing
529 14th Street Northwest
Washington, D.C. 20045

Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org. The event begins at 9 a.m. and will be livestreamed online at <http://www.rooseveltinstitute.org/videos>. Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayorsoffice shortly following the event.

3:00 PM – Unveils The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality

House Triangle – East Front
Washington, D.C. 20016

Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayorsoffice shortly following the event.

Guidance for Wednesday, May 13, 2015

On Wednesday, the Mayor will be joined by a bipartisan coalition of mayors from around the country for meetings with Congressional leadership to call for a six-year transportation authorization that significantly increases federal transportation investments.

Wednesday afternoon, the mayors will hold a press conference at the U.S. Capitol. Additional details regarding Mayor de Blasio's schedule while in Washington will be released as they become available.

Later, Mayor de Blasio will travel to California.

###

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 6:22 PM
To: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Grybauskas, Natalie; Carey, Michael; Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: Re: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

I don't think there will be a "feed" per se, but we're filming it with our own TPA camera

From: <Spitalnick>, "Amy (OMB)" <SpitalnickA@omb.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 6:03 PM
To: NGrybauskas <NGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Boeglin, Rosemary" <RBoeglin@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Adams, Marti" <MAAdams@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Blumm, Kate" <KBlumm@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Chao, Raymond" <rchao@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Coney, Javon" <JConey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "de Alwis, Ronalie" <rdealwis@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Grybauskas, Stefan" <SGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Klein, Monica" <MKlein@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <LEopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Norvell, Wiley" <WNorvell@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Ozernoy, Ilana" <iozernoy@moia.nyc.gov>, Ishanee Parikh <iparikh@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Richardson, Jerika" <JLRichardson@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel" <GSchnakeMahl@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Phillip Walzak <pwalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Fink, Avi" <AFink@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Stephanie Yazgi <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Looks good to me, but still need PW sign off.

JDC – we've also been getting inquiries on whether there will be a feed of any sort. NYC TV won't be there. Assuming nothing we can provide for the 3pm?

From: Grybauskas, Natalie [<mailto:NGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:53 PM
To: Carey, Michael; John Del Cecato; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Phillip Walzak; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

thanks MPC.
AS, you good with JDC's edits as reflected below?

From: Carey, Michael
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:52 PM
To: Grybauskas, Natalie; John Del Cecato; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Boeglin, Rosemary; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

yes

Michael Paul Carey
Director of Scheduling and Advance
City Hall
New York, New York 10007
212.341.5396

From: Grybauskas, Natalie
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:51 PM
To: John Del Cecato; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Boeglin, Rosemary; Carey, Michael; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Thanks. Draft below w/ JDC's edits and some other minor grammatical edits.

Don't think we need "there will be two events" anymore.

Any other edits to language?

If not, MPC ok?

PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12
AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

On Tuesday, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Washington, D.C.

In the morning, the Mayor will deliver remarks at the National Press Club. This event, hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, will also feature Nobel Prize winning economist and professor Joseph Stiglitz and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren. This event is open press and there will be no Q-and-A. Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org.

Later, the Mayor will be joined by dozens of national progressive leaders to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality at the House Triangle near the U.S. Capitol Building steps.

Press Schedule

Approximately 10:30 AM – Delivers Remarks at National Press Club

National Press Club
13, National Press Building Leasing

529 14th Street Northwest
Washington, D.C. 20045
Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org. The event begins at 9 a.m. and will be livestreamed online at <http://www.rooseveltinstitute.org/videos>. Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

3:00 PM – Unveils The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality

House Triangle – East Front
Washington, D.C. 20016
Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly

following the event.

Guidance for Wednesday, May 13

On Wednesday, the Mayor will be joined by a bipartisan coalition of mayors from around the country for meetings with Congressional leadership to call for a six-year transportation authorization that significantly increases federal transportation investments.

Wednesday afternoon, the mayors will hold a press conference at the U.S. Capitol. Additional details regarding Mayor de Blasio's schedule while in Washington will be released as they become available.

Later, Mayor de Blasio will travel to California.

###

From: John Del Cecato [jfdc@akpdmedia.com]

Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:48 PM

To: Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Boeglin, Rosemary; Carey, Michael; Grybauskas, Natalie; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie

Subject: Re: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Yes, I would rework like this:

PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

On Tuesday, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Washington, D.C. to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality. There will be two events.

In the morning, the Mayor will deliver remarks at the National Press Club. This event, hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, will also feature Nobel Prize winning economist and professor Joseph Stiglitz and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren. This event is open press and there will be no Q-and-A. Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org.

In the afternoon, the Mayor will make an announcement gather with dozens of national progressive leaders to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality at the House Triangle near the U.S. Capitol Building steps.

Press Schedule

Approximately 10:30 AM – Delivers Remarks at National Press Club

National Press Club
13, National Press Building Leasing

529 14th Street Northwest
Washington, D.C. 20045

Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org. The event begins at 9 a.m. and will be livestreamed online at <http://www.rooseveltinstitute.org/videos>. Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

3:00 PM – Unveiling of The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality

House Triangle (East Front)
Washington, D.C. 20016

Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayoroffice shortly following the event.

From: <Spitalnick>, "Amy (OMB)" <SpitalnickA@omb.nyc.gov>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 5:43 PM
To: "'Boeglin, Rosemary'" <RBoeglin@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "NGrybauskas" <NGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Adams, Marti" <MAdams@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Blumm, Kate" <KBlumm@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Chao, Raymond" <rchao@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Coney, Javon" <JConey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "de Alwis, Ronalie" <rdealwis@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Grybauskas, Stefan" <SGrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Klein, Monica" <MKlein@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Norvell, Wiley" <WNorvell@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Ozernoy, Ilana" <iozernoy@moia.nyc.gov>, "Ishanee Parikh" <iparikh@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Richardson, Jerika" <JLRichardson@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel" <GSchnakeMahl@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Phillip Walzak" <pwalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Fink, Avi" <AFink@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Stephanie Yazgi" <syazgi@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "John Del Cecato" <jfdc@akpdmmedia.com>

Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

+JDC

There's been some confusion over the difference between the two events. For the second, I would suggest saying explicitly that he'll be unveiling the contract (rather than "makes an announcement").

Wednesday guidance still good.

From: Boeglin, Rosemary [<mailto:RBoeglin@cityhall.nyc.gov>]

Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:34 PM

To: Carey, Michael; NGrybauskas; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Phillip Walzak; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie

Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Edited per MPC.

MPC – you good?

<image001.png>
THE CITY OF NEW YORK
OFFICE OF THE MAYOR
NEW YORK, NY 10007

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

CONTACT: pressoffice@cityhall.nyc.gov, (212) 788-2958

PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY,
MAY 13

On Tuesday, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Washington, D.C. to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality. There will be two events.

In the morning, the Mayor will deliver remarks at the National Press Club. This event, hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, will also feature Nobel Prize winning economist and professor Joseph Stiglitz and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren. This event is open press and there will be no Q-and-A. Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org.

In the afternoon, the Mayor will make an announcement at the House Triangle near the U.S. Capitol Building steps.

Press Schedule

Approximately 10:30 AM – Delivers Remarks at National Press Club

National Press Club
13, National Press Building Leasing
529 14th Street Northwest
Washington, D.C. 20045

Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org. The event begins at 9 a.m. and will be livestreamed online at <http://www.rooseveltinstitute.org/videos>. Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayorsoffice shortly following the event.

3:00 PM – Makes an Announcement

House Triangle (East Front)
Washington, D.C. 20016

Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayorsoffice shortly following the event.

Guidance for Wednesday, May 13

On Wednesday, the Mayor will be joined by a bipartisan coalition of mayors from around the country for meetings with Congressional leadership to call for a six-year transportation authorization that significantly increases federal transportation investments.

Wednesday afternoon, the mayors will hold a press conference at the U.S. Capitol. Additional details regarding Mayor de Blasio's schedule while in Washington will be released as they become available.

Later, Mayor de Blasio will travel to California.

###

From: Carey, Michael

Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:33 PM

To: Boeglin, Rosemary; Grybauskas, Natalie; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagegans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie

Subject: RE: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

Can we say he travels to California and not Santa Clara

Michael Paul Carey
Director of Scheduling and Advance
City Hall
New York, New York 10007
212.341.5396

From: Boeglin, Rosemary
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 5:32 PM
To: Grybauskas, Natalie; Adams, Marti; Blumm, Kate; Chao, Raymond; Coney, Javon; de Alwis, Ronalie; Grybauskas, Stefan; Hagelgans, Andrea; Klein, Monica; Leopold, Elana; Norvell, Wiley; Ozernoy, Ilana; Parikh, Ishanee; Richardson, Jerika; Schnake-Mahl, Gabriel; Spitalnick, Amy (OMB); Carey, Michael; Walzak, Phil; Fink, Avi; Yazgi, Stephanie
Subject: [draft] PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

MPC – pls confirm all public events are included below

MPC/EL – timing ok?

<image001.png>
THE CITY OF NEW YORK
OFFICE OF THE MAYOR
NEW YORK, NY 10007

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

CONTACT: pressoffice@cityhall.nyc.gov, (212) 788-2958

PUBLIC SCHEDULE FOR MAYOR BILL DE BLASIO FOR TUESDAY, MAY 12 AND GUIDANCE FOR WEDNESDAY,
MAY 13

On Tuesday, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Washington, D.C. to unveil The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality. There will be two events.

In the morning, the Mayor will deliver remarks at the National Press Club. This event, hosted by the Roosevelt Institute, will also feature Nobel Prize winning economist and professor Joseph Stiglitz and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren. This event is open press and there will be no Q-and-A. Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org.

In the afternoon, the Mayor will make an announcement at the House Triangle near the U.S. Capitol Building steps.

Press Schedule

Approximately 10:30 AM – Delivers Remarks at National Press Club

National Press Club
13, National Press Building Leasing
529 14th Street Northwest
Washington, D.C. 20045

Press interested in covering this event should contact mmrowka@rooseveltinstitute.org. The event begins at 9 a.m. and will be livestreamed online at <http://www.rooseveltinstitute.org/videos>. Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayorsoffice shortly following the event.

3:00 PM – Makes an Announcement

House Triangle (East Front)
Washington, D.C. 20016

Official photos will be available at flickr.com/nycmayorsoffice shortly following the event.

Guidance for Wednesday, May 13

On Wednesday, the Mayor will be joined by a bipartisan coalition of mayors from around the country for meetings with Congressional leadership to call for a six-year transportation authorization that significantly increases federal transportation investments.

Wednesday afternoon, the mayors will hold a press conference at the U.S. Capitol. Additional details regarding Mayor de Blasio's schedule while in Washington will be released as they become available.

Later, Mayor de Blasio will travel to Santa Clara, California.

###

From: Ronalie
To: [REDACTED] Carey, Michael; Walzak, Phil; Leopold, Elana; jfdc@akpdmedia.com; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: MBDB: Prep for TPA
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 8:10:10 PM

We will be delayed for this call. Will let everyone know when to hop on.

Thanks,
Ronalie

MBDB: Prep for TPA

Scheduled: Monday, May 11, 2015 from 9:00 PM to 9:30 PM

Location: Dial-in Number: [REDACTED] Meeting ID: [REDACTED]

Invitees: Aaron Pickrell ([REDACTED]), Carey, Michael, Walzak, Phil, Leopold, Elana, 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' (jfdc@akpdmedia.com), Hagelgans, Andrea

Sent from my iPhone

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Subject: Re: Pls send me my 2 minute remarks for the TPA
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 8:12:04 PM
Attachments: [default\[13\].xml](#)

DRAFT REMARKS
TPA KICK-OFF
5/12/15

I'm New York Mayor Bill de Blasio, and I want to thank so many of my fellow progressives – mayors, Members of the House and Senate, labor leaders, civil rights champions, and top progressive activists for joining us here today.

Six weeks ago, I convened a small group of progressive leaders in New York City to discuss the central crisis of our times – and that is income inequality – the growing gap between the Top One Percent – and everybody else.

That day, we pledged to reach out to hundreds of our fellow progressives and work together to generate a serious, bold set of solutions to the economic inequality our nation faces.

And today, we are announcing, and signing onto, "The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality."

Now before I get into what this document IS...let me say what it is NOT.

It's not a comprehensive approach for remaking our economy, like many of you heard from Professor Stiglitz this morning.

It's not a complete list of the issues that we will be pushing candidates and elected officials to embrace.

In fact, in recent days, I've spoken to some of the folks assembled here about the next step in this process – covering issues that range from an expansion of Social Security...to debt-free college...to mass incarceration...to climate change.

But what we DO have today...is a giant step forward.

These 13 progressive ideas will make an enormous difference in combatting income inequality – lifting the floor for working people...supporting working parents and families...demanding genuine tax fairness.

The Progressive Agenda represents a very simple concept. America needs economic policies that reward WORK...and not just wealth.

We need to recognize that since the Great Recession ended, those at the very top have accumulated record amounts of WEALTH.

As the very same time, our middle class isn't just working harder and feeling more insecure...it's at grave risk of disappearing ALTOGETHER.

As progressives, we will sit by and let that happen.

We will stand TOGETHER – calling upon candidates and elected officials at every level – federal, state, and local – to put people ahead of profits...to put work ahead of wealth...to stiffen their backbones and champion the progressive policies we need to lift our nation UP.

So without further ado, let me turn the microphone over to someone who knows a little something about progressive values -- former DNC Chairman, Governor Howard Dean.

On 5/11/15, 7:41 PM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

From: John Del Cecato
To: Snyder, Thomas; Wolfe, Emma; Williams, Dominic; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Gunaratna, Mahen; Leopold, Elana; Carey, Michael
Subject: TPA opening remarks
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 8:12:58 PM
Attachments: BDB TPA KICK OFF.docx

DRAFT REMARKS
TPA KICK-OFF
5/12/15

I'm New York Mayor Bill de Blasio, and I want to thank so many of my fellow progressives – mayors, Members of the House and Senate, labor leaders, civil rights champions, and top progressive activists for joining us here today.

Six weeks ago, I convened a small group of progressive leaders in New York City to discuss the central crisis of our times – and that is income inequality – the growing gap between the Top One Percent – and everybody else.

That day, we pledged to reach out to hundreds of our fellow progressives and work together to generate a serious, bold set of solutions to the economic inequality our nation faces.

And today, we are announcing, and signing onto, “The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality.”

Now before I get into what this document IS...let me say what it is NOT.

It's not a comprehensive approach for remaking our economy, like many of you heard from Professor Stiglitz this morning.

It's not a complete list of the issues that we will be pushing candidates and elected officials to embrace.

In fact, in recent days, I've spoken to some of the folks assembled here about the next step in this process – covering issues that range from an expansion of Social Security...to debt-free college...to mass incarceration...to climate change.

But what we DO have today...is a giant step forward.

These 13 progressive ideas will make an enormous difference in combatting income inequality – lifting the floor for working people...supporting working parents and families...demanding genuine tax fairness.

The Progressive Agenda represents a very simple concept. America needs economic policies that reward WORK...and not just wealth.

We need to recognize that since the Great Recession ended, those at the very top have accumulated record amounts of WEALTH.

As the very same time, our middle class isn't just working harder and feeling more insecure...it's at grave risk of disappearing ALTOGETHER.

As progressives, we will sit by and let that happen.

We will stand TOGETHER – calling upon candidates and elected officials at every level – federal, state, and local – to put people ahead of profits...to put work ahead of wealth...to stiffen their backbones and champion the progressive policies we need to lift our nation UP.

So without further ado, let me turn the microphone over to someone who knows a little something about progressive values -- former DNC Chairman, Governor Howard Dean.

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Cc: Hayley Prim
Subject: Re: Just had a good conversation
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 9:00:24 PM

BTW - Hodges is likely not to attend... I talked to her COS - and it is NOT the case that the WH was whipping them (although the WH IS worried that the event will be too much about trade)... Hodges just wants to stay away from trade altogether... I told her COS that it would likely NOT be all about trade - but that you loved Hodges & didn't want to even risk putting her in a bad place - so we were okay with them not attending... We've still got plenty of mayors... so we'll be fine... just wanted to report

On 5/9/15, 10:27 AM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>
>With Randi about why everyone is freaking out re: May 12. Much of it >seems to be about Obama, but a few other factors. Will call to discuss >when I free up in a few hours
>

From: de Alwis, Ronalie
To: Leopold, Elana
Cc: [REDACTED] jfdc@akpdmedia.com
Subject: Re: TPA and mayors
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 9:09:43 PM

Murray just called him back

Think he connected with Garcetti , let me confirm with him.

Sent from my iPhone

On May 11, 2015, at 7:04 PM, Leopold, Elana <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Is this happening?

From: Leopold, Elana
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 05:07 PM
To: 'Hayley Prim' <[REDACTED]>
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; de Alwis, Ronalie
Subject: RE: TPA and mayors

Mayor off- we have not had time to make these calls today

Can we start reaching out on a staff level

Let us know who you don't get through and we can try to do this evening

From: Hayley Prim [[mailto:\[REDACTED\]](mailto:[REDACTED])]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 9:54 AM
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com; Leopold, Elana; de Alwis, Ronalie
Subject: Re: TPA and mayors

This is our list of Mayors calls for you to make today, and staff is tackling another 6-10 as well. If you think you won't be able to reach these guys today, staff can lob in calls as well.

Marty Walsh (Boston) cell: [REDACTED]
Steve Benjamin (Columbia, SC) cell: [REDACTED]
Ed Murray (Seattle) cell: [REDACTED]
Eric Garcetti (Los Angeles) cell: [REDACTED]
Ed Lee (San Francisco) cell: [REDACTED]
Charlie Hales (Portland) cell: [REDACTED]

On Mon, May 11, 2015 at 7:35 AM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

No, got tied up. So let's blitz today

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:████████████████████]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 07:35 AM
To: B
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Leopold, Elana; de Alwis, Ronalie
Subject: Re: TPA and mayors

Will do. Did you reach out to Walsh, lee, Murray, and Garcetti yesterday?

On Monday, May 11, 2015, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

I've reached out to a number of mayors and haven't heard back. I need a final push today to get them by staff, and I'll try to make some calls as well. Hayley, pls create one unified list of outstanding mayors. My hope is to pick up 3-5 more as sign-ons before the day is out. Thanks

--
Hayley Prim
c: ██████████

--
Hayley Prim
c: ██████████

From: B
To: [REDACTED]
Cc: [REDACTED] <"jfdc@akpdmedia.com">; Snyder, Thomas; [REDACTED]
[REDACTED] <Leopold, Elana>
Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 9:12:28 PM

Mayor Ed Murray signs on formally!! Add him to the list

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Sunday, May 10, 2015 04:15 PM
To: B
Cc: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Snyder, Thomas; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

Great, re: Adler!

These are the cells I have listed below. Tracking down Garcetti now.

Marty Walsh [REDACTED]
Ed Lee [REDACTED]
Ed Murray [REDACTED]

On Sun, May 10, 2015 at 4:07 PM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Mayor Steve Adler of Austin, TX just signed. Can't be there but wants his name on the list and wants to work with us. And we really need to push ed murray and marty walsh and ed lee again. Also garcetti. Make me do a final blitz

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Sunday, May 10, 2015 11:28 AM
To: B
Cc: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Snyder, Thomas; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

I'm not sure. Davis, do you have any feedback?

On Sunday, May 10, 2015, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

How has Donna Edwards responded? Should I call her?

From: John Davis [mailto: [REDACTED]]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 01:50 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; B; Snyder, Thomas; [REDACTED]
< [REDACTED]>
Cc: [REDACTED] < [REDACTED]> [REDACTED]
< [REDACTED]> Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

Will do.

On Wednesday, May 6, 2015 1:49 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

We'll take that... But we'd also like him there on 5/12... Davis - you want to follow up with Josh?

From: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Wednesday, May 6, 2015 at 12:53 PM
To: "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "[REDACTED]" < [REDACTED]>
Cc: Aaron PickrellEmail < [REDACTED]> John Davis < [REDACTED]> John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Hayley Prim < [REDACTED]> "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

Sen whitehouse is open but hasn't studied the TPA yet. Says we should follow up with josh karedne (sp?) of his staff. Said at minimum he'll say nice things about what we're trying to do

From: Snyder, Thomas
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 12:42 PM
To: < [REDACTED]> < [REDACTED]>
Cc: B; [REDACTED] < [REDACTED]> [REDACTED]
< [REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

The hits just keep on coming

Sent from my iPhone

On May 6, 2015, at 12:41 PM, jeani murray < [REDACTED]> wrote:

I am pretty sure it was the Politico piece they saw today. Woohoo!

On Wednesday, May 6, 2015, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Well done!

From: jeani murray [mailto: [REDACTED]]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 12:39 PM
To: B
Cc: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> [REDACTED]
<[REDACTED]> Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Fw: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

Wade Henderson, President and CEO of the Leadership Council on Civil and Human Rights - in and attending.

Wants to engage further and be a part of longer term activities.

On Wednesday, May 6, 2015, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Fyi

From: B
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 12:08 PM
To: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Cc: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

Governor Dayton signs on! Add to the list! Coordinate announcement with ms. jamie makepeace ([REDACTED] or [REDACTED] cell). He can't make May 12 but he's open to doing an event together in the near future

From: Hayley Prim [mailto: [REDACTED]]
Sent: Wednesday, May 06, 2015 10:52 AM
To: B
Cc: Elana Leopold <[REDACTED]>
Subject: TPA Calls Scheduled for today starting at 12:00PM

I will send you latest TPA email with signers in clean email in case you need to forward.

12:00PM Governor Mark Dayton (Minnesota)

DIAL: [REDACTED] - FYI a Trooper will answer the phone

12:45PM Senator Sheldon Whitehouse (Rhode Island)

DIAL: [REDACTED]

Asst is Leah Siegle [REDACTED]

1:15PM Congressman GK Butterfield, Chair of the Black Caucus (North Carolina)

DIAL: Durham Office: [REDACTED]

Alternative Cell: [REDACTED]

Former Congressman Barney Frank

DIAL: Cell: [REDACTED]

 He did not have time in your available window today, but you should call his cell whenever you can and he will call you back.

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

From: Hayley Prim
To: B; John Del Cecato
Subject: Ed Murray, Seattle is signing!
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 9:12:43 PM

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
To: B; FLONYC
Cc: John Del Cecato; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma
Subject: Politico: Bill De Blasio, Elizabeth Warren escalate pressure on Hillary Clinton
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 9:19:36 PM

Bill De Blasio, Elizabeth Warren escalate pressure on Hillary Clinton

POLITICO - Gabriel Debenedenti

Like Elizabeth Warren, New York Mayor Bill de Blasio isn't running for president — he's running to influence the presidential race.

So when he and Warren appear together at the National Press Club in Washington before unveiling his Contract with America for the left, it will be the latest step in the Democrats' primary within the primary: liberals' effort to figure out how to push Hillary Clinton to the left.

The primary within the primary may prove more challenging for Clinton than the real thing, in which she's leading competitors by up to 50 points in some polls.

James Carville, the longtime Clinton adviser, compared de Blasio's efforts to the Club for Growth pressuring Republicans to move to the right on taxes: "It's a natural thing that happens in presidential politics," he said.

Nonetheless, the progressive mayor's swing through the capital is designed to kick the Democratic debate up a notch just as Warren escalates her own fight with President Barack Obama in a trade dispute that's also entangled Clinton. But it will also represent a balancing act, as de Blasio — Clinton's former Senate campaign manager — looks to influence the discussion without directly opposing the dominating front-runner.

After his joint appearance with Warren, de Blasio will stand alongside liberal lawmakers and labor leaders on Capitol Hill to roll out a policy wish-list. Progressives close to de Blasio say the hard part will be laying down an achievable marker for candidates — including Clinton — while still applying enough pressure to get their attention.

"The challenge is that a lot of this will just get a head nod" from Clinton, said one progressive Democratic leader.

As they maneuver for influence, Warren and de Blasio have taken up much of the oxygen from the party's actual candidates, grabbing headlines and jumping in the policy trenches — in de Blasio's case going as far as to effectively hit the campaign trail before revealing his "Progressive Agenda" on Tuesday.

But with the former secretary of state claiming commanding leads in national and state-level polling, in many cases performing better among liberals than among all registered Democrats, the question of how best to drag her to the left without alienating her is still outstanding.

Clinton's team is quick to predict that another candidate will reach at least 30 percent of the vote in Iowa, the first state with a 2016 contest, much of it coming from Democrats who would like to see Warren run. That concern partially explains

Clinton's recent leftward shifts on issues including immigration reform and criminal justice. Meanwhile, her campaign has remained in contact with liberal groups like the Progressive Change Campaign Committee, which is encouraging Clinton to embrace expanding Social Security and a debt-free college plan.

"The challenge is that a lot of this will just get a head nod" from Clinton, said one progressive Democratic leader.

As they maneuver for influence, Warren and de Blasio have taken up much of the oxygen from the party's actual candidates, grabbing headlines and jumping in the policy trenches — in de Blasio's case going as far as to effectively hit the campaign trail before revealing his "Progressive Agenda" on Tuesday.

But with the former secretary of state claiming commanding leads in national and state-level polling, in many cases performing better among liberals than among all registered Democrats, the question of how best to drag her to the left without alienating her is still outstanding.

Clinton's team is quick to predict that another candidate will reach at least 30 percent of the vote in Iowa, the first state with a 2016 contest, much of it coming from Democrats who would like to see Warren run. That concern partially explains Clinton's recent leftward shifts on issues including immigration reform and criminal justice. Meanwhile, her campaign has remained in contact with liberal groups like the Progressive Change Campaign Committee, which is encouraging Clinton to embrace expanding Social Security and a debt-free college plan.

"Standing with working people once in a while won't work. Candidates can't hedge bets any longer," said Trumka on April 27.

The Clinton campaign named a Labor Outreach Director on April 28.

The mayor's stop in Washington comes at a time when Clinton has been caught between Obama and Warren over supporting the Trans-Pacific Partnership trade agreement she helped negotiate as secretary of state. Warren and Obama traded barbs over the weekend, as the president told Yahoo News Warren is "a politician like everybody else" when trying to explain her opposition to the trade deal.

Clinton has avoided weighing in on the topic, only vaguely describing restrictions she would put on a deal rather than firmly opposing it.

Trade is just one policy where liberals are seeking to get more clarity from Clinton, particularly as Sanders intensifies his campaign schedule and O'Malley — who has recently focused on Wall Street reform and debt-free college — nears his expected late-May campaign launch.

The bar is low for Clinton to satisfy liberals in many cases, but she still faces some risk of alienating more centrist voters she might need in November 2016.

"Two areas where words alone do make a difference are expanding social security and debt-free college," explained the PCCC's Adam Green, pointing to a recent interview where her campaign manager mentioned the latter. "If she were to give a speech or even send a tweet mentioning them, that would shift the entire national discussion."

Thus, Warren and de Blasio have shown few signs of letting up. The former mayor has pointedly refused to endorse her, and Warren has declined to ask the various organizations aiming to draft her into the race to stand down.

And de Blasio's national travels aren't ending on Tuesday. His next stop, on Wednesday, will be in Silicon Valley — 3,000 miles from Manhattan.

Sent from my iPhone

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
To: B; FLONYC
Cc: John Del Cecato; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma
Subject: Corrected - Politico: Bill De Blasio, Elizabeth Warren escalate pressure on Hillary Clinton
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 9:27:16 PM

Bill De Blasio, Elizabeth Warren escalate pressure on Hillary Clinton

POLITICO - Gabriel Debenedenti

<http://www.politico.com/story/2015/05/bill-de-blasio-elizabeth-warren-hillary-clinton-2016-117837.html>

Like Elizabeth Warren, New York Mayor Bill de Blasio isn't running for president — he's running to influence the presidential race.

So when he and Warren appear together at the National Press Club in Washington before unveiling his Contract with America for the left, it will be the latest step in the Democrats' primary within the primary: liberals' effort to figure out how to push Hillary Clinton to the left.

The primary within the primary may prove more challenging for Clinton than the real thing, in which she's leading competitors by up to 50 points in some polls.

James Carville, the longtime Clinton adviser, compared de Blasio's efforts to the Club for Growth pressuring Republicans to move to the right on taxes: "It's a natural thing that happens in presidential politics," he said.

Nonetheless, the progressive mayor's swing through the capital is designed to kick the Democratic debate up a notch just as Warren escalates her own fight with President Barack Obama in a trade dispute that's also entangled Clinton. But it will also represent a balancing act, as de Blasio — Clinton's former Senate campaign manager — looks to influence the discussion without directly opposing the dominating front-runner.

After his joint appearance with Warren, de Blasio will stand alongside liberal lawmakers and labor leaders on Capitol Hill to roll out a policy wish-list. Progressives close to de Blasio say the hard part will be laying down an achievable marker for candidates — including Clinton — while still applying enough pressure to get their attention.

"The challenge is that a lot of this will just get a head nod" from Clinton, said one progressive Democratic leader.

As they maneuver for influence, Warren and de Blasio have taken up much of the oxygen from the party's actual candidates, grabbing headlines and jumping in the policy trenches — in de Blasio's case going as far as to effectively hit the campaign trail before revealing his "Progressive Agenda" on Tuesday.

But with the former secretary of state claiming commanding leads in national and state-level polling, in many cases performing better among liberals than among all registered Democrats, the question of how best to drag her to the left without alienating her is still outstanding.

Clinton's team is quick to predict that another candidate will reach at least 30 percent of the vote in Iowa, the first state with a 2016 contest, much of it coming from Democrats who would like to see Warren run. That concern partially explains Clinton's recent leftward shifts on issues including immigration reform and criminal justice. Meanwhile, her campaign has remained in contact with liberal groups like the Progressive Change Campaign Committee, which is encouraging Clinton to embrace expanding Social Security and a debt-free college plan.

But so far, Clinton stands far ahead of her likely competitors — Vermont Sen. Bernie Sanders, former Maryland Gov. Martin O'Malley, former Virginia Sen. Jim Webb, and former Rhode Island Gov. Lincoln Chafee — in polling, reducing pressure on her to appease liberals.

In that vacuum, Warren and de Blasio have sought to position themselves as king-makers among activists in early-voting and swing states, a role de Blasio has pursued by stopping in Iowa and Wisconsin. His "Progressive Agenda" is designed to be broad enough for Clinton and other Democrats to embrace whole-heartedly: he is expected to call for universal pre-kindergarten, a higher minimum wage, and a paid family leave policy — all of which Clinton has mentioned favorably in recent months.

And de Blasio's Wednesday roll-out follows a similar speech in late April by AFL-CIO chief Richard Trumka — an address that read like a warning memo to Clinton about how to gain crucial union support.

"Standing with working people once in a while won't work. Candidates can't hedge bets any longer," said Trumka on April 27.

The Clinton campaign named a Labor Outreach Director on April 28.

The mayor's stop in Washington comes at a time when Clinton has been caught between Obama and Warren over supporting the Trans-Pacific Partnership trade agreement she helped negotiate as secretary of state. Warren and Obama traded barbs over the weekend, as the president told Yahoo News Warren is "a politician like everybody else" when trying to explain her opposition to the trade deal.

Clinton has avoided weighing in on the topic, only vaguely describing restrictions she would put on a deal rather than firmly opposing it.

Trade is just one policy where liberals are seeking to get more clarity from Clinton, particularly as Sanders intensifies his campaign schedule and O'Malley — who has recently focused on Wall Street reform and debt-free college — nears his expected late-May campaign launch.

The bar is low for Clinton to satisfy liberals in many cases, but she still faces some risk of alienating more centrist voters she might need in November 2016.

"Two areas where words alone do make a difference are expanding social security and debt-free college," explained the PCCC's Adam Green, pointing to a recent interview where her campaign manager mentioned the latter. "If she were to give a speech or even send a tweet mentioning them, that would shift the entire national discussion."

Thus, Warren and de Blasio have shown few signs of letting up. The former mayor has pointedly refused to endorse her, and Warren has declined to ask the various organizations aiming to draft her into the race to stand down.

And de Blasio's national travels aren't ending on Tuesday. His next stop, on Wednesday, will be in Silicon Valley — 3,000 miles from Manhattan.

Sent from my iPhone

From: de Alwis, Ronalie
To: Carey, Michael; Hagelgans, Andrea; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; [REDACTED] Walzak, Phil; Leopold, Elana
Subject: MBDB: Prep for TPA
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 9:36:02 PM

This call will still happen. Looking closer at 9:50/ 10pm.

Ronalie de Alwis
Office of the Mayor
City of New York
Cell:347-952-9525

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
To: John Del Cecato
Subject: Re: TPA opening remarks
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 9:43:42 PM

He's actually quite effective, I would argue. I remember him successfully pressuring Senate candidates back during the '10 cycle...

Sent from my iPhone

On May 11, 2015, at 9:42 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

No kidding! Who the fuck IS this guy? I can't wait to meet him face-to-face...

Meanwhile, her campaign has remained in contact with liberal groups like the Progressive Change Campaign Committee, which is encouraging Clinton to embrace expanding Social Security and a debt-free college plan.

SNIP

"Two areas where words alone do make a difference are expanding social security and debt-free college," explained the PCCC's Adam Green, pointing to a recent interview where her campaign manager mentioned the latter. "If she were to give a speech or even send a tweet mentioning them, that would shift the entire national discussion."

From: <Walzak>, Phil <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>

Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 9:37 PM

To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Dominic Williams <DWilliams@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Gunaratna, Mahen" <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>

Subject: RE: TPA opening remarks

ok cool

don wanna mess with your politics, not a huge deal, and your coalition bldg needs proly more impt plus those are all good issues!

adam green will be happy....

From: John Del Cecato [jfdc@akpdmedia.com]

Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 9:36 PM

To: Walzak, Phil; Snyder, Thomas; Wolfe, Emma; Williams, Dominic; Hagelgans, Andrea; Gunaratna, Mahen; Leopold, Elana; Carey, Michael

Subject: Re: TPA opening remarks

Part of the issue is that we cut a deal with Van Jones today - long story... But the promised goal is that we'd get mass incarceration, SS, and debt-free college on TPA very soon - maybe by end of week...

Still could tweak language - just wanted you to know the last minute deals to keep the bad actors from blowing up our thing

From: <Walzak>, Phil <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>

Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 9:10 PM

To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Dominic Williams <DWilliams@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Hagelgans, Andrea" <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Gunaratna, Mahen" <MGunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Leopold, Elana" <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, "Carey, Michael" <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>

Subject: Re: TPA opening remarks

Instead of saying what its not...why not call this the first installment on income inequality with room to cover more ground on other issues in future

Just the emphasis on 'not' strikes me as limiting

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 08:14 PM

To: Snyder, Thomas; Wolfe, Emma; Williams, Dominic; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Gunaratna, Mahen; Leopold, Elana; Carey, Michael

Subject: TPA opening remarks

From: Williams, Dominic
To: John Cecato
Cc: Leopold, Elana
Subject: TPP
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 9:44:17 PM
Attachments: TPP Backgrounder.docx

New backgrounder attached with below complaint / response in it.

Q & A

Concern: Second Coming of NAFTA We all saw what a disaster NAFTA was for America - 700K jobs lost, according to the Economic Policy Institute. We look with GREAT skepticism on a new trade deal that could lead to even more jobs being shipped away. From what I currently understand of the new trade accord, this looks like another bad deal for American workers, and we cannot accept it.

Obama Response: Some folks think we should just withdraw and not even try to engage in trade with these countries. I disagree. We have to make sure America writes the rules of the global economy. And we should do it today, while our economy is in the position of global strength. (Applause.) Because if we don't write the rules for trade around the world -- guess what -- China will. And they'll write those rules in a way that gives Chinese workers and Chinese businesses the upper hand, and locks American-made goods out. That's the choice we face. We're not going to be able to isolate ourselves from world markets. We got to be in there and compete. And the question is, are we going to make sure that the rules are fair so that our businesses and our workers are on a level playing field. Because when they are, we win every time. When the rules are fair, we win every time. And you know what, past trade agreements, it's true, didn't always reflect our values or didn't always do enough to protect American workers. But that's why we're designing a different kind of trade deal. And the truth is that companies that only care about low wages, they've already moved. They don't need new trade deals to move. They've already outsourced. They've already located in search of low wages.

DW: President is asking us to trust him, that this time will be different – it's hard to do without seeing and knowing how he'll do it.

Concern: Treaty may include weak sections on environmental protection and labor rights and could expand fossil fuel exports, exacerbating climate change and reinforcing dependence on fossil fuels. The White House is planning on including broad protections against illegal trade in protected species, overfishing, and deforestation, but a leaked draft revealed a framework that lacked meaningful enforcement mechanisms and has drawn the skepticism of major environmental groups. In addition, while the White House insists they are including protections for labor rights, including rights to collective bargaining, limits on child labor, and acceptable working conditions (safe work environments and maximum hours limitations), there are parallel concerns that these clauses will not be adequately enforceable. There is also no chapter on currency manipulation, which is concerning to domestic labor unions as member countries can use artificial currency depreciation to undercut U.S. manufacturing companies.

Obama Response: So when you look at a country like Vietnam, under this agreement, Vietnam would actually, for the first time, have to raise its labor standards. It would have to set a minimum wage. It would have to pass safe workplace laws to protect its workers. It would even have to protect workers' freedom to form unions -- for the very first time. And if Vietnam, or any of the other countries in this trade agreement don't meet these requirements, they'll face meaningful consequences. If you're a country that wants in to this agreement, you have to meet higher standards. If you don't, you're out. If you break the rules, there are actual repercussions.

DW: President is asking us to trust him, that this time will be different – it's hard to do without seeing and knowing how he'll do it. Many legislators who have seen the deal share this concern. Hard not to be skeptical in that context.

Concern: The agreement would likely expand the use of "Investor-State Dispute Settlement" giving investors and international corporations a trans-national forum to seek damages from governments for regulations that expropriate property: The White House has identified these tribunals as vital protection from expropriation for U.S. companies doing business abroad, but Elizabeth Warren and other critics criticize them as potentially allowing global corporations to receive damages, paid for by U.S. taxpayers, from regulations designed to protect consumers but which the company will argue unfairly restrict profits. It is important to note, however, that most companies will continue to challenge rules in U.S. courts in order to overturn the laws all together. ISDS tribunals are only able to award damages, and have never done so in any of the thirteen cases that went to judgment against the United States.

Obama Response: Number four -- critics warn that parts of this deal would undermine American regulation -- food safety, worker safety, even financial regulations. They're making this stuff up. (Applause.) This is just not true. No trade agreement is going to force us to change our laws. This agreement would make sure our companies aren't discriminated against in other countries. We already treat companies from other countries fairly here. But our companies don't always get treated fairly there. So sometimes they need to have some way to settle disputes where it's not subject to the whims of some government bureaucrat in that country. That's important. We want our businesses to succeed in selling over there because that's how our workers will get more jobs here in the United States.

DW: President is asking us to trust him, that this time will be different – it's hard to do without seeing and knowing how he'll do it. People who have seen the deal and don't reflexively distrust him are concerned – hard not to doubt in that context.

The Trans-Pacific Partnership
Issues and Areas of Concern for New York City

The Trans-Pacific Partnership is a regulatory and investment treaty being negotiated by the Obama administration covering major economies of the Pacific Rim currently excluding China. It includes 12 nations and nearly 40% of the world's economy: United States, Australia, Brunei Darussalam, Chile, Canada, Japan, Malaysia, Mexico, New Zealand, Peru, Singapore, Vietnam. New York State exports approximately $23 billion per year in goods to TPP economies. Overall, exports in goods support approximately 280,000 jobs.

The treaty includes reciprocal tariff reductions, akin to a traditional free trade agreement, but also includes chapters on other non-tariff regulatory issues, including intellectual property, labor, financial services, and the environment. Relative tariff levels between the United States and the other participating nations are already relatively low, so there has been intense focus on the non-tariff aspects of the deal.

FACTS ABOUT PROCESS

The agreement is being negotiated in secret: The text of the agreement has not been made public, limiting the ability for citizens or advocacy groups to form opinions of the direction of the agreement. Instead, non-legislators have needed to rely on leaked drafts of some chapters, which have been criticized by the Obama administration as being incomplete and partial. Members of Congress and stakeholder groups convened by the administration, including some labor, environmental, and consumer advocacy representatives have seen confidential draft language.

The President is seeking “fast-track” authority over opposition and skepticism from Congressional Democrats, labor unions, and prominent environmental groups: The Administration is seeking Trade Promotion Authority (colloquially known as “fast track”) which allows the Administration to submit a negotiated agreement in total to be voted up or down by Congress with no opportunity for amendments and limited debate. This is the process that was used for NAFTA, WTO, and other high-profile trade agreements. Without an “up or down” vote, the administration argues that the deal would collapse under the weight of amendments. Harry Reid and Nancy Pelosi have opposed granting the President fast-track authority, but some Democrats and many Congressional Republicans are open to the idea.

BENEFITS OF A DEAL AS WE KNOW IT

While we do not know the final text, there are a number of key benefits that seem like likely outcomes of a successfully approved deal:

The agreement could increase opportunities for increased exports and domestic job creation, while expanding profit-making opportunities for U.S. companies abroad and potentially shift jobs or expand operations overseas. The White House has stated that approving this agreement would increase exports from the United States by approximately $120 billion per year, largely benefiting those companies and employees in export-oriented industries, and increase real incomes, in the form of lower prices and increased competition, by $77 billion per year. They point to increased opportunities for small and medium sized export-oriented U.S. businesses, reduced tariffs for goods and services from U.S. firms (including “financial services”), uniform regulations, and increased protections for the intellectual property from U.S. tech, medical, and media firms.

Would benefit large corporate entities with major footprints in New York City: The benefits of additional corporate investment opportunities in the Pacific Rim created by TPP skews towards some categories of companies who have major presence in New York City: particularly companies who own valuable IP in tech, media, and pharmaceuticals, and companies that are positioned to increase “trade in services” – particularly financial institutions, law firms, and consulting companies.

This agreement would set the pattern for other future trade deals, including with China and other nations across the world: The TPP is seen as an opportunity for the United States to take the lead in setting minimum standards for trade among major economic partners in the Pacific Rim, in an attempt to create “rules of the game” that these nations will play on American terms, rather than on the terms of Chinese interest, which may include less protection for labor, the environment, American security interests, and the interests of American corporations and workers. It is also seen as an important tool to knit together countries in the region to provide an economic counterweight to the rise of China. Roger Altman, former Treasury official, and Richard Haas of the Council on Foreign Relations, wrote that a failure of the TPP, “would leave the country poorer and the world less stable.”

CONCERNS ABOUT PROCEEDING WITH THE PENDING DEAL:

While we do not know the final text, there are a number of substantive concerns being raised by labor, environmental, and consumer protection advocates:

Treaty may include weak sections on environmental protection and labor rights and could expand fossil fuel exports, exacerbating climate change and reinforcing dependence on fossil fuels. The White House is planning on including broad protections against illegal trade in protected species, overfishing, and deforestation, but a leaked draft revealed a framework that lacked meaningful enforcement mechanisms and has drawn the skepticism of major environmental groups. In addition, while the White House insists they are including protections for labor rights, including rights to collective bargaining, limits on child labor, and acceptable working conditions (safe work environments and maximum hours limitations), there are parallel concerns that these clauses will not be adequately enforceable. There is also no chapter on currency manipulation, which is concerning to domestic labor unions as member countries can use artificial currency depreciation to undercut U.S. manufacturing companies.

The agreement would likely expand expansive controversial U.S. intellectual property laws internationally: A leaked version of the Intellectual Property rights chapter includes provisions that would expand U.S. intellectual property protections, including 80-year copyright protections and increased protections for patented brand-name pharmaceuticals. This would improve profit prospects for pharmaceutical companies, but may yield higher drug prices.

The agreement would likely expand the use of “Investor-State Dispute Settlement” giving investors and international corporations a trans-national forum to seek damages from governments for regulations that expropriate property: The White House has identified these tribunals as vital protection from expropriation for U.S. companies doing business abroad, but Elizabeth Warren and other critics criticize them as potentially allowing global corporations to receive damages, paid for by U.S. taxpayers, from regulations designed to protect consumers but which the company will argue unfairly restrict profits. It is important to note, however, that most companies will continue to challenge rules in U.S. courts in order to overturn the laws all together. ISDS tribunals are only able to award damages, and have never done so in any of the thirteen cases that went to judgment against the United States.

“Buy America” provisions could be challenged: The White House insists that there will be no change to current law, and that states and localities’ ability to impose local purchasing requirements will not be disrupted, but the AFL-CIO has claimed that this deal would undermine the ability of the United States to impose “Buy America” provisions.

Draft Recommended Position: Skeptical of TPP, Against Fast Track

We can’t really comment on the TPP itself because we haven’t seen it - which is a BIG PART OF THE PROBLEM. It’s been negotiated in secret, and that’s not acceptable. We need to see what’s in it.

We all saw what a disaster NAFTA was for America - 700K jobs lost, according to the Economic Policy Institute. We look with GREAT skepticism on a new trade deal that could lead to even more jobs being shipped away. From what I currently understand of the new trade accord, this looks like another bad deal for American workers, and we cannot accept it.

I oppose Fast Track because the American people should have a say in the process - through their elected representatives. If our Members of Congress are forced to vote YES OR NO on a massive trade deal without the power to offer amendments, we’re putting all the power on the side of the giant multinational corporations and Wall Street banks, and their armies of lobbyists.

We need trade deals that protect American jobs, workers’ rights, human rights, consumers, and our environment. We should not allow corporations even more power to subvert American laws designed to protect workers, consumers, and families.

Without the proper protections for America’s working families, these massive trade deals can lead to a global rush the bottom. That flies in the face of our effort to combat income inequality in the United States - handing more power to those at the top, and letting them write the rules to further enrich themselves at the expense of our struggling middle class, working class, and poor.

Q & A

Concern: Second Coming of NAFTA We all saw what a disaster NAFTA was for America - 700K jobs lost, according to the Economic Policy Institute. We look with GREAT skepticism on a new trade deal that could lead to even more jobs being shipped away. From what I currently understand of the new trade accord, this looks like another bad deal for American workers, and we cannot accept it.

Obama Response: Some folks think we should just withdraw and not even try to engage in trade with these countries. I disagree. We have to make sure America writes the rules of the global economy. And we should do it today, while our economy is in the position of global strength. (Applause.) Because if we don't write the rules for trade around the world -- guess what -- China will. And they'll write those rules in a way that gives Chinese workers and Chinese businesses the upper hand, and locks American-made goods out. That's the choice we face. We're not going to be able to isolate ourselves from world markets. We got to be in there and compete. And the question is, are we going to make sure that the rules are fair so that our businesses and our workers are on a level playing field. Because when they are, we win every time. When the rules are fair, we win every time. And you know what, past trade agreements, it's true, didn't always reflect our values or didn't always do enough to protect American workers. But that's why we're designing a different kind of trade deal. And the truth is that companies that only care about low wages, they've already moved. They don't need new trade deals to move. They've already outsourced. They've already located in search of low wages.

DW: President is asking us to trust him, that this time will be different – it's hard to do without seeing and knowing how he'll do it.

Concern: Treaty may include weak sections on environmental protection and labor rights and could expand fossil fuel exports, exacerbating climate change and reinforcing dependence on fossil fuels. The White House is planning on including broad protections against illegal trade in protected species, overfishing, and deforestation, but a leaked draft revealed a framework that lacked meaningful enforcement mechanisms and has drawn the skepticism of major environmental groups. In addition, while the White House insists they are including protections for labor rights, including rights to collective bargaining, limits on child labor, and acceptable working conditions (safe work environments and maximum hours limitations), there are parallel concerns that these clauses will not be adequately enforceable. There is also no chapter on currency manipulation, which is concerning to domestic labor unions as member countries can use artificial currency depreciation to undercut U.S. manufacturing companies.

Obama Response: So when you look at a country like Vietnam, under this agreement, Vietnam would actually, for the first time, have to raise its labor standards. It would have to set a minimum wage. It would have to pass safe workplace laws to protect its workers. It would even have to protect workers' freedom to form unions -- for the very first time. And if Vietnam, or any of the other countries in this trade agreement don't meet these requirements, they'll face meaningful consequences. If you're a country that wants in to this agreement, you have to meet higher standards. If you don't, you're out. If you break the rules, there are actual repercussions.

DW: President is asking us to trust him, that this time will be different – it's hard to do without seeing and knowing how he'll do it. Many legislators who have seen the deal share this concern. Hard not to be skeptical in that context.

Concern: The agreement would likely expand the use of "Investor-State Dispute Settlement" giving investors and international corporations a trans-national forum to seek damages from governments for regulations that expropriate property: The White House has identified these tribunals as vital protection from expropriation for U.S. companies doing business abroad, but Elizabeth Warren and other critics criticize them as potentially allowing global corporations to receive damages, paid for by U.S. taxpayers, from regulations designed to protect consumers but which the company will argue unfairly restrict profits. It is important to note, however, that most companies will continue to challenge rules in U.S. courts in order to overturn the laws all together. ISDS tribunals are only able to award damages, and have never done so in any of the thirteen cases that went to judgment against the United States.

Obama Response: Number four -- critics warn that parts of this deal would undermine American regulation -- food safety, worker safety, even financial regulations. They're making this stuff up. (Applause.) This is just not true. No trade agreement is going to force us to change our laws. This agreement would make sure our companies aren't discriminated against in other countries. We already treat companies from other countries fairly here. But our companies don't always get treated fairly there. So sometimes they need to have some way to settle disputes where it's not subject to the whims of some government bureaucrat in that country. That's important. We want our businesses to succeed in selling over there because that's how our workers will get more jobs here in the United States.

DW: President is asking us to trust him, that this time will be different – it's hard to do without seeing and knowing how he'll do it. People who have seen the deal and don't reflexively distrust him are concerned – hard not to doubt in that context.

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
To: John Del Cecato
Subject: Predictable work schedules!
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 9:54:02 PM

Steven Greenhouse (@greenhousenyt)

5/11/15, 9:15 PM

The next big labor fight is over when you work as bills seek to curb volatile, unfriendly scheduling washingtonpost.com/blogs/wonkblog... @lydiadepillis

Download the Twitter app

Sent from my iPhone

From: Williams, Dominic
To: B
Cc: John Cecato; Leopold, Elana
Subject: TPP Backgrounder, Qs and As
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 10:05:45 PM
Attachments: TPP Backgrounder.docx

There is a 4 page document attached to this e-mail.

Pages 1 and 2 are a backgrounder on the debate over TPP

Page 3 highlights some key concerns we raise on TPP, Obama's exact response, and what we think of it

Page 4 is a transcript of an interview with Elizabeth Warren, where the reporter channels Obama, and Warren responds.

EL – can you print a copy to travel with for me please?

The Trans-Pacific Partnership
Issues and Areas of Concern for New York City

The Trans-Pacific Partnership is a regulatory and investment treaty being negotiated by the Obama administration covering major economies of the Pacific Rim currently excluding China. It includes 12 nations and nearly 40% of the world's economy: United States, Australia, Brunei Darussalam, Chile, Canada, Japan, Malaysia, Mexico, New Zealand, Peru, Singapore, Vietnam. New York State exports approximately $23 billion per year in goods to TPP economies. Overall, exports in goods support approximately 280,000 jobs.

The treaty includes reciprocal tariff reductions, akin to a traditional free trade agreement, but also includes chapters on other non-tariff regulatory issues, including intellectual property, labor, financial services, and the environment. Relative tariff levels between the United States and the other participating nations are already relatively low, so there has been intense focus on the non-tariff aspects of the deal.

FACTS ABOUT PROCESS

The agreement is being negotiated in secret: The text of the agreement has not been made public, limiting the ability for citizens or advocacy groups to form opinions of the direction of the agreement. Instead, non-legislators have needed to rely on leaked drafts of some chapters, which have been criticized by the Obama administration as being incomplete and partial. Members of Congress and stakeholder groups convened by the administration, including some labor, environmental, and consumer advocacy representatives have seen confidential draft language.

The President is seeking “fast-track” authority over opposition and skepticism from Congressional Democrats, labor unions, and prominent environmental groups: The Administration is seeking Trade Promotion Authority (colloquially known as “fast track”) which allows the Administration to submit a negotiated agreement in total to be voted up or down by Congress with no opportunity for amendments and limited debate. This is the process that was used for NAFTA, WTO, and other high-profile trade agreements. Without an “up or down” vote, the administration argues that the deal would collapse under the weight of amendments. Harry Reid and Nancy Pelosi have opposed granting the President fast-track authority, but some Democrats and many Congressional Republicans are open to the idea.

BENEFITS OF A DEAL AS WE KNOW IT

While we do not know the final text, there are a number of key benefits that seem like likely outcomes of a successfully approved deal:

The agreement could increase opportunities for increased exports and domestic job creation, while expanding profit-making opportunities for U.S. companies abroad and potentially shift jobs or expand operations overseas. The White House has stated that approving this agreement would increase exports from the United States by approximately $120 billion per year, largely benefiting those companies and employees in export-oriented industries, and increase real incomes, in the form of lower prices and increased competition, by $77 billion per year. They point to increased opportunities for small and medium sized export-oriented U.S. businesses, reduced tariffs for goods and services from U.S. firms (including “financial services”), uniform regulations, and increased protections for the intellectual property from U.S. tech, medical, and media firms.

Would benefit large corporate entities with major footprints in New York City: The benefits of additional corporate investment opportunities in the Pacific Rim created by TPP skews towards some categories of companies who have major presence in New York City: particularly companies who own valuable IP in tech, media, and pharmaceuticals, and companies that are positioned to increase “trade in services” – particularly financial institutions, law firms, and consulting companies.

This agreement would set the pattern for other future trade deals, including with China and other nations across the world: The TPP is seen as an opportunity for the United States to take the lead in setting minimum standards for trade among major economic partners in the Pacific Rim, in an attempt to create “rules of the game” that these nations will play on American terms, rather than on the terms of Chinese interest, which may include less protection for labor, the environment, American security interests, and the interests of American corporations and workers. It is also seen as an important tool to knit together countries in the region to provide an economic counterweight to the rise of China. Roger Altman, former Treasury official, and Richard Haas of the Council on Foreign Relations, wrote that a failure of the TPP, “would leave the country poorer and the world less stable.”

CONCERNS ABOUT PROCEEDING WITH THE PENDING DEAL:

While we do not know the final text, there are a number of substantive concerns being raised by labor, environmental, and consumer protection advocates:

Treaty may include weak sections on environmental protection and labor rights and could expand fossil fuel exports, exacerbating climate change and reinforcing dependence on fossil fuels. The White House is planning on including broad protections against illegal trade in protected species, overfishing, and deforestation, but a leaked draft revealed a framework that lacked meaningful enforcement mechanisms and has drawn the skepticism of major environmental groups. In addition, while the White House insists they are including protections for labor rights, including rights to collective bargaining, limits on child labor, and acceptable working conditions (safe work environments and maximum hours limitations), there are parallel concerns that these clauses will not be adequately enforceable. There is also no chapter on currency manipulation, which is concerning to domestic labor unions as member countries can use artificial currency depreciation to undercut U.S. manufacturing companies.

The agreement would likely expand expansive controversial U.S. intellectual property laws internationally: A leaked version of the Intellectual Property rights chapter includes provisions that would expand U.S. intellectual property protections, including 80-year copyright protections and increased protections for patented brand-name pharmaceuticals. This would improve profit prospects for pharmaceutical companies, but may yield higher drug prices.

The agreement would likely expand the use of “Investor-State Dispute Settlement” giving investors and international corporations a trans-national forum to seek damages from governments for regulations that expropriate property: The White House has identified these tribunals as vital protection from expropriation for U.S. companies doing business abroad, but Elizabeth Warren and other critics criticize them as potentially allowing global corporations to receive damages, paid for by U.S. taxpayers, from regulations designed to protect consumers but which the company will argue unfairly restrict profits. It is important to note, however, that most companies will continue to challenge rules in U.S. courts in order to overturn the laws all together. ISDS tribunals are only able to award damages, and have never done so in any of the thirteen cases that went to judgment against the United States.

“Buy America” provisions could be challenged: The White House insists that there will be no change to current law, and that states and localities’ ability to impose local purchasing requirements will not be disrupted, but the AFL-CIO has claimed that this deal would undermine the ability of the United States to impose “Buy America” provisions.

Draft Recommended Position: Skeptical of TPP, Against Fast Track

We can’t really comment on the TPP itself because we haven’t seen it - which is a BIG PART OF THE PROBLEM. It’s been negotiated in secret, and that’s not acceptable. We need to see what’s in it.

We all saw what a disaster NAFTA was for America - 700K jobs lost, according to the Economic Policy Institute. We look with GREAT skepticism on a new trade deal that could lead to even more jobs being shipped away. From what I currently understand of the new trade accord, this looks like another bad deal for American workers, and we cannot accept it.

I oppose Fast Track because the American people should have a say in the process - through their elected representatives. If our Members of Congress are forced to vote YES OR NO on a massive trade deal without the power to offer amendments, we’re putting all the power on the side of the giant multinational corporations and Wall Street banks, and their armies of lobbyists.

We need trade deals that protect American jobs, workers’ rights, human rights, consumers, and our environment. We should not allow corporations even more power to subvert American laws designed to protect workers, consumers, and families.

Without the proper protections for America’s working families, these massive trade deals can lead to a global rush the bottom. That flies in the face of our effort to combat income inequality in the United States - handing more power to those at the top, and letting them write the rules to further enrich themselves at the expense of our struggling middle class, working class, and poor.

TPP Q & A

Concern: Second Coming of NAFTA We all saw what a disaster NAFTA was for America - 700K jobs lost, according to the Economic Policy Institute. We look with GREAT skepticism on a new trade deal that could lead to even more jobs being shipped away. From what I currently understand of the new trade accord, this looks like another bad deal for American workers, and we cannot accept it.

Obama Response: Some folks think we should just withdraw and not even try to engage in trade with these countries. I disagree. We have to make sure America writes the rules of the global economy. And we should do it today, while our economy is in the position of global strength. (Applause.) Because if we don't write the rules for trade around the world -- guess what -- China will. And they'll write those rules in a way that gives Chinese workers and Chinese businesses the upper hand, and locks American-made goods out. That's the choice we face. We're not going to be able to isolate ourselves from world markets. We got to be in there and compete. And the question is, are we going to make sure that the rules are fair so that our businesses and our workers are on a level playing field. Because when they are, we win every time. When the rules are fair, we win every time. And you know what, past trade agreements, it's true, didn't always reflect our values or didn't always do enough to protect American workers. But that's why we're designing a different kind of trade deal. And the truth is that companies that only care about low wages, they've already moved. They don't need new trade deals to move. They've already outsourced. They've already located in search of low wages.

DW: President is asking us to trust him, that this time will be different – it's hard to do without seeing and knowing how he'll do it.

Concern: Treaty may include weak sections on environmental protection and labor rights and could expand fossil fuel exports, exacerbating climate change and reinforcing dependence on fossil fuels. The White House is planning on including broad protections against illegal trade in protected species, overfishing, and deforestation, but a leaked draft revealed a framework that lacked meaningful enforcement mechanisms and has drawn the skepticism of major environmental groups. In addition, while the White House insists they are including protections for labor rights, including rights to collective bargaining, limits on child labor, and acceptable working conditions (safe work environments and maximum hours limitations), there are parallel concerns that these clauses will not be adequately enforceable. There is also no chapter on currency manipulation, which is concerning to domestic labor unions as member countries can use artificial currency depreciation to undercut U.S. manufacturing companies.

Obama Response: So when you look at a country like Vietnam, under this agreement, Vietnam would actually, for the first time, have to raise its labor standards. It would have to set a minimum wage. It would have to pass safe workplace laws to protect its workers. It would even have to protect workers' freedom to form unions -- for the very first time. And if Vietnam, or any of the other countries in this trade agreement don't meet these requirements, they'll face meaningful consequences. If you're a country that wants in to this agreement, you have to meet higher standards. If you don't, you're out. If you break the rules, there are actual repercussions.

DW: President is asking us to trust him, that this time will be different – it's hard to do without seeing and knowing how he'll do it. Many legislators who have seen the deal share this concern. Hard not to be skeptical in that context.

Concern: The agreement would likely expand the use of "Investor-State Dispute Settlement" giving investors and international corporations a trans-national forum to seek damages from governments for regulations that expropriate property: The White House has identified these tribunals as vital protection from expropriation for U.S. companies doing business abroad, but Elizabeth Warren and other critics criticize them as potentially allowing global corporations to receive damages, paid for by U.S. taxpayers, from regulations designed to protect consumers but which the company will argue unfairly restrict profits. It is important to note, however, that most companies will continue to challenge rules in U.S. courts in order to overturn the laws all together. ISDS tribunals are only able to award damages, and have never done so in any of the thirteen cases that went to judgment against the United States.

Obama Response: Number four -- critics warn that parts of this deal would undermine American regulation -- food safety, worker safety, even financial regulations. They're making this stuff up. (Applause.) This is just not true. No trade agreement is going to force us to change our laws. This agreement would make sure our companies aren't discriminated against in other countries. We already treat companies from other countries fairly here. But our companies don't always get treated fairly there. So sometimes they need to have some way to settle disputes where it's not subject to the whims of some government bureaucrat in that country. That's important. We want our businesses to succeed in selling over there because that's how our workers will get more jobs here in the United States.

DW: President is asking us to trust him, that this time will be different – it's hard to do without seeing and knowing how he'll do it. People who have seen the deal and don't reflexively distrust him are concerned – hard not to doubt in that context.

Elizabeth Warren's Q and A with Washington Post on TPP and Obama's critique

THE PLUM LINE: What's your response to the latest from President Obama?

SENATOR WARREN: The president said in his Nike speech that he's confident that when people read the agreement for themselves, that they'll see it's a great deal. But the president won't actually let people read the agreement for themselves. It's classified.

PLUM LINE: But don't you get 60 days to review it after the deal is finalized, with the authority to revoke fast track?

WARREN: The president has committed only to letting the public see this deal after Congress votes to authorize fast track. At that point it will be impossible for us to amend the agreement or to block any part of it without tanking the whole TPP. The TPP is basically done. If the president is so confident it's a good deal, he should declassify the text and let people see it before asking Congress to tie its hands on fixing it.

PLUM LINE: Doesn't the current framework allow for the revocation of fast track authority?

WARREN: The whole point about fast track is to grease the skids so that 51 votes will get it through...it takes a majority to get rid of [fast track].

PLUM LINE: The push-back from the administration is that the ISDS will be written in such a way that there is no authority to override Congressional [and other countries'] regulations.

WARREN: If the president has changed ISDS to solve the problem, then the text should be released so that legal experts can look at it.

PLUM LINE: Is there a scenario under which ISDS could be written the way he says it is being written?

WARREN: I've sat with many legal scholars to talk about this issue, and I have not seen a draft that would do what the president says he has already accomplished....Hillary Clinton in her book raised concerns about precisely this issue. Just last week, some of the top legal and economic minds in this country, including the president's mentor from Harvard, Laurence Tribe, and Nobel-prize-winning economist Joe Stiglitz, raised exactly this concern.

PLUM LINE: Is it theoretically possible to write ISDS in a way that precludes it from overriding regulation?

WARREN: It doesn't directly tell countries to repeal regulations. It imposes a financial penalty, which has caused countries to change their regulations...[ISDS mechanisms] never had the authority to override regulations. What they had was the authority to impose a monetary penalty directly against the government and its taxpayers. That's the point at which governments have backed up and said, "we can't afford this, we'll just change the law."

PLUM LINE: You can't envision even in theory a way to structure ISDS that would assuage your concerns?

WARREN: Once a group of independent arbiters, whose decisions cannot be appealed, can issue a money judgment of any size, then the ISDS problem arises....Here's what you could do. If corporations had to go through the same procedures that anyone else has to go through to get the trade deal enforced, then the problem wouldn't exist.

Now, if a labor union says, "Vietnam promised not to work people for a couple of dollars a day, and to raise working conditions, and then failed to do it," they have to get the U.S. government, through the trade rules, to go to Vietnam and prosecute the case. If corporations had to do the same thing, then it would be a level playing field...ISDS gives a special break to giant corporations, a break that nobody else gets.

PLUM LINE: What you're arguing is that six years of fast track, plus ISDS, could ultimately result in the weakening of financial regulations? You're not saying ISDS itself would do that?

WARREN: Absolutely right...six years means that whatever the Obama administration has committed to won't bind the next president. If that president wants to negotiate a trade deal that undercuts Dodd Frank, it will be very hard to stop it.

PLUM LINE: Couldn't a Republican president simply go straight at Dodd Frank? Would this be any easier than that?

WARREN: Absolutely. Because trade will be fast tracked for six years....A direct run at Dodd Frank potentially takes 60 votes in the U.S. Senate. But doing it through trade authority needs to be done with 51 votes.

PLUM LINE: But wouldn't that require a direct change to U.S. legislation?

WARREN: It's possible to punch holes in Dodd Frank without directly repealing it. For example, harmonization of the capital standards and leverage ratios could be adjusted to help the big banks without ever directly contradicting Dodd Frank. But the effects of Dodd Frank would be severely undercut.

PLUM LINE: Is there no scenario under which you ultimately support TPP?

WARREN: Trade deals matter...I am worried about key parts of this trade agreement. I would like to see changes. I believe in trade. I understand that we want to be a nation that trades, that trade creates many benefits for us. But only if done on terms that strengthen the American economy and American worker. ...the American family, because that's what this is really about.

From: de Alwis, Ronalie
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: Carey, Michael; Hagelgans, Andrea; [REDACTED] Walzak, Phil; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: MBDB: Prep for TPA
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 10:35:38 PM

I mean he wants to do it but he is eating and talking to his wife.

Sent from my iPhone

> On May 11, 2015, at 10:34 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
>
> JDC has to go to sleep soon
>
>
>
>> On May 11, 2015, at 10:31 PM, de Alwis, Ronalie <rdealwis@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
>>
>> He wants some more time before joining. He is just talking to FLO and eating. I think another 15 to 20.
>>
>>
>>
>> Ronalie de Alwis
>> Office of the Mayor
>> City of New York
>> Cell:347-952-9525
>>
>> ----- Original Message -----
>> From: de Alwis, Ronalie
>> Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 10:18 PM
>> To: Carey, Michael; Hagelgans, Andrea; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>;
>> [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> Walzak, Phil; Leopold, Elana
>> Subject: MBDB: Prep for TPA
>>
>> Hi all, please join will be ready in 5 mins for this call.
>>
>> Thanks, ronalie
>>
>>
>>
>> Ronalie de Alwis
>> Office of the Mayor
>> City of New York
>> Cell:347-952-9525

From: Walzak, Phil
To: de Alwis, Ronalie; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Cc: Carey, Michael; Hagelgans, Andrea; [REDACTED] Leopold, Elana
Subject: RE: MBDB: Prep for TPA
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 10:55:10 PM

no! wtf?! waiting!

From: de Alwis, Ronalie
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 10:54 PM
To: 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com'
Cc: Carey, Michael; Hagelgans, Andrea; [REDACTED] Walzak, Phil; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: MBDB: Prep for TPA

Is he on?

Ronalie de Alwis
Office of the Mayor
City of New York
Cell:347-952-9525

----- Original Message -----

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 10:36 PM
To: de Alwis, Ronalie
Cc: Carey, Michael; Hagelgans, Andrea; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Walzak, Phil; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: MBDB: Prep for TPA

JDC has to go to sleep soon

> On May 11, 2015, at 10:31 PM, de Alwis, Ronalie <rdealwis@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
>
> He wants some more time before joining. He is just talking to FLO and eating. I think another 15 to > 20.
>
>
>
> Ronalie de Alwis
> Office of the Mayor
> City of New York
> Cell:347-952-9525
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: de Alwis, Ronalie
> Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 10:18 PM
> To: Carey, Michael; Hagelgans, Andrea; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>;
> [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> Walzak, Phil; Leopold, Elana
> Subject: MBDB: Prep for TPA
>
> Hi all, please join will be ready in 5 mins for this call.
>
> Thanks, ronalie
>

- >
- >
- > Ronalie de Alwis
- > Office of the Mayor
- > City of New York
- > Cell:347-952-9525

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
To: B
Cc: Williams, Dominic; ifdc@akpdmmedia.com; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Elizabeth Warren and Rose DeLauro - Boston Globe: Who Is Writing the TPP?
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 10:58:20 PM

OPINION | ELIZABETH WARREN AND ROSA DELAURO

Who is writing the TPP?

By Elizabeth Warren and Rosa DeLauro MAY 11, 2015

CONGRESS IS in an intense debate over trade bills that will shape the course of the US economy for decades. Much of this debate has been characterized as a fight over whether international trade itself creates or destroys American jobs. There is, however, another major concern — that modern “trade” agreements are often less about trade and more about giant multinational corporations finding new ways to rig the economic system to benefit themselves. Hillary Clinton has said that the “United States should be advocating a level and fair playing field, not special favors” for big business, in our trade deals. We agree with this blunt assessment – and believe every member of Congress should consider this carefully before voting to help advance these agreements.

Advocates of the pending Trans-Pacific Partnership, a massive 12-country agreement, sell this proposal as a free trade deal — but the United States already has free trade agreements with half of the countries at the negotiating table, and only five of the treaty’s 29 draft chapters reportedly deal with traditional trade issues. While reducing traditional barriers to trade with countries like Japan will facilitate some international commerce, the TPP is about more than reducing tariffs.

The president argues that the TPP is about who will “write the rules” for 40 percent of the world’s economy — the United States or China. But who is writing the TPP? The text has been classified and the public isn’t permitted to see it, but 28 trade advisory committees have been intimately involved in the negotiations. Of the 566 committee members, 480, or 85 percent, are senior corporate executives or representatives from industry lobbying groups. Many of the advisory committees are made up entirely of industry representatives.

A rigged process leads to a rigged outcome. For evidence of that tilt, look at a key TPP provision:

Investor-State Dispute Settlement where big companies get the right to challenge laws they don't like in front of industry-friendly arbitration panels that sit outside of any court system. Those panels can force taxpayers to write huge checks to big corporations — with no appeals. Workers, environmentalists, and human rights advocates don't get that special right.

Most Americans don't think of the minimum wage or antismoking regulations as trade barriers. But a foreign corporation has used ISDS to sue Egypt because Egypt raised its minimum wage. Phillip Morris has gone after Australia and Uruguay to stop them from implementing rules to cut smoking rates. Under the TPP, companies could use ISDS to challenge these kinds of government policy decisions — including food safety rules.

The president dismisses these concerns, but some of the nation's top experts in law and economics are pushing to drop ISDS provisions from future trade agreements. Economist Joe Stiglitz, Harvard Law professor Laurence Tribe, and others recently noted that “the threat and expense of ISDS proceedings have forced nations to abandon important public policies” and that “laws and regulations enacted by democratically elected officials are put at risk in a process insulated from democratic input.” That was exactly what Germany did in 2011 when it cut back on environmental protections after an ISDS lawsuit.

Congress will soon vote on whether to enact “fast-track” authority to grease the skids for the approval of the TPP and other upcoming trade deals. Clinton has called for trade agreements to “avoid some of the provisions sought by business interests, including our own,” such as ISDS. By definition, massive trade deals like the TPP override domestic laws written, debated, and passed by Congress. If fast-track passes, Congress will have given up its power to strip out any backroom arrangements and special favors like ISDS without tanking the whole deal that contains those giveaways.

We will have also given up our right to strip out whatever other special favors industry can bury in new trade agreements – not just in the TPP, but in potential trade deals for the next six years. Treasury Secretary Jack Lew has testified before Congress that trade negotiations involve “pressure to lower standards” on financial regulations and other public interest laws, and that President Obama has resisted that pressure. But Obama will soon leave office, and he cannot bind a future president. We hope he is succeeded by a Democrat, but if not, this legislation risks giving a future president a powerful tool to undermine public interest regulations under the guise of promoting commerce.

Powerful corporate interests have spent a lot of time and money trying to bend Washington's rules to benefit themselves, and now they want Congress to grease the skids for a TPP deal that corporations have helped write but the public can't see — and for six years of future agreements that haven't even been written. Congress should refuse to vote for any expedited procedures to approve the TPP before the trade agreement is made public. And Congress certainly shouldn't vote for expedited procedures to enact trade deals that don't yet even exist.

Elizabeth Warren is a US senator from Massachusetts. Rosa DeLauro is a US representative from Connecticut.

From: John Del Cecato
To: de Alwis, Ronalie
Cc: Carey, Michael; Hagelgans, Andrea; [REDACTED] Walzak, Phil; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: MBDB: Prep for TPA
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 11:02:03 PM

Yes

> On May 11, 2015, at 10:56 PM, de Alwis, Ronalie <rdealwis@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>
> Is he on?

>
>
>
> Ronalie de Alwis
> Office of the Mayor
> City of New York
> Cell:347-952-9525

> ----- Original Message -----

> From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
> Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 10:36 PM
> To: de Alwis, Ronalie
> Cc: Carey, Michael; Hagelgans, Andrea; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Walzak, Phil; Leopold, Elana
> Subject: Re: MBDB: Prep for TPA

> JDC has to go to sleep soon

>> On May 11, 2015, at 10:31 PM, de Alwis, Ronalie <rdealwis@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>>
>> He wants some more time before joining. He is just talking to FLO and eating. I think another 15 to 20.

>>
>>
>>
>> Ronalie de Alwis
>> Office of the Mayor
>> City of New York
>> Cell:347-952-9525

>> ----- Original Message -----

>> From: de Alwis, Ronalie
>> Sent: Monday, May 11, 2015 10:18 PM
>> To: Carey, Michael; Hagelgans, Andrea; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>;
[REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> Walzak, Phil; Leopold, Elana
>> Subject: MBDB: Prep for TPA

>> Hi all, please join will be ready in 5 mins for this call.

>>
>> Thanks, ronalie

>>
>>
>>

>> Ronalie de Alwis
>> Office of the Mayor
>> City of New York
>> Cell:347-952-9525

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Fw: Test
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 11:07:32 PM

Fyi. Use the line he bolds below

-----Original Message-----

From: Van Jones
To: Bill de Blasio
Subject: Re: Test
Sent: May 8, 2015 6:38 PM

I will work with your team to find a good time tomorrow.
I apologize for not tracking the documents; we are putting together this Prince concert on Sunday, and I have been consumed with that and other Baltimore-related issues.
But I am not the only black leader who will be disappointed to see the key economic issue that is crushing our dreams omitted from a Bill DiBlasio document.
Women's, students' and immigrants' economic issues are rightfully included. But not the economic issue that has propelled the #BlackLivesMatter onto the global stage?
Why not include a simple bullet point on Families saying: "Invest in "schools not jails" -- and give people coming home from prison a second chance."

No economic vision that fails to address the mass incarceration crisis can be called progressive. Everyone from Cory Booker to the Koch Brothers (who are also not running for higher office) is embracing this cause. Even Hillary Clinton and Rand Paul!
You are the populist leader of the movement for economic justice. If YOU sideline or marginalize overly-incarcerated populations in YOUR economic vision, what does that say?
Please: as the most important economic champion in America, I implore you to acknowledge the economic crisis brought about by the New Jim Crow -- in the same way you are embracing the agenda of women, immigrants and students.
You know that I am your most passionate supporter -- because I know you are the only national leader who can credibly make the case for ALL of America's economic victims. That's who you represent in NYC.
I told Bloomberg News: "When we had a national security crisis, a NYC mayor stepped up to help the whole country. Now we have an national economic crisis, and a NYC mayor is stepping up again. That's Bill DiBlasio."
I believe in you, 110%. Pray about this, please. I will, too. And let's talk tomorrow. Van

Sent from my iPhone (TM)
On May 8, 2015, at 2:57 PM, "Bill de Blasio" < wrote:

Van, did you get this? Thanks - Bill

Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Subject: Re: Let's move forward
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 11:27:21 PM

[REDACTED]

Here's how I frame it to Heather, Deepak, and Peter - who all were satisfied - as I expect everyone else in Van's World will be.

=====

Here's what will happen.

1. MBDB will announce during his kick-off remarks that the document we have represents the first step - but that we spoken to members of our coalition in recent days about a few other key issues - from expanding Social Security, to debt-free college, to tackling mass incarceration.
2. We're committed to those issues as well, and will be working to add those topics to the agenda going forward.
3. The document you see here is the work of weeks of conversations, discussions, etc - it's a basis from which we're starting.
4. Starting Tuesday night, I need your help in crafting the best possible language (big and bold - but also language that we can connect to a specific policy) on each of these matters.
5. Assuming we get that done pretty quickly (and I think we will), on Wednesday, we will send out to the full coalition (including a bunch of new signers - this thing keeps growing and growing - good news!)
6. Our HOPE is that everyone will sign on in relatively short order. But we DO have to have a process here - MBDB was clear about that. We cannot appear to be just foisting them on this. I don't FORESEE any issues - but if there are holdouts, I'm going to need you guys to help me get them on board as soon as possible. We really don't want to lose folks, if at all possible.
7. I'm hopeful that we can get answers quickly - but some of these organizations take some time, have to run by their boards, etc. So that's why I hesitate saying it will be totally done by Friday - but MBDB thought if we all buckled down & pushed hard (but politely), we could get a lot of responses very quickly - so let's make Friday our GOAL.

On 5/11/15, 11:06 PM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>
>Fyi
>
>-----Original Message-----

>From: Van Jones
>To: Bill de Blasio
>Subject: Let's move forward
>Sent: May 11, 2015 10:49 PM
>
>Mr. Mayor:
>
>Thank you for taking time to address the concerns that I and others have >raised about The Progressive Agenda -- both the process and >document-to-date.
>
>I have been in communication with numerous allies, including Deepak, >Heather and Katrina from the original Gracie Mansion lunch. I have also >talked with Rep. Keith Ellison, the Rev. Al Sharpton, Ben Jealous, Rashad >Robinson from Color of Change and many other leaders from the >African-American community in particular.
>
>After you and I talked today, I conveyed to them the following:
>
>1. You will not change the document in time for tomorrow's event.
>
>2. But you will announce at tomorrow's event that this document is a >work-in-progress -- and that the coalition will strengthen the agenda by >the end of the week to include ideas like criminal justice reform, >debt-free college and social security.
>
>3. You will speak tomorrow specifically to the need for criminal justice >reform as a part of economic justice, and so will I. You welcome >suggestions for language to include in your remarks.
>
>4. Independent of The Progressive Agenda, you want to hear additional >ways that you personally can promote criminal justice reform.
>
>We all agree that your proposal represents a constructive offer and a >good-faith attempt to accommodate the many concerns that people have >raised inside and outside of this process.
>
>Therefore, we do want to move forward. At the end of the week, we will >re-evaluate whether sufficient progress has been made to remain >supportive of this effort. In the meantime, all parties will continue >working in their various ways to strengthen and improve the Agenda.
>
>I will be in touch with you in the late morning, with some suggestions on >the criminal justice side.
>
>In closing: thank you for your leadership. We look forward to doing all >we can to build trust and momentum in the days, weeks and months to come.
>
>Van
>
>
>--
>Check out our work: www.thedreamcorps.org
>#YesWeCode: www.yeswecode.org #cut50: www.cut50.org #GreenForAll:
>www.greenforall.org Follow ME: <http://twitter.com/VanJones68>
>You are a miracle. Nothing is impossible.
>

From: Leopold, Elana
To: Williams, Dominic
Cc: John Cecato
Subject: Re: TPP Backgrounder, Qs and As
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 6:17:42 AM

Will do

Sent from my iPhone

- > On May 11, 2015, at 10:05 PM, Williams, Dominic <DWilliams@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
- >
- > There is a 4 page document attached to this e-mail.
- > Pages 1 and 2 are a backgrounder on the debate over TPP
- > Page 3 highlights some key concerns we raise on TPP, Obama's exact response, and what we think of it
- > Page 4 is a transcript of an interview with Elizabeth Warren, where the reporter channels Obama, and Warren responds.
- >
- > EL – can you print a copy to travel with for me please?
- > <TPP Backgrounder.docx>

From: John Del Cecato
To: Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Clean, updated packet
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 6:33:49 AM

Yes

On May 12, 2015, at 6:21 AM, Leopold, Elana <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

This is final- correct? These are the remarks I have printed for this morning

Sent from my iPhone

On May 11, 2015, at 3:20 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

<MBDBremarksRoosevelt.docx>

<TPA Q&A.docx>

<TPA BACKGROUNDER .docx>

<BriefingMemo-RooseveltEvent.docx>

From: John Del Cecato
To: Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: TPA opening remarks
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 6:33:51 AM

3pm

> On May 12, 2015, at 6:20 AM, Leopold, Elana <ELEopold@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
>
> What is this for?
>
> Sent from my iPhone
>
>> On May 11, 2015, at 8:12 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
>>
>>
>> <BDB TPA KICK OFF.docx>

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Freeman, Demetrius
Cc: Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: Need your bday ASAP
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 6:53:52 AM

Am at gate :)

----- Original Message -----

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 06:53 AM
To: Freeman, Demetrius
Cc: Leopold, Elana; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Re: Need your bday ASAP

██████████

> On May 12, 2015, at 6:45 AM, Freeman, Demetrius <DFreeman@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
>
> ██████████
>
> Sent from my iPhone
>
>> On May 12, 2015, at 6:42 AM, Leopold, Elana <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
>>
>> Detail just told me they need DOB for everyone on the flight this morning
>>
>> Can you please send? Thanks!
>>
>> Sent from my iPhone

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: Leopold, Elana
Cc: Freeman, Demetrius; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Re: Need your bday ASAP
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 6:59:38 AM

Curses

----- Original Message -----

From: Leopold, Elana
Sent: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 06:55 AM
To: Hagelgans, Andrea
Cc: Freeman, Demetrius; jfdc@akpdmedia.com <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: Need your bday ASAP

Ha- I am [REDACTED]

Sent from my iPhone

> On May 12, 2015, at 6:54 AM, Hagelgans, Andrea <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

> Demetrius, you just made me feel so old.

>

> ----- Original Message -----

> From: Hagelgans, Andrea
> Sent: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 06:53 AM
> To: Freeman, Demetrius; Leopold, Elana
> Cc: 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
> Subject: Re: Need your bday ASAP

>

> [REDACTED]

>

> ----- Original Message -----

> From: Freeman, Demetrius
> Sent: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 06:43 AM
> To: Leopold, Elana
> Cc: Hagelgans, Andrea; John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
> Subject: Re: Need your bday ASAP

>

> [REDACTED]

>

> Sent from my iPhone

>

>> On May 12, 2015, at 6:42 AM, Leopold, Elana <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>>

>> Detail just told me they need DOB for everyone on the flight this morning

>>

>> Can you please send? Thanks!

>>

>> Sent from my iPhone

From: Leopold, Elana
To: Hagelgans, Andrea
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com; Freeman, Demetrius
Subject: Re: Help please
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 7:23:04 AM

You're the best! Thank you

We are en route now

Sent from my iPhone

> On May 12, 2015, at 7:22 AM, Hagelgans, Andrea <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
>
> On it
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Leopold, Elana
> Sent: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 07:21 AM
> To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Freeman, Demetrius; Hagelgans, Andrea > Subject: Help please
>
> Dear friends-
>
> We are running late and the mayor wants breakfast- he would like an oatmeal with raisins and skim milk and double espresso w 4 sugars from starbucks if there is one or somewhere else
>
> Can someone get- pretty please??
>
> Thank you!
>
> Sent from my iPhone

From: Leopold, Elana
To: Hagelgans, Andrea
Cc: jfdc@akpdmedia.com; Freeman, Demetrius
Subject: Re: Help please
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 7:23:22 AM

Ya I cringe every time I have to get

Sent from my iPhone

> On May 12, 2015, at 7:22 AM, Hagelgans, Andrea <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
>
> Though I am opposed to 4 sugars
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Leopold, Elana
> Sent: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 07:21 AM
> To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Freeman, Demetrius; Hagelgans, Andrea > Subject: Help please
>
> Dear friends-
>
> We are running late and the mayor wants breakfast- he would like an oatmeal with raisins and skim milk and double espresso w 4 sugars from starbucks if there is one or somewhere else
>
> Can someone get- pretty please??
>
> Thank you!
>
> Sent from my iPhone

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Subject: <no subject>
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 7:38:28 AM

DRAFT REMARKS
TPA KICK-OFF
5/12/15

I'm New York Mayor Bill de Blasio, and I want to thank so many of my fellow progressives – mayors, Members of the House and Senate, labor leaders, civil rights champions, and top progressive activists for joining us here today.

Six weeks ago, I convened a small group of progressive leaders in New York City to discuss the central crisis of our times – and that is income inequality.

We pledged to reach out to hundreds of our fellow progressives and work together to generate a serious, bold set of solutions to that crisis.

So today, we are announcing, and signing onto, “The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality.”

These 13 progressive ideas will make an enormous difference in combatting income inequality – BOLD steps like a $15 minimum wage...national paid sick and family leave laws...universal Pre-K, after-school and child care...closing the tax loopholes that CEOs, hedge fund managers, and billionaires use to avoid paying their fair share.

The Progressive Agenda is a bold first step. And there will be more to come.

I've spoken to some of the folks assembled here about the next steps in this process – covering issues that range from an expansion of Social Security...to debt-free college... investing in schools, not jails...and giving people returning home from prison a second chance at an economic future. We look forward to adding to what we're unveiling today.

The Progressive Agenda comes down to a very simple concept. America needs economic policies that reward WORK...and not just wealth.

And here's why.

There's something happening out there...an urgent call for change...given voice by everyday people across this country. Just last month, more than 60,000 people took to the streets in 200 cities – all fighting for a higher minimum wage.

This isn't business as usual. It's a new politics that puts PEOPLE ahead of profits...that values WORK instead of wealth. We'll be calling on candidates and elected officials to stiffen their backbones, champion the progressive policies that our nation needs...and join our growing cause.

We also ask everyday people across America to join us...to sign up at our website – Progressive Agenda DOT U-S.

And while you're there, check out the beautiful statement of support written on behalf of our cause by the venerable Toni Morrison – whose words continue to enlighten and inspire so many Americans.

Now, let me turn the microphone over to someone who knows a little something about progressive values -- former DNC Chairman, Governor Howard Dean.

From: Hayley Prim
To: B; John Del Cecato
Subject: Re: Question
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 8:06:42 AM

Website info:

<http://progressiveagenda.us>

username: [REDACTED]

password: [REDACTED]

On Tue, May 12, 2015 at 8:05 AM, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

And what is the user name and password for the www.progressiveagenda.us website? I want to take a look. Thanks

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 08:03 AM
To: B
Subject: Re: Question

Yes! We a whole website up and ready for launch at 3pm

On Tuesday, May 12, 2015, B <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Did we try to buy a "TPA" domain name?

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: Carey, Michael
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: Liz Hegarty
Subject: Re: <no subject>
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 8:19:51 AM

Ross will be there too

Michael Paul Carey
City Hall
New York, New York

> On May 12, 2015, at 5:36 AM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

>

> Well, I should prob staff him at tech event Fri AM

>

>

>

>> On May 12, 2015, at 5:31 AM, Carey, Michael <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>>

>> You could take red eye on thurs night but that is kinda cray cray.

>>

>>

>> Michael Paul Carey

>> City Hall

>> New York, New York

>>

>>> On May 12, 2015, at 5:14 AM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

>>>

>>> Actually Peter hasn't gotten us any sits owns yet. I think they will just be pull asides at Reich and Santa Clara Thurs

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>> On May 12, 2015, at 4:32 AM, Carey, Michael <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>>>>

>>>> Not if we do media. But noon should work.

>>>>

>>>>

>>>> Michael Paul Carey

>>>> City Hall

>>>> New York, New York

>>>>

>>>>> On May 11, 2015, at 10:22 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

>>>>>

>>>>> Instead of that redeye flight from SF to NYC on Friday - can I leave earlier? I think I am done by noon or so (Pacific Time) with BDB?

From: Walzak, Phil
To: B; Hagelgans, Andrea; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com;"
Subject: Fw: NYT: Report by Clinton Adviser Proposes 'Rewriting' Decades of Economic Policy
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 8:21:46 AM

From: Clips
Sent: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 08:18 AM
Subject: NYT: Report by Clinton Adviser Proposes 'Rewriting' Decades of Economic Policy

Report by Clinton Adviser Proposes 'Rewriting' Decades of Economic Policy

NY TIMES - Amy Chozick

<http://www.nytimes.com/politics/first-draft/2015/05/12/report-by-clinton-adviser-proposes-rewriting-decades-of-economic-policy/>

Hillary Rodham Clinton has not yet presented her economic agenda, but one of the economists she has turned to for advice has published an aggressive blueprint for rewriting 35 years of policies that he says have led to a vast concentration of wealth among the richest Americans and an increasingly squeezed middle class.

"It's not just a matter of redistribution," said Joseph E. Stiglitz, a Nobel laureate in economics who has been an influential adviser to the Clinton campaign and will present his report on Tuesday. "Rewriting the rules of our market economy would reduce inequalities in market incomes."

The report, published by the Roosevelt Institute, a liberal think tank in Washington where Mr. Stiglitz is chief economist, will likely influence Mrs. Clinton's agenda.

Several proposals by Mr. Stiglitz, including raising taxes on capital gains and a push to make corporations less focused on short-term quarterly returns, are in line with what Mrs. Clinton is expected to embrace in her campaign.

She has already spoken about other proposals in the report, like reforming the criminal justice system, an immigration overhaul and paid sick and family leave

But the thrust of the report, titled "Rewriting the Rules of the American Economy: An Agenda for Growth and Shared Prosperity" and scheduled to be presented at a panel discussion in Washington, is a scathing indictment of 35 years of economic policies. (Besides Mr. Stiglitz, scheduled panel participants include Senator Elizabeth Warren of Massachusetts, Mayor Bill de Blasio of New York and other liberal leaders.)

In an interview, Mr. Stiglitz said it was not just "trickle down" economics associated with Republicans that have caused inequality, but policies advanced during the Clinton administration, in which he served as chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers.

"I was there when some of the decisions were made, and some of them were made in good faith," Mr. Stiglitz said. "But here we are, and let's not point fingers."

Mrs. Clinton has talked about the perils of "short termism," when corporations participate in stock buybacks rather than investing in employees and communities. The report proposes closing performance-based tax loopholes for chief executive compensation and enacting a financial transaction tax to reduce short-term trading.

In the interview, Mr. Stiglitz called such policies “predistribution,” which has a somewhat less stinging political connotation than redistribution. “It’s about how our market functions before taxes,” he said, though the proposal includes overhauls to the tax system.

The report, he said, is larger than any presidential candidate or administration and is designed to urge leaders in both parties to fundamentally rethink the decades of policies that have led to 15 years of stagnant wages for middle-class earners and an economy that favors the wealthiest Americans.

“If somebody said, ‘I have this wonderful idea of a new economic policy that will ensure over the next quarter century that people at the top get all the gains and people in the middle see their income stagnate and people at the bottom see their wages shrink,’ you can’t imagine people saying ‘Oh, that sounds like a great idea,’” Mr. Stiglitz said.

From: Carey, Michael
To: Rebecca Katz \(hilltoppublicsolutions.com\)
Cc: John Del Cecato
Subject: Re: Times for reporters
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 8:28:03 AM

130 and 200
We only have one room at office.

Michael Paul Carey
City Hall
New York, New York

On May 12, 2015, at 7:26 AM, Rebecca Katz <rkatz@hilltoppublicsolutions.com> wrote:

What's the final word? need to make sure they are there on time.

Would also be good if in different rooms so they don't all see each other there.

--

Rebecca Kirszner Katz
(718) 858-7161 — work
[REDACTED] — cell
@RebeccaKatz

From: Carey, Michael
To: Liz Hegarty
Subject: Tomorrow
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 8:43:57 AM

Can u send me JDC flight confirmation to SF
Need to get him checked in with mayor.

Michael Paul Carey
City Hall
New York, New York

From: John Del Cecato
To: Leopold, Elana; Carey, Michael; Snyder, Thomas; Wolfe, Emma; Williams, Dominic; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; [\[REDACTED\]](#) Aaron PickrellEmail; John Davis; Hayley Prim
Subject: revised speech - needs to be printed on site
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 9:11:52 AM
Attachments: MBDBremarksRooseveltFINAL.docx

Who can print in big font & get printed for BDB, with page numbers?

DRAFT REMARKS 6
Roosevelt Institute event
Tuesday, May 12th
10:35 AM – 10:50 AM (15 minutes)

- Thank you to Felicia Wong for that very kind introduction, and for your tremendous leadership as CEO and President of the Roosevelt Institute.
- I also want to thank Dr. Joseph Stiglitz, not only for producing this incredibly important, through-provoking analysis for rewriting the rules of our modern economy, but also for his advice and support.
- I also want to thank Senator Elizabeth Warren for her tireless advocacy on behalf of middle-class people – not just in her time as Senator, but for nearly four DECADES – as an academic, as a regulator, as a policy expert and advisor. Like many of you, I’m inspired by her brilliance, her passion, and her lifelong dedication to challenging the most powerful interests on behalf of those whose voices too often go unheard.
- I also want to applaud the Roosevelt Institute for the invaluable contribution that they make to the public discourse, particularly on the matter that’s been discussed today – thinking big and bold about what it takes to fundamentally change the way our economy works...to ensure that we are creating a more just society...a place where EVERYONE gets a shot at a better life.
- I’m so proud to serve 8.5 million people as mayor of the greatest city on Earth.
- I ran for mayor in 2013 with a promise to tackle what I believed then – and still believe today – is the crisis of our times – and that is income inequality.
- I often spoke of the Tale of Two Cities that New York had become, particularly since the Great Recession had ended. We’re home to Wall Street, which has come roaring back – breaking record after record. At the same time, 46 percent of our population was living at or near the poverty line.
- I said that needed to change – not just because this vast inequality posed a threat to those who were struggling...not simply because those in the middle class felt more and more anxious about staying IN the middle class...but because living in a Gilded City was a threat to EVERY New Yorker...a threat to what made New York so great for so many generations prior.
- So we set out to do something about it, and we achieved some real successes – universal, full-day Pre-K...for every single child who wants it. We more than DOUBLED the number of young people with access to after-school programs.

- We secured paid sick leave for 500,000 additional New Yorkers. We extended the living wage to thousands more. More than 190,000 New Yorkers now have a municipal ID – and that number is rapidly growing.
- And this year, we’re pushing the most ambitious municipal affordable housing plan in U.S. history – committing ourselves to building or preserving 200,000 units of affordable housing, and requiring – for the first time ever – that developers include affordable housing as a CONDITION of building in New York.
- AND we have pledged to end poverty for 800,000 New Yorkers over the next ten years. Nothing defines the fight against inequality more than lifting people out of poverty.
- We’ve got a very long way to go, but we’re tackling inequality every way we know how – with every tool at our disposal.
- I’m here today because the fight to lift up struggling New Yorkers, and to help rebuild New York’s middle class, doesn’t end at the borders of my city. What happens in Washington – or doesn’t happen – makes an enormous difference to my 8.5 million constituents back home.
- When Franklin Roosevelt created the New Deal, he relied upon many policies first developed in states and cities across America. His collaboration with my predecessor, New York Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, defined that era’s commitment to solving the challenge of economic inequality at every level of government.
- Governors, mayors, city and state legislatures – we all have the opportunity to incubate ideas at the local level, and create momentum for real, progressive national change.
- Today, the economic moment -- and the political momentum -- have converged. And NOW is the time for our country to enact bold structural changes to rebuild our middle class -- like many of the steps that Dr. Stiglitz is proposing today.
- In a word, we need an economy that rewards WORK and not just wealth.
- That means lifting the floor for working people – raising the minimum wage, strengthening the rights of workers to organize, and cracking down on wage theft.

- It means supporting working parents and their families – with paid sick and paid family leave; providing Pre-K and after-school programs and child care; and helping students graduate from college without a mountain of debt hanging over their heads.
- And yes, it means REAL, BOLD efforts to make our tax system more fair – closing tax loopholes that big corporations and the wealthy use to take their massive profits and wealth...and simply pile up greater profits and wealth for themselves.
- Just one example: the carried interest loophole that allows billionaire hedge fund managers to pay a lower overall tax rate than the hardworking men and women who clean their summer homes, or pilot their private jets. That loophole needs to be closed NOW.
- Now you've heard why this sort of thing is possible. It's because the system is rigged to benefit those at the top – and to leave everybody else behind.
- We want to rewrite those rules – not to punish success, but to create more success stories.
- We want every child to grow up in a society that says: “if you're willing to work hard, you've got a chance to live your dreams.”
- For generations, that was the promise of my city of New York. It was the definition of the American dream. But for too many, that promise...that dream...has steadily slipped away.
- And that's why we have to stand together. Progressive economists, activists, academics, elected officials, and everyday Americans in all fifty states.
- And you know what? The American people are already there.
- In 2014, four so-called “Red States” passed a minimum wage increase.
- Just look at the Fight for 15 – a massive movement in 200 cities, with more than 60,000 people taking to the streets to fight for a minimum wage.
- It's time for those of us in elected office to hear THEIR voices...and to follow THEIR lead.
- It was Franklin Roosevelt himself who said QUOTE: “Let us not be afraid to help each other. Let us never forget that government is ourselves and not an alien power over us. The ultimate rulers of our democracy are not a President and Senators and Congressmen and government officials but the voters of this country. END QUOTE.

- So as one government official – let me say this. The crisis of economic inequality is massive. But it is well within our power to take it head on, and a make a real difference.
- And we won't do it from the top-down. That never works.
- We'll do it as a progressive force...city by city, neighborhood by neighborhood...listening to the people who sent us to make the change for which they hunger.
- Answering THEIR call...their DEMAND...that we create a more just nation, and an economy that works for EVERYONE again.
- Thank you.

###

From: Leopold, Elana
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: Carey, Michael; Snyder, Thomas; Wolfe, Emma; Williams, Dominic; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Aaron PickrellEmail; John Davis; Hayley Prim; Grybauskas, Stefan
Subject: Re: revised speech - needs to be printed on site
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 9:12:37 AM

+ sg

Sent from my iPhone

> On May 12, 2015, at 9:11 AM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
>
> Who can print in big font & get printed for BDB, with page numbers?
> <MBDBremarksRooseveltFINAL.docx>

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Leopold, Elana; Carey, Michael; Snyder, Thomas; Wolfe, Emma; Williams, Dominic; Walzak, Phil; [REDACTED]; [REDACTED]; [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: revised speech - needs to be printed on site
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 9:12:46 AM

He liked 18 point font

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 09:13 AM
To: Leopold, Elana; Carey, Michael; Snyder, Thomas; Wolfe, Emma; Williams, Dominic; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> Aaron PickrellEmail
<[REDACTED]> John Davis <[REDACTED]> Hayley Prim
<[REDACTED]>
Subject: revised speech - needs to be printed on site

Who can print in big font & get printed for BDB, with page numbers?

From: John Del Cecato
To: Hayley Prim
Cc: [REDACTED] John Davis; Rebecca Kirszner Katz; Grybauskas, Stefan; Aaron Pickrell
Subject: Re: Printing
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 9:21:40 AM
Attachments: MBDBremarksRooseveltFINAL.docx
Importance: High

Here is final for printing

From: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 at 9:16 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: "[REDACTED]" <[REDACTED]> John Davis <[REDACTED]>
Rebecca Katz <[REDACTED]> Stefan Grybauskas <sgrybauskas@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Aaron PickrellEmail <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: Printing

+ Stefan and Aaron (who I think are both there)

On Tue, May 12, 2015 at 9:12 AM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

Gonna need someone to print Bdb remarks at national press club - sending as soon as I get in car and can connect laptop to iPhone hotspot

> On May 12, 2015, at 8:20 AM, jeani murray <[REDACTED]> wrote:

>

> Send me whatever you need printed for today. Will print and bring with me. Thx!

--

Hayley Prim

c: [REDACTED]

DRAFT REMARKS
Mayor Bill de Blasio
Roosevelt Institute event
Tuesday, May 12th
10:35 AM – 10:50 AM (15 minutes)

- Thank you to Felicia Wong for that very kind introduction, and for your tremendous leadership as CEO and President of the Roosevelt Institute.
- I also want to thank Dr. Joseph Stiglitz, not only for producing this incredibly important, through-provoking analysis for rewriting the rules of our modern economy, but also for his advice and support.
- I also want to thank Senator Elizabeth Warren for her tireless advocacy on behalf of middle-class people – not just in her time as Senator, but for nearly four DECADES – as an academic, as a regulator, as a policy expert and advisor. Like many of you, I’m inspired by her brilliance, her passion, and her lifelong dedication to challenging the most powerful interests on behalf of those whose voices too often go unheard.
- I also want to applaud the Roosevelt Institute for the invaluable contribution that they make to the public discourse, particularly on the matter that’s been discussed today – thinking big and bold about what it takes to fundamentally change the way our economy works...to ensure that we are creating a more just society...a place where EVERYONE gets a shot at a better life.
- I’m so proud to serve 8.5 million people as mayor of the greatest city on Earth.

- I ran for mayor in 2013 with a promise to tackle what I believed then – and still believe today – is the crisis of our times – and that is income inequality.
- I often spoke of the Tale of Two Cities that New York had become, particularly since the Great Recession had ended. We're home to Wall Street, which has come roaring back – breaking record after record. At the same time, 46 percent of our population was living at or near the poverty line.
- I said that needed to change – not just become this vast inequality posed a threat to those who were struggling...not simply because those in the middle class felt more and more anxious about staying IN the middle class...but because living in a Gilded City was a threat to EVERY New Yorker...a threat to what made New York so great for so many generations prior.
- So we set out to do something about it, and we achieved some real successes – universal, full-day Pre-K...for every single child who wants it. We more than DOUBLED the number of young people with access to after-school programs.
- We secured paid sick leave for 500,000 additional New Yorkers. We extended the living wage to thousands more. More than 190,000 New Yorkers now have a municipal ID – and that number is rapidly growing.
- And this year, we're pushing the most ambitious municipal affordable housing plan in U.S. history – committing ourselves to building or preserving 200,000 units of affordable housing, and requiring – for the first time ever – that developers include affordable housing as a CONDITION of building in New York.

- AND we have pledged to end poverty for 800,000 New Yorkers over the next ten years. Nothing defines the fight against inequality more than lifting people out of poverty.
- We've got a very long way to go, but we're tackling inequality every way we know how – with every tool at our disposal.
- I'm here today because the fight to lift up struggling New Yorkers, and to help rebuild New York's middle class, doesn't end at the borders of my city. What happens in Washington – or doesn't happen – makes an enormous difference to my 8.5 million constituents back home.
- When Franklin Roosevelt created the New Deal, he relied upon many policies first developed in states and cities across America. His collaboration with my predecessor, New York Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, defined that era's commitment to solving the challenge of economic inequality at every level of government.
- Governors, mayors, city and state legislatures – we all have the opportunity to incubate ideas at the local level, and create momentum for real, progressive national change.
- Today, the economic moment -- and the political momentum -- have converged. And NOW is the time for our country to enact bold structural changes to rebuild our middle class -- like many of the steps that Dr. Stiglitz is proposing today.

- In a word, we need an economy that rewards WORK and not just wealth.
- That means lifting the floor for working people – raising the minimum wage, strengthening the rights of workers to organize, and cracking down on wage theft.
- It means supporting working parents and their families – with paid sick and paid family leave; providing Pre-K and after-school programs and child care; and helping students graduate from college without a mountain of debt hanging over their heads.
- And yes, it means REAL, BOLD efforts to make our tax system more fair – closing tax loopholes that big corporations and the wealthy use to take their massive profits and wealth...and simply pile up greater profits and wealth for themselves.
- Just one example: the carried interest loophole that allows billionaire hedge fund managers to pay a lower overall tax rate than the hardworking men and women who clean their summer homes, or pilot their private jets. That loophole needs to be closed NOW.
- Now you've heard why this sort of thing is possible. It's because the system is rigged to benefit those at the top – and to leave everybody else behind.
- We want to rewrite those rules – not to punish success, but to create more success stories.

- We want every child to grow up in a society that says: “if you’re willing to work hard, you’ve got a chance to live your dreams.”
- For generations, that was the promise of my city of New York. It was the definition of the American dream. But for too many, that promise...that dream...has steadily slipped away.
- And that’s why we have to stand together. Progressive economists, activists, academics, elected officials, and everyday Americans in all fifty states.
- And you know what? The American people are already there.
- In 2014, four so-called “Red States” passed a minimum wage increase.
- Just look at the Fight for 15 – a massive movement in 200 cities, with more than 60,000 people taking to the streets to fight for a minimum wage.
- It’s time for those of us in elected office to hear THEIR voices...and to follow THEIR lead.
- It was Franklin Roosevelt himself who said QUOTE: “Let us not be afraid to help each other. Let us never forget that government is ourselves and not an alien power over us. The ultimate rulers of our democracy are not a President and Senators and Congressmen and government officials but the voters of this country. END QUOTE.
- So as one government official – let me say this. The crisis of economic inequality is massive. But it is well within our power to take it head on, and a make a real difference.

- And we won't do it from the top-down. That never works.
- We'll do it as a progressive force...city by city, neighborhood by neighborhood...listening to the people who sent us to make the change for which they hunger.
- Answering THEIR call...their DEMAND...that we create a more just nation, and an economy that works for EVERYONE again.
- Thank you.

###

From: B
To: Hagelgans, Andrea
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma; Leopold, Elana; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; FLONYC; Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Re: Sandra lee breast cancer
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 9:23:06 AM

Yes, do statement pls asap

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
Sent: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 09:17 AM
To: B
Cc: Walzak, Phil; Wolfe, Emma; Leopold, Elana; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; FLONYC; Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Sandra lee breast cancer

Sir- Sandra Lee just revealed she has breast cancer. Assume we should do a call and/or statement of support

From: Mayor's Press Office
Sent: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 09:14 AM
To: @Incoming
Subject: FW: STATEMENT FROM GOVERNOR ANDREW M. CUOMO

From: Press Office [<mailto:Press.Office@exec.ny.gov>]
Sent: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 9:11 AM
To: Mayor's Press Office
Subject: STATEMENT FROM GOVERNOR ANDREW M. CUOMO

For Immediate Release: 5/12/2015

GOVERNOR ANDREW M. CUOMO

STATEMENT FROM GOVERNOR ANDREW M. CUOMO

"A few weeks ago we received terrible news. Sandy shared with me that she was diagnosed with breast cancer. I was devastated. After the news what followed was a blizzard of doctors visits, tests and discussions of treatment options. Sandy is young for her diagnosis, she has no family history, she is healthy and had no symptoms or signals that she was in danger. She has been diligent about going for check-ups and thankfully this was detected in the early stages.

A situation like this quickly puts life in the proper perspective and reminds one of what's truly important. To that end, I expect to take some personal time because I want to be with Sandy to support her in any way I can as she handles the trauma of her operation and the pain of the recovery.

For those of you familiar with Sandy's life story it will not surprise you that she has met this latest challenge with determination, resolve and grace. She never ceases to amaze me. While she has kept her illness private until now, Sandy has bravely decided to speak openly about her illness in order to remind women of the potentially lifesaving power of early detection. I fully support her decision.

With heartfelt gratitude for your kind wishes and support, Sandy and I hope and pray to bring you good news of her strong recovery soon."

###

Additional news available at www.governor.ny.gov
New York State | Executive Chamber | press.office@exec.ny.gov | 518.474.8418

From: B
To: Hagelgans, Andrea; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Cc: Walzak, Phil
Subject: Re: Criminal Justice: "This cause matters": Requests & suggestions
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 9:25:57 AM

Much appreciated. Just pls get language sign-off from me or JDC. Thanks

----- Original Message -----

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
Sent: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 09:19 AM
To: B; 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: Walzak, Phil
Subject: Re: Criminal Justice: "This cause matters": Requests & suggestions

I think we can also tee up in QandA and also do it online through twitter.

Phil, can someone in press office work on statement language?

----- Original Message -----

From: B
Sent: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 09:17 AM
To: 'jfdc@akpdmedia.com' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Hagelgans, Andrea Subject: Fw: Criminal Justice: "This cause matters": Requests & suggestions

I need to figure out a way to get this out today separately from my brief remarks. And obviously want to include Sharpton, and perhaps Heather McGhee and Deepak Bhargava. This is important to our coalition-building strategy. And much of his language is accurate and reflects what I want to work on, and what I've told Van I want to make public. Is there a smart way to do this as a formal statement asap?

-----Original Message-----

From: Van Jones
To: Bill de Blasio
Cc: John Del Cecato
Subject: Criminal Justice: "This cause matters": Requests & suggestions
Sent: May 12, 2015 9:01 AM

I am sorry. It took me some time to get buy-in from our many colleagues.

I have bolded the phrases that seem to be are key for your allies -- and for me. I added some language that I think would have real power coming from you.

Of course, in all cases, we trust and leave to your best judgment the final wording.

But please do consider announcing something like this today:

"As proud as we are of our work today, I want to acknowledge that this document still has room for some improvements.

So I will be working personally with coalition members this week to strengthen the document -- to include ideas like debt free college, expanding social security and criminal justice reform.

And on that last point: let me say this.

For the young people demonstrating -- mostly peacefully -- from Ferguson, to NYC, to Baltimore, the issues of excessive criminalization and over-incarceration are not just civil rights issues. They are squarely economic issues.

For example, blacks are six times more likely to go to prison for using marijuana than whites -- even though both groups use marijuana at exactly the same rate.

Those prison sentences add up to a big economic impact on black families. It makes it harder for them get into the middle class and stay there.

Then, when a family member comes home, he or she often finds that she cannot get a job, rent an apartment or even get a student loan. She remains trapped in an economic prison -- possibly for the rest of her life.

Many dollars spent on prisons and jails might have been better spent on education and jobs, in the first place.

That's why the need to end mass incarceration has become the great cause of a rising generation.

It should become a great cause for all of us, too.

Therefore, I want to announce something that is important to me.

In addition to my work with this coalition, I will be working closely with Van Jones, Ben Jealous and others to help ensure that leaders across the political spectrum take up the cause of criminal justice reform.

For our economy, for communities of color and for our nation as a whole -- this cause matters."

Again, thank you for your leadership.

van

--

Check out our work: www.thedreamcorps.org

#YesWeCode: www.yeswecode.org #cut50: www.cut50.org #GreenForAll: www.greenforall.org Follow

ME: <http://twitter.com/VanJones68>

You are a miracle. Nothing is impossible.

From: Grybauskas, Stefan
To: [REDACTED]
Cc: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: Printing
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 9:27:11 AM

I'm working on it

Stefan Grybauskas
Associate Director of Advance
Office of the Mayor
City of New York
C: 347-515-5874

----- Original Message -----
From: Aaron Pickrell [[mailto:\[REDACTED\]](mailto:[REDACTED])]
Sent: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 09:23 AM
To: Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]>
Cc: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> John Davis <[REDACTED]> Rebecca Kirszner Katz <[REDACTED]> Grybauskas, Stefan
Subject: Re: Printing

Stefan - can you do this. I'm sitting in audience but can figure out if you need me to

> On May 12, 2015, at 9:16 AM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:
>
> + Stefan and Aaron (who I think are both there)
>
>> On Tue, May 12, 2015 at 9:12 AM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
>>
>> Gonna need someone to print Bdb remarks at national press club - sending >> as soon as I get in car and can connect laptop to iPhone hotspot
>>
>>
>>> On May 12, 2015, at 8:20 AM, jeani murray <[REDACTED]> wrote:
>>>
>>> Send me whatever you need printed for today. Will print and bring with >> me. Thx!
>
>
>
> --
>
> *Hayley Primc: [REDACTED]
>
> --089e0158b04c32e2aa0515e24e83
> Content-Type: text/html; charset=UTF-8
> Content-Transfer-Encoding: quoted-printable
>
>  ans-serif;font-size:small">+ Stefan and Aaron (who I think are both there)<= > br> On= > Tue, May 12, 2015 at 9:12 AM, John Del Cecato <> f=3D"<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>" target=3D"_blank">jfdc@akpdmedia.com>=

> ; wrote:
<blockquote class=3D"gmail_quote" style=3D"margin:0 0 0 =
> .8ex;border-left:1px #ccc solid;padding-left:1ex">Gonna need someone to pri= > nt Bdb remarks at national press club - sending as soon as I get in car and= > can connect laptop to iPhone hotspot

>

>

>

> > On May 12, 2015, at 8:20 AM, jeani murray <<a href= [REDACTED]
[REDACTED] > [REDACTED] a>> wrote:

> >

> > Send me whatever you need printed for today.=C2=A0 Will print and brin= > g with me.=C2=A0 Thx!

> </blockquote>

--
<div class=
> =3D"gmail_signature"> elvetica,sans-serif">Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED] span>
=
>

>
>
> --089e0158b04c32e2aa0515e24e83--

From: Leopold, Elana
To: John Del Cecato; Hagelgans, Andrea; Freeman, Demetrius; Gann, Georgia; Grybauskas, Stefan; [REDACTED] @EQ
Subject: Re: Tuesday SOP- DC
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 9:29:29 AM

Still on plane

We're having issues getting to the gate

Sent from my iPhone

> On May 12, 2015, at 9:08 AM, Leopold, Elana <ELEopold@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>

> We have landed

>

> Sent from my iPhone

>

>> On May 12, 2015, at 8:18 AM, Leopold, Elana <ELEopold@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>>

>> Wheels up

>>

>> Sent from my iPhone

>>

>>> On May 12, 2015, at 7:55 AM, Leopold, Elana <ELEopold@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>>>

>>> Boarded plane

>>>

>>> Apparently there's no power or something but hopefully we will be taking off shortly

>>>

>>> Sent from my iPhone

>>>

>>>> On May 12, 2015, at 7:25 AM, Leopold, Elana <ELEopold@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>>>>

>>>> Good morning!

>>>>

>>>> En route to the airport

>>>>

>>>> Sent from my iPhone

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: "Hayley Prim"; John Del Cecato
Cc: [REDACTED] Rebecca Katz \(hilltoppublicsolutions.com\); Wolfe, Emma; John Davis; Aaron Pickrell
Subject: RE: Bernie Sanders
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 9:31:59 AM

we are asking presidentials not to be there for first day but welcome support later

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 8:18 AM
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: [REDACTED] Rebecca Katz \(hilltoppublicsolutions.com\); Snyder, Thomas; Wolfe, Emma; John Davis; Aaron Pickrell
Subject: Re: Bernie Sanders

Any resolution on Bernie Sanders?

On Mon, May 11, 2015 at 9:11 PM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:
Ok great. Tom, let me know how to proceed

On Monday, May 11, 2015, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
Okay - I'm giving this one to Tom Snyder to take up with MBDB

From: jeani murray <[REDACTED]>
Reply-To: "[REDACTED]" <[REDACTED]>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 8:23 PM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: Rebecca Katz <rkatz@hilltoppublicsolutions.com>, "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Davis <[REDACTED]> Aaron PickrellEmail <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: Bernie Sanders

Haha!

You haven't been to Iowa or spent much time with the travelers. They LOVE this shit.

On Monday, May 11, 2015, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
For some reason, I don't think anyone considers Sanders a "real" candidate

From: jeani murray <[REDACTED]>
Reply-To: "[REDACTED]" <[REDACTED]>
Date: Monday, May 11, 2015 at 7:50 PM
To: Rebecca Katz <rkatz@hilltoppublicsolutions.com>
Cc: "Snyder, Thomas" <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> "Wolfe, Emma" <EWolfe@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Davis <[REDACTED]> Aaron PickrellEmail <[REDACTED]>

Subject: Re: Bernie Sanders

Does anyone think that then gets us in the heat with the people who were deeply concerned about their signing up as it relates to their support for HRC?
He shows and no one else, looks like we are supporting him, IMHO. Presidential politics totally eff this up. National reporters already want to write about that, IMHO.

On Mon, May 11, 2015 at 7:48 PM, Rebecca Katz <rkatz@hilltoppublicsolutions.com> wrote:
Press asked about this and i said we were not planning on 2016ers.

If asked, we just say he wanted to come and we didn't say no?

On Mon, May 11, 2015 at 7:45 PM, Snyder, Thomas <TSnyder@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:
That is my recollection as well. But does this mean he's speaking too?

Sent from my iPhone

On May 11, 2015, at 7:37 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmmedia.com> wrote:

Adding Tom and Emma. I think we said that while we weren't inviting presidentials, we wouldn't turn them down. For some reason, I'm much more okay with Bernie being there than, say, O'Malley or Webb.

On May 11, 2015, at 6:56 PM, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:

His guy is asking me for details about the event tomorrow.
Should I just tell him the details but say that we haven't invited presidential candidates because we don't want this to be lost in that conversation, blah blah blah

--

Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--

Rebecca Kirsner Katz
(718) 858-7161 — work
[REDACTED] — cell
@RebeccaKKatz

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: Snyder, Thomas
To: "John Del Cecato"; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma; Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana
Subject: RE: <no subject>
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 9:33:58 AM

Nice statement.

From: John Del Cecato [mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com]
Sent: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 7:52 AM
To: Snyder, Thomas; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Wolfe, Emma; Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Fwd: <no subject>

Begin forwarded message:

From: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Date: May 12, 2015 at 7:39:49 AM EDT
To: Bill de Blasio <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: <no subject>

DRAFT REMARKS
TPA KICK-OFF
5/12/15

I'm New York Mayor Bill de Blasio, and I want to thank so many of my fellow progressives – mayors, Members of the House and Senate, labor leaders, civil rights champions, and top progressive activists for joining us here today.

Six weeks ago, I convened a small group of progressive leaders in New York City to discuss the central crisis of our times – and that is income inequality.

We pledged to reach out to hundreds of our fellow progressives and work together to generate a serious, bold set of solutions to that crisis.

So today, we are announcing, and signing onto, “The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality.”

These 13 progressive ideas will make an enormous difference in combatting income inequality – BOLD steps like a $15 minimum wage...national paid sick and family leave laws...universal Pre-K, after-school and child care...closing the tax loopholes that CEOs, hedge fund managers, and billionaires use to avoid paying their fair share.

The Progressive Agenda is a bold first step. And there will be more to come.

I've spoken to some of the folks assembled here about the next steps in this process – covering issues that range from an expansion of Social Security...to debt-free college...investing in schools, not jails...and giving people returning home from prison a second chance at an economic future. We look forward to adding to what we're unveiling today.

The Progressive Agenda comes down to a very simple concept. America needs economic policies that reward WORK...and not just wealth.

And here's why.

There's something happening out there...an urgent call for change...given voice by everyday people across this country. Just last month, more than 60,000 people took to the streets in 200 cities – all fighting for a higher minimum wage.

This isn't business as usual. It's a new politics that puts PEOPLE ahead of profits...that values WORK instead of wealth. We'll be calling on candidates and elected officials to stiffen their backbones, champion the progressive policies that our nation needs...and join our growing cause.

We also ask everyday people across America to join us...to sign up at our website – Progressive Agenda DOT U-S.

And while you're there, check out the beautiful statement of support written on behalf of our cause by the venerable Toni Morrison – whose words continue to enlighten and inspire so many Americans.

Now, let me turn the microphone over to someone who knows a little something about progressive values -- former DNC Chairman, Governor Howard Dean.

From: John Del Cecato
To: B
Cc: Wolfe, Emma; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea; Carey, Michael; Leopold, Elana; Gunaratna, Mahen; Williams, Dominic; Snyder, Thomas
Subject: Revised
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 9:35:06 AM
Attachments: BDB TPA KICK OFF.docx

DRAFT REMARKS FINAL
TPA KICK-OFF
5/12/15

I'm New York Mayor Bill de Blasio, and I want to thank so many of my fellow progressives – mayors, Members of the House and Senate, labor leaders, civil rights champions, and top progressive activists for joining us here today.

Six weeks ago, I convened a small group of progressive leaders in New York City to discuss the central crisis of our times – and that is income inequality.

We pledged to reach out to hundreds of our fellow progressives and work together to generate a serious, bold set of solutions to that crisis.

So today, we are announcing, and signing onto, “The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality.”

These 13 progressive ideas will make an enormous difference in combatting income inequality – BOLD steps like a $15 minimum wage...national paid sick and family leave laws...universal Pre-K, after-school and child care...closing the tax loopholes that CEOs, hedge fund managers, and billionaires use to avoid paying their fair share.

The Progressive Agenda is a bold first step. And there will be more to come.

I've spoken to many in our coalition about the next chapter in this effort – covering issues that range from an expansion of Social Security...to debt-free college...to investing in schools, not jails...and giving people returning home from prison a second chance at an economic future. We look forward to soon adding those priorities to what we're unveiling today.

The Progressive Agenda comes down to a very simple concept. America needs economic policies that reward WORK...and not just wealth.

And here's why.

There's something happening out there...an urgent call for change...given voice by everyday people across this country. Just last month, more than 60,000 people took to the streets in 200 cities – all fighting for a higher minimum wage.

This isn't business as usual. It's a new politics that puts PEOPLE ahead of profits...that values WORK instead of wealth. We'll be calling on candidates and elected officials to stiffen their backbones, champion the progressive policies that our nation needs...and join our growing cause.

We also ask everyday people across America to join us...to sign up at our website – Progressive Agenda DOT U-S.

And while you're there, please read the beautiful invocation on behalf of our cause written by none other than the legendary Toni Morrison...part of that original group who launched this effort in April...a woman whose words inform and inspire so many millions across our nation.

Now, let me turn the microphone over to someone who knows a little something about progressive values -- former DNC Chairman, Governor Howard Dean.

DRAFT REMARKS FINAL
TPA KICK-OFF
5/12/15

I'm New York Mayor Bill de Blasio, and I want to thank so many of my fellow progressives – mayors, Members of the House and Senate, labor leaders, civil rights champions, and top progressive activists for joining us here today.

Six weeks ago, I convened a small group of progressive leaders in New York City to discuss the central crisis of our times – and that is income inequality.

We pledged to reach out to hundreds of our fellow progressives and work together to generate a serious, bold set of solutions to that crisis.

So today, we are announcing, and signing onto, “The Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality.”

These 13 progressive ideas will make an enormous difference in combatting income inequality – BOLD steps like a $15 minimum wage...national paid sick and family leave laws...universal Pre-K, after-school and child care...closing the tax loopholes that CEOs, hedge fund managers, and billionaires use to avoid paying their fair share.

The Progressive Agenda is a bold first step. And there will be more to come.

I've spoken to many in our coalition about the next chapter in this effort – covering issues that range from an expansion of Social Security...to debt-free college...to investing in schools, not jails...and giving people returning home from prison a second chance at an economic future. We look forward to soon adding those priorities to what we're unveiling today.

The Progressive Agenda comes down to a very simple concept. America needs economic policies that reward WORK...and not just wealth.

And here's why.

There's something happening out there...an urgent call for change...given voice by everyday people across this country. Just last month, more than 60,000 people took to the streets in 200 cities – all fighting for a higher minimum wage.

This isn't business as usual. It's a new politics that puts PEOPLE ahead of profits...that values WORK instead of wealth. We'll be calling on candidates and elected officials to stiffen their backbones, champion the progressive policies that our nation needs...and join our growing cause.

We also ask everyday people across America to join us...to sign up at our website – Progressive Agenda DOT U-S.

And while you're there, please read the beautiful invocation on behalf of our cause written by none other than the legendary Toni Morrison...part of that original group who launched this effort in April...a woman whose words inform and inspire so many millions across our nation.

Now, let me turn the microphone over to someone who knows a little something about progressive values -- former DNC Chairman, Governor Howard Dean.

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: Carey, Michael; Walzak, Phil; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Cc: Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: <no subject>
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 10:44:26 AM

Molly is now just 5 min. Joan is at 1:30. Molly at 2

From: Carey, Michael
Sent: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 10:36 AM
To: Walzak, Phil; 'John Del Cecato' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: Leopold, Elana; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Re: <no subject>

1301 penn ave nw

From: <Walzak>, Phil Walzak <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 at 10:34 AM
To: Michael Carey <mpcarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: Elana Leopold <ELeopold@cityhall.nyc.gov>, Andrea Hagelgans <AHagelgans@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: <no subject>

Where is DC ofc

From: Carey, Michael
Sent: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 10:35 AM
To: Walzak, Phil; 'John Del Cecato'
Cc: Leopold, Elana; Hagelgans, Andrea
Subject: Re: <no subject>

He has 130-230 at the DC office for media

Adding andrea and Elana who are with him

From: <Walzak>, Phil Walzak <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 at 9:48 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>, Michael Carey <mpcarey@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Subject: RE: <no subject>

When where this sposed to happen w Amanda?

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 9:50 AM
To: Carey, Michael
Cc: Walzak, Phil
Subject: Re: <no subject>

Presser will be shit show

On May 12, 2015, at 9:38 AM, Carey, Michael <MPCarey@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

Can't we just do at presser if it is 5 minutes??

Michael Paul Carey
City Hall
New York, New York

On May 12, 2015, at 8:35 AM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

You were going to talk to her. MPC can give you time

From: <Walzak>, Phil <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov>
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 at 9:25 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: RE: <no subject>

Who has talked to her? Is there a time?

From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]
Sent: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 9:26 AM
To: Walzak, Phil
Subject: <no subject>

Can you make sure amanda terkel knows it's 5 minutes & on-topic only?

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
To: Hagelgans, Andrea; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Walzak, Phil
Subject: RE: From Grynbaum
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 10:45:29 AM

He is departing quite starkly from his prepared remarks, no?

Let me know if we call an audible and want to blast his remarks as delivered instead of as prepared.

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
Sent: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 10:45 AM
To: Gunaratna, Mahen; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"; Walzak, Phil
Subject: Re: From Grynbaum

Audience is enthalled

From: Gunaratna, Mahen
Sent: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 10:42 AM
To: 'John Del Cecato' <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>; Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea Subject: From Grynbaum

Mike Grynbaum @grynbaum now 15 seconds ago

This is my 3rd go-round on the De Blasio whistle-stop tour, and he's honing his stump. Better cadence, sharper lines.

--

Mahen Gunaratna

Director of Research and Media Analysis
Mayor's Press Office | City Hall
mgunaratna@cityhall.nyc.gov
(212) 676-3154 (o) | (347)-268-4295 (c)

From: Hagelgans, Andrea
To: B; "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Warren not gagging
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 10:50:49 AM

From: B
To: "jfdc@akpdmedia.com"
Subject: Fw: Thank you, from kvh!
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 11:27:24 AM

Fyi

-----Original Message-----

From: Katrina Vanden Heuvel
To: Bill de Blasio
Cc: Katrina Vanden Heuvel
Subject: Thank you, from kvh!
Sent: May 12, 2015 11:18 AM

Dear Mayor, Thank you for the great note--means the world to me. And thank you for moving us back to our historic values, and reminding us that the only way we'll find out if there's an emerging American majority for progressive economic change is if we lift up a Progressive Agenda, make change to improve people's lives--while speaking with feistiness, conviction and humanity, kvh

On May 12, 2015, at 11:11 AM, Bill de Blasio <[REDACTED]> wrote:

>
> Katrina, this is a great article. You have a special ability to see the whole playing field and to remind progressives of our own power. Well done! Best, Bill

>
>
>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Clips
> Subject: WAPO: The emerging populist agenda
> Sent: May 12, 2015 11:03 AM

>
> The emerging populist agenda
> WASHINGTON POST - Katrina vanden Heuvel > http://www.washingtonpost.com/opinions/the-emerging-populist-agenda/2015/05/12/525ad83e-f7f9-11e4-a13c-193b1241d51a_story.html

>
> The most surprising development in our political debate isn't the gaggle of Republican presidential contenders or the ceaseless attacks on Hillary Clinton. What is stunning is the emergence of a populist reform agenda that is driving the debate inside and outside the Democratic Party.

>
> A range of groups and leaders are putting forward a reform agenda of increasing coherence. Today, the Roosevelt Institute will present a report by Nobel laureate Joseph Stiglitz, while New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio is to release a "Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality." These follow the Populism 2015 Platform, released in April by an alliance of grass-roots groups and the Campaign for America's Future. Also in April, the Center for Community Change (CCC) joined with several grass-roots allies to launch Putting Families First: Good Jobs for All.

>
> Sen. Bernie Sanders (Vt.), now contending for the Democratic presidential nomination, released his Economic Agenda for America last December. And while Hillary Clinton has chosen a slow rollout of her agenda, the Center for American Progress published the report of the Commission on Inclusive Prosperity headed by former treasury secretary Larry Summers, widely seen as a marker of where Hillary might move.

>
> The most surprising development in our political debate isn't the gaggle of Republican presidential contenders or the ceaseless attacks on Hillary Clinton. What is stunning is the emergence of a populist reform agenda that is driving the debate inside and outside the Democratic Party.

>

> A range of groups and leaders are putting forward a reform agenda of increasing coherence. Today, the Roosevelt Institute will present a report by Nobel laureate Joseph Stiglitz, while New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio is to release a "Progressive Agenda to Combat Income Inequality." These follow the Populism 2015 Platform, released in April by an alliance of grass-roots groups and the Campaign for America's Future. Also in April, the Center for Community Change (CCC) joined with several grass-roots allies to launch Putting Families First: Good Jobs for All.

>

> Editor and publisher of the Nation magazine, vanden Heuvel writes a weekly column for The Post. View Archive

> Facebook

> Sen. Bernie Sanders (Vt.), now contending for the Democratic presidential nomination, released his Economic Agenda for America last December. And while Hillary Clinton has chosen a slow rollout of her agenda, the Center for American Progress published the report of the Commission on Inclusive Prosperity headed by former treasury secretary Larry Summers, widely seen as a marker of where Hillary might move.

>

>

> Not surprisingly, these offerings differ in analysis, emphasis and specific reforms. But more striking is their scope of consensus.

>

> All agree that our extreme inequality is not the inevitable result of globalization or technology. It is the result of policy and power. The rules have been rigged. No one reform offers an answer; broad reforms are needed.

>

> All link growth and inequality.

From: B
To: [REDACTED] <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Subject: Re: Dean
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 11:27:43 AM

Eureka!

From: Hayley Prim [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 11:16 AM
To: John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com>
Cc: B
Subject: Re: Dean

Governor Dean is on the train!

On Monday, May 11, 2015, Hayley Prim <[REDACTED]> wrote:
Cool, I just talked to his staffer about this, and she is going to talk to him. Apparently there were no good flight options to come directly to DC.

But I made clear that we will do whatever we can to make sure he gets here.

On Mon, May 11, 2015 at 5:14 PM, John Del Cecato <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:

OR - we could pay to have him change his flight to DCA. Is there any reason we can't do that???

On 5/11/15, 5:00 PM, "B" <BCCD@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>
>Let us pray: he's coming up from Florida in the AM by plane and for some >reason flying to Newark Airport, then switching to an Acela train to DC, >arriving 1:52pm. IF the plane is relatively on time, this plan works. If >not, would could be screwed. Do we want to arrange a private car to back >him up and if need be drive him from Newark to DC??
>

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

--
Hayley Prim
c: [REDACTED]

From: John Del Cecato
To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea
Cc: Richardson, Jerika; Rodriguez, Tobias \(Media\); Singleton, Jessica
Subject: Re: Van Jones stuff
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 11:28:53 AM

Correct on all.

Noon-ish tweet would be perfect

BDB has signed off on this plan

On 5/12/15, 10:40 AM, "Walzak, Phil" <PWalzak@cityhall.nyc.gov> wrote:

>Ok

>Getting lots of conflicting direction on this

>

>+JR, Digi

>

>--We will tweet on pursuing crim justice reform before 3

>--remarks have a crim justice line or 2

>--stmnt goes out tmrw??

>

>-----Original Message-----

>From: John Del Cecato [<mailto:jfdc@akpdmedia.com>]

>Sent: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 10:06 AM

>To: Walzak, Phil; Hagelgans, Andrea

>Subject: Van Jones stuff

>

>1. We should tweet something before 3pm today - something short and >sweet about looking forward to pursuing issues of criminal justice - >maybe with Twitter handles of Sharpton, Van, Heather, Deepak AND hashtag >for TPA. Thinking around noon - so these guys see we are acting in good >faith and don't mess with us at 3pm event.

>

>2. Then we do our remarks at top of TPA 3pm event - another head nod.

>

>3. Have a statement with fuller statement using Van's language - and >plan to issue that as a press release tomorrow.

>

>4. No need to tee up question at 3pm event. We will be covered at that >point.

>

>5. Then Team TPA gets to work on Wed trying to get our coalition to >swallow this stuff as an amendment.

>

>

From: Nisha Anand
To: John Del Cecato
Cc: Hayley Prim; Leopold, Elana
Subject: Re: RESPONSE NEEDED - Quick check in re: Van Jones
Date: Tuesday, May 12, 2015 11:49:42 AM

Thanks!

Nisha

On May 12, 2015 8:48 AM, "John Del Cecato" <jfdc@akpdmedia.com> wrote:
Yes - and we are putting out statement very soon

On May 12, 2015, at 11:46 AM, Nisha Anand <nisha@dreamcorps.us> wrote:

Hi Team,

I need to do a quick check to confirm that the Mayor received Van's last email with the suggestions he requested.

Just a quick confirm is great. Email is below.

Thanks and good luck today!! We are all very excited.

Nisha

FROM THIS MORNING:

On Tue, May 12, 2015 at 6:01 AM, Van Jones
<vanjones68@dreamcorps.us> wrote:

I am sorry. It took me some time to get buy-in from our many colleagues.

I have bolded the phrases that seem to be are key for your allies -- and for me. I added some language that I think would have real power coming from you.

Of course, in all cases, we trust and leave to your best judgment the final wording.

But please do consider announcing something like this today:

"As proud as we are of our work today, I want to acknowledge that this document still has room for some improvements.

So I will be working personally with coalition members this week to strengthen the document -- to include ideas like debt free college, expanding social security and criminal justice reform.

And on that last point: let me say this.

For the young people demonstrating -- mostly peacefully -- from Ferguson, to NYC, to Baltimore, the issues of excessive criminalization and over-incarceration are not just civil rights issues. They are squarely economic issues.

For example, blacks are six times more likely to go to prison for using marijuana than whites -- even though both groups use marijuana at exactly the same rate.

Those prison sentences add up to a big economic impact on black families. It makes it harder for them get into the middle class and stay there.

Then, when a family member comes home, he or she often finds that she cannot get a job, rent an apartment or even get a student loan. She remains trapped in an economic prison -- possibly for the rest of her life.

Many dollars spent on prisons and jails might have been better spent on education and jobs, in the first place.

That's why the need to end mass incarceration has become the great cause of a rising generation.

It should become a great cause for all of us, too.

Therefore, I want to announce something that is important to me.

